1626. Charles I. to the E. of Bristol. "We cannot but wonder that you should through forgetfulness make such a request to us of favour, as if you stood evenly capable of it, when you know what your behaviour in Spaine deserved of us, how you offered your service & secrecy if we were to change our religion, and persuaded us thereto; how much harm you did to the treaty & our dear brother & sister. How you delayed us in Spain, & favoured the Spaniards, & how you gave your consent to our nephew being brought up at the Emperor's court."

1626, April 7. The humble petition of the Countesse of Bristol to his Majesty, delivered April 7, finding by his Ma^{ties} gracious answer that her husband's faults are not greatly criminal, humbly begs for his liberty.

1626, April 21. Proceedings in Parliament relating to the charge against the E. of Bristol.

1626, April 29. Lord Conway to the E. of Bristol. "Your Lo. former proceedings with his Ma^{tie} give him cause to receive whatsoever you have to answer or to say unto him in the Upper House of Parliament."

List of Proxies in the House of Lords.

Extract from the charge against the E. of Bristol.

1626, May 19. The substance of the E. of Bristol's speech.

1626, May 22. Names of the Committee appointed to examine the case.

1626, May 22. Order of the H. of Lords for examination of witnesses.

Heads of the E. of Bristol's justification.

The E. of Bristol's petition to the H. of Lords.

Notes of the E. of Bristol's petition to the H. of Lords.

Reasons in support of the petition.

Draft of a petition to the H. of Lords.

1626. June 12. Mr Attorney's receipt of Sir K. Digby's letter of 27 May 1625.

Petition of the E. of Bristol for his diet.

Reasons given by the E. of Bristol for his release.

Reasons why the E. of Bristol should not answer in the Star Chamber during his restraynt in the Tower.

The E. of Bristol to Sir R^o Heath. Hopes that he may not be compelled to declare in the Star Chamber many things which he had not discoursed in his defence in Parl., as he had explained at a personal interview with Mr Sec. Is ready to acknowledge the passing by of this business solely to his Ma^{ty}'s grace, & to make unto his Ma^{ty} a most humble submission.

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

1626. Aug. 26. The E. of Bristol to the Lord Keeper. Desires that he may be set at liberty in order to prepare his defence, but hopes his Ma^{ty} will accept his submission & put an end to the case.

Draft of the above.

1626. Sept. 12. Petition for six weeks liberty.

1626. Sept. 12. The E. of Bristol to Charles I. Thanks the King for granting his petition.

1626. Sept. 12. The E. of Bristol to the D. of Buckingham. (Copy.) To thank him for supporting his petition.

1626. Nov. 3. The Lords order remanding the E. of Bristol to the Tower.

1626. Feb. 21. The order of the Lords for the E. of Bristol to go to his counsel-at-law.

Interrogations to be put to witnesses in the case.

Interrogation to be put to Endimeon Porter, Esq^r.

1627. April 30. Order for the E. of Bristol or his counsel to attend the judges at S^t Jeants Inn.

1627. June 24. The E. of Bristol's petition for permission to go into the country till Michaelmas.

Another form of the last.

No date. The E. of Bristol's petition for arrears of pension, due for three years and a half.

No date. Acquittance for pensions for one quarter.

Petition of E. of Bristol to the Commissioners of the Treasury, for payment of money due to him.

Two mems. upon this subject, and a certificate from the Court of Wards that in 1640 the arrears amounted to 22,000*l.*

1639. April. Simon Digby to J. Cartwright, merchant, London.

1640. Copy of a certificate out of the Court of Wards, & four other documents upon the same subject.

Order of the Irish H. of Lords concerning proxies.

1640. Jan. 14. Examination of the E. of Bristol in the case of the E. of Strafford.

East India Co. Dividends owing to the E. of Bristol.

1640. Feb. 18. Sir R^o Bolton to Viscount Gormanston & others; a schedule of grievances voted in the Irish H. of Lords.

Petition of the Irish nobility.

Grievances and remedies.

1640. March 4. Capt. Audley Marvins speech to the H. of Lords, Ireland.

1642. Sept. 26. Protection to the E. of Bristol's family at Sherborne by the E. of Bedford.

1644. A copy of the propositions made to his Majesty by the Irish.

List of arms taken by the muster master, the Corporal of Kildare, Lord Digby, & Lieut. Parefoy.

Account of arms & men in Geashill castle.

Confirmation by Charles I. of an award by James I. in favour of Lord Digby, of the dissolved monastery of Killeigh, in the King's countie.

Form of proceeding of the Court Leet of Lord Digby.

"Mr. Waller's verses of the navy under the E. of Northumberland, translated by me into Latin."

England's Tears.

Carisborow Castle, Aug. 28, 1648. A list of the names propounded by his Majesty for his household servants, and for persons to be with him in order to the treaty.

"Hon^d Sir, His Ma^{ty} hath accepted of the votes of Parl^t & given his royal word not to go out of the Flank but observe what is propounded, & his Ma^{ty} is now at liberty from his restraynt."

"God send a good Issue of the Treaty."

"This was brought by Sir Poeter Killigrew to the Parliament the 29 of August 1643."

1650, July 28. De Marie. Lord Digby to Mon^{se}ur de Tellier. Movements of troops. From fear of disorders in the interior His Royal Highness will not consent to any enterprise against the enemy, & orders troops to be detached from the army until it has become dangerously weak.

1650, Aug. 11. De Flautmarbeau. The same to the same. The army encamped in a good position at Sarranton. The enemy at Verveins, their designs uncertain.

1651, July 2. Du Camp a Gorgue. The same to the same. Have crossed the river, taken two forts, & not met the enemy, who probably will remain on the defensive until the latter part of the campaign. The question for us is whether we merely establish ourselves in the enemy's country or undertake some enterprise. Arguments in favour of attacking S^t Omer rather than S^t Venant.

1651, July 10. Du Camp a la Gorgue. The same to the same. Order for the siege of S^t Venant has been recalled. The writer would advise an advance to Brussels.

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

1651, Aug. 15. The power of a Lieut.-Gen. in the army of Flanders in the absence & under the authority of Mon^e la Marechal d'Aumont. For the Lord Digby.

1651, Oct. 13. Lord Digby to the Queen Regent. Army in a bad state for want of supplies. The best policy would have been to strengthen certain important places, & to employ the rest of the army in putting down the rebellion at its birth. Proposes that this should be done now.

1651, Dec. 2. Du Camp a Hernouville. Lord Digby to Mon^e de Tellier. Wishes to communicate personally important matters concerning the army which he cannot put into writing.

1653, April 26. John Smith to George Randal. From Sherborne. Private business.

1653, Aug. 28. Mon^e de Tellier to Earl of Bristol. Encloses copy of a letter to Mon^e le Duc de Candalle.

1653, Oct. 21. The same to the same, a Chalons. Movements of troops in Guyenne.

1653, Nov. 15. The E. of Bristol to Car. Mazarin. Congratulation on the state of affairs at Bordeaux. Asks for supplies; 200 of his men had been assassinated in their quarters in an insurrection. Hopes to get together a body of Irish.

1653, Nov. 21. St. Foix. The same to the same. No interest.

1653, Nov. 8. Louis XIV. to the E. of Bristol. Will employ him in the next campaign.

1653, Nov. 27. Chalons. Mon^e de Tellier to the E. of Bristol, enclosing the last.

1653, Dec. 5. De Caors. The E. of Bristol to Mon^e le Tellier, concerning a command.

1653, Dec. 16. Paris. Sir Lewis Dyve to the E. of Bristol. Has obtained a reversal of the former order concerning winter quarters and allowances to which E. of B. had objected & a new order in accordance with his demands.

The E. of B. is out of favour at present at the Court for reasons ^{w^h} should be communicated by word of mouth.

1654, Jan. 15. De Caors. Earl of Bristol to Father Barton. Sends monies for the support of his family.

1654, Jan. 21. Paris. Sir L. Dyve to Earl of Bristol. Is attending to his business in Paris.

1654, Jan. 22. Villefranche. The E. of Bristol to Louis XIV.

1654, Jan. 27. Paris. Sir L. Dyve to the E. of Bristol. Private affairs.

1654, Feb. 7. Villefranche. The E. of Bristol to Sir L. Dyve. Will retire from the service if he is not assured of such command next summer as he likes.

1654, Feb. 7. Men. for M. le Tellier upon the coming campaign if the E. of B. is to be employed in it.

1654, Feb. 8. De Villefranche. The E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier. Surprised that he has not been able to serve him in the matter of a command.

1654, Feb. 25. Mon^e le Tellier to E. of Bristol. The same subject.

1654, March 22. Villefranche. The E. of Bristol to Mon^e le Tellier. The same subject.

1654, March 31. Paris. Sir L. Dyve to the E. of Bristol. Does not expect to be able to obtain the command in Guyenne for the Earl.

1654, March 30. Louis XIV. to the E. of Bristol.

1654, March 30. Copy.

1654, April 12. Montauban. E. of Bristol to Sir L. Dyve. Private affairs.

1654, May 2. De Villefranche. E. of Bristol to Mon^e le Tellier. Concerning a command.

1654, June 14. De Montauban. The same to the same. Has received a command in Piedmont. Suggests that the general in Cattoleigne may bring over some Irish from the Spanish service.

1654, July 4. A Sedance. Mon^e le Tellier to the E. of Bristol. Same subject.

1654, July 5. Du College du Jesuites a Alby. E. of Bristol to Mon^e le Tellier. Same subject.

1654, Aug. 7. The same to the same.

1654, Sept. 25. Lambeth House. John Digby to the E. of Bristol. Domestic matters.

1654, Oct. 7. The E. of Bristol to Mon^e le Tellier. No interest.

1654, Oct. 10. Alby. The E. of Bristol to Sir L. Dyve. Has been ill. Has had no answer from the Cardinal. Is in great distress for money.

1654, Nov. 6. D'Alby. The same to M. le Tellier. His eminence after having made no response for six months now will pay part of the sums due.

1654, Nov. 30. John Digby to the E. of Bristol. Pecuniary affairs.

1654-5, Jan. 8. Aste. Sir L. Dyve to E. of Bristol. News of the state of his regiment. Pecuniary difficulties.

1655, Jan. 30. Alby. The E. of Bristol to J. Digby. Private affairs.

1655, Jan. 30. The E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier. For pay of regiment.

1655, Feb. 18. M. le Tellier to E. of Bristol. Answer to the last.

1655, April 10. Alby. The E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier. Acknowledgment of last.

1655, Louis XIV. to the E. of Bristol.

1655, May 5. De Grenoble. E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier. His regiment has suffered some loss.

1655, May 23. The same to the same. Regimental details.

1655, July 29. A. St. Angelo. The same to the same.

1655, Aug. 21. The same to the same.

1655, Sept. 11. Camp before Pavia. The same to the same.

1655, Sept. 25. Du Camp du Langousque. The same to the same.

1655, Oct. 28. The same to the same.

1655, Nov. 2. M. le Tellier to the E. of Bristol.

1655, Nov. 25. The E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier.

1655, Nov. 13. Sir L. Dyve to the E. of Bristol. Complimentary letter.

1655, Dec. 31. Louis XIV. to E. of Bristol.

1656, March 29. Paris. The E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier.

1656, May 6. Sir L. Dyve to the E. of Bristol. Private affairs.

1656, June 7. A Pavia. The E. of Bristol to M. le Tellier.

1656, Aug. 4. Paris. John Digby to the E. of Bristol. Private affairs.

1656, Aug. 10. Paris. The same to the same.

1656, Sept. 29. Poutov. The same to the same.

1656, Dec. 15. Paris. The same to the same.

1656, Dec. 23. Paris. The same to the same. Cannot obtain a copy of Kepler's Ephemerides.

1656, Dec. 29. Paris. The same to the same.

1656, Dec. 30. Sir L. Dyve to the same. The French Amb. promises you a free passage through France into Spain.

1657, Jan. 5. Paris. John Digby to the same. Your L^r shall hear from me weekly until I have sent to you your children.

1657, Jan. 19. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, Jan. 26. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, Feb. 2. Paris. The same to the same. Your children began their journey towards you in the Calis coach on Sunday morning last, & from thence (Calais) they intend to embrace the first opportunity of passing to Flushing ^{w^h} is usually offered twice or thrice a week. . . . In this court the unseasonable unhappy retreat of the Duke from his Mat^e is in a great measure imputed to your L^r.

1657, Feb. 9. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, Feb. 16. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, Feb. 23. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, March 3. Turin. Sir L. Dyve, to the same, at Brussels. "I hear there is a rubb in y^r L^r's journey to "Spain occasioned by an unhappy misunderstanding "between his Ma^y & the D. of York concerning Sir "J. Barkley, who the Duke conceives to have been removed from his service in regard of some private "grudge that y^r L^r & Sir John Benet had towards him " . . . there has been revealed unto me by a strange "accident by a person from whom I least expected to "hear such matters, that there were person of quality "that wanted not means of attaining to the know- "ledge of matters of greatest secrecy in the King's "affaires that were unfaithful to his service, which I "desired him to impart to your L^r & My Lord Mar- "quess of Ormond, &c."

1657, March 9. Paris. John Digby to the same. A copy of the Ephemerides he is told may probably be obtained at the mart at Frankfurt.

1657, March 16. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, March 23. Paris. The same to the same.

1657, April 6. Paris. The same to the same. Hears that y^r L^r had seduced the Irish to betray St Gylain. Hears from my Lady Diana in England that she hopes that she "may possibly reap some advantage from the "house as soon as this great crisis of the protector's "going out Kinge affords leisure for private business."

1657, April 19. The E. of Bristol to John Digby. Private business.

1657, April 20. Paris. John Digby to the E. of Bristol.

G. W.
Digby,
Esq.

1657, May 4. Paris. The same to the same.
1657, May 25. The same to the same.
1657, June 8. Paris. The same to the same.
1657, June 29. The same to the same. Has obtained a copy of the Ephemerides from Sir Kenelm Digby's library, thought to be the only one in Paris. 20 crowns offered for it.

1657, July 6. Paris. The same to the same.
1657, Aug. 3. Paris. The same to the same.
1657, Sept. 14. Paris. The same to the same.
1657, Sept. 28. Paris. The same to Mr. Slingsby at Brussels.

1658, Jan. 4. The same to E. of Bristol.
1658, Jan. 18. Paris. The same to the same.
April 23. Paris. The same to the same.
1658, May 10. The same to the same.
The above letters from J. Digby entirely taken up with pecuniary & family matters.

1659, Dec. 19. M. de Lyonne to the E. of Bristol. Latin verses in honour of E. of Bristol. (Printed).

1660, June 28. Paris. John Digby to the same.

1660, Oct. 6. M. de Lyonne to the same.

1660, Oct. 18. London. The E. of Bristol to John Digby.

1660, Jan. 17. London. The same to the same. A table diamond (valued at 500*l.*) to be given to the E. of S^t Albans from me for her Majesty, for her bounty in letting me have the noblest place in England, & that was dearest to her, Wimbledon, at 4,000*l.* less than was offered from others.

1662, Aug. 7. Sir Ken. Digby to the E. of Bristol. A plan under consideration for a loan of 100,000*l.* to the King, to produce 30,000*l.* a year at least. Is weary of waiting for the fulfilment of the King's written promise.

1662, Dec. 11. The E. of Bristol to Sir L. Dyve. Private affairs.

The E. of Bristol's claim for money due to him as Sec. of State, & state of his fortune.

Draught of a warrant for 10,000*l.* to the E. of Bristol. Reasons why double customs should not be granted upon the forfeitures of prohibited goods.

Reasons why the E. of Bristol's Privy Seal out of forfeitures should pass in the way it is.

Message from Charles II. to the H. of Commons.

1663, June 22. Letter of E. of Bristol to Charles II.

Message to Charles II. from Sir R^d Temple.

1663, June 26. Resolution of the H. of Commons concerning the message against Sir R. Temple.

1663, June 27. Resolution of the H. of Commons, that the E. of Bristol personally give in his answer in the matter concerning Sir R. Temple.

The E. of Bristol's speech in the H. of Commons.

Draft of a letter from E. of Bristol to the D. of Albemarle, begging him to deliver a letter to the King.

Letter to the E. of Bristol, advising him to come to Town before Parl. meets.

1663, March 3. Copy of letter from the E. of Bristol to the King.

1663, March 21. Copy of letter from the E. of Bristol, delivered to the King by the E. of Albemarle.

Advice to the E. of Bristol if a charge of treason should be made against him.

The E. of Bristol's petition to the H. of Lords.

Countess of Bristol's petition for a lease of Theobalds. Warrant in favour of the C. of Bristol.

Statement concerning money granted to the E. of Bristol.

Grant of 2,000*l.* to the E. of Bristol.

F. Digby to E. of Bristol. Invites him to visit his ship in the Downes.

Memorandum of the services of the E. of Bristol.

1666, Oct. 30. Letter of the E. of Bristol concerning the grant made to him.

Prince Rupert's narrative of the miscarriages in the late war, 1666.

1668. The E. of Bristol's claims & petition.

1669, July 1. The E. of Bristol to Lord Arlington upon the subject of arrears of pension.

Francis Digby, youngest son of the E. of Bristol, asks for the loan of three frigates & a fireship, from Feb. 1st to May 15th. With these & 5 other frigates provided by himself & friends, he proposes to carry out a well laid design for his Mat^y's service, & take whatever profits he may make in lieu of the 10,000*l.* due to him from the King.

1670, June 10. The E. of Bristol to Alderman Backwell. Pecuniary transactions.

1670, Oct. 30. The same to Lord Arlington, concerning the money still unpaid to him.

1672, July 2. Paris. The E. of Sunderland to the E. of Bristol. Letter of condolence on the death of a brother.

Address of the H. of Commons.

1677, May 25. Address of the H. of Commons.

1677, June 29. The E. of Shaftesbury's speech in the Court of King's Bench.

Address of the H. of Commons.

1684, Jan. 1. Lord Petre to Charles II. Has lain in prison 5 years, though innocent, without a public trial. Protests as a dying man that the charge brought against him by Titus Oates is absolutely untrue.

1687, May 12. Proceedings against the Univ. of Cambridge.

1687, July. The King's answer to the Presbyterian address.

1687, Sept. 3. Warwick. C. Holt to Lord Digby. Account of the King's reception in Warwickshire. The Mayor of Coventry presented the King with a gold cup, which cost 2,000 guineas (that fell to Lord Dartmouth's share). . . . The next morning the King touched above 350 at S^t Michael's Church, was nobly entertained by the corporation in the public hall, & about eleven went for Banbury by Edgehill.

The reasons of the Oxford Clergy against the address. 1687. Penn's speech when he delivered the address from the Quakers.

1687, June 26. Charles Palmer to Lord Digby. Contains the substance of the King's speech in his answer to M^r Alsop when he presented the Westminster address.

1687. The questions put by the Lords Lieut^s to the gentlemen.

1687, March 24. Lord Chancellor Jeffreys to the gentlemen of Shropshire, and the answer of J^o Cotes, of Woodcote. April 14 1688. "I cannot in conscience comply with your proposals in taking of the penal laws & tests. I shall always continue my allegiance to my king, & live peaceably with my neighbours."

1688, Sept. Memorials delivered to the States General by Count D'Avana and the Marquess D'Albyville, upon the preparations now making in Holland.

1688, Oct. 1st. An extract from the registers of the resolutions of the States General.

1695, Jan. 8. The E. of Bristol to his mother.

1711, March 8. G. Patten to Lord Digby. Report upon the state of his woods, "for fear of my letter being intercepted I went to Dublin & put into the post office there. I pray send somebody over in time whilst there is something left. It is an old saying, 'I cannot see the wood for trees,' but M^r Baldwin could not see the wood for want of trees."

1753, June 23. H. Fox to Lord Digby. Election business at Wells & in Dorsetshire.

1753, June 26. Same to same. Lord Digby has had a "pretty good reception" at Wells. "I have no interest with the Judges. My brother & you should write."

1753, July 9. Same to same. Election details.

1753, July 21. Same to same. Wells & Dorsetshire election business.

1753, July 24. Same to same. Election business. "M^r Aylife seems to think M^r Pitt forwarder than M^r Sturt for Dorsetshire. Lord Coventry, I fancy, supports Lord Digby & M^r Pitt."

1753, July 28. Holland House. Same to same. Dorsetshire election. "Apply to the clergy. They & the attorneys carry an election. Out of the four candidates M^r Pelham would name you & Pitt, that's certain. Pray is it not a great article against Pitt that he does not live in the county?"

1753, July 29. Same to same.

1753, Aug. 4. Same to same. Election. "I paid at Blenheim 7 guineas for a bullet gun for you. The D. of Marlbro' & I tried it, & at 80 yards we both hit a paper 4 inches square."

1753, Aug. 7. Same to same. "If the Whigs assist you awkwardly, & decline coming to the meeting, surely you may without any imputation quit your present view. For I dread my dear Brother's low spirits when anything takes hold of them, as, according to your letter this seems to do." "I find M^r Pelham wishes you & Pitt were joined. Lord Shaftesbury promised him absolutely to be for you."

1753, Aug. 23. Same to same. "On Monday if you'd be at Kensington, you may see in Red Ribbons, Sir Edw^d Walpole, Sir Ch^s Pawlett, Sir Edw^d Hussey Montagu, & Sir Richard Lyttelton."

1753, Nov. 15. Same to same. "In the H. of Lords the D. of Newcastle mov'd (I did not hear him), the repeal of the Jew Bill. I came in whilst Secker was upon his legs, who preach'd very ill, and S^t Asaph spoke very well on the occasion, L^d Temple was the only one against it, with great decency & propriety complaining of those newspapers which misled & inflam'd the people. In our House M^r Lyttelton &

G. W.
Digby,
Esq.

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

" M^r Colleton moved and seconded the address, ill enough. After it had passed nem con. Sir James Dashwood mov'd a call of the House in order to consider of the repeal of the Jew Bill. Lord Parker seconded him, and before the call comes the Bill will be repealed."

1753. Nov. 17. Same to same. Election affairs.

1754. March 12. Same to same. " You would never guess what I am going to tell you, which were not this post night I would send you word of by express, for I do not like my brother blame, but feel much obliged to you for your curiosity. Know then the D. of Newcastle go's to the Head of the Treasury, & I am to be Secretary of State, of course Cabinet Councillor, & at the Head of the H. of Commons. Legge is to be a 2nd Lord of the Treasury & Chancellor of the Exchequer. Now what do you think of this new Secretary of State? Why that he is got into the place in England that he is most unfit for. So he thinks I can assure you. It is not known publicly here yet but will to morrow, or next day. This is news enough for one letter and will create, I fancy, a surprise, that will not be digested before the next post brings you more news. . . . I am glad I^d Egmont does not come in. I like your thought of Lord Shaftesbury, moderate whig enough I am sure. I hear of a Tracy, what objection have the Tories to join him? I hear of Houlben too who is rather a Tory, & I hope to keep Lord Egmont out, the Whigs will have none of him. Why dont you stand & chuse Harry at Wells. At all events keep out Egmont & dont say that I (who am now a Minister) said so."

Copy of M^r Fox's letter to the D. of Newcastle, March 14th, 1754. Endorsed. " Lord Hartington saw this letter before it was sent & said there was not a word too much & that he would justify it everywhere." The promises to M^r Fox were unasked & voluntary." My Lord Duke. As your Grace is to wait upon H. Majesty this morning I must lose no time to desire your Grace not to acquaint H.M. that I have accepted the office of Secretary of State. But if H. M. has been already informed of my acceptance of it, I beg your Grace would tell H. M. that I purpose with the utmost submission to desire leave to decline it. It is impossible that H. M. could think of raising me to so exalted a station but with a design that I should with and under your Grace manage his affairs in the H. of Commons. This was the whole tenor of your Grace's messages to me by Lord Hartington, which your Grace's conference with Lord Hartington and me yesterday morning and with Lord Hartington last night have totally contradicted. Unable therefore to answer what I dare say is His Majesty's expectations (tho' your Grace has frankly declared it is not yours), that I should be answerable for H. M's affairs in the H. of Commons, I beg leave to remain where I am, heartily wishing success to His Majesty's affairs and contributing as much as shall be in the power of a single man towards it."

1754. March 23. H. Fox. to Lord Digby. " I have by M^r Digby's advice acted a right part in point of honour, but such a one as will be very prejudicial to your Lordship & poor Harry which consequences of it I extremely regret. For to let you know what I think of it, I think they may go on very well, I never imagin'd otherwise: opposition do's not arise from one man however great, & were an opposition ever so powerful to arise, I would not join it, no not in points where I might in opinion agree with it. I remain & shall remain Secretary at War, & if you can find no comfort from my not being greater, in the reputation, I think, & I hope, I have gained by refusing the Secretaryship of State which I must have taken on the foot of being either a fool or a knave, I can give you no other either in present or in prospect. I send you my letter which you may show to whomever you please & M^r Digby can supply en detail all that may be therein wanting of the account. I shall be glad the talk if this affair, in which I have been exceedingly teased as well as ill-used, were at an end."

1754. July 27. Same to same. No interest.

1754. Aug. 13. Same to same. No interest.

1754. Aug. 14. Same to same. " M^r Sherwin bids me tell you that he thinks one or both of the troops may be sent to Dorchester, but if you could think of any place whence I shall not be soon solicited to remove them (which I believe will not be the case either at Shaftesbury or Dorchester), it would be better.—As to the other part of this very curious petition, we will " ease them in the march of souldiers whenever we can. " Will Ilchester, Smerton, or any town near Blandford (Wimborne for example) hold a troop? Where is 'ay cheapest? should be a question. Shepton Mallet is too far off."

No date. Same to same. " Enclosed is the paper Lord Granville will carry to the King to-morrow. Lady Yarmouth said it would surprise and grieve the King so much that she would not charge herself with the commission, as she saw no way out of the confusion this would put things in. She deny'd any thought of Pitt having ever been suggested to the King, I said with truth that I was very sorry for it. She then pressed me with really great force. Mon^{fr} " Fox vous êtes trop honnête Homme pour quitter a present. S'il y avait quatre ou cinq mois avant que le Parlement s'assemble: a la fin de la session vous ferez ce que vous voudrez. Mais a present de jeter tout en confusion. Regardez a la situation des affaires. Non je n'excuse pas le Duc de Newcastle, c'est dur, c'est penible, mais quand vous aurez pensé un peu au Roi, a la patrie, vous continuerez cette sessions. I think that this way saying all that could be said & here we are, nobody knowing what is to be done & I as little as any body. In the mean time Lord Rockingham stays in the King's Bedchamber, & you are Lord of the Bedchamber to the Prince, unless my Behaviour alters it again. But though there should be anger enough to wish it changed there is fear enough to keep that as it is I think. Show this letter & the enclosed, in confidence, to the D. of Bedford, and as M^r Pitt neither can nor will come, tell me what His Grace thinks this can end in."

1756, Sept. 21. Same to same. . . . " Your friend the K. of Prussia is very extraordinary in all he do's & all He writes. His troops have taken possession of Dresden where M^r Keith, by His order, sent for les Ministres de Conference & discharged them from any further attendance on their respective functions, H. Pr. M. determining to take care of every thing relating to Saxony as long as He or any of His officers should stay in the country. The better I suppose to understand the affairs of Saxony He sent for the Archives. The Q. of Poland refused, put Her seal on the Door of the closet & setting her back to the door of it, said the officer should not go there without He would faire violence a sa personne. The officer went away, but the general soon return'd a message that His Masters Orders must not be disputed. The K. of Poland & M^r Bruhe & the Pr^{ince} Xavier & Charles are got with their whole army to a very strong camp on the Elbe, & I want much to know what will be the manner in which these two kings will at last separate. In answer to an expostulatory letter of the K. of Poland's in which he offers, any terms of neutrality & desires Him to quit His country, H. Pr. M. writes that he is impatient to get out of it into Bohemia; but he can't comply with His Request for 'a hundred Raisons de guerre, don't il serait ennuyeux de faire le detail a Sa Majeste': that the principal is the absolute necessity He is under of securing the passage of the Elbe. He wishes with all His heart (for H. M's sake) that the Elbe ran through Thuringe, but as it flows through Misnia & He can't work miracles, it is impossible for him to act otherwise than he does."

1756, Oct. 11. Same to same. " On Oct. 1st about 4 in the afternoon, your acquaintance H. Pr. M^{aj} tore a leaf out of His Pocketbook & with a pencil wrote your Friend, the Koningen-Mama, word that He had gain'd a complete victory over the Austrians, beat them a platte couture. That he estimated His loss at 2,000 men, the enemy at 4,000. With this note & only this, the courier went to Berlin. The battle was between Anpich & Lossowitz in Bohemia. . . . The K. of Prussia came the night before the Battle, & seeing as He imagined some circumstances that denoted what followed, had the precaution to make His army lye all night on their arms. . . . The K. of Prussia had but 35,000 men with Him, & Brown is supposed to have had near double the number. If His Grace (the D. of Bedford) speaks to you of domestic politics tell him that neither distress nor common danger makes the D. of Newcastle more practicable: that he seems to be in treaty, or rather intending to try to treat with M^r Pitt, which I am glad of, &c. &c." No date. Same to same. " I know little more of my own affair. I am to see H. M. on Monday. . . . Neither H. M. nor the D. of Newcastle have yet departed from their system of governing without any communication of power to a commoner. They are both ready to invite Pitt. But will he come? The

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

G. W.
Digby,
Esq.

"D. of N. do's not know what to say & certainly will take no step till he sees the Chancellor who comes to Town Monday. I heartily wish Pitt may come, but I do not see how I can. And then my part is infinitely difficult. H. R. H^o, whom I am to see tomorrow, will be for my going on for this session. Even he will not be for my going on longer. But is this practicable? I shall be a minister in the House, who shall be known not to intend to remain. The D. of N. will be a minister who, they must know cannot remain. Mr Pitt opposing both. Whom are the members to look up to? Who is to combine and direct the majority: & (My God!) upon what points. If Pitt don't come what can I do. Pray shew this letter to the D. of Bedford & write me His thoughts. If I can get time you will meet me at Marlborough, perhaps the D. of Bedford would do so too. . . . The King bid L^d Granville put it to my conscience after all my obligations."

1756, Oct. 13. Same to same. "Some months ago speaking of the impossibility of gaining over Mr Pitt at a less rate than making Him Secretary of State, I told the D. of Newcastle (& afterwards said to the Chancellor) that whenever that should H. M.'s Pleasure I would readily resign, take an inferior employment & give all the assistance I were capable of. Ten days ago Lord Barrington put me in mind of this, & told me that the D. of Newcastle had the day before said that if he was sure it would not offend me, His Grace would offer my place to Mr Pitt the next day. I again, at L. Barrington's desire, told the D. of N. that whenever it was H. M.'s pleasure I was ready. I hope this is in negotiation, for tho' I have behaved in the best manner I have been able to the D. of Newcastle, yet I find that my credit in the H. of Commons is diminishing for want of support, & I think it impracticable for me to carry on H. M.'s affairs there as they ought to be carry'd on, & therefore beg leave humbly to acquaint H. M. that I wish some new arrangement may be made in which, if H. M. thinks me worthy of any employment out of the cabinet, I will attend & give all the assistance I can in Parliament."

1756, Oct. 20. Same to same. "The point of honour is at an end. They have never pressed me to stay, & my going is now so publick that it would be ridiculous. Pitt saw the Chancellor last night. Both Chancellor & the D. of Newcastle were with the K. to day. I fancy Pitt's answer has not been an absolute negative. This I guess, but I know nothing, except that what the D. of Bedford & you wish is certain, that His Grace of Newle & I can go on no longer together. Whoever considers dates must see how wrong it would have been to have published Bing's opinion of his fleet. And whoever can think it injurious to him must imagine he is not to be tryd for his behaviour in the action, & I never imagined that he could be try'd for anything else.—P.S. I have this moment learnt that Mr Pitt's answer was.—The D. of Newcastle had so engrossed the King's confidence that he could not expect any share of it. I don't think this an absolute negative. Whether it is or no depends still on Mr Pitt, for they will carry him promises of the greatest confidence. But he will I think verily ask such security as can't be given him."

Oct. 25. Same to same. "Pitt has made it a condition sine qua now that the D. of Newcastle should resign. He should have stopped to see whether this would be submitted to. But if they say true, he sent by L^d Yarmouth his administration. They take care to send it round to me that all places were filled without the least mention of me. I believe the Treasury, not the Admiralty, was for Lord Temple & one of the Grenvilles was to have the Pay Office. It was extremely weak to talk of persons till the point was carry'd. These terms were so excessive that it was unanimously agreed to reject them. By they I mean the D. of N., who told L^d Chancellor, L^d President, L^d Holderness, & the Duke of Grafton, from the King what had passed, swearing them all to the secrecy, so what has transpired is from them, notwithstanding their oath. This transaction has made Pitt and L^d Bute friends again. The D. of Newcastle is determined to try & to offer me the Pay Office I believe, expecting that I will in that post zealously defend him. If not, he'll try, however, without us. This looks too much as if I should be drove, whether I will or no, into opposition.—P.S. I am going for the last time to a conciliabulum of my enemys. . . ."

1754, Dec. 14. Same to same. "The D. of Bedford did accept Ireland. . . . I think as his Grace takes his parson of Covent Garden, Dr. Craddock, he would choose he should wear lawn first. His second is his parson of Tavistock, and his third Mr Stone. . . . "As I was in the House to-day I thought it proper to admonish the new Ministry not to send away the foreign troops without they were sure they could defend this country & yet spare a force to America. G. Grenville and Legge spoke, Pitt has the gout still. It was conversation there was no question. But Rigby likes it the best of any day he ever saw. The Torsys & nobody else applauded Legge and Grenville. The whole House, except the Torsys, approved of me, Lord G. Sackville, and Mr Conway. And this was on both sides so marked a thing as I never before saw. So that leader of the Whig party, Legge, and that advocate for purity of Whiggism, Pitt, are actually joined with the Torsys, and one of the simple articles of their foolish union (foolish, at least, in this reign) was not to thank the King for the Hanoverians, but, on the contrary, to say how incompatible they are with the temper, safety, and liberty of Great Britain. What I said I felt, & I, who have not thought so before, do now think this strange administration will not hold. What it will break into I don't know, but I believe into anything before Pitt would join with me, & I seriously do not wish to be a minister, tho' I can't resist the universal cry out upon me for flying away from all thought of it."

1756, Dec. 18. Same to same. "Pitt I am told acts up to the highest character of Pride & Impracticability that any Teste can give of him. There are comical things in this Teste, but nothing can be so comical as the report current in town, particularly in the city, that Lord Ilchester is the author of them. . . . I think of all comical & strange reports this is most so. I doubt whether his Lordship has taken the trouble to read them."

1757, July 16. Same to same.

1757, July 19. Same to same.

1757, July 26. Same, from the Pay Office, to same. "I'll answer all your letters, & will give you one or two to tell you how Maddington looks without you, and the H. of Commons without me."

1754, March 5. H. Digby to his brother. "There is nothing talked of in town since you went but Mr Pelham's illness. He was seized with a shivering fit on Friday night, & has lain very ill ever since. . . . He is still thought to be in great danger. . . . It is thought Mr Pelham's illness will put off the elections, for if he recovers it is impossible he should be well enough to appear of some time."

1754, March 11th. C. Digby to "Neddy." "The whole town in general give my bro'r (brother-in-law, H. Fox) the seals, and make him Mr Pelham's successor, & I believe he thinks from what yet appears that he shall be so, but in what manner the thing will be done, whether with a good grace and in the most agreeable way to him or no, I can't say. The Scotch I hear are violent against him, & I don't hear of anybody else that is so. I suppose my Lord Chancellor is not much for him. The D. of Devonshire was sent for from Derbyshire, & came to town last night, nothing was to be determined till he came. The D. of Newcastle would not hear of business till he saw him, he was upon his brother's death in violent passions of grief, and said he would give up everything, & have nothing more to do with business, but as he can't yet do that, I conclude he will alter his mind. Your letter came to him very unluckily, the very day Mr Pelham died, & he either not minding the date, or not thinking of your being at such a distance, says 'tis very strange you should write to him at such a time upon such a subject, so my brother Fox desires you would write a letter of condolence, &c. . . . Poor little Charles Fox is a good deal out of order, enough to alarm him & Lady Caroline, but Truesdale does not apprehend him in much danger. . . . Yesterday was said the D. of Newcastle would be head of the Treasury, & my brother Secretary of State, that is one scheme; another is to make my brother Chancellor of the Exchequer, & put some Lord at the head of the Treasury; his acceptance of this last will depend upon whether the power is to be lodged in the 1st Lord of the Treasury or in the Chancellor. These are schemes talked of, but my brother says there is no guessing at which will take place, as the King knows nothing of them yet, the D. of Newcastle has not yet seen him, & till he does nothing can be proposed."

1754, March 14. H. Digby to his brother Lord Digby. "Mr Fox wrote to you on Tuesday night & told you what was then settled with regard to the administration, viz., that the D. of Newcastle was to go to the Head of the Treasury, that Mr Fox was to be Secre-

G. W.
Digby,
Esq.

G. W.
HIGBY,
Esq.

G. W.
HIGBY,
Esq.

" tary of State, & that Mr Legge was to be Chancellor of the Exchequer & Lord of the Treasury. You must know, if you have not heard of it before, that several messages had passed between Mr Fox & the D. of Newcastle, & that my Lord Hartington brought Mr. Fox word that His Grace relied upon him to manage the King's affairs in the House of Commons, & that whatever was done with the secret service money in that Business was to be communicated to him, & that he was to have the disposal of some of the places to put it in his power to manage the House of Commons. Upon these terms Mr Fox sent word that he would accept of or rather that he acquiesced in the proposal of making him Secretary of State, tho' he did not much like it. This being agreed to on these terms, my Lord Hartington carried Mr Fox yesterday morning to my Lord Chancellor (who received him as civilly as possible), & from thence to Newcastle House. His Grace was civil at first, but when they began to talk of business he held a very different sort of language from what he had before said to my Lord Hartington. This put Mr. Fox under a great deal of uneasiness, & last night he did not at all know what he should do. The D. of Newcastle has since seen my Lord Hartington, & without denying one word of the messages sent by his Lordship to Mr. Fox. His Grace, however, declares that he does not intend Mr. Fox should have any power whatever out of his own office. My Lord Hartington is, as you may imagine, extremely angry at the D. of Newcastle for (going contrary to) [altered from "denying"] all he had before said to him, & declares that he never will have anything more to say to his Grace. Mr Fox has this morning wrote to D. of Newcastle."

" Since I wrote what is above I have been at dinner with my Lord Ilchester, where I heard that Mr Fox had been with my Lady Yarmouth, who received him extremely well & said she was very sorry for all this. He gave her a copy of his letter to the D. of Newcastle, which she promised to shew to the King. Mr Fox will not see the King till Saturday morning. The D. of Newcastle has seen H. Majesty to day for the first time since Mr Pelham's death. My Lord Chancellor went into the King to-day, & it is said he shewed Mr Fox's letter to the D. of N. to his Majesty. His Lordship has sent to Mr Fox to desire he may see him to-morrow morning early. How this will all end I can't guess, but nothing can be decided till Mr. Fox has seen the King."

Note in H. Fox's hand. " Harry has given so particular an account that I will only say that I would not be a shabby dog to be King of France, & certainly will not be Sec^d of State."

1754, March 19. The same to the same. " Mr Fox wrote to you last night, & I suppose he told you that the post of Sec^d of State was offered to Sir Thomas Robinson, who has taken time to consider, but I suppose he will take it. I think everybody I have heard talk of these things praises Mr Fox behaviour except my Lord Ilchester, who talks & thinks differently from most people about it. He says it has gone just as Mr Fox's enemies could wish. He seems to put it all in the worst light, & is quite low spirited about it. . . . Most people think that if he (Mr Fox) had taken it he would have been as he is now, & that his recommendation to the D. of Newcastle would have been of the greatest prejudice to all his friends. If this was to be the case he is better as Secretary at War. His reputation is at present much raised by having refused it. I hear to-day that the speaker praises him very much, & says he has acted with great honour; he is very sorry for what has happened, but as things turned out Mr Fox could not do otherwise than he has done."

1754, March 20. The same to the same. " Legge accepts of the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer under the D. of Newcastle, tho' they don't love one another, & I believe he is one of the few who think Mr Fox has done imprudently."

1756, Oct. 26. The same to the same. " It is now certain that Mr. Fox's place has been offered to Pitt with whatever he pleased for friends, but he made the exclusion of the D. of Newcastle, a condition sine qua non. . . . He has excluded the D. of Newcastle in concert with Leicester House. It is still doubtful whether the D. of Newcastle will attempt to go on without either Mr Fox or Mr Pitt, indeed what he will do. I rather think he will try without them, & then it must end in Mr Fox's going into opposition. It is generally thought it must end in the D. of Newcastle's ruin, but I question whether he thinks so. It has " been rumoured that they would attempt to regain Mr Fox, but that I fancy is not possible nor practicable to go on if he would agree to it."

1756, Oct. 28. The same to the same. " I believe you are the only one of His Royal Highness's servants that has not as yet kissed His hand. I suppose you have made your health an excuse in your answer to Lord Waldegrave. I hope when you do come you will be at least as well there as the rest of his new servants, for I hear he has told them all that they are not to ride out with him, & that he desires never to see them except upon his court days. The King would not give the key to Lord Bute himself but sent it, & when he kissed his hand he did not say a word to him. This has disoblged the Prince & Princess of Wales extremely, & the D. of Newcastle & the Chancellor are as ill if not worse than ever at that court. I wrote to you on Tuesday to Bath. Then Pitt had refused absolutely to have any connection with the D. of Newcastle. What his Grace would do upon this was at that time uncertain, but yesterday morning the King sent for Mr. Fox, & as soon as he came into the closet his Majesty said, 'The Duke of Newcastle whom you 'hate will retire'; & after Mr Fox had declared that he bore no resentment against his Grace, he asked him if he could carry on his affairs & bid him speak to Mr Pitt and see if they could agree upon measures. His Majesty talked a good while to Mr. Fox, & said he had doubts whether Mr Pitt would join with him. He then asked who Mr Fox would talk to about measures for carrying on his affairs, & upon his naming the Dukes of Devonshire, Bedford, & Marlborough together with all the considerable people who supported the Ministry last year, there ensued a good deal more conversation than can be related, the conclusion of which was to desire Mr Fox to speak to all the people he should think proper & concert measures for carrying on his affairs. The King asked Mr Fox many times what he would have, to which, as I understand, he replied that he was ready to support his Majesty's Government in any capacity he should think proper, but that it was in vain to talk of places till they had agreed upon measures. This I heard last night with many extraordinary expressions of the King's in this conversation. This morning the Prince of Wales had his first levy, Mr Fox came rather too late & met Mr Pitt upon the top of the stairs at Saville House, where they had a good deal of conversation which concluded nothing, for I saw Mr Fox since & asked him what I should write to you & he told me there was nothing more material since he spoke to me last night: but I find it is rather a thought that Mr Pitt will not join with him. What it will end in is very far from being certain, but most people think Mr Fox must be at the head of the Treasury, & tho' he does not get Mr Pitt if he can get some of his people & make it merely a family opposition it may do as well. Though Mr Fox was not time enough for the levy to day he was at the top of the stairs as the Prince went out & his Royal Highness spoke to him. Legge is not yet come to town, so whether he will stand & fall with Mr Pitt or whether he may be persuaded to come in if Pitt does not is as yet uncertain. The Duke of Devonshire is not yet come to town, nor the Duke of Argyll. How long it will be before it is quite settled nobody can tell. The meeting of the Parliament is fixed for a fortnight. Mr Fox is gone to the Duke's at Windsor this evening & comes back early to-morrow morning."

1756, Dec. 7. The same to the same. " Many people think upon what passed in the H. of Commons on Thursday that things look very ill for Mr Fox, but I cannot see that they are at all worse than when you left London. Mr Townshend moved for the address in a very indifferent speech, Mr Sands seconded him in a very short one, & then Mr Beckford declared his satisfaction, as well as that of all the people he was connected with, in the late change of administration, spoke offensively of the late Ministers, and said their names stunk in the nostrils of the people, but distinguished Mr Fox from the rest by saying that there was one whom he knew had abilities, & would have done better if he had not been overwhelmed with that moles of incapacity & inattention. Then Sir T. Robinson spoke for his friend the D. of Newcastle & after him Lord Granby spoke with great weight in favour of his Grace, & it was very well heard. Then Mr Pitt made a very artful, able speech, & represented the state of affairs abroad & at home as bad as possible, & as he was afraid we should be beat next summer, talked of making great efforts

G. W.
DRENT,
Esq.

"this year, & when you had done all you could for yourselves, then you must see how far you could afford to act upon the continent, that you must go as far as the interests of this country were combined with those of the Powers on the continent, for combined they were. Then Lord G. Sackville spoke as he always does, very well, & said that when he moved for the Hanoverians last year, he thought them very necessary to our security at home, & he must own he did not see that the necessity ceased, but should wait to see what was to be proposed in the room of them. He said Mr Pitt's speech had pleased him, that he was glad to find that he saw the weakness of this country, & was not an adventurer in administration. There was not a word said against the address. Mr Pitt had all the considerable people of the H. of Commons at his house the night before the meeting at the Cockpit, & was to have been at the Cockpit, but as he was not well enough Mr Legge went & made his excuse. It is thought this hurt Legge's pride very much for he expected to have been the principal man for the H. of Commons as he was under the D. of Newcastle. So much for the H. of Commons. In the H. of Lords Lord Templar opposed that part of the address which thanks the King for having brought over the Hanoverians last year upon the address of Parliament. He said if he had had anything to do with penning the address, he would sooner have cut off his right hand than put in such words. I hear the D. of Bedford answered him very well."

1756, Dec. 14. The same to the same. "You will probably know before you get this that Mr Fox is returned to London. He says he came back because he found that his friends blamed him for going, & he should have been thought obstinate if he had not come back though he sees no good in it, & that he will go again as soon as they give him leave. He called here last night, & told me there was a debate yesterday in the H. of Commons which he said was pretty to see tho' there was not much to hear. Lord Barrington made a motion for a bill for quartering the foreigners while they stayed here, upon which Sir Cordel Firebrace said he hoped it would only extend to those that were now here & not to any that might on any future occasion be brought over. Upon this Mr Fox differed with him & declared that the measure of sending away the foreign troops was not resolved upon while he had any share in the administration. Then there was a good deal of talk about that measure tho' no dispute about the question. When Mr Fox spoke I understand he was extremely well heard, & when George Grenville answered him he was applauded by the Tories and the Tories only. Lord G. Sackville & Gen. Conway both spoke & declared their opinions of the great use the foreign troops were of here & to advise those who had resolved to part with them to consider well what they would do without them. In short it was plain by yesterday's debate that that there was some sort of agreement between Pitt and the Tories with regard to sending away the foreign troops. It is very plain by what I hear that if there are any questions to divide upon not against public measures that the administration & the Tories will make the minority against all the rest of the House.

"This strange administration will I hope furnish us with some ridiculous story of their proceedings every day; they have only three Lords of the Admiralty & one of the Paymasters out of Parliament."

1756, Dec. 21. The same to the same.—"You will be surprised to hear that Bob is gone to Jamaica, but I hope he will not lose the command of the Achilles by it. He was under Admiral Knowle's command, cruising in the Bay of Biscay, where six French men-of-war got out of Brest, upon which the Admiral dispatched the Bideford to give notice to Admiral Franklin at the Leeward Islands, & afterwards to Admiral Townsend at Jamaica. As his ship was not at all prepared for the West Indies, I hope he will be sent back immediately; the Achilles will not be launched before April."

1756, Dec. 23. The same to the same.—"In the H. of Commons yesterday we voted the army here without the least objection, but my Lord Barrington abused all the addresses & instructions he had seen in pretty strong words, which was taken up by Mr Beckford, & his Lordship made a good reply; when we came to the question upon the Hessian estimate Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer said that was not to be looked upon as a part of the permanent strength

G. W.
DRENT,
Esq.

"of this country. Upon this Lord G. Sackville got up & laid before the House the state of the army, & how it might possibly be employed, by which it appeared that notwithstanding we had voted 49,000 men upon paper, we had not, without the foreigners, above 36,000, & that when all the necessary garrisons were supplied we should not have above 18,000 to act in case of invasion, & that all the force we could send to America must be deducted from that 18,000, & upon that declared his opinion that this country would be in a defenceless condition, but hoped we should have notice before the Hessians went that the House might consider whether it was proper to part with them. Then Mr Fox spoke & said he joined with Lord G. Sackville in opinion, & hoped that the House would have proper notice before the troops went. Upon this Mr Legge & Mr Grenville said it could not be a secret, but that they believed it would not be notified to Parliament in form. After this Mr Fox spoke again, & declared that he was out of employment but not in opposition, that he would not make any motion for fear it should be thought offensive, but said he wished somebody would move for a call, some day, soon after the recess, that there might be a full house to consider of this; so soon as the Committee was over, the call was moved for, & is appointed for the 20th of January. To day there was a very thin House. Mr Townshend, after a great many fine words about public good, & hoping this national question would not be made an engine for party, declared himself of different opinion from Mr Legge & Mr Grenville. Pitt has not been well enough to come to the House since the first day, & I don't believe he trusts any of them with what he intends to do, but it is thought he means to send away the Hessians immediately; however I believe we shall have a debate upon it, & probably vote an address to the King to desire that the Hessians may not go & afterwards I should think he will not venture to send them. This is now put off till after the call. It seems by the appearance of the House that this new Administration has the Tories, & nothing but the Tories to support them; & I do not think they seem extremely zealous just now. It is all very strange how many people think Pitt does not mean to go on, but if he resigns what will come of it nobody can tell; Mr Fox seems to think that he will go on."

1757, June 7. The same to the same.—"The D. of Newcastle was with the King again this morning & told him that he could not possibly accept unless he got Leicester House to support him. Mr Fox goes to the King to-morrow, but there is I think some doubt whether he shall accept directly, or advise his Majesty to treat further with Leicester House. This is all I know; something will be decided soon. Lord Ilchester wishes you was here. It is now very interesting, but how it will end is not yet certain, but I rather think Mr Fox will have it at last."

1757, June 9. The same to the same. "When I wrote last the D. of Newcastle had refused to accept of the Treasury without he got Leicester House to support him, & the king was very averse to doing what they proposed, & looked upon the terms mentioned as giving himself up a prisoner to Leicester House. Mr Fox was in with his Majesty yesterday, & it was at last settled that Lord Waldegrave should be at the Head of the Treasury & Mr Fox Chancellor of the Exchequer. The filling up of other places is not yet determined. I think Mr Fox does not seem sanguine about the H. of Commons, but I hope it will do. The D. of Newcastle would not promise the King to support his administration, so we look upon him as quite gone to Leicester House. How those who are called his friends will act I can't tell.—P.S. Lord Holderness has resigned they say, the D. of Leeds & others will resign immediately, the D. of Rutland, Lord Rockingham, Lord Northumberland, Lord Coventry, it is said intend to resign."

1757, June 11. The same to the same. "I told you on Thursday night that Lord Waldegrave was fixed for first Lord of the Treasury, & Mr Fox for Chancellor of the Exchequer. Lord Holderness resigned immediately, which was not of any great consequence, but as it was soon after declared that the D. of Rutland, the D. of Leeds, & many others would not only resign but go into opposition, this prevented any from accepting of places, & as it was evident that the D. of Newcastle had entered into a treaty with Leicester House, & Mr Pitt in order to force the King into what-

G. W.
Digby,
Esq.

"ever terms they agreed, I thought there was little or no hopes of success if we should attempt it. This was the situation when I saw Lord Ilchester this morning. Mr Fox was then determined to go & tell the King that it was his opinion it would not do, but if the King would have him he would undertake it & try. In this way nothing could seem more desperate than Mr Fox's situation, & I own I thought it must end in sacrificing him & all his friends to the resentment of Leicester House & Mr Pitt. Lord Mansfield had some conversation with L^d Ilchester in the morning, & said Mr Fox was going to ruin himself if he undertook it with a majority in the H. of Commons & the cry of the people violent against him. I think it all looked very melancholy this morning, & now I am afraid it is not a vast deal better. Lord Mansfield went into the king & told him that tho' he was not asked he thought it his duty to advise the King not to push this, but to treat further with the D. of Newcastle & Leicester House, so my L^d Mansfield is to go & talk to my L^d Hardwicke to night. Mr Fox went into the King immediately after Lord Mansfield, & his Majesty spoke very kindly to him but seemed excessively melancholy at being forced to submit to Leicester House. The King told him that if it was in his power he certainly should be Paymaster, that he would do all he could but that he was afraid they would not let him make a page of the Backstairs. If they will let Mr Fox be Paymaster I think it ends well enough, & that's much better than undertaking the thing to have it fail in his hands, & be turned out with all his friends next winter, but if they do insist (& they may now carry whatever they do insist on) upon his being left out & his friends turned out, it is as bad as bad can be. I saw Mr Fox just now, & he seems very glad that he is not to be Chancellor of the Exchequer. I was with him but a minute or two & I am very glad to tell you that he seemed easy tho' he thought it doubtful whether he should have anything, but he was of opinion that as it now costs his friends would be left in their places, tho' I own I can't help doubting about that: & if they should insist upon turning out some of his friends, that will make a great deal of difference, & they may now carry whatever they do insist upon. I have now told you all I know of this transaction, & as there is now a new treaty begun there will be nothing more known till that transpires. Lord Ilchester desired me to tell you that the more he thought of this the more he thought Mr Fox was in the wrong to resign last winter."

1757, June 14. The same to the same. "It was very plain the D. of Newcastle had desired every one of his friends to resign in order to force the King into whatever terms he should fix with Leicester House; but now the shuffling rascal is ashamed of what he has done & denies it. His friends exult much upon this victory, but I don't think it certain that his Grace & Pitt will agree, & if they do not I can't at all guess what will come of it. The moment that I hear they are agreed, which I still think is the most probable way its ending, I will set out for Sherborne, for I don't care a farthing how they parcel it out among themselves. I don't imagine they will permit the King to make Mr Fox Paymaster. It was said yesterday, but with what foundation I can't tell, that Pitt said he should now insist upon turning out the D^s of Marlborough, Bedford, & Argyll, & that L^d Gower & L^d Grauville must not stay. L^d Granby they said was to succeed the D. of Marlborough, L^d Temple the D. of Bedford, & L^d Hardwicke was to be L^d President, but I don't believe they are agreed upon anything, for I was just now told by L^d Valdegrave that Pitt, the D. of Newcastle, & L^d Hardwicke were together till one this morning & parted without having settled anything. . . . I must mention one circumstance which I believe L^d Ilchester omitted. When it was settled on Thursday that Mr Fox was to be Chancellor of the Exchequer, the D. of Devonshire desired Mr Ellis to go & move the H. of Commons to adjourn, which he, very imprudently, without observing that there was a majority of enemies there, did, upon which Mr Townshend spoke against it & talked of proposing an address to the King to desire he would form an administration. After this Ellis was imprudent enough to divide the House & was beat by three to one. They called this a victory over Mr Fox's friends & triumphed mightily though there was not much in it. I was not there but some of our friends told us that the majority was vastly elated & seemed ripe for any kind of violence that could be proposed,

G. W.
Digby,
Esq.

& many think there would have been something very extraordinary done if Mr Fox had gone on. 1757, July 9th. The same to the same. No interest. 1757, July 14th. The same to the same. "I know no news to send you, & hope we shall not hear any, for I think there is no reason to expect anything good from any part of the world." 1757, July 19. The same to the same. "You will have heard that the camp at Agmondesham is broke up, & that there is to be one of 8,000 men in the Isle of Wight, from whence they are to embark for some expedition, but where I can't tell. Sir J. Mordaunt is to command, with Conway & Cornwallis under him." 1753, Sept. 9. Lord Ilchester to Lord Digby. No interest.

No date. The same to the same. No interest. 1754, March 11th, Monday. "The same to the same. As soon as the King knew Mr Pelham was dead, he desired the D. of Devonshire might be sent for, who came to town late on Saturday. Several persons have been reported to succeed Mr Pelham, whose names I send you, & are as follows: Mr. Fox, the Speaker, L^d Dupplin, Sir George Lee, Sir George Lyttleton, Mr Grenville, Mr Leg, Sir John Bernard, but most people did imagine, & do imagine, it will be my brother, & I believe it is the King's present intention. It was likewise my opinion till yesterday, when I heard something which inclines me to think that the D. of Newcastle has serious thoughts of going to the Treasury either as L^d Treasurer or as First Commissioner. This alteration in the Duke's mind is supposed to arise chiefly from the D. of Argyll & some of the Duke's particular friends who have represented to him that whoever has the Treasury must have the power, & that it was dangerous for him to trust it in my brother's hands. . . . The D. of Newcastle is not to see the King till Friday."

1754, March 18th. The same to the same. "You can't imagine how much grieved I am to think so great a matter should have gone off in so strange a manner, & that my brother should have let such a situation as he might have been in slip through his fingers merely upon punctilio, & I vow to God the more I turn it in my head the less I think he would have suffered any blemish in his honour, but in this I differ from Mr Digby, my brother himself, & as I understand from some of his great friends."

(The rest of the letter gives the same account of as the previous letters of Mr Fox & Mr Digby of the interview between the D. of Newcastle & Mr Fox, and the causes of Mr Fox's withdrawal.)

"Friday my brother went with L^d Hartington to the L^d Chancellor, & had a conversation of 3 hours, when the Duke's message was in words endeavoured to be softened to him, & the word management explained, but never explained so as to mean the management of the H. of Commons. However, my L^d Chancellor was extremely civil & endeavouring to persuade an accommodation, & I heartily wish my brother had said, 'My Lord, since you say I shall be treated with confidence, I will accept & will serve with fidelity & sincerity.' This was the last opportunity he had of taking it, for the next day in the King's closet, though His Majesty was civil, or rather patient in hearing all my brother had to say, yet he was not pressed to take the employment, nor do I think that he could then have had it, so has this great affair passed away like a dream. . . . And now my Lord I heartily condole with you upon this misfortune, which I think a very great one, which I think with temper & prudence might have been avoided, because I don't entertain those suspicions some people do that my brother was intended to be put into the employment only to disgrace him, first to lessen his character & then turn him out. If you please you may send this letter to Mr Digby and talk it over with her, but not to say anything of it to my brother, for I am far from desiring to put him out of humour with his own determination, &c. . . ."

1754, March 21. The same to the same. "You will easily imagine I am very unhappy when I tell you I see my brother most extremely so, he is now convinced that he has made as great a mistake as ever was made by man, that there was not the shadow of reason for his making the refusal he did, & laments himself in a most passionate manner, blaming everybody who gave him the advice he followed, & blaming me in particular for not delivering my opinion in a stronger manner. . . . I begin to perceive that he has been misled in this affair by his R.H. the D., who finding

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

"his offer of reconciliation to the D. of N. but coldly received, was a good deal heated, & being so encouraged my brother in that unhappy way of resolving, who now says that nothing but a combination of unfortunate accidents could have ruined him."

Monday. The same to the same. "The short & true account of the present situation is, that my brother is quite routed, & that Pitt & Newcastle are triumphant. How they will settle their matters I don't know, but it is thought that the former will be minister, & much more in the King's confidence than the duke, against whom his Majesty is at present excessively piqued, imputing to him, & with great reason, the numerous set of resigners who were all to quit their employments as soon as my brother kissed hands, which it was thought would have been done on Saturday. Rutland was there ready to resign his staff as soon as my brother had received the seals, & he came at the particular desire & instigation of L^d Granby, L^d Rockingham, and about half a dozen Lords of the Bedchamber were to have resigned as to-day, & likewise the D. of Leeds, Nugent, Sir T. Robinson, Barrington, &c. &c. These resignations did not embarrass so much as the refusal of any person of abilities to take employment, & even great ones. My brother offered Halifax the Secretary of State, which he refused, as did Oswald, Sir George Lee, & Hume Campbell, very considerable employment. I question whether the unreasonable rapaciousness of the two last did not prevent the D. of Newcastle from going on with the plan he had agreed to the 2^d & 3^d of June, & which he did not depart from till he found H. Campbell insisted upon being Treasurer of the Navy or Chambers, & Sir George that he would not be Chancellor of the Exchequer unless his brother & nephew were brought into Parliament & well placed. Newcastle has now the impudence to say that the resignations were not his advising. The first audience my brother had of the King was the Wednesday after you left town. His Majesty began by reproaching him very roundly, said he was the author of all this confusion by resigning last October. After he had dwelt a great while upon that topic, he commended him for his behaviour this session; every time he went into the closet he talked to him upon that point, & Saturday last, when he spoke to him vastly kind & tenderly, he said, 'indeed, Mr. Fox, you did very wrong to resign last October, you did indeed, both for your own sake & mine.' He speaks of himself as in a manner deposed, questions whether he shall be permitted to make a page of the backstairs. The D. of Devonshire & my brother went yesterday to Park Place, a house of Gen. Conway's near Henley. L^d Mansfield (with whom my brother is extremely well-pleased) is now the person whom the King sent to Pitt & Newcastle to negotiate, but what negotiation can there be after a complete victory on one side & a total defeat on the other? Some think all my brother's friends will immediately be turned out, & others think not."

"The King said I am very willing to fight any battle when there is any probability of success but don't put me into one I must lose; I have but few friends about me at present, & in that case I shall have none. I forgot to tell you that Northumberland said, let who will resign he would not, but would support whatever minister the King appointed. Lord Egremont & Gower were to have been Secretaries, the scheme was upon the point of beginning, but the ship would not launch. Lord Winchelsea is by everyone commended & extolled, he may, I believe, be Groom of the Stole, but his present disposition is to have nothing, & I fancy he will not alter it unless at the King's particular desire. As for my brother, I am afraid it will end in his having nothing, though the King is very eager to procure him the Pay Office, & labours that point as I understand, but that has been so often refused that I have little hopes. The last time Newcastle was with the King, which was the day after you left London, he brought higher terms, which put the King out of humour & made him break off—what he was most angry at was their insisting that L^d George should be Sec. at War, & Pratt Attorney General—this evening I expect to find my brother returned from Gen. Conway's to Holland House, when I saw him he was very easy, & in good spirits; what seems most to vex him is, that in one of his conversations with the King his Majesty told him that his resignation in October had lost him the hearts of the Whiggs, & I am afraid he feels it in some measure true."

G. W.
DIGBY,
Esq.

"The Duke has retreated some say very judiciously, but I think it looks as if the French would push him hard, in the disposition people are in at present I don't think it would give the least concern if news should come that he & his army were cut to pieces. I suppose the miserable situation the Hanoverian dominions are in is another great cause of sorrow to the King. Upon the whole he is very low & dejected, he said to Lord Bateman yesterday 'God knows whose hands I am to be in.' There was last night a meeting of Pitt & his friends at Lord Temples & of Newcastle & his friends at Dupplins."

1754, March 23. The same to the same. "My brother has certainly committed a great error in politics, & I am afraid one that is irretrievable, but all we can do now is to endeavour to keep up his spirits by assuring him he is far from being blamed, which is true in general, he is commended by many, but none of those many are persons who understand politics or the present situation of the court. In what I said in my last about the D. I was not quite right, for my brother says it was he himself was the occasion of the D.'s having that opinion that he should not take it; when he had once resolved he was pretty eager, but what surprises me, & what I did not know when I wrote last, & what my brother laments of all things, & says was the first occasion of his ruin, & what first puzzled & distracted his mind, was a letter Sir Charles wrote him one night at 12 o'clock just as he was going to bed, I think he says it was 8 or 9 pages. The letter was starting & raising & magnifying all the difficulties imaginable, representing the secretary's office in the strangest light, how strangely he was to be used in it by the D. of N. Till he received this letter Lady Caroline says he was quite calm, but afterward always perplexed & disturbed, & after plaguing himself with doubts & suspicions for 2 or 3 nights, for I think this letter came Monday night, it ended in taking a firm, wrong, & heady resolution to refuse, in which fatal mind he continued till Monday last, when it was too late. He was with the King to-day, who was civil to him, but only talked of War Office business."

1754, May 4. The same to the same.—"I understand from Lady Caroline that he (my brother) entirely acquits the D. of Newcastle & lays the blame upon himself & friends. As for the D. of N. his behaviour was such as happened to create a little difficulty, which might have been got over with a small degree of temper & dexterity, but instead of that it was running out into vain declamations against the D. of N. and a parcel of supposed enemies, & now 11 pentarsi da sezzo nulla giova."

There are other letters of Lord Ilchester to Lord Digby written in 1754 and 1756, which have no general interest.

1754, Nov. 26, Jn^o Calcraft to Lord Digby. "What passed yesterday in the H. of Commons is matter of the greatest speculation here. Mr. Willes, a friend of Mr. Paym^r Pitts, delivered yesterday a petition against the (2nd) or Jago Delaval, complaining of bribery at Berwick. Delaval 2^d made a ludicrous witty speech, on which Mr. Pitt came down from the gallery to support his friends & the dignity of Parliament, that he said was brought to the lowest ebb; he was very violent in his professions of Wiggism, & hints of his dislike to Murray's governing the House of C., who were reduced, he said, to a small assembly to register the arbitrary edicts of one too powerful subject. His speech, both by his friends and enemies, is declared the finest he ever made. Mr. Legge got up & in a very short speech assented to Mr. Pitt, concluding that 'he hoped that House would always be governed by true principles of Wiggism, & that whatsover might be his fate, by such he would stand or fall.' Mr. Fox did not get to the House till Mr. Pitt had almost done. Murray was there, sneaked into a corner, and looked Sir T. Robinson looked grave & said nothing. The House in general looked all confusion. At night was the first Committee of Elections. Mr. Pitt got up to move for a day for reading, in order, as is guessed, to make a panegerick on Lord Fane, which he did very finely. Then rose Sir T. Robinson, who said the case would be short, for the cause of the sitting member was, from his information, a very good one. Mr. Pitt took this up very hardly. Sir Th^o replied very warmly, saying he had been called unwillingly to a very high employment. Mr. Pitt gave him to understand he believed so, & if other people had chose

G. W.
DIGBY,
ESQ.

COLLEGE OF PHY-SICIANS.

"it he would not have had it. Mr Fox complimented Sir Th^o as to his honesty & parts as a Minister, but told him that 20 years service abroad, much to his own honour & his country's service, had made him unacquainted with Parliamentary matters, & excused his expression. This I hear is disliked. The Duke of N^o's friends, as well as his Grace, are, I hear, very fidgety. It is every where reported consequences will follow. As soon as I know what they will be you shall hear. I was not in the House, so you must excuse my not giving a better account of the speeches, but the substance of them I believe I'm right in."

1755. July 17. Jn^o Calcraft to L^d Digby. The Gibraltar came on Tuesday express from Admiral Boscawen, & brings advice of what the paragraph you'll see in your newspapers, taken from the Gazette, calls a skirmish, in which we have taken 2 French ships, on board of which were 400 soldiers & 7,000 l. in specie sent for their payment. Capt^o How has the honour of this action, for his was the only ship engaged, he had about 30 men killed & wounded. The Alcide had 57 killed & as many wounded. The remainder of the French fleet are, I doubt, got into Louisburgh. The Regency meet again to day, & war is now thought inevitable, which I believe we shall begin without a single ally."

1755. Aug. 26. The same to same. "Enclosed you will find General Braddock's defeat. I am most thoroughly shocked at it, & pity heartily the poor gent, he has left many of whom now lye wounded without common necessities."

J. A. BENNETT.

COLLEGE
OF PHY-SICIANS.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS, PALL MALL EAST, LONDON.

The Annals of the College occupy between 30 and 40 folio volumes. They record the elections of Presidents and Fellows and other officers of the College, and matters connected with the business of the College, from 1518 to the present time. The earlier volumes contain some information of historical interest.

The College was founded by Royal Charter dated 10 Henry VIII., and the celebrated Thomas Linacre was chosen first president. No record of the proceedings of the College seems to have been kept until the time of Dr. John Caius, who was chosen president in 1571. He compiled the first volume which contains such information as he could procure of the proceedings between 1518 and 1572. This was not much, as only about 30 leaves are filled. From the latter part of the 17th century the Annals, formerly written in Latin, are written in English; and the reason for the change is given in an entry for the year 1692. The College soon after their foundation began to take proceedings against empirics, and had disputes with the universities on the subject of degrees in medicine granted by the latter. There are notices of a Royal Command with regard to base money in 1531, of the plague in 1558 and 1563, the latter being preceded by swarms of wood-lice, and of the plague in 1569. The wood-lice again swarmed in 1572. The College took many proceedings against unlicensed practitioners. They were frequently applied to by great personages to allow people to practise, but they even refused to accede to Queen Elizabeth's request when the person for whom application was made was inefficient. The Earl of Essex was more than once an applicant for some of his protégés. In 1597 the Queen consulted the College about a doctor for the Earl of Essex. There are several notices of the notorious Simon Forman whom the College vigorously pressed. In 1602 and 1604 are notices of supposed cases of witchcraft. In September 1615 Sir Ralph Winwood directs the President of the College to go and see the corpse of Arabella Stuart; and on the following day the president and five other members of the College went to the Tower and made their report. In 1529 and 1630 the King consulted the College about means to prevent the spread of the plague. In 1637 is a notice of Star Chamber proceedings against a man who touched for the King's evil. In 1641 Dr Drake brings a treatise concerning the circulation of the blood. In 1660 Castell borrowed some Arabic books from the College library for the purpose of compiling his Lexicon. The plague of 1665 is noticed, and also the great fire of 1666, which destroyed the College and part of its library. In 1683 the College congratulate the King and the Duke of York on their escape from the plot. In 1685, hearing that a quo Warranto is about to issue, the College surrender their Charter to the King. The College were often consulted by the King and the Lords of the Admiralty with regard to medical officers for the navy. In 1786 Sir Joshua Reynolds was ordered to be consulted with regard to the cleaning of the pictures belonging to the College.

Several well known names occur in the Annals; among them are Casar Adelmarr (the father of Sir Julius Caesar, M.R.), Thomas Pepps, Theodore Mayerne, John Bastwick (one of Land's victims), Baldwin Hamey, (a great benefactor to the College), Martin Lister, Dr. Ratcliff, Samuel Garth, Hans Slouane, R. Mead, Edward Browne (son of Sir Thomas Browne, and President of the College), Arbuthnot, Ratcliffe, Mark Akenside, and Samuel Johnson. There is a notice in 1756 of Samuel Johnson having presented to the College his Life of Sir Thomas Browne. The Dukes of Montague and Richmond were admitted Fellows in 1717 and 1728.

From the Annals down to 1811 I have made extracts of such notices as appeared to be of general interest. The succeeding volumes do not seem to contain much of interest, and I did not think it worth while to go through them.

The Library contains more than 200 volumes of MSS. mostly of a professional nature. A few of a different kind, notably Higden's Policricon and Chaucer's Canterbury Tales are noticed below.

Below also are short notices of the Royal Charters possessed of the College and of a few early deeds.

I beg to acknowledge with thanks the kind attentions of Dr. Farre, the Treasurer of the College, Dr. Pitman, and Dr. Munnk, the Librarian.

ANNALS.

Vol. I., 1518-1572.

This volume was written by Dr. John Caius, who died in 1573; only 34 leaves, including a few blanks, are written upon. It begins with an account of the foundation of the College by King Henry VIII.; election of president, members and officers, and regulations. The death of Thomas Linacre, the first president, on 20 Oct. 1524 is mentioned; and that he gave a great part of his house, and his library to the college. Notices of legal proceedings against empirics. Linacre was president from 1518 to 1524, both years included. In 1526, Thomas Bentley was president, in 1527 and 1528 Richard Bartlot, in 1529 and 1530 Thomas Bentley, in 1531 Richard Bartlot; in the years following down to 1541 there are no entries, it being said that nothing was known; in 1541, and the following two years, Edward Wotton, was president; in 1544 John Clemens; in 1545 and 1546 William Freeman. In 1546 there is a notice of the grant of arms to the College. Under the year 1551 is a notice that by the King's command impure silver money was to be taken at half the nominal value. In 1552, certain persons were examined and rejected. In 1553, Casar Adelmarr, a Paduan doctor, was admitted a fellow. In 1555 John Caius was elected president. There is a notice of the punishment of quacks and the burning of their medicines. A complaint to the university of Oxford about their granting degrees in medicine to unqualified persons; and copies of letters between Oxford and the College about it, and between Cambridge and the College about one Simon Ludford, a London druggist.

1556. No one to be admitted to any degree in medicine unless he be master or doctor of arts and philosophy. Letter of thanks to the Lord Chancellor, Nicholas of York, for his protection. Oxford prays license of the cardinal for power to examine, and to punish those who are unskilled and unlicensed at Oxford and some miles round; the College procure a clause saving their privileges. No one is to reveal the secrets of the College. The silver Caduceus is made. The first feast was at Caius' house in St Bartholemew's-the-Less, the guardians of the Druggists and Surgeons were present, and restrictive rules for them were made.

1557. The book of statutes was ornamented with silver. Notice of the death of Dr. Richard Bartlot, 12 Cal. Feb. æt. 87,—4 and 5 May, 24 June. Order by the Queen that the College should put in force the Act of 32 Henry VIII. to search and examine potuary wares and drugs, and all found unwholesome to burn and destroy, danger having been like to happen to one of our nobility by ignorance of the buyer and negligence of the seller of certain wares.—17 July. Christopher Langton was expelled for levity and quarrelling with his colleagues, at visits to sick persons, &c.—Aug 5. Death of Thomas Huys, the King's physician; he was buried at St. Albans, London.

1558. Notice of the plague, of which Huys is said to have died.—Other deaths.—Entry of a lease, 3 Edw. VI. by Thomas Raynolds, D.D. Warden of Merton College, and the scholars to Edmund Crispine, of London, Gent, of a messuage called the Stone House in Knight-Rider Street, London, for 21 years, rent 4*l*.

1559. Deaths of members; and notice of William Butt, the King's physician, who died in 1545; certain persons were punished for selling pills without the consent of a doctor; one of them, in order to redeem himself from prison, asked pardon of the president.

1560. Submission of John Geynes, who had accused Galen of error.

1561. Richard Master was president. John Luke was permitted to treat eyes outwardly. The small pox raged, and in October of the following year the Queen and certain men and women of the court were attacked by it.

1562 (and 1563) John Caius was president. There was an epidemic called corysa or gravedo in the months of November and December throughout all England, with the addition of fever and pleurisy, so that many died. In the first twelve days of December the sun did not shine for an hour together. The summer was very wet. Every thing was full of wood-lice (omisci) by reason the winter's moisture and summer's heat. The omisci was a kind of worm which coiled itself into a ball at pleasure; and the plague followed, attacking sheep in the winter and men and women in the summer.

1563. The plague which followed the omisci began on the 1st of June in Shoe Lane, and did not cease until the following spring; always advancing, first in Long Lane and then in all parts of the City. After all of the family of a certain citizen had died, three dogs of the family died of the disease. So it was ordered that all dogs and cats were to be killed to prevent the spread of the contagion. It spread not only in England but in France, and carried off many English and French in the siege of Havre de Grace (Portus Gracie), and among others John Geynes, physician, 23 July. "Portam Gracia voco quem portum novum vocant."

1564. Robert Hays, President. He was a Queen's physician, so John Symynges was elected President.

1565-1567. Only electors are named.

1568. Dr. Thomas Francis was President.

1569. John Symynges, President.—The wife of Bomely by letters of the Lord Treasurer petitioned that her husband might be released from prison, having satisfied the Queen for, being unlicensed, having practised medicine, and having used magical arts. The College answered that he must first pay 20*l*. for the offence and 15*l*. for costs, and bind himself never to practise medicine. But it was not done, as well because of his poverty as that he was going with the Ambassador to Russia.

January 7. Decreed that the President should request Dr. Lewis, Judge of the Admiralty, not to suffer William Rich, an empiric, committed to the Marshalsea by the College, publicly to practise medicine.—Dr. Lopus was ordered to dissect a body at the College. He refused. Dr. Smythe of Oxford was ordered to do it if Lopus again refused.

March 15. Because of the plague the public dissection was put off.

June 2. Bonelius was released, giving a bond to pay 100*l*. if he again practised in England.

Notices of punishment of offenders:—

1570. R. Caldwell, President.—All persons practising medicine who were not admitted into the College, were to be examined and punished.—Examinations and rejections.—One was imprisoned for contempt and continuing to practise.—Another was fined 20*l*.

1571. John Caius, President.—The wife of Skeres was committed to prison for treating bad faces with a saline wash, on the complaint of the wife of Barker of Newgate Market, saying that she had spoiled her face. She confessed that she used only one medicine (the compound did not appear to the College harmful). She was dismissed, paying all expenses, and 10*l*. to Barker's wife.—On the complaint of William Monles, servant of Lord Burghley, Dr. Lopus, a spianard, was obliged to return the money which he had received on undertaking to cure a swelled shin bone (tibia).—Examinations.

—The monile which William Bulleyn gave to the College was sold, being of no use to the College. Erat autem monile lapis guidem niger et politus quem aliqui vocant, auro puro sic inclusus at ex una parte tantum pateret oculis, adversa parte ostentante horologium solare eodem auro artificiose fabricatum. Imprisonment of a married woman practising medicine; she was released on undertaking not again to do it, and on paying the fees.—Great abundance of "omisci" as in 1563 when the plague followed.—Agreed that surgeons are not to give inward potions in cases of Ischia, Morbus Gallicus, or any kind of ulcer or wound.

1572. A list of books commented on or composed by Caius.

Vol. II.

Forms of warrants to keepers of prisons, and letters authorising the practise of medicine.

1581. Dr. Giffard, President.—Roger Marbeck, Registrar of the College, and writer of the Annals, was appointed for life at 40*l*. per annum—his duties.

Dec. 8. Copy of Walsingham's letter to Dr. Giffard, the President, about Margaret Kennix a poor woman whom the Queen desired might be allowed to practise medicine by ministering of simples.—And the answer of the College stating the inefficiency of the woman.

1582. Copy of grant of a licence by the College to a man to practise medicine, he paying 40*l*. yearly to the College of Physicians.—Petition of William Laumaens, a French preacher and doctor, a refugee for religion, to practise medicine.—It was granted.

1583. The Mayor of London asked the College to say how many doctors are necessary in London for plague cases. They answer, Not less than four.—In Michaelmas 1583 the moneys in hand of the College were 32*l*. The arrears to them were 72*l*. 3*s*. 4*d*.—The office of the Treasurer (eleven rules).—Resolved to build a Theatre with a fit chair, for public dissection.

1584. Roger Giffard, President.—Statutes passed.—Copy of the Association for the defence of the Queen sent by H.M. Council.

1585. License to practice granted to William Laumaens.

March 24. Copy of the Queen's letter to Orina, Empress of Russia, sending a midwife and Dr. Jacob.—Walsingham urges Jacob's admission to the College, and on production of the Queen's letter he is admitted a Fellow.

Copy of another letter (written a few years previously) by Queen Elizabeth to John Basilins, Emperor of Russia, sending Robert Jacob, Doctor in Medicine.

1586. Copy of letter to Lord Hunsdon, in reply to his request for a licence to a woman recommended by him. The College remit all her past offences and allow her to practice in such parts of surgery as are of less danger to the party affected.—The Master and Wardens of the Grocer's Company ask the College for a recipe for the true and wholesome composition of the Triacle called Jeane Triacle. The College reply that they have sent a receipt by the bearer.—Imprisonment of one practising.—Walsingham writes the College to release one Not from prison, saying that he and other gentlemen had received good by him. The College reply that they will remit, on Not giving a bond not to practice in London.—Dr. Giffard gives to the College "Galen de sanitare tuenda, T. Linacro, Anglo interprete," dedicated to King Henry the 8th. Paris, Gal. Rubicum, typogr.

1587 Feb. Copy of letter by the High Commissioners Ecclesiastical to the College; they are informed that some of the College and others practising physic and chyrurgery in London refuse to frequent divine service and to conform to Her Majesty's godly laws for the religion established. They are to inform themselves of the names, surnames, qualities, and abodes of all such as pretend to be physicians or surgeons, and send them to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Signed, Jo. Cantuar, Bart. Clerke, W. Aubrey, W. Redman, Jo. Hammond, Richard Cosin, William Lewyn.

1588 March 27. The College send to the Archbishop a list of their College and of all licensed by them, having no further knowledge of their names and dispositions.—The Mayor and Aldermen wrote to College for them to provide military arms. The College thought it against their privileges, and sent to Walsingham, who wrote to the Mayor that such was his opinion, and that the Mayor was to trouble them no more until their privileges were examined by the Queen and Council.—Paul Farfax, of London, was fined for administering his "celestial water."—A recommendatory letter from Lord Hunsdon for Farfax.—Letters of the College to Lord Hunsdon justifying their treatment of Farfax.

1589 June 6. Examination and imprisonment of Paul Bush, found unlearned and incapable on examination.—June 25. One Hippocrates, a learned and good practitioner, applies to be admitted to practice.—July 2. Paul Bush being refractory is again remitted to the Counter.

1589 July 4. Hippocrates is admitted.—Last of Sept. Dr. Barnsdale is elected President.

Feb. 10. Copy of Walsingham's letter to the College asking for the release of Paul Buck: and of the reply by the College asserting Buck's ignorance and adacity.

159. May 20. R. Essex to the College: asking favour for Leonard Po one of his physicians. His physician Mr. D. Muffett, is acquainted with his sufficiency.—Reply by the College stating examination of Po and the finding him incompetent, Muffett being present.—Dec. 22. Letter in favour of Po brought from the Earl of Essex.—March 8. Examination of Po, and his answers about his patients. He is to pay 20*l*. or be proceeded against according to the statutes.

1591. Roger Powell who fixed bragging bills on the walls was cited and appeared.

1592. Last of Feb. Copy sent by Po of a letter by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Treasurer, the Lord Admiral, the Lord Chancellor, Lords Cobham and Buckhurst, and Mr. Wolley to the College, recommending Po and asking them to permit him to practice medicine.—Dec. 29. Letter from the Earl of Essex in favour of Po.

1593. May 29. C. Howard, Lord Admiral to Dr. Barronsdale (the President) in favour of his servant Paul Buck.—The College refuse, because Buck is ignorant, and only a goldsmith.—Feb. 15. John Banister, on a commendatory letter from the Queen, is permitted to practise, on condition that in serious cases he calls in aid of one of the College.—March 8. Simon Forman, of the county of Wilts, appears and confesses that he has practised medicine in England for 16 years and in London for two only. He states persons whom he has cured. He has read Cokes and Wainfleet. Boasts that he uses no other help to know diseases than the Ephemerides, and by celestial signs and aspects and constellations of the planets he can at once understand any disease. He showed himself laughably ignorant of astronomy. He was interdicted from practise; and was fined 5*l*., to be paid in 16 days; which he promised to do and gave his faith.

1594. March 25. Letters in favour of Paul Buck from the Earl of Essex and C. Howard. But the Society unanimously refused to allow him to practise.—Letter from Essex in favour of Leonard Po; and reply by the College.

1595. Names of the Doctors of the College, 31 in number, Barronsdale being President.—Bartholomew Chippit was, on examination, found ignorant: because of a letter by the Lord Treasurer the College winked at his practice, but when called to a patient he was to have one of the College to assist.—Nov. 7. Simon Forman examined in medicine and found quite ignorant. He admits he never read a book in medicine except Cokes, an obscure English writer: he says he practises by the science of astrology, but, on examination is found ignorant of it. He is sent to prison and fined 10*l*.—B. Chippit is examined and found so ignorant that his practise is forbidden.—Dec. 22. Since Simon Forman has by the authority of the keeper of the Great Seal been taken out of prison and set at liberty, therefore 4 censors, with Smith of Oxford, are to be sent to the Lord Keeper to say why they put the impostor Forman in prison, and to ask that he may be sent back to prison.

1596. July 13. Leonard Po is admitted to practise at the instance of the Earl of Essex.—Sept. 30. Simon Forman appeared and confessed administering a water composed by himself to Mr Sootherton in a burning fever, and he immediately died. He said he knew diseases and prescribed medicine only by astrology. Examined by Smith, the Queen's doctor, in the rudiments of astrology, he was found ignorant and an impostor, and was imprisoned.—March 21. All members to wear of wool or silk or other fit material at meetings, funerals, feasts, anatomical demonstrations, and when they meet in consultation.

1597. June 25. Nowell elected censor in the absence of Atkins, who had gone as doctor to the Earl of Essex in the expedition to Spain.—July 26. On an order from the Queen they consult about a doctor for the Earl of Essex in the room of Atkins who had returned to Plymouth because of tempest and being very sick. They appoint Moundeford.—Michaelmas. List of members, 44 in number.

1598. Last of June.—Po to be imprisoned and deprived of his license. If he give up his license to be kept by the President until the College restore it or grant a new one, the imprisonment is to be remitted.—Aug. 4. Po does not give up the license, therefore he is to be imprisoned.—Nov. 24. It seems that Po got a letter of protection from the Queen's Council. The College wrote a letter to the Council, who appointed seven persons to look into the matter between the College and Po.—

January 16. In pursuance of the arbitrators decision Po acknowledged the censure of the College to be just, pays the five marks, and deposits 100*l*. for good behaviour, and delivers his license, which is promised to be redelivered to him at the next meeting.

1601. June 25. There are many illicit practitioners, of whom Simon Forman, an egregious impostor, is one, who is now safe and jolly in Lambeth as in a port, so that by our officers he cannot be taken. It was decided to write to the Archbishop of Canterbury so that his favour might be obtained to rout them out.—Letter to the Archbishop about Forman.—July 4. Answer by the Archbishop saying that his officers shall give their assistance.

1602. April. Account of an actor by Jenkins and Reade against the College, before Popham, C. J.; and notes of the Judge's decisions on the authority of the College.—Nov 13. Case of Elizabeth Jackson who was imprisoned for suspicion of witchcraft and enchanting a girl. Two witnesses think the Elizabeth Jackson is a witch and that the girl is enchanted. Many neighbours testify to the good character of Elizabeth Jackson. Some of the College are to go and see the girl.

1603. April 21. It was debated whether the whole College in some public place should welcome the King when he arrived. Not without the order of the Council.

1604. March 4. The College certify to the Bishop of London, who had requested them to examine a girl supposed to be a demoniac, that they had seen her and had found nothing but fictions and simulations, every thing fraudulent and feigned.

1605. July. They enlarge a surgeon (imprisoned) at the request of the Earl of Northumberland.—November. Flud, of Oxford, not admitted to practise, because on examination in medicine, Galenic et Spagyric, he did not satisfy them.—January 3. A doubt whether a Scotchman was eligible by the Society. The King writes a letter insisting that he was; and they elect a Scotchman (Crag).

1606. Dec 4. Moundeford and Pope complain of Forman the impostor.—June 9. Forman is cited; he refused to come unless assured of safe return.

1607. March 30. Mr. Pelham complained of Forman: 1st. He (Forman) asks the name and address of the consultant. 2. He erects a figure. 3. Like a prophet he judges of the disease and the event. Lastly he prescribes medicine. Of those whom Pelham knows to have come to Forman is one Humphry Weld, gent, but who Forman said was dropsical.—James Sabberthwayte, of Littlewood Street, makes the like accusation against Forman.—For one medicine he asked ten drachmas, for another 5*l*., for two purges 4*l*.—Forman was cited, but would not come.—January 8. Mr. Seger, alias Garter King-of-Arms, and his wife complain of Tenant, a great impostor who undertook to cure Mrs Browne, of St. Paul's Churchyard, of dropsy, and after taking 32*l*., part for labour and part for medicine, he left her uncured. For one pill he asked 6*l*.

Folio. 1608-1647.

On the flyleaves are copy of the Council's warrant for the attachment of empirics, and of the King's letters to the College and to the Lord Mayor and Justices of London.

1609. June 26. Lords Northampton, Worcester, Salisbury, and Suffolk ask that Poe, one of H.M. physicians, may be chosen a fellow of the College.—But the College decline on account of Poe's insufficient education.—July 7. Poe was chosen a fellow.—Forman the impostor was cited.

1614. Last of September. A proceeding before the Lord Mayor for certifying the immunity of the College in the charge of service for men and armour. On the 4th of October the Lord Mayor and Aldermen decided that the College was exempt.

1615. Sept 27. Whitehall. Raphe Winwood to the President of the College of Physicians. Whereas the Lady Arbella is lately deceased in the Tower, and it is his Majesty's pleasure, according to former custom upon like occasions when prisoners of great quality die in that place, her body should be viewed by persons of skill and trust, and thereupon certificate to be made of what disease she dyed as to their judgment shall appear. These are therefore to will and require you to appoint some three physicians of your Societe, of good reputation as well as for their learning as otherwise, who together with the physicians of the said Lady Arbella shall presently repaire unto the Tower, and there view and search the corps of the said Ladie, and to return joyntly there opinion unto me of the nature of the disease whereof she dyed, that we may acquaint his Majesty therewithall.

Sept. 28. The physicians report that they went at eight in the morning. The cause of her death was a chronic and long sickness; the species of disease was "illam jandiu producem in cachexiam," which, increasing as well by her negligence as by refusal of remedies (for a year she would not allow doctors to feel her pulse or inspect her urine). By long lying in bed she got bed-sores, and a confirmed unhealthiness of liver, and extreme leanness, and so died. The report was signed by Tho. Moundeford (President of the College), Guil. Paddy, Ed. Lister, Ric. Palmer, Jo. Argent, Matt. Gwynn.

1616, June 20. Theodore Mayerne, a Frenchman of Geneva, was elected a fellow.—The Midwives of London petition the King to be incorporated.—The King refers the petition to the College of Physicians.—The College report against the incorporation, but recommend an examination and supervision of midwives.

1619, May 7. Lambe is accused and cited; sixteen of his offences are mentioned.

1621. The King recommends Ridgely as a fellow. The College say they cannot elect when there is not a vacancy. (No more is heard of it).

Petition to the House of Commons by the Masters or Governors of the Mystery and Commonalty of the Barbers and Surgeons of London, complaining of the charter granted by the King to the College of Physicians, under colour of which they prevented the petitioners from administering potions to their patients, and complaining of the powers of fining and imprisonment.

1624, John Bastwick, son-in-law of Dr. Poe, an Essex man, is mentioned to have appeared on 13th January, 1622, and shown his testimonials.

1624, Feb. 15. Licence for John Bastwick to practise, except in London and seven miles from it.

1627, April 6. Dr. Bastwick was examined by the Censors, and approved for the second time.—July 20. Council letter to the College, directing them to examine the Almon works (at St. Katherine's) in the parish of St. Botolph, Aldgate, and report on them.—The College report them to be a nuisance.—Letter about John Lambe from the Bishop of Durham, recommending Lambe at the King's request. The College answer that he is ignorant, and his examination showed it.

1628, Sept. 28. Order in Council that the College of Physicians shall assemble and report whether English tobacco, as usually taken, is hurtful to men's bodies. The College say that it is hurtful, falling short of other tobacco brought from more southern parts.

1629, Feb. 5. Baldwin Hamey, son of Dr. Hamey, was examined (and passed) for license to practise (on the 28th of June, 1630, he was admitted a candidate).—March 15. Dr. Atkins reports that there is at Court a great complaint of the increase of the plague, and that the King ordered the College to present a regimen as a precaution against it.—March 19. Council letter to the College to set down orders for preventing the spread of the plague.

1630, April 20. The President reports that the King had sent for a doctor, who had lived in London during the plague, to go to Greenwich and examine the bodies of two dead persons.—The President proposed that members who would attend to pest cases should have 400*l.* a year each, and, after the expiration of the pest, 200*l.* a year for life, and, in case of death during the pest, 100*l.* a year to his widow. Dr. Clement and Dr. Crooke accepted these terms.—Petition by the College to Philip, Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Chamberlain. They say that seven persons (among whom are named Briggs, one of the Queen of Bohemia's players, and Sir Samdus Duncombe, a pensioner to his Majesty), and others, unlawfully practise, and they cannot prosecute because the offenders pretend they are his Majesty's servants.—The Earl of Pembroke answers that they are not his Majesty's servants to entitle them to practise physic, so the College may take the benefit of the laws for their relief.—Copy of "Annoyances" presented by the College to the Lords of the Council, by way of preservation from the plague. These are, increase of the buildings in and about the City; inmates by whom the houses are so pestered that they become unwholesome; neglect of cleansing of common sewers and town ditches, and permitting standing ponds in divers Inns; uncleanness of streets; the Leastalls so near the city, especially on the north side; the slaughter-houses in the City; burying of infected people in the churches and churchyards of the City; that churches are overlaid with burials; the carrying up of funnels to the tops of houses from privies, and from vaults of the dead; the selling of musty corn in the public markets, or bakers baking unwholesome corn; butchers killing unsound cattle; tainted fish.

1631, June 16. The Purging Ale sellers to be convicted. One died by taking of such ale bought at the Swan with two Necks, which Dr. Wright will witness.—March 22. Dr. John Bastwick obtains a certificate of being a Licentiate on 4th of May 1627.

1632, May 27. Letter of Lord Holland to the College. Cromwell is condemned to death for the murder of his master, Mr. Lane. Doubts are expressed of poisoning. They are to examine persons who were present about the sickness of Lane, the manner of his death, what has been observed on the opening of his body, or may be collected from sight and trial of the medicine, if any be left, and present their report to the King before Wednesday next.—Evidence of Masters, an apothecary, Dr. Gifford, Dr. Andrews, Dr. Meverell, and Fr. White, a servant.—May 29. Secretary John Cooke to the College: asking their opinion if Lane died of poison, and if the medicine sent by the apothecary had any poisonous ingredient.—After taking some further evidence the College reply that Lane died a violent death by poison.

1633, Nov. 11. The College in Paternoster Row. The College to the Earl of Dorset, Lord Chamberlain to the Queen. They petition him for leave to use the strength of the law against unlicensed persons who pretend to be in the Queen's service.

1634, July 4. Dr. Harvey gave the skin of the man tanned, for a monument to be preserved in the College, —Sept. 8. The Midwives petition to the College. Answer of the College to the Lords of the Council. The Midwives Petition to the King. July 27. The King refers the Petition to the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop of London.—Objection against the project of Dr. Chamberlain, who, the College conceive, would have the sole power of licensing Midwives.

1635, June 25. Dr. Fludd gave his works to the College.

1637, Oct. 20. Star Chamber. On the complaint of Mr. Serjeant Clowes against one Leverett, for taking on himself to cure the King's evil and all other diseases. It was ordered that the President, and some of the College of Physicians, be required to call Leverett before them, and examine his pretended cures, and cause him to make experiment of his cures in their presence, and to make their certificate to the Board.—Nov. 3. Leverett appears, and says that he is the seventh of eight sons, but doth not challenge any virtue by being the seventh son. He instances three of his cures. Since he cured a dozen he used the words, "God give a blessing, I touch, God heales." He says that upon touching some 30 or 40 in a day he finds himself weakened by the virtue which goes out of him more than when he was a gardener by digging up eight roods of ground. He says he is not always disposed to touch, especially if his hands be cold. Says he has cured 300 at least.—Nov. 8. He retracts that any virtue goes out of him, but says he has grown weak by touching, which is as much in effect. Says he must touch four or five times before they be cured. Account of his operations on two patients, Richard George, and Elizabeth Appleton.

Nov. 10. R. George and Elizabeth Appleton were touched a second time.—Other patients touched.—Amount of Leverett's process.—Nov. 14, 21, 25. Leverett again appears.—Nov. 28. Certificate signed by W. Clowes, Serjeant Surgeon to his Majesty, and others, accusing Leverett of quackery and imposture.—Several certificates by persons whom James Leverett had undertaken to cure and failed.—Copies of notes from the register of St. Clements, Eastcheap, of the marriage of the father and mother of J. Leverett, and the baptisms of their children. (J. Leverett is the fourth son).—Answer of the President and College to the Lords of the Council. They state who Leverett is, his experiments and failures before them, and give an account of his manner of touching. He says that virtue goes out of him. He speaks scornfully of those whom the King has touched. They think Leverett to be an impostor, and that his pretended cures and the manner of them be full of superstition and sorcery.

1638, January 11. The Great White Book of the College is mentioned.

1639, April 8. John Mariot, the printer of the Pharmacopœia Londinensis, in answer to the charge of abusing the College, by stating that they were the authors of the last edition, wherein he says they had enlarged and corrected the same, there being neither amendment nor any word added, says he printed according to the third edition, wherein he had the help of physicians, and added the same words in the end which were in that.

1640, May 1. The President required that if any of the College was willing to serve his Majesty in the war intended, he should presently on the day following signify his name to the President.—June 22. In reply to the Earl of Northumberland's letter, they tell him that they have chosen from among them a second physician to the army, John Cadman, Doctor of physick.

1641, April 19. Dr. Drake brought a treatise concerning the circulation of the blood, against Dr. Primrose, which he wished to be printed with the approbation of the College. The President neither praised nor dispraised it, and that by the wish of the College, but adjudged it to be left to the author.

1643, Sep. 6. Answer given to the Collector of Rents for the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who came to demand the College rent (then sequestered to the use of the Republic), from them, that they durst not deny the ordinance of Parliament.—June 23. Lenthall (the Speaker) writes to the College that the Lord General, the Earl of Essex, has written for three able physicians to be forthwith sent to him for the service of the army under his command; and that it was the pleasure of the House that the College should provide them accordingly.—June 27. Othwell Meverell (President) to the Speaker. Two physicians, Delanne and Sheafe, have offered themselves.

Folio. 1647-1682.

1648, Last of September. Letters read from the Committee for Baths to the President and College, desiring their judgment concerning Dr. Chamberlain's baths, and asking them to deliver their answer, objections, or approbation.—Copy of the Ordinance by the Lords and Commons giving the extensive right to Chamberlain for 14 years to make artificial baths and bath stoves, with their appurtenances of cisterns, water-works, engines, Hamacco beds, Hamacco sleds, Hamacco chaires, Hamacco couches, (for the safe and easy sitting, lying, or conveying of weak and sickly persons) within any cities and towns of England, Wales, and Ireland.—Oct. 16. The College answer that public baths were abused in the Greek and Roman states, and when Christianity came in were destroyed. They believe, if the Committee empower Dr. Chamberlain, by ordinance, for the erection of public baths, they will so regulate his design that none of the before-mentioned inconveniences follow.

1656, June 19. Statutes proper for the Harveian Museum.

1657, May. Letter from the College of Physicians of Edinburgh to the College of Physicians of London.—May 7. Reply to the above. They have shewn to Dr. Purves their statutes and forms of governance.

1660, June 25. Castoll borrows six or more Arabic books from Harvey's Museum for the purpose of compiling a Lexicon.—Sept. 3. Notice of an address to the King, and his promise to take the College into his favour. They presented him with a Unicorn's horn, given to them by B. Hamey, who was then made a knight.—March 8. Thomas Pepys was first examined.

1661, June 21. Thomas Pepys was admitted a candidate.—Statutes about honorary members.—List of honorary members; among whom are Dr. Thomas Browne and Dr. William. Denton.

1665, May 17. The plague increasing everywhere, the Lords of the Privy Council sent to the College to prepare remedies against it. The College made up prescriptions, and put together a book, and sent a copy of it to the Lords of the Privy Council, and another copy to the Lord Mayor.—June 12. The plague increasing, the Lord Mayor sends to ask for six or more doctors. Eight were named.—June 28. Letter by the King to the Lord Mayor and the Deputy Lieutenants, &c. of London and Westminster, stating the exemption of physicians, members of the College, from watch and ward, and bearing and providing arms within London and Westminster, or their suburbs.

1666, Sept. 2. A terrible fire broke out, destroying almost the whole city, and the College and a great part of the library.

1674, May 13. Sir John Cutler, Bart. intending to build the Anatomical Theatre, some members are to get Christopher Wren and Mr. Hooke to select the fittest site for the Theatre. They thought the Garden to be fit, but as Sir J. Cutler thought the extreme of the square next the street better, they gave way.

1675, Feb. 12. The King to the College, telling them not to admit any person as a fellow of the Society, and to enjoy the privileges of the College that has not had his education in either of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, kept his art for his degree of Doctor of Physic, and done his exercises accordingly, or that is not incorporated and licensed there, having first taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy, and been by the College afterwards examined and approved according to their Statutes.

1676, June 13. A laudatory notice of Baldwin Hamey, deceased.

1678, Dec. 23. Letter to the King about Adrian Habat practising unlawfully, and who had printed a scandalous pamphlet about the College.

1679, March 29. Order by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled. The Governors or principal members in turn of Doctors Commons, the College of Physicians, and the Heralds Office, are to bring to the House the names of such members as are papists or reputed papists, and as soon as they regularly can, expel all such as are not protestants.

The following are not entered in the original Annals: Litteræ patentes concessæ communitati sive Collegio Medicorum, London. ab Henrico 8^o rege Angliæ, extractæ a Statuto anno regni sui 14. c. 5. edito, (3½ pp.). Statuta Collegii Medicorum, London, (32 pp.).

Capita legum quibus districti esse debent Pharmacopœi Londinenses quæ inseruntur Diplomate regio conformando a supremo parlamento, (4 pp.).

Letters patent to the College of Physicians in Edinburgh, dated 29th Nov. 1681. (Latin, 6½ pp.)

Letters patent of the College of Physicians in Dublin, dated Dublin, 15 Dec., 4 William and Mary. (English, 31 pp.).

Folio. 1682-1690.

1682, June 16. The King writes to the College that he had directed a Nolle Prosequi to be entered as to his moiety of the 100l. sued for by the College against Gerard van Mulen, an empiric, and asks them to desist from the prosecution.—The College petition the King to leave the matter to them, they being bound by oath to prosecute empirics, and Van Mulen having been complained against by many persons of quality and credit.

1683, July 21. An address to the King is ordered, congratulating him and the Duke of York on their escape from the plot.

1684, March 7. Martin Lister, A.M., is admitted to practise in London and seven miles round.

1684, June 26. Agreed that Sir John Cutler be treated with to lend money to pay all the College debts, and to purchase Sir George Ent's house; the interest to be 5l. per cent.—Nov. 7. Dr. Charles Goodall presents to the College fair copies of the Annals, 1555-1647.—Feb. 25. Address of congratulation to King James II.

1685, Oct. 19. Hearing that a Quo Warranto was to come against their charter the College surrendered it.—Copy surrendering all rights given by King Charles II.

1687, April 12. The King's royal diploma is brought to the College.—June 25. Notice that the Archbishop of Canterbury had transferred to the College the authority of licensing books on physic; so they appoint licensers.

—July 3. The King to the College; noticing his confirmation of their charter, he urges them to prosecute empirics.—July 3. The King to the Lord Mayor, directing him to assist the College.—July 16. The King to all Justices, &c., a similar direction.—Sep. 3. Letter of the College to the Lord Chancellor, about their dispute with the City of London regarding part of their estate in Warwick Lane.—Nov. 29. Letter by the College to the Bishops, praying that they would license no one to practise before he was examined and approved by the College.

1685, Feb. 4. Circular letter sent to the Bishops. By the Act of 14 and 15 Hen. VIII. cap. 5. the power of examining such persons as take upon themselves to practise physick which was given by 3 Hen. VIII. cap. 11 to the Bishops in their dioceses or in their absence to their Vicars General is transferred to the President and three of the Electors of the College of Physicians.

Lady Grace Pierrepont is to be invited to see the Library, where the books given by the Marquis of Dorchester are to be placed.

Petition to the King by the College, asking that their power to license books on physic and surgery may be confirmed in the proposed regulations for the press, and for leave to print the above letter.

1687, January 24. The King allows the printing of the letter.

1688, March, 28. Visit of the Lord Chancellor to the College by reason of the outcry in the town of the physicians injuring the chirurgeons and apothecaries.

Petition of the Company of Barbers and Surgeons complaining of the College of Physicians, and arguing on the effect of some of the Statutes of the College. But the surgeons were dismissed as persons more afraid than hurt.

Petition of the apothecaries: mentions the Bye-laws of the College and comments on them.—The Chancellor finds fault with the College; and they promise to wait on him and declare the reasons of the Statutes; and the Chancellor promised the apothecaries that he would consider seriously of them and, as was fit, do them right.

1688, April 9. Letter to the Chancellor by the College on the subject of the surgeons and apothecaries.

1688, January 14. Dr. Ratcliff is told by the censors that they found him guilty of writing Latin directions, which he frankly owned. He promised to keep the Statutes. He was fined 40s. for breaking the Statutes.

1689, May 3. Ordered that the printers of Mr. Shipton's book be summoned to appear next censors, day for printing the book with additions without license.—Ordered that the beadle go and suppress, when he has notice given him thereof, the printing any book relating to physick.—July 30 and 31. A number of members take the oath provided by 1 William and Mary "An Act" for the abrogating of the oaths of Supremacy and "Allegiance and appointing other oaths." William Denton is the first named.—Copies of the Charter to the Physicians of Edinburgh 29 Nov. 1681 (Latin), and of the Charter to the Surgeons of Glasgow 30 Nov. 1599 (English).

Folio. 1691–1695.

1691, March 18. An enquiry why the register is now kept in English. The answer was, It is done by advice of our Council, who told up that by reason of the variety of styles in Latin, and the uncertain acceptation of many Latin phrases, the register would not be of that use to the College as a record upon many occasions as if it were kept in English, and that in the plainest words that could be.

1692, Aug. 16. Lord Nottingham writes to the College that the Queen intends speedily to send some soldiers to the West Indies, and thinking it necessary to appoint some able physician, would have them recommend some person.—Aug. 29. Lord Nottingham writes that the Queen would have them consider of a person proper to be apothecary of the stores she is sending to the West Indies; also consider the kind and quantity of medicines to be sent. She has appointed Dr. William Grimbaldstone to be physician to the forces.—Catalogue of medicines provided for 4,000 or 5,000 men designed for the West Indies. The total cost 576l. 5s. 11d. (5 pp).—Dec. 28. Letter read from the Lords of the Admiralty requesting the College to name three or four physicians that they may choose one to take care of the sick and hurt men at Portsmouth. The College decide to recommend only one. After a ballot, Dr. Samuel Garth is chosen and recommended.—Dec. 30. The College wrote to the Lords of the Admiralty recommending Dr. Garth he being a Doctor of Physick of Cambridge, and candidate of the College of good learning, having spent some years in foreign hospitals.—The Lords of the Admiralty were not satisfied, but asked that three persons might be nominated.

1693, April 25. The Lords of the Admiralty ask the College to recommend some person as physician to the Red Squadron in the room of Dr. Browne, who had gone with the squadron under the command of Sir Francis Wheeler to the West Indies.—May 27. The occasion of the meeting was the complaint of the Right Honourable Lady Honoria Willoughby against James Newton. She was carried from her house in Hemsted, in Herts, to the house of Newton on Clerkenwell Green on the 1st of August 1691, and there kept as a lunatic; physic was administered to her which made her ill. She complains also of William Elder and Henry Hunt.—June 26. Dr. Samuel Garth was proposed, balloted, and admitted a Fellow.

1694, April 2. The Lords of the Admiralty ask the College for the names of four or five physicians in order to choose two to serve in the summer expedition.—June 25. Fifteen Statutes of Henry VIII., seven having been mislaid, were read and sealed.—Sept. 7. Approval of books to be printed.—March 1. Dr. Garth makes a lecture De Respiratione; it lasted three days. He concluded with a Latin speech.—March 8. The President and Censors desired Dr. Garth to print his lectures, which he promised to do in Latin.

Copy of the grant (Sept. 20, 1546) by Christopher Barber, Garter, of Arms to the College.

1695, Aug. 2. Praxeos Mayerianæ Syntagma alterum if declared worthy to be printed.

Many cases of Mala praxis are in this volume.

Folio. 1695–1710.

1695, Nov. 7. The Lords of the Admiralty ask the College for a scheme of several species of medicine which they think most proper for the cure of sick and wounded men in the fleet and what proportion of each species is sufficient for 200 men on board one of his Majesty's ships for six months.—The President and four Censors had an interview with the Lords of the Admiralty.

1696, April 20. Address by the College to the King on his escape from the conspiracy to assassinate him.

1697, January 26. Dr. Garth is appointed orator.

1696, January 18. The Lords of the Admiralty ask the College to send the names of four or five skillful physicians for them to choose one to go with the fleet to the West Indies. Some of the Fellows present a petition to the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, and the Chief Baron of the Exchequer, to visit the College pursuant to the Charter of King Charles II. They complain of illegal Statutes or bye-laws.

1679, Dec. 8. The College congratulate the King on his safe return.

1698, April 1. Dr. Hans Sloane and Mr. Richard Boulton present books for the Library.

1700, May 8. At the request of several persons of quality that Mr. Dryden might be carried from the College of Physicians, to be interred at Westminster, it was unanimously granted by the President and Censors.

1701, Dec. 22. The College being indebted to the executors of Sir J. Cutler (Lord Radnor and Mr. Bolter) in about 7,000l., Sir Thomas Millington, their President, got the executors to take 2,000l., in satisfaction.

1702, April 8. Address to the Queen on her accession.—Oct. 3. Dr. Charleton, Dr. Pitt, Dr. Garth and Dr. Brook chosen and sworn Censors.—Feb. 3. Address to the Prince of Denmark, Lord High Admiral, on his having recalled an order to the Master and Wardens of the Apothecaries Company to examine the chests and medicines provided for the land and sea service, that power being by Act of Parliament vested in the Censors of the College of Physicians.

1703, January 5. Character of the late President, Sir Thomas Millington, who died that day in the 75th year of his age, and the 7th of his continued presidency; he was bred at Westminster, a Fellow of All Souls, Oxford, Sileidan professor of Natural Philosophy in that University, one of the founders of the Royal Society, and first physician to King William and Queen Mary, and afterwards to Queen Anne.

1703, Feb. 2. "Medicina Gymnastica, or a Treatise concerning the effect of the use of exercise in some diseases," was licensed by the President and Censors.

1706, July 20. Dr. Goodall presents two ancient pictures of Henry VIII and Cardinal Wolsey.—March 7. On the 2nd of March Dr. James Drake, a Fellow, died; a gentleman of very pregnant parts and good learning, as appears by the writings he has left behind him, and deserved much better treatment from the Great World than he met with in it.

1707, April 4. "Anthropologia Nova," by Dr. James Drake, is licensed.—April 24. Dr. Walter Charleton died in the 87th year of his age.—January 23. The College was insured for 3,000l. in the Amicable Insurance Office for 7 years, at 12s. per cent.

1708, April 30. Dr. Richard Mead, of the University of Oxford, was examined the first time for candidate.—June 25. Among the rules for the Library is "No candle to be brought into the Library or any to have liberty of smoking tobacco there."—Aug. 28. Death of Dr. Edward Browne, for four and a half years President of the College, son of Sir Thomas Browne, author of Religio Medici; he died at Northfleet, an estate of his in Kent, which he has bequeathed between the College and St. Bartholomew's Hospital in case of the failure of issue of his son Dr. Thomas Browne and his daughter Brigstock.—Feb. Letter by J. Burchett for the Earl of Pembroke, Lord High Admiral asking the College to examine Dr. Abraham Corslack, who had applied to be one of the physicians of Her Majesty's fleet.—March 7. The College approved Corslack.

1709, July 1. Mr. Micklethwait presented to the College the picture of his grandfather Dr. John Clark, President. 1710, April 27. Dr. John Arbuthnot, the Queen's physician was admitted.—Nov. 6. The College archives were inspected. A catalogue of the College writings in the archives. In the upper cupboard, Henry 8th original charter, Charter of Queen Elizabeth of mortmain for Lumley and Caldwell's lands, Queen Elizabeth's charter for human bodies, Exemplification of Statute of Queen Mary, Exemplification of the Act of 15 Henry VIII., Charter of King Charles II., Charter of King James II., four volumes of College Annals. 1555 to 1682, the engrossment of the English Statutes, the 15 new Statutes under Seal.—Contents of four drawers, Leases, Exemplifications, &c.

Folio. 1711-1722.

1711, Dec. 7. Sir Edward Northey, Attorney-General, had given an opinion that neither the College nor the members thereof were obliged to find arms. (The College had been asked by the office of the Lientenancy to send two men for the Militia).—January 11. The College refuse to find arms.—1711, Oct. 30. Sir Edward Northey's opinion.—Opinions of Sir Edmund Samdars, late Lord Chief Justice, and Lord Chief Justice Holt in 1682 to the same effect.—Opinions of Sir Robert Sawyer, Attorney-General. Sir Thomas Turner, Recorder of London, and Mr Brown, counsellor-at-law, in 1683, to the same effect.

1714, Oct. 7. Address by the College to the King on his accession.

1716, June 1. Sir Hans Sloane chosen an elector vice Davies resigned.

1715, Dec. 17. Thomas Pengelly's opinion as to the liabilities of the College to find arms, and the remedies of one who was distrained.

1716, July 16. Sir Hans Sloane acquaints the Board that he has had a notice that a warrant was signed by the Lientenancy to distrain on his goods for not appearing in the county court.

1717, Oct. 23. The Duke of Montague having been admitted Doctor of Physick at Cambridge when King George was there, the President proposed him to be chosen a fellow of the College. His Grace was ballotted and elected, nem. con.

1719, Aug. 7. The Censors present a silver "Monteth" to the College weighing ounces*.—Sept. 28. Sir Hans Sloane was chosen President.

1720, June 25. Petition to the King. After stating that King Henry VIII. by charter allowed them to purchase lands of the value of 12l. per annum, the College now ask it to be extended to 1,000l. per annum.—Sept. 2. The Censors and Dr. Levett present to the College five pair of silver candlesticks and snuffers, weighing 154 oz.

1721, June 21. Mr. Mead (the College's solicitor) brought the King's license of Mortmain for holding lands of 1,000l. per annum in the name of the College.—Nov. 21. The President states that Mr. Palmer had given to the College some papers of Dr. Hamley, his relation, and amongst the rest an exact list of benefactors, to his decease.

Folio. 1722-1732.

1723, April 5. Dr. John Ratcliffe of St. John's College, Oxford, was first examined.

1724, June 25. Dr. John Ratcliffe was elected a fellow of the College.—Oct. 5. The Treasurer presents the President with a piece of plate of above 60 oz. being the annual donation of Dr. Hamley to the President.

1725, January 19. Petition by the College to the House of Commons against the frequent use of spirituous liquors.

1727, July 3. Address by the College to King George the 2nd on his accession. They went in a body to St. James's and were received and introduced by Lord Herbert, Lord of the Bedchamber in waiting. They afterwards waited on her Majesty, being introduced by the Earl of Grantham.

1728, June 25. The Duke of Richmond was elected a fellow.

1729, Sept. 30. Dr. Wharton has thanks for the gift of a picture by Vandyke of his grandfather Dr. Thomas Wharton.

Folio. 1732-1744.

1735, Sept. 30. Sir Hans Sloane resigned, and Dr. Pollet was elected President.

1736, Dec. 29. Dr. Benjamin Hoadly was admitted a fellow.

1737, Sept. 23, 24, 26. Hoadly read the Gulstonian lectures.

1738, Oct. 25. Mr. Samuel Johnson, of Canterbury, and of St. John's College, Cambridge, M.A., was examined in Latin as an Extra Licentiate, and approved.

1739, January 26. Jos. Burchett to Dr. Pollet, President. The Lords of the Admiralty ask if the best English spirits distilled from malt are equally wholesome with the brandy of France, and may be safely used as part of the victualling of ships.—The College answer in the affirmative.

1740, July 2. The College, in answer to the Admiralty, agree that the internal use of vinegar with food might be greatly conducive to the health of seamen serving in the Navy, particularly in preventing the scurvy.—Aug. 19. In answer to the Lords of the Admiralty, the College approve of cllixir of vitriol as useful in scorbutic affections; the best way of administering it is in water. The quantity at a dose, and the particular cases it is proper to be used in, must be left to the discretion of those who are to administer it.—Sept. 30. In answer to the Admiralty the College say, that they can say nothing of the use of spiritus salis dulcis in preserving meat from experience, by which alone it can be determined.

Folio. 1735-1753.

1745, Aug. 27. The College think Mr. Lowndes's salt seems very likely to answer in curing flesh for the navy in long voyages, and ought to be recommended to their Lordships for trial.

1747, Nov. 6. Dr. Thomas Sydenham's picture by Mrs. Mary Beale, was presented by his grandson, Theophilus Sydenham.

1751, June 6. Dr. Akenside attended and was examined in Physiology, and was desired to come on the 20th for a second examination.—June 20. Dr. Mark Akenside produced a diploma under the seal of the University of Leyden, dated 16 May 1744, and was desired to come for a third examination on Tuesday next.—Dec. 23. The Treasurer was authorized to open an account with Mr. Hoar, in the name and for the use of the College.

1752, January 16. A notice of Joshua Appleby's scheme for getting fresh water from salt water.—Feb. 21. The College approve the water produced.—April 3. Dr. Anthony Askew was examined in Physiology for the first time.—April 13. In answer to the Admiralty the College say that sea water distilled without any ingredient is not so pure as sea water distilled by Mr. Appleby's method.—May 1. Dr. Thomas Wharton, of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, was examined in Physiology and Pathology.—Sept. 30. The College have no objection to Dr. Mark Akenside applying to the University of Cambridge for the degree of Doctor of Physic by Mandamus. (He obtained it 4 January 1753.)

Folio. 1753-1765.

1753, April 16. Mark Akenside was elected a Candidate.

1755, Sept. 30. Mark Akenside was elected a Censor.

1756, May 7. Mr. Samuel Johnson, having presented his life of Sir Thomas Browne, with a new edition of his Christian Morals, to the College, the registrar was ordered to return him the thanks of the Board.

1760, Nov. 4. An address to the King on his accession was resolved and approved.

1761, Oct. 5. The Victualling Office ask the opinion of the College on specimens of water, which is the fittest of them to brew beer.

1764, Nov. 12. The Honourable Mr. Yorke is retained as standing counsel to the College.—Dec. 21. The President reports that he and others had waited on Mr. Yorke, with a fee of 10 guineas.

1765, March 16. Long opinion by C. Yorke, on questions submitted by the College.

Folio. 1765-1771.

1766, March 3. Vote of 100l. for plate to Dr. Lawrence, for his writing the life of Dr. Harvey; and thanks to Dr. Akenside for his trouble in preparing Harvey's works for the press.

1767, May 13. It was resolved to retain Mr. Dunning in any suit which the College might have.—Sept. 24. Twenty licentiates broke open the College gates and forced themselves into the room where the President and fellows were holding their Comitia. Their names were taken down and the Comitia dissolved.—Sept. 30. The licentiates wrote a letter claiming admission to the election of officers of the College.—The President and College deny their right.

1768, Nov. 21. Newgate being to be rebuilt, the College propose to represent to the City the danger of Newgate being brought so near the College. (The City wanted part of the College Garden.)

* The College still possess this bowl.

1769, Feb. 17. The Admiralty write to the College about H. Jackson's invention for hardening, toughening, and preserving wood.—Feb. 23. A long memorial by Jackson about it.

The next volume containing the Annals 1771-1781 is missing.

Folio. 1781-1789.

1782, January 5. A case submitted to Lloyd Kenyon, Attorney-General, on the Statute of 14 Geo. 3., about madhouses. He is of opinion that the College can only grant licenses at the time specified by the Act.—Dec. 6. The Committee appointed by the College to take into consideration the letters received by the Registrar relative to the Influenza met first on the 12th of November.

1784, Sept. 30. The College elected Commissioners for executing the Act for regulating Madhouses.—Oct. 18. There was read and proposed to be printed "An Account of the Epidemic disease called the Influenza" in the year 1782, collected from the observations of "several Physicians in London and in the country, by a Committee of the Royal College of Physicians in London."

1785, June 3. Order to print "An account of a disease" occasioned by the transplanting of a tooth," by William Watson, M.D., Fellow of the College of Physicians, and F.R.S.

1786, April 10. Resolved, that the pictures belonging to the College be cleaned, and that Sir Joshua Reynolds be consulted as to the best means of doing this.—Sept. 30. Address to the King, congratulating him on his providential escape.

1787, Dec. 2. Petition to the King to issue a proclamation directing the observance of the Pharmacopœia published by the College.

1789, April 1. Address to the King in his recovery from illness.—And address to the Queen on the same occasion.

Folio. 1789-1799.

1789. Opinions by J. Mansfield, G. Wilson, and J. Madocks, on the question of the copyright of the Pharmacopœia being in the College. They were of opinion that it was.—June 11. J. Mansfield's opinion that an alien fellow of the College could not be a Commissioner to visit Madhouses; it being a civil office of trust, which aliens are rendered incapable of holding by the Act of Settlement, 12 & 13 Will. 3.

1792, Dec. 22. Resolved by the College to subscribe 50*l.* towards the relief of the suffering clergy in France, refugees in the British Dominions.

(Henry Vaughan, afterwards Henry Halford, is named.)

1795, Nov. 17. Address to the King on the occasion of the attempt on his life.

1798, Feb. 26. Resolved by the College to contribute 400*l.* in aid of the Government for the services of the present year.

Folio. 1800-1807.

1800, June 2. Address to the King on his preservation from the attack on his life.

1802, April 7. House of Commons. G. Berkeley chairman of Committee to the College.—The Committee on Dr. Edward Jenner's petition ask the opinion of the College on the safety, utility, and benefit of the Vaccine Inoculation.

—April. The College reply that they think it perfectly safe, and highly deserving the encouragement of the public.

1803, January 19. The President said he had had a message from the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland concerning the Cow pox.—It was resolved to refer it to the College officers for an answer.

1804, Dec. 29. Letter by Stephen Cottrell, of the Council Office to the College, asking their opinion how the infectious distemper prevailing at Gibraltar and in several other places in Spain may be prevented from extending, should the same or any other infectious disorder manifest here or in any other part of H.M.'s dominions. (Seventeen despatches enclosed from foreign consuls and others.)

1805, Jan. 10. Reply (10 pp.) to the above. The disease ravaging Malaga, Carthage, Alicante, Cadiz, Leghorn, and Gibraltar, is highly malignant. Though it had not the symptoms of the plague of Turkey and the Levant, it possessed an equal, if not greater degree of malignancy. In Medina Sidonia, in 1801, it is stated that of 1,200 sick upwards of 750 died. In Carthage 11,000 are stated to have died in a few weeks. The College think it is contagious. They recommend a strict execution of the laws of quarantine.—January 25. The Admiralty ask the College for a detailed plan for the establishment of a Board of Health, including the probable amount of the charges, and a statement of the authority with which it may be expedient to invest the said Board.—Feb. 5. Report in answer to the above request.—Admissions of Fellows and Licentiates. Examinations. Reproofs. Members of the College of Surgeons obliged to be disfranchised thereof before presenting themselves to the College of Physicians.—Sept. 30. The censors made a statement of the bad state of the apothecary's shops in Shadwell, Ratcliff Highway, and Wapping.—Choice of Commissioners to license and inspect Madhouses.

1806, June 25. It was decided in the case of the College v. Rose that the apothecaries may practise without the license of the College. 1 Mod. 44. 1 Brown, Parl. Cases, 78. The Apothecaries of London are incorporated by Charter of 13 James I. Vicary Gibbs, by his opinion of 15 March 1806, says that an apothecary interfering in a case could not be proceeded against by the College. On April 14th, H. Dampier gave an opinion to the same effect.—Aug. 15. By letter of this date Lord Spencer tells the College of the King's commands that they should enquire into the state of vaccine inoculation in the United Kingdom, and report their opinion and observations on that practice, the evidence adduced in its support and the causes which had hitherto retarded its general adoption.

1807, March 30. Report on Vaccination approved and ordered to be signed and presented to H.M.'s Secretary of State.—Resolution to sell the College and its buildings, and to purchase another building or site.

Folio. 1807-1811.

1807, July and December. The College tell Dr. Walshman and Dr. Blegborough that the exhibition on doors of their names as partners in the practise of physic is irregular and improper. The College do not object to any private agreement between them.

1808, May 17. Opinion of C. Warren that an alien, though naturalized or made a denizen, cannot since 12 & 13 Will. III. c. 2. s. 3. be elected a Fellow of the College.—Other opinions on other points.—Dec. 21. The Treasury tell the College that they have provided 3,000*l.* a year for the support of a National Vaccine Establishment, which had received the King's approbation.

1809, Sept. 30. Resolved to place in St. James' Church a memorial to Dr. Sydenham, buried in the south aisle of that church. The stone placed on the pavement to mark the place of interment was obliterated.—Dec. 13. Resolved to erect a monument to Sydenham, with an inscription. (A sketch is given.) He was born in 1624 and lived 65 years.

1810, April 16. Letter from Mr. Roberts, the College's solicitor, respecting the circumstances under which he had been engaged in compiling a History of the College; a compensation for which was referred to be considered by a committee consisting of Elects and College officers.—Opinions of Sir V. Gibbs, S. Sheppard, and Serjt. Lens, that the Corporation did not exist out of London.—Dec. 22. Three hundred guineas were voted to Mr. Roberts, the College's solicitor, for his book on the College, and for the purchase of his right and interest therein.

1811, January 16. Long letter by the registrar giving the College's adverse opinion to Dr. Harrison's proposed Bill for the Improvement of the Medical, Surgical, and Veterinary Sciences.

There is a collection of upwards of 200 volumes of manuscripts, a catalogue of which is in the Reading Room of the College. They are nearly all on Medical subjects. But a few of a different kind are noted below.

D. 7. Folio, vellum, 14th century. Higden's Polycriconon, in Latin. Beginis, Post procloros artium scriptores. Ends, Contractis trengis et indecis inter reges intrinseque decessus est. The last date is 1333.

D. 8. Folio, paper, 17th century. 134 leaves. The Epitome of the Civil Wars of England. Beginis, If in time as in place there were degrees of high and low, I verily believe the highest of time would be that which passed betwixt 1640 and 1660.—Ends, B. You have told me little of the General till now in the end. But truly I think the bringing of his little army entirely out of Scotland up to London was the greatest stratagem that is extant in history.—The work is the form of a conversation between A. and B.

D. 9. Square folio, paper, 15th century. Chaucer's Canterbury Tales.—After the introduction the Knight's Tale is headed "Jamque domos patria Scithiæ post

"aspera gentis prelia laurigeræ." The tales are in the usual order. The Plowman's Tale is not there, and the Prioress's Tale is imperfect, the latter part being absent.
The volume ends imperfectly in the middle of the sermon called the Parson's Tale; the last words are
"and thynk that God seeth and wrote all his thoughtes
"and his wishes, to him may nothing be hidde ne."

B. 20. Folio, parchment, 15 century, 65 leaves. (On the cover is written "Gemma Chirurgiæ.") On the Diversity of Urines. (English.) Begins. Uryn ys as moche for to sayne in Englissh as oon in þe reynys, Reynes is Frensshe, renes is Latyn, leendys, kedeneys in Englissh. Ends with the likeness of metals to the planets. There are some rude pen and ink drawings of constellations at the end. Also a recipe of one page and five lines headed "How to stannche blood of the nose." At the end of the volume in the midst of text is the drawing of a man, the text describing the voynes.

B. 10. Roman Missal, 14th century, preceded by a kalendar, with miniatures of rural operations for the different months. Some leaves of the volume have been cut out.
In the middle of the volume is the following note:—
"The 10th day of October yn the yere of our Lord God
"oon thousand fyve hundredth and xxiii, the xvth yere
"of Kyng Henry the viiith and the xxxii^d yere of the "translac^{on} of my lord Richard Foxe, Bysshop of Wyn"chestre, Maister Ranf Leptone, persone of Alresford, "and of Kyng's Worthy, servaunt and chapelayne to "my sayde Lord Richard gave thys boke to Elizabeth
"Langrege whos grandfader John Warner, gentylman,
"was uncle to my lady dame Anne Westbroke abbes
"of Romesey, to the said Elizabeth Mynchynne of "Romesey, the said Maister Ranfe was grete uncle, "unto a bone that the seide Maister Ranfe gave first
"at the veylling of the said Elizabeth, In money fyve
"poundes delyvered to John Raye baylyff of Romesey,
"a bone that the said Maister Ranfe gave to the said
"Elizabeth oone goblet of sylver all gylted, covered "with thre Lyons on the fote, and the sponys the oone
"crystalle garnysshed with sylver gyltede with an "Image on the ende, the other all whyte. R. Lepton."
(The signature is seemingly autograph.)

B. 22. Roman Missal, 8vo., vellum, 14th century, imperfect at the end, where by a 16th century hand is the following note. "Codex iste est Nicholai Saunderi ex
"dono Guillelmi Aglani clerici, precium novi cooper.
"xd." Then follows "At ego Nich. Saunder prædieti
"Nicholai filius non dedissem obolum: prohi! quæ
"cæcitas temporum præteritorum eum prudentes
"occeabantur. Faxit deus ut nos non inveniamur
"ingrati pro salutifero Evangelii lumine recepto."
Nich. Saunder.

D. F. Folio, paper, 17th century, 172 leaves, small writing.—Universa Medicina, opere et studio Baldvini Hamei, modo Domini Baldvini Filii, nati A.D. 1610 denati 1676.

On a fly leaf is "Bibliotheca Palmeriana, Londini, "1747."—Also "This MS. purchased at the sale of "Lord Verney's books was given to the College of "Physicians by Dr. John Monro, one of the fellows of "the College, June 25, 1783."

C. 3. 4to, paper, 17th century. Bustorum aliquot re-liquiæ ab anno 1628, Authore Baldvino Hamey, M.D.
The contents are notices in Latin of 85 persons of his time; among them are the Duke of Buckingham, Cromwell, Isaac Dorislaus, William Harvey, William Laud, Matthew Lister, Theodore Mayerne, N. Vandyck, and the Earl of Strafford.—On a fly leaf is the following note; "Bought at the sale Earl Verney's books, and "given to the College June 25, 1783."

A. E. 1. Folio, paper, 17th century. Prescriptions by Theodore Mayerne. One of these contains the name of "Nobilis virgo Katherina Paget." The prescriptions occupy only 22 leaves.

D. 13. Johannis de Alchinden Summa Judicialis de accidentibus mundi secundum J. de A. quondam socium aulæ de Mertone in Oxonia: dated 1389. Vellum 225 leaves.

C. 1. 4to., 1701. Latin poetry by Ralph Palmer on his uncle Baldwin Hamey.

C. 2. Life of Baldwin Hamey by Ralph Palmer.

The autograph signature of Thomas Linacre, the first President of the College is on the title of "Scrip-"tores rei rustice: fol. Regii, 1496," which is in the College Library.

The library contains a fine copy of "The Recuyell
"of the Historie of Troye," printed by Caxton in 1471.
It wants one leaf.

Documents in Boxes.

Box 1. Charters to the College.

10 Hen. 8. Sept. 23, Westminster. The King at the request of John Chambre Thomas Linacre, Ferdinand de Victoria, King's physician, Richard Halsewell, John Francis, and Robert Yaxley, physicians, and Thomas, Cardinal Archbishop of York and Chancellor, makes the six first named and all others in London of the faculty a community and College. The College are to choose yearly a president for the year. The president and College are to have perpetual succession and a common seal, and may hold in fee land and tenements, and rents and possessions of the yearly value of 12l.; they may hold meetings and make ordinances for the government of the College and the members within London and 7 miles round. No one is to practise in London or within 7 miles thereof, except admitted by letter under the common seal of the President and Community, under the penalty of 100s. per month.
Four are to be chosen every year as censors of medical practitioners in London and within 7 miles, with power to fine and imprison. The President and College are exempted from being on Assizes, Juries, &c. Great Seal, a portion broken off.

7 Eliz. Feb. 24, Westminster. After reciting the above charter, and that King Henry 8th in Parliament in the 14th and 15th years of his reign confirmed and amplified it, the Queen licenses the College to have yearly, one, two, three, or four human bodies for dissection, of men condemned and executed for theft, homicide, or any other felony. When the dissection is completed the bodies are to be buried by the president and his successors.—Part of Great Seal remains.

24 Eliz. June 30, Westminster. Licence to Sir John Lumley, Lord Lumley, to grant an annuity of 20l. out of certain of his lands in Sussex to the President and College for ever, to maintain a reader of the art or science of surgery in the College, after the first day of Easter term, 1583, for ever, according to the directions of Lord Lumley and Richard Caldwell, M.D., made and to be made. Also license to the s^r Richard Caldwell to give to the College an annuity of 20l. out of certain lands described in the counties of Sussex, Stafford, and Derby, for the purposes aforesaid.—Great Seal.

15 Charles II. March 26. After reciting the Charter by Henry 8th and its confirmation in Parliament, and Letters Patent of 8th Oct., 15 James I. confirming the charter of Henry the 8th, and giving other privileges, the King incorporates them by the name of the President, Fellows and Commonalty of the King's College of Physicians in the city of London; and gives them powers to hold and grant land, &c., and to have a common seal, &c. There are to be 40 fellows of whom are to be a President, 10 Elects, and 4 Censors. Sir Edward Alston, Sir Francis Prajean, Baldwin Hamey, and 37 others are named as the first fellows. Sir Edward Alston is named as the first President. Alston and nine others are named as the first Elects; George Ent and three others are named as the first Censors.—
Rules for the election of President on Michaelmas day; and for choosing of Censors and Elects. Power for Sir Geoffrey Palmer, Attorney-General, to administer the oaths of office to the Presidents, Elects, Censors, and other officers. Large powers to examine and punish practitioners and vendors of medicine in London and within seven miles thereof. The Earl of Clarendon, Chancellor, Sir Robert Foster, C. J. of the King's Bench, Sir Orlando Bridgman, C. J. of the Common Pleas, and Sir Matthew Hale, C. B. of the Exchequer, are to first visitors of the College, and their successors in office for the time being are to be visitors. The King releases the rent of 6l. reserved by the charter of King James I. A registrar is to be chosen. The members are exempt from liability to serve to juries, &c. Great seal broken. This charter is in English on eight skins of parchment.

25 Car. II. Feb. 27, Westminster (2 skins). Exemplification in Latin of the Roll of Parliament, 14 & 15
Hen. VIII., about the choosing of Elects.

26 Car. 2. July 13. Inexpimus of the Act of Parliament of 1 Mary confirming the Act of 14 Hen. VIII.
confirming the Charter by Hen. VIII. regarding the imprisonments and fines which the President and College were authorized to impose for offences.

3 James II. March 11. Confirmation of the Charter of Hen. VIII. Appointment of Sir Thomas Wetherley and many others to be Fellows (among them is Dr. Henry Paman). Sir T. Wetherley to be first President, Dr.
George Rogers to be first Vice-President; 12 Elects.

COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS.

and 4 Censors are named; Sir Thomas Millington is to be Treasurer, and Dr. Barwell to be first Registrar. The President, &c. are not to exceed four score fellows. Power to the College over the members. Prohibition against any person printing anything about physic or surgery except by license from the President and Censors. Power for the President and Censors after the expiration of the Act of 14 Car. II., renewed by the Act of 1 Jac. II., against printing seditious, &c. books, to license all books on physic and surgery. Power for the King by Order in Council to remove the President.

7 George I. May 24. License to the College to hold land of the yearly value of 1,000*l*.

Box 2. Deeds relating to gifts of lands by Lady Sadler and Dr. Sherard. And deeds relating to the Physic Garden at Oxford. Also a few early deeds, among which are—

Temp. Hen. III. Henry Malemainz grants to the Hospital House of St. Mary of Strodes, ss, per annum, from three sheep folds (bercariis), which he has in Stokes. Witnesses: Dom. Gil, Bishop of Rochester, William Archdeacon of Rochester, &c. Large seal of warrior on horseback.

Temp. Hen. III. Henry Malemariz gives ss. of three sheep folds at Stokes, to supply his tenth for the Hospital House of St. Mary at Strodes, in free and perpetual alms, and for the relief of the sick dwelling there; for the souls of his wife Emma and his son Hugh, &c. The like seal as the above.

12 Edw. I. Deed between the Prior and Convent of Rochester of the one part, and Robert de Bertone of the other part. The Prior and Convent demise to Robert their marsh called Monckenemers, with fifteen ewes in the same marsh (value of each 2d.), for life, at a rent of 9s.

Temp. Hen. III. Henry, son of Wolnoed de Lagare, gives in free and perpetual alms to God and the church of St. Andrew, the meekest of the apostles, of Rochester, and the monks there in the infirmary, a rent of 2s. to support the lamp burning before the altar of St. Mary, in the chapel of the said infirmary. Witnesses: Henry de Cobeham, William Potin, Benedict the clerk, John the Englishman, Elias the merchant, &c.

Box 3. Deeds relating to gifts of lands by Lord Lumley, Dr. Caldwell, and Mr. Gulston.

Box 7. Leases of property in Warwick Lane.

Box 8. Copy of proceedings in the case of the King v. The College of Physicians, 1796.—1696, Sept. 23. Acts, Ordinances, and Bye-laws of the College. 13 skins of parchment.

Box 10. Letters and papers of the last century, and papers about the new Charter.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

CORPORATION
OF THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

THE MANUSCRIPTS of the CORPORATION of the TRINITY HOUSE, DEPTFORD-LE-STROUD, at TOWER HULL, LONDON.

The first charter of incorporation of the Trinity House was dated 20 May, 6 Hen. VIII. The original is lost, but there is an exemplification of it, from the enrolment, made in the reign of George II. There were subsequent confirmations and enlargements of the charter, but in the 1st year of the reign of James II., the Corporation surrendered all their privileges to the King, and he granted them a new charter, which is still subsisting. In this charter Samuel Pepys, then Secretary of the Admiralty, was named first Master of the Corporation.

The great fire of 1666, and a fire which occurred in 1714 in Water Lane, where the house of the Corporation then was, destroyed most of their ancient documents, and I am informed that they have nothing of historical interest besides the volumes mentioned below. The earliest is a small 4to of the 16th century containing entries on vellum leaves of translations of Henry the VIII. the charter, and other things. The next are two volumes labelled "Transactions," and a third which ought to have been so labelled although labelled "Court Minutes" and contain entries and notices of documents and transactions of the Corporation from 1610 to 1661. The Court Minutes begin in 1659 and are continued to the present time, but the Minutes 1692-1704 are missing. The Bye-Minutes, which are Minutes of proceedings at committees, begin in 1685 and continue until the present time; those for 1689-1699 and 1705-1714 are missing. The volumes sometimes called "Select entries," sometimes "Letters, Reports, &c." sometimes "Reports" and sometimes "Order Books" begin in 1670, and continue until the present time; but those for 1685-1692 are missing. The Letter Books begin in 1685, and continue to the present time.

In the Transactions there are, in 1611, the depositions of some sailors who had been in a voyage to discover the North-west passage; what seems to be a copy of part of the log book of a vessel engaged in the voyage, and a report on the matter by the Trinity House. Certificates by the Trinity House of the losses or unfortunate circumstances of mariners or their widows; (these certificates were, I presume, considered as warrants for begging). The entries in these volumes show that Turkish pirates pursued their calling on the English coasts; and a Council letter in 1617 states that within a few years the Turks had taken above 300 ships of England and Scotland.* The Sovereign was applied to often for grants to private persons of licenses to erect lighthouses and levy tolls on ships passing them; these petitions were mostly referred to the Trinity House, and they reported thereon to the King. They acted as arbitrators in disputes between mariners, and had communications with the Trinity Houses of Newcastle, Hull, and Dover on various matters affecting their ports. In 1620 they certify the extent of the Mediterranean Sea. In 1621 they interfered in a dispute between the East India Company, and seamen and widows of seamen employed by them, who had been taken prisoners by the Hollanders, with regard to the wages of the seamen. There are several entries about the prevention of the exportation of iron ordnance. The King and Government often referred to the Corporation for their opinion as to the construction of ships and the manning of them, and the convoys necessary for English ships.

There are many entries, particularly in 1624, about the unlawful exportation from Yarmouth of herrings in strangers bottoms; but the people of Yarmouth it seems got a temporary license so to do. In 1632 and 1635 are entries of mutineers signing a Round Robin. During the Commonwealth the Corporation were directed by the Government to aid in sending forage for the army in Scotland, and they had to certify the number of ships in the Thames fit for the service of the State, and had to impress seamen for the like service, and in 1652, at the command of Cromwell had to recommend a "godly and well affected mariner" as Master of the ship Resolution, and had to send fire ships to the fleet at the Downs. In 1656 is a notice of the encroachments of the sea near Reculver Church. In 1659 is an order imposing a fine on whoever shall take a pipe of tobacco during court time, and an order regarding the number of dishes of meat to be provided for the Corporation. In the same year General Monk was chosen an elder brother, and in 1660 he was chosen Master. There are notices of the almshouses and charity estates of the Corporation. The election of Master was always on Trinity Monday, and in 1660 two barrels of strong beer were ordered against that day, and Mr. William Pryne, and Sergeant Maynard were ordered to have invitations to the dinner; the Earl of Sandwich was chosen Master in that year; and in the same year the King requested that they expel one Capt. Moyer from the Corporation; in 1663 he was expelled.

The Court Minutes show that the Corporation had several disputes with regard to their being exempt from serving in the militia; that they fined persons for heating tar on board ship. In 1663 three of the brethren were summoned to attend at Westminster to give their opinion to the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas in a cause where the business wholly related to the sea. The Corporation appears to have been often consulted by the King, the Lord High Admiral, and the Privy Council on matters relating to trade and the navy. On one Court day there was no Court because all the elder brethren were present according to custom at a launch of a great ship of the King's. In 1665 the Wardens were ordered to provide better claret for the meetings; and the Corporation engage Houseman to paint the portrait of the Duke of Albemarle; and made a regulation about the poor who came to the monthly meetings for relief, by way of precaution against the plague; and by reason of the plague the Court held their meetings at Deptford, and increased the allowance to their pensioners and the poor. On the 2nd of September 1666 the Corporation house in Water Lane was burned, and the

* In 1621 the Corporation petitioned Buckingham, the Lord High Admiral, regarding an overcharge on them in respect of their subscription to the fund for the expedition against the pirates of Algiers. See also 1625. March 20, for a notice of prisoners taken by pirates off the coast of England.

CORPORATION
OF THE
TRINITY
HOUSE.

Corporation declined to pay the quarter's rent which became due at Michaelmas because they had been dispossessed. In 1667 they granted 40*l.* a year out of the ballast office to the Duke of York for his life. (From Mr. Whormby's book it appears that the Duke received this sum up to the time of his accession to the Crown, and that after his abdication he claimed, but unsuccessfully, the arrears.) In 1667, at the King's request, they recommend Gallions and Blackwall as places where ships should be sunk in the Thames to hinder the enemies approach. In 1668 they resolve to appoint a Consul at Leghorn, and in 1669 order him, then setting out, to buy velvet for a funeral pall for the members. In the same year they decide on sending a present of wine to a person who had been a benefactor, and from whom they hoped more. On Oct. 27 in that year they heard of the death of Mr. William Prynn, an elder brother. On the 30th of March 1670, Mr. John Pepsy, brother of Samuel Pepsy, was elected clerk of the Corporation. (Samuel Pepsy in his diary alludes to him). John Pepsy died in 1677. In 1671 two members are ordered to drink to each other and to be reconciled. In January 1673 Samuel Pepsy was chosen an elder brother. (He often sat at the Courts). In November 1674, Andrew Marvell (Marvell P) sat as one of the Board. In Feb. 1675 orders were made about the use and charges for the use of the funeral pall. In 1675 is a notice that the Master and two or three of the brethren would go to the new foundation at Christ's Hospital to see it and to appoint to examine the boys there. (Subsequent notices of the examination of the boys of this foundation and certificates of proficiency afterwards occur. This examination has ceased for some years past) Among the "Select Entries" is a letter in 1671 giving the Corporation's opinion as to the extent of the British seas; and a paper of instances of striking the flag to the English. In 1680 is a list of the portraits belonging to the Corporation. In 1705 Strype was about to publish a new edition of Stow's Survey of London, and the Corporation authorized some of the brethren to give him such information as they should think it necessary he should publish with regard to the Corporation. In 1705 the death of Sir Cloudesley Shovell is mentioned. In 1713 Sir Thomas Hardy was sworn a nether warden. Below are extracts from the earlier of the series of volumes above mentioned, and notices of the contents of several volumes of copies of documents possessed by or relating to the Corporation, and short notes of their charters.

I must be allowed to return thanks for the courteous reception accorded to me by Sir Richard Collinson, the Deputy Master, and Mr. Allen, the Secretary, and for the assistance given to me by Mr. Inglis, the Chief Clerk of the Corporation.

Folio, 17th century. Labelled "Transactions, 1609-1625."

Certain articles and reasons touching a plantation to be made in Newfoundland, exhibited by certain Marchants of London and Bristol, unto the Lords of H. M. Privie Counsell, and by them referred to the consideration and reporte of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House. Feb. 9, 1609.—It prays for a patent of a small part of the country never inhabited by Christians.

Favourable report thereon by the Master and Wardens of the Trinity House.

1610. Bond for submission to arbitration of the Master and Wardens of the Trinity House in a dispute about money, and award thereon.

1610. Award by them on a dispute between a Merchant and the men of a ship arrived from Virginia.

1610. Opinion given by the Master Wardens, Assistants, and Company of the Trinity House, at the request of the East India Company, as to whether and what wages were due to men of two crews of ships, some men of one ship being taken prisoners, and the other ship lost.

1610. Recommendation to the King of a gunner redeemed from captivity, from the Turks.

1610. The Trinity House writes to the Chancellor, Ellesmere, about seamen captured by Pirates, and made destitute.

1610. The same to the same, recommending a man who suffered shipwreck on the coast of Norway.

8 James I. Commission of the King, and of Chancery, to the Master and two of the House, and three of the Commissioners for Policies of Assurance, to decide on a dispute about a Charter-party.

Award thereon.

Awards on disputes about seamen's wages.

1611. Certificate that the Levant seas begin, the westernmost part thereof, at the mouth of the Straits of Jubilaltar (Gibraltar) anciently called the Straits of Marocco, and so continueth yfselfe eastwards thence into all the gulfes, ports, and places, within that Middle Earth sea.

Answer of the Master, Wardens, Deputies, &c. of the Trinity House, to the East India Company about wages due to certain mariners.

1611, Oct. 24. Depositions of persons engaged in the North West discovery. Robert Billet, who came home Master, saith that in going into the Straights they were 5 weeks in their passage to Cape Salisbury, but in coming to the Eastward, they were cleare of Cape Desolation in 16 days as he conceives. The men turned out of the ship on the 23rd of June were nine; two died, four were slain. The men that came home were Robert Billet, Master, and seven others. They departed from London the 18th of April, and fell with Cape Salisbury the 2nd of August victualled for 8 months.

Abacuck Pricket, sworn, saith the ship began to return about the 12th of June, &c.

Silvanus Bond, saith &c.

Edward Wilson, surgeon.

Francis Clemens, Bennet Mathues, and another sworn.

By examination of seven of the company of that ship that endeavoured the North West discovery, it appears that the Master and the rest of those men which are lost were put out of the ship by the consent of all such as are come home The plot was begun by Henry Green, and William Willson, by the privy of Inet. Pricket clears Billet, who came home Master, of being acquainted with the plot at the beginning. They all charge the Master with having wasted the victuals. All conclude that to save some from starving they were content to put some away

Outward bound.—Course Westerly.

On the western side of Fretum Davies, they enter an indraught the 26th of June, the sea to sett S.W., the land trending from N. to W.

27.—Standing with it, they find it to sett more westerly.

30.—Anchoring on yce, they find a sett to West.

July 6.—Fast to yce they found at 113 fad. grocno ose, and next day grose gravel sand at 116, then losing in 3 howers osie sand at 120 fad. The morning drift was S.E. by E. by reason of the fodd from N.W. by W.

July 7.—Standing N.N.W., he found himself laid Sotherly by the fludd, and at afternoone the tyd turned, at night the stopp in 112 fadd. one leage of an Isle of yce aground bearing W., but by 3 next morning it bore E. Sotherly.

9th.—Yce driving to the Westward.

10th.—A strong sett of Ice to the West and W.S.W.

11th.—Imbayd, they find the fludd from the North Shore sounding 4 fadd. height and flud 8 howers the change day.

12th and 13th.—The North Canal free from Ice.

17th.—130 fadd, 145 fadd, and by the lead a drift N.N.W., and in 120 fadd. by the ships drift at haser and grapple the lead or ground fluds the fludd come from N.N.W.

19th.—Betwene Hold with Hope, and Cape Henry no ground in 160 fadd. within 2 legues of shore; the flud from W. to N.

21.—A ground sea and way more westerly than accompt.

Aug. 1. No ground at 180 fadd.

2. The make Salisbury's F. West, south and a faire sound west; before these a whirling sea either by overfale or meeting currant a streigh passage; S.W. Highland, 100 fadd, 2 legues over.

On the west land the observe the fludd to come from the North heighting by shore 5 fadd.

In the Bay.—Course Southerly.

Aug. 12. They find white water like Whayce.

13. They find strong fludd from N.W. by N., and the ebb from S.E. by S.; yt fowed 9 a'clock, the c 5 days, and height 1½ fadd.

22. A tyde from W. by N. from 8 till noone.

Homewards bound. In the bay.—Course N. Easterly.

July 15. Coming up to the Straits mouth they find a sea coming from oute the North.

26. They run aground on a rock in the little streight mouth at 9; shot againe at 4 in the morning.

27. On the Wester side they make land at N. by W. 8 legues of, not scene outwards bound; they take it to

CORPORATION
OF
THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

be the western coast; the tyde came in W.S.W. and the obb E.N.E.

Ang. 2. Through the great straight course north-east and westerly.

4. They make Isle of yce setting from East to West.

7. They see a whale playing.

9. They make hold with Hope and the northern coast both.

10. Two islands of yce coming from the East into the Strait.

13. No ground at 80 fadd; yet herd the rattle of land ne' at 85 among the islands.

14. The set of tyde from East to West is 140 fadd; anchored.

15. Hope for a through faire, because the yce drave from the East to West.

16. Cleare of the Straights.

Grounds for conjecture.

The straights lye from Fretum Davies West and East, a mere at lest 200 le. long, and 30 or 40 broad at most, sometymes very narrow.

The southern coast full of bayes and pestered with yce, the Northern shorter and free.

At the western mouth the Northerne side opens to the N.N.W.; the great billow comes in Salisbury his island being ahead. South the great bay enters and trends about 200 le. long.

The tyde settis into that bay from N. by W. into the Strait ut snpra. Yt settis more westerly checking the current that comes from the East, and always beares the Ice into the West as the Whale plaid.

Whether that great bay must not be fedd from the Ocean.

Whether that ocean lye not Norwest of Salsburye's headland and the Straights.

Whether that ocean can be any other than the South Sea.

1611, Oct. 26. Whereas it is enquired of us the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, what our opinion is concerning that discovery which is made in the North West. We having diligently heard the Master of the ship that brought her home, who is the only man of that Company that can speak of Navigation, do conclude from ought we can discern by such globes as we have viewed, that the said ship was never so far to the Westward to recover the South Sea, as we conceive the land to be by so many legues; and our opinion is that the same ground bay in which they sailed must be fedd from the ocean, but cannot conjecture that it is fedd from the South Sea, but rather from the Ocean on the North East side of that Continent, because the currant did drive perpetually from the East; but whereas the islands of yce drive away from Cape Salisbury W.N.W., the land trending N.N.W., and that at the same Cape it heights 4 or 5 fadd under water and keeps a trew course of tyde as he reports; we thinke that the passage is to be found betwene the West and the N. West, and not more Northerly.

Yeoven under the Common Seal of our Corporation, 26 Oct. 1611.

1611, March 11. Letter from Sir Thomas Smith to the Trinity House, asking for payment of the second of the three years' subscription to Virgini Adventure.

1611, March. Agreement that the Trinity House shall have rateably according to their adventure for Virginia their full part of all such lands as shall be recovered, planted, and inhabited, and of such mines and minerals of gold and silver and other metals or treasure, pearls, precious stones, or other kind of wares which shall be obtained or gotten in the said voyage.

1612. Reference by the Chancellor to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House in a dispute between Seamen and Merchants; and letters of the Chancellor thereon.

Letter to the Chancellor about unfortunate Seamen. Awards in disputes.

Petition for relief to the farmers of H. M. Impost for Sea coals, the petitioner having having been obliged to cast overboard much coal in a storm. And Certificate of the Petitioner having taken oath before the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of the truth of the statements in the Petition.

Award in a dispute.

Several of the parishioners of Stepney write to the Trinity House to ask them to write to the Chancellor for the King's Letters Patent to make a collection in Churches for an unfortunate person.

1613. Letter by the Chancellor to the Trinity House asking them to arrange disputes between the Merchants and Owners of the Mary Anne and the mariners.

Letter by the Trinity House thereon.

Petition by Mary Temple, backed by certain parishioners of Limehouse, to the Trinity House, asking them to give a certificate to the Chancellor for a Patent for collection in divers parishes for the widow of a man taken by the Turks.

Petition to the Trinity House on behalf of an unfortunate debtor, to assist him in petitioning the Chancellor.

Letter by the Trinity House to the Chancellor on the subject.

1615. Reference by the Chancellor to the Trinity House of a suit in Chancery.

The defendant writes to the Trinity House that he cannot appear, being a merchant, living 200 miles off, and says he will hasten the hearing of the cause before the Chancellor, as it is not a maritime cause.

The Trinity House send the defendant's letter to the Chancellor.

1615. Award by the Trinity House on a reference by the Chancellor of a suit about the performance of the trusts of a Will.

1614, Oct. 17. Order in Council that Sir H. Montague and Sir Randall Crewe, Kts. sergeants at law, should examine the Statute about the exportation of Herrings, the bailiffs and commonalty of Great Yarmouth having had license to transport them in stranger's bottoms, but having abused the license.

Montague and Crewe report that they find that no strangers ought by the law to ship herrings but in English ships whereof his Majesty's subjects are owners.

1615, Nov. 19. Council Order. After reciting a reference to Sir F. Greville, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Julius Caesar, M.R., Sir F. Bacon, A.G., Sir H. Montague and Sir R. Crewe, H. M. sergeants at law, to report on the Great Yarmouth affair about herrings,—They report that they think the Great Yarmouth people may have leave for this time to export the 600 lasts of herrings in stranger's bottoms, but strictly prohibit any such exportation for the future.—They give leave accordingly.

Petition by divers owners and poor mariners of Great Yarmouth to the Privy Council against the exportation of herrings in strangers bottom.

Petition by the Town of Yarmouth to the Privy Council to appoint a day to decide a controversy between the Masters of the Trinity House and the Town of Yarmouth about the transport of 600 lasts in strangers bottoms.

Reasons and allegations of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House against the inhabitants of the Town of Great Yarmouth their transporting of herrings in strangers bottoms.

1616, April 3. Council letter to Sir Daniel Dun, asking him to call the Ministers of the Trinity House and such of the Merchants trading to Spain, France, and the East land as they think fit, to confer about the price of freight in foreign ships for English goods.

1616, May 18. Council order reciting a report thereon by Sir J. Caesar and Sir D. Dun and approval of it.

1616, June 26. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of the distress and sufferings of Nicholas Rowledge taken prisoner by the Spaniards.

1616. Certificate by a rector, constable, churchwardens and others of the state of the wife of Moses Mason, mariner, taken by the Turks.

1616, Oct. 16. Council order that the same report (see under date 1616, May 18.) should be entered in the Register of Council Causes as an Act of the Table to be observed, and that it be published.

1616, Oct. 16. Letter of the Council to the Lord Treasurer asking to give order to publish the rates of prices for freight by the merchants of Spain, France, and the East lands, reported by Sir J. Caesar and Sir D. Dun.

1613, Jan. 31. Council letter to the Mayor and Aldermen of Newcastle, sending them articles devised for the better preservation of the River Tyne, after conference between the Masters of the Trinity House and the deputies of the Mayor and Aldermen.

1614, Oct. 7. Council letter to the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of Newcastle, praising their observance of the directions regarding the Tyne, and telling them to send up two persons (named) if they continue to oppose them.

Petition to the Privy Council of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, complaining that nothing had been done on the Council order of the 10th

CORPORATION
OF
THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

June last, and praying that their Lordships would set an end to the business by proclamation or otherwise.

1616, Jan^y 25. Certificate to the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, that the certificate of the late part owner and part owner of a ship regarding William Ruds (son of Nicholas Ruds) being taken by the Turks, was true.

Petition to the Chancellor by David Mitchell to compel Thomas Whitney to put the disputes for money between them to arbitration.

1616, Oct. 11. Letter of the Chancellor to 3 Masters of the Trinity House, referring the above to them or any two of them.

1616, Nov. 2. Letter by the 3 Masters to the Chancellor saying that they find a certain sum due to Mitchell besides consideration for time of his attendance on Witney's ship.

1616, last of December. The Chancellor to the three; referring the matter back to them and others of the Trinity House, to make a further report to him.

1616, Jan^y 8. Report by 12 of the Trinity House to the Chancellor, finding the amount due to Mitchell.

1616, Jan^y 15. Order in Chancery in the suit of Clark v. Isack (a mariner and a master).

1616, Jan^y 11. Certificate thereon by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House to the Chancellor.

Petition by the Brethren of the Trinity House to the Master, Wardens, and Assistants that they would direct a certificate to the Chancellor in the matter.

1616, Jan^y 30. Certificate to the Chancellor that Clarke deserves no wages, but rather punishment. (signed by the Master and Wardens; apparently original signatures.)

Petition by owners and seamen of Ipswich, Alborough, Harwich, Woodbridge, &c., trading for coals, to the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, praying them to be suitors to the King to relieve them of the tax of 4d. per chaldron on coals laden at Newcastle, Sunderland, and Blythe, granted by Patent to Andrew Boyd.

1616, Feb. 12. The Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House to Sir D. Daun. Judge of the Admiralty; on the advisability of having a light at or near Wynterton.

The same to the King; after reciting the Act of 8 Eliz. granting them the right to place buoys, beacons, lights, &c., and that in the 36th Eliz. the Lord High Admiral surrendered his rights, and the Queen confirmed theirs: they pray the King that he will not give the rights to others who they hear have been soliciting.

Reasons against the 4d. per chaldron on coals.

1616, Feb. 14. Council Order that the Masters of the Trinity House alone should have the placing of sea marks and signs.

s.d. Council Order approving the design of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House to have a light at Wynterton, with a toll of 8d. for every ship over 100 tons, and 6d. for every ship under 100 tons, having comfort of the said light, and 12d. for every fishing boat for the year.

s.d. Council Order and Articles for preservation of the river Tyne.

1616, Feb. 16. Council Order about it.

1616, Feb. 18. Letters from the Council to the Mayor of Newcastle, the Bishop of Durham, and the High Sheriff of Northumberland, about the river Tyne.

A report on the mixture of coals.

1616, Feb. 28. R. Winwood to The King's pleasure is that Sir T. Bacon, A.G., calling other learned counsel, do consider the Act of 8 Eliz.

1616, March 15. The Lord Keeper reports that light houses are sea marks within the Act of 8. Eliz. and the charter of 36 Eliz., and that the Corporation of the Trinity House cannot transfer their authority.

1617, March 5. Instructions by the Trinity House to Mr. Norreys and Mr. Geere to go to Wynterton, co. Norfolk, and make lighthouses there.

1617, March 26. Council Order; after reciting the Petition of the Trinity House, the reference by Winwood, the report of Bacon, and the Order of 14 Feb. 1616: they confirm the order and exhort the Corporation to perform their duty by erecting lights, &c. without tax on the subject.

1617, March 29. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House that the Sea Flower of London with all her goods and 16 men was cast away with foul weather in the bay of Lisbon.

1616, Feb. 25. Council Order about the mixing of coals.

1617, June 4. Opinion of H. Yelverton, A.G., on the Act of 8 Eliz.—1. Lighthouses are signs and sea-marks within the Statute. 2. That there is authority given by the Statute to the Trinity House to erect such lighthouses if they think fit, and a trust reposed in them to do it if they will. 3. That they of the Trinity House cannot transfer their authority to any other; but the authority given by the Statute does not take away the power of the Crown by common law to erect such lights; for that Statute is made wholly in the affirmative, that they of the Trinity House shall and may erect such signs and marks at sea, but excludes not his Majesty. We are informed that since the Statute, both in the time of his Majesty and of the late Queen, there have been some light-houses erected by authority given from the Crown. If the Trinity House be not vigilant to perform their duty, the King is not restrained to provide them, according to his royal power and justice, for the safety of his subjects lives, goods, and shipping in all places needful.

1617, June 16. Council letter to the Trinity House. Within these few years the Turks have captured above 300 ships of England and Scotland. The merchants of London have offered 40,000*l.* from the merchants and owners of ships in the port of London as a fund against the Turks. They ask the Trinity House to assemble and decide that they will contribute.

Answer of the Trinity House to the above, offering certain rates on ships according to their place of voyage, amounting in all to 1,068*l.*

Two reports against Clarke in the suit of Clarke v. Isack.

Petition by the Trinity House to the Privy Council, against Sir William Erskine's attempt to get a King's patent to erect lighthouses.

The inconveniences (six in number) of his Majesty's grant, falling necessarily if Sir William Erskine carry the erecting and keeping of lights, &c.

Petitions by the Trinity House to the Lord High Chamberlain and Chancellor in favour of their House.

1617, Feb. 20. C. Edmunds to [the Trinity House]. The Lords have ordered that you and Sir William Erskine shall be heard with counsel on Sunday morning next.

Petition to the Privy Council by the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne that they may export to the Seventeen Provinces and Germany and no where else such small fardles of cloth in strangers bottoms (not exceeding 6 fardles in one ship) as in times past they have used, and also to import such commodities in the like vessels not exceeding 20 tons in any one ship, the master of such ship or vessel bringing a certificate that there is not an English shipping there to be had.

1618, May 25. Reference of the above to the consideration of the Governor and Company of the Merchant Adventurers in London and the Masters of the Trinity House.

1618, June 3. Report on the above.

Petition by Peter Frobisher, heir and executor of Sir Martin Frobisher, to the King, for a patent, at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* rent, to erect and maintain a watch-light at Ravenspurro or Kelsey-upon-Humber, with such allowance out of every ton of goods of ships and vessels both of the King's dominions and of strangers as shall have use and benefit thereof, like as the King had already allowed for the lights at Dungeness and Wynterton.

Reference of the above petition to the Trinity House.

1618, Aug. 1. The Trinity House at Dover to the Trinity House at Kingston-upon-Hull, asking them to say if they really approve Peter Frobisher's intention.

Petition to the King by the Trinity House to confirm the grant by Queen Elizabeth in the 36th year of her reign of the office of lastage and ballastage of all ships and vessels coming or going out of the Thames between London Bridge on the west and the main sea on the east.

The poor, aged, impotent, lame, and distressed men, women, and children maintained and relieved monthly by the Trinity House, divided by their several dwellings, Aug^o 1618.—Here follows a list of the pensioners at London, St Katherine, &c., Wapping, Redriffe, Ratcliffe, Limehouse, Poplar, Deptford, Rochester, Leigh, 160; payments in all 16*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*; annually 209*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* Besides the resort of many men that have suffered shipwreck, English, French, and Dutch, together with many more poor, lame, and impotent men, women, and children to whom are given 50*l.* 60*l.* or 70*l.* per annum.

Report by the Trinity House to the King, on Peter Frobisher's petition. The Trinity House and they hold the erecting a lighthouse at Ravenspurro to be impossible, and one at Kelsey very dangerous.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King to confirm the charter of 36 Eliz., and to prohibit others from using their rights.

1618, Sept. 22. The petitioners are referred to the Lords of the Treasury, and if they think it fit a grant is to be prepared.

1618, Nov. 11. Certificate by the Trinity House of the bad state of the haven belonging to the towns of Dunwich, Southwold, and Walberswick.

1618, Oct. 16. Star chamber order. In a cause between Andrew Boyde, H.M. Patentee for the survey of coals on the one part, and the Coastmen trading for coals on the other part, it is ordered that Boyde forbear to put in use the said Letters Patent until further order be taken.

1618, Oct. 16. Star Chamber. On hearing the cause between Sir William Erskine, H.M. Patentee for maintaining lighthouses at Winterton, and the Coastmen trading for coals, it is ordered to be referred to Sir Henry Carre, Comptroller of the Household, Sir J. Caesar, and Sir E. Cooke, and they are to certify their Lordships.

Letter by the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull to the Trinity House of Deptford, unfavourable to the setting lighthouses at Ravenspurre or Kilesey.

1618, Feb. 1. The Master and 11 others of the Trinity House to They certify that the wines of Malaga are not of the growth of the Levant, but of Spain (three reasons are given). Original signatures of the Master, &c.

Reasons (8) for the continuance of the cook rooms in his Majesty's ships in the mid-ships. (Original signatures by the Master and 11 others and two marks).

A ceasement or rate upon the tonnage of shipping for raising 2,000*l.* per ann. (The ships are ranged in five classes according to the places where they trade, and the total amount assumed to be levied is 2,050*l.*)

1619, April 14. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of the condition of Matthew Angell, of Wapping, reduced to poverty.

Our reasons against the office for survey of corderage.

For the greater ship of 600 or 700 tons, &c. (There are specifications for the building of two new ships for the King, one 103 feet long, and the other 93 feet long.

Sir J. Killigrew to the King. Petition for a patent for 30 years to erect and maintain a lighthouse at the Lizard point; he will pay 20 nobles a year.

The King refers Killigrew's petition to the Trinity House; who reply that it is not necessary or convenient to erect a light-house there, but per contra inconvenient, having regard to pirates and enemies whom it would conduct to a safe place of landing.

Petition to the Trinity House by the owners and masters of ships trading to Newcastle for sea coals, and of all other ships trading to the Northwards, that they will endeavour to get the 1*d.* per ton to Winterton lights reduced to 6*d.* per 20 chaldrons.

1619, June 23. Report by the Trinity House in the cause of Applody v. Manley, that the plaintiff (a mariner suing for wages) was not entitled, he having deserted the ship.

1619, Jan^y 12. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, of the losses and distress of Edward Crosse of Ratcliffe.

Two other certificates by other persons about Crosse's losses.

1619, Nov. 16. Certificate by three persons of the services and distress of Captain Reynolde Whitfield, a prisoner in the hole of the Poultry Compter. In 1589 he served in the Victory, of the Queen's: in the year 1591 in the Garland, of the Queen's, under the command of the Earl of Cumberland, in which voyage in the Garland, being sent home in a prize taken from the enemies, he was surprised by a fleet of gallees and carried into Spain, where he remained prisoner for two years; more he served with Sir Fr. Drake to the West Indies, anno 95^o, in the honourable action of Cales 96, and in the Lion, of the Queen's, 97; besides other actions undertaken by her Majesty. In the year 98, after divers casual losses, he had a ship called the Milknap, of 200 tons, stolen away by one Norice, of Wapping, which ship, with her freight, was valued at 1,200*l.*, and never recovered by the said Capt. Whitfield. He is now prisoner on an execution for 500*l.*, which debt was for the ship stolen from him.

1619, January 19. The Master and four others of the Trinity House certify the truth of the above, except the valuation of the ship and freight.

1619, Feb. 12. Certificate by the Trinity House to the Justices of Assises of the co. of Kent that the finishing the bridge and way over a creek between the parish of Stoke and the Isle of Graines will be beneficial (the same having been presented as in a dangerous state).

1619, Feb. 12. Certificate by the Trinity House that Blackwall will be a fit place for erecting houses and buildings for seafaring men.

1619, March 11. Certificate by the Trinity House to the Marquis of Buckingham, Lord High Admiral, that it will not be prejudicial to the River Thames for Robert Bourne of Wapping, shipwright, to enlarge his wharfs or place for building ships at Whapping further into the River Thames than it now is, as others of the said profession have heretofore done; and for sooner obtaining license for his so doing he has intreated their certificate in his behalf.

1619, March 19. Certificate of the Trinity House of the capture of Turks and Moors of James Carter of Plymouth, mariner, and his distressed circumstances consequent on his slavery and release.

1620, March 20. The Trinity House to Sir Fulk Greville one of H.M. Privy Council. Certificate that they conclude the sea within the Straights of Morako or Gibletor is usually called the Levant Sea, extending itself from the said Straits or mouth to the coast of Sarea, viz., Scanderowne, Trypoly &c. and our reasons, that we have received the same by tradition both of our elders and of the Italians and Frenchmen trading in those seas.

1620, May 28. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of the suffering, and state of Clement White, of Weymouth, who was a pilot on a ship taken by the Turks near the Southern Cape, and sold by them to the Moors in Argila in Barbary, where he was redeemed by some English for 30*l.*, in which sum he stands indebted to them.

Petition, by owners and masters of ships to the King, offering 4*d.* on every chaldron of coals unladen in any port of England or transported in English shipping, and 6*d.* on every ton of goods loaded on this side of the North Cape to be unladen in any part of England, if the King would command that no coals be exported except as in the Petition mentioned or laden in any foreign vessel under certain conditions.

A letter by the Earl of Oxford to the Trinity House on the above petition.

1619, March 7. The Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull to the Trinity House of Deptford; asking their opinion of the merchants of Kingston-upon-Hull taking freight of Scotchmen for wines for Burdeaux and carrying goods thither outwards, and in the East Country loading and freighting the Hollanders there with flax and iron for that port, though shipping of that port or other English shipping be ready there.

1620, April. The Trinity House at Deptford to the Trinity House, Kingston-upon-Hull; recommending them to apply to the Council Board on the subject.

1620, May 13. The Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House certify that the Mediterranean Sea begins at the Straights of Gibraltar or Moraco, and extendeth itself to Mallaga, Aliccant, the Isle of Maycyorke, Minyork, and Candy, Cyprise, Scanderowne, Trypoly, Alexandria, and is called the Levant Sea, and hath ever bene so accounted and called by all navigators of those countries, and so from them by us so called; that Mallaga lyeth xx. leagues within the Levant Sea, without interposition of any other land, insomuch that the Levant Sea, washeth the coasts of Mallaga even to the walles of the toune, and the wines of the growth of Mallaga are rolled in the cask into the Levant Sea, and so embarked with our ships: this we have in our experience and certain knowledge. Mem. that Mr. Munsey had a copie of this certificate the 8th of July 1628 under the seale of the House affixed thereto.

1620, May 27. Certificate for Sara, wife of Matthew Clarke of Limehouse, mariner, taken prisoner by the Turks in the Straights, and was in prison there, for the ransom of himself and his companions, 300*l.*

1620, July 7. The Lords of the Privy Council to H.M. officers and farmers of the Customs in the port of London. Reciting that the Trinity House had called a meeting of owners and masters of ships that were seamen, who had agreed to certain rates on ships trading to certain ports, for the advancement of the King's intended expedition against the pirates of Argies and Tunis; they command them not to suffer any cocketts to be delivered nor entries taken of any ship, bark, or vessel trading to the parts above-mentioned until the said rates be duly answered and paid.

1620, Oct. 7. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, that William Locke of Ratcliffe, mariner, was in a ship cast away at Greenland in 1611, and afterwards in another ship also cast away in Greenland, and afterwards taken by Turkish pirates in the Straights, and lost his wages, apparel and adventure; that he has a wife and 4 children, the eldest sick.

Petition by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House to the Marquis of Buckingham, Lord High Admiral; that they may be free from Mr. Alfonso for tenant of the office of ballast granted to them by the King, who was recommended by the Marquis but who had not come for his lease, and was in arrear three quarters of a year for rent.

1620, Feb. 4. Petition by the same to the same.—By the Statute 8 Eliz. they have the right to erect and lay out all such beacons, buoys, and sea marks upon the coasts of the Kingdom as to them should seem meet, but some have obtained the King's grant for erecting certain sea marks contrary to the meaning of the said Statute, and for better explaining the said Statute they have preferred a Bill in Parliament. They pray his allowance and furtherance thereof.

1620, Feb. 21. The same to the same. They understood that he is incensed against the Bill and against them; they ask his honourable allowance and favour.

1621, April 9. The Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House to Mr. Geere and Mr. Cooke.—Instructions to go to Lowestoffe, Caistor, and Wynterton, and see about the keeping of the lights and buoys there; if the candles burned in the lanterns be too few they may supply one or two more candles; to sound the channels there, &c.; also to sound the channels at Stamport and there lay a buoy if needful; at Yarmouth to call to account Mr. Greenwood, Mr. Lucas, and Mr. Lad, and settle accounts with them.

1621, April 11. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of the portage fit to be allowed to the master and mariners of every ship.

To the master of any ship on voyage to Mayork or to the eastward thereof down in the Straights 100l. in goods out and home free of custom. Officers, 10l. a man; common sailors, 5l. a man.

The master of every ship on voyage for Spain, Portugal, the Islands, Barbary, Ginny, France, &c., one tunne upon every 100 tunces in goods out and home free of custom. The officers 20 nobles a man in goods, the common sailors 5 marks a man.

The master and mariners of every ship on voyages for Zeland, Holland, and all that country, Hamborow, Muscovia, Russia, &c., according to former custom. They recommend those rates to the King.

1628, April 21. Certificate of the loss of the Long and Costly, of Ipswich, laden with wine from Burdeaux between Dover and the South Foreland, to the great hurt and undoing of Nicholas Paynton, of Wolverston, co. Suffolk, fisherman, sole owner thereof.

1621, May 2. Certificate by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House, at the request of many knights and burgesses of Parliament, about the complaint of men and women who had petitioned Parliament against the East India Company for wages for that time which the said men and the women's husbands were in the hands of the Hollanders, having been formerly taken by the said Hollanders. For point of law they submit to Sir Henry Marten, Kt. Judge of the Admiralty, who holding himself to the general maxim concludes that when the owner loseth his ship, the merchant his goods, there the mariner loseth the wages. But in case of conscience the case of these men differs from others: for being taken by the Hollanders they were offered great wages to have served them against the Company, but they would not, which gained to them severe punishments, imprisonment, irons, and scarcity of victuals, under which burden some died. The consideration whereof has already moved the Company to give the poor men one-third in money of their wages for the time we question, the other two-thirds they presume when the Company shall have received it from the Dutch. In the meantime the poor men and women are in want, and little more to what they have already received would be as a fair sunshine day after a long and general storm.

1621, April. Note of the business done at Winterton Castor and Lowestoffe by Mr. Geere and Mr. Cooke. At Winterton the tower light-house and the tower repaired. For Castor, the house repaired, the salary advanced to 6l. per annum, the whole is 30l. per annum. Two candles in each to burn. Have had conference with Mr. Brightman, a principal gentleman of all that place, to be the overseer of the lighthouse at Castor, but have made no agreement. The buoys at Castor lie well, we sounded the channel and found them so.

We likewise sounded the channel at Stamport, and laid a buoy upon the middle ground there. . . . The houses there we likewise repaired. (Original signatures of Robert Kitchen, T. Best, and 5 others.)

1621, June 4. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to Mr. Cooke, collector of the duties for the lights and dues of Castor and Stamport, in the port of Lynne; directing him not to demand or receive from certain ships not taking benefit of the lights and buoys at Castor and Stamport, the duties authorized by the Council letter of 1 April 1613.

Note of a similar letter of the same date to Andrew Barker, collector of the said duties in the port of Hull, and of a similar letter to Leonard Carr, of Newcastle, for the like freedom for the ships and barks of Newcastle.

1621, May 26. From my chamber in the Doctors Commons. Sir Henry Marten to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, directing them to signify that none take on himself to be master or pilot of any ship or vessel to go forth or return into the Thames without a certificate of fitness by the Trinity House, and approbation from the Lord Admiral under the seal of the Court of Admiralty, pursuant to a provision in their charter.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council.—They have received the collection for the 1,000l. per annum, according to the rates presented to the Council, and mentioned in their letter of 7 July 1620 to the Custom House, towards the charge of the ships at sea against the Turkish pirates. But one Ralph Freeman, a merchant of London, who lately farmed the killing of whales in Greenland and on those northern coasts, has set forth 8 ships for the same voyage and refuses to pay the imposition. They pray that the Council will call Freeman so that he may be subject to the rate.

1621, June 13. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to Leonard Carr at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, referring to the sending to the burgesses of Hull and Lynn a copy of the inclosed letter discharging certain ships from duties, as not taking any benefit.

Note of the Act for explaining and enlarging the Act of 8 Eliz., intituled an Act concerning sea marks and mariners.

1621, Aug. 1. A note of the particular losses sustained by John Links of Limehouse, mariner, in several voyages at sea, in 1563 coming from Newfoundland, in the last of Queen Elizabeth, later by Dunkirkers, in 1610 cheated by Muley Zedag, a king in Barbary, in 1613 his ship bound for Barbary damaged by storms, in November last taken prisoner by a French man of war.—Certificate that the above is true, his losses amount to 795l., and he and his old wife are in distress.

1621, Sept. 8. Letter by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to . . . That Mr. Browne has extended his wharf at the river further than allowed by the license given. It is some inconvenience to the river, but not hurtful to the bridge or the city.

1621, Sept. 12. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, of the losses of Robert Ewens, late of Limehouse, mariner, deceased.

1621, Sept. 15. The like of Henry Hammon, late of Gravesend, mariner, a captive of the Turks.

1619, June 24. Orders made by the King's express commandment unto the Lords of the Privy Council for the preventing the unlawful transportation of iron ordnance, &c., &c.

1621, Nov. 16. The Commissioners of the Navy to the Trinity House. Asking them to consider and confer with Mr. Burrell on the plott of a baracado for the Medway, designed by him.

1621, Nov. 21. Report of the Trinity House thereon. 1621, Nov. 28. The Commissioners of the Navy to the Trinity House, asking them to examine and report on a ship called the Mayflower, built by John Dove, of Lieth in Scotland, offered for sale as a man of war to the King.

1621, Nov. 28. Answer to the above, not in favour of the ship, she is 90 feet long and of some 220 tons.

1621, Dec. 13. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council, giving notice that there is bought in Holland or so pretended and brought into the Thames 8 or 10 Dutch ships and more daily coming of 200 tons apiece or thereabouts, fathered partly by denizens and partly by free nations, and by them employed for Spain. Not one brings from Holland one piece of ordnance, but no sooner here arrived than they send a certificate to the Trinity House that they have bought and are possessed of such ships now in

CORPORATION
OF
THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

CORPORATION
OF
THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

the Thames or some other port, and praying a certificate to the Lord Admiral, some of them for 20 pieces of ordnance, some for 16, some for more, some for less. The Trinity House pray for an order forbidding them to grant certificates for ordnance to those ships.

1621, Dec. 29. Certificate by the Master, &c., of the Trinity House, of the losses of Richard Knott, of the precinct of St. Katherine, near the Tower of London, mariner, at sea and by Turkish pirates.

1621, Jan^r. 21. Certificate by the same of the losses and death of Henry Young, of Poplar, mariner, in defending his ship against a Turkish pirate of 120 guns in the Straights. (He was master and part owner of the Delight, of London).

1621, Jan^r. 30. Certificate by the same of the losses and deaths of Roger Treago and John Bucknell, master, mate, and boatswain of the Delight.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to the Marquis of Buckingham, Lord High Admiral.—The King, at the Marquis's request, reduced the charge on the house from 2,000*l.* per annum to 1,000*l.* for two years, for the expedition against the pirates of Argiers. They have paid in the first 1,000*l.* although they have not collected the same by 600*l.* Notwithstanding, the Council would now put on them the 2,000*l.* per annum for two years.—They pray his help in the matter.

1622, June 8. Certificate of the services, losses, and sufferings of Nicholas Raulledge, a mariner.

1622, June 22. Petition by Robert Sparrow to the Bishop of Lincoln, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, to direct the Masters of the Trinity House or some others, to call Robert Hart, part owner of the ship Lionel, of Harwich, of which the petitioner owns one eighth, to give an account of the profit made by the said ship.

1622, July 13. Reference of the above to the Trinity House, by the Lord Keeper.

1623, last of April. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House of the sufferings of Thomas Haines of Bristol, mariner, taken prisoner by and captive to the Turks.

1622, Feb. 22. Council Order, joining Sir H. Marten with the Trinity House as referees in the matter of the complaints by mariners against the East India Company.

1623, May 9. Letter by Sir H. Martyn (Marten) and four of the Trinity House to the Council thereon.

1623, May 14. Certificate of the losses and sufferings of Richard Noble and Matthew Mieks, captured in fight by Turkish pirates, and captives in Algiers.

1623, June 23. The Earl of Middlesex to the Trinity House, telling them to send a list of certificates of all iron ordnance which they shall have given warrant for within the last six months to Dutch ships, with the names of the ships and the masters or owners, and the number and sorts of ordnance to each, and the dates of the certificates.

1623, June 24. The Trinity House reply to the Lord High Admiral. They send a note of all certificates granted by their house for iron ordnance for Flemish bottoms, for the 29th of September last. They have refused a certificate for a large Holland ship of 400 tons, under circumstances which they detail, until further information had.

1623, June 25. The Earl of Middlesex to the Trinity House.—He has read their certificate, and tells them not to give a certificate to the Dutch ship, as he intends to bring the matter before the Privy Council.

1623, June 25. Council Order to the Trinity House; directing them not to suffer any Dutch or other strange bottom, on pretence that it belongs to a denizen or other natural subject of this kingdom, to be furnished with iron ordnance without special warrant from the Council Board.

1623, Nov. 21. Council Order. The King granted a patent to Sir John Killigrew and Robert Thynne, Esq., to erect a light-house near the Lizard, with power to levy ½d. per ton on ships trading that way. There has been a petition against it, as of no use but as inconvenient and burdensome. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House are to inform themselves how accessory the said light may be for securing the ships trading in those parts, and what the ½d. per ton amounts to per annum, and certify in writing to the Board.

1623, December. Report of the Trinity House thereon. They find the light needless and give their reasons. They think the collection is about 400*l.* a year, and a great burden to poor seamen.

1620, Dec. 17. Certificate of John Duffe, of St. Mary's London, a Scotchman, master and owner of the Angel, of London, being wrecked at the isle of Scilly, going from Ireland to Rochester.

1623, January 7. Certificate of the capture by Turkish pirates and captivity at Saltee in Barbary, of Peter Mathew, of London, merchant.

1623, Feb. 25. Certificate of the losses and sufferings of Nicholas Rawledge. (See above, 8 June 1622, and 26 June 1616).

1623, March 6. Certificate of the bearer, Thomas Melvin, a Scotchman, being one of nine Christians, captives of the Turks, who, in slavery to the Turks, captured from 29 Turks the vessel on which they were on board, and brought her into Weymouth.

1624, March 27. Certificate of the losses and captivity in Algiers of John Brown, of Wapping, mariner.

1624, April 17. Certificate of the captivity in Tunis, of John Dodson, of Ratcliffe, mariner, taken by Turkish pirates; 160*l.* ransom is asked.

1624, April 17. Certificate of the losses and sufferings of Richard Morris, of Wapping, mariner, taken by Turkish rovers, and a captive in Algiers; 200*l.* ransom is asked.

s.d. Certificate of the losses and sufferings of Henry Short, of Limehouse, shipwright, taken by Turkish pirates, and captive at Algiers.

1624, May 4. Another certificate for Henry Short, rather fuller.

1626, April 12. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House that if the decayed piers and jetties of the harbour and town of Whitby, co. York, were repaired the harbour would be convenient for shipping, and they hope that the suit of Francis Wynn and Richard Hunter, agents for the town, may take effect.

1626, April 8. Certificate to Richard Hooper, of Deal, mariner, he having letters patent to clear the usual roads and harbours for ships between the Isle of Wight and Yarmouth, in Norfolk, of all anchors and cables as have been slipped and lost, that the clearing is not only necessary, but without it H.M. ships and all other ships in those roads will ever be in danger.

1624, Sept. 16. Council Order (imperfect) against custom officers taking excessive fees.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King, against Sir John Meldrom's patent for a light-house at Winterton.

1624, Sept. 8. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Lords of the Council. Report on the fortifications of Sylly for the safety of H.M. ships and subjects within and upon the said island, and to prevent all succour, relief, and possession, which the enemy may have of the said isle, of roads within it. (Under seven heads, 1 page.)

1624, Feb. 1. The same to the Bishop of Lincoln, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. Certificate of the losses at sea of William Bann of Ratcliffe, mariner.

A proposition. (1.) How many mariners and gunners are to be allowed to a merchant ship of 300 tons or thereabouts, carrying 20 or 25 pieces of ordnance, and how many soldiers the same ship may carry over and above the ship's company and victuals for 8 months. (2.) And likewise how many mariners and guns are to be allowed to a Newcastle ship of 220 tons or thereabouts, and 10 pieces of ordnance, and how many soldiers she will carry over and above her ship's company and victuals for 8 months.

Answers. (1.) Seamen and gunners 60, and soldiers 150, and will carry victuals for that number for 8 months, provided there be provision made of syder, vinegar, or wyne for beverage. (2.) Seamen and gunners at least 30, soldiers 100, and will likewise carry victuals for 8 months, provided (as above). It will be very needful that many of the Castle ships that be undersayed may have their yards and sails enlarged to the discretion of purveyors appointed for that purpose.

Questions propounded to the Masters of the Trinity House. (Five questions of a similar nature to the above, with answers).

Petition of 105 merchants to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to make suit to the Duke of Buckingham that the imposition to which they assented in 1617 against the Turkish pirates, but continued for 4 years, may cease.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to the Duke accordingly.

1624, March 15. Letter from . . . to . . . The King has commanded the writer to signify his pleasure to the addressee that he examine the business, and if he find the petition to the King to be true, to give order that the imposition cease and be forborne.

1623, March 12. Buckingham to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House; complaining that they have not made a lease of the ballastage of the Thames to one Lanniere, as they promised.

1623, March 13. Reply to the above. They say that Buckingham agreed that they should be quit of Lanniere, but that Mr. Alfonso should have a lease, but his terms were unreasonable and they have granted it to Mr. Barrell, one of the Commissioners of the Navy, to whom Alfonso sold his interest.

The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Duke of Buckingham. Petition to take into consideration the grievances of seamen and owners of ships by reason of the heavy imposition laid upon them in the lights of Winterton and Dungeness.

The bailiffs and portmen of Ipswich to the King. Petition on behalf of Henry Roundkettle, of Ipswich, whose ship was cast away on the coast of Norway, he being in distress.

The Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to Sir T. Coventry, Keeper of the Great Seal. Certificate of the loss by Henry Roundkettle of his ship the Christian Mary and his adventure to the amount of 120*l*.; he is impoverished, cast into prison for debt, and with his wife and children likely to perish.

1626, April 14. Opinion of the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, regarding the convoy for the fishermen of the North coast.

Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to Sir T. Coventry, Kt., Keeper of the Great Seal, that Robert Ensome, of Ratcliffe, mariner, master of the Unicorn, of London, was on his return from the Canary Isles, taken by Sally men-of-war, twelve leagues off Silly, and taken prisoner to Sally, and sold as a slave and ill treated; his loss was 250*l*.; ransom required, 250*l*.; he has a wife and three children.

1625, January 14. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to . . . According to their order of the 14th instant, they have had the following men before them and set out their wages; 4 men of the St. Andrews, 2 of the St. George, 6 of the St. Elwade, all of Calais; the wages are in gilderns per month;—opinion in what circumstances the payment falls on the owners and in what on the King.

1625, January 18. Another letter to . . . telling what certain Dutch officers of the ship had certified to be the rates of wages of certain ranks of mariners.

1625, January 11. Letter to . . . recommending increase of pay to seamen in the King's ships, and giving reasons.

A demonstration of the difference between His Majesty's pay for 200 men, and the present proportion set down by the Trinity House; and may serve for a greater or lesser ship.—A proportion for the convey of the Castle trade, with the charge thereof, &c.—Ten Newcastle ships of 350 or 400 tons, in tons and tonnage and 14, 15, or 16 pieces of ordnance in each ship, 60 men in each ship, for 8 months; in all 15,280*l*.; and other calculations.

The Trinity House to the Duke of Buckingham. Petition for leave to prefer a Bill to Parliament for the increase of pay to men in the King's ships.

The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the House of Commons. Petition for the increase of seamen's pay. The pay, continued according to ancient allowance, is 4*d*. per day.

The wages for the ships royal for 400 men, proportioned from the medium of 20*s*. per man a month. (A list of the characters and their pay.)

The wages of the second rank of ships for 250 men, proportioned from the medium of 20*s*. per man a month. (Similar to the above.)

The wages of the 3d rank of ships for 200 men; of the 4th rank of ships for 160 men; of the 5th rank of ships for 120 men; of the 6th rank of ships for 70 men; proportioned for the medium of 20*s*. per man a month.

1625, January 3. Certificate by Thomas Gataker, parson of Redriffe, and others, that Michael Fletcher, husband to the bearer, was on his return from New England, not many leagues from Plymouth, taken prisoner by a Sally man-of-war, and taken to Sally and kept prisoner. He has lost all; the ransom demanded is 300*l*.

1625, March 15. Similar certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to Sir Thomas Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal.

Thomas Askew to Sir Thomas Coventry. He petitions that, having sustained losses at sea, he (Sir Thomas) will get him the King's patent to gather benevolences in the counties of Hert, Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk, and Middlesex, and the cities of London and Norwich Certificate by the Mayor and Jurats of Faversham of the condition and losses of Thomas Askew; in July 1625, being bound to Newcastle in his ship, he was taken by a sloop or frigate of Blankenburch, and carried there and kept in captivity 5 months, notwithstanding the exertions of Mr. Trumbull, H.M. agent at Brussels; his total losses are 365*l*.

1626, May. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House about Askew.

1626, May 2. Certificate by the same of the shipwreck and losses of William Bunn, of Ratcliffe.

1622, Oct. 23. Buckingham to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House. Directions for their granting or refusing certificates for iron ordnance.

Temp. Elizabeth. Petition by masters and owners (about 120) of ships of London, Ipswich, Alborough, Yarmouth, Lynne, Sandwich, and other the coast towns of this lands to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to make representation to Lord Buckhurst, Lord High Treasurer, to prevent English merchants from exporting goods in strangers' bottoms.

The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council. Petition, giving information of six Dutch ships come out of Yarmouth harbour road, as they suppose to take load of herrings contrary to law.

The same to the same. Praying leave to erect light-houses at Winterton, and to gather the allowance and taxation offered by the masters and owners of ships.

1606, January 5. Council letter to the customers and other officers of the ports of Newcastle, Yarmouth, Hull, Boston, and Lynn, to levy the 12*d*. for every 100 tons of ships making from those ports, and pay it to the Trinity House for the support of the buoys and beacons between Leistoffe and Winterton, that sum having been voluntarily offered; if any refuse, they are to send up their names.

1607, last of May. An open placard from the Privy Council to the same effect as the above.

1609, last of May. The Privy Council to the customers and others, H.M. officers of the ports of London and Newcastle, and all other ports between London and Newcastle, with their members.—Beacons, buoys, and lights are wanted at Stampot, near Leistoffe. It has been agreed by the chief owners and masters of the North ports and the Trinity House that every ship, hoy, and bark from Newcastle shall pay 4*d*. for every voyage, and that all ships and barques making their voyage from Hull, Boston, and other North ports, as well from port to port as in crossing the seas, shall pay in like manner. Before they give cocket or other discharge, they are to collect and receive the said contributions and pay them to the Masters of the Trinity House.

1622, January 14. Council letter to the officers and farmers of Customs. Whereas the Master, &c. of the Trinity House called a meeting of masters and owners of ships that are seamen, who agreed for the expedition against the pirates of Algiers and Tunis, that all ships trading with the Straights or going to the Eastward of Cape de Gale (Gall?) should pay 18*d*. per ton, and those trading to the Straights and going to the Westward of the said Cape, and all ships trading with any of the ports of Spain from the Straights mouth to the North Cape of Spain, viz., Cape Finisterre or to the islands of Barbary, Gynny, Bynny, &c., 8*d*. per ton; and all ships trading for Biscay, France, Flanders, Holland, Hamburgh, Danske, Melvin, Norway, Russia, Groyne-land, and all other northern parts (crossing the seas), 3*d*. per ton; to be paid every voyage until 2,000*l*. were raised; the Council direct the collections to be continued until further order.

1625, March 20. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to . . .; exempting certain ships of Hull from supporting the light-houses and buoys at Castor and Stampot.

1625, March 20. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council.—They find there 12, 13, or 1400 Englishmen captives in Sally, all or greatest part taken within 20 or 30 miles of Dartmouth, Plymouth, and Falmouth. When the winter takes, then the Sally men go to Flushing and Holland, where having supplied all wants and the winter past they go to sea again. If they want men in these places with the Dutch they are furnished. The writers complain that the coast is not guarded by some handsome ships to defend the King's subject, and that our friends are not restrained from arming and aiding the infidels.

1626, Oct. 15. Authority by the Trinity House to Mr. J. Wilde to take up the surrender to the House of the lease for Castor lights.

1626, Nov. 18. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council. Since the 20th of April last 800 tons or thereabouts have been shipped in strangers' bottoms. They pray that order may be taken that merchants trading to France, Flushing, Midd. Holland, &c. may freight and employ only our native ships.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the House of Commons. They are grieved at the aspersion cast on them that they allowed by certificate or otherwise those 100 carriages now gone for Spain.

Certificate of the losses and captivity in Algiers of William Kempster, of Alborowe, co. Suffolk.

1631, Sept. 24. Certificate of the captivity in Argier of Capt. William Hockering.

1632, June. Certificate of the captivity in Argier of John Croft, of Ratcliffe, mariner.

1633, May 10. Certificate of the losses and captivity in Argier of W. Kempster, of Abrow, co. Suffolk, mariner.

Statement of Kempster's losses: 640*l.* in all.

1639, May 6. Inspecimus by the Earl of Northumberland of the oaths of Timothy Thornhill and William Renshell regarding the purchase and ownership of a ship now called the Mary and Barbara of London.

A folio volume, labelled "Court Minutes," but should be "Transactions," 1626-1635.

Letters by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council about shipping matters; about ships for intercepting the Lubeckers in their passages for Spain; to the Trinity House at Dover about pilot's poundage; to and from Sir J. Sackville about wastage. Letters between Sir H. Marten, Judge of the Admiralty, and the Trinity House: the latter give their opinion that the owner of a half of a ship who lets it to the owner of the other half for a voyage, who takes letters of marque and brings in a prize, is entitled to a share of the prize.

1627, July 13. Council Order for payment to the Levant Company by the Trinity House of 550*l.* out of the moneys collected by them for the Algerine pirates expedition. And copy of receipt for it.

Award on a dispute between the mariners and the victuallers of a ship.

The ancient custom in Queen Elizabeth's time concerning the several shares and other duties that do any way appertain to the officers of all men-of-war. The captain has the best piece of ordnance, &c. Pillage.—The mariner's furniture, apparel, chests, and such like is pillage, and the same shared amongst the whole company (the different shares are given). (This is a certificate by the Trinity House; the page is cancelled, but copied fair at p. 206.) Letters between Sir H. Marten and the Trinity House about it.

Letters between the Trinity House and the Trinity House at Dover.

Letters between the Trinity House and Sir Sackville Crowe and Sir William Russell as to the proportion of of coals to be taken in ships to be sent with victuals to the Isle of Rhee.

1627, Nov. 14. The Trinity House reply to an application for a pilot for H.M. ship the Adventure to Goray Gut, on the coast of Holland.

1627, Nov. 28. Letter by John Wolstenholme, William Russell, and William Burrell to the Trinity House, and reply thereto, about the fitness of H.M. ships St. Andrew and Antelope to ride at Bristol, and the fitness of the latter to go to Ireland.

1627, Nov. Reference by the Commissioners [of the Navy] to the Trinity House, and report (adverse) by them on the petition by Mrs. Euphyan Murray for a patent for 31 years for the viewing, surveying, and sealing of sackcloth and pole-davies.

The Trinity House report to the King that the owners and masters of ships trading to Newcastle say they do not desire a royal convoy which the King has asked them to support.

1627, Dec. 20. Shipowners to the Commissioners of the Navy, declining land offered by the King for the pay for the ships hired by him; they are in want of their money; they complain of the loss of shipping.

Ships of three decks are of greatest force and most useful for men-of-war being built in the manner and form following, &c. (14 pp.)

Letter by the Duke of Buckingham directing the Commissioners of the Navy to call Mr. Burrell of the Trinity House, Capt. Pett, and other shipwrights, and consider the proposition, particularly whether it will not be best for service that the lower tier of ordnance lie not above 5 feet above the water.

1627, Jan. 16. Answer of the Trinity House to the proposition of ships of three decks.

1627, January 20. Letter by Robert Heath to the Trinity House.

Reply thereto, telling him they demand of strangers coming into the Thames 7*l.* per ton, but receive not 6*l.* per ton, and demand for their coming in 8*l.* for every foot of water they draw. For authority, they plead their charter.

1627, last of January. Council letter to the Trinity House, telling them to cause all owners of ships to furnish and make ready all such ships as belong to them, that they may be fit for service, if suddenly wanted for defence of the country; and if so employed the owner shall receive such pay and satisfaction as shall content him.

1627, Feb. 5. A survey taken by the Masters of the Trinity House of all ships in the Thames which being prepared are fit for his Majesty's service, with their names, burdens, what ordnance they are capable of, and what number they have at present aboard.—Seven ships belonging to the East India Company, 22 merchant ships, 12 ships ready and bound to sea, 22 Newcastle ships; all carry guns.

1627, Feb. 13. Opinion of the Master, &c. of the Trinity House that when a ship at sea is burned by fire accidentally, the owner must bear the loss of the ship, and the merchants or parties hiring the ship the loss of their goods.

Entries about John Goodladd slandering the Corporation, his imprisonment in the Marshalsea, his confession, and forgiveness.

1627, June 27. Instructions to Walter Cooke and William Ewins to go to Yarmouth, Lostoff, Castor, and Winterton, and take knowledge of the keeping and laying of the lights and buoys, and use their best skill in erecting a new light-house for an upper light in the town of Lostoff.

1628, Aug. 2. At a court, two of the customary tenants of Stepney, for themselves and the other tenants of the manors of Stepney and Hackney, deposit for safe custody an exemplification under the great seal of the Act of 21 Jam. I., intitled, "An Act for Confirmation of the copyhold estates and customs of divers Copyholders of the manors of Stepney and Hackney, according to certain Indentures of Agreement and a decree of the High Court of Chancery made between the lord of the said manors and the Copyholders."

Certificate, in answer to the Admiralty, of the proportions in which the proceeds of the sale of a French prize were to be divided between the two ships which took her.

1628, Aug. 13. Council letter to the Trinity House requiring them to set down a reglement for the Newcastle ships which shall part from hence, and see the same put in execution, so that the ships shall not part either until the convoy which the King has prepared shall be ready, or until they be so strong as to be able to defend themselves.

1628, Oct. 28. Benjamin Cowper, of Yarmouth, to whom the Trinity House had reposed the trust of nominating a man to employ in the keeping of the light-house at Castor, says the man he put in has neglected his duty, and employed an ineffectual deputy; he submits another, Hill, the bearer.

1628, Nov. 8. Reply by the Trinity House to the above. They accept Hill, and have engaged him at 37*l.* a year; he is to live at Castor; in either light-house to have three candles of three to the pound; light all the candles immediately after sunset and continue them burning until fair day.

1628, Nov. 28. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, that the vayles to the officers of a man-of-war, in case they take several prizes in one voyage, are from each ship.

1628, January 9. Award, on a reference from Sir H. Martyn, about average demanded by a master from a merchant for saving goods of the merchant.

Petitions by Miles Croxton to the King, and also to the House of Commons, against the Trinity House, who had forbidden ships to take ballast at his wharf, of which he had a lease.

Agreement for taking care of a buoy at the east end of the Gun Flitt.

1629, last of April. Council letter about the buoy.

Petition to the Trinity House by owners and masters of ships for them to lay a buoy at the east end of the Gun Flitt. (Numerously signed.)

Petition by the Trinity House to the Privy Council. Referring to the last-mentioned petition, they say that they have buoyed the channel, viz. Gouldinore Gutt. The shipowners have voluntarily granted 6*l.* per 100 tons of the burden of their ships trading for Newcastle and the parts adjacent. They pray authority to levy it at the King's custom houses of London and Rochester and elsewhere.

1628, Dec. 15. Letter by the Trinity House to Mr. Cooper about the buoy at the Gunflitt.

1628, Dec. 19. Cooper's answer.

Another letter by the Trinity House to Cooper.

1628, Dec. 15. Letter by the Trinity House to Ipswich about it.

1628, Dec. 21. Letter from Richard Fisher at Ipswich to the Trinity House about it.

1628, Dec. 29. Letter by the Trinity House to Ipswich. Other letters about it. And letters from the Trinity House at Kingston-upon-Hull, and the Trinity House at Newcastle, about it.—Letter from the Trinity House to Harwich, and reply.—Letter to the Port Towns by the Lords.

Petition by the Trinity House to the Privy Council for authority to collect the 6d. per 100 tons and 6d. for every 50 chalders of coals.

1629, April 30. Letter by the Lord Mayor to the Privy Council, sending a certificate by a committee of aldermen about the tax.

s. d. Certificate by the aldermen, favourable.

1628, January 8. Seven letters from Ipswich.

1628, January 10. Letter from the Mayor of Harwich. Letters from the Trinity House of Hull to the Mayor of Hull and the bailiffs of Yarmouth about the tax.

5 Car. 1., May 12. Grant to Capt. Thomas Porter of the 50l. per annum usually paid by the Trinity House as holders of the office of lastage and ballastage of ships in the Thames to the Lord High Admiral.

Agreement by the Trinity House to pay it to Capt. Porter.

1629, June 11. Charterhouse. Sir Kenselin Digby to the Trinity House, asking their opinion and decision as to the shares of men and himself of prizes taken in his voyage.

1626, June 27. Reply to the above.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King, about Miles Croxton's interference with their office of lastage and ballastage.

1629, July 3. The King refers the petition to the Lord Privy Seal, the Lord High Chamberlain of England, and the Earl of Dorset, Lord Chamberlain to the Queen.

1629, Oct. 28. Order of Council for officers and farmers of his Majesty's Customs, and the Masters of the Trinity House, to make certificate of what is to be done in the matter of the owners of small barques and vessels accustomed to follow the trade of Calais, Rouen, and Dieppe, thrown out of employ since the peace with France by reason of French vessels carrying all the merchants goods to and from those places.

1632, January 25. Star Chamber. Order for Miles Croxton, tenant to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, to pay the arrears of his rent of 20 marks, and to pay the current rents as they fall due.

1629, January 13. Council Order about Croxton's tenancy of a wharf and land out of which ballast was digged.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King to direct the Lord Keeper to stay the patent to John Gilbert and Abraham Johnson of the right of ballasting.

1629, January 29. The King refers the petition to the Lord Keeper.

1629, Feb. 14. Sir R. Heath to the Trinity House, asking their opinion if a ballast shore intended to be made at South Shields will be hurtful to trade or the river there.

1629, Feb. 20. Reply to the above, favourable.

1629, Feb. 26 and 27. Letters to and by the Trinity House about a payment for the wafage of colliers.

1622, May 6. Council Order that the Trinity House shall pay 2,000l. per annum for the undertaking against pirates.

1630, April 7. The Trinity House appoint Morgan Reade to be Consul at Leghorn for English mariners, seamen, and ships, and pray the Grand Duke of Florence to accept him.

1630, April 8. William Burrell and Henry Bowers to the Trinity House. They hold of the Trinity House the office of ballasting at Greenwich, Woolwich, and Erith; the lease of the wharf and lands at Greenwich is expired. They ask the Trinity House to treat with the Earl of Arundel for a new lease, not to exceed 50l. per annum, and bind themselves to take it.

Questions to the Trinity House whether merchants who sent pilchards for sale by a ship, but which sale was spoiled by reason of the ship taking a prize, are liable to pay freight or have any share of the prize.

The Trinity House reply to the above that the merchants are to pay the freight and have one-third of the reprisal goods.

1630, April 29. Estimate by the Trinity House for six ships of 240 or 250 tons each ship or thereabouts, furnished with munition and ordnance, for the guard and convoy of the Newcastle trade.

1629, Feb. 4. Leghorn. Morgan Reade to [the Trinity House], asking that he may be made Consul at Leghorn.

Certificate by several that M. Reade is a fit person.

1630, April 21. King Charles I. to the Grand Duke of Florence, (Latin) recommending Morgan Reade who has been appointed Consul.

1630, July. [The Trinity House] to Mr. Pringell asking him to superintend the building of a sea-mark upon Kingsdown for the better leading through the channel of the Gulle.

27 Hen 8. c. 18., An Act for the preservation of the river Thames.

Petition to Lord Vere, Baron of Tilbury, and Master of H.M. Ordnance by John Brown, founder of H.M. sea ordnance and shot, praying that the restraint upon supplying drakes to his Majesty's subjects may be removed.

1630, Nov. 6. Reference by Lord Vere, of the above petition, to the Trinity House, and asking them to give their reasons.

1630, Nov. 25. Reasons by the Trinity House in favour of supplying drakes to the subject.

Petition by the Trinity House to Richard Lord Weston, Lord High Treasurer of England. Sir Edward Hayward, 16 years since, had a patent to erect a light-house or beacon on Dungenesse, and was authorized to take 1d. per ton on ships going outward, and 1d. per ton on ships coming homeward, half to be paid by the owners and half by the merchants. But Mr. Lamplewe, who received the allowance for keeping the lighthouse, procured letters from the late King whereby the petitioners have been forced, from the first collection, to pay the whole. They pray an examination of the matter.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King against John Gilbert and Abraham Johnson, about lastage and ballastage.

1631, April 16. Reference thereof to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

Petition by Edmund Needham and David Ramsey to be examined on their experience for scouring and cleansing the Thames.

1630, January 23. Reference thereof to the Lords of the Council.

Statement by Needham and Ramsey about it.

1631, June 1. Reference thereof to the Trinity House.

1631, June 18. Report by the Trinity House against it, as absurd and ridiculous.

Petition by Francis Wadloe, of London, merchant, to the Lords and others of H.M. Privy Council, commissioners for regulating the jurisdiction of H.M. Courts, ecclesiastical and civil, desiring a reference to the Trinity House in a lawsuit.

1631, Aug. 3. Reference thereof to the Trinity House.

1631, Nov. 19. Report by the Trinity House thereon.

1631, Dec. 7. The Trinity House appoint Signor Fra. Massola, a Genoese, to be consul at Genoa, in the business of mariners, seamen, and ships; his fees to be two ducats of every ship, be it great or small, and no more. They pray the State of Genoa to accept him.

1631, March 26. Leghorn. Petition by 12 merchants and masters of ships that Massola may be appointed consul.

1630, Dec. 10. King Charles I. to the State of Genoa, (Latin), notifying Massola's appointment and recommending him.

A proportion for the full and complete manning of your Majesty's navy royal which we who have underwritten our names do humbly propose and submit to your Majesty. (3 pp. of tables.)

1632, June 13. Report by the Trinity House that the making of a ballast shore at South Shields, which is six miles this side of Newcastle, will be convenient.

1632, Aug. 25. The Trinity House to Sir John Coke, Kt., H.M. Chief Secretary of State, asking that Massola may be confirmed in the consulship at Genoa.

1632, Sept. 19. On petition presented by those who mutinied in the ship Mary, and did set their hands in a mutinous manner to a circle by them drawn for their not proceeding in a voyage from Gored to Tassell in Holland; they order that all who set their hands to the circle shall pay out of their wages a proportionable part of all such charges as shall accrue upon one and the principal minteeer that was sent for up out of the ship and sent to the Marshalsea.

Report on two knys built in dry dock at Deptford and Woolwich.

1632, January 10. Report by the Deputy Master and three others of the Trinity House on the said ships.

To the King and his honourable Council in his Highness's Court of Requests:—Certificate by the Deputy Master and three others of the Trinity House on a reference to them in a suit between Elias Henderson, plaintiff, and William Jones, defendant, growing upon the payments and disbursements for building the ship Mary and John, of London.

1632, Feb. 23. The Trinity House to the Earl of Pembroke; about fishing.

1632, March 9. The Trinity House to Mr. Harwood, Mayor of Poole; advising him to give something towards money wanted by Peter Talbot for the release of his brother, a captive in Argier.

1633, Sept. 7. Letter to the Mayor and Aldermen of Poole, about a letter for certain women of Poole, whose husbands are in captivity.

1632, Dec. 6. Letter about the ballast wharf at Greenwich.

1633, March 30. Report by the Trinity House on the proposition whether the building of houses on the bridge be good or evil, convenient or inconvenient to the river Thames.—Adverse; the soil of all the houses is thrown into the river. They notice the diminution of the depth of water in the Pool.

1633, March 30. Statement by the Trinity House of "certain passages of divers captains of the Hollanders in dishonour of the King and abuse of the subject." Instances in 1614, 1617, and 1618 of the Dutch making our ships strike the flag.

1633, May 22. The Trinity House to Mr. Secretary Coke; about the ballast wharf at South Shields.

1633, July 13. Award by some of the Trinity House referees in the suit of Henderson v. Jones.

Ken. Edisbury, Den. Flemynge, and Phyeas Pett, to the Trinity House; asking them to send three of their body to help view the two King's ships building at Woolwich and Deptford.

1633, Aug. 3. Report on the two ships.

Negropont, aboard a galley. Thomas Spaight, a captive, to . . . gives an account of his capture, and prays help.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King on behalf of Richard Harris, William Wyld, and 70 Englishmen taken by the Turks, with the loss of the two ships the Hector and William and Ralph of London.

1633, Oct. 5. The Trinity House to Sir John Wostenholme. Letter touching Lucksladt fort.

Particulars appertaining to the office of ballastage.

The Trinity House to Sir Henry Martine (Marten?), on a reference to them of the differences of account between John Bennet, late master of the ship Grace, of London, and Edward Beane and others, part owners of the said ship.

Certificate by the Trinity House as to the way in which a ship and the goods in her are liable to average.

1633, Dec. 12. The Trinity House to Dr. Keene; about loads money or the pilot's salary, or wages for piloting. The loads money to a pilot to carry a ship from the port of London to the Downs, of a small ship, 40s.; a bigger, one, 5*l*.; if one of the biggest ships, 5*l*.

Petition by the Trinity House to the Lords Commissioners for the Admiralty; by reason of the Attorney-General having exhibited a Quo Warranto against them in respect of the office of lastage and ballastage of the Thames.

1633, Feb. 22. Council Order to the Attorney-General to stay proceedings until further order.

The Trinity House to the Commissioners of the Admiralty. Petition against Humphry Street interfering with their office of lastage and ballastage.

1633, Dec. 19. The King's Commission under the Great Seal to Sir John Wentworth to view the channels not far above the haven belonging to the towns of Dunwich, Southwold, and Walberswick, co. Suffolk, alleged to be damaged by Sir John Douse's operations.

1633, January 17. Return to the Commission.

1633, March 8. The Trinity House to the officers of the navy; about mildew in sails, and the unfitness of buckt cloth for sails.

1604, March 4. Note of the headlands of England as they bear one from another, agreeing with the platt of the description of the country with their several distances, as followeth. And certificate that the King's chambers, havens, or ports, on all the sea coasts which are in a straight line drawn from one headland to the next headland throughout the realm of England; and refer to the schedule above. Signed by 13 persons who were called before Sir Julius Caesar, Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, and there impanelled and sworn upon a jury.

1633, January 24. Report on H.M. two ships now built in dry dock at Deptford and Woolwich.

Petition to the Trinity House that Sir Philip Barnardo may be appointed consul at Genoa.

1634, April 23. The Trinity House appoint Sir Philip Barnardy to be consul at Genoa, and pray the State of Genoa to accept him.

Council letter referring to the Trinity House the petition of Capt. Porter and Capt. Hawkeridge.

Petition by Porter and Hawkeridge that no stranger shall be permitted to enter in or out without a pilot, and that the petitioners may have a patent to appoint all pilots for England, Wales, and Ireland, in all ports and havens, the Thames excepted, &c.

1633, Feb. 12. The King refers the petition to the Commissioners of the Admiralty.

1634, April 26. Report, in obedience to an order of the 29th of March, that the granting of a patent is not fit.

1634, April 29. Case of two Irish merchants to the Trinity House, as to how certain freight is to be charged.

1634, May 24. The Trinity House to the Loras of the Council; approving the making a quay and a dry dock for building, repairing, and ballasting ships at Dunham Bridge, near Ipswich.

1634, June 4. The Trinity House appoint Henry Dyke to be consul at Trappony, in Sicily, and pray the Prince and Viceroy of Sicily to accept him.

1634, June 7. The Trinity House to Sir R. Heath about the ballast in the Tyne.

1634, June 4. The Trinity House to [the Commissioners of the Admiralty]; report on the ship Unicorn, riding at Chatham.

1634, May 30. H. Palmer and Ken. Edisbury to the Trinity House; asking them to send three or more of their body to examine the King's new ships building in the dry dock at Deptford and Woolwich.

1634, June 16. Report on the new ships.

1634, June 1. Council Order about Sir Robert Heath's wharf at South Shields.

Petition to the Lords of the Council about watermen on the Thames.

1634, June 8. Reference thereof to the Commissioners for the Admiralty.

1634, June 30. The Lords Commissioners ask the opinion of the Trinity House thereon.

1634, July 9. The Trinity House report on it.

1634, Oct. 25. The Trinity House to David Davison, of Wapping, ropemaker, saying that it is better to spin yard for cordage under cover than in the open air.

1634, Oct. 29. The Trinity House to the Lord Privy Seal; reporting unfavourably on Mr. Needham's machine for scouring and cleansing the Thames.

A project concerning mariners of this kingdom, and concerning the transportation of ordnance (4 pp.); and answer thereto by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House.

1629, June 24. Orders made by the King's command to the Lords of the Council for preventing the unlawful exportation of iron ordnance (3 pp.)

A note of what moneys have been recovered from the duties of Winterton lights in the port of London and the out-ports, from 25 March 1629 to 25 March 1634 (1 p.)

1634, Dec. 3. H. Palmer and Ken. Edinbury to the Trinity House; asking them to come and examine H.M. ships at Deptford, and re-survey them.

1634, Dec. 19. Report on the ships.

Petition to the King by Robert Smith, Esq^r., Receiver General of the Duchy of Cornwall. He offers 1,000 marks yearly for a lease of the soil of the Thames, for ballasting.

1634, Oct. 2. Reference thereof by the King to the Attorney General.

27, Hen. 8. cap. 18. An Act for the preservation of the river of Thames.

Petition by the Trinity House to the King against the petition of the masters of ships, &c. for a light-house on the North or South Foreland, to avoid the danger of the Goodwin Sands.

1634, Feb. Warrant from the Council Board for Sir John Meldrum to set up one or more light-houses there.

Petition to the King, numerous signed, for erection of a light-house at Orfordnesse, co. Suffolk.

1634, Feb. 23. The Trinity House to [the Trinity House of Dover], asking them to give their reasons against Sir John Meldrum's project.

1634, March 2. Reply by the Trinity House of Dover to the above.

Reasons against the erecting of lights on the Forelands. The Trinity House to the Lords of the Council.

1635, May 1. Copy of a letter by the Lords Commissioners to several persons, concerning the decay of the haven of the port of Rye.

1635, May 20. Certificate in pursuance of the last above.

1635, May 18. Council order that no ship coming from sea shall pass Gravesend with her ordnance laden with bullets, nor any go to sea from London with ordnance laden with bullets until she be fallen down as far as Gravesend. All ships going to or from London, at their discharging before His Majesty's Court at Greenwich, shall bend their ordnance towards the other side of the river, and not to that side whereupon his Majesty's palace doth stand.

The names (75) of the masters of ships that were warned in concerning the warrant aforesaid the 30th of May 1635.

1635, June 6. The Trinity House to Sir H. Marten; concerning the laying of chains in the river Thames.

The Trinity House to the Lords of the Council. Certificate concerning the light at Dungeness.

Petition to the King by the Trinity House; that the office of ballasting of ships may be continued in them under the Lord Admiral. Webb, secretary to the Duke of Lennox, and Barnett, secretary to Lord Carlisle, are trying to get a grant of it.

The Trinity House to the Privy Council. Petition against the imposition on Dungeness lights; asking that the toll might be reduced to $\frac{1}{4}$ each way.

1635, Aug. 28. King Charles's Proclamation. Mariners hiring themselves at one time to several masters are to be imprisoned; and forbidding pitch or tar to be heated on any ship in the Thames.

1635, Aug. 28. Exemplification of Order of the High Court of Admiralty against unruly mariners, and their using the cry of "One and all," and subscribing their names about a circle.

1635, Sept. 19. The Trinity House to Mr. Hawker of St. Killock; telling him to be well advised in cutting down his trees, it being a special mark for the preservation of H. M. Navy Royal.

Particulars appertaining to the office of ballasting, which if neglected will produce much hindrance and damage to our navigation; the evil consequences we leave to better judgments. (2 pp.)

1635, Oct. 3. Certificate under the seal of the Trinity House about the dues to be paid by ships for the Dungeness light.

1635, Oct. 9. Privy Council Order approving the said certificate.

Petition to the Privy Council by the Trinity House against the prohibition of the importation of foreign silk and the imposition laid on it other than the present customs.

Petition to the Privy Council by the Trinity House that their sea-marks, whether light-houses, buoys, or beacons, may be free from assessments for the sea army.

1635, January 10. The Lords' answer to the above; that the light-houses shall be free unless any private profit is made thereout.

1635, March 1. Letter by John Totten to Mr. Pringle about the repairs of Acliffe church and steeple.

1635, March 5. Award by the Trinity House in the difference between Capt. Bashell and Capt. Driver.

At the other end of the volume.

1631, January 21. Certificate by the Trinity House that the building a wharf by Peter Leonard at St. Saviour's Mill on the south side of the Thames will be commodious.

1626, Nov. 10. Council Order against the inhabitants of Great Yarmouth shipping herrings in strangers bottoms.

Petition to the Privy Council by the Trinity House that the fishing of the kingdom may be exported only in native shipping.

1630, last of September. Council letter to the Bailiffs and Aldermen of Yarmouth that herrings, pilchards, and Newfoundland fish are to be exported only in English bottoms.

1630, Sept. 29. Council Order to the same effect.

Others letters about the matter.

1631, Oct. 28. Council Order licensing hac vice the people of Great Yarmouth to export 1,000 lasts of herrings in strangers bottoms.

1631, Nov. 4. Council Order that the inhabitants of the Western parts shall have license hac vice to sell their Newfoundland fish and pilchards to strangers, to be carried away by them in their own vessels.

1631, Feb. The Trinity House to the Lord Keeper; asking that they may pay a proportion of a collection made upon briefs, to Thomas Scott, master, and John Bonner, mate of a ship, who, with others, were captives.

1631, March 7. The Trinity House to the Privy Council; about the appropriation of the money raised on the briefs mentioned in the last letter. There were 41 captives.

1631, March 7. The Trinity House to . . . ; about the preservation of trees for sea-marks which the widow of Sir Henry Skelton, who had married Mr. William Brook, and who had the wardship of Sir Henry's heir to whom the trees belonged, seems about to cut.

Brief heads put by Mr. Secretary Cooke, and the rest of the Commissioners for the King's service, to the Trinity House; about the number of ships and men to be employed against Argier.

1632, April 16. Reply by the Trinity House to the above.

Quartermen of 250 men in a ship of 40 great guns,

Quartermen of 136 men on a ship of 40 guns.

1632, Nov. 3. Calculations of the charges of a ship of 250 tons for a voyage of seven months, victualled and manned with 70 men, for fetching home 100 soldiers from the fort of Rebeck in the river of Canada.

1632, March 20. A proportion of shipping fit to be employed against the men-of-war of Argier. — Eight ships of 400 or 500 tons, each ship to have 140 men; annual expense 47,040*l*.

Folio, 17th century. labelled Transactions. 1613–1658 to 1661.

1615, April 17. Proclamation (part of) that no currants, cotton wool, wines of Candy, galls, or other commodities brought from any foreign parts where the Company have been used to trade be landed, except only such as shall be brought in by such as are free of the said Company. Directs the observance of the laws against shipping merchandize in strangers bottoms.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council; about the decay of shipping and employment of strangers shipping.

1613, Oct. 13. Council Order regarding shipping herrings in strangers bottoms at Great Yarmouth.

1614, Oct. 17. Council Order in reference to the last, directing Sir H. Montague and Sir R. Crewe, H. M. sergeants-at-law to consider the matter of the exportation of herrings and report on it.

Another paper about it.

The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council. Beginning of a petition about the restraint of the exportation of herrings from Yarmouth and pilchards from Newfoundland.

1615, Nov. 5. Council Order about the shipping of herrings in strangers bottoms.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Privy Council, about the same matter.

1617, Oct. 19. Council Order about the same matter.

Toleration of the Proclamation for shipping in strangers bottoms, presented unto your Lordships and referred by your Lordships to the consideration of the farmers of the Customs and the Masters of the Trinity House; names of certain places abroad; but in all other places the proclamation is to be observed. (Signed by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants.)

1624, Aug. 7. Petition by divers merchants and owners of shipping of London and other parts of England to the Privy Council; against the exportation of herrings in strangers bottoms.

Yarmouth. Account of what herrings have been exported from Yarmouth both by Englishmen and strangers as well to Lynn as other places, from Michaelmas 1616 to Michaelmas 1624. (1 p.)

1624, Aug. 30. Petition to the Privy Council by Benjamin Cooper and George Hardware who had been appointed to answer for the town of Yarmouth against the petition by London against the shipping herrings in strangers bottoms.

Reasons of the town of Yarmouth for the continuance of the license for the transportation of herrings in strangers bottoms.

1624, Aug. 30. Council Order. The London petitioners are to have a copy of the reasons and to answer the same in writing.

Answer of the Merchants of London and owners of shipping to the reasons of the town of Yarmouth.

Council letter to H. M. officers of the port of Yarmouth; not to permit any entry to be made of herrings in strangers bottoms until further order.

(Many pages of documents about the same matter follow).

1631, Nov. 4. Council Order. License hec vice for the inhabitants of the Western parts using the fishing of Newfoundland to sell their Newfoundland fish and pilchards to strangers to be carried away in their own vessels.

Petition by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Earl of Portland, Lord High Treasurer, against foreign ships taking off the fish.

The same to the Privy Council; on the same business.

The same to Lord Cottingham; on the same business.

1633, Nov. 13. Star Chamber. Order, on the petition of the Masters, &c. of the Trinity House, against exporting herrings, pilchards, and Newfoundland fish and all other native commodities by stranger shipping. They refer the matter to the Lord Privy Seal, the Earl of Dorset, Lord Cottingham, Mr. Treasurer, Mr. Comptroller, Secretary Cooke, and Secretary Windebanke.

The Master &c. of the Trinity House to the Council Board. Report by them of the tonnage and costs of ships employed in fishing.

Sir John Wolstenholme's Narration to the Council Board concerning the fishing.

1649, Aug. 23. Committee of the Navie. On the petition of the Bailiffs, &c. of Great Yarmouth, praying license to transport 600 lasts of herrings in strangers bottoms, it is ordered that a copy be sent to the Trinity House and the Company of Turkey Merchants, and that they present reasons why the desires of the petitioners should not be granted.

The Petition of the bailiffs, &c. of Great Yarmouth.

1649, Sept. 10. Report by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House unfavourable to the petition.

1649, Sept. 12. Order by the Committee of the Navy that no such license shall be granted.

Report by the Turkey Merchants; unfavourable.

1650, Sept. 13. Council of Trade. What convoy is necessary for the Southern and Levant trades, and what commodities are most fit to be exported and imported in English bottoms only, to be taken into consideration Friday, Sept. 20. The Trinity House to have notice and be desired to attend the Council.

1650, Sept. 20. Committee of Trade. The Masters of the Trinity House are desired to draw up something to offer to this Council about what goods are fit to be exported and imported only in English bottoms.

Report thereon by the Committee appointed by Parliament for the affairs of the Trinity House.

1650, Oct. 9. Council of Trade. Order on a petition by the ropemakers.

The petition of the ropemakers to the Trinity House and Committee for the Navy, against the importation of foreign cordage, &c.

Another petition.

1650, Nov. 9. Report of the Trinity House thereon; for the restraint of the importation of cordage but not of twine.

1650, Dec. 6. Robert Honeywood, President pro temp [of the Council of Trade] to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House; asking their opinion as to the best way to ensure the proper making of cordage and spun yarn.

1650, Feb. 11. Reply to the above.

s.d. John Bradshawe, President of the Committee of State to [the Trinity House]; asking them to take on and contract with 50 fit persons for masters, and 250 fit persons for mariners for the 50 boats prepared by order of that Committee for transportation of soldiers into Scotland. Masters at 30s. per month; mariners at 21s. per month.

1650, Feb. 15. Letter by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House to [the Committee of State] saying that very few can be found to engage because the wages are so low.

1650, Feb. 15. E. Popham and R. D. to [the Trinity House]. They are to contract at the lowest they may, and to send a speedy account.

1650, Feb. 17. Trinity House. E. Kelinge to [the Committee of State]; telling them the high rate of wages demanded and asking further instructions.

1650, Feb. 21. J. Bradshawe to "Gentlemen." A copy of the above letter of Feb. 11.; only the wages to masters are said to be 40s.

1650, Feb. 27. Whitehall. The Committee of State for the affairs of Ireland and Scotland to "Gentlemen," directing them to add a shilling or two more to the wages offered to mariners.

1650, January 18. J. Bradshawe, President, to Col. Richard Deane and the rest of the Committee of the Trinity House, telling them that if owners of ships will not engage to freight ships with hay for Leith in the proportion of 30l. per voyage, already agreed on with two ships, the Committee are to impress them.

1650, March 21. J. Bradshaw to the Committee of the Trinity House; asking them to assist William Bassett, who has engaged to deliver a quantity of hay at Leith; with directions to impress the ships of masters or owners who are refractory or unreasonable.

1651, May 8. Henry Vane, Dennis Bond, and Valentine Watson to the Committee of the Trinity House. The Committee of the Council of State for carrying on the affairs of the Admiralty refer to them a petition from Hull for setting up a light-house at the entrance of the river Humber.

Copy of the petition (with 33 signatures) for a light-house on the Spurne.

1651, May 10. The Committee appointed by Parliament for the affairs of the Trinity House to the Wardens and Assistants of the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull, asking their opinion of the above petition.

1651, May 23. Report by the Trinity House of Hull against it.

1651, May 31. Report by the Commissioners of the Admiralty concerning the Spurne.

1651, May 26. At the Council of Trade at Whitehall. Order that the Masters and Brethren of the Trinity House be directed to meet, and give their opinion of the commodiousness and advance it will bring to trade if free ports be opened in the most convenient parts in this land, &c.; also how many of them may be sufficient for the commonwealth, &c.

1651, June 14. Reply to the above. They think it convenient that there be some free ports, and that the goods brought into such ports may be there landed, and the importers be permitted to continue their goods and merchandize therein for the space of 12 months, as is now in practice in the ports of Genoa and Leghorn; that within that time they may sell, paying due custom, or at the expiration of that time freely transport such goods custom free. The ports they think convenient are London, the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Kingston-upon-Hull, Barwick, Dover, Southampton, Plymouth, and Bristol.

1651, Feb. 7. Petition of six captains of ships, masters, and owners, and seamen to the Parliament of England, that there may be a free market every week in the town of Smithwicke, co. Cornwall.

1651, March 11. The Trinity House to . . . Sending, according to order, a list of ships in the river fit for service, with their names, burdens, and guns, with their readiness, being in number 48, and the places where they ride at present. (The largest was a vessel of 48 tons and 30 guns.)

1651, March 18. The same to the same. Sending a return made by masters of ships (names, tonnage, and guns) 84 in number.

1651, March 22. Three persons to the Trinity House. They have been ordered by the Committee of the Navy Office to freight three men-of-war, to carry 100 men each, to be employed in the present intended service; they ask the Trinity House to certify their opinion which three of the ships in the Thames are fited for the State's service.

1651, March 23. Committee of the Council of State for carrying on the Affairs of the Admiralty. Order that ten of the Committee of the Trinity House do attend this Committee to-morrow at 2 p.m., to confer about the merchant ships by them surveyed in the Thames.

1652, Aug. 9. Committee of the Admiralty. Whitehall, B. Whitelocke, Peter Wentworth, and Thomas Scott, to the Justices of the Peace and inhabitants of the Parish of Stebonheath, in the Hamlets of the Tower Liberty, and to the Masters of the Trinity House; asking them to send 300 able seamen to the Sovereign and Antelope now in the river.

1652, Aug. 11. William Purefoy, in the name and by the order of the Council of State appointed by authority of Parliament to the Committee for the Trinity House. Directions to summon by beat of drum all mariners inhabiting or lodging in the several adjacent hamlets of Redrith and hithermost parts of Surrey and impress 300 for the ships Sovereign and Antelope.

1652, Dec. 28. The Trinity House to . . . According to the order of the 25th of December, they have viewed all ships fit for public service, now riding in the Thames, and present an account of their names, burdens, and ordnance, and the quality of the same, with their opinion of their times of fitting out for service. (64 ships, the largest was of 600 tons, and 38 demie and saker guns.)

1653, March 10. The Committee of State to [the Trinity House]. Asking for a list of ships in the Thames fit for the public service.

1653, March 11. John Lisle, President (pro temp.) of the Committee of the Council of State to [the Trinity House]. Asking for further particulars of ships in the Thames.

1652, May 22. Order of the Council of State that the Commissioners of the Navy and the Committee of the Trinity House agree with masters and owners of ships for the hiring of them for the public service.

1652, May 26. Reply to the above, stating what they have done and recommending what should be done for ships and men.

1652, May 24. H. Vane, President of the Council to the Trinity House. They have ordered 30 ships and men to be impressed. Tells the Trinity House to direct the 10 ships in the river ready to sail for Newfoundland to go to the Downs and join the General of the Fleet, in order to do the State service, in which case they shall be satisfied for the time they are employed.

1652, May 26. Reply to the above.

1652, May 25. Rochester. Oliver Cromwell and Dennis Bond to [the Trinity House]. The State's ship Resolution being fitted for the sea, and ready to fall down the river, they desire the T. H. to recommend to the Commissioners of the Navy an able, godly, and well affected mariner to take charge of her as master.

1652, May 25. Navy Office. Robert Thomas to [the Trinity House]. His fellow Commissioner is absent; he writes to say that Cap. Haddock, recommended as master for the Resolution, declined: they are asked to look out for another.

1652, May 26. Reply to the above. They send the names of four fit persons.

1652, May 28. The Navy Office to the Trinity House. The Council of State want two old ships for fire ships; the writers ask if any such are in the river; and tell the T. H. to hasten the five ships already at the Downs to join the Admiral.

1652 June 11. The Council of State to [the Trinity House]; desiring them to treat with the masters and owners of certain ships for the guns and carriages in them, for the use of the merchant ships prest into the service of the State.

1652, June 12. The Committee of the Navy to [the Trinity House], on the subject of the last letter.

1652, Feb. 22. The Committee of the Navy to the Trinity House. The Council of State have required the Marshall of the Admiralty to make proclamation for the ordering of seamen down to the fleet, and that all seamen should repair to the Trinity House on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next; and ask that some of their number will be at the house on those days.

1654, January 12. Treasury Chamber. B. White Locke and 4 others to [the Trinity House] asking their advice about chains being laid in the river Thames for anchorage of ships, for which a petition had been presented to his Highness.

1654, Feb. 3. Trinity House. Reply to the above. Two other papers about it.

1656, January 14. Petition to the Justices of the Peace by the inhabitants of Reculver, Risleth, St. Nicholas-in-Thaet, and Stevemouth, co. Kent, and the owners and occupiers of lands in Chisleth Levell and many others. They state encroachments of the sea near Reculver Church and against the said levell where the sea has since Michaelmas last encroached on the land near six rods, and will doubtless do more harm; and praying a view, report, and remedies.

Some of the Justices of the Peace state that they have informed the Trinity House of the matter.

1658, Sept 11. Trinity House. Certificate reciting letters patent dated, 29 July 1658 granting to Nehemiah Broome, Peter Salmon, and Edward Kinge the only use and advantage of the places where the chains are fixed in the Thames for 21 years; they say they will give the grantees their help and assistance, and they state the rates that ships are to pay.

1659, July 16. Entry of a resolution dated 20 June 1659 about the Government of the Trinity House.

1659, July 30, Aug. 4, Aug. 6. Thirteen orders regarding the House.

1659, Aug. 18. Resolution by the Corporation that a light-house is necessary upon the Hoth, where Capt. Bartlett proposed the erecting one, and another light-house upon the same place for a leading mark over the bay of Dublin.—The payments to be made by the ships for the same, &c.

Report on accounts of money received and divided on account of the House.

1659, Aug. 27. Resolution and orders about the moneys of the House. (Original signatures.)

1659, Sept. 3. Proceedings at a Court.

1659, Sept. 17 and 24. Proceedings on a Bill for the better management of Navigation presented to the Corporation's consideration by the advice of Mr. Garland, Chairman to the Committee of Parliament when the said Bill was depending.

1659, Oct. 8. Draft of Petition to Parliament for settling the Corporation read and considered and ordered to be presented against the next meeting.

1659, Oct. 22, 29, Nov. 5 and 12. Resolution for lending money to the East India Company at 4l. per cent View of the plate of the Corporation. Rating of vessels. Providing gowns for almswomen and gowns-men.

1659, Nov. 19. Licenses to row ordered. Complaint about persons assuming to pilot. Grant of almshouse and pension to a widow. Note that a warrant was given under the hands of all the company present to summon from time to time all English shipmasters who refused to pay their duties at the Custom House.

1659, Nov. 26. Capt. Pasfield being desired to sign the order of 27 August last, he refused, and was desired to withdraw and forbear to sit as member of the Committee until he should conform to the said Order or it should be otherwise ordered by the Committee.

1659, Dec. 3, 10, and 17. House matters.

1659, Dec. 24. Ordered that the masters of 11 ships entered of London last week and coming from Malaga, being taken for strangers and so man'd, may be summoned to attend the Company to show how the said ships became English ships, and why they ought not, being man'd and commanded by strangers, to pay the House the duties of strangers vessels.

1659, January 7. Order about the title of the Petition to Parliament for renewing the Charter; and other matters about the Petition.

1659, January 21 and 28. About the Charter.

1659, Feb. 4. Capt. Pasfield readmitted, on terms.—Ordered that whosoever in Court tyme shall take a pipe of Tobacco, being of the fraternity, shall forfeit 12d. for the use of the poor, which shall be put into the Poores box.

1659, Feb. 18. After this day the clerk is to provide for the Corporation three dishes of good meat and not to exceed unless upon Quarter days or upon special occasions.

1659, March 3. Licence to row on the Thames in a wherry.

1659, March 24. Lord General George Monke was this day chosen an elder brother.

1660, April 7. This day set apart to entertain his Excellency Lord General George Monke with divers others at this House.—General Penn presented himself to be an elder brother of the Corporation.

1660 April 10. Copy of Council order of this date, made on the petition of the Trinity House, directing the Commissioners of Customs to give their assistance in collecting a duty claimed by the petitioners. And a letter from the President of the Council of State about it.

1660, May 12. A note of the ancient accustomed duties belonging to the Trinity House payable by all masters and commanders of ships both English and strangers.

1660, May 19. Choosing brethren. License to row. Letter to be written about the buoy at the Nore.

(36 Eliz. Copy of the surrender by Charles Lord Howard, Lord High Admiral, of the lastage and ballastage of the Thames to the Queen and praying her to grant it to the Trinity House.)

1660, June 9. Sir William Penn was chosen an elder brother.

1660, June 16. At a meeting it was declared that the members of the Company who entered into a bond to obliges claiming under a charter of 12 Car. I., should if the obliges recovered in a suit for the lastage and ballastage of the river, be indemnified by the Company. (Original signatures of Sir William Batten, Sir John Mennes, and 15 others of the Corporation, and seal of the Corporation.)

1660, June 18. Ordered that George Lord General Monke should be Master and Sir William Batten, Deputy Master.

1660, July. Statement by the Trinity House, in answer to the Court of Exchequer Chamber, of money paid by stranger ships casting anchor at London, Falmouth, Plymouth, and Dartmouth, and by English ships casting anchor in certain parts in Turkey, Barbary, Italy, Provence, Spain, Portugal, Biscay, France, Flanders, Zealand, Holland, Hamborough, the Sound, Norway.

Opinion of the Trinity House, addressed to the Committee for encouraging and regulating the manufacture of wool and navigation, as to how the trade and navigation of the kingdom may be advanced.

(1660, Aug. 2.) Council Order about renewing the Charter to the Trinity House.

1660, Aug. 4. Court Minutes about getting the new Charter, &c.

Report by the Trinity House to . . . of what they consider fit to be done for the encouragement of the fishing trade of the nation.

The Trinity House to the King. Petition to confirm the lastage and ballastage to them.

1660, Aug. 30. The King's order thereon. He will have an examination, and on thorough information, determine. Until then nothing is to be done.

1660, Sept. 29. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, that St. Maw's Castle, co. Cornwall, is of special use for the safety of the harbour of Falmouth, and that the fortifying, manning, and command thereof is necessary for his Majesty's service and the trade of that place.

1660, Sept. 29. Award by some of the Trinity House in a dispute between owners of a ship and the mariners thereof as to the wages of the latter.

1660, Oct. 13. Petition by the Trinity House to the Mercers Company, about a house which the Trinity House wanted to rent of the Mercers Company.

1660, Oct. 20. Order for lease to the Trinity House at Newcastle, of the Tees lights and buoys, at 50*l.* per annum.

1660, Oct. 24. Council Order about the lastage and ballastage.

1660, Nov. 16. Upon consideration of the inconvenience of this house in respect of the remoteness of it from the Custom House and water-side, and having procured a letter from the Duke of Albemarle, the Master, it was discussed, and resolved that the house should be settled at or near London, if a convenient house could be had.

1660, January 3. The Duke of Albemarle, appointed Master in the 3*d* Charter, did, according to his Majesty's command by letter, take the oath of supremacy, and the oath taken by former Masters of the Corporation.

1660, Dec. 26. The King to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House. Referring to the new Charter, with additions, he says they are to elect none who have been in the pretended High Court of Justice, or who signed any petition for the trial of his father, or who continued disaffected to the peace of those kingdoms under his government, and refuse the oaths of allegiance and supremacy.

1660, Dec. 29. Lord Sandwich says he is in attendance on the Queen, and appoints a Deputy Warden.

1660, January 5. Court of Assistants. Determination about surveying ballast lighters; appropriation to the poor box of the turns of those elder brethren who do not attend the business of the Corporation; election of elder brethren, &c.

1660, January 3. Court at Whitehall. The King wills that the Trinity House either confer a pension on the petitioner, George Burridge, or tell the King what they think he ought to do for the petitioner, and divers other aged and maimed seamen.

1660, January 5. Answer to the above.

1660, January 12. Court of Assistants. One of the wardens takes the oath of supremacy; elder and younger brethren are elected and take oaths.

1660, January 19. Court of Assistants. A request to be admitted an elder brother; divers persons admitted to be younger brethren; certificate of ability granted to a pilot; perusal of the charter granted to an applicant; English masters of ships who have denied to pay their duties to the Corporation to be summoned to show cause why.

1660, January 26. Court of Assistants. Election of younger brethren, &c.

1660, January 31. The Court days for the future are to be Tuesdays and Saturdays every week. On Tuesdays, at the house in Water Lane, upon Saturdays at Stepney, until further order.

1660, Feb. 2. Brokers are to have notice that they may clear ships every Tuesday, in Water Lane. Election of younger brethren. Capt. George Blake, a brother, offers to farm all the buoys and beacons belonging to the Corporation, not on lease. The Tees buoys and beacons north of Yarmouth to be offered to the Trinity House, of Newcastle, to farm.

1660, Feb. 9. Election of elder brethren. License to row a wherry. Memorandum of the conveyance to the Corporation, of tenements in Newington, co. Surrey, for the use of poor mariners, their widows, and orphans.

1660, Feb. 12. Order to Mr. Harwarr, of Gravesend, not to take duties of vessels going out of Gravesend without their bill, but to stay the vessels until they had a bill from the House.

Copy of a letter from the Trinity House, to the Commissioners of the Custom House. By judicial order of the Lords in Parliament no ships ought to be cleared by his Majesty's officers in the Custom House, without a certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House or their deputy, if the duties belonging to the Ballast Office is paid. They desire the Commissioners to put the order into execution.

A similar letter to Robinson and Harwarr at Gravesend.

1660, Feb. 16. License to row a wherry. Election of younger brethren. Admission of a pilot. Oath taking of pilots who were admitted, one who denied taking the oaths is rased out of the list. Election of an elder brother. Bond given to Sir William Rider for 309*l.* money lent by him to the Corporation. The Tees buoyage and beaconage north of Yarmouth offered to the Master and Brethren of Newcastle, at 250*l.* per annum.

1660, Feb. 19. Bernard Smith is to have the duty that belongs to the House of the small craft that trades with the Port of London, at 5*l.* per annum.

1660, Feb. 23. Names of pilots approved. Election of a younger brother. Admission of a widow to an almshouse at Deptford, with a pension of 5*s.* a month, as her deceased predecessor had.

1660, March 2. The chest with five locks to be carried to the House in Water Lane, and the shipwrights' chest, with the writings therein, to be carried back to Stepney, &c. &c.

1660, March 5. Two of the brethren report on the state of a house called the Green Dragon, near St. George's Church, Blackman Street, that it is out of repair, and that it may be better to convert it into two tenements than fit it for a tavern.

1660, March 9. Election of a younger brother; Samuel Coxon took the oaths of supremacy and allegiance. Capt. Geo. Blake to have a lease of the Tees buoyage and beaconage for 7 years, at 250*l.* per annum; &c.

1660, March 12. Mrs. Harvey is offered a lease of the Green Dragon, and what she has in lease, for 48 years, at 110*l.* per annum. Capt. John Cruso to have a lease of the buoys and beacons only at Great Yarmouth, for 7 years, at 9*l.* per annum. Sir George Cartwright, (Carteret?) Treasurer to the Navy, and Vice-Chamberlain to his Majesty, is admitted an elder brother.

1660, March 16. Copy of a notice set upon the Exchange, Treasury, Navy Office, and Custom House, forbidding commanders and masters of shipping to wear the flag, or Jack of Union, in pursuance of a request by the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral.

1660, March 19. Mrs. Harvey to have the Queen Dragon and the other property she holds for 41 years, at 104*l.* per annum; as earnest she gave 20*l.* to the poor box.

1660, March 23. Reciting the misappropriation of the funds of the Corporation, during the rebellion, from 23 Feb. 1648, for near 12 years, by persons who, without legal authority, took upon themselves the management of the affairs of the Corporation; the Master, Wardens, and Assistants renounce all benefit of the funds so misapplied, and declare that all recovered shall be employed by the Corporation for the relief of poor and decayed mariners, and such charitable uses as the Corporation shall think fit, &c.

1661, March 30. The executors of two persons are refused permission to see the charter and by-laws.

1661, April 2. Sir William Batten is requested to lend, and he lends 150*l.* to the Company, for the carrying on of the ballast business.

1661, April 20. Capt. William Mynors being elected an elder brother, declines because of age and remoteness, and another is elected.

1661, April 27. An Assistant chosen; a younger brother elected. Capt. Edmund Grove, is desired to take care of the junck lately bought, to receive it into the storehouse at Ratcliff, to deliver it out and receive it in from the poor that shall be employed to pick it; for which care and pains he shall receive 12*d.* for every pounds worth.

1661, April 30. Order that pilots who have not taken the oath of supremacy are to attend and take it, or they will not be put in the list of pilots approved by the Corporation.

1661, May 11. Ordered that two barrels of strong beer be laid in at the Trinity House, Deptford Strond, against Trinity Monday.

1661, May 14. Ordered that there be a bedstead set up in the chamber next to the Warden's room in the house in Water Lane, for the use of any of the elder brethren that shall have occasion to lodge in London, he providing furniture for the same.

1661, May 18. Ordered that the clerk go to Mr. Littler the Minister of Deptford, and desire him to preach upon the election day, being Trinity Monday, before the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Brethren of the Corporation.

1661, May 25. Ordered that the warrant to pilots, approved by the Corporation, be put up upon the Exchange, Navy Office, and Custom House. Ordered that all decayed seamen or seamen's widows who are willing to take pains shall have junk delivered unto them to pick: 1*s.* for every cwt. of oakum that is dry delivered, and there shall be allowed 14 lbs. weight for waste of every cwt., and so proportionably.

1661, June 1. Ordered that the Trinity dinner should be kept at Stepney, if the Duke of Albemarle did not order it in Water Lane when he should be invited to it. The clerk was further ordered to advise with Mr. Peirce, the cook, to draw up a bill of fare for 40 persons for that dinner. Ordered that Mr. William Prinn, and Sergeant Maynard, should have timely invitation to dine with the Master and brethren on that day. The clerk was ordered to provide all things usual at Deptford on that day.

1661, June 8. Two questions put. 1. Whether the election of Master should be according to ancient custom, to be chosen out of the two senior brethren, or not. 2. Whether the election of Master for the ensuing year should be successively as they stood in the new Charter. And it was further concluded that Edward, Earl of Sandwich, and Francis, Lord Dacre, be put in election for Master, and Sir John Mennes, and Lawrence Meyer, Esquire, to be the two upper Wardens for the ensuing year, and that Sir William Penn, Col. Thomas Middleton, Capt. Thomas White, and Capt. Daniel Gates, be put in election to choose two nether wardens for the ensuing year.

1661, June 10. Present, the Master Wardens, Deputy Wardens, Assistants, elder brethren and younger brethren (a long list of names). The Earl of Sandwich chosen Master, and took the oath. Sir William Rider to be deputy Master. Sir John Mennes, and Lawrence Meyer upper wardens, and Sir Wm. Penn and Col. Thomas Middleton nether wardens, and their deputy wardens elected.

1661, June 15. Appointment of two to pay the pensioners of Wapping, Shadwell, and St. Katherine's. Do. to see Ratcliffe. Do. to see Redrith, Horsleydown, and Southwark. Do. to see Backwall, and Poplar. One appointed to see the almswomen of Deptford paid.

1661, June 18. To prevent the animosities which have arisen, the five new almswomen of Deptford are to have 10*s.* per month (instead of 5*s.*) like the other seven almswomen.

1661, June 30. Ordered that there be 20 or 30 poor boxes provided to send to sea.

1661, July 2. Ordered that Sir William [Rider], write a copy of the Earl of Nottingham's surrender of the ballast office to the Corporation.

1661, July 6. Sir William Rider tells that he has waited on his Royal Highness for a mitigation of the annual rent of the ballast business, who did graciously condescend, and also that he would procure leave from his Majesty that Serjeant Maynard and Sir Heneage Finch might be counsel for the Corporation. A master of a ship to be summoned at his return to answer his contempt for taking a pilot not approved, after notice given him by one of the Wardens.

1661, July 16. Arbitration and award by the House between two disputants.

1661, July 20. Two brethren ordered to carry in the names of those persons to the Lord Mayor of London, that did take up said contrary to the limitation of this House upon Sundermease Point, near the Isle of Dogs; and also the names of those lighters. Order for instructions to draw up a lease to Geo. Blake of the Tees buoyage and beaconage, and what Mr. J. Proctor of Newcastle farmed of this House. The names of the seven taking sand.

1661, July 27. Court of Assistants. Report to his Royal Highness, Lord High Admiral, in reference to the shipwrights, builders and repairers of ships about the river Thames.

1661, Aug. 3. The Lord Mayor sends to know why the men were arrested for taking sand. A verbal answer is sent.

1661, Aug. 6. Ordered that the bye-laws be fairly wrote.

1661, Aug. 13. Ordered that Mr. Bowman nor any officer employed by him should receive from strangers but 12*d.* for their ballast bill, and of all natives but 6*d.* per bill and no more.

1661, Aug. 17. Election of an elder brother in the room of one deceased. Election of clerk to the Corporation in the room of the deceased clerk.

1661, Aug. 20. Mr. Edward Smith, the cooper, came into court, and brought to the Corporation two bags with money left with him by William, the clerk, and one broken silver gilt cann, which were all delivered to the Wardens custody. His Majesty's letter to the Corporation was read concerning the expelling of Capt. Lawrence Meyer from the Corporation. Ordered that the Court be kept at the house in Water Lane both Tuesdays and Saturdays, until further order.

Copies of 17 letters in 1638 and 1639 from Jo. Best, to several persons giving orders for merchandize.

At the other end of the volume.

Twenty-two pages of letters from Jo. Best to several persons (trade matters).

1661, Aug. 27. Sir William Batten declared the reason why Capt. L. Meyer was by his Majesty's command dismissed the Corporation.

1661, Sept. 7. Sir William Rider, Master, offered to the Board that according to an ancient custom of the Court it was usual for the upper Wardens to keep the books of the Corporation, and the under Wardens the moneys belonging to the same. It was voted and carried that Capt. Nicholas Hurlestone, the elder Warden, do retain into his custody the books of accounts and all other books belonging to the Corporation, and that Capt. John Swanley, the younger Warden do receive and keep in his hands all moneys coming in for the use of the said Corporation, and pay the same out as occasion shall require, and thereof to be accountable.—Reports by the Master and Wardens of the Trinity House to the King upon two references by him to them. 1. A light-house upon the Sporne may be of good use to such ships and vessels that trade to Hamber, Lynn, and the parts adjacent . . . but the generality of the masters and owners of ships who trade between Newcastle and the Thames are not only averse to contribute, but have given reasons why it is not necessary for them; therefore not at all desired by them. 2. They have considered the petition of Capt. Edward Penruddock to the King for license to erect a light-house or light-houses in the Western parts. They certify that a light-house on Dunnose Point is judged inconvenient; formerly there was a light erected in the Western parts upon the Lizard, and continued for some time, was found useless and is since discontinued.

A folio volume labelled "Court Minutes, 1661-1665."

1661, Sept. 21. Court of Assistants, Sir William Rider, Deputy Master.—Duties payable for anchorage, &c. Resolved that the business of the Corporation should be transacted at one place, viz., Stepney.

1661, Sept. 28. Capt. Nicholas Hurlestone presented the Corporation with a ballot-box, having 64 bullets, all silver, for determining the votes of the Court. Petition of some women to be admitted to pensions.

1661, Oct. 5. The King having referred to the Trinity House a petition from owners, masters, and mariners trading to Newcastle, that lights might be erected at Spurn Head, they order that some masters of ships be desired to be at the house next Court day.

1671, Dec. 2. List of fines to be paid by seamen on board ship for swearing, lying on shore without consent of the master, disobedience to orders, lying, absence from prayers, being drunk, abusive when drunk. The fines to be put into a poor box, for the poor at the return of the ship. Questions about ballastage, light-houses, election of brethren, and building a mole at Deptford.

1661. Report to the King on the inutility and inconvenience of a light-house proposed by Capt. Penruddock on Dunnose Point, Isle of Wight.

Report to the Lord Treasurer concerning the Sass (mole?) at Deptford proposed by the Duke of Ormonde and his participants.

1661, Feb. 18. At a Committee for a Bill for regulating the customs, in the Inner Exchequer Chamber, resolved that some of the elder brethren of the Trinity House be sent unto to appear at this Committee and give an opinion whether we have ships enough of our own to drive our own trade, or in case there be not, what time is fit to be allowed for buying or building of them, and whether they do not esteem it advantageous for this nation to forbid buying any foreign built ships after the prefix time.

Answer to the above. The shipping of this kingdom are more than enough for carrying on the present trade thereof. The buying of foreign ships will be disadvantageous.

1661, March 1. A pilot, not licensed, is summoned to answer.

Petition to Parliament by the Trinity House, and merchants, owners, and commanders of ships, against the proposed charge of 3*l.* per ton on shipping, for the repair of Dover harbour. Proceedings thereon. A committee of the House decide that it shall be raised.

Letter to Sir George Oxenden, to accompany the poor box, which he was authorised to break open, and invest in what commodity he thought fit for the most benefit to return to London for the poor.

1661, March 22. Questions to be put to counsel on the proposition that Mr. Porter, a younger brother, should take the lease from the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral, of the ballasting of ships in the Thames for 31 years, in trust for the Corporation.

Petition to the Privy Council by the Trinity House against lightermen riotously interfering in the ballasting. Some of the offenders were taken and kept in prison for a few days.

1662, April 19. Court of Assistants. Report to the Duke of York about and approving the light-houses proposed by Aldridge and Wyat, one upon the rock Skerries, and the other upon the Calf of Man.

Frauds in ballasting ships; short weight given; examiners appointed. The Trinity House had difficulty in finding a way to estimate the tonnage of lighters. License to pilots. License to row. Admission of brethren. Choice of upper wardens and younger wardens for the ensuing year and their deputies.

1662, May 26. Sir John Mennes chosen Master, and Capt. Brian Hamson, deputy-master.

1662, May 21. Order in Council that nothing be done as to the light-house on the Spurne head, until the Trinity House be heard.

1662, May 31. The Trinity House to the Trinity House in Hull; about the light-house on the Spurne head.

1662, June 7. A letter to be sent to the Trinity House of Hull, in reply to them; declaring the right of the Trinity House to erect all sea-marks and lights in the kingdom. And a letter by the clerk accordingly.

1662, June 21. Direction for a letter to Mr. Coventry, secretary to the Duke of York, about the best way of securing the benefit of the articles of Algiers to his Majesty's subjects only.

1662, June 28. Letter to Mr. Coventry, and copy of proposals by the Trinity House.

1662, July 5. Certificate to the King by the Trinity House that a light-house at Milford Haven, proposed by Hugh Butter, would be convenient.

1662, Aug. 2. A purchase by the Trinity House questioned as being in mortmain. Counsel says it is valid by 43 Eliz. cap. 4.

1662, Aug. 9. The Lord High Treasurer asks the Trinity House to estimate the charge of 10 herring busses, which the King is going to build by way of encouragement to his subjects.

1662, Aug. 16. A late Act for the repair of Dover harbour mentioned.

1662, Aug. 23. Reference by the Lord Treasurer about the 10 busses. The Trinity House report that they estimate the cost will be near 9,000*l.*

Opinion and report in relation to settling a price upon Newcastle coals.

1662, Sept. 6. Complaint of the light on Dungeness not being kept up sufficiently.

1662, Sept. 13. Several members were summoned by the Lieutenant of the Tower to be ready at beat of drum to perform land service. The Corporation plead their charter, and present a petition to the King, who says he is willing to maintain the privileges of the Corporation.

1662, Nov. 1. Resolution of the Corporation not to allow any one to present himself for a brother until he be first examined as to his loyalty and as to his ability to command a ship.

1662, Nov. An Assistant wanted in the room of A. Bence, deceased; and being declared it fell successively on the Earl of Sandwich, who, by reason of his great affairs could not attend that service, it was resolved to send some members to him to ask him to nominate some person to serve for his deputy.

1662, January 10. Resolved that Wednesdays shall in future be Court days, and that the Wardens shall meet on Saturdays to clear ships.

1662, January 8. Sir J. Mennes, Master of the Trinity House, to the Commissioners; against the summons for land service made on the tenants in Southwark.

1662, January 28. Certificate of the Trinity House to the Archbishop of Canterbury; showing the necessity of repairing the steeple of Reculver in Kent, in regard it was an ancient sea-mark.

1662, Feb. 3. The proprietors of the light-house at Dungenesse summoned because of neglect of the light. —Appointment of an agent to collect duties at Rochester.

1662, Feb. 11. Depositions in a case referred to the Trinity House between the commander of a ship and a merchant, where the freight was damaged. — Notice fixed on the Exchange denouncing certain persons as unauthorised and unfit to be pilots.

1662, March 4. Bye-laws drawn by Mr. Keeck, Counsellor, were read. The Lord Chief Justice's hand being subscribed, as it was thought two more were required, the Clerk was ordered to attend the Lord Chancellor and Lord Treasurer for subscription.

1663, April 15. The Trinity House appoint persons to examine a ship going to the Mediterranean, to see if she is upwards of 200 tons as required by a late Act.

An account of all the transactions concerning the ballasting of ships in the river Thames, and a relation of the several endeavours to gain the said office for the Corporation, which contest had this late beginning in the year 1660, and ended in the year 1663. (27 pp. It contains Council Orders, Order of Parliament, Petition to the King, the King's letters, &c.

1663, May 6. Orders for fixing the printed Bye-laws at the Custom House, the Exchange, and Billingsgate.

1663, May 20. The Commander of a ship fined 30*s.* for heating tar on a fire aboard ship in the Thames. — The Trinity House apply to the Company of Watermen to suppress those who sell fruit and strong waters from dirty boats not licensed to row on the river.

1663, June 3. Draft of a patent for ballasting examined. Counsellor Keeck is ordered 30*l.* for his pains in the matter of the bye-laws and other business of the Corporation.

1663, June 13. Trinity Monday. Sir William Batten is chosen Master.

1663, June 17. Sir W. Batten appoints Col. Thomas Middleton to be his deputy. Certificate that the Royal Catherine in everything answered the Act of Parliament.

1663, July 15. A younger brother is appointed to survey ships, with a salary of 10*l.* per annum, that sum and 6*s.* 8*d.* to be raised out of every brother's turn that did not attend. — Complaint against a pilot of Deai. — The Corporation free an apprentice to a mariner from his indentures because the Master did not provide him proper teaching.

1663, July 22. In obedience to the King's letter the Trinity House remove one Lawrence Moyer, of Low Layton, co. Essex, from being a Warden and Brother of the Corporation. — Money is ordered for the repair of the light-houses at Caistor. — Reciting that the King had granted to them the sand, gravel, and soil of the Thames for ballasting ships, they appoint two persons to go up and down and see if any took soil or gravel from such places as might be damage to the river.

1663, July 27. Order that notices be fixed in the most public places forbidding persons licensed by the Corporation to row in wherries to work on the Sabbath. — A waterman is made to apologize to the Rulers of Waterman's Hall for abusive language. — Agreement to pay to Mr. Gifford, minister of the parish of St. Dunstan 40*s.* per annum for tithes of the Corporation's share of the house occupied by them.

1663, Aug. 5. Award by the Corporation on a claim for damage to a bale of zederak on a ship.

1663, Aug. 19. Certificate by the Corporation for the keeper of the light-house at Caistor, who had been assessed at 3*l.* 12*s.* to the indigent Cavaliers, that he was only a servant and did not hold an office, and that the profits were vested in them for the relief of poor seamen and their widows.—A pension granted to a mariner.—The clerk's salary increased to 20*l.* per annum.

1663, Sept. 2. Certificate that a ship in every thing answered what was required by the Act, and thereby the owners were free from all payments charged thereby.—Order to buy 20,000 bricks in order to build, next spring, new almshouses at Deptford.

1663, Sept. 16. An additional inspector appointed to see that ballast was not improperly taken.—Sir William Batten makes a report of his view of Dover Harbour, and the defects and the repairs there, and the receipts and expenditure of the Commissioners.

1663, Sept. 30. A long entry about the lease to Bowerman of the ballastage.

1663, Oct. 14. Letter to the keeper of the lights of Lostoff complaining of neglect, and notice of a satisfactory answer by the keeper.—Sir Edward Turner, Speaker of the House of Commons, is admitted a younger brother.—Grant of pensions to mariners and widows of Leigh, co. Essex.—Reports that lights upon Chappell lands would be convenient for those trading to Linn, Boston, and the Creeks, and members belonging to the said ports, if only that shipping which receive the benefit shall maintain the same and the rest of the navigation be free from that burden.

1663, Oct. 21. The Corporation pay 680*l.* for the surrender by the assigns of Mountjoy's patent for the ballasting of ships.

1663, Nov. 11. Complaint of pilots belonging to the Corporation that they could not get that liberty at Deal which the pilots of Deal had at London. Sir William Batten replies that commanders are at liberty to take what licensed pilot they please.

Settlements of disputes between mariners.

1663, Nov. 15. Complaint about neglect of Orfordness lights. They do not belong to the Corporation; but they order Alderman Grove to appear and answer, which he did.

1663, Dec. 16. The Corporation pay 30*s.* to release a mariner from the Marshalsea, and they order payment of 6*d.* to each of the prisons in London, being thirteen in number.—Letter to the King about the Dantzickers' complaint that they were overcharged for ballast.—A ship being lost for want of the light at Caistor being put out, the bailiffs of Yarmouth recommend a man to be keeper of it in place of the other man. The Corporation, however, summon the keeper to appear in London, and then produce against him an affidavit of the light not being put forth on a particular day at one in the morning. They displace him, and appoint another.

1663, January 13. A man is fined 30*s.* instead of 3*l.* for heating tar on board his ship; 10*s.* to the informer, 20*s.* to the poor box. A clerk belonging to the Court of Common Pleas attends with the crier of the said Court, with three rules from the judges, and served three of the brethren with notice to appear at Westminster on the 5th of February next and give their opinion in a cause depending, the business wholly relating to the sea.—Warrant issued to take into custody one who piloted not being licensed.—Order that the Corporation being at peace abroad, for the future the whole Elder Turnes should be paid without any abatement.

1663, Feb. 10. The light-house at Caistor to be repaired at the expense of the Corporation, but the buoy to be left in good condition by the former keeper.

1663, March 9. Mr. Coventry, Secretary to the Duke of York, informed the Corporation that the King represented a shelf near the bridge to be very offensive at low water. The Corporation gave notice to the Master of the Bridge House, and got his consent, and Mr. Bowerman, the lessee of the ballast office, removed it.

Six additions proposed by the Trinity House to the Bill about ships going to the Mediterranean.

1663, March 16. Order for deduction from the Elders Turnes for the poor box.

1663, March 23. Petition to the King against being summoned for land service.

1664, March 30. Report to the Duke of York on the petition of Dame Mary Graves and Daniel Smith to erect lights in the ports of Dublin, Waterford, Cork, Youghal, and Wexford;—that lights will be useful, but they decline to recommend them unless masters, owners, and merchants trading to those parts concur with the petition, and agree to contribute to the maintenance.

1664, April 6. Not any brother is to go into the Wardens' rooms on Court days except on particular business.

1664, April 27. Notice of a legacy of 100*l.* to the Corporation, to pay the interest to the poor of Leay in Essex.

1664, May 18. Appointment of six persons to fill the new almshouses at Deptford.

Report by the Trinity House to the Duke of York, on the petition of Sir John Coryton, Bart., to erect light-houses upon Lizard point, Falmouth, Ram Head, Torbay, Dartmouth, Portland, and the Isle of Wight.—Adverse.—Order that a separate book be kept for the diet of the members, to show that the costs did not fall on the poor's money.

1664, May 25. Certificates of ability to be masters of ships. (They used to be examined before they were certified as fit.)

1664, June 1. 10*l.* ordered towards the repair of Sir John Hawkins's almshouses at Chatham.

1664, June 6. Trinity Monday. Sir Geo. Carterett chosen Master, and Capt. Bryan Harrison his Deputy.

1664, June 16. Capt. Simon Nicholls chosen deputy Master vice Harrison deceased.

1664, Aug. 3. Sir William Penn chosen Assistant vice Capt. B. Harrison deceased.—Further certificate to the Duke of York approving the project of light-houses for Ireland.

1664, Aug. 10. Report of the brethren deputed to survey the works at Dover Harbour.

1664, Sept. 21. Letter by the Trinity House to the Council of Trade that it will be for the advance of the trade and increase of the navigation of this kingdom that the Scotch nation have liberty to bring foreign goods in their own built ships.

1664, Oct. 5. In obedience to the command of the Duke of York the Trinity House send the names of 38 persons fit to be masters in his Majesty's ships in the present expedition.—A letter to the persons named summoning them to appear in Water Lane.—Twenty accepted and their names are given to the ships to which they were appointed.—Three of the brethren were deposed for declining obedience and not appearing.

1664, Oct. 19. A tenant of land in Southwark gets an allowance from his rent, for losses by reason of three overflows of sewers.

1664, Oct. 26. No Court, because all the older brethren were present, according to custom, at the launch of a great ship of the King's.

1664, Nov. 2. Favourable report on project by Sir William Batten, Surveyor of the King's Navy, for erection of lights at Harwich, co. Essex.

The Deputy Master and four others of the Trinity House to the chief officers of H.M. Navy; that there were, fit to serve his Majesty as men-of-war capable of carrying 30 guns and upwards, 8 demiculverins in the lower tier,—47 ships in the Thames and 70 at sea.

1664, Nov. 9. The business of the Corporation obstructed for want of a sufficient number of wardens and assistants to constitute a Court.—Deputy Assistants chosen for the Duke of Albemarle and Sir W. Penn.—Complaint of a brother being summoned for land service; and a letter by the Trinity House to Sir John Robinson about it.

1664, Nov. 23. The Court is moved to take into consideration what by-laws are in force for such elder Brothers as commenced suits at law against their brothers without the consent of the Board, which are to fine them to the poor. Capt. Case was guilty thereof.—Sir William Batten charges Capt. Nicholas Hurlston with a libel against him; but the Duke of Albemarle, on the 14th of December reconciled them.

1664, January 4. Notice of the change of the situation of a buoy near Yarmouth.

1664, January 11. Notice of a by-law that if any elder or younger brother speak scandalous words against an elder brother, for the first fault he was to pay 20*s.* and for the second fault be expelled.

1664, January 18. Sir William Penn complains of a pilot belonging to the Corporation having run a King's ship aground.

1664, March 1. Report by the Trinity House to the Duke of York on a petition by Sir J. Coryton and H. Bruncker to erect lighthouses on Scilly and Eddystone, &c.

1664, March 8. Petition to the Duke of York against the summons for land service.

A similar petition to the King.

1665, March 31. Council Order that the Trinity House shall enjoy their ancient privilege and be exempt from duties and services to be performed in the militia, &c., except commanded by warrant from the Council Board.

1664, March 15. A pilot removed from his office for running his ship aground.

1665, March 29. Letter of thanks to Sir George Oxenden at Surat, for the shifts for the poor sent by

CORPORATION OF
THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

CORPORATION OF
THE TRINITY
HOUSE.

him; and the Trinity House send him a quarter cask of Canary.

1665, April 12. The Trinity House write to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London in answer to a complaint about damage done by lightermen taking ballast.

1665, May 17. Resolved that Dr. Brittain be desired to preach on Trinity Monday.

1665, May 22. Trinity Monday. Capt. Nicholas Houlston is chosen Master.

1665, May 24. The plate is called over and found to answer the inventory. An account of the linen is ordered to be taken.

A true state of the case in reference of the right of the Corporation of the Trinity House to the ballast office. (20 pp.)

A folio volume labelled "Court Minutes, 1665-1667."

1665, May 24. Notices of the plate and linen (see above.) The Court finding that sometimes the claret provided for the meeting did not prove so good as was expected, the Wardens were desired to provide a tierce or two of such claret as might be approved of.

1665, May 31. It was considered that the great globe was out of repair, and did not hang well; ordered that the Wardens should have it new cased and fixed, and provide a celestial globe. The Master acquaints the Court that the Duke of Albemarle has promised to sit, that the Corporation may have his picture, and that the Master and Wardens had some discourse with Mr. Howseman, the painter, who has promised to attend the Duke for a convenient time to accomplish it.

1665, June 14. The Court, considering the increase of the plague in the city of London, and that the monthly concourse of accidental poor might be prejudicial, in regard they were permitted to come into the hall, order that for the future the said poor should not be permitted to come up stairs, but be put in the back yard and paid off there by some appointed for that purpose.

1665, June 22. The King's arms and an awning against the sun ordered for the drawing room, where the Court is now appointed to sit.

1665, July 11. The Court, taking into consideration that the pestilence did much increase in the city of London, and feared would much more, which might cause many brothers to absent themselves, did order that if the weekly bills should amount to 800 of the plague, then the business of the Corporation should be transacted at Deptford.

1665, July 19. The Commissioners of the Navy ask the Trinity House to choose a master for the King's ship the Royal Sovereign, appointed to go to sea. They name two persons. Mr. Cruse, of Yarmouth, reports that many commanders of ships refuse to pay the duties. The Court, having information that the bills of mortality will exceed 800, order the Court at Deptford accordingly. Petition of Robert Theaker read, asking leave to shew his instrument for finding the longitude.

1665, July 26. Deptford Strand. The two persons presented for master to the Royal Sovereign being in public employ and not to be spared, the Trinity House in answer to a further letter, name two other of the younger brethren. Theaker's instrument is examined, and they did not find it useful for navigation, neither did it give the light to the longitude as was pretended. They give 3*l*. to Theaker.

1665, Aug. 3. They recommend Capt. John Brooks as master of the Royal Sovereign. Sir Geo. Carteret said it was the King's pleasure that all public meetings should be put by during the time of the sickness. It was resolved that the meetings should take place once a month.

1665, Aug. 17. Ordered that for the future the Court should meet but once a month.

1665, Sept. 14. Gravesend. In consideration of the great calamity that lieth upon the city of London and adjacent places, it is ordered that larger sums of money be distributed to the poor than formerly; during the time of this extremity or the pleasure of the society, all the pensioners thereto belonging should receive double their former allowance, and the accidental poor of Wapping, Poplar, and Redrith be allowed 5*l*. per month, and Ratcliff 6*l*.

1665, Nov. 15. Capt. Edward Crispo chosen Master on the death of Capt. Hurlstone.

1665, Dec. 13. Order to lay the old by-laws aside. Debates about a new lease of the ballasting to Bowerman. Licenses to row. Almshouses. Money matters.

1665, March 21. Debate on the undesirability of often inviting courtiers to their feasts.

1666, April 25. Alteration and improvement of the hall at Deptford.

1666, May 15. Message from Prince Rupert and the Duke of Albemarle about a new channel proper to be buoyed out.

1666, June 13. Order that the former settled prices be observed by slop sellers.

1666, July 3. The General at sea sent to the Corporation asking them to send able pilots and other seamen to the fleet. The younger brothers were summoned and the Master (Sir William Rider) asked them, but not more than 12 consented.

1666, July 18. It appears that the Corporation pressed men for sea service.

1666, July 25. Relief voted for the English prisoners at Flushing.

1666, Aug. 14. The Master had sent 50*l*. to the prisoners in Holland.

1666, Sept. 21. Stepney. Notice of the house in Water Lane having been burnt on Sunday the 24. of September.

1666, Oct. 24. The landlord of the house in Water Lane demanded rent. The Master says that all rent due at Midsummer shall be paid, but that the rent claimed at Michaelmas could not be paid, the Corporation being dispossessed before the expiration of the quarter, and that in a short time Parliament would settle things of that nature.

1666, Oct. 31. 5*l*. given to buy clothes for a prisoner from Holland who had been released.

1666, Nov. 14. Application for pilots for the fleet.

1666, Nov. 21. Order to present a petition to try to get exempted from the poll tax proposed to be granted to the King.

1666, March 6. Complaints against two men of the ballast office for digging near a wharf, and undermining it, so that it sank so much that 200*l*. would not make it good.

1666, March 20. Bowerman promises amendment for the future.

1667, May 8. Order to execute a deed securing 400*l*. per annum to the Duke of York from the ballast office during his life.

1667, June 3. Trinity Monday. Sir William Penn elected Master.

1667, June 13. Letter from the King that the Company should assemble and consider of a plan to sink ships to hinder the enemies approach. Gallions and Black-wall point are the places chosen. Gallions to be attended to first.

1667, June 16. Sunday. A letter from the King to the Corporation to choose brethren to assist in making such works and batteries as he had ordered to be made at Gravesend, each to take with him four active seamen to help. The Corporation appoint 12 brethren for the service.

1667, June 24. The Corporation appoint brethren to go and superintend the sinking of ships.

1667, June 28. They send some to Gravesend to ease others on duty against the enemy.

1667, July 4. Discussion as to the mode of waying ships sunk in the river.

1667, Aug. 7. It appears that brethren were summoned for the militia notwithstanding their exemption.

Folio labelled "Court Minutes, 1667-1670."

1667, Oct. 16. Court of Assistants.

1667, Nov. 15. Account of proceedings regarding a petition to the House of Commons against the ballastage by some Ipswich men.

1667, Nov. 20. Further account of the same.

(There are other notices of the ballast business and of the ground in Water Lane.)

1667, Feb. 26. The Corporation being summoned before the Council at Whitehall, his Royal Highness asks what was the custom of His Majesty's ships if they found ships of other nations fighting on our coasts; whether they did not endeavour to part them, and assist the weaker part. The Master instanced a passage when King Charles the 1st returned from Spain and found some Dutch men-of-war fighting with Ostenders, which were parted, and though they did importune the King, then prince, for liberty to fight, he would not permit them, but kept some of the commanders on board till the others sailed away.

1667, March 11. About Dover harbour.

1668, April 22. Do.

1668, May 18. Trinity Monday. Col. Thomas Middleton chosen Master.

1668, May 20. It was agreed to meet once in 14 days only. They send a letter to Sir H. Felton, asking him to allow a sea-mark to be put on his land, Lady Batten having offered to bear the expense.

1668, July 22. Lists of lighters printed, with their weights, to prevent frauds in ballasting.

1668, Aug. 5. Notice of an attempt to suppress the dirt boats that went about with strong waters and fruit, and thereby gave opportunities to invite youth to parloin their masters' stores.

1668, {Sept. 30 / Oct. 15}. Debates on preserving the banks of the Thames.

1668, Nov. 4. They resolve to petition the King and the Duke about their right to appoint consuls in the Mediterranean, specially at Leghorn.

1668, Nov. 11. Clutterbuck appointed consul at Leghorn.

1668, Nov. 25. They resolve not to apply to the King, but to appoint Clutterbuck, and send a letter to the Grand Duke.

1668, January 20. Resolved to try the question of liability to the militia at the Company's costs.

1668, Feb. 10. Certificate, in reply to the Judge of the Admiralty, concerning the bounds of the British Sea or the Channel of England, that when any commander shall bring Scilly N.N.W., then they are entered into the Channel of England (to the westward).

1668, March 3. Lights are useful in the ports of Dublin, Waterford, Wexford, and Youghal.

1668, March 10. Statute of 27 Hen. 8. c. 18. to be framed against the taking of ballast to the damage of the river banks.

1669, June 7. Trinity Monday. Capt. William Wilkey chosen Master.

1669, June 23. Thomas Johnson, a Company's pensioner at Deptford, disguised himself in drink, and spoke scandalous words of the Earl of Sandwich; he was deprived, but suit was made on his behalf.

1669, July 14. A letter written to Sir John Robinson about the militia business.

1669, July 21. Another letter to Sir J. Robinson on the subject.—Order to Mr. Clutterbuck, on a voyage to Leghorn, to buy velvet for a cloth to lay over the members when they go to burial, their former one being much decayed and worn.—Mr. Broome asks them to examine the accounts of moneys expended in the repairs of Dover harbour. He presents several articles setting forth frauds and deceipts.—Letter thereon to Mr. Wicken-don, Sub-treasurer of Dover.

1669, Aug. 11. Mr. Merrick has been a benefactor; they endeavoured to get him to dinner last Trinity Monday, but failed. He is a single man, and if the Corporation please him, he may leave them more at his death. They agree to send him a present of wine, but previously to ask Capt. Cooke to dinner, and learn from him what wine he chiefly drinks.—Letter to the Water-men's Company about insolenacies of their watermen.

1669, Aug. 25. Letter from Yarmouth, giving notice of the alteration of the sands there.—The buoy of the Gun fleet, broke away, to be renewed.—Letters about removing the lights at Caistor.

1669, Sept. 8. They agree to send to Mr. Merrick 8 dozen bottles of claret and 4 dozen of canary.

1669, Oct. 27. The Board have notice that Col. Carlos had agreed to sell one half of his revenue.—The Board had notice of the death of Mr. William Prinn, an elder brother.

1669, Nov. 10. Report on the view of a ship which had been damaged, by order from the High Court of Admiralty.

1669, Dec. 1. Order for continuing the building in Water Lane.—Sir Richard Browne chosen an elder brother in the room of Mr. William Prinn.

1670, Feb. 2. A captain of a ship is desired to buy two quarter casks of good canary for the Company, as a present to Sir George Oxenden, in respect of the great love he has shown to the poor of the Corporation, and also to send him six pots with anchovies, olives, and caviare.

1670, Feb. 11. The Earl of Craven is elected an elder brother in the place of the Duke of Albemarle, deceased.

1670, Feb. 23. Order for a petition to the King and Council, to suppress dirt boats and bum boats, which sold strong waters and fruit on the Thames.

1670, March 2. Letter to Sir Geo. Oxenden with the wine, &c.

1670, March 1. Order from a Committee of Parliament to the Trinity House to send an account of their inspection of the repairs of Dover harbour.

1670, March 7. Copy of the report.

1670, March 30. Mr. John Pypes [Pepys] is elected Clerk of the Corporation vice Askew deceased. Mr. Pypes appearing on behalf of his brother the said John Pypes with a letter from his Royal Highness recommending him.

1670, April 13. Mr. John Peps, the clerk, is ordered to attend and take the oath. Mr. Samuel Pepys says his Royal Highness returns thanks for the acceptance of his brother to be clerk.

A folio labelled "Court Minutes, 1670 to 1676."

1670, June 29. The price of ballast. Colliers' pay 9d. per ton; foreigners pay 16d. The French pay no more than other foreigners, but they seldom take any ballast, having commonly small vessels, and carrying such goods that they seldom used ballast.

1670, July 6. An unlicensed pilot arrested, and fined 20*l*.

1670, July 23. Some pilots say that the inhabitants of Sandwich are taking down a steeple which had been an ancient sea-mark.—A letter to the Mayor of Sandwich to tell him to stop the proceeding.

1670, July 27. Order for the house in Water Lane to be finished.

1670, Aug. 24. The Court is to meet thenceforth in Water Lane.

1670, Sept. 14. They hear of the death of Sir W. Penn.

1670, Sept. 21. A brief for the redemption of poor captives at Algiers is read. It is referred to another time.

1670, Sept. 24. The Trinity House at Stepney to be let to Dr. Russell at 30*l*. yearly.

1670, Sept. 28. Dr. Russell is to engage that no conventicle is to be kept in the house.—Order that a petition to the King be drawn up, that seamen, brethren of the house, may not bear arms or pay to the charges of them for their houses.

1670, Oct. 26. Sir Peter Killigrew delivers objections from the inhabitants of Penryn and Truro against building a key at Falmouth.—A chamber to be furnished with hangings, bed, and other necessities at the cost of the Corporation. The buying of the best suit of tapestry was approved of.

1670, Nov. 9. Towards the redemption of captives now at Algiers every elder brother is to allow a turn, and if the next turn do not amount to 3*l*. it is to be made up to 3*l*., and every younger brother is to allow 6*s*. 8*d*. and their next turn is to be stopped for it.

1670, Nov. 16. The Deputy Master acquaints the Board of the payment of 200*l*., towards the redemption of captives at Algiers, to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

1670, Dec. 14. Order to take out warrants to arrest a Cinque port man who refused to pay buoyage and beaconage, and to arrest the master of a Yarmouth vessel not paying for lights which he had had the benefit in passing to and from Holland.—The charge of a dinner at a Court day is not to exceed 5*s*. a piece for every elder brother present, except on extraordinary occasions.

1670, Dec. 21. All stranger ships shall have pilots appointed them.

1670, January 25. Two brethren appear, and are told that it is against the orders of the Corporation for any of the brothers to sue another without referring themselves to the Board, and they refer the matter.

1670, Feb. 22. Some old plate to be changed, and a good tankard to be bought, and some kettles and other necessary utensils for the house.

1671, May 8. Resolved that Capt. Crispe, Deputy Master, and Capt. Crane drink to each other and declare their reconciliation.

1671, June 19. Trinity Monday. Sir Thomas Allen is chosen Master.

1671, Aug. 16. The King's patent of the ballast office is read, dated 18 Aug. 1663.—The buying out of Mountjoy's patent was in October 1663.

1671, Sept. 27. Order for a letter to be written to Sir G. Downing, Secretary to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, to desire him to return the Order of Council which concerns 211*l*. due to the Corporation for loss received in their buoys and beacons during the late war.

1671, Nov. 29. Sir Thomas Allen and several brothers attended his Royal Highness and Lord Arlington, when Mr. S. Pepys, Clerk of the Acts of H.M. Navy, laid open the ancient right of the Corporation of choosing consuls at Livorno.—Lord Arlington said the right belonged to the King, and he asked for the Corporation's argument in writing, and he would reply to it.

1671, January 24. Samuel Pepys, Esq., Clerk of the Acts of H.M. Navy, is chosen an elder brother. (He often sat.)

1672, April 17. The Corporation was then 1,000*l.* in debt.

1672, April 20. Pilots summoned to be ready to obey the orders of the Lord High Admiral.

1672, June 3. Trinity Monday. Sir R. Browne is chosen Master.

1672, July 24. The Corporation is above 1,100*l.* in debt.

1672, Aug. 21. Order that the names of benefactors to the Corporation be drawn up.

1672, Oct. 14. Memorandum that the contract made with the pilots to conduct H.M. Fleet to the Sound was 17*l.* to each man for the voyage.

1672, Nov. 27. A merchant brings a reference from H.R.H. requiring the opinion of the Board about setting up lights on the Spurne head. The Board answer that they see no reason to alter their opinion delivered in 1662, but tell him to produce his new arguments and get the hands of the chief owners of ships using the Newcastle trade.

1672, Feb. 26. The best pall is to be kept for and used only for the elder brethren and their wives.

1673, May 17. Report against the erecting of light-houses on the Spurne head.

1673, May 26. Trinity Monday. Sir Jeremy Smith is elected Master. Doctor Dolben, Bishop of Rochester, preached the sermon, and was admitted a younger brother.

1673, Aug. 5. A garland for the Shoe beacon ordered to be made.

1673, Dec. 23. 24*s.* paid to the 12 prisons in and about London.

1673, January 24. No elder brother thinks fit to go in a less capacity than a Commander in H.M. service, and not otherwise than as the charter directs.

1674, June 10. Mr. Secretary Pepys addressed the Court what colours were proper for merchantmen, his Majesty intending to have none but his own ships to wear the Jack.

1674, June 15. Sir John Kempthorne is chosen Master.

1674, June 22. The light-house at Caistor to be repaired.

1674, Nov. 12. Andrew Marvill sat as one of the Board.

1674, Nov. 26. Sir Thomas Allen presented the Board with a very large pair of globes.

1674, Feb. 11. The new pall to be locked up in the Warden's chest, and not to be lent out without the Master and Wardens' order to any persons but elders and their wives and widows.—Order that 20*s.* for the new pall, and 10*s.* for the old be paid by all strangers who are not of the house.

1675, April 26. It is advised that a petition against Bum boats be presented to the house of Parliament.

1675, May 31. Trinity Monday. The Earl of Ossory is elected Master.

1675, June 3. The Master and two or three of the Brethren will go to the new foundation at Christ's Hospital to see it and to appoint to examine the boys there.

1675, July 15. Letter from Christ's Hospital with a list of 12 boys said to be fitly qualified to go to sea. The Board direct that they be brought on Saturday, and that the patent be also brought, and that the boys be examined at a full Board.

1675, Aug. 10. Mr. Leake and Mr. Perry, the school-master and clerk of Christ's Hospital appeared, and had promise given them to have a certificate concerning the boys' sufficiency.

1675, Aug. 17, Oct. 18. Details about the Spurne lights and the Humber Sand.

1675, Nov. 18. Elder Brethren hereafter chosen are to enter into a bond to the Corporation not to go to sea unless his Majesty commands them into his service.

A folio, labelled "Select entries 1670-1677."

Letters by J. Pepys, the clerk of the Corporation, to various persons; on behalf of the Corporation.—Letters by the Masters.—Orders of Council.—Letters by the Trinity House.—Petition by John Russell, William Russell, Silas Titus, and Edward Andrews, about the harbour of Newhaven and a light-house on Beachy point; and other papers about it.—Certificates of fitness to be masters of ships. Petition against Bum boats.—Order of Council, and report of Sir H. Finch thereon.—Documents executed by and to the Trinity House.—Orders and instructions by the Trinity House.—Deputation to various persons to represent the Corporation for certain purposes.—Papers about Dover harbour.

1671, Oct. 19. It seems that Sir Thomas Clutterbuck was succeeded by Mr. Skinner as Consul at Leghorn.

1671, Oct. 30. The Trinity House to Sir L. Jenkins, Judge of the Admiralty. As to the extent of the British seas, it has been commonly received by us and our predecessors that it doth extend to Cape Finisterre (or the North Cape), and that the sea which washes the coasts of the Low Countries and France has always been reputed part of the British seas.—A paper of instances of striking the flag to the English: several, from Charles 1st's return from Spain to 1668.—A letter about the right to appoint Consuls.

A letter about the rate of charges for victualling ships. Letters about pilots for the King's ships, and other pilots, and to the Trinity House at Dover.

Case and opinion by Mr. Raymon as to the power the Trinity House, by the charter, in cases concerning mariners, &c.—Instructions for laying buoys.

Letters to the Trinity Houses at Hull and Newcastle about lights.

Petition by Justinian Angell for lights at Spurne head; and papers about it.

1673, May 14. J. Pepys, by order, &c. No ship can be reported English unless she has an English master and three parts of four of the whole number of men English.

1673, Sept. 6. S. Pepys, by order of the Lords of the Admiralty, to the Trinity House: requesting their opinion as to the legality of the intended granting by the King to the Countess of Falmouth of all the chains in the river Thames between London Bridge and Bayley hole. He sends the abstract sent by Lord Shaftesbury, Lord High Chancellor.—Report thereon. They say that one Philip White, a blacksmith, first introduced the application of iron chains to the use of mooring ships, and got a grant from King Charles I. for 14 years, and a renewal from Cromwell in 1658. At the restoration his Royal Highness became possessed.

Reasons which may be offered against the proposals of the City of London for the continuance of the imposition on coals.

Report by the Trinity House on the loss of one of the King's ships.

1673, Dec. Letters to Col. Russell about Newhaven harbour in which he and Capt. Tytus and Col. Andrews are concerned.

Letter to the Lords Commissioners of the Navy about the allowances fit to be given by his Majesty to pilots for their service in piloting H.M. ships.

1674, April 4. Report by the Trinity House on the William and George taken by a Dutch privateer off the North Foreland on the 24th of December last; exculpating Capt. Joy the officer of H.M. dogger Backdogge for not standing by or attempting a rescue.

Letters by John Pepys (the clerk) to various persons and ports on business connected with the House.

1674, July 8. Letter by the Trinity House to Mr. Watkins at the Signal office; asking him to let a caveat be entered in the Lord Treasurer's office against the grant to Angell of a patent to erect lights on the Spurne Head.

1674, July 18. J. Pepys to the Trinity House of Hull; saying that on the Brethren addressing the King at Hampton Court, the King ordered a stop to be put on passing Angell's patent.

1673, Feb. A table of rewards for pilots piloting H.M. ships from and to the ports here mentioned, drawn by order of the honourable the principal officers and commanders of H. M. Navy. (4 pp.)

Remonstrance to Capt. Raven on a report of his intention to erect a new light-house at Yarmouth.

Sept. and Oct. Correspondence about a sunken rock near Plymouth alleged to be under the jurisdiction of Saltash, on which Capt. Ruth's ship struck.

Oct. 9. The Trinity House to [the Commissioners of the Admiralty]. They think that at present there is no want of shipping to manage a trade to the Northward, the Straights, East Indies, West Indies, &c.; and if so, it will be prejudicial to our navigation to buy or make free any foreign built ships.

Instructions to the gentlemen of the Corporation appointed to go to Hull. (About buoys, sands, &c.)

1674, Oct. 22. Considerations offered to his Majesty by the Master and Wardens of the Trinity House touching the erection of five light-houses on the N.E. coast of England. (Fern Island, Flamborough Head, Foulness, and two for directing ships in and out of St. Nicholas's Gutt.) They think them useless.

Letter by the Trinity House to the King asking to be excused from granting to Lord Maynard a lease in reversion of the ballast office, Bowerman's lease having yet 19 years to run.

A similar letter to the Duke of York.

1675, March. Papers about lights on Sporne Head at the mouth of the river Humber.

1675, Oct. 6. Report by the Trinity House to the King thereon. (11 pp.)

Nov. Announcement that Angell has got his patent lights on Sporne Head.

1675, April 1. The Trinity House decline to grant a renewal of the lease for receiving the duty of the Deal Pilotage until they know the yearly value. They appoint a receiver.

April. A pilot of Dover having asserted the Trinity House of Dover to be under a patent more ancient than that of the Trinity House of London, the latter ask a copy of it from Dover.

1675, May 8. The Trinity House send an Order in Council that the lights on the Sporne be put out, and not kindled again.

1675, Aug. 14. Certificate by the Trinity House that on the application of the Governors of Christ's Hospital, by virtue of H. M. Patent, dated 19 Aug. 25, Car. 2., they have examined Benjamin Waters, aged 16, one of the 40 poor Blue Coat boys known as the children of the New Royal Foundation, in his proficiency of the art of navigation, and the whole science of arithmetic, and consider him fully qualified and fit to be apprentice; (the extraordinary abilities and industry of Mr. John Leeke, present schoolmaster for mathematics in the said Hospital are mentioned).

1675, Aug. 21. John Pepys, to Mr. Gibbon, Treasurer of Christ's Hospital; sending 15 certificates on behalf of the poor boys of the New Royal Foundation of Christ's Hospital, who upon examination had been found fit to be put out to sea.

1675, July 30. Certificate by John Leeke to the Trinity House, that 15 boys, whose names and ages are given, are efficient in certain matters detailed.

1675, Aug. 14. Certificate by the Trinity House that they have examined Edward Childe of Christ's Hospital, and find him well instructed in certain particulars detailed.

1675, Feb. About lights at Caister.

Petition to the King, Order in Council, 5 May 1675, and letters in August, October, and December 1677, about the lights on Sporne Head.

Answer by Angell to the report of the Trinity House.

Accounts of Angell for the lights. Letters about them in 1677 and 1678.

Extracts from other books relating to lights at the Sporne Head, from 1618 to 1678.

A folio labelled "Select Entries, 1677-1681."

Table of rates adjusted by the Trinity House, for piloting H.M. ships of every rank, with an assignment of the number of days to be allowed for the performance of each service mentioned therein.

1677, April 28. R. G[ibson] says that he has been lately chosen clerk vice Mr. John Pepys deceased.

1677, May 5. The Trinity House (Samuel Pepys was the Master) to Sir R. Beach at Chatham; telling him to invite six, fit to be pilots, to go to London to be examined for pilots.

s. d. The same to the Bailiffs of Great Yarmouth; asking them to send twelve fit for pilots for examination.

s. d. The same to the bailiffs of Aldebury; the like.

Masters of ships complain of having suffered damage by foul weather. The Corporation appoint an elder brother, and tell him to take one of the younger brethren with him to view and report.

1677, May 14. R. G[ibson] writes to Rochester for ten stones of between 8 and 10 tons each for riding of buoys for the sands; the stones are about 10s. each, or 12d. the ton.

Petition to the King by masters of ships.

1677, May 19. The Trinity House appoint Henry Knight, of Deal, their Attorney, to receive half the duties on pilotage given by patent of 27 Nov. 12 Car. II.

1677, May 26, and June 20, and July 25. Certificates for Christ's Hospital boys.

1677, June 7. Directions, at a Court, for finishing Lowestoft light-house.

1677, June 30. John Prowd is Master.

1677. The Trinity House to the Governors of Christ's Hospital. They lately asked them to respite the three boys of the Royal Foundation 3 or 4 months longer, as they were not ready to answer the questions put. Notwithstanding, they ask that Goodridge, who was examined by John Prowd, the Master, shall he sent for further examination.

1677, Aug. 22. John Gibson to the Master; asking him to come to a meeting at the Sun Tavern, in Billingsgate, to approve an instruction which he has prepared for masters of ships who agree to subscribe for another light-house at Winterton-ness.

1677, Aug. 28. The Trinity House ask the Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital, Southwark, to admit a sick woman.

1677, Sept. 1. The board wants 8 days' notice before the new light at Winterton-ness shall be ready, so that they may put it into the Gazette.

1677. Address to the Trinity House by masters of ships at London, Ipswich, Yarmouth, and Newcastle, for a new light at Winterton-ness, and promising 6d. each voyage for every vessel and ship passing by the said light. (144 signatures).

1677, Oct. 15. Determination of the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, touching the custom and practice of the English navigation trading into the Mediterranean, with reference to the following points whereon the opinion of the said brotherhood is demanded by George Leggat, Esq., Consul for the English nation at Genoa. (As to the mode of pay and punishment of mariners.)

1677. Address by masters of ships of Yarmouth, Aldeburgh, Southwold, Harwich, and Lowestoft. (Similar to the address last above mentioned.)

Another similar address from masters of ships of Newcastle and Lynn.

1677, Dec. 8. The Trinity House to J. Wright, Esq., of Ipswich; asking for 6d. for every ship under, and 1s. for every ship above, 100 tons.

1677, January 8. The Trinity House send to Streynham Master, Esq., agent at Fort St. George, 12 dozen of canary for his charity to the Corporation.

Orders to survey ships.

1677, January 9. The Trinity House to the Lord Treasurer; about the lights on the North and South Forelands.

s. d. Report of the Trinity House to the King on Justinian Angell's project for lights.

1677, January 23. Three certificates of proficiency in mathematics of three boys of Christ's Hospital.

1677, March 16 and 20. Two letters by the Master to the Master of the Ballast office telling him to stop the amount which has been imposed for fines on certain lighters breaking the rules from the lighter and ballast men working in them.

1677, March 21. The Trinity House to the Board of Admiralty, ascribing the dearth of pilots to low pay, and suggesting a new scale of prices.

1678, March 28. Report to the Privy Council about Angell's new light at Sporne head and his expenditure. They think a penny a ton from strangers and half a farthing a ton from our own navigation will be a full compensation to him.

1678, May 27, Trinity Monday. Sir Joseph Jordan and Andrew Marvill were chosen younger Wardens for the ensuing year. (Anthony Tutchin was Master.)

Account by R. G[ibson] of a mutiny by ballast men; and petition to the King in Council on the subject.

Complaint of the dimness of the Low Light at Lowestoft.

1678, Sept. 12. The Trinity House to the Court of Loadmanage at Dover; offering to have a meeting to settle the rate of payment for pilots.

1678, Sept. 28. Appointment of a man to enter ships and ask for the branch of the pilot, who if he do not produce it is to be presumed to be unlicensed.

A dispute with Bowerman.

1678, Nov. 23. Humble advice of the Master, &c. of the Trinity House given at the instance of the Rt. Honourable the Lord Mayor of the City of London, signified to the Corporation by Sir John Shorter and Sir Thomas Gold, Kts., merchants and owners of shipping belonging to the said city, for the better preserving the ships and vessels lying in the Thames between London Bridge and Limehouse Reach from any attempts or accidents by fire or otherwise.

1678, Feb. Bye-laws.

Table of payments by ships of various tonnage for loadmoney men, poundage, buoyage, and beacorage, the rate varying according to the different places they came from.

Awards on differences.

1679, Oct. 27. The King recommends Capt. Francis Wilshaw for an elder Brother.

1678, January. Sir John Clayton's petition to the King to recommend the petitioner and his light-house at St. Nicholas Gatt to the consideration of the Trinity House.

1677, January 27. Reference accordingly. Proposals by Sir Joseph Clayton to the Trinity House.

1679, Nov. 12. Report by the Trinity House against Sir J. Clayton's proposals.

Sir John Clayton petitions the King. He offers to surrender the four light-houses which he had built on the northern coasts at a cost of near 3,000*l.*, from which he derived no profit, and asks to be allowed to erect a light-house on some of the islands of Scilly and that the King will recommend the matter to the Trinity House.

1679, Feb. 9. The King refers it.

1679, Feb. 28. The Trinity House to the King. They say that before Sir J. Clayton's petition the King had granted leave to the Corporation to erect a new light-house on one of the islands of Scilly.

1679, Feb. 21. The Trinity House to Col. John Strode, Governor of Dover Castle; about disputes between pilots of the Trinity House and those of Dover and Deal;—and Proposals delivered to the Colonel about the matter.

1680, March 27. Copy of indenture of agreement between Charley Stanton, carpenter, and the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, for Stanton to build nine almshouses to the east of the 20 new almshouses at Deptford.

1680, April 21. The Clerk of the Trinity House to Sir R. Browne. The ship Phoenix from India richly laden is lost on one of the rocks of Scilly. The Trinity House having got the King's promise for a license to erect a light-house, they ask Sir R. Browne to use his interest with Godolphin, Governor of those islands, to recommend persons on the place for finding a fit position for it.

1680, May 7. Court of Committees for the Honourable the East India Company. They approve the scheme of a light on the Scilly, provided it be vested in the Trinity House, and not in a private person.

1680, May 14. The Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral to Capt. Sanderson, commander of H.M. yacht Charlotte. They tell him to take on board two brethren of the Trinity House, and carry them to Scilly, then to attend them for two or three weeks until they find a convenient place to erect the light-house.

More letters about it.

1680, July 8. Robert Veagleman, writes that he is chosen clerk to the Corporation vice Mr. Etherington deceased. (Etherington died July 6.)

1680, Aug. 19. The clerk writes to Captus. Till and Bayley, at Scilly, that they are to make the light-house full 60 feet high before they set up the lantern, so that with the lantern it may be about 70 feet high. Sends a copy of the patent for erecting it.

Notes for amending bye-laws delivered to Mr. Tomson, councillor, 8 Jan. 1670, to be him digested into byelaws.

1680, July 3. Inventory of all the goods in the Trinity House (3½ pp.). Among them are six pictures of the King, the Duke of York, the Duke of Albemarle, the Earl of Craven, the Earl of Ossory, and the Earl of Northumberland; and seven pictures of King James, and Queen Anne, Queen Elizabeth, King Charles I., the Earl of Nottingham, the Duke of Buckingham, and Sir F. Drake, (some of these were burned in 1714).—Five books in folio of Purchas's Pilgrims, two books of Hacklutt's Voyages.—Plate.—King James's Charter to the Corporation, 22 April 1605.—King James's Charter to the Shipwrights Hall. King Charles's Charter to the Corporation, 27 Nov. 1660. By-laws, temp. Car. 2. 20 Nov. 1660. King Charles's grant of the lastage and ballastage of the river Thames, 24 June 1665.

1680, Oct. 16. Letter to the Merchants at the Canaries, Spain, Portugal, Malaga, Cadiz, Lisbon, Bourdeaux, Nantes, Bayonne; telling them that a light-house is erected on Agnes, one of the Scilly islands, on a rock 200 feet above high water, within 4 miles from the rock called the Bishop, in height from the foundation 60 feet, and can be plainly seen at the Land's End. The light-house will be kindled on the 30th of October.

Directions that all ships passing within or without the said islands of Scilly, and arriving in your port, are to pay 4d. per ton if English, and 1d. per ton if strangers, and the like going out.

1679, Nov. 9. The Trinity House to the King. They think that the latitude of 50° 5' marked in the general platte as the latitude of the southward part of the Scilly islands should be altered to 50°.

Petition from 13 persons in the Isle of Wight against the duty levied by the Trinity House by reason of the Scilly light.

1680, Nov. 19. Council Order to send a copy of the petition to the Trinity House. The petitioners are to be heard at the Board this day sennight.

1680, Nov. 26. Argument in the Council by the Trinity House.

1680, Dec. 28. Letters about the Golden Lyon, a Virgini ship, having been cast away on Scilly; Mr. Hoskins, the keeper of the light, was inattentive to it, and had plundered some of the goods of the ship.

1680, January 20. R. Veagleman to Thomas Cole at Cowes. Has received his letter wherein he advises of the most considerable persons joining in a clubb to the obstructing of the collecting for Scilly.

Papers about other light-houses and dues.—Directions to stay ships which have not paid light dues.

1681, May 11. Loyal address by the Trinity House to the King, thanking him for his late declaration proposing to call frequent Parliaments, to extirpate Popery, redress grievances, &c.

Answers of masters of ships trading to Newcastle, in the coal trade, to the petition of Sir Edward Villiers. In 1660 Sir E. Villiers built a light-house at Timmouth, and levied 1*s.* for each ship of his Majesty's subjects, and 3*s.* from foreigners. Sir Edward Villiers says it does not pay. They think otherwise. They think it cost 200*l.* The annual returns are about 300*l.* (Between 70 and 80 signatures.)

Petition by Sir E. Villiers. He asks for 1*s.* 4*d.* per ton from his Majesty's subjects, and 3*s.* 4*d.* per ton from foreigners.

1681, April 22. Order in Council for Custom House officers to give assistance to the officers appointed to collect the duty granted to the Trinity House for the Scilly light.

s. d. The like to the Governor of the Isle of Wight and his deputies.

1680, Aug. 8. Will (proved Aug. 28) of Richard Maples, mariner, of Maddrasspatam, giving some pecuniary legacies and the residue to the Trinity House.

1682, Feb. 6. Timothy Wilkes and Elihu Yate, the executors, send a box of diamonds to the amount of 1,500 pagodas to Sir R. Haddock, overseer of that legacy; he hopes by the next ship to send a further considerable supply.

A folio, labelled "Select Entries, 1681-1684."

1681, Nov. 30. Order in Council that Sir R. Holmes, Governor of the Isle of Wight, &c., do acquaint the Dutch and all other foreign ships coming thither that he wills and expects that they should pay to the collector appointed by the Trinity House the duties pertaining to the Corporation for the lights at Scilly.

Petition to the Lords Commissioners for the affair of Tangier by the master and owner of the Phoenix and the master of the Pelican, for payment of money claimed to be due by reason of fetching horses from Spain to Tangier; and other papers; and report by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House on the proportion to be paid.

1682, January 25. Certificate by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, pursuant to the patent of 19 August, 25 Car. 2, of having examined a Christ's Hospital boy, and found him fit to be initiated into the practice of navigation, and bound out an apprentice to the same, and other like certificates.

1681, March 24. Robert Wood, master of the Mathematical School of Christ's Hospital, writes to the Governors, offering his resignation.

1681, March 27. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to the Governors of Christ's Hospital, saying that Dr. Wood reflects on them as not certificating the pupils. They defend themselves, the children not being sufficiently instructed.

Observations on the examination of the children of the new royal foundation.

1682 (sic), July 15. According to the methods they are now taught &c. (10 heads, 4 p.).

1682, April 15. Simon Nicholas to Mr. Graham, asking his Majesty, for the tower of Scilly, 4 long sures about 10 or 11 feet long, full bore, 4 ship carriages with tackle, 2 barrels of powder, 80 shot, 2 skirres of match, with sponges, ladles, and rammers needful for such ordnance.

Letters to collectors of duties for lights at various places.

1682, June 6. Loyal address to the King by the seamen of the kingdom of England. Signed by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House being the body corporate of the seamen of England.

Letters by Robert Veagleman (the clerk) on various subjects.

1682, Aug. 17. L. Jenkins to the Lieutenant of the Tower Hamlets. The King's meaning is that the younger brethren of the Trinity House shall be subjected, as other men are, to bear their proportion to the charges and service of the militia.

1682, Sept. 27. Petition by the Trinity House to the King. The number of mariners who are younger brethren are but 363, of which only 140 are in the Tower Hamlets, whereof 27 are pilots. They urge their charter and liability to double service.

1682, Oct. 26. At a Court of Assistants Edward Maplesden is appointed second clerk, vice Vavasour, dismissed.

The second clerk's duties. (½ p.)

1682, Nov. 7. The Master writes to the Duke of Grafton that the King allows their privileges.

1682, Nov. 24. The Master writes to the minister of Shadwell, saying that it is resolved to distribute 200*l.* amongst such poor as have had their habitations destroyed by fire; and tells him to cause the bellman to go about and make proclamation that some of the brethren of the Trinity House intend to meet on Monday at Shadwell Church to distribute their charity.

1682, Nov. 1. Maplesden and two sureties give a bond in 500*l.* to secure his faithful services.

Letters about the exemption of the brethren of the Trinity House from service in the militia; and about light-houses and buoys, and deputations to collect light-house dues.

1682, January 27. Queries upon the statute 14 Car. II., cap. 14, and the charter to the Trinity House exempting the brethren thereof from the land service.

Sir Roger Sawyer's opinion on the queries; and Mr. Porter's answers to the queries. Letters on the subject including one by Samuel Pepys to R. Veagleman, dated 30 January 1682.

Letters about Timmouth light; Sir Edward Villiers, Knight Marshal, who built it, wishing to raise the dues.

1682, Feb. Winterton light-house in danger by reason of the breaking in of the sea.

1682, Feb. The Corporation were engaged in a lawsuit about their light-house on Agnes in Scilly.

Extract of such articles in the instructions of Mr. Edward Pagett, master of the mathematical school in Christ's Hospital, as relate to the several particulars in which he has engaged himself (by contract with the President and Governors of Christ's Hospital) to instruct the children of H.M. new royal foundation in all things necessary to their thorough knowledge of the same. (1 p.)

1683, April 3. R. Veagleman writes to Sir T. Allen at Somerton Hall, near Yarmouth, that Lord Dartmouth was that day sworn an elder.

Rules for calculating the tonnage of lighters.

In April 1683 Henry Dudgeon and partner got a reference, on petition to the King, about their engine for clearing obstructions in the river, what they wanted the Trinity House to adopt and use.

1683, Feb. Lord Falkland petitions the King for a grant of all land, soil, gravel, and stone within England and Wales (except the river Thames) within high water mark and lowest ebb of sea at a rent of 100*l.*—The King refers the petition to the Commissioners of the Treasury, who refer it to the Attorney General; Sir Robert Sawyer reports that the King may make the grant, and the Commissioners of the Treasury refer the matter to the Trinity House.

1683, May 16. Order in Council about Purnock's claim against the Trinity House by reason of their light-house at Scilly. The Trinity House are to pay Purnock 20*s.* yearly during his term.

1683, June. Letters to various ports asking their opinion about Lord Falkland's petition.

1683, June 21. Views of defects in several houses in Blackman Street and Swan Yard and Horsemonger Lane.

Notes upon the reading of Lord Falkland's petition.—Notes upon Sir Edward Villiers's case.

In 1683 Lord Dartmouth was Master.

1683, July. The Trinity House petition the King, offering to buy Sir Edward Villiers' interest in Timmouth light, and Capt. Wardlow and partners interest in theirs on the Sporne.

1683, July 24. Congratulatory address by the Trinity House to the King on the escape of the King and the Duke of York.

Account of repairs of the Trinity House at Stepney for the Masters of the Trinity House.

Certificate by the Deputy Master of the Trinity House, a Warden and two others (addressed to the Governors of Christ's Hospital) of the fitness of the master of a ship to be entrusted with a child of H.M. new royal foundation.

Certificate by numerous masters and owners of ships bound to the northward that the lighthouse at Timmouth belonging to Sir Edward Villiers is ill kept and much neglected.

1683, Aug. 22. The Trinity House to Richard, Earl of Thanet, Governor of the forts at Tilbury and Gravesend; asking him to signify to some of his officers not to suffer any stranger ship or vessel to pass by Gravesend until they have produced a certificate with the seal of the Corporation that they have paid the Trinity House dues.

Case about the Trinity House duties, and their rights thereto.—And opinion of W. Thompson thereon.

Mr. Holt's opinion on certain queries on the right of the Trinity House to the dues of buoyage, beaconage, primage, and coastmanage.

The principal officers and commanders of H.M. Navy to certain under brethren of the Trinity House; a letter requesting them to survey the moorings of H.M. ships in Chatham harbour, and examine and make certain reports on cables.

1683, Oct. 19. Report of the Trinity House accordingly.

1683, Oct. 13. Account of the moorings and substance of the cables of H.M. ships at Chatham, taken by Capt. Hugh Till, &c. (41 ships, 4 first rate.)

1683, Dec. 15. The Deputy Master and two others to Sir John Barker; saying they are going to erect a beacon at Woodbridge, where he is sole proprietor of the lands, and asking his favour.

Sir Richard Lloyd's report on the patent to Samuel Keeke and Robt. Hayton in 33 Car. II. of certain messages, wharfs, &c., between the ancient wall of Wapping and the low water mark of the north side of the river Thames south, extending from the Hermitage Stairs west to the Globe Stairs in Blackwall east. He considers that the patent entrenches on the droits and perquisites of the Lord High Admiral of England for the time being, and thinks it ought to be vacated.

1680-1683. Account of goods left at Scilly in the custody of Samuel Hockins for the use of the light-house.

1683, Feb. 20. R. Veagleman to Mr. Hockin; announcing that Philip Fisher is appointed to succeed Hockin.

1683, Feb. 15. Letter by the Trinity House to the Lords of the Admiralty against Keck and Hayton's patent.—And letter by the Lords of the Admiralty to the King about it.

1683, March 3. Inventory of the stores and other goods belonging to the light-house on Agnes, one of the Scilly Isles; signed by Phil. Fisher.

1684, May 24. Memorial by C. de Lente (the Danish Ambassador), stating that the Trinity House exact six or seven times more from the subjects of the King, his master, than from the English, contrary to the Treaty of Commerce between the two Crowns. He prays the King to order restitution of the money so exacted, and that order be given that for the future the said Corporation may not exact more than may be demanded by law and justice.

Petition by Sir Edward Villiers to the King and Council about the Timmouth light.

1684, April 17. The King in Council orders that a copy of the Petition be supplied to those interested in the light-house on the Sporne head.

1682 Sept. 29. W. Hopkins, and five others, being collectors for hearth-money, came this day to the Trinity House, and took away a large looking glass with the frame, the Earl of Ossory and Earl of Craven's pictures, a large green carpet, another green carpet, the Duke of Albemarle and the Duke of York's pictures.

The Master, &c. of the Trinity House plaintiffs v. Hopkins and other defendants. The plaintiffs alms-houses at Deptford have some one, none more than two chimneys. The defendants, collectors of the hearth-money, demanded duty for the said houses from the almsfolk; they refused, and he distrained, although the revenue of the plaintiffs far exceeds 100*l.* per annum.

1682, Oct. 25. Edmund Sandders is of opinion that the houses not having above two fire hearths, and being always in the possession of almshouse were exempted from payment by the first Act, not being endowed, and were not chargeable on the landiord by the second Act.

William Thompson gives an opinion to the same effect.

1684, March 27. The officers of Hearth money entered the Hall and distrained for 1½ years arrears of duty for the Alms houses.

Suggestions for amendment of the Charter of the Corporation.

Long petition to the King and Council by Sir Edward Villiers about the duties at Tinnmouth.

Orders proposed for the good government of the Alms people belonging to the Corporation of the Trinity House of Deptford, Kent.

Sir Edward Villiers declines the offer of the Trinity House to buy his interest in the Tinnmouth light.

A Folio, labelled "Select Entries 1684-5."

1684, July 30. Answer by the Trinity House to the Memorial of C. de Lente, Councillor and Envoy Extraordinary of the King of Denmark and Norway bearing date the 24 May last.—They say that the duties claimed by the Corporation from the subjects of the King of Denmark are founded on immemorial prescription, &c. &c.

1684, Aug. 30. S. Chamblot, Deputy Master, S. Pepys, and three others, to Lancelot Inten and others, feeffees in trust of the will of Bishop Andrews.—From a copy of the will of Bishop Andrews they understand that the poor of the Trinity House, consisting of old and impotent mariners and their widows and orphans, and of such mariners as shall be in prison for debts or some other small actions of trespasses, have as much right to the Testator's charity as those poor of St. Giles-without-Cripplegate, St. Saviour's Southwark, and All-hallows Barking, and they think that the Testator's charity having been for 50 years diverted from the poor of the Trinity House, they who had it in one year should not have it in the next. They pray the addressees to consider and give an answer.

A survey of the buildings and encroachments on the river Thames on both sides from London Bridge eastwards to the lower end of Limehouse, taken in pursuance of an order of the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of England, Dated 1 March 1681. (4 pp.) with numbers referring to a Draft lately made by Capt. Collins distinguishing the new from the old encroachments, and which are prejudicial.

1684, July 24. The King in Council.—Sir Edward Villiers did return his answer to the Trinity House's proposal, declaring he could not comply with it. The King not finding any cause to alter the said duty was pleased to order, and it therefore was accordingly ordered, that there should be no further increase of the said duty for maintaining the said light, and Sir E. Villiers's petition was dismissed.

1684, January 31. Copy of Advertisement in the Gazette of Beacons at Woodbridge.

1683, Feb. 24. (presented). Address to King James the 2d condoling with him on the death of King Charles the 2d, and congratulating him; by the Mariners of England. Signed by L^d Dartmouth (Master), Samuel Chamblott, Deputy Master, and 288 others.

Orders for Almshouses.

1684, March 23. Surrender to the King by the Trinity House of their powers and franchises, and praying a re-grant.

1683, Feb. 25. Capt. George his account of the Deptford ketch going aground upon the Whiting.

Letter by S. Pepys to the Master, &c. of the Trinity House about the accident. The King orders them on their examination of the matter to cause such punishment to be inflicted on the pilot, if it shall be proved his fault, as they think fit; or upon being satisfied that it arose from defect in the light at Orfordness, or want of care in keeping it in good order, to see that fitting remedy be had therein to prevent future accidents.

Papers about fines on the ballast men.

Letters to keepers of light-houses by R. Vengleman.

1685, April 1. Petition to the King to re-grant liberties and franchises to the Trinity House, and reference thereof by the King to the Solicitor-General.

Copy of pleadings in Trinity House v. W. Winter for 40s. duty, called buoyage and beaconage. Judgment that the Trinity House do recover it and 18l. 6s. 8d. costs.

1685, April. Petition to the King by Henry Alured for a patent for his invention for soaking and covering the planks of ships with a bitter and sulphurous matter so as to defend the planks from being pierced and eaten with worms.

1685, April 4. The King refers the petition to the Trinity House.

1685, May 23. Report by the Trinity House that they do not find that Alured or any other person has made any experiment.

Names of the present officers, and heads of additions, and additions to be inserted in the new charter to the Trinity House. S. Pepys, Master, 4 Wardens, 8 Assistants, 18 brethren, (with alterations and additions, 2 pp.) signed "James R."

Letter book, 1685-1689.

This is said to be "Letter book since the opening of the Charter of King James the 2nd, being the 14 of July 1685." It contains copies of letters from 28 July 1685 to 20 March 1689. There are copies of letters by Samuel Hunter, the Clerk of the Corporation, (a few are by R. Veghellman).

1688, Oct. 9. The Master, &c. of the Trinity House to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral, aboard the Resolution at the buoy at the Nore, signifying the execution of his Majesty's order to send pilots to supply those of the fleet that went.

The Letters are on Corporation business.

Letter book, 1689-1709.

2 James II. Act to encourage the building of ships in England. It lays duties on foreign bottoms and gives them to the Chatham Chest and the Trinity House.

Letters, &c. about the Trinity House collecting the whole dues. Deputation by the Trinity House to collect the dues.

Letters by S. Hunter on Corporation business.

1693, Feb. 16. S. Hunter writes to a correspondent: "The Corporation agree with you that a Newcastle chaldron makes two Winchester, and a Sunderland one rather more."

The letters are chiefly about foreign bottoms. At the end of the Volume:—"N.E.—All letters about foreign bottoms from this time are entered in the Common Letter Books."

Letter book, 15 Nov. 1705—1 May 1729.

Letters by the Clerk to various persons on Corporation business.

1706, June 6. The Clerk tells the Commissioners of the Navy that the undertakers for building the Eddystone lighthouse, pursuant to the late Act of Parliament, having contracted with three men for that work, he is requested by the Corporation to pray them to give orders for the discharge of the men from her Majesty's yard of Deptford where they at present work, since they are to repair to Plymouth without loss of time.

He writes to Jos. Burchet, Esqre., by direction of the Corporation, praying him to move H.R.H.'s protection for the persons (seven) underwritten, who are in contract for rebuilding the Eddystone lighthouse, and get a protection for five boatmen.

Letters about beacons, dues, and ballast.

1707, March 11. The Clerk writes to Jos. Burchet, Secretary of the Admiralty, that the person employed in rebuilding the Eddystone light-house having written that he has got two vessels ready for his men and materials to be by the rock, and watch all opportunities of working, that no time may be lost in perfecting so useful an undertaking, but that they do not venture oil for fear of the privateers who very much infest the coast; he is commissioned to request him to move H.R.H. that some man-of-war may be forthwith appointed for protecting them, with orders to attend that service till the house be finished.

The Clerk afterwards writes to A. Rudyard that the request for a man-of-war could not be granted as appears from Mr. Burchet's answer; but he thinks the workmen need not fear being troubled, since the person that molested those formerly employed was severely punished by the French King, and the men sent back again.

1701, March 2. The Clerk writes to the Commissioners of the Navy that he cannot get the ten pilots for the taking charge of her Majesty's ships off Dunkirk. He can only get three who are acquainted with that coast.

1708, March 27. Is surprised that the three sent pretend ignorance of these ports. Will use diligence to procure the ten pilots.

Folio. Bye Minutes,* 1699-1705.

Entry of the Minutes of the ordinary weekly meetings of the Master and Wardens and their deputies, commencing 24 June 1699.

1699, June 28. Dr. Stanhope, the lecturer of Deptford, who preached before the Corporation on Trinity Monday, came to the Board and gave thanks for the allowance of 10l. for the year, to commence at Lady Day, which had been appointed him at the last court, and presented each of the brethren with a printed copy of his said sermon.

1699, January 10. The Attorney-General has given an opinion that the brethren have a right to vote at all times when a Master is chosen.

1700, May 15. Examinations of captains, and reports of fitness for taking charge of ships.

Gifts out of the poor's box.—Surveys on ships ordered of wine, molasses, &c.—Fining for firing guns after dark.

1700, Feb. 1. The Board order the Wardens to pay 5l., the amount for which T. Wotton, the Harwich pilot, had compounded to get out of prison. If the Court shall not think fit to allow thereof the brothers present will pay it themselves.

Many examinations of captains, and reports of their being fit to be masters of ships.

1702, April 22. The Trinity House's address to the Queen presented by the Master, introduced by the Earl of Pembroke, Lord High Admiral.

1702, July 25. The Deputy Master and others report on Mr. Walcot's engine for making salt water fresh. It seems to them no other than a common still.

Regulations for the almshouses and their tenants.

Examinations of Christ's Hospital mathematical boys.

1704, June 10. A dinner bespoken at the Rummier in Queen Street (where the brethren are to dine on Monday next) for 26 persons at 10s. per head; if there should be two more nothing is to be paid for them.

Folio. Court Minutes, 1705-1720.

1704, Feb. 13. Sir C. Shovell chosen an elder brother.

1705, Aug. 2. John Stripe, minister at Low Leighton, having requested the Corporation to communicate to him such part of their constitution, with what related to their government and services as were fitting to be made public, since he was upon setting forth a new edition of Stow's Survey of London, wherein he designed to give account of bodies corporate and other foundations in and about the City of London,—It was (after reading and approving what Capt. Conoway and Mr. Noyes had drawn up in writing relating to the House for this purpose) resolved that such of the brethren as were willing do, together with Mr. Noyes, give a meeting to the said Mr. Stripe, and inform him of what they thought necessary to be published for the honour and advantage of the Corporation.

1707, June 9. Trinity Monday. Josiah Burchot elected elder brother vice Earl of Pembroke, resigned because he was going as Governor to Ireland.—The business being over, the brethren refreshed themselves as usual with a glass of wine, and then went in a body to Deptford Church, where a sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. John Garkeith, after which they returned to their house in London, and again resolved themselves into a Court.

1707, Feb. 5. Capt. Edward Chudley elected an elder brother vice Sir C. Shovell, on the death of Sir C. Shovell cast away on the Islands of Scilly.

1708, July 28. The Master proposed the renewal of their charter as necessary not only for strengthening such clauses as should be found defective, but for the procuring such additional powers and privileges as were for the good of navigation in general.—Resolved that the charter of the Corporation be renewed, and that Mr. Noyes and his brother Mr. R. Noyes do advise with counsel about such new clauses as are necessary to be added, and what steps and means are necessary to be taken in this business.

* Bye Minutes are Minutes of the weekly or more frequent meetings of the Board. The Court meets monthly. A majority of the elder brethren must be present to form a Court, but no special number to form a Board.

The next Court is on the 3^d of Nov.

1708, Feb. 16. Notice of younger brethren being distreined for not obeying summons to the militia.

1709, June 20. Trinity Monday. Sir John Leake is chosen Master.

1709, Oct. 27. Col. John Lovett had finished rebuilding Elddystone lighthouse.

1710, June 10. Trinity Monday. Sir J. Leake is continued Master.—After business the brethren refreshed themselves with a glass of wine, heard a sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. Wolton, and then dined in a private manner (for the good husbandry of the Corporation) at the Rummier in Queen Street.

1710, Aug. 3. The report of the trial with the Licentenary of the Tower Hamlets was read and ordered to be engrossed and hung up in the Trinity House. The Lord C. J. Parker declared at a Nisi Prius at Westminster on the 22 of June last that the brethren of the Trinity House were exempted from serving in the militia, or being contributory thereto, and that the Queen had the power to except any person from that service.

1711, May 28, Trinity Monday. Sir George Byng chosen Master.—Sermon by Dr. Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury.

1711, Feb. 14. Mr. John Wornaby appointed collector of the duties at the Custom House in the place of Mr. Richard Noyes.

1712, June 16, Trinity Monday. Sir Geo. Byng continued Master.

1712, July 2. Resolved to present an address to the Queen on her condescension in laying before Parliament the terms on which a general peace might be made.

1713, June 1, Trinity Monday. The Earl of Strafford chosen Master. Sir Thomas Hardy and Sir James Wishart sworn as two younger or nether wardens.

1713, Dec. 17. The Earl of Strafford took the oath. Capt. Charles Hardy admitted a younger brother.

1714, May 24, Trinity Monday. The Earl of Strafford continued Master.

1714, Sept. 28. Address of congratulation to King George I. on his accession ordered.

1715, June 13, Trinity Monday. James, Earl of Berkeley, chosen Master.

1715, March 6. Petition of Thomas Coram read, proposing a new settlement in some uninhabited part of North America, and praying a certificate from the Corporation of his being well affected to his Majesty and the Government, and of his skill in naval affairs, which was ordered to given under the seal of the Corporation, Thomas Coram being a younger brother.

In 1716, 1717, and 1718, the Earl of Berkeley is continued Master.

1717, July 31. A letter from Mr. Burchett was read, signifying the desire of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that their Corporation would consider an instrument invented by Mr. de Berlain, and report their opinion as to its usefulness for the improvement of navigation; and the same having been inspected on private board days, and a letter proposed in answer to Mr. Burchett, the same was agreed to and ordered to be sent to the Admiralty Office. (See the same entry in the Letter book.)

1719, May 25, Trinity Monday. Sir William Sander-son elected Master.

Small 4to. vellum, 16th century.

Translation into English of the charter (dated Canterbury, 20 March, 4 Hen. VIII.) of incorporation of the Trinity House.

These ben the actes and ordinances made for the river of Thamys under the penaltie ensuyng, and for the observyng and keeping suerly of the same. (30 pp.) Yervyn at Deptford Strond, under our comen seale, the 21st day of August, in the 17 yere of the reigne of King Henre the 8th.

21 Feb., 32 Hen. VIII. Agrément between Sir Thomas Sperte, K^t, Comptroller of the King's ships and Master of the Trinity House, and by William Capelyne and others, and by the whole body of the said fellowship, that the chaplain of the said fellowship shall be bound to teach all children committed to him from all places freely without charge or cost of parents or friends; the chaplain to have yearly for his trouble 8l. and his chamber.

11 Feb., 1 Eliz. (9 pp.) Charter of Inspecimus of charters of 1 Mary, 28 Hen., and 1 Edw. 6, Dec. 8, being an inspecimus of the charter of Henry 8th, and confirming them.

Oath of the younger brothers (temp. Eliz. $\frac{1}{2}$ p.).

Oath of the elder brothers.

Oath of the clerk of the Company.

This book was produced by Mr. Whormby in the case of the Trinity House v. Francis Lilly in the Exchequer. (Memorandum signed by Ja. Reynolds.)

At the beginning of the volume are the title page and several leaves of Horæ Beatissime Virginis, printed by Wynkyn de Worde. The table for finding the moveable feasts, at the back of the title, mentions "this year 1509."

CHARTERS.

6 Hen. VIII., May 20. Exemplification of, dated 22 July, 3 George II. (2 skins.)

1 Eliz., Feb. 11. Insuperimus of charter of 1 Ed. VI., Dec. 8.

36 Eliz., June 11. Grant to the Trinity House of the lastage and ballastage of the Thames, and of beaconage and buoyage.

2 James I., Oct. 13. Charter of incorporation of the Trinity House.

12 Car. II., Nov. 27. Confirmation of previous charters, and additions.

17 Car. II., June 24. Patent of lastage and ballastage to the Trinity House in fee.

30 Car. II., May 25. Grant to the Trinity House of dues for Winterton light.

1 James II., July 8. Charter of incorporation to the Trinity House. (10 skins.)

3 James II., April 22. Charter of incorporation of the Shipwrights Company. (2 skins, damaged.) They are incorporated by the name of the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Arte or Misterie of the Shipwrights of England. There are to be one master, 4 wardens, and 12 assistants. Matthew Baker is named first master. Joseph Pett, William Bright, Edward Stephens, and Nicholas Symonson are named the first 4 wardens, and the 12 assistants are named.

A large folio volume (18th century) containing an account of the Corporation of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and of sea marks in general, by John Whormby, Esq., clerk of the said Corporation.

The contents of this volume were printed (for private distribution) by the Corporation in 1861. The work was completed in 1746. The following are the contents, as taken from the printed volume.

Introduction.—Of the number, nature, and names of our Trinity Houses.—Of the state of those societies before their respective charters.—Of the charters granted to the Trinity House at Newcastle.—Of the charters granted to the Trinity House at Hull.—Of the Trinity House (so called) at Dover.—Of the relation, correspondence, and disputes between the Trinity House of Deptford and the other Trinity Houses.—Of the Royal Hospital for seamen at Greenwich and of other charities, wherein all or some of the elder brethren of the Trinity House of Deptford are Governors.—Of the chest at Chatham.—Of the Trinity House at Leith.—Of other charities relating to mariners.

Account of the Trinity House.—Of the charter of Henry 8th, and of those which confirmed it, verbatim; and of the probability of a further charter by Queen Elizabeth.—Of the charter of King James 1st, and the state of the Corporation during the civil wars.—Of the re-establishment of the Corporation by the charter of King Charles 2nd, and the surrender thereof to King James 2nd.—Of the charter of King James 2nd.—Of further charters and Acts of Parliament proposed, and of the Pilots Act.—General remarks on the foregoing charters.—Of the general ends and uses of the Corporation as expressed in those charters.—Of their name and title of incorporation, and the mention of their charters therein.

Of the Masters of the Corporation and their qualifications, elections, office, and privileges.—Of the younger brethren.—Of the elder brethren.—Of the Master and his deputy.

An Account of sea-marks.

Folio, parchment, 18th century. Copies of letters patent, &c. (386 pp.)

Charter of 20 May, 6 Hen. 8. 1514.

Charter of confirmation 11 Feb., 1 Eliz., reciting the charter of 8 December, 1 Mary, being an insuperimus and confirmation of charter of 20 March, 4 Edw. 6.

Exemplification 22 July, 3 Geo. 2, of the charter of Hen. 8.

Translation of the same.

Charter of confirmation with additions. 13 Oct., 2 James I.

The like 27 Nov., 12 Car. II.

The like 8 July, 1 Jac. II.

Grant of coat of arms to the Trinity House, 24th of January, 16 Eliz., by G. Dethick, principal king-of-arms.

Bye laws of 1514 and 1540, and the ancient oaths of the brethren and clerk.

Bye laws of 1662, 1673, and 1687.

Private statutes in 1532, 1543, and 1566.

Extracts from patents of the Lord High Admirals with regard to beaconage and ballastage from 1483 to 1738.

Grant from the Lord High Admiral to Tregonwell and Huse of the ballastage of the river Thames, 1541.

Leases of the ballastage in the 16th and 17th centuries and other documents about it.

Grants of buoyage and beaconage of the Thames in the 16th and 17th centuries by the Lord High Admiral.

Grant by Queen Elizabeth to the Trinity House of the offices of ballastage, buoyage, and beaconage, 1594.

Grant by King Charles II. to the Trinity House of the ballastage and soil of the river, 1665.

1713-1726. Five decrees in Chancery relating to the ballastage.

1626, 1607, and 1609. Orders in Council about sea marks at Caister and Lowestoft.

Patents to the Trinity House for lights; at Winterton 1678, Scilly 1680, Eddystone 1694.

Acts of Parliament for light at Eddystone 1705 and 1709.

Lease of the Eddystone light and duties.

Patent to the Trinity House for lights at Milford, 1714.

Do. for lights at Portland, 1716.

Do. for light at St. Bees, 1717.

Do. for light at Foulness, 1719.

Do. for three lights at the Casket, 1723.

Do. for light at the Nore, 1733.

(Following each of the last six patents is a copy of a lease of it).

Patent for floating light at Dudgeons Shoal, 1736.

Patent for light at the Flatholm, 1737, and lease of it.

Patent to the Trinity House for lights on the Lizard Point, 1751.

Do. for floating light near the Eddystone rock, 1757.

Charter by King James II. to the Trinity House of Newcastle, 1617.

Charter of King James II. to the Trinity House of Hull, 1661.

Patent for floating light near the Eddystone rock, 1756.

(The above list is taken from the table of contents of the volume.)

Folio, parchment, 18th century. 386 pp.

Copies of letters patent, &c.

Copies of the letters patent of Henry 8th, Queen Elizabeth, James 1st, Charles 2nd, and James 2nd, of the grant of a coat of arms 24 January, 16 Eliz.; of the bye laws of 1514 and 1540, and the ancient oaths of the brethren and clerk; of the bye laws of 1662, 1673 and 1687; of private statutes in 1535, 1543 and 1566.—Extracts from patents of the Lord High Admirals with regard to beaconage and ballastage from 1480 to 1738; Copy of grant from the Lord High Admiral to Tregonwell and Huse of the ballastage of the river Thames, 1541; of leases of the ballastage in the 16th and 17th centuries, and other document about it; of grants of buoyage and beaconage of the Thames in the 16th and 16th centuries by the Lord High Admiral; of grants by Queen Elizabeth to the Trinity House of the offices of ballastage and buoyage and beaconage 1594; and by Charles 2nd to the Trinity House of the ballastage and soil of the river, 1665; of five decrees (1713-1726) in Chancery relating to the ballastage.

Folio, parchment, 17th century; containing copies of charter and bye laws, temp. Charles 2nd.

Copy of the charter 12 Car. II. Nov. 27; of orders and constitutions and bye laws made by the Master, &c. of the Trinity House, dated 27 Feb. 1662; of bye law made 1673, Aug. 5., imposing a penalty on those who do not obey awards by the Trinity House, (with original signatures, that of S. Pepys being one); of the Act of 8 Eliz. cap. 13, concerning sea marks and mariners.

Folios, end of 17th century.

Copies of the grant of King Charles 2nd (24 June 1669) to the Trinity House of the lastage and ballastage of the Thames; of the like by Queen Elizabeth, 16 June 1594; of King Charles the 2nd patent of ballastage, 18 Aug. 1663, (surrendered); of the charter of 2 James I.; of the Charter of 20 March, 9 Henry VIII.; of the bye laws of the Trinity House, 21 Feb., 22 Henry VIII.; of the Charter of 1 Elizabeth; of leases to c by the Corporation.

Folio, 18th century.

Copies of proceedings in equity and at law by and against the Trinity House, all in the 17th century.

Folio, 18th century.

Copies of proceedings in the Exchequer and in Chancery by the Trinity House; petitions to the King and to the Houses of Parliament; proceedings at law and in equity.

Folio, parchment, 19th century.

Copies of charters in the 18th and 19th centuries; of patents to the Trinity House for lights; of leases and conveyances to the Trinity House.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

ST. MARY MAGDALEN COLLEGE, OXFORD.

In the Fourth Report of his Commission, issued in 1874, a description was given of the charters in the muniment room of Magdalen College so far as a Calendar then in progress for the College had been completed. This Calendar being at length finished, the following supplemental abstract is now submitted of its specially note-worthy contents, with reference to those portions of the collection of which only scanty mention could before be made from the particulars afforded by a brief list drawn up in the time of Queen Elizabeth or James I.

BEDFORDSHIRE. 135 deeds relate to the parish of Tempsford and to the lands of Thomas Phillipp, rector there temp. Hen. VIII, from about 1300 to 1543. Will of Thomas Fuller, 8 Jan. 1457. Decree of arbitration in a suit respecting the chantry lands in Temesford, which provides for the establishment of a chantry-priest who shall also keep a free grammar school without taking anything for his teaching, to be appointed hereafter by the heirs of Thos. Bulle and by the churchwardens; 20 June 1517. An agreement for the erection of an oak ceiling and a reredos in the chancel of the church, dated 22 Aug. 1512. This appears to deserve transcription as a record of church decorative work of the time.

"This indenture made the xxiiijth day of August in the iiiijth yere of the reign of our Soverayn lord Kinge Kyng Henry the viijth between Thomas Phelipe, clerk and person of Temesford in the county of Bedford, of that won partye, and William Pond^a of the sed Bedford, joyner, carver or carpinder, of that other partye, witnesseth that this sed William Pond^a shall make a floreth from the rodeloift of the chauncell or quere of the sed Temesford vnto the celed worke ouer the hie autour in the sed quere or chauncell, and shall imbowe, cele, and knott and in euery degre shalkeve, joyne, and make perfit the sed floreth after the forme and fassion of the celed worke ouer the hie autour aforesed, and from the sed floreth shall make after his best maner a kerued and a clene joyned Reredose up to the sed celynge ouer the sed hie autour, and agayn the middest of the sed reredose shalmake an autour of timberworke, and from the sed reredose vnto the rodeloift aforesed on the south (south?) side he shall make a clene imbowed kerued windo, and shall make the doores after the forme and fassion of the queredores beneth, and shalfind clene sasonable hart of oke for all and euery aforesed, and ther shall close and shitt in and make perfit a crosse chappell, and shalfind all maner stuff and workemanship thereto, and shaltake no other workes in hand to this sed worke be perfily ended; So that Thomas Phelipe, the parson aforesed, shalbe at no maner cost nor charge nother of stuff nor of workemanship, but the said William Pond^a, or his assignes shalfind all his costes and charge all maner stuff and workemanship other in ston, yron, or tymler nedfull to this forced worke. And the sed Thomas shal pay or cause to be payed to the sed William Pond^a or to his assignes in lawfull money of Yngland iii^l. viij^s. iiij^d.

In witnesseth that the sed Thomas and William will and shall this bargayne eche to other performe, the sed Thomas and William eche to other to thes indenturs have put to ther scales the day and tyne aforesed. Suerte for all and euery of the premisses is William Gimber, bocher, of Temesford. Witnessse, William Coper, John Cooper, Henry Tynghey, and the aforesed Gimber and Pond^a and more."

BERKSHIRE. For Appleton and Tubney there are 141 deeds, beginning in the case of the former only at 1636, but extending in the case of the latter from about 1250 to 1678. Amongst these are many granted by the Corbets of Hadley in Shropshire, who were also lords of Tubney from the time of Edw. II. to that of Edw. IV.; an agreement in 1480 between Magd. Coll. and dame Margaret, late the wife of Sir John Leynham, alias Plummer, Knt, for the establishment of an obit-priest in the College and also of one in the church of St. Bartholomew-the-Less, London, who is, besides, to preach the word of God from Christmas to Easter, in consideration of the grant of the manor of Tubney to the College; and a sale of the moiety of the advowson of Appleton by Will. Lenthall of Bessilsleigh (afterwards the Speaker) in 1638. One deed which has been missing for more than a century contained a gift of 40s. per an. for lights in the chapel of Tubney, out of lands in Marcham. The right of rabbit catching is specially granted in a lease to a tenant from Sir Rob. Corbet, Knt., in 1445, provided there be no excessive destruction.

Ashbury.—For the manor of Staineswick, there are 138 deeds, from about 1200 to 1591, including some that relate to Shrivenham. Foundation of the chapel of St. Andrew by Andrew de Wyke, about 1230*; grant of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, in 1316; foundation of an obit for Will. Danvers, Esq., and Joan his wife, and Mand de Vere, Countess of Oxford, in 1454; license of alienation from John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, 27 Nov. 1458; decree by Thomas Langton, Bishop of Salisbury, for the annexation of the chapel at Estwyke to Ashbury, 30 May 1493.

Aston Tyrrold.—A few documents of 16th and 17th centuries relating to the advowson.

Beenharn Valence.—163 deeds (about 1220–1606) for Wallington, of which some, in the time of Edw. I., relate to a family named Mayfelin of Everintune. Manumission by John Trilleck, Bishop of Hereford, of John atte Ree of Homptone, in 1358, with a confirmation by the Dean and Chapter, both of which documents are in French, with good impressions of the seals; lease from Marg. Mareschall, Countess of Norfolk, to the same John atte Ree, about 1375, with fine seal.

Harwell affords a very complete series of 327 deeds, from about 1210 to 1486. Grant from Richard Earl of Cornwall, 18 March, 1256, with seal, broken at the edge. Manumission by Rob. de Bayllo, about 1260, confirmed by Walter Alan about ten years later. Grant from William of Wykham, Bishop of Winchester, 20 Oct. 1379, with confirmation by the Prior and Convent of Winchester. Will of Rich. Fode of Shaldbourne, 23 Nov. 1411. It will show the fullness of local and genealogical history which this series furnishes, to mention as a specimen, that for each of the years 1310 and 1316, there are no fewer than 14 documents. Two leases in 1394 are granted for the unusual period of 1,000 years. A measurement of land by literal feet occurs in 1332, the width of a plot being defined as being eight feet measured "de pedibus predicti Galfredi." Among some Miscellaneous Charters are a few relating to West Wittenham, and the family of St. Helen.

In ESSEX there are 45 deeds for Apton Hall in Canewdon (from about 1260 to 1475), and 18 for East New-Hall in Ramsey, (1413–1482). Amongst these and the Miscellaneous Charters are, an Inq. p. m. of Margery Staple, who died July 15, 1389; several rent-rolls of the manor of Apton Hall; rent-rolls and court-rolls of Badley Hall and Bornham Hall; demise from Will. Booth, Archbp. of York, and John Doreward, to William, Abbot of Colchester, and others, in 1460.

In GLOUCESTERSHIRE, there is an interesting series of thirty-one deeds and papers relating to the advowson of Slymbridge, (1484–1520), but which throw no light on the origin of the curious custom of having a service of song on the top of the great tower of the College at 5 o'clock on the morning of May-Day, for which service 10*l.* are annually paid by the rector of Slymbridge. The tradition has always been that the service was

* Not, as noted in the previous account (Fourth Report, p. 464) before the document had been examined, in 1495.

MAGDALEN
COLLEGE,
OXFORD.

originally in commemoration of Hen. VII.; but while among these deeds there is found one (not dated or sealed, and therefore not completed, but prepared for execution apparently in 1501) by which the College covenant, in return for the royal license for the gift to them of the advowsons of Findon, in Sussex, and of Slynbridge, to offer solemn prayers yearly on 3 or 4 Oct. for the King and his Queen Elizabeth, during his life, and to keep an obit after his death, there is nothing to connect the tower with this commemoration. The annual payment of a third part of the tithes to the College (and the 10l. now customarily paid is a little more than a third of the profits of the living according to the ancient valuation) is enjoined in a decree of Silvester Giglis, Bishop of Worcester, in 1501, which sets forth the objects of the foundation of the College, viz., the study of theology, canon and civil law, and philosophy, and the maintenance of divine service in the manner of a cathedral church, and of a free grammar school for boys and others. The advowsons of Findon and Slynbridge were originally granted by Will. Berkeley, Earl of Nottingham, in exchange for a grant by Bp. Waynflete of a capital messuage in Southwark, enclosed with moats, which was Sir John Fastolf's, a high house with garners, a bake-house, and a wharf; this grant is dated 20 Nov. 1484. It was also covenanted that the Earl and his wife Joan should share in the daily prayers of the College, and have an obit after their death, and that prayers should be offered for the souls of Thomas, Lord Berkeley, great-grandfather of James, late Lord Berkeley, and of the said Lord James and Isabella his wife. This gift was afterwards disputed by Maurice Lord Berkeley, the Earl's brother, but the case being referred to arbitration, it was decided against him in 1505, the College paying to him 40l. and to his son Maurice 40s., and agreeing to him an obit for him.

Eighty-four deeds (1200-1685) relate to the parish of Quinton, and the family of Marmyn, the lords of the same, with descent to the Fitz-Hughs of Ravenswath, and to Ralph, Lord Cromwell. With regard to the claims of the two last families there is a long decree of arbitration (filling two large sheets of vellum), by the Bishop of London and the Bishop of Ely, dated 9 July, 1429, which concerns also the estates of the Marmyns in Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and Sussex. The descent of the claimants is thus given in a paper numbered 59:—

The manor eventually came into the possession of Lord Cromwell, and his executors, Bp. Waynflete, Sir John Fortescue, and Sir Thos. Tyrell, bought it of his niece Maud, Lady Willoughby, for 200l. Upon the conveyance of the manor to the college there is an interesting account in English (drawn up, as it would seem, for the information of the College) of the condition and size of the old house, and of the estimates of two carpenters for its repair with new bay-windows, the one providing wood, &c., for 35l. at 5l. per bay, and the other undertaking the workmanship at 4 marks per bay; with particulars of a house "goodly buylded" within the last 18 years, 14 miles from Quinton, at a cost of 200l., which now may be bought for 80l. There is also a memorial in English, to Waynflete, and the President and Masters of the College, respecting the letting of the farms, and complaining of one John Selbrygge, who disturbed the cottagers in their lands; and after the death of Waynflete, there comes a very long and interesting letter to Pres. Mayew, from the Vicar of Quinton (who does not sign his name), in which he pleads touchingly and earnestly, in the behalf of the poorer members of his flock, for the letting of the land to the community of the "towne" and not to one farmer alone, representing that it is more "meritory" to support a "comynte then one man, your

"tenaunts rather than a strange man, the pore and the "innocent afor a gentylman or a gentylman's man," and that at present the poor cottagers have each one, two, or three acres of laud, and ending by generously offering, if the President will let them have it for 30l., to give him his horse Lyerd and to take a share in the responsibility. Only one document follows this letter previous to the year 1586, and there is therefore no evidence from these deeds whether the memorial that does its writer so much credit was responded to as he desired or not, unless the absence here of subsequent leases may show that the answer was affirmative.

The vast collection of HAMPSHIRE charters (upwards of 1800) many of which came to the College by the annexation of the Priory of Selborne, is for the far greater part of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, and forms a storehouse of early family and local history. The places to which it chiefly relates are Bech and Tydden in Alton, Basing and Basingstoke, Bromdean, Cowfold in Rotherwick, Enham and Andover, Hilmhampton in East-Meon, King's Somborne, Otterbourne, Selborne, Skyes in Wootton, St Lawrence, and Winchester, with many adjacent localities.

Basing has a return made in 1193 respecting the vacancy of the church, and a confirmation in 1194 by the Bishop of Winchester of the churches of Basing and Selborne to the monastery of Mount St. Michael "in periculo maris" in Normandy; a presentation of a clerk to Basing by that abbey in 1204; a confirmation of the above charter of 1194 by Bishop Peter de Rupibus between 1205-1216; a grant from the abbey to the same bishop of both advowsons in 1233, with fragment of seal, with "Inspecimus" by Henry III. in that year, and grant by the Bp. to his newly-founded Priory of Selborne at the beginning of the next year, together with a grant also of Basingstoke; composition with the Priory of Sherborne in 1254.

In Bromdean there is a confirmation-charter from Richard, Earl of Cornwall and Poitou, between 1240-50, with seal, of which the inscription is broken.

Cowfold.—Long petition to the King in Council [in 1490] from various yeomen of Rotherwick against Rich. Rithe, gentleman, of the same place, for usurping their common; for coming into church on the Sunday after the feast of St. Peter, 1 Rich. III., and attempting to stab with his dagger the curate then sitting in his surplice in the quire and saying divine service, whereupon for a long time afterwards no curate would serve them for fear of the said Richard; and also, on the first Sunday of this instant Lent, for making an assault with his knife on the curate when coming from service in Rotherwick church, so that he would have slain him had the curate not been defended by the petitioners; with other misdeeds.

Otterbourne.—Agreement between Sir Henry de Capella and Bishop Will. Raleigh of Winchester, about a pool in Twyford; 7 Sept. 1244. License from the King to Barthol. de Capella to enclose his wood of Otterburne, called Parc, which is within the royal forest of Aysselege; 16 July 1253. Copy of an ordinance by Will. de Edin-don, Bishop of Winchester, confirming the annexation of the church of Hursley to the Provost and Chaplains of the chapel of St. Elizabeth near Winchester; 29 Oct. 1362. Several deeds relating to the purchase of the manor by William of Wykeham from Hugh Crane, and his conveyance of it to his cousin William Wykeham on his marriage with Alice Uvedale, &c., 1386-1401; and deeds relating to the purchase by Waynflete in 1458 from Will. Fenys, Lord Say and Sele.

The Selborne deeds commence about the year 1200, and include, of course, all those which relate to the foundation of the Priory in 1234. The foundation-deed itself is dated 29 Jan. in that year [N. S.]; it is confirmed by the Prior and Conv. of Winchester; and the King grants charters of lands and privileges in the same year on 9 March. 10 Apr. (of which there are three original sealed copies) and 24 Oct. Bulls of Pope Greg. IX., Alex. IV., Clem. IV., and Martin IV., 1239-81. Bond from A[ylmer], Bishop elect of Winchester, for re-payment to the Priory of 200 marks which he had borrowed in his necessity; 2 Feb. [1253]. Two grants from Robert de Sanford, Minister of the Knighthood of the Temple of Solomon in England, about 1260. Warrants from Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, Richard, Duke of York, and Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, as keepers of the King's forests on this side the Trent, respecting the exemption of the Priory from forestal jurisdiction; 1425-1477. Many documents relating to the churches of West Tisted and East Worldham. Two inventories of vestments and church goods in the Priory, in the time of Hen. VI., of which the second is dated 1442. Roll containing copies of the legal instruments used at election of Prior in monasteries not exempt from episcopal jurisdiction. Documents connected with the annexation of the Priory to Magd. College, the revenues being perverted to lay uses, and no one remaining in the house but the Prior; 1484-7.

MAGDALEN
COLLEGE,
OXFORD.

An inventory of the goods and possessions of the Priory of Eastbourne, Sussex, in 1451, has, by some curious accident, found its way into the collection of Selborne charters. It shows alike in chapel, house, and farm that the Priory was but scantily furnished, and the following extract of total rental with its subjoined statement of debt exhibits an insolvent condition as well as bad arithmetic:—

“Eseburne.

| | | | | |
|--|---|---|---|--------------------------------------|
| Prioratus ibidem valet omnibus annis, ut patet per rentale | - | - | - | viii ^u . |
| Terra cum pastura per estimacionem valet | - | - | - | xl ^l . |
| Capella de Mydhurst cum reparacione | - | - | - | xl ^l . |
| Capella de Doddsworth | - | - | - | xiii ^s iiiij ^d |
| Capella de Farnhurst | - | - | - | lx ^s |
| Ecclesia de Compton et Merton, cum reparacione, valet per annum, ultra pensiones solutas Priori de Lewys, vj. marcas, Episcopo Cicest. xxiii ^s iiij ^d . Decano et Capitulo Cicest. vj ^s viij ^d . Archidiacon. Cicest. vj ^s viij ^d , et sic valet per an. | - | - | - | v marc. |
| Ecclesia de Eseburne valet per annum de qua Ecclesia vicarius percipit eadem summam | - | - | - | x marc. |
| Terra de Newod valet per annum | - | - | - | xl ^l . |
| Worthing valet per annum | - | - | - | v marc. |
| Summa totalis xxviii ^s vj ^s viij ^d . [sic] | - | - | - | |
| Et in liberacione vicarii de Eseburne. | - | - | - | x marc. |
| Et sic romanet xxiii ^s iiij ^d [sic] tam pro reparacione demorum quam pro aliis expensis. | - | - | - | |
| Debita ibidem pro reparacione et aliis expensis necessariis hoc anno. lxxv ^s vj ^s viij ^d .” | - | - | - | |

The following list of the Priors of Selborne, whose names occur in the charters, shows the years in which mention of them is found, and will be found partly supplemental to Dugdale.

- 1234-58. John, first prior.
1262. R. [“Nich. de Cantia, elected 1262,” Dugdale.]
1268-71. Peter de Disenhurste.
1277-91. Richard.
1306-18. William [“Basing”].
1326-39. Walter [“de Insula, elected 1324”].
1352-7. Edmund.
1366. Nicholas.
1378-92. Thomas [“Weston”].
1413-7. John Wynchestro.
1426-53. John Stepe.
1454-64. Peter Berne or Bernes.
1468-71. John Morton.
1474-7. Peter Bernes again.
1479. John Scherpe, formerly sub-prior of Bruton.
1484. Thomas Asshforde, the last prior, pensioned with an annual pension of 66s. 8d. Sub-prior in 1463-4.

Skyrrs.—Lease from Magd. Coll. to the “Venerable” William Warham, clerk (afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury), of their messuages, lands, &c., called Skyrrs, for ten years, at an annual rent of 66s. 8d.; 12 Jan. 1501, 16 Hen. VII.

Winchester.—Grant from Sir Symon de Winton, knt., to the Hosp. of St. John of all the shops which he has in the street of Ipra and Doway about St. Giles’s Hill, without Winchester, for the sustenance of a chaplain to pray for the souls of himself, his wives Ela and Beatrice, and his sons Simon and Peter, and also for maintenance of a lay brother; about 1280. Two documents between 1220-1230, and two in 1329, have the city seal attached, respecting which Mr. J. Gough Nichols observed in a paper printed in the Winchester volume of the Archaeological Institute’s Transactions, that it had yet to be discovered.*

Among the Miscellaneous Charters is a confirmation by King John (dated at Freidmauntel, 2 March, in his first year, 1200) to Gervase Gaubert, of the gift to him by

* The first of these documents is dated, “die Merc. prox. ante ff. s. Gregorii secundum post primam coronationem dom. Henrici Regis” “Ange III. Joh. Regis apud Westm.” The first coronation of Hen. III. took place at Gloucester, 28 Oct. 1216, and the second at Westminster, 17 May 1229; the word “primam” would seem therefore to be a scribe’s error for “secundam,” perhaps caused by his having written “secundum” immediately before. The second feast of St. Gregory that occurred after the second coronation would be that of 12 March; and the date of the deed would then be 17 March 1221. It is attested by Elyas Westm. as mayor of Winch., and William the Spicer and Roger de Cam as bailiffs. The second deed is not dated, but is attested by Hugh Oysun as mayor, and Andrew Blunt and Will. Little as provosts.

Godfrey, Bishop of Winchester, of a hide of land in . . . (crused), and of all the land which was Walter’s, the son of Rich. de Oxoneburne, in his manor of Menes, who was outlawed because he had murdered his brother; to hold according as a charter of King Richard and that of the said Bishop testify. A fine impression of the Great Seal is attached, unfortunately imperfect.

In Kent there is an interesting series of 63 deeds relating to the Hospital for Lepers at Romney, which was founded by Adam de Cherringes about 1186, and dedicated to SS. Stephen and Thomas of Canterbury, and which, having become desolate and forsaken, was re-founded by John Frances, the then patron, for a Master and Chaplain, in 37 Edw. III., and conveyed to Waynflete in 1459, who procured its annexation to Magd. Coll. in 1471. The deeds extend from about 1180 to 1459. Amongst them are indulgences attached to the Hosp. by Will. Witlesey, in 1363, while Bishop of Rochester, and again in 1365, when Bishop of Worcester; by the Archbishops of Cant. and York, with eleven bishops of both provinces in 1333; by Nicholas, “Christopolitani Episcopus,” to those who shall have heard divine service from Sir Adam Cockyrmouth, of the diocese of Carlisle, or shall have confessed to him, or shall have contributed to the Chapel of the Hosp., in 1391; and by Cardinals Astorgius of Benevento and Latinus de Ursinis in 1451. Bull of Pope Boniface IX. to the Archbp. of Cant., directing him to recover to the Hosp. all lauds, rents, &c. which have been alienated by the existing rector, John Frobodi, and by his predecessors; 30 Apr. 1299. Certificate by the Barons of the town of Rome that the Hosp. or Chapel is a free chapel, that it was taxed for the last fifteenth, and therefore ought to be discharged; 16 Apr. 1430, with the town seal.

The LINCOLNSHIRE charters are numerous. For Caudlesby and the neighbourhood, 176, from about 1200 to 1562. Account, in the middle of the 14th cent., of the manual services due by the tenants of Caudlesby and Gunby in harvest-work, carriage, &c. Wills of William, son of Roger de Benyngton, 10 May 1397; of Will. de Erlarkare of Waynflete, 9 Dec. 1415; of Mand de Cromwell, Lady de Tateshale, 14 Sept. 1416; of John, son of Will. de Benyngton, 1 Nov. 1423; of Edw. Ascough, of Wyntorpe, 4 July 1520. Several releases from Thomas de Percy, Earl of Worcester, in 1399, and from Henry de Percy, Earl of Northumberland, in 1404. Inq. p. m. of Rich. Corbet, who died 8 Oct. 1407. Two releases from Edm. Grey, Earl of Kent, 30 June 1473. Letter from John Gigur, Warden of Tattershall, to Bp. Waynflete, about the building of the school at Waynflete, with the agreement between the Bishop and a carpenter for all the carpentry work required for the chapel and school-house there.* Letter from Lady Maud Willughby (from whom the manor was obtained by Bp. Waynflete) to the Pres. and Fellows of Magd. Coll.

Horsington.—97 deeds, 1218-1632. Grant from Will. de Mandeville, Earl of Essex, about 1225. Accounts of the bailiff of the manor, 1353-4, and 1464-5. Inq. respecting the descent of the manor, 1372. Court-rolls, 1460 and 1530.

Manor of Multon Hall, bought by Waynflete of Sir Gervase Clyfton, Knt., in 1460, for 800l. 268 deeds, from 1166 to 1611. Copies of two grants in 1166-70 from Conan, Duke of Brittany, taken in the fourteenth century “de la Red Boke de Multon in Houland, ad tale signum [i. e.] jgl.” Endowment by Margery, formerly wife of Sir Alau de Multon, of the chantry of the chapel of St. James, in the court of Sir Thos. de Multon, her son, at Frampton; about 1260. Letter from Sir John de Multon to his wife Mary, in French; before 1379. Receipts from the Priory of Walton, 1399-1402. Will of Dame Thomasina [or Thomasia] Gra; to be buried in St. Margaret’s, Westminster, where her husband Sir John Gra is buried; legacies of vestments, altar-cloths, &c.; 30 Jan., 14 Edw. IV., 1475. License from George, Duke of Clarence, to Waynflete to give Multon, &c., to Magd. Coll.; 30 May 1475.

Saltfleetby.—113 deeds; about 1180-James I. List of rectors of All Saints in the 14th cent. Demise from John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, and Thomas de Dacre, Lord of Gildesdon, to John Gra, Knt., and Thomasia his wife, of the manor of Ingelly, &c.; 3 Aug. 1450.

Stamford.—58 deeds; 1300-1511.

* These two documents are printed in Chaudler’s Life of Waynflete, pp. 37-8. There are some errors in the transcript of the letter, of which the following are the chief: “rere college,” read “pore college”; “Tontott,” read “Gotott”; “beke dayli somwhat conyns,” read “loke dayli for his conyns”; “chrych,” read “wyryth”; “happi,” read “harri”; “live and healtie,” read “live and longe.”

MAGDALEN
COLLEGE,
OXFORD.MAGDALEN
COLLEGE,
OXFORD.

Swaby.—354 deeds; about 1170-1625. Grant from Alan, Prior of the Hosp. of Jerusalem in England, of land in Swabi, in 1194. Grants to and from the Cathedral Church of Lincoln, Louth Park Abbey, Barling Abbey, Hagney Abbey, and the priories of Markby and Bollington. Will of John de Swaby, clerk; to be buried at Billesby; 24 June 1279. Grant by Isabella de Welle, Lady de Vesey, of Emcina, daughter of Gilbert called Cade, 23 July, 1307, to Walter de Swaby, chaplain, who manumits her to God and the Church of B. Margaret at Swaby, by deed dated 28 Sept. 1309.

Among the Miscellaneous Charters (which contain many relating to Lincolnshire) are, a license from Henry, Bishop of Lincoln to Sir Thos. de Multon, for burials in the cemetery of the chapel of North Ingelby, which is in his patronage, 26 Jan. 1334; rental of the manor of Winterton, temp. Edw. III.; letters patent from Hen. VI. to John Weston and Margaret his wife, for a weekly market and two annual fairs in the village of Burgh-in-le-Marsh, 18 Apr. 1424.

LONDON.—For Chancery Lane, 16 deeds, 1512-1556. The first one is a lease from Thomas Docwra, Prior of the Hosp. of St. John of Jerusalem, of a messuage in Chancellor's Lane, which was formerly held of the late Prior John Kendall, with a fine impression of the Prior's seal. Lease to the Master and Wardens of the Guild of our Lady and of St. Dunstan, in the parish church of St. Dunstan-in-le-West, and release from them, with fine seal of the guild; 1542. Bequest to the College by Owen Oglethorpe, for the foundation of an obit; 24 Feb. 1556, 2 & 3 Phil. and Mar.

Temple Bar.—75 deeds; 1345-1513. Will of Richard Litfote; to be buried in the church of the Carmelites in Fleet Street; bequeaths three psalters, 12*l.* each to five young women, "ad se maritandum," and 12*l.* each to five infants to be baptised. Documents relating to the messuage called "le Cheker super le Hope," with a plea in Chancery in 1473, in which the right of Bp. Waynflete to it is confirmed.

Walling Street.—5 deeds; 1244-1631.

Westminster.—A curious complaint (among the Miscellaneous) by Ralph Aleyn, a monk of Westminster, of "grevous wronges and horrible menys" done against him by Abbot Edmund, who charged him with stealing plate from his chapel, and from his wine-cellar, and who had recourse to discover the thief to one John Mortmyer, calling himself a necromancer, in the Old Jury, who was put in the pillory; about 1450-60.

SOMERSET.—120 documents for Ford in the parish of Bradford and for Taunton; about 1250-1496.

SURREY.—For Southwark there are 394 deeds extending from about 1240 to 1585, relating to Fastolf's property (as noted in the Fourth Report) in interesting detail. Release from Humphrey "Elius Regis," (afterwards Duke of Gloucester), 10 Jan. 1413, 14 Hen. IV. Agreement, in French, between Nich. Molyneux and John Wynter, esqrs., that they will be brothers in arms, and that if either be taken prisoner the other will be bound for his ransom, &c. (copy); dated 17 July 1421, in the church of St. Martin at Herefen. Acknowledgement by Fastolf of the receipt of 500 marks from Nich. Molyneux, Master of the King's Chamber of Accounts at Rouen, to be given to his brother in arms, John Wynter, for the purchase of lands; 22 Jan. 1436*. Copy of the will of Sir Will. Olyver, lately vicar of Croydon, 12 March 144†. Declaration, by an executor, of the will of John Wynter; 1 Oct. 1450. Deeds in 1473 relating to Richard Fastolf, citizen and tailor of London, and kinsman of Sir John, whose son, John Fastolf, petitions the Crown about 1510 for recovery of Sir John's property.† A few documents relate to the Abbeys of St.

Mary Overey and Bermondsey, and more to that of Malling, of the abbesses of which house there are deeds of Regina between 1240-50, Katherine in 1478, Margaret Pympe in 1482, Joan in 1490, and Elizabeth Hulle in 1501-14. The earliest of the Malling documents appears, however, to be a forgery; it purports, although apparently written about 1430-40, to be a Brief addressed by Archbp. Becket, about 1162-4, to the Bp. of Rochester and others, taking, in very strong terms of denunciation against violators, the possessions of the nuns of Malling into the protection of the Church; a seal is attached, but very indistinct and faint in impression, and now so broken as to be almost useless for any identification. Another document (numbered 30 C.) is the commencement of a transcript, made at the beginning of the 15th cent., of an "Inspecimus" granted by Edw. [I.], in which this Brief is recited, but apparently from another copy. It is, therefore, just possible that the one here preserved was the renewal of a decayed original, to which a fragment of the old seal was attached. After Fastolf's death the Abbey of Lesnes is found forging deeds to substantiate a claim to some of his property; in a book of copies written in 1479, it is said of one charter (No. 125), purporting to be of the time of Hen. III., which is written on stained, old-looking, parchment, with an early seal, but by a hand of the 15th century, "Si bene inspicatur illa carta pretensa Andree le Ferun apparebit ficta et contrafacta; quia est carta, ut patet per sigillum et paramenum, ante datam, videlicet tempore Regis Henrici tertii vel ante, et tamen litera in illa carta apparet nigra et frisca et non vetusta, ac si esset scripta infra xx annos. Ac etiam si bene notetur, forma scripture litere in illa carta apparebit ficta, quia litera est quasi textus sive sethonde, et non fuit talis modus scribendi ex antiquo tempore." Another deed, dated 1299, had been forged by some "subtilis fabricator," who crased the old writing on an ancient document, and inscribed the forgery, retaining the old and genuine seal, and adopting the name which was on that seal, but making the mistake of giving two sheriffs of London as witnesses who were not sheriffs until 1301.*

WARWICKSHIRE. Westcot and Tysoe.—123 deeds, from about 1180 to 1512. Rental of Westcot in 1389. Account of the rights of common there in 15th cent. Lease from Hen. Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, to Will. Catesby, 7th Sept. 1481; and grant from Rich. III. to R. Mayhew, one of his chaplains, and Pres. of Magd. Coll., and to the College, of land forfeited by the Duke, 1 Feb. 1481.

Willoughby.—520 deeds, from about 1200 to 1566. Foundation of an obit for Sir Stephen and Sir Gilbert de Sograve, about 1240-5. Confirmation by Hen. III. of all the grants made in various places to the Hosp. of St. John Bapt. at Oxford; dated at Wudestok, 25 Aug. 1246. Grant from John de Plessetis, Earl of Warwick, about 1250-60. Proceedings relative to a claim made by the Priory of Ronton in Staffordshire on the church of Wilby as dependent upon their church of Greneberge, with examinations of 35 witnesses, parishioners of Wilby; 1280. Deeds relating to lands belonging to Hugh le Ken, or le Cook, of Dublin; 1306-10. Grant of a corrody for life from the Hosp. of St. John Bapt. to Will. le Blount of Williby and Lucy his wife, including lodging in the Hosp., food clothes, coals, candles, and all necessities, and maintenance for their daughter Joan among the Sisters of the Hosp. for four years, giving her at the end of that time a gown and ten marks as a marriage portion; in return for confirmation of lands which had been given by Rob. Noreys, father of the said Lucy; 1364. Will of the aforesaid Will. Blount; to be buried in the Hosp.; 12 Feb. 1348(-9). Grant from Prior Geoffrey and the Conv. of New Place, near Stamford; 1350. Court-rolls, 1415-21. Rental of the manor, 1462.

Amongst a number of Miscellaneous Charters are these:—

1. Rental of the monastery of Bittlesden, Bucks, in 1447.
2. Rental and terrier of the priory of Rowney, Herts, in 1429.

* The Hampshire deeds present five instances of like forgery. Grants to Selborne in Basing and Basingstoke are dated in the years 1231 and 1232 before the foundation of the Priory; are also dated "anno regni regis Henrici decimo sexto" instead of "Henrici filii Joh.," as invariably was done in the case of Hen. III.; are dated before private deeds of such a kind had begun to be dated at all; and are in a handwriting of about 1280-1300, and probably, if attempts were made to discuss the hand, really later. In Oxfordshire there are two deeds dated respectively 1278 and 1288, but really written about a century later, in which the years are given as 6 and 26 "Edw. fil. Henrici tercii" instead of "Hen. fil. Joh.," and in which the names of the witnesses are exactly the same in both cases.

* Mem. quod dictus Joh. Wynter, armiger, obiit anno r. r. Hen. VI. xxi. (1442-3), sepultus coram altare ex parte boriali Crucifixi in navi ecclesie fratrum Carmelitarum in Fleetestre, London, sub lapide marmoreo." Southwark 204.

† The relationship of Richard to Sir John is not distinctly stated in the deeds, but they are called brothers in a letter sent to the College, which accompanies a copy of the petition. The following descent of Richard is copied from No. 35 in the Norfolk and Suffolk charters:—

3. Various pleas in the Hustings Court at Oxford between 1328 and 1406.

4. Indenture between Bp. Waynflete and Sir Thomas Ingyldeu for the establishment of two priests to pray for the souls of the said Thomas, Master John Buwyk, and Eleonor Ask, in Magd. Hall; 22 Aug. 1454.

5. Draft (on paper) of a legal opinion from four lawyers that the Hosp. of St. John Bapt. may be changed into a college of secular persons by license of the Pope and consent of the patron, provided the worship of God, hospitality, and exhibition of poor persons, be maintained.

6. Agreements by Waynflete in 1475-9 with Will. Orcheyrd, freemason, for making the great west window of the chapel, of seven lights, according to the portraiture of the said William, for 20 marks; 32 cloister-windows and buttresses, chamber-windows, and library-windows, each to be as good as, or better than, the windows in All Souls' College; buttresses and battlements for the chapel, hall, library, two towers, &c.; a "vyse" of the great tower, and a spire 16 feet high, with pinnacles 11½ feet high.

7. Agreement on the part of Will. Dambir, executor to Sir Richard Vyse, late parson of Fallay, Hants, to give to Dame Cristyane Shrevenam, prioress of Littlemore, a piece standing on three lions, silver gilt, a covering of the same silver, with a crown gilt, the top enamelled blue, with six silver spoons, for 33s. 4d.

8. Indenture tripartite respecting the gift by Rich. Hastyngs, Lord Willoughby, and Joan his wife, of 200 marks to David Huys, Prior of the Friars Preachers in Oxford, for the making of the Choir and Dorter of the said Priory, and the establishment in return of masses for their souls and those of their kindred; 26 May 1505.

9. Bond from Will. Este, of Abingdon, mason, Louis Foosse of the same, painter, and Martin Wylliamson, of Oxford, beer-brewer, to Magd. College for the making a clock of new iron, both house, hammer and wheels, with bars and hand to the dial, for 10l.; the said clock to go truly for a year and a day, and all repairs within the year to be at their expense; 1 July 1505.

10. Indentures of a tailor's apprentice in Oxford, 1 May 1524; (probably among the earliest existing examples.)

11. Three copies of a statement made by the Pres. and Fellows in 1596 respecting the obligations devolving upon them from the incorporation of St. John's Hosp. and from a benefaction left by John Claymond for the relief of the poor, in which a description is given of an old and damp vault which was used as an almshouse for occasional relief. (This paper is quoted in Chandler's Life of Waynflete, pp. 253-4 from a copy in Harl. MS. 4240.)

12. Two inventories of plate belonging to the refectory of Battle Abbey in 1420 and 1437, with several other documents relating to the Abbey and to the Priory of Brecknock dependent upon it.

13. Grant by Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, to Waynflete of the advowson of the Priory or Church of Shylbrede, Sussex, 20 Dec. 1459.

14. Foundation of an obit in Dureford Abbey, Sussex, by Richard Walter, M.A., parson of Bramshot, Hants, and late fellow of Magd. Coll., with a provision for repayment of money in case the Abbey be dissolved, suppressed, or otherwise decayed within 60 years; 14 Oct. 1528.

15. Warrant from Jordan, Bishop of Alba, the Pope's Penitentiary, to the Chancellor of the Church of York, to absolve Thomas Morton, presbyter of York, from all censures for various immoral and irregular actions, upon sufficient penance and temporary suspension; 3 June 1429.

16. Letters patent of Edw. III. taking into his protection all the men and lands of Richard Almari, who has gone at his command with Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, into Scotland; 4 Feb. 1352.

17. Account roll of John Brokehampton, Master of the Hosp. of St. John at Brackley, as receiver for the manors of Lord Lovell and Holland; 1400-1.

18. Two pardons from Hen. VI. to John Leyntone, gentleman; 14 Aug. 1452, and 20 Jan. 1458. Another pardon to the same as one of the executors of Ralph, Lord Cromwell, from Edw. IV., dated 8 Feb. 1462, is among the Candlesby charters.

19. Petition from the House of Commons to the King (Hen. VI. ?) for the restraint of alien merchants.

20. Agreement by Will. Mogyl, M.A., aged upwards of 60 years, Archdeacon of Stafford, with Adrian de Bardis, for the procuring (for the sum of 11l.) two bulls, the one to permit him to visit his archdeaconry by deputy, and the other to permit him to have a portable altar for himself, his friends, and his servants; 14 Nov. 1453.

21. Bull from Pope Innocent VIII., addressed "Rectori et Universitati studii Oxoniensis," communicating the intelligence of his election, and desiring the celebration of a mass of the Holy Spirit, preceded by a solemn procession, on his behalf; 12 Sept. 1484.

Two others among these Miscellaneous deeds deserve fuller notice. The one (numbered 297), is a fragment of a roll, of the first half of the fourteenth century, containing the replies of a Prior of Brecknock to a series of articles against him for neglect of duty, insufficiency, immorality, and mismanagement. The replies are in number thirty-seven, but one of the articles, which charges the Prior with having given a palfrey to Humphrey de Bohun as a bribe, is almost entirely cut off, and probably others are lost. The following extracts afford a specimen of the Prior's ingenious excuses, and of the barbarous Latinity in which they are expressed.

"Ad primum articulum respondit sic:—

"De insufficientia regiminis imposita Priori suo respondit, quod quamvis ad omne regimen insufficiens, quia tamen ex obedientia sibi injuncta datus fuit ad regimen, et guerra superveniens primo tempore sui adventus et huc usque continuata, impossibile se reddidit ad regimen, quia depredata et ex aliis diversis adversis gravatus juvare se non poterat.

"De hoc quod dicitur quod non est discretus in factis sed tantum in verbis, respondit quod, salva pace dicentium, facta sua secuta sunt verba, sicut potest videri in manerium emendatione et debitorum exoneratione, sicut per computum apparebit.

"Item, de hoc quod impositur ei de negligentia obsequii divini, respondit quod nisi occupatus fuit in negotio domus vel infirmitate detentus, quod sepius contingit per quandam guttam supervenientem, sue salutis immemor, horas, missam, et alia divina non omisit nec contempsit.

"Item, ad hoc quod amisit credenciam pro infidelitate promissorum, respondit ad hoc quod non stitit per eum quin promissa teneret sed potius ex honore debitorum tempore suo solutorum, quo honore a tempore Stephani prioris fuit domus ipsa honorata, non potuit tenere promissa.

* * * * *

"Item, de ebrietate sua et aliis viciis maliciose ei impositis, respondit quod ante tempora sua modus fuit patrie et est quod inter hospites suos et Walenses necesse habet pretendere se potere potum et potare cum eis, salva disciplina sobrietatis. De clamore et ostentatione sui et verborum, respondit quod in publico nunquam exhibuit se clamorose nec verborum nec contenciosum contra honestatem regule, sed in mensa propter pacem domus sese exhibuit jocundum.

"Item, ad hoc quod dicitur quod nimis aspere et inordinate et cum torvo vultu et austere corripit fratres, respondit quod, salva pace dicentium, dictum non est verum, quia ab initio sue puericie talia nunquam fuerunt ei objecta, sed mitibus mitis et austeris et inordinatis minus quam decuit austerus apparuit."

The other (numbered Misc. 306) is a Declaration in English (on a folio sheet of paper) of the grounds of the insurrection which took place in Kent in 1450, and which was directly caused by the acquittal of the Duke of Suffolk in that year. The paper is, in fact, a popular manifesto, in very rugged and, in places, almost unintelligible English; the handwriting is like the composition; and as an illustration of an occurrence noticed by historians with the scantiest notice, and of the first open manifestation of Yorkist sympathies; the document is one of much interest.

"These ben the poyntes, mischeves and causes of the gederynge and assemblynge of us yzoure trefw legemene of Kent, the weche we trist to God for to remedye with helpe of hym oure Kyngre oure Sovereigne lord and alle the comyns of Ingland and to dye thereafter,

"I. Furst, we consyderynge that the Kyngre oure Sovereigne lord by the satiables covetises melicious pompses (sic) in false and noughte broughte up dayly and nyghtly abowte his byghnesse, the same dayly and nyghtly is enformed that good is evulle and evulle is good azenst Scripture seythe. Ve vobis qui facitis de bono malum.

"II. Item, they sey that oure Sovereigne lord is above his lawe and that the lawe is made to his pleasure, and that he may make breke hit as ofte as he lyst withouten any distuncione (sic, distinction ?); the contrarie is trefw and ciles he schuld not have bene swerune in his Coronacione to kepe hit, the weche we conceyve for the higheste poynt of tresone that anny

MAGDALEN
COLLEGE, OXFORD.MAGDALEN
COLLEGE,
OXFORD.

subjecte may do azenst his pryne for to make hym reygne in perjurie.

"III. Item, they seye the Kyng schuld lyve pouh his Comyns, and that her bodyes and goodes ern his; the contrarie is trew, ffor than nedid hym nevur to set parlement and to aske good of hem.

"IV. Item, they enforme the kyng that the Comyns wolde ffurst destroye the Kynges ffrendes and affur hymselfe, and thenne bryng in the Duke of Yorke to be Kyng, so that by there false menes and lesynges they make hym to hate and destroye his verrey ffrendes and to cherysche his ffalse traytours that callen hem selfe his ffrendes.* And zif ther were no more resoun to know a ffrend by he may be know by his covetyse.

"V. Item, they seyne hit were a grete reprofe to the Kyng to resume that he hath zevne of his lyvelode, so that they neythar wulle suffur hym to have his owne nor to kepe loundes or tenementes ffloretid nor non odor goodes but that they aske hit from hym, or elles they takemoney of odre to gete hit hem.

"VI. Item, yt is to remembre that thees false traytours wulle suffer no mane to coome to the Kynges preuse for noe cause withoutune brybe whereas ther owte no brybe to bee but that every mane myghte have his dewe comynge in dewe tyme to hym to aske justyse or grace as the cause requirethe.

"VII. Item, hit is an evy thyng that the good Duke of Gloucester enpechid of tresone by on ffalse traytour alone was so sone merderid, and nevur myzt come to onswere. And the ffalse traytour Pole enpechid by all the comynealte of Ynglond, wyche nombur passyd a quest of xx^{li} mill., myghte not be suffred to dye as lawe wolde, but rather thees sayde traytours of Poles assent that was also ffalse as ffloretgere (sic), wolde that the Kyng our Sovereayne lorde wolde batayle inn his owne realme to the destructione of all his pepulle and of hymself therto.

"VIII. Item, they sey when the Kyng wulle, schalle be traytours, and when he wulle none schalle be none; and that aperute vele hiddrto. Ffor ziff enny of the traytours abonte malyngne azenst eny mane hyge or low they wulle ffynde ffalse menes that they may dye as a traytoure, to have loundes and goodes, but they wulle not in suche case to suffur the Kyng to have hem to paye eyther his dettes or for his vitayles therwhit, nor to be the rycher of on penny.

"IX. Item, the law serveth of ryghte and noughte elles in this dayes for to do wronge whyche for no thyng alnest is spedde but ffalse maters by colour of the lawe for mede, drede, or fawoure, and no remedye is hadde in the Court of Consens nor otherwise.

"X. Item, we sey that our Sovereayne lorde may wele undurstand that he hath hadde ffalse counsayle, ffor his lordez ern lost, his marchundize is lost, his comyns destroyed, the see is lost, ffraunce his lost, hymself so pore that he may nott for his mete nor drynk; he oweth more than ever dyd kyng in Inglond, and zit dayly his traytours that beene abowte hym waytethe whereever thyng schndde coome to hym by his law, and they aske hit from hyme.

"XI. Item, they aske gentille mennys landys and godis in Kent, and calle vs risers and treyturs and the kynges enmys, but we schalle be ffounde his trew lege mene and his best ffrendes with the helpe of Jesu, to whome we crye dayly and nyztly, with mony thousand moe, that God of his ryztwysnesse schall take vengance on the ffalse treytours of his ryalle realme that have brouzt vs in this myschieff and myserie.

"XII. Item, we wulle that alle men know that we wulle neythar robbe nor steele, but thees ffawtes amendid we schall go hoom, wherfore we exorte alle the Kynges trew lege mene to helpe vs, ffor so whatever he be that wulle not thees ffawtes were amendid, he is ffalser then Jew or Sarsone. and we schall with a good wulle lyve and dye vpon hym as vpon eyther Jew or Sarsone; whoso is azenst this, we wulle merke hyme, ffor he is not the Kynges trew lege mane.

"XIII. Item, we wulle it be knowne that we blame not alle the lordes nor alle that biene abonte the Kynges persone, nor alle gentilmene, nor alle men of lawe, nor alle byschoppes, nor alle preestes, but such as maye be ffounde guilty by a just and a trew enquire by the lawe, whereto we mow and desyre that somme trew juger with sertyne trew lordez and knyghtes may be sent into Kent for to enquire of alle suche traytours and brybours, and that justyse may be done vpon hem who so evur they be; and that our Sovereayne lorde derecte his lettres patentes to alle his pepulle there openly to be redde and cried that hit is our Sovereayne lorde his wille and he desyrethe alle his pepulle trewly to enquire of every mannys gouvernaunce and of the defantes that reigne, not lettynge for love, for drede, ne for hate, and that justyse be done forth with; and ther vpon the Kyng to kepe in his owne handis theyre landes and goodes and not zere hem to any mane but for to kepe hem for his owne richesse, or elles to make his enarmye into ffraunce, or elles to pay therwhit his dettes. By oure wryttinges ze may conserve we be the Kynges ffrendes or his enemes. Those forseyd myschieffes thus dewly remedyed, and that from hens forth the no mane vpon peyne of dethe beyng abonte the Kynges persone take enny brybe for any bille of supplicacione or repetacione or cause spedynge or lettynge, oure Sovereayne lorde schall regne with great worship, love of God and his pepulle, that he schall be able with God his helpe to conquer where he wille; and as for vs we schall be redy to defende oure cuntry from all nacions and to go with oure Sovereayne lorde where he wulle comaunde vs.

"XIII. Item, he that is gilty wulle wrye azenst thus (sic) but schall bryng hem downe, and they schulle be aschamed to speke azenst resone; they wulle peraventure say to the Kyng that and they be takene from hyme that they wulle then put downe the Kyng, for the thees wolde lyve longer; and we were disposyd azenst oure Sovereayne lorde, as God forbode, what myzt his traytours helpe hym?

"God be oure gyde, and then schull we spede,
Who so evur say nay, ffalse for ther money realethe.
Trewth for his tales spellethe.

God seende vs a ffayre day! Away, traytours, away!"

These Miscellaneous Charters comprise also a large number of papers relating to the settlement of the property and affairs of Ralph, Lord Cromwell, who died in 1455, by his executors, one of whom was Bp. Waynflete, a settlement which appears to have involved considerable trouble and litigation. The following articles may be mentioned:—a tailor's and draper's bill, very largely for altar-cloths and vestments, extending over the years 1442-7; copy of the will of Rob. Wylngby, Kat., lord of Grosby, 9 Jan. 1443, 26 Hen. VI.; roll of particulars of bonds for money payable in each year from 1453 to 1470 to Cromwell from the Earl of Warwick and others, and from Lord Grey de Rethyn; draft, or copy, on a paper roll, of Cromwell's will, dated 29 Sept. 1454, and signed by the Bp. of Coventry and Lichfield and by "Talbot;" mutilated roll with an account of the goods taken from Tattershall by the heirs at Lord Cromwell's burial "and in breve tyme after;" another mutilated roll of accounts, about 1456, of receipts and expenses at Tattershall Castle; accounts (1466-69) of the administration of the goods by the executors, who state that among outstanding charges are, the estimated expense of building (according to the will) Tattershall Church and Almsouse, 1,200*l.*; building Lamley Church, where Lord Cromwell's father and mother were buried, 300*l.*; to be given to John Leynton for 21 years' service to the said Lord, &c., 800*l.; valuation by sworn appraisers of London of a blue bed of cloth of gold with counterpane and curtains, and a pair of silver basons, double gilt, (in all 215*l.* 18*s.*) bought by Lord Dymham; two papers in English, of suggestions relative to the proposed endowment by Lady Lovell of two fellowships in Magd. Coll. for graduates in divinity to preach and teach the law of God, and to observe her obit, the chapel of Our Lady already existing to serve for the masses and for burial of such as desire it, and the church of the new building (to be, with the help of Almighty Jesu, imagined this summer and begun the next) to be used for the same, if she desire it; declaration by Rich. Hornecastle, Abbot of Bardney, Will Lincoln, Abbot of Barlings, and John Aycastre, Abbot of Topholme, that Lord Cromwell wrongfully claimed Rob. Clerk as his bondman, put him in grievous dross of prison, and compelled him to pay 40*l.* and 40 quarters of wheat at 6*s.* 8*d.* the quarter, and to carry the same to Tattershall against all right, truth, and good conscience, 17 Nov. 1474; copy of the final agreement for division of the property between the executors on the one part, and

* From a subsequent account-roll it appears that the total of all the money and goods administered by the executors amounted to the enormous sum of 32,644*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*

† Among the Letters is a copy of a letter from two of the executors to Lord Dymham, which accompanied this bill: they are at work upon Tattershall Church, but require money to pay the workmen; they are therefore obliged to call in the debts, and the Cardinal of Canterbury said to them plainly this day that if they did not do so he would openly accuse them at Paul's Cross; the best had been little used or not at all; the basons were made in Paris, and are worth 10*s.* an ounce, but are valued at 4*s.* 6*d.* an ounce less; 60*l.* has been paid, and they now ask for 100*l.*, and will wait his pleasure for the rest.

* This last line is repeated here by mistake in the original.
† (pay) omitted in original.

John Knyvet, Esq. and Will. Fitzwilliam, on the other, 14 Feb. 1477.

Lastly, one chest is filled with a mass of miscellaneous papers relating to Sir John Fastolf, and extending to the year 1479, which illustrate his numerous lawsuits during his life, and the disputes over his vast property after his death. Some of them are in the handwriting of William Wyretere. The following are among those items that deserve special notice :—

1412-13. Account roll of the bailiff of the manor of Dedham, Essex, and court-roll of the same in 1428.

[1430]. Notarial instrument (in French, executed at Rouen) respecting Fastolf's charges while engaged in service in France, including the charge of his guarding Verneuil with 43 men-at-arms and 9 archers.

1431-2. Account roll of John Rafman, Fastolf's steward at Castre, for the kitchen, bakehouse, and servants' wages. The list of the whole family is given, as follows :—

- | | |
|------------|---|
| | “ Domina Milcentia uxor domini. |
| | Domina Margareta Braunche [nuper uxor |
| | Philippi Braunche, militis]. |
| | Alicia Fastolfe. |
| “ Generosi | Johannes Kertelyng, clericus, supervisor |
| | domini |
| | Johannes Rafman, seneschallus hospicii. |
| | William Herward. |
| | Capellanus domini. |
| | Agnes Sennede. |
| | Margaria Hoddissone (the laundress). |
| | Ancilla Alicia Fastolf. |
| | Adam Burghie (“ clericus hospicii ”). |
| | Johannes Wyles (“ pincerna ”). |
| | Henriens (the) Cook. |
| | Janyn (the) Bakere. |
| | Thomas Warner. |
| “ Vadletti | Willielmus Wesenham. |
| | Johannes (the) Gardener. |
| | Ballivus manerii. |
| | Famulus supervisoris. |
| | Alicia Halywelle. |
| | Johannes Jebbes [“ piscator et custos cyg- |
| | norum ”]. |
| | Philippus de Camera. |
| | Johannes de Coquina. |
| | Edmundus de Coquina. |
| “ Garcii | Johannes Dary. |
| | Margeria Deye. |
| | [3 names lost.] |
| | Petrus Cleric.” |

1433-4. Long account roll of Fastolf's receiver-general, John Kertelyng, of the money coming from France and of the profits of all his manors, Mich. 12, Hen. VI.—Mich. 13, Hen. VI. The total amount of receipts is about 6,700*l.*, of expenses 3,749*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*. Similar account in 1435-6.

1438, 2 Aug. Copy of the marriage-settlement of Anne, da. and heir of Sir Rob. Harling, Knt., on her marriage to Sir Will. Chamberlayne, for which the latter is to pay Fastolf, 1,000*l.*

1439-1441. Six acquittances from Fastolf for payments from Louis de Luxembourg, Archbp. of Rouen and Administrator of Ely, as instalments on a debt of 900 marks.

1449-1459. Roll (on 7 skins) of expenses in a ten years' law suit carried on by Fastolf against Heydon and others for the manors of Titchwell, Bradwell &c.

About 1450.—Inventory of all the household goods and furniture in the various rooms at Castre* ; with a short list of books, as follows :—“ In the Stowe hous : of “ Frenche books, the Bible, the Cronycles of France,
“ the Cronicles of Titus Levius, a booke of Julius Cesar, “ lez Propretez dez Choses [by Barth. Glanville], Petrus
“ de Crescentis, Liber Almagesti, Liber Geomancie “ cum iijj altis Astronomie, liber de Roy Artour, Ro“ mance la Rose, Cronicles d'Angleterre, Veges de “ larte Chevalerie, Instituts of Justien Emperer, Brute
“ in ryme, liber Etiques, liber de Sentence Joseph, “ Problemate Aristotilis, Vice & Vertues, liber de “ Cronykes de Grant Bretagne in ryme, Meditacions
“ Saynt Bernard.”

1452, 20 Aug. Conveyance by Fastolf to the Archbp. of Cant., the bps. of Ely and Winch. and 13 other feoffees, of all his manors, lands, tenements, and goods, in trust for execution of seven articles (in English) in a charter annexed.

* A similar, but not identical, inventory is printed in Mr. Gairdner's edition of the Paston Letters, l. 375-90, but it does not contain the books.

1467. 21 July. Declaration (in English) by John Howys of his great remorse for the untrue forging of a last will by naked words after Fastolf's death, and vindicating Sir W. Yelverton and W. Worcester against Paston's charges.

Petition (in English) from Nicholas Bokkyng, formerly servant to Fastolf, to Wayneffete, presented after his death by his son John Bokkyng, setting forth the sums lost in Fastolf's service, and praying for compensation.

Parts of two lists (on parchment rolls) of Fastolf's silver plate.

Petition (in English) from W. Worcester to James, Bishop of Norwich, praying him as Visitor of the Abbey of Hulme to compel the Abbot and Convent to carry out the conditions of Fastolf's legacies and gifts.

Declaration by W. Worcester of jewels, plate, and clothes received by him after Fastolf's death.

Rent rolls and account rolls of Fastolf's manors in Norfolk and Suffolk.

Valuation roll (on 7 skins) of all the possessions, castles, offices, &c. of Fastolf, as well in France as in England.

Account (in English) of what was given to Sir Will. Yelverton at Fastolf's funeral, and in money and goods afterwards, including “ a fynger of Seynt John the Baptist.”

1459-60. Long roll with a minute account by Thomas Playter of all his expenses (including meals, writes, presents, &c.) while employed on law business by Fastolf's executors at London and elsewhere.

Similar roll of expenses of W. Worcester, with gifts in charity, and statement of his claim for reward for special services during Fastolf's lifetime.

1466. Notes by W. Worcester on the evidence given by Paston's witnesses, and of questions to be addressed to them ; with the confession of faith made by Fastolf to his confessor about 14 days before his death.*

1473. 1 June. Copy of the last agreement between Wayneffete and Sir J. Paston for the division of the property.

Statement of the reasons that induced Paston to consent to Wayneffete's transfer to Magd. Coll. of Fastolf's intended foundation.

A parcel of very interesting letters to Bp. Wayneffete and the early Presidents of the College contains the following from Cecily, wife of Richard, Duke of York, and mother of Edw. IV., of whose correspondence it is probably the only specimen in existence. The letter itself is in a secretary's hand, but it is subscribed by the Queen-mother with a signature in which c, e, and l present scarcely the slightest variation in form from each other.

“ By Cecily, the King's Modre and late wif unto Richard in right King of England and of France and lord of Irland.

“ Right reverend Fadre in God, right trusty and welbeloued, We grete you hertly well, and desyre you to haue in knowlege how that oure welbeloued seruaunt William Stephyne hath a sone that ys fully [disposed] to be a prest, yf that God will geve hym abylyte and conyng. We, tendryng his godly disposicion in that be halue, desyre and right hertely pray you to be so god lord unto hym that he may be admittyed one of the nombre of your Scolers in your noble College that ye newly haue edified and founded at thynnyversyte of Oxford. And the rather atte thynstance and contemplacion of this oure writing, as we may haue cause to thanke you hereaftir. And ye so doing shalle in oure oppynone do a righte meritorious dede, and also cause vs to be your loving lady in anything we may do for you hereaftir, as knoweth God, who haue you in his keepyng. Yemene undre oure signet at oure Castelle of Berkehamsted the xi day of Octobere.

“ CECYLIE.

“ To the Right reverende Fadre in God, “ oure right trusty and welbeloued the “ Bisshepe of Wynchestre.”†

* “ Item, fiat interrogatorium quod Johannes Pastolf circa xij. dies ante obitum suum dixit fratri Clementi, adtunc suo confessori, in Anglie verbis. “ Maister, here ye what I say you. I was full flylle in myne wytes and in my body, waste be sekene, and I doute me lest that I shuld raffe in my spirites and in myne speche. Wherefore I requyre you afor God, as ye wylt awysere at the dreddful day of dome, that ye recorde how I am in the feyth of the chyrche stodefast as any Crystyn mane may bee, and if through flyllynes my word scape me that where acont the feyth that ye awysere for me at the dreddful day of dome that euermyn intente is to deye a Crystyn mane.”

† No one of the name of Stephen occurs in Dr. Bloxam's Register of Magd. Coll. amongst the members admitted in Wayneffete's time.

MAGDALEN
COLLEGE,
OXFORD.

Amongst the other letters is one from John . . . to Wayneffete, acknowledging a loan of 300 marks to the King; one from John, abbot of Burne, asking, on plea of poverty, for a Lincolnshire place in "Mawlden Hawle" for a kinsman; notice from [Rich. III.] to the College of the appointment of President Mayew as his Procurator-general at the Court of Rome on the death of the Bishop of Durham, dated "at our manour of Shene" 29 March [1484?]. It appears from a subsequent letter from Thomas D[anvers] that Mayew's going to Rome was, at the instance of the Lord Privy Seal, deferred by the King for a year, on account of College business. Letter from Edmund [Audley], Bishop of Salisbury. Among a few letters of later date are two from the Earl of Danby in 1636, respecting the Physic Garden, in which mention is made of "John Tradeskine" [Tradescant]; and one from Bishop Hough to his cousin Mr. John Biddulph of Birbury, dated 23 June 1736, congratulating him on a marriage engagement.

The seals attached to the charters are generally in good condition, and afford some particularly beautiful and scarce examples. About six hundred of them have been reproduced for the College by Mr. Ready of the British Museum, in his beautiful style of fac-simile, including amongst them a fine series of Great Seals from K. John to James I. A selection of two hundred from these casts has been presented to the Society of Antiquaries by Mr. Franks.

A room in which the College leases and account-books are kept, contains also a large number of the rent-rolls of the old Hospital of St. John Bapt., together with court-rolls and rent-rolls of various manors; these, however, have not been as yet completely examined or arranged.

The Bull of Pope Innocent VIII. for the annexation to the College of the Hospitals at Aynho and Brackley, which was in 1874 in the possession of W. J. Legh, Esq., (Fourth Report, p. 460) has been in the past year, 1879, presented to the College by that gentleman.

W. D. MACRAY.

MANUSCRIPTS OF THE CORPORATION OF THE BOROUGH OF PONTEFRAC, YORKSHIRE.

CORPORATION OF
PONTE-
FRAC.

The archives of the corporation of Pontefract are neither so numerous nor so rich in historic materials as the student familiar with the annals of the borough might reasonably hope to find them. The only register of proceedings at Moothall assemblies is "The Booke of Entries," that was begun in the year 1653, when the "severall auintie bookes" formerly used for the registration of municipal orders, constitutions, assessments, and accounts, had either perished altogether in the disturbances and confusion of the civil war, or had been so injured and defaced as to be useless. Nothing remains of the letters that passed in Tudor and Stuart times between the magistrates of the town and the Lords of the Council. Indeed, with the exception of a solitary letter sent from London on 2 February 1688 by Lord Downe to the Mayor of Pontefract, the muniment-closet of the borough contains at the present time no scrap of municipal correspondence having any quality that would entitle it to be placed with historical manuscripts. And, were it not for a few memoranda on the opening leaves of "The Booke of Entries," the municipality would have retained no single contemporary manuscript having any relation to its troubles during the Civil War of the 17th century, or to the incidents following immediately on the capitulation of the royalist garrison and the demolition of the castle, where Richard the Second yielded his last breath.

But though it is perhaps more remarkable for its poverty than its possessions, this collection of writings contains a few remarkable records. Roger de Lacy's Charter (5 Richard I.) to his burgesses of Pontefract is a choice historic relic, that will not fail to seize the attention of students who are especially interested in the growth of municipal institutions in medieval England. As much may be said of the Letters of Lupesimus, with which this charter of the 12th century was confirmed by Roger's great-grandson, Henry de Lacy earl of Lincoln. And the value of these two notable muniments will be heightened to archævistic specialists by the several points where the later charter's recital of Roger de Lacy's concessions differs notably from the ipissima verba of the older instrument. Affording instructive examples of the freedom, with which medieval clerks sometimes copied the writings which they professed to reproduce with the severest accuracy, these discrepancies will inspire the student with a wholesome distrust of the recitals of confirmatory charters, and teach him to have no unqualified confidence in their literal exactness, until he has compared them with the original muniments.

Few though they are, the writings of the Moothall Muniment-Closet afford some other curious illustrations of the fallibility of official draughtsmen, and the occasional worthlessness of documentary evidence. Search at the Record Office has ascertained that the Letters Patent under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, assigned in the ensuing catalogue to Henry the Seventh, were unquestionably so sealed on 1 December, 4 Henry VII., the charter of which they are a duplicate having passed the Great Seal just three days earlier. But though they were unquestionably the deed and gift of Henry the Seventh, these Letters Patent are assigned to Henry the Fourth in the Letters Patent of Inspecimus dated for their confirmation by Edward the Sixth, and are again attributed to Henry the Fourth in the Letters Patent dated by James the First, in the fourth year of his reign. The error of the clerk who drew James the First's Letters Patent may have resulted from his natural but misplaced confidence in the literal veracity of Edward the Sixth's Letters Patent of Inspecimus and Confirmation; and the blunder of the clerk who drew Edward the Sixth's confirmatory charter may have proceeded from carelessness and mental confusion, causing him to mistake and substitute the number of King Henry's year for the numeral of his royal style. But though they may be accounted for in various ways, the errors remain notable instances of the fallaciousness which may qualify records that prima facie deserve the highest degree of confidence. To an ordinary searcher of ancient muniments nothing would seem more improbable than that a royal charter, drawn by expert and learned clerks, working under conditions specially devised for the prevention of mistakes, should be egregiously at fault in respect to one of its prime historic facts. Even by the wariest and most sceptical connoisseur of diplomatic credentials, a charter under the Great Seal, declaring a particular concession to have been made by a particular sovereign would seem sure—and in the absence of conflicting evidence, altogether conclusive—testimony that the grant was made in accordance with the written letters of the record. And yet here in a mere handful of writings, we come upon two charters, emanating from one of the purest sources of historic evidence, each of which bears testimony that Henry the Fourth did certain things which he certainly never accomplished, and that he committed the evidence of those acts to posterity by a document, no single letter of which was formed until seventy or more years had passed over his grave.

Catalogue of Charters, Letters Patent, Exemplifications, Fines, Indentures And Other Writings Preserved In The Muniment Closet of The Pontefract Moothall.

6 June, 5 Richard I.—Charter of Roger de Lacy to the burgesses of Pontefract.—Sciatis presentes et futuri. Quod ego Rogerus de Lasci constabularius cesarie dedi et concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi burgensibus meis de ponte fracto, et hereditibus et successoribus suis libertatem et liberum burgagium, et totos suos tenendos de me et hereditibus meis in feudo et hereditate libere et quiete, honorifice et integre, Reddendo annuatim mihi vel hereditibus meis xliiⁱⁱ denariis pro quolibet tofto integro, sicut fuerunt (sic) in tempore Henrici de Laci, pro omnibus servicis. Reddendo medietatem firme ad mediam quadragesimam, et medietatem ad festum Sancti Michaelis. Preterea concessi et confirmavi prefatis burgensibus meis, et successoribus suis libertates et liberas leges quibus utuntur burgenses domini regis de Grimesbi, que tales sunt:—Quilibet burgensis poterit terram suam dare vel vendere cui volebit nisi religioni, salva firma domini, et in trahit placitum, et reddet terram in manu pretoris ad opus domini et dabit unum denarium de theoloneo, et preter dabit terram emptori de dono dono (sic) domini quietam ab omnibus, et emptor dabit similiter unum denarium. Quicumque emerit aliquam partem alienius tofti et saisatus fuerit sicut prescriptum est adeo liber est sicut totum toftum emerit. Siquis habuerit plures domos in tofto suo et locaverit eas aliquibus liberi erunt vendere emere omnia mercedoniam, sed dabit quatuor denarios pretori per annum. Qui in capitali domo

CORPORATION OF
PONTE-
FRAC.

manserit, quietus erit et liber sicut burgensis esset. Quicumque forisfecerit in burgo predicto, ibi atchiatus erit et iuri statit per iudicium in curia. Prefati vero burgenses non exhibent de burgo suo pro aliquo placito vel pro aliqua querela nisi tum pro placitis corone. Quum pretor pacauerit domino firmam burgi ad festum sancti Michaelis remonebit illum dominus, et ponet quocumque noluerit, sed burgenses propiores erunt, si tantum dare noluerint quantum alii. Qui aliquem recitauerit de aliquo delicto in placito coram pretore, quod iniuste et absque ratione et in pace illi forisfecerit, et ille negauerit iniuriam et non-racionem et pacem, et quicquid dixerit versus eum, bonum dedit responsum. Qui negauerit iniuriam vel irracionem vel pacem et non fuerit culpatus de aliqua istarum iudicabitur in iura pretoris et per forisfactum recuperabit responsum suum. Qui nominatim verba in negatione sua negare cepit et non omnia nominatim negauerit, cadit, et per forisfactum responsum suum recuperabit. Forisfactum burgensium finitur per duodecim legales homines ad hoc electos si pretor aliquem grauari noluerit. Nullus burgensium dabit forisfactum pro prima supersessione, sed pro secunda, nisi diem sanare poterit. Quilibet burgensis suum proprium namium plebiabit nisi rectatus fuerit de corona domini regis, vel dimiserit proprium plegium incurere. Si seruens pretoris locutus fuerit versus burgensem non respondebit sine teste. Si burgensis rectatus fuerit de pare suo de sanguinis effusione vel de ictu, et negauerit, iurabit se sexto, si non de sanguine iurabit se tercio. Si alius quam burgensis a burgense de eodem rectatus fuerit, iurabit se duodecimo. Quisque burgensium tenetur alteri respondere, sine teste et non forensi, nisi de facto apparente, vel de debito. Burgensis si de pari sacramentum acceperit nisi de debito in forisfacto erit. Si de altero quam de pari quietus erit. Si forinsecus a burgense sacramentum acceperit, in maximo forisfacto erit. Si forinsecus debitum debuerit alicui burgensium licet ei omni die septimane capere namium super illum sine licencia pretoris nisi in nudinis sancti Egidii. Si namium alicuius burgensis captum fuerit super alium iudicatus erit prima die ire ad liberandum illud propriis expensis, quod si facere noluerit per proprium ire namium. Qui theloneum domini asportauerit in forisfacto remanebit tali scilicet pro quadrante quique solidos et quadrantem, pro obolo decem solidos et obolum, pro tribus quadrantibus quindecim solidos et tres quadrantes, pro denario, viginti solidos et denarium. Cuique licet in terra sua quilibet officina facere ad perficiendam firmam domini. Quicumque aliud negauerit vel concesserit quum hoc de quo rectatus fuerit in forisfacto remanebit. Omnis burgensis poterit ducere annonam per aquam et per terram quocumque noluerit, et omnia alia mercimonia sine consuetudine et occasione, nisi prohibetur a domino vel balliis suis. Non tenemur respondere cuiquam de aliquo tenemento nostro in quo saisiit fuimus per manum pretoris, et tenuimus per unum annum integrum et unum diem sine calumpnia. Si citatus aliquis in placito nostro dum alibi fuerit in negotio suo, quietus erit de diebus sanandis cum redierit. Si aliquis burgensis rectatus fuerit de latrocinio ab aliquo, nos iudicabimus eum in burgo nostro assistente nobiscum seruiente domini, faciente . . . legem una vice cum xxx^{vi}. vi.^{ta} manu. Si alia vice rectatus fuerit, vel per duellum vel per aquam legauerit se. Nullo femina . . . ac consuetudinem in burgo nostro pro cereuisia neudenda. Preterea dedi et concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmari eisdem burgensibus meis de ponte fracto et hereditibus et successoribus suis quietanciam de omni theloneo et consuetudine per totam terram meam pertinentem ad castellum pontis fracti et ad castellum de gliedro. Et pro ista donacione et concessione libertatis habende et firmiter tenende, dederunt mihi prefati burgenses in ei de ponte fracto ccc marchas argenti. Hiis testibus Huberto domini gracia . . . archiepiscopo, Comite Rogero Bigot, Willelmo de sancte Marie ecclesia, Willelmo de Warenna, Radulfo archidiacono Hereford, Ricardo de Herriet, Simone de Pateshille, Hugone Penceril, Osberto filio . . . Ricardo de Cestria, Hngone de Bobi, Rogero de Panten, Radulfo filio Radulfi, Waltero de Bonint, Alano de Sinderbi, Thoma filio Thome, Roberto le nauassur, Aldreda de Duttona, Roberto Valensi, Aldreda de Reineuilla, Johanne de Birkin, Ynne de Luauens, Thoma de Rennilla. Datum VI. mensis Junii apud Westmonasterium coram Justiciis domini regis Ricardi, anno 7^{mo}. coronacionis eiusdem.

Attached to the foregoing charter is the following record of grants of lands by the same Roger de Lacy.

Sciunt omnes presentes et futuri, quod Ego Rogerus de Laci constabularius cestrie dedi et concessi . . .

confirmari burgensibus meis de ponte fracto qui habent terram in mora ix. viginti acras terre . . . dimidiam acram in mora tenendas sibi et hereditibus suis de me et hereditibus meis libere . . . Reddendo inde annuatim mihi et hereditibus meis pro omni seruitio pro qualibet acra quatuor denarios de . . . festum Sancti Michaelis scilicet Spragheno xxxii. acras, Henrico genero suo iiiii. Ernisio xix., Helle filio suo xi., Edwino filio Walteri xi. et dimidiam, Alexandro filio Hewewardi x., Matildi Ruffe ix., Simoni genero suo ii., Thoma filio Winiare ii., Gilberto filio Mirildi xiii., Benedicto filio Ranulfi iii., heredi Johannis Nobilis iii., Willelmo filio Aldrede et Willelmo nato iii., hereditibus Ricardi filii Harald i. et dimidiam, Aldrede filio Aldrede vi., Semano vi., Astino filio Stephani iii., Simoni filio Benedicti viii., Roberto filio Gimpe ii. et dimidiam, Willelmo filio Benedicti iii., Roberto filio Johannis ix., Willelmo fratri Benedicti et Roberto filio Hadewlfi iii., Ranulfo filio Walteri iii., hereditibus Henrici clerici vi., Henrico filio Kaschini vii., Alexandro proposito i., Willelmo filio Lewini xi. acras. Hiis testibus Eustachio fratre domini Roberti Valensi, Willelmo de Lungwille, Jordano Foliot, Gilberto de Laci, Willelmo de Bello monte, Ricardo de Stapleton, Magistro Reimundo, Ricardo clerico, Willelmo filio Gerond', et aliis.

6 Edward I.—Charter of Inspecimus and Confirmation by Henry de Lacy, earl of Lincoln and constable of Chester; confirming the foregoing charter of Roger de Lacy, constable of Chester, dated at Westminster, 6 June, 5 Richard I.; the clauses of confirmation and attestation being in the following words: "Nos igitur dictam donacionem et concessionem rationem et gratiam habentes eam pro nobis et hereditibus nostris predictis burgensibus nostris et successoribus suis concedimus et confirmamus habendam et tenendam sibi et hereditibus suis de nobis hereditibus nostris in perpetuum, sicut eam temporibus antecessorum nostrorum habere consueverunt. In cuius rei testimonium presenti scripto sigillum nostrum apponi fecimus. Hiis testibus, Domino Petro de Cestria, preposito Beuerlaci, Dominis Johanne Beky, Johanne le Wanesur, Alexandro de Monteforti, Willelmo le Wanesur, Willelmo filio Thome, Stephano le Waleys militibus, Symone de Thorpe tunc senescallo Pontis fracti, Thoma Beky tunc constabulario eiusdem, Petro de Kirketoune, Willelmo de Multon, Henrico de Kirkeby, Nicholao de Burtonne, et aliis. Datum apud Pontem-fractum die apostolorum Philippi et Jacobi anno Regni Regis Edwardi Sexto. Pro hac autem confirmatione predicti burgenses dederunt nobis centum marcas argenti."

A considerable piece of this charter has been torn away at the upper right-hand corner of the document. It should also be observed that its recital of Roger de Lacy's charter differs in many places from the original document. For instance, where the earlier charter says: "Reddendo annuatim mihi vel hereditibus meis xii^{em} denaris pro quolibet tofto integro sicut fuerunt in tempore Henrici de Laci," the recital has fecerunt instead of fuerunt. Again, where the original charter says, "Non tenemur respondere cuiquam de aliquo tenemento nostro in quo saisiit fuimus per manum pretoris et tenuimus per unum annum integrum et unum diem sine calumpnia," the recital in the present charter runs, "Prefati burgenses non tenentur respondere cuiquam de aliquo tenemento suo in quo saisiit fuerint per manum pretoris et tenuerint per unum annum, &c. &c." Again, where Roger's charter says, "Si aliquis burgensis rectatus fuerit de latrocinio ab aliquo, nos iudicabimus eum in burgo nostro, assistente nobiscum seruiente domini, faciente . . . una vice cum xxx^{vi}. vi.^{ta} manu," the recital in the present document has, "Si aliquis rectatus fuerit de latrocinio ab aliquo, iudicabitur in curia burgensi secundum leges et consuetudines de Girmesley." In like manner the descriptions of the witnesses in the recital differ in some cases from the descriptions of the original document: "Radulfo archidiacono Herefordie," (c.g.) becoming in the recital "Radulfo episcopo de Herforth." It would be easy to make conjectures to account for these and other discrepancies between Roger de Lacy's charter and the recitals of it in the present charter of confirmation. In the present place, however, it is enough to call attention to the existence of the several important variations.

Also a duplicate, of inferior penmanship, much worn and defaced, of the same charter.

4 June, 7 Henry VI. Letters Patent addressed by Henry the Sixth to all justices, sheriffs, escheators, coroners, stewards, bailiffs, &c. &c. For the preservation of all the king's franchises and powers as well in the honour of Pountfret and all other his lands and fees of the duchy of Lancaster, as in the manors and other possessions of the king's inheritance in cos. Hereford, Essex, and Northampton. Dated at Westminster.

CORPORATION OF PONTEFRACT.

CORPORATION OF PONTEFRACT.

16 Edward IV. Copy of letters patent, addressed by Edward the Fourth to all justices, sheriffs, bailiffs, &c. For the preservation of all the king's franchises, liberties, and powers as well in the honour of Pountfret, and all other lands and fees of the duchy of Lancaster, as in the manors and possessions of the king's aforementioned inheritance in cos. Hereford, Essex, and Northampton; and also for the maintenance of all the king's men, tenants, and residents of the same manors and honours, &c. &c., in full enjoyment of all their ancient rights and privileges. Injured and defaced.

21 July, 2 Richard III. Letters Patent of Richard the Third, under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, constituting Pontefract a free borough, and appointing John Hill to be Mayor of the same town.—Also, a duplicate of the same charter, dated at Westminster on 9 August, 2 Richard III., and sealed with the Great Seal. The earlier of these two writings is in a fairly good condition, and is legible throughout; but the later document, dated at Westminster, is much worn and torn. This charter (translated in extenso into English in the appendix of Boothroyd's "History of the Ancient Borough of Pontefract") grants, with other things, to the burgesses of Pontefract, (1), That they may have a Merchants' Guild and the same liberties and customs as the burgesses of the town of Stanfrod; (2), That they may have a common seal, and yearly at Michaelmas elect from their own body thirteen comburgesses, one of whom is to be mayor of the town for the ensuing year; (3), That they may elect every year two sergeants to bear the maces of their said town; (4), That they may do within their town all things pertaining to the office of a coroner; (5), That the Mayors of Pontefract shall be Justices of the Peace therein; (6), That the said mayor and burgesses may have in their said town a gallows and prison; and (7), That they may have a weekly market on Saturday, and two yearly fairs, the one fair being on Palm Sunday and the six preceding days, and the other on Trinity Sunday and the six preceding days.

1 December, 4 Henry VII. Letters Patent under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, constituting Pontefract a free borough, and appointing Richard Jakson to be the first mayor of the said town, holding office under their authority. Renewing the concessions of the already mentioned charter of Richard the Third, from which it differs only in matters of date and attestation, and in the substitution of Richard Jakson's name for the name of John Hille. This is the charter which was erroneously attributed to Henry the Fourth by the clerks who drew the Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation, dated 5 May, 4 Edward VI., and the charter of James the First to the burgesses of Pontefract, dated on the 2nd day of March, in the 4th year of his reign.—Reference to the Patent Rolls at the Record Office has ascertained and put beyond question that these strangely misdescribed Letters were dated by Henry VII. and not by Henry IV.

3 August, 6 Henry VII.—Copy, made in the year 1620, of the deed, bearing date of 3 August, 6 Henry VII., whereby Thomas Metham, knt., granted for ever to John Burton, rector of the parish church of Garford, and Henry Watkyn, chaplain of Willesthorp, all services and homages pertaining to him in the towns, manors, lordships, lands, &c. &c., of Neuton Kyme, Tolleston, Scarcroft, Bordely, Allerton, Claretton, Lylandes parva, Usburn, Hopton, Dunsforth, Greenc-hamerton, and Nummunkton, co. York, and also of Willesthorp, Marston, Rugford parva, Askam, Coppemanthorpe, Colton, Bilburgh, Sterton, Appilton, and Bilton, in the county of the city of York; and also all and each the services and homages whatsoever of Robert Taylbus, knt., John Bekwith, Henry Vausouer, knt., John Ynggylby, prior of Muntgrave, Thomas Mawlleuerer, knt., and Christopher Ward, knt., in the towns, manors, &c. &c., of Neuton-Kyme, Tolleston, Skarcrofte, Bordelby, Allerton, Claretton, Lylandes parva, Usburn, Hopton, Dunford, Dunford Stonehampton, and Nummunkton, co. York; and also all the homages and services whatsoever of Milo Westhorp, William Thwayte, Brian Stapilton, prior of Bryllington, Thomas Fayrrix, William Ynggylby, Robert Ugthreth, John Norton, Guy Fairfax, Edward Broket, Sedde Suawell, in any towns, manors, &c. &c., of Willesthorp, Marston, Rugford parva, Asham per Coppemanthorpe, Colton, Bilburgh, Sterton, Appilton, and Bilton.

5 February, 34 Henry VIII. Letters Patent, under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, of insuperimus and exemplification of a decree of the Chancellor and Council of the said duchy, made in Trinity Term, 32 Henry VIII. touching the complaint of William May, William Catcher, and others, of the king's tenants and inhabitants within the town and lordship of Endfield, co. Middlesex, parcel of the said duchy, against William Holland, toll-gatherer of the city of London, for "having distrayned certain sakes of malte and other goodes of the sayed complainantes for tolle, and also having taken towne crownes of gold of theym for gage of the sayed toll," in which decrees it is ordered "that all and singler the kinges tenants, and other resyauntes and inhabitanes within the sayed duchie of Lancaster shall from henceforth according to the vsage, liberties, and pryveleges of the said duchie carry, recarry, passe, and repasse, and go tollre free with all and singler there owne goodes, catteles, and marchaundise, as well within the sayed cite of London as in all other playcs within the realme of Ingland withoute lett or interruption of any manner of person or persons for any manner of toll or other exaction from hensforth to be asked or demanded of theym, &c. &c., excepte onely within suche playcs being parcelle of the sayed duchie, where the sayed tenants resyauntes or inhabitanes heretofore have vsed and been wont to pay toll and other customes." Dated at Westminster.

5 May, 4 Edward VI. Letters Patent of insuperimus and confirmation of the Letters Patent, whereby Henry the Seventh on the 28th day of November, in the 4th year of his reign constituted Pontefract a free borough, and appointed Richard Jakson to be first mayor of the town under the authority of the same letters. These letters are remarkable for the curious mistake of the draughtsman, who in the following words attributed the charter of Henry the Seventh to Henry the Fourth. "Edwardus Sextus &c. &c. Omnibus ad quos presentes littere pervenerint. Insuperimus litteras patentes domini Henrici nuper Regis Anglie quarti progenitoris nostri factas in hec verba." Having recited the thus strangely misdescribed charter of Henry VII., which was dated at Westminster three days before its duplicate was sealed with the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, the present letters add—"Nos autem litteras patentes ac omnia et singula in eisdem contenta rata habentes et grata ea pro nobis et heredibus nostris quantum in nobis est accepimus et approbamus ac dilecto nobis Alano Eyre nunc maiori et burgensibus ville siue burgi predicti et successoribus suis ratificamus et confirmamus prout littere predictae rationabiliter testantur. In cuius rei testimonium has litteras nostras fieri fecimus patentes, &c."

23 October, 5 Elizabeth. Ordinance, under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, authorizing the mayor, comburgesses, and chief burgesses for the time being, being of the borough of Pontefract, henceforth to appoint to vacancies in the "Almshouse within the same Towne" called Knoles Almshouse, and also to appoint from time to time the town schoolmaster of Pontefract, with a salary of fifty-nine shillings and sevenpence.

20 May 1574. Attested copy (on parchment) of the last will and testament of John Marcer, (alias Mercer) of the parish of St. Mary Matfellow alias Whitechapel co. Middlesex, butcher. Also another copy (on paper) of the same will. On the parchment, at the foot of the will, appears a brief note touching the deed of feoffment, dated 21 August 1597, whereby John Moyes, Robert Bromflett, and John Sares, churchwardens of Whitechapel, enfeoffed William Chister, gentleman, and thirty-two other parishioners of Whitechapel in a message of the same parish, hequeathed to charitable uses by the said John Marcer, for the relief of the poor of Whitechapel, and of "the poor people of the howse of Trynity near Pontefract."

30 April, 25 Elizabeth. Letters Patent of insuperimus and exemplification of a decree of the Chancellor and Council of the Duchy of Lancaster, entered amongst the records of the same duchy in Easter Term of the aforesaid year, ordering "First, that there shall be a free grammar schoole continued within the said towne of Pountfret and a godly and vertuous and learned schoolemaster, and ussher to be chosen from tyme to tyme to searche and instructe the youthe there, and that the same grammar schoole for the better memoriall of her Majesties most gratus, vertuous, and princely disposition for the carefull brynging vpp of youth in learyunge, piety, and vertuous life shall be called by the name of the most excellent princes Quene Elizabethes Schoole in Pountfret, and that the said yerely stipend and pencions amounting to the somme of twenty-five poundes, seven shillings, and two pence, of lawfull money of Englande, shall hereafter

CORPORATION OF PONTFRÉACT.

"during the continuance of the said grammar scoole
"be yerely paid and allowed to the master and usher
"of the same schoole, and their successors there for the "tyme beinge in manner, and forme as hereafter by
"this present decree is sett downe and declared," the "master to be appointed, during the pleasure of her Ma"jesty and successors, by the Chancellor of the said duchy
"for the time being, at a yearly salary of twenty pounds
"to be had of the Receiver for the time being of the Honour "of Pountfret; and the usher at a yearly salary of
"£5, 7, 2 to be elected from time to time "by the mayor and "brethren of the said town of Pountfret with thadvise
"and consente of the schoolemaster there for the tyme
"beinge." The foregoing decrees put aside previous arrangements made on the certificate, dated 11 August, 2 Edward VI., of Sir Walter Myldmay, knt., and Robert Keylwey, esq., commissioners for the purpose, who certified that they thought "it very mete and necessary that "a grammar schoole in Pountfret in the countie of "Yorke shoulde be continued and mainteyned, and that
"the scoolemaster there shoulde have for his wages,
"fifty-nine shillings and two-pence, and that a gram"mar schoole in Carolborne in the said countie shoulde
"likewise contynue, and that the then schoolemaster
"shoulde have for his wages yerely, fyve poundes and "fower shillings, and that a grammar scoole in Owston
"in the said countie shoulde likewise contynue, and
"the then schoolemaster shoulde contynue schoolemaster
"there, and have for his wages yerely, fower poundes,
"three shillings, and eleven-pence, and that a grammar
"schoole in Bolton vppon Deme in the said countie
"shoulde likewise contynue, and the then schoolemaster
"shoulde contynue schoolemaster there, and shoulde be "paid for his wages yerely fower poundes, thirteene
"shillings, and fower-pence, and that a grammar-schoole
"in Rowston in the saide countie shoulde likewise con-
"tynue, and that Richard Thorntone then scoolemaster
"shoulde contynue scoolemaster there, and have for his "wages yerely, fower poundes, six shillings, and eleven "pence," and also upon a subsequent certificate of the same commissioners that a grammar school should be continued at Croston co. Yorke, "and that John Peake "alias Kemsforth, then scoolemaster, should be and "contynue scoolemaster there, and have for his wages
"yerely three poundes, nyntene shillings, and tenne
"pence" out of the revenue of the Duchy of Lancaster.
In consideration that 50s. 2d., is too small a remuneration for a suitable schoolmaster at Pountfret; and in consideration that the other towns aforementioned "are "not above eight myles distante at the most from thesaide
"towne of Pountfret," and also in consideration that some of those towns have for some time ceased to have a school or schoolmaster, the present decree withdraws the allowances of money hitherto made to these other towns, and confers the entire sum hitherto distributed amongst the several parishes above named on the town of Pountfret for the sufficient endowment of the schoolmaster and usher there. Boniface Savage, of Pountfret, at whose instance and humble suit the present decree is made, and the other inhabitants of the said town having undertaken to provide and maintain a suitable and convenient school-house. Dated at Westminster.

3 November, 25 Elizabeth. Deed of conveyance whereby George Sothern, of Katam, co. Nottingham, yeoman, sold and conveyed to George earl of Cumberland, "all the estate, interest, and terme, estates and "termes of yers that I, the said George Sothern, and "Elizabeth, nowe my wife, or eyther of vs, nowe lathie
"or have or of right ought to have by anye waye or
"meanes whatsoever, of and in one parcell of mea"dow ground called Lynde, late in the tenure and "occupation of Sir Ingram Clifford, knt., deceased, or
"of his assignes," in the township of Colthropp, co.
York, or in Hunsingor, in the same co.; and also the interest of the said grantor and his said wife in a messuage or cottage called the Lund Howse, in Colthropp.

9 June, 27 Elizabeth.—Deed, signed, and sealed by George earl of Cumberland. For the confirmation of a certain deed, dated two days earlier, whereby the said earl granted and confirmed to Thomas Walmisley, serjeant-at-law, his heirs and assigns for ever, the manor and demesne lands of Cowthorpe, co. York, and a close called "Le Lande," together with the advowson of Cowthorpe church, &c., &c.; and For the appointment of William Rysbeton and Thomas Clayton, servants of the said Thomas Walmisley, to be the earl's attorneys to deliver seisin of the premises to the said Thomas Walmisley.—Also, various other indentures touching this conveyance of the manor and advowson of Cowthorpe, co. York, by George earl of Cumberland to Thomas Walmisley, serjeant-at-law.

17 June, 27 Elizabeth.—Final concord, made in the octaves of the Sacred Trinity, at Westminster, before Edmund Anderson, Francis Wyndham, and William Peryam, justices, and others of the Queen's lieges there, between Thomas Walmesley, serjeant-at-law, plaintiff, and George earl of Cumbreland and Francis Clifford, esq., defendants, respecting the manor of Cowthorpe alias Cowlethorpe with its appurtenances, and respecting sixteen messuages, twenty tofts, two dove-cotes, twenty gardens, three hundred acres of arable land,
a hundred acres of meadow, two hundred acres of pasture,
a hundred acres of wood, two hundred acres of moor, fifty acres of turbary, sixty acres of scrub and briery, and rent of twenty shillings, with appurtenances in Cowthorpe alias Cowlethorpe, Byckerton, and Hunsynore, and concerning the advowson of the church of Cowthorpe aforesaid, co. York: by which fine the said deforciant acknowledged the right of the premises to be in said plaintiff.

3 June, 28 Elizabeth.—Final concord made at Westminster on the morrow of the Sacred Trinity, before Edmund Anderson, Francis Wyndham, William Peryam, and Francis Rodes, the Queen's justices, between Robert Petre, esq., and John Morley, esq., plaintiffs, and George earl of Cumbreland and Margarett his wife, Francis Clifford, esq., Thomas Walmisley, serjeant-at-law, and Anne his wife, deforciant, concerning the manor of Cowthorpe alias Cowlethorpe alias Colthorpe with its appurtenances, and concerning sixteen messuages, twenty tofts, two dove-cotes, twenty gardens, three hundred acres of arable land, a hundred acres of meadow, two hundred acres of pasture, a hundred acres of wood, two hundred acres of moor, fifty acres of turbary, sixty acres of scrub and briery, and a rent of twenty shillings, with their appurtenances in Cowthorpe alias Cowlethorpe alias Colthorpe, Bickerton, and Hunsynore, and concerning the advowson of the church of Cowthorpe, co. York: By which fine the said deforciant acknowledged the right of the premises to be in the plaintiffs.

16 November, 28 Elizabeth.—Indenture made between Robert Peter, of the city of Westminster, esq., and John Morley, of London, esq., of the one part, and Thomas Walmisley, serjeant-at-law, of the other part;
Whereby the said Robert Peter and John Morley sold and conveyed to the said Thomas Walmisley, his heirs and assigns for ever, the lordship and manor of Cow-thorpe alias Cowlethorpe alias Colethorpe, with appurtenances, co. York, and the advowson of the parish church and parsonage of Cowthorpe, together with lands, tenements, and hereditaments in Cowthorpe, Bickerton, and Hunsynore, which premises were sold to the aforesaid
Robert Peter and John Morley by George earl of Cumberland and Frances Clifford, esq., brother of the same earl, by an indenture dated 20 April, 28 Elizabeth, and containing a clause empowering the said earl or his brother to redeem the same manor and other premises, by delivering notice of their intention to redeem the same, on 29 September next ensuing, and by paying on or before 2 November next following the sum of 2,500l.
to the same Robert and John; the said notice, if given,
to be given "by anye deede in writtinge whiche shoulde
"be lefte or registered at or in the howse or place "called the tellynge house, in or by the Royale Ex"change, in the cytie of London."

10 May, 30 Elizabeth.—Ten orders, neatly written on one side of a single skin of vellum, under the following heading:—"Orders and constitutions constituted,
"made, and agreede vpon for the welthe, commoditie,
"and proffitt of the towne and Borough of Pountfret,
"and with the consent and assent of Henrie Farrell,
"maior of the same towne, the comburgesses his "bretherin, and comon council, with the rest of the "commonaltye of the same towne." Exhibiting the times, and circumstances at or under which the inhabitants of Pountfret and Tanshall may put their animals into the Weste-feilde and Benett Ynges.

12 June, 30 Elizabeth.—Exemplification, under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, of a certain record or certificate, preserved amongst the records of the said duchy of Westminster, of the survey of Pountfret Parke, made by Commissioners appointed for that purpose on the 26th and 27th May, 4 & 5 Phillip and Mary;
the Commissioners being Sir Thomas Gargrave, knt., William Mallett, John Hamerton, and John Tyndall; and the names of the persons sworn and examined by the said Commissioners for the purposes of the said view being Anthonic Thorne, gentleman, John Rydyall, Edmond Iyes, Thomas Austwyk, Thomas Ederington,
John Lathom, William Dilcock, Stephen Esby, John Mylner, William Holgate, Kautfr, Ayer, and Allon (Andrewe?). From the certificate, it appears that at the date of the survey the park contained within its "pail vii. hundredth acres;" and that it contained within its pailing and precinct 3,070 timber trees, four hundred of which were valued at 10s. each, three hundred at 6s. 8d., and the rest at 5s. each; also 1,760 "fewill treise," five hundred of which were worth 6s. 8d. each, four hundred worth 3s. 4d. each, and four hundred "saphirs" worth 1s. 4d. each. The park contained also a hundred ashes worth 1s. 4d. each, in addition to "thornes, mapples, hassells, ollers, and other brulment." Having contained only 300 deer in the first year of Queen Mary, the park at the date of the cortificate had 595 deer "viewed by William Mallett, "John Tyndall, and Robert Hippon, keeper there, and "others." George, Lord Talbot, had then a lease of the park from the Duchy of Lancaster, at an annual rent of £43s. 4d. From time immemorial the inhabitants of Poundfret and Tanshels had and have common of the said park for their horses and kine, "from the "feast of St. Elyn, called thenuencion of the crosse "vnto the feast of St. Michael, paieinge yerelie there- "fore to the fermor of the saide parke, for euery cow "xiiid., and for euery horsse or mare jis. for thold- "rest, and for a cove if she lye in the parke nightlie "xviid." It is further certified "That the Fermor of "the mannor of Hardwicke hath hadd tyme out of "manes mynde comon in the said parke yerelie, as- "well in winter as in somer for LX beastes and tenne "horses and mares, Also in pannage tyme swyne with- "out number, For the whiche custome the late priors "of St. Oswalde's afore the dissolution of the house "hath paieid to the keepers of the said parke yerely "vi quarters wheat and to the palise iiii quarters," for which rent of wheat an annual payment of six shillings and fourpence has been substituted. Also it is certified amongst other things, "the Fermors of the Capitall "messuage of Houghton, called Houghton Hall, hath "hadd tyme of manes mynde and also sythen the first "yere of the Majestie's reigne in the saide parke "comon for xvi beastes and iiii horses, from the said "Feast of St. Elyn, unto Michaelmas yerelie . . . "and in pannage tyme swyne without number."—Dated at Westminster.

CORPORATION OF PONTFRÉACT.

20 August, 30 Elizabeth. Deed executed by Marmaduke Constable of Wassende, co. York, gentleman, one of the cousins and heirs of Bryan Rowleyffe, sometime of Cwthorpe, co. York, esq., deceased, son and heir of Sir John Rowleyffe, knt., and dame Margaret his wife, that is to say, son and heir of Marmaduke Constable, son and heir of Elizabeth, one of the daughters and heirs of Robert Stokes, son and heir of Joan Stokes, sister of the said Bryan Rowleyffe; being a quitclaim by the aforesaid Marmaduke Constable of Wassende co. York to Thomas Walmsley, one of the queen's justices of the bench and his heirs for ever, in respect to all the said Marmaduke's right and claim in the honour or lordship of Cwthorpe alias Cowlthorpe, the advowson of the church of Cwthorpe, and to all lands, tenements, &c. &c. &c., formerly belonging to the said Bryan Rowleyffe in Cwthorpe, Byckerton, and Hunsynore (a certain parcel of ground conveyed to Richard Yaxley alone excepted).

28 November, 30 Elizabeth. Exemplification of the record enrolled at Westminster of the proceedings before Sir Edmund Anderson, knt., and his associates the queen's justices in Michaelmas term of the aforesaid year, whereby William Byseton, junr and Thomas Clayton recovered against Thomas Walmsley, serjeant-at-law, seisin of the manor of Cwthorpe alias Cowlthorpe, with its appurtenances, and twenty messuages, ten tofts, twenty gardens, three hundred acres of arable land, a hundred acres of meadow, two hundred and fifty acres of pasture, two hundred acres of wood, two hundred acres of moor, sixty acres of scrub and briery, and a rent of twenty shillings, with appurtenances in Cwthorpe alias Cowlthorpe, Byckerton, and Hunsynore alias Hunsynoure, and also the advowson of the church of Cwthorpe, co. York.

7 February, 35 Elizabeth. Final concord, made in Hilary Term before Edmund Anderson and William Peryam, justices and others of the queen's lieges there, between Thomas Walmsley one of the Justices de Banco plaintiff, and Marmaduke Constable, gentleman, defendant, concerning the manor of Cwthorpe alias Cowlthorpe with its appurtenances, and twenty messuages, twenty tofts, twenty gardens, three hundred acres of arable land, a hundred acres of meadow, three hundred acres of pasture, a hundred acres of wood, two hundred acres of moor, forty acres of scrub and briery, and a rent of twenty shillings with their appurtenances in Cwthorpe alias Cowlthorpe, Byckerton, and Hun-synore alias Hunsingore and also concerning the advowson of the Church of Cwthorpe alias Cowlthorpe co. York: By which fine the said defendant acknowledged the right of the premises to be in the said plaintiff.

2 March, 4 James I. Letters Patent of James the First to the burgesses of Pontefract. For regulating the elections of mayors of the said borough, fixing the gate tolls of the borough, and ordering the affairs of St. Nicholas's Hospital. Touching this hospital, the words of these Letters are:—"Cumque quoddam hospitale quondam "fundatum per quondam Abbatem monasterii sancti "Oswaldi in predicto comitatu Eborum vocatum seu "cognitum per nomen Hospitalis Sancti Nicholai infra "villam siue Burgum Pontisfracti predicti existit con- "sistens de uno lectore et tresdecem pauperibus ad "manus in dicto hospitali de tempore in tempus rele- "mandis et sustentandis quorum ecclesie nominacio "locacio et appunctacio ad nos heredes et successores "nostros pleno jure spectat et pertinet in iure Corone "nostre Anglie prout certam inde habemus noticiam; "Cumque nos credibiliter informamur quod quociens- "cunque locus predicti lectoris aut aliquorum predic- "torum tresdecem pauperum hospitalis predicti per "mortem sursumreddidit forisfacturam amocionem aut "alio modo quocunque antehac vacare contigit, Audi- "tores et Receptores nostri in partes illas circa negocia "nostra annuatim itinerantes super requisicionem et "insinacionem diuersarum personarum non existen- "cium Burgensium aut Inhabitancium ville suie burgi "predicti quasunque alias personas in loco predic- "torum lectoris et pauperum sic vacare contingente "nominare eligere et prebere consueverunt, ratione "cuius electionis et nominacionis pauperes et egeni "homines ville suie burgi predicti multociens orbiati et "destituti sunt eo releuamine et sustentacione quibus "in hospitale predicto habere poterant et debent ad "grae onus et preiudicium ville suie burgi predicti." For the correction of this abuse of the local charity, the king grants the patronage of the hospital to the Mayor and his burgesses, with authority henceforth to appoint to vacant places in the hospital such of the poor persons of the town as may seem to be in the greatest need or to be most deserving of admission to the hospital. Like the draughtsman of the Letters Patent, dated 5 May, 4 Edward VI., the draughtsman of the present charter attributes the Letters Patent, dated in the 4th year of Henry VII. to Henry the Fourth; the opening words of the instrument being "Cumque do- "minus Henricus nuper Anglie quartus per literas "suas patentes sub sigillo dncatus sui Lancastrie con- "fecit gerentes datum primo die Decembris anno "regni sui quarto concesserit, &c. &c." Again in the body of the Letters it is written, "Ac cum idem nuper "Henricus quartus per eandem literas suas premen- "tionatas concesserit prelati Maiori et Burgensibus." Another matter to be noticed is the injury which this charter has sustained from the knife of the unscrupulous "collector of literary curiosities," who a few years since cut away from the writing a piece of the inserted vellum, of the shape and size of a toy terrier's ear.

6 October, 4 James I.—Order of Justices made at Session of Peace, &c. in the following terms:—"For the necessary maynteyninge and vpholdinge of the estate of this Corporacion (of Pontefract), and the better to enable the poore Townesmen and other Inhabitantes thereof, That they be not oppressed by forerunners whoe not beinge burgesses or freemen of this towne doe by takinge of shoppes and other roomes here withoute lycence of Mr. Mayor and his brethren engrosse almost the whool trade of the towne into their handes although they neyther inhabytt in the towne nor pay any scott or lott there. Wherefore yt is ordeyned and enacted by the Maior, Comburgesses, and Burgesses of the towne by assent of M^r Recorder, That no forerunner not being freman inhabytinge and keeping house and familie here shall att any tyme hereafter buy or sell directly or indirectly in any shopp in this towne without the lycence of the Maior and Burgesses vnder their Corporacion Seale onles yt be vpon the fayre or market daye, and that not to be graunted but to such as be freemen of the towne, And this vpon payne everie dayes offence—xs. And also that such forerunners as have or shall take any shoppes or other roomes here for the selling of comie shall contribute towards the reliefe of the poore and other duties to the Towne, according to such reasonable rates porcion as shalbe assessed by the Maior and Aldermen for the tyme beinge vpon payne to loose for every detee—vs. And to have their shoppes restreynt and chambers shutt till they paye the same.

For testymonye whereof the Common Seale of the said Corporation of Pontefract is herevnto set and affixed the day and yere above writen—1606.

24 April 1608.—Certaine Orders (on a single piece of vellum) to be observed and performed by the Bretheren and Sisters of Trinities in Pontefract.

31 August, 12 James I. Letters under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster to the Mayor of Pontefract, and all his Majesty's officers and lieges of Pontefract, Knottingley, Beghall, and Credling, and the members thereof; charging and enjoining ail the king's tenants and inhabitants of the said towne and villages, "to doe and performe all their suite, soken, and service vnto our said milles of Knottingley; and to bringe or sende all their corne, graine, and maulie which they, and every of them, shall spende or otherwise brewe and bake . . . to be ground at oure said milles of Knottingley, and not elsewhere; and that they our said tenants and inhabitants forbear to grinde or carry to be gronde at any other mille or milles whatsoever (excepte it bee to our windmill of Pontefret)."—Dated at Westminster.

7 February, 13 James I. Exemplification of the record, enrolled in Hilary Term of the said year, of proceedings at Westminster before Henry Hobart, knt., and his associates, the king's justices, in the suit of Robert Wright versus John Wright, Edward Wright, and Mathew Wright, touching their respective titles and interests in a messuage with a garden, six acres of arable land, forty acres of meadow, and thirty-five acres of pasture, with their appurtenances, in Dadsworth and Ackworth, co. York.

10 February, 1 Charles I. Letters Patent of the pardon granted to Thomas Hitchin, of Pontefract, co. York, gentleman, mayor of the said town, of all or any of divers treasons, rebellions, and other enumerated offences committed by him before the twenty-seventh day of March last past; special exception from the pardon being made of murders, burglaries, rapes, witchcraft, and other heinous crimes.—Dated at Westminster.

19 September 1650. Deed between Thomas Coke, esq., and other Commissioners appointed by an Act of the present Parliament "For Selling the Fee-farme Rents belonging to the Commonwealth of England, formerly payable to the Crowne of England, Dutchy of Lancaster and Duchy of Cornwall," and also by another Act of the same Parliament "For the further Explanation of the former," and thereby authorized to sell the Fee-farm Rents, &c., mentioned in the said Acts, of the one part, and Mathew Francke, Robert Moore, Robert Franke, John Scure, John Ramsden, John Cooper, Edward Feild, Leonard Warde, and Christopher Longg, comburgesses of the borough of Pontefract, co. York, and William Oates of the same town, gentleman, of the other part; whereby the said Commissioners convey divers fee-farm rents to said gentlemen of the second part, their heirs and successors, as trustees for uses set forth in the deed. This deed has been recovered to the town through the examination of the municipal writings by Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical MSS. Its loss was deplored by the local committee, who in 1854 reported to the Mayor of Pontefract on "the Almshouses and Miscellaneous Charities of the Town of Pontefract."

1653-1725. The Pontefract Booke of Entries: Being a Minutes-Book (folio, containing 336 numbered pages, exclusive of fly-leaves and unnumbered sheets put into the volume, at the end thereof) of orders and other proceedings at town's meetings, and of memoranda relating to the affairs of the town of Pontefract. The record beginning on the page numbered 33, with this descriptive introduction: "Towne and Burrough of Pontefract. A Booke for the entring of Orders, Ordinances, and other Things of the Publique Concernement of the said towne. Whereas there hath bene severall auintient Bookes belonging to the Towne and Burrough of Pontefract, for the entring of all Orders, Ordinances, Constitutions, Assessments, Officers' Accompts, and other things of good and publike concernement, for and touching the Common Wealth of the said Towne. Which said Bookes are all, or moste of them, plundered, defaced, or otherwise made uselesse by reason of these late warres amongst vs. It is therefore Ordered and Agreed upon the twenty-fourth day of October one thousand six hundred fifty and three, at a General meeting in the Moothall of Pontefract aforesaid, by the Mayor, Comburgesses, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the Towne and Burrough aforesaid, That this Booke shalbee called A Booke of Entries for the entring of all orders, ordinances, constitutions, assessments, officers'

accompts, and whatsoever may bee of good and publike concernement in and touching the Common wealth of this Towne and burrough, which shalbee made, ordered, concluded, and agreed vpon by the Mayor, Comburgesses, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the said Towne and Burrough, and their successors, or the major parte of them, according to the customs, lawes, and constitutions of the Towne aforesaid; and that all orders, ordinances, and constitutions and other things so made and entred shalbee authentique, binding, and of force, to and of all the severall inhabitants of the said towne, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, touching the common wealth of the said towne and burrough. In testimony whereof the Mayor for the time being in the presence, and by the consent of the Comburgesses, Burgesses, and inhabitants of the said towne hath sette his hand the day and yere above writen, 1653.—Christopher Longe, Mayor." Comprising, with a large number of other memoranda, the following matters:—

(a.) "The Humble Peticion (signed by Edwardo Fielde, Mayor) of the Major, Aldermen, and all the well-affected Inhabitants of this Towne of Pontefract, to the supreme authority of England, the Commons assembled in Parliament. Humbly sheweth: That the Towne of Pontefract since the beginning of these unhappy warres hath bene greatly impoverished and depopulated through the setting and continuing a garrison in that Castle, which hath occasioned two severall tedious and chargeable Leagues to the great effusion of much pretious blood, the viter ruining of no lesse then 200 dwelling-houses and upwards (whose confused heapes are lively and speaking monuments of the enemies cruelty and your Peticioners' misery), the incredible decay of trading and commerce, the unavoidable hinderance and interruption of Tillage, the total vndoing of many well-affecting persons and families, the sadd devastation of the place of publike worship amongst vs, All which damages sustained by your poore Peticioners amounts vnto the full value of 40,000^{li} and vpwards. Yet hath God through his blessing vpon the unwearied paines of oure forces there, once more opened a doore of hope for our recovery of that Garrison. May it therefore please Your Honours seriously to consider the sadd desolations of our poore Towne, the past and present pressures, yea vsupportable burthens of youre poor Peticioners by means of the said Garrison, and to appointe the same (immediately vpon the Rendicion) to be wholly razed down and demolished; and, further, to allot so much of the materials of Lead and Timber towards the repairing of oure place of publike worship and readying of a habitation for a minister as shall amount to vnto 1,000^{li}. That so the true cause of our former miseries and future feares being removed, Your Peticioners may both be encouraged and enabled to serve your Honours in all your just and equitable commandes with their lives and fortunes.

(b.) "22 March, 1648. Letter from Major-General John Lambert to the Parliament, concerning the surrender of Pontefract Castle. Accompanying the Peticion of the inhabitants of Pontefract for the demolition of the castle, and the Articles of terms on which the garrison of the said castle have consented to surrender to the writer.

(c.) "27 March 1649. (1.) Resolution of the Parliament approving the articles for the rendicion of Pontefract Castle; (2.) Memorandum that the Peticion of Mayor, aldermen, and well affected inhabitants of Pontefract, was on the day above-given read before parliament; (3.) Order of the Commons assembled in Parliament, That it be referred to the Committee of the Westriding of the county of Yorke, to take care that the said Castle of Pontefract be forthwith totally demolished and levelled to the ground, and the materials thereof to be preserved from being imbezelled, and by sale of so much of them as wilbee necessary to satisfy, in the first place the charges of demolishing and levelling the same, and that so much of the remainder of the materials as shalbee of the valewe of one thousand pounde be allotted to the Town of Pontefract towards the repairinge their place of publike worship and readying an habitation for a minister.—Henry Scobell, Cler. Parliament."

(d.) "4 April 1649. Orders of the Committee of the Westriding of the County of Yorke. For the demolition of Pontefract Castle, in accordance with the resolutions of the Parliament for that purpose. The first of these orders directing, 'That Mr. Edward Fielde, nowe Mayor of Pontefract, Mr. Robert More, Mr. Robert Franke, Mr. Mathew Franke, Mr. John Ramsden, Mr. Christopher Longe and Captain John Ward, or any foure of

CORPORATION OF PONTEFRAC.

CORPORATION OF PONTEFRAC.

‘them, shall agree, direct, and order the manner and order how the lead, timber, iron, and other materials of the said castle, shalbee pulled downe, sold, and disposed of.’ And the third article of the set of orders directing, ‘that a full, perfect, and final account of the sale of the said lead and materials and necessary disbursements shalbee rendered and given vpp to the said committee by the said Trustees, and payment made to the said committee of the cleare overplus, allowance being made to the said towne of Pontefract of one thousand poundes, according to the said order of parliament.—Signed: Charles Farefax, Robt. Barwicke, Henry Arthington, Thomas Hoyle, Darcy Wentworth, William Armitage, Thomas Dickinson, John Savile de Methley, Edwardo Fielde major, Robt. More, John Ramsden, Mathew Franke, Chr. Longe.’

(c.) “31 August 1654. Order of the Lord Protector and Council at Whitehall (made on the petition of the mayor, comburgesses, and burgesses of Pontefract, and on a certificate from several Justices of the Peace of the Westriding of Yorkshire), ‘That the one hundred and twenty poundes nine shilling remaining in the hands of Sir Edward Roodes, Mr. Samuel Childe, and others for several quantities of lead and timber to them sold, part of the materiales of the late Castle of Pontefract (as is alleged by the said Petition) be forthwith satisfied and paid by the persons owing the same according to their severall and respective proporcons to the said Mayor, Comburgesses, and Burgesses, or such as they shall appoint to receive the same. To be by them employed for re-edifying and enlarging (for publique uses) the Common Hall in Pontefract.—Signed: W^m Jissop, Clerke of the Counsell.’

(f.) “29 May 1660. Order made at a General Meeting of the Mayor, Comburgesses, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the town and borough of Pontefract in the Moothall, ‘That an assessment of 2^d 16^d 10^d be laid and assessed upon the severall inhabitants and owners and occupiers of land within the said boroughe by Christopher Hayford, Peter Swift, William Field, and Francis Lee, before the 7th of June next. Whereof 12^d 16^d 10^d shalbee disposed on for defraying the charges of the banquet at the proclaiming of his Majesty.’

(g.) “19 February, 14 Charles II. Letters Patent of the commission, appointing George duke of Buckingham, George duke of Albemarle, Thomas viscount Falconbridge, George viscount Castleton, John lord Bellasis, Henrie Bellasis, knt. of the Bath, Conyers Darcy, esq., John Goodricke, bart., Metcalfe Robinson, bart., John Iotham, bart., Salomon Swaile, bart., Robert Hillyard, bart., Thomas Osborne, bart., George Savile, bart., Thomas Slingsby, bart., John Armitage, bart., John Nicholas, knt. of the Bath, Richard Malliverer, bart., John Yorke, knt., Joseph Craddocke, knt., Mathew Appleyard, knt., Hugh Bethell, knt., Thomas Heblethwaite, knt., Thomas Ingram, knt., Gilbert Gerard, knt., William Lowther, knt., Philip Mountaine, knt., Frank Fane, sear, knt. of the Bath, Richard Tankred, knt., John Rearesby, bart., Thomas Wentworth, knt., Thomas Strickland, knt., Robert Strickland, knt., William Dalton, knt., James Pennynan, knt., John Talbott, knt., John Scott, and Anthony Gilby, esqs., Jordan Crosland, knt., William Tompson, esq., Thomas Burwell, doctor of Laws, John Wainsford, Robert Longe, esqs., Thomas Gower, bart., Thomas Danby and Walter Strickland, esqs., Frank Goodricke, knt., Michael Wharton, and Roger Talbott, esqs., John Dawnar, knt., Tobie Jenkins, Walter Hawkesworth, Frank Nevill, Welbury Norton, Frank White, Ambrose Pndsey, James Darcy, Mathew Hutton, Thomas Waite, and Stephen Thompson, esqs., to be commissioners in the city of York, and in all other cities, corporations, boroughs, and parts of the county of York, for putting in execution the Act of the present parliament, entitled ‘An Act for the well governing and regulating of Corporations.’

(h.) “A Catalogue (on one of the fly-leaves of the Book) ‘of the Names of all the Majors since the first Charter to those Majors within Pontefract.’ Begun by a scribe who lived in the year 1728, from which date the list is in a later hand. From the name of John Hille, the mayor appointed by Richard the Third’s charter, to the name of Mathew Frank, mayor of Pontefract in the years 1648-9, the list seems to have been taken from Thomas Gent’s ‘Compendious History of Pontefract in Yorkshire,’ published in the appendix to his Historia Compendiosa Romana.”

10 September 1662. Three records of proceedings at a sitting in Pontefract of the Commissioners in co. York, for putting in execution the Act of Parliament for the good government and regulation of Corporations. The most important of the three matters being an order, signed by six commissioners, for removing from the list of aldermen of the said borough the following persons:—Leonard Ward, John Cowper, Richard Wildman, John Drake, William Oates, Jervase Cowper.

10 April 1674. Return of an Inquisition, taken at the house of Thomas Headley, of Snaith, in the West Ryding of co. York, before John Boynton, Roger Portington, John Frank, mayor of Pontefract, John Hitching, esqs., and Christopher Carter, gentleman, Commissioners by virtue of his Majesty’s commission under the Great Seal of England, dated 23 Jan. last past. With the evidence taken and orders made by the same commissioners in respect to moneys left for charitable uses in the town of Pontefract by Thomas Sayle, late of Pontefract in said county, chandler.

20 February, 29 Charles II. Letters Patent under the Great Seal, confirming to the Mayor and burgesses of Pontefract, all grants and concessions made to them and their predecessors by previous sovereigns. The concluding clause of these letters runs thus: “Volumus etiam et intentionem nostram regiam per presentes declaramus quod Johannes Dickson modo communis clericus et clericus pacis Burgi sive ville predictae sit et erit Communis Clericus et clericus pacis ibidem durante vita sua naturali, et quod nullus Recordator vel Communis Clericus ville sive Burgi nostri predicti de cetero eligendus sive constituendus in huiusmodi officio sive officii sui eorum aliquo se respectivo intromittat antequam ipsi et eorum quilibet per nos heredes vel successores nostros per warrantum sub signo manuali nostro heredum vel successorum nostrorum in ea parte respective approbatus vel approbati fuerint aliquo in presentibus contento aut aliqua alia re causa vel materia quacunque in contrarium inde in aliquo non obstante. In cuius rei testimonium,” &c., &c.

23 March, 1 James II.—Letters Patent for the reincorporation and reconstitution of Pontefract as a free borough. Appointing John Rusby, gentleman, to be mayor, John Frank, Robert Tatham, Richard Austwick, Frank Kellam, John Johnston, Samuel Taylor, William Oates, Frank Farrer, William Ramsden, Richard Oates, William Coates, and John Knowles, gentlemen, to be aldermen; Frank White, esq., to be Recorder, and John Dixon, gentleman, to be town clerk of the said borough, and containing the following important reservation for the removal of municipal officers by the Crown:—“Provisio semper ac plenam potestatem et authoritatem Nobis hereditas et successoribus nostris per presentes reservamus de tempore in tempus et ad omnia tempora impotestum ad Maiorem Recordatorem communem clericum et aliquem vel aliquos de Aldermannis Ville sive Burgi predicti pro tempore existentes ad libitum et beneplacitum nostrum heredum vel successorum nostrorum pro aliquem ordinem nostrum heredum vel successorum nostrorum in Privato Concilio factum et sub sigillo Privati Concilii predicti eisdem respectivo significatum ad amovendum et amotum et amotos esse declarandos.” The charter concludes with confirmation to the burgesses of Pontefract of all franchises, liberties, customs, &c. &c., granted to them by charters and letters patent of any of the king’s progenitors or predecessors. Dated at Westminster.

2 February 1688. Letter from Lord Downe to Hastings Saile, Mayor of Pontefract, and to the aldermen of the same borough:—“Gentlemen, I hope before this you are acquainted that Mr. Husband faithfully promised me to write to Mr. Brookesbancke, of Leeds, to pay you that rent resolute that is due to you, which I hope you have ere this received. The best news that I can send you, which I am sure will be very acceptable to you, is the King’s message to the House of Commons, which was this. His Majesty having been informed that the revenue of the Hearth Money is very grievous to the people, is therefore willing to agree either to a regulation of it or the taking of it wholly away as the House shall thinke more convenient; and as in this his Majesty doth consider the case of the subject, soe he doth not doubt, but you will be careful of the support of the crown. This was graciously done and gratefully acknowledged. There are some persons about the towne hath been busy in combining together to raise some new troubles, for which they are imprisoned, the Lord Arran, the Lord Dunmore, Sir Robert Hamilton, and one who married the Lord Arran’s sister. There are some English ioynd, they say, with them, but they are gone out of the towne. Yt

"cannot be expected but after soe great a change but their will be some discontents appeare. The lords are busy in a Bill of Comprehension and toleration to some. I hope this may please all, I pray God send us peace, which is the hearty prayers of your most Faithfull seruant—Downe. On the outside this direction to the bearer, 'Leaue this with the Postmaster of Ferry-bridge, Yorkshire, to be sent.'"

4 August 1701. Letters of induction by Knightley Chetwood, archdeacon of the archdeaconry of York, for the induction of John Auby, M.A., clerk, to the rectory of the parish church of Thornhill, co. York, in the aforesaid archdeaconry.

22 June, 2 Anne. Constitutions and Ordinances (agreed vpon att a generall and publicke meeting, in the Moothall of the Burrough of Pontefract, &c., &c., of Thomas Taylor, esq., mayor; Robert Frank, esq., recorder; William Coates, Hastings Sayle, Thomas Sayle, and George Holcote, aldermen; William Lapidge, Ferdmand Buck, Timothy Lyle, John Moore, Joshua Smith, Joseph Bradley, and George Skipton and others for maintaining and upholding the good estate of the said borough.

26 May, 4 George I. Exemplification of the record of a recovery made at Westminster before Sir Peter King, knt., and his associates in Easter term of the aforesaid year, whereby Daniel Wilson, esq., and William Dawson, esq., recovered from Robert Fenwicke, esq., and Oliver Marten, gentleman, the manor of Water-Fryston, Ferry-Fryston, and Ferrybrigs alias Ferry-bridge, with its appurtenances, and twenty-four messuages, two hundred acres of arable land, and a hundred and fifty acres of meadow, three hundred acres of pasture, two hundred acres of scrub and briery and common of pasture for all animals, with appurtenances, in Water-Fryston, Ferry-Fryston, Ferrybrigs alias Ferrybridge and Knottingley.

7 October 1745. Draft of the Humble Address of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of Pontefract to the King's most Excellent Majesty. Declaring their loyalty and devotion to his Majesty's government and person, and their detestation of the northern rebels and "the popish pretender." The memorialists averring that their present professions are consistent with their past actions.

15. September 1778, Free passage given, under his official seal, by Samuel Salstonstall, mayor of Pontefract, to John Parkinson, farmer of Oulton, in the parish of Rothwell, in the Honour of Pontefract and Duchy of Lancaster; certifying that as the said John Parkinson enjoys the immunity from toll and other privileges granted by James the First, in his Letters Patent dated in the fourth year of his reign, to all his men and tenants residing within the Duchy of Lancaster.

22 February, 6 William IV. Commission of the Peace for the Mayor of Pontefract, and the Mayor of the same borough for the time being, and Michael Mitton, solicitor, William Moxon, Samuel Hurst, and Francis Barker, maltsters, all of Pontefract, to be justices for the preservation of the Peace in the said borough.

To the foregoing account of the records of the municipality may be fitly appended the following notes made during my examination of Four Old Registers of the Parish Church of Pontefract.

(1.) Register inscribed in modern handwriting on the cover, "Baptisms, Marriages, and Burials from 1585 to 1642. From which time to 1647 no regular register was kept on account of the castle and parish church being held and occupied with troops during the civil wars between Charles the First and the Parliament, Children were baptised at the chapel of St. Giles's."

(2.) Register inscribed in modern handwriting on the cover: "Baptisms, Marriages, and Burials from 1647, when the Civil War or Rebellion raged to September 1652, when the new Register commenced according to the Act of Parliament, no regular register being kept during the Civil Commotions, which at that time agitated the country," and described by a contemporary scribe on the first of the vellum leaves, "The Register of all persons that have bin baptized, buried, married, or their purpose of marriage published according to law, within the parish of Pontefract, in the West Ryding of the County of Yorke, anno Dni. 1647." Also described over the first entry of the record "The Register of such persons as were baptized in the parish of Pontefract, in the county of York, beginning November the 19th, 1647.—Tempore Josephi Ferret, pastoris ecclesie ibidem."

This book was kept by Mr. Ferret, who signed every leaf of the record with "Joseph Ferret, minister," and enriched the record with the following historic note, "Memorandum, that upon the 3rd of June 1648, the castle of Pontefract was surprised by Major Morris and his confederates, which occasioned a long siege and great trouble; in which time there was not settled ministry in this parish, and none order observed therein, till it pleased God to returne the minister on the 2d of April 1649. Morris and another ringleader in the rebellion being not long afterwards executed for their treachery, and the castle ordered to be demolished. Jos. Ferret, minister." Mr. Ferret closed the record thus: "Here endeth this register, and after this followeth the new register by Act of Parl^t appointed beginning from 29 Sept. 1653."

(3.) 1653-1671. The Register of all Marriages and Publications thereof, and also of Baptisms and Burials within the parish of Pontefract, in the West Ryding of the county of Yorke. Begun the 29th of September 1653. Kept from 29 Sept. 1653 to 7 April 1661 by Mr. Joseph Ferret, the minister of the parish of Pontefract, this carefully kept record is remarkable for general neatness, and also for the particularities of its registrations touching civil marriages, e.g.—(a). The purpose of marriage between William Shilletoe, of Castleforth, in the county of York, husbandman (his mother and guardian is Anne Shilletoe, of Castleforth aforesaid, widow) on the one part, and Anna Hodgson, of Tanshelfe, within the parish of Pontefract, spinster, daughter of Richard Hodgson, late of Tanshelfe aforesaid, deceased (she is without parent or guardian), on the other part, were published three severall Lord's Dayes in the new church of Pontefract, at the close of the morning exercise, viz., Lord's day, the thirteenth day of November 1653, Lord's day the twentieth day of the same month, and Lord's day the seven and twentieth day of the same month, according to the act of Parliament in that case made and provided. (b). The purpose of marriage between Thomas Mell, of Long Cliffe, in the parish of Hemborough; in the county of York, gentleman, on the one part (he hath neither parent nor guardian), and Anne Smith of Pontefract, in the said county, spinster, daughter of John Smith, late of Cawood, within the said county, deceased, on the other part (her guardian and father-in-law is James Beuterley of Cawood aforesaid, gentleman), was published three severall market dayes in the market place of Pontefract aforesaid, between the hours of eleven and two, vizt., Saturday the nineteenth of November 1653, Saturday sixe-and-twentieth of the same November, and Saturday the third of December 1653, according to the Act of Parliament in that case made and provided.

(4.) 1672-1728. Register of Baptisms, Marriages, and Burials in the borough of Pontefract.—Containing the following biographical registrations under date 28 December 1678.—"Deo Opt. Max: In Ecclesia Parochiali omnium Sanctorum de Pontefract Requiescit in Deo Reverendus Dominus Doctor Samuel Drake Sacrosacerdos huius Ecclesie Vicarius et Rector Ecclesie Parochialis de Hansworth nec non ecclesie Cathedralis Beati Petri apud Southwell in Agro Notinghamensi Prebendarius Decanus Decanatus de Pontefract. In Collegio Divi Johannis Evangelistae apud Cantabrig. diligenter studiis incubuit, et in Decimo Sexto Anno aetatis suae istius Collegii Socius; sed Invalescens Rebelle, nequissimo Scot. Fodore ejectus. . . Vir Religionis cultu, morum probitate, innocua juncunditate, corporis elegantia, affectuum temperantia, ergo Pauperes Caritate et omnes equitate, se charum probavit. Qui fidelitatem ac fortitudinem Regiae Majestatis vberim indicavit, et in Newarkiensis obsidione se firmum strenuumque militem comprobavit. Qui postquam ad annum aetatis suae quinquagesimum septimum attigisset non sine nobile et vulgari luctu ab hac vita ad meliorem commigravit vicissim octavo mensis Decembris Annoque Domini 1678 votumque suum apud posterum sacramentum esse voluit Filius suus Devotissimus. F.D. V. de Pont. et Success."

[The Samuel Drake of this concise memoir was grandfather of Dr. Samuel Drake, rector of Treeton, co. York, whose edition of Archbishop Parker's "De Anti-quitate Britannicae Ecclesiae" was published in the year 1729.

JOHN CORDY JEFFERSON.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE,
—MANUSCRIPTS STILL OR RECENTLY IN THE POSSESSION OF LORD BRAYBROOKE OF BRAYBROOKE, AT AUDLEY END, SAFFRON WALDEN, ESSEX.

The writings to be noticed in this report are the manuscripts which Lord Braybrooke of Braybrooke still retains in his possession at Audley End, and the comprehensive collection of Cornwallis Manuscripts, consisting chiefly of the official (American and East Indian) Papers of Charles Cornwallis, 2nd Earl and 1st Marquis Cornwallis, (b. 1738, d. 1805), which came to Lord Braybrooke through the marriage of his ancestor, Richard, 3rd Lord Braybrooke, with Jane, daughter of the 2nd Marquis Cornwallis, and which have been recently committed by Lord Braybrooke to Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical Manuscripts, in trust to deposit them, as a free gift to the nation, in the Public Record Office, for the convenience and especial advantage of students of Anglo-American and Anglo-Indian History.

I. MANUSCRIPTS STILL RETAINED AT AUDLEY END.

Together with a few MS. books, Lord Braybrooke preserves at Audley End some letters and other documents which students may peruse with interest and advantage. Remarkable for its antiquity and the extent of the period covered by its entries, the Account Book of the Wardens of the parish church of Walden, co. Essex (17 Henry VI. to 5 Henry VII.) gives some curious information respecting the ecclesiastical usages of our forefathers. Noteworthy as examples of the calligraphic pains and dexterity expended in former times on domestic archives, the two Chartularies and Deed-Registers of Sir Thomas Cornwaleys, knt. (1 Mary to 25 Elizabeth) are valuable on account of their reference to several matters of historical moment. And the illustrators of Restoration London will find congenial entertainment in the ensuing summary of "The Book of Debentures and Warrants" (1660 to 1673), which affords a general view of the economy and pomp of the Duke of York's household, and at the same yields a large number of facts that, notwithstanding their minuteness and occasional triviality, will be scarcely less serviceable than amusing to personal historians and biographical annotators. The choicest writings of the collection, however, must be sought amongst the no-bound manuscripts. In the instrument, prepared (4 December 1423) by a public notary at the request of the Abbot of Walden, we have the careful record of an exercise of abbatial authority, that will be prized by searchers for further evidence touching the education which children received in the fifteenth century from the priests of the religious houses. Particular attention may also be invited to the writings which came to their present possessor from his remote ancestor, Sir Henry Neville, of Billinghere, Queen Elizabeth's ambassador to France, in the years 1599 and 1600, or from his nearer progenitor Richard Neville Aldworth Neville, M.P., and Under-Secretary of State (father of the 2nd Lord Braybrooke), who having acted as Secretary to the British Embassy at Paris, during the negotiations for the Definitive Treaty (1763), held successively the positions of His Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires and Minister Plenipotentiary at the French Court, during the brief period that intervened between the Duke of Bedford's return to England and the arrival in Paris of the Earl of Hertford. The correspondence of Sir Ralph Winwood with Sir Henry Neville having been published more than a hundred and fifty years since in so familiar a work as Edmund Sawyer's "Memorials Of Affairs Of State In The Reigns Of "Queen Elizabeth and King James the First" (1725), the reappearance of some of the original letters that passed between the ambassador and the secretary is no recovery of lost historical evidences. But though its contents have long been public property, readers will learn with satisfaction that the epistle, which gave Queen Elizabeth her earliest and most vivid account of the celebration of the marriage of Henry the Fourth of France with Mary de Medici, is still to be numbered amongst extant documents. Of the papers that descended to Lord Braybrooke from the diplomatist of the eighteenth century, few are more deserving of consideration than the characteristically piquant letter from David Hume to Mr. Stuart (14 March, 1764), which, now that it has been brought to light from the pocket of an old despatch-box, will doubtless find a place in future editions of the philosopher's correspondence and miscellaneous writings.

(a.) Books.

I.—17 Henry IV.—Survey and Extent of the Manors of the Abbot of Walden; with a terrier and rental of all lands and rents pertaining to the same abbot and convent. Small 4^{to}; containing ninety-nine leaves (paper), bound in oak boards.

II.—17 Henry VI.—5 Henry VII.—Curious Account Book (small 4^{to}, in vellum cover) of the Wardens of the parish church of Walden, co. Essex, for the period, beginning with 17 Henry VI. and ending with 5 Henry VII.; the accounts for some of the earlier years being kept in French, and the later accounts in Latin or English. Containing in all one hundred and fifty leaves, some of which are misplaced and in confusion.

III.—1 Mary—25 Elizabeth.—Chartulary and Deed Register of Sir Thomas Cornwaleys, knt. (folio; with the arms of Cornwaleys on the fly-leaf, and an Index to the contents of the volume on the concluding pages). Containing copies of royal grants and other documents touching Sir Thomas Cornwaleys's acquisitions of land in Suffolk, Norfolk, Essex, and Yorkshire, in the times of Mary and Elizabeth, this register opens with transcripts of the following documents:—

(1.) 1 Mary.—Letters Patent of the pardon to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys in respect to his accounts for his tenure of the shrievalties of Norfolk and Suffolk.

(2.) 1 and 2 Philip and Mary.—Letters Patent of the grant for ever to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys and his heirs and assigns of the manor of Westhorp, co. Suffolk, on the determination of a previous grant of the same manor by Henry VIII. to Anne of Cleves, who still enjoys the same manor; with further grant in tail male to the same grantee and his wife Anne, of the house and manor of Palgrave, co. Suffolk; one of the considerations for these concessions being the service recently rendered by Sir Thomas against the rebels at Framlingham, co. Suffolk:—"precipue antem in illa nefaria dissimula rebellione versus nos prelatam Regiam "nostramque Regiam potestatem nuperime apud "Framlingham in comitatu nostro Suffolcie."

(3.) 3 and 4 Philip and Mary.—Letters Patent of the grant of the guardianship of the heir of Sir Thomas Cornwaleys to John Bowall, D.D., William Cordall, esq., their Majesties' Solicitor-General, and John Surland, esq.

(4.) 4 and 5 Philip and Mary.—Quietus upon the account rendered by Sir Thomas Cornwaleys of his tenure of the office of Treasurer of Calais.

(5.) 4 and 5 Philip and Mary.—Letters Patent of the pardon granted to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys for matters of his accounts in respect to the same office.

(6.) 4 and 5 Philip and Mary.—Letters Patent of the grant for life to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys of the office of Chief Steward of the Hundred of Colnes, co. Suffolk.

(7.) 5 and 6 Philip and Mary.—Letters Patent of a licence to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys to export two hundred scarfels of wool to parts beyond the sea.

(8.) 4 and 5 Philip and Mary.—Indenture of a lease for twenty-one years by their Majesties to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys of the mansion and park of Coptthall, co. Essex, with appurtenances.

(9.) 5 and 6 Philip and Mary.—Letters Patent of the grant in tail male to Sir Thomas Cornwaleys and Anne his wife of the manor and park of Wilton in Cleveland, co. York, with their appurtenances.—Also another folio Chartulary and Deed Register (formerly the property of the said Sir Thomas Cornwaleys), setting forth in a different order the same matters as the preceding folio chartulary.

IV.—1617-1629. Provisions Book: large folio in vellum wrapper. Setting forth in weekly accounts the articles of food received for the victualling of a large household, and consumed by the same family. The name of the establishment is not given. As each account gives the value of the different provisions, their quantity, the number of persons catered for, together with particulars of each week's 'remanent' of victuals, the record affords comprehensive data for estimating the cost of a liberally ordered establishment in the times of James the First and Charles the First.—Also, a similar Household Account Book, covering a period from 1 January, 1704, to 28 October of the same year; the headings of several of the accounts showing that the bills were for the expenses of the Culford Hall Household.

V.—1660-1673.—The Book of the Duke of York's Household (4^{to}, containing 257 pages in vellum cover, besides fly-leaves, and the leaves occupied by two indexes), described on the cover in these words. "The Store of "seuerall Debentures for wages, ended 24 June 1662: "And The Entry of seuerall Warrants, Commissions,

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE,
—

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

" & Orders touching seuerall offices, imployments, & " salaries. Debutentes and Warrants : Household I."

Setting forth the sums, that on official enquiry were found to be due in August, or one of the later months of 1662, to the various officers and servants of the household of His Royal Highness the Duke of York, the first hundred and three pages of this notable record contain entries touching the wages of the following persons. —

(1.) Mr. John Turnbull, one of the pages of y^e backstayres to her R.H. the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum for himselfe, and 20^{li} per annum for his servant.

(2.) Robert Werden, esq^r., one of y^e Grooms of his Royall Highness y^e Duke of York's bed-chamber with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(3.) Richard Nichols, esq^r., one of y^e Grooms of his R. Highness the Duke of York's bed-chamber with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(4.) M^r Thomas Hull, one of his R.H. the Duke of York's gentlemen wayters, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(5.) Sir Henry Devie, Comptroller of the Duke of York's house, with a salary of 400^{li} per annum.

(6.) Baptista May, esq^r., one of the Grooms of his R.H. the Duke of York's bed-chamber, with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(7.) William Coventry, esq^r., Secretary to his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(8.) M^r Phillip Savage, one of the Pages of the backstayres to her Royall Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(9.) Madame Walburg Howard, Lady of the bed-chamber to her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(10.) M^{rs} Dawson, one of the women of the bed-chamber to her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 150^{li} per annum.

(11.) M^r James Read, one of the gentlemen wayters of her R.H. the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(12.) M^r Windsor Saudys, one of the gentlemen wayters of her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(13.) M^{rs} Katherine Elliot, one of y^e women of the bed-chamber to her R. Highness y^e Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 150^{li} per annum.

(14.) M^{rs} Killegrew, one of the women of the bed-chamber to her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 150^{li} per annum.

(15.) Sir Charles Berkeley, groom of the stool to his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 600^{li} per annum.

(16.) M^r John Browne, one of the gentlemen wayters of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(17.) M^r Francis Ireland, one of the pages of the backstayres to her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(18.) M^r Robert White, one of the pages of the backstayres to her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(19.) M^r Edmond Warcop, one of the gentlemen wayters of his R. Highness the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(20.) M^r Hubert, one of y^e mayds of honour to her R.H. y^e Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 20^{li} per annum.

(21.) M^r Abraham Bigs, Clerk of the Kitchen to his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(22.) M^r James Powel, yeoman of the beerseller to his R. Highness y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(23.) M^r Henry Broukard, one of the grooms of his R.H. the Duke of York's bed-chamber, with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(24.) M^r Richard Brett, one of the gentlemen wayters to his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(25.) Giles Rawlins, esq^r., Gentleman of the privy purse of his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 400^{li} per annum.

(26.) Mons^r de Puys, Yeoman of the Robes to his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(27.) M^{rs} Bridgit Holmes, y^e necessary woman imployed about his Royall Highness the Duke of York's Lodgings, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(28.) Mons^r Davies, his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke's barber, with a salary of 80^{li} per annum.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

(29.) David Munday, y^e porter y^e carries coales for her R.H. y^e Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 20^{li} per annum.

(30.) Mons^r la Roche, her R.H. the Duchesse of York's tayler, with a salary of 90^{li} per annum.

(31.) M^{rs} La Roche her R. Highness y^e Duchesse of Yorke's stercher, with a salary of 120^{li} per annum.

(32.) Doctor Watson, one of y^e Chaplains to his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(33.) M^{rs} de Puys, sempstresse and landres to y^e body of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 250^{li} per annum.

(34.) Mons^r Nipho, Secretary of the Languages to his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 100^{li} per annum.

(35.) M^r John Jewks, yeoman of the wine-celler of his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 70^{li} per annum.

(36.) M^r Hercules Lowe, one of the gentlemen wayters of his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(37.) Mons^r Balcsye, one of the Equeries of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 100^{li} per annum.

(38.) Colonell Anthony Eyre, one of y^e Equeries of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 100^{li} per annum.

(39.) M^{rs} Blake, one of the maids of Honour of her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 20^{li} per annum.

(40.) M^{rs} — Baladine, one of the maids of honour of her R.H. the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 20^{li} per annum.

(41.) M^r Rowland Griffith, Gentleman-Harbingier of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(42.) M^{rs} Ellen Greene, the sempstres of her R.H. the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 80^{li} per annum.

(43.) M^r John Robinson, one of y^e chirurgions of his R. Highness the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(44.) M^r Daniell Coghlan, one of the pages of the backstayres to his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(45.) Doctor Henry Killegrew, one of y^e Chaplains and Almoner to his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 100^{li} per annum.

(46.) Mons^r Duvall, Equerie of her R.H. y^e Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 100^{li} per annum.

(47.) M^r Henry Courtey, yeoman of the woodyard of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(48.) M^r Dike, shoemaker of her R.H. the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 36^{li} 10^s per annum.

(49.) Mons^r la Forest, one of y^e Pages of y^e backstayres of H.R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(50.) M^r Henry Rainsford, yeoman porter of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(51.) M^r Thomas Laycocke, the brusher of his R.H. the Duke of Yorke's robes, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(52.) Hemy Jermyn, Esq^r., Master of the Horse to his R.H. the D. of Yorke, with a salary of 400^{li} per annum.

(53.) M^r Christopher Chilton, Yeoman of the Poultry to his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(54.) Henry Killegrew, Esq^r., one of the Grooms of the bedchamber of his R.H. the Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(55.) Mons^r Nicholas le Dent, Yeoman of the Month to her R. Highness y^e Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(56.) M^r Fancett, one of the Chirurgions of his R.H. y^e Duke of Yorke, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(57.) Madam La Gard, one of the women of y^e bed-chamber of her R. Highness the Duchesse of Yorke, with a salary of 150^{li} per annum.

(58.) John Cole, turnspit, with wages at the rate of 12^d per diem.

(59.) Richard Roger, turnspit, with wages at the rate of 12^d per diem.

(60.) James Booth, seowrer in the kitchen, with wages at the rate of 12^d per diem.

(61.) John White, scowrer in the kitchen, with wages at the rate of 12^d per diem.

(62.) Henry Leach, porter in the kitchen, with wages at the rate of 12^d per diem.

(63.) Richard Straw, pann-keeper in the kitchen, with wages at the rate of 6^d per diem.

(64.) Richard Straw, Jun^r, labourer in the kitchen, with wages at the rate of 6^d per diem.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

(65.) Edward Ogle, Esq', one of the Gentlemen-Wayters of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(66.) M^{rs} W^m Cowmley, one of the grooms of the Privy Chamber of his R.H. y^e Duke of York, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(67.) M^r Ch^rer Hill, Master of the Barge of his R.H. y^e Duke of York, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(68.) M^r Henry Crane, Caterer of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(69.) M^r Ross, keeper of his R.H. the Duke of York's Armoury, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(70.) M^r Burley Fenn, Yeoman of the Pantry of his R.H. y^e Duke of York, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(71.) M^r Anthony Steevens, yeoman of the scullery to his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(72.) M^r John Mateland, Surveyor of the Stables of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(73.) Richard Talbot, esq', one of the Groomes of the Bedchamber of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 300^{li} per annum.

(74.) M^r James Pierce, chirurgeon of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(75.) George Howard, esq, pensioner with an allowance of 100^{li} per annum.

(76.) M^r Littleton, one of the Gentleman-Wayters of his R^h Highness the Duke of York, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(77.) M^r James Supple, Yeoman of the Larder to his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(78.) M^r W^m Kirkham, one of his R^h H^{rs} cooks, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(79.) Thomas Morley esq', Avenor to his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(80.) M^{rs} Mary Coward, Landress of her Royall Highness the Duchess of York, with a salary of 250^{li} per annum.

(81.) Edward Villers, Esq', Maister of the Roabes and Groome of the Bedchamber to his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 400^{li} per annum.

(82.) M^{rs} Atkinson, Landress to the table of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 200^{li} per annum.

(83.) Mons^r Claude Foromont, the Master-Cook to his Royall Highness the Duke of York, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(84.) M^r Thomas Parry, Purveyor of the stables of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(85.) John Leige, Esq., Gentleman-Usher to his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 80^{li} per annum.

(86.) M^r Richard Morley, Clerk of the Spicery, of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 60^{li} per annum.

(87.) M^{rs} Wise, the Mother of y^e maids of Honour of her R.H. the Duchess of York, with a salary of 20^{li} per annum.

(88.) M^r William Hobbs, one of the cooks of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(89.) The Lady Carr, pensioner of his R.H. the Duke of York, with an allowance of 200^{li} per annum.

(90.) Doctor Crowther, one of his R.H. the Duke of York's chaplains, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(91.) M^{rs} Elliott, one of her R.H. the Duchess of York's women of the Bedchamber, with a salary of 52^{li} per annum.

(92.) M^r George Man, one of the Pages of the Backstaves of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary 60^{li} per annum for himself, and 20^{li} per annum for his servant.

(93.) Doctor Clarke, one of his R.H. the Duke of York's chaplains, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(94.) John Markham, Esq', Gentleman-Usher to her R.H. the Duchess of York, with a salary of 80^{li} per annum.

(95.) M^{rs} Susanna Barron, her R.H. the Duchess of York's lace-woman, with a salary of 10^{li} per annum.

(96.) Phillip Froud, Esq', Secretary of her R.H. the Duchess of York, with a salary of 100^{li} per annum.

(97.) M^r Lewis Trething, one of the gentlemen-wayters of her R.H. the Duchess of York, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(98.) Francis Chamberlaine, one of the turnspits of his R.H. the Duke of York's kitchen, with wages at the rate of 12^d per diem.

(99.) Dr William Thomas, one of his R.H. the Duke of York's chaplains, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(100.) M^r Gape, one of his R.H. the Duke of York's apotecaries, with a salary of 20^{li} per annum.

(101.) Simon Manselli, Keeper of his R.H. the Duke of York's chapel, with a salary of 40^{li} per annum.

(102.) Mr. Rowland Griffith, Gentlemen-harbinger o his R.H. the Duke of York with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(103.) M^r Edward Sanders, foot huntsman, retained to attend his Royall Highness's buckhounds and foxhounds, with a salary of 25^{li} per annum for his attendance on the buckhounds, and a further salary of 30^{li} per annum for his attendance on the foxhounds.

(104.) Mons^r Michel de Beholla, one of his Royal Highness's chirurgeons, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(105.) Ralph Montague, Esq', Gentleman of the Horse to her Royal Highness the Duchess of York, with a salary of 400^{li} per annum.

(106.) Thomas Croke, Porter of the Backstaves of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 18^s 5^d per annum.

(107.) Charles Porter, esq., Solicitor of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 50^{li} per annum.

(108.) M^r William Ford, one of the grooms of the Privy Chamber of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(109.) Twenty-four watermen, viz., Rowland Hill, John Hill, Daniell Hill, W^m Risborow, John Humborn, John Picke, John Steedewell, John Smith, John Jones, John Gloss, John Holmes, Thomas Lamkin, Thomas Cowdrey, Richard Duke, Henry Palmer, Edward Palmer, John Moore, Barnaby Smith, Abraham Cauly, Warren Hill, James Lucas, John Sumpston, Thomas Humfries, Marcus Samuel,—being the watermen of his R.H. the Duke of York's barge, with a salary of 40^s per annum to each of them.

(110.) Henry Earle, messenger, with a salary of 11^l 1^s 8^d per annum.

Containing 85 pages, the Second Part of this book exhibits inter alia the following matters:—

(1.) 28 July, 1660. Commission for Charles Porter, gentleman, to act as his R.H. the Duke of York's solicitor, and "to put in execution such orders and " directions as hee shall from tyme to tyme receive " from ourselfe, the steward of our house or revenue, " our secretary or any of our Councill learned."

(2.) 15 June, 1660. Commission for Edward Turnor, esq', to be the Attorney General of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a yearly fee of forty pounds.

(3.) 17 June 1660. Commission for Edward Thurland, esq., to be Solicitor-General of his R.H. the Duke of York, with a yearly fee of forty pounds.

(4.) 23 May, 1666. Warrant of Commissioners for the Orderly Regulating of his Royal Highness's Household affairs to the Receiver General and Treasurer of his R.H. the Duke of York. For the payment of 300^{li} per annum (in addition to his present allowance of 20^{li} per annum), in discharge of his attendance on their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York, " and for " all drugs, medicaments, and compositions whatso- " ever by him bought, prepared and administered to " both their Royal Highnesses, their Highnesses the " Duke of Cambridge, Lady Mary, and Lady Ann, and all their Royal Highnesses' livery servants.

(5.) 29 December, 1666. Commission by James duke of York, &c. to Peter de Laune, " to be tutor to my " dear sonn the Duke of Cambridge, and to my dear " daughter the Princesse Mary to instruct them in the " Frenche tongue."

(6.) 29 August, 1667. Commission for Thomas Gorges, of Heavytree, co. Devon, esq., to be steward of all his R.H. the Duke of York's " honnors, barronies, castles, " manors, and lordships whatsoever within the " kingdom of Ireland."

(7.) 3 October, 1667. Order of Commissioners for regulating the Household of his R.H. the Duke of York, appointing Robert Thornhill, esq', to aid and assist Dr Robert Gorges in the management of the affairs in Ireland of his said Royal Highness; with warrant for payment of a salary of 100^{li} per annum to the same Robert Thornhill.

(8.) 26 July, 1660. Commission by James duke of York, appointing Thomas Povey, esq., to the office of Receiver General of the revenues of his Royal Highness.

(9.) 26 March, 1666. Warrant by James duke of York (countersigned W^m Coventry) to Thomas Povey, esq., his Royal Highness's Treasurer and Receiver General. For payment (in addition to an allowance of 5,000^{li} per annum, heretofore made to her Royal Highness) of a further yearly allowance of 7,827^l 3s. 1d. to

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

"such persons as my dear wife shall appoint to receive 'the same';" the said additional allowances "being for the maintenance of all the servants and attendants, "belonging to my dear wife, as well for their salaries, "wages and board wages, as for the liveryes and other "charges belonging to them, and also for the charges "of her stables, comprehending the medicine and "shoeing of her horses, repayres of coaches, saddles, "harness, &c."

(10.) 21 March, 1661. Commission by James duke of York to Edward Thurland, of the Inner Temple, London, esq., his Royal Highness's Solicitor-General, to be chief steward of the manor of Reigate.

(11.) 24 January, 1667. Order by the Commissioners for regulating the Household of his R.H. the Duke of York; appointing "Anthony Rolart, musick-maister to "the Lady Mary and Lady Ann," with a salary of 100^l per annum.

(12.) 27 September, 1666. Commission for Sir Allen Apsley, knt., to be Treasurer and Receiver General of his R.H. the Duke of York.

(13.) 29 September, 1668. Commission for Lodowick Johnson to be the huntsman of his R.H. the Duke of York, in the room of Edward Sanders, deceased.

(14.) 15 January, 1668. Order by the Commissioners for regulating the Household of his R.H. the Duke of York, that henceforth M^r Job Johnson, cook to her Royal Highness, shall receive an additional salary 20^l, in lieu of former allowances for meat, bread, beer, fire, and other necessities.

(15.) 9 February, 1667. Order by Commissioners for regulating the Household of his R.H. the Duke of York, that henceforth M^r Claude Fourment, Master Cook to Royal Highness, receive an additional salary of 30^l per annum, in lieu of former allowances for meat, bread, beer, fire, and other necessities.

(16.) 8 March, 1668. Warrant, signed by James duke of York, and addressed to Sir Allen Apsley, knt., for the payment of another half-year's wages to John Ogle and Richard Gilby and Henry Jones, notwithstanding "a late warrant of retrenchment of my stables," whereby "John Ogle, governour to my pages, and "Richard Gilby, groom to my stables, were dismissed "their employments in my service from Lady-day "1668."

(17.) 20 December, 1667. Commission (embodying six articles of instruction to the Commissioners) signed by James duke of York, appointing the Earl of Peterborough, Lord Cornbury, Lord Berkeley, Mr. Permin, master of his R.H.'s horse, Mr. Villiers, master of his R.H.'s robes, Sir Allen Apsley, Treasurer of his R.H.'s household, Sir Henry Devic, Comptroller of his R.H.'s household, Mathew Wren, esq., his R.H.'s Secretary Henry Howard, esq., Sir Richard Powell, knt. of the Bath, Robert Worden, esq., and Anthony Eyre, esq., to be a Commission for regulating the expenses of the Household of his R.H. the Duke of York.

(18.) 10th August, 1668. Commission for Jean De Latre to be keeper of the arms of his R. H. the Duke of York, in the place of John Ross deceased. Also, a Warrant, dated by his R. H. 15 November, 1669, for securing to the same Jean De Latre a salary of 50^l per annum, for his services in the said office.

(19.) 9 December, 1669. Warrant (signed by James duke of York) for the payment to Thomas Povey or his assigns the sum of 1690^l 9^s, in completion of the payment of certain 2,000^l, granted to the said Thomas Povey by his R. H., "in pursuance of the mediation of "my deare mother the Queen lately deceased, and upon "consideration of the surrender made by Thomas Povey, "esq., of my patent wherein he was appointed my Treasurer and Receiver-General."

(20.) 12 June, 1669. Warrant for the execution of a grant made by James duke of York, "upon the happy "restoration of his Majesty," to his R.H.'s servant Mr. Thomas Haywood of "the import of twelve tons of "wine yearly according to the old import of 42^l per "ton."

(21.) 8 December, 1669. Warrant, by James duke of York, for the payment of 40^l a piece, as a free gift and bounty on their discharge from his R. H.'s service, to John Conway and Paul Gelston smiternper, and Roger Grimshaw and Richard Read mulmen.

(22.) 14 August, 1670. Warrant, by James duke of York, for the payment of an additional salary of 60^l per annum, "unto James Pearse my chirurgeon (over and "above the sixty pounds per annum allowed him already) in consideration of his attendance as chirurgeon to the persons of my dear wife and my children."

(23.) 23 May, 1670. Commission to Sir Francis Goodrick of Lyncoln's Inne, knt. to be Solicitor-General in England to his R.H. the Duke of York.

(24.) 14 November, 1670. Warrant, by James duke of York, for the payment "unto Henry Jermin, esq., "Master of my hors, or to his assigns the sum of one "hundred thirty-four pounds in full for stable-rooms "at the half-way house, and for keeping several horses "above the number allowed in the booke of Establishment of my stables from Michaelmas 1669 untill "Michaelmas 1670."

(25.) 12 May, 1670. Commission to Sir Edward Thurland of the Inner Temple, knt., to be the Attorney General in England of his R.H. the duke of York.

(26.) 25 March, 1670. Appointment (by Sir Allen Apsley, Receiver-General) of Benjamin Bonwick, of Riegate, co. Surrey, gentleman, to be Receiver of Rents, &c. due to his R.H. the duke of York from the manor of Riegate.

(27.) 14 April, 1671. Commission, during pleasure, by James duke of York to Peter Laisme, to "be writing-master for teaching my deare daughter the Princess "Mary to write;" with a salary of 30^l per annum.

(28.) 12 April, 1671. Commission to M^r John Duvall to be one of the escuerys of his R.H. the Duke of York.

(29.) 17 November, 1671. Warrant by James duke of York for the payment of a salary of ten pounds per annum "to commence immediately from and after the "death of my dear wife the Dutches deceased," to William Clerk "for keeping clean the gallery, making "fires in my Presence Chamber and doing other necessary works."

(30.) 5 February, 1671. Warrant by James duke of York, for payment from Lady Day last past of a pension for life, of 50^l per annum granted to M^{rs} Catherine Lacaulx.

(31.) 15 February, 1671. Grant, during pleasure, of the office of Gentleman-Harbingier to his R.H. the duke of York, to Mathias Rutton in the room of George Mann.

(32.) 31 October, 1670. Commission to Sir Walter Walker, knt., and Doctor of Law, to be Advocate-General of his R.H. the Duke of York.

(33.) 22 April, 1672. Warrant, by James duke of York, for the continuance, for life, of a pension of 150^l per annum allowed unto M^{rs} Dawson "in the life-time "of my deare wife the Dutches deceased."—Also, under the same date, a similar warrant for the continuance, for life, of a pension of 250^l per annum, allowed to Mistress Elliot "in the life time of my deare wife the "dutches deceased."

(34.) 2 June, 1672. Warrant by James duke of York, for placing Edward Griffin on the establishment of the Household, as a Groom of the Bedchamber, with a salary of 200^l per annum, in the room of Richard Nicholls, esq., deceased.

(35.) 3 May, 1672. Commission by James duke of York to Thomas Keightley, esq., to be gentleman-usher to his R.H. in the room of John Trevaian recently deceased.

(36.) 10 March, 1671-2. Warrant by James duke of York, for the completion of the payment of a sum of 8,098^l, allowed and declared due after a strict examination of accounts to Richard Nicholls, esq., late Deputy-Governor of all his R.H.'s territories in America.

(37.) 2 October, 1672. Appointment of Thomas Fraiser to be barber-extraordinary to his R.H. the Duke of York in place of Jean de Latre.

(38.) 21 January, 1672. Commission to Sir Francis Goodrick of Lincoln's Inn, co. Middlesex, heretofore Solicitor-General of his R.H. the Duke of York, to be the same Duke's Attorney-General in England.

(39.) 18 March, 1672. Warrant by James duke of York for the payment of 1,200^l per annum in equal quarterly payments to the Lady Frances Villiers, to be expended on "the robes, lynnin, and other apparel for "my deare children the Lady Mary and Lady Ann;" it being ordered in the warrant that Lady Frances shall every quarter of a year give exact account of her expenditure of the allowance to the Commissioners for regulating the Household of his R.H.; and that, in case she should at the close of any quarter of a year have money in hand and unexpended, the surplus shall be accounted as part of the next quarter's allowance.

(40.) 1 May, 1673. Grant, during pleasure, to Edward Thurland of the Inner Temple, London, esq., of the office of Steward of a moiety of his R.H. the Duke of York's manor of Reigate co. Surrey, with a salary of 3^l per annum.

(41.) 10 June, 1673. Warrant, addressed by James duke of York to Sir Francis Goodrich, knt., his R.H.'s

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAT-
BROOKE.

Attorney-General or to Sir Francis Winnington, knt., his R.H.'s Solicitor-General, for the preparation of "a Commission fitt for my signature, for constituting "and appointing Tobias Holder gentleman to be "Auditor General of my revenue in the room of "Thomas Holder esq. who hath surrendered his sayd "employment; to hold the sayd place during my "pleasure only with the yearly allowance of 180^{li} for "himself, Assistant and clerks, and also for providing "pens, ink, paper, parchment, and other necessaryes "for the dispatch of the business of the said office."—Also, under date 14 June, 1673, the commission prepared in obedience to the foregoing warrant.

Comprising 62 pages, the Third Part of the volume consists chiefly of copies of Commissions and Orders, touching matters already set forth in this catalogue with sufficient particularity. Amongst the entries of this concluding portion of the book may also be found copies of documents touching the following matters.

(1.) 26 August, 1662. Appointment, during pleasure of Nicholas Baxter to be esquire of the "great horses" of his R.H. the Duke of York.

(2.) 8 April, 1661. Appointment, at his humble request, of William Hobbs to "y^e place of Child of y^e "Kitchen-in-ordinary vnto his Royall Highnesse y^e "Duke of Yorke."

(3.) 28 August, 1662. Appointment, during pleasure, of Richard Thomas to be one of the pages of the Presence Chamber of his R.H. the duke of York, in the room of Richard Belcher, who has been appointed to be yeoman of his Royal Highness's buttery and eury.

(4.) 28 February, 1660. Appointment of Michael de Beholla to be one of the chirurgions-in-ordinary of his R.H. the Duke of York, "to attend on her R.H. the "Duchess of Yorke."

(5.) 1 June, 1663. Order, by the Commissioners for regulating the Household of his R.H. the Duke of York, for the payment of a salary of 40^{li} per annum to William Filby in remuneration of his services in the office of Sacristan to his R.H.'s chapel; D^r Killigrew, one of the duke's chaplains, having on the 21st of August last past delivered all the plate and vestments of the said chapel into the hands of the said William Filby.

(6.) 6 March, 1663. Warrant addressed by James duke of York to his Treasurer and Receiver-General, Thomas Poyer, esq., for the payment "vnto the Lady "Francis Villiers of y^e sum of six hundred pounds per "annum, being for the maintenance of my Deare Sonn "the Duke of Cambridge and my Deare Daughter; "Comprehending therein the two hundred pounds per "annum which hath been already paid vnto her."

(7.) 28 June, 1662. Warrant, by James duke of York, for payment of 50^{li} per annum to Lady Francis Villiers, for the use of his Royal Highness's "daughter."

(8.) 27 April, 1664. Warrant, by James duke of York, for payment of the sum of 220^{li} per annum to his Royal Highness's tailor, Claud Surseau, in respect to charges for the liveries of the duke's trumpeters.

(9.) 20 July, 1663. Appointment of Symon Paul to be one of his R.H. the Duke of York's trumpeters, with a salary of 30^{li} per annum.

(10.) 2 July, 1664. Warrant for the payment of 250^{li} per annum to James Carlile, gentleman, serjeant of the hounds of his R.H. the Duke of York, for the maintenance of the duke's foxhounds, and also for the maintenance of the same James Carlile and horses suitable for him as a huntsman.

(12.) 30 May, 1664. Allowance of 40^{li} per annum, in equal quarterly payments, to "D^r Massonett for his "service and attendance as Physician to his Royall "Highness's family."

VI. 6 May, 1646. An Account of the Debtes of Theophilus earle of Suffolke, paid since 1640 by the now Earle. With a note of debtes unpaid anno 1646.

(b). Letters and other unbound Documents.

4 December, 1423. An instrument, drawn at the order of John Hatfeld, abbot of Walden, by John Mansfeld, clerk and notary public, in the following terms:—

In dei nomine. Per presens publicum instrumentum eunctis appareat evidencibus, quod anno millimo cccc^{mo} vicessimio tercio. Indictione secunda Pontificatus sanctissimi in Christo patris et domini nostri domini Martini diuina providencia Pape quinti anno septimo mensis Decembris die quarto in quadam camera magna ad finem aule principalis infra ceptum monasterii de Walden Londonensi diocesi situata, in mei notarii publici subscripti et testium infrascriptorum presencia, Constitutus personaliter Venerabilis et Religiosus vir frater Johannes Hatfeld Abbas, vt asseruit, tunc ibidem dicti monasterii a quibusdam dominis Johanne Bernard et Willelmo Brynge capellanis tunc ibidem assistentibus et presentibus diuina in ecclesia parochiali de Walden celebrantibus, vt asserbant, interrogant et ipsos et eorum vtrumque allocutus est quare et cuius auctoritate siue mandato ipsi domini Johannes et Willelmus exerecium docendi parulos pueros virorum incolarum ville de Walden predicta et imbuendi ipsos pueros in Alphabetis graciis siue aliis superioribus libris, infra eandem villam de Walden licencia ipsius domini Abbatis et Conuentus sui dicti monasterii quorum interest in hac parte vt asserbat quidem dominus abbas ad hoc minime petita nec obtenta in se presumpserunt et presumunt in presenti vt dixit Idem frater Johannes Abbas predictus intimando sicut intimant tunc ibidem dictus dominus Abbas eisdem dominis Johanni Bernard et Willelmo Brynge quod ipsi domini Johannes et Willelmus occasione et pretextu huiusmodi presumptionis frequentate inantea fuerunt prius tam tacite quam expresse reprehensi et * declarando vltieris eisdem sicut declarauit prefatus Johannes Abbas, qualiter secundum statuta et consuetudines dictorum domini Abbatis et conuentus ac monasterii sui predicti laudabilia * facultus licencia et libertas concedendi et conferendi scholas quibusvis magistris grammaticalibus in dicta villa de Walden docere volentibus et consuetis et preferendi huiusmodi magistros ad huiusmodi scholas ad abbates quoscumque dicti monasterii de Walden pro tempore existentes et eiusdem loci conuentum solum et insolidum pertinerunt pertinere in presente et pertinere debent etiam in futurum, ipsique magistri scholarum huiusmodi auctoritate liberalitate et licencia eorum dominorum Abbatum et conuentus dicti monasterii pro tempore existentium prius eisdem magistris concessis et obtentis pueros quoscumque dictae ville de Walden siue in alphabetis graciis siue in aliis altioribus libris docendos et imbuendos solummodo docerunt et imbuerunt habueruntque idem magistri suis temporibus successivis solum et insolidum exerecium huiusmodi sue docendi et imbuendi sic vt preferant a tempore et per tempus cuius contrarii memoria hominum non existit pacifice et quiete vsque ad tempus gravaminis per ipsos dominos Johannem Bernard et Willelmum Brynge sic vt preferant iam illati; qui quidem domini Johannes Bernard et Willelmus Brynge premissa sibi sic vt preferant obiecta et allocata sufficienter vt apparuit intelligentes delictum suum in hac parte suarum presumptionum factarum humiliter verbo recognoscentes se de et pro huiusmodi suis presumptionibus suis prius recitatis gracie demini reverendi patris fratris Johannis Hatfeld Abbatis predicti in alto et basso submisserunt quorum submissiones admittens graciosè ipse dominus Abbas predictus officium siue exerecium quosvis pueros ville de Walden in eadem villa siue alios pueros in Alphabetis graciis siue aliis superioribus libris vltieris docendi et imbuendi penitus interdixit quousque eidem domino Abbati de consilio quid sit faciendum alias melius videbitur. Et demum Idem frater Johannes Abbas memoratus de consensu expresso quorundem fratrum suorum dicti monasterii imbi tunc existentium et assistentium et ad instantem petitionem virorum incolarum de Walden predicta proborum et valenciorum tunc ibidem astantium et insistentium pro pueris suis in Alphabetis suis docendis et imbuendis per presbiteros in dicta ecclesia de Walden antedicta celebrare diuina consuetos et ad litem cedendam paeonque et pacis tranquillitatem reformandam petitionibus eorundem virorum incolarum de Walden tunc presencium videlicet domini Mathæi West dicte ecclesie de Walden vicarii vt asserbatur, Andree Michel, Johannis Chymmyny, Simonis Peper, Rogeri Constable, Willelmi Hygham, Walteri Parn, Johannis Howlet, Ricardi Chapman, Johannis Berord, Willelmi Sawer, Johannis Hygold, Johannis Gerlond, Johannis Draper junioris, et Johannis Bate chaundeler de Walden predicta sic annuit et quieuit videlicet quod quilibet presbiter celebrans in dicta ecclesia de Walden et de cetero celebraturus diuina in eadem ecclesia vnum parvulum puerum cuiuscumque incole dicte ville de Walden recipere valeat ipsiusque parvulum in Alphabeto et graciis et non in aliis quibusvis superioribus libris docere poterit et imbuere tunc concessit interdicto predicto ad beneplacitum dicti domini Abbatis et conuentus monasterii predicti duraturo. De quibus quidem concessionibus sic factis et supremo recitatis, iidem viri incole de Walden tanquam in communitate congregati se habuerunt et reputantur vt apparuit bene contentos et graciaram acciones prefato domino abbati pro * concessis exsoluerunt super quibus omnibus et singulis prefatus frater Johannes Abbas monasterii predicti requisivit me notarium subscriptum quod facerem sibi vnum vel plura publicum siue publicum instrumentum siue instrumenta. Acta sunt hec prout superscribuntur et recitantur sub anno indictione pontificatu mense dio et

LORD
BRAT-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

loco predictis presentibus discretis viris Willelmo Bayle, Ricardo Colbrook, Thoma Hicheman, Willelmo Bucherd, Johanne Gerlawe, Henrico Skyner, hac Londonie diocesi testibus ad premissa vocatis specialiter et rogatis.

Et ego Johannes Mansfeld clericus Eboracensis diocesis publicus auctoritate apostolica notarius premissis omnibus et singulis dum sic vi premititur sub anno indicione pontificatu mense die et loco predictis coram prefato reuerendo patre fratre Johanne Abbate memorato et per eum agebantur et fiebant vna cum prenomi- natis testibus presens personaliter interfui etque omnia et singula sic fieri vidi et audiri scripti publicavi et in hanc publicam formam redegi meisque nomine et signo solitis et consuetis signavi mea manu propria hic subscribendo et subscripsi in fidem et testimonium premissorum rogatus specialiter et requisitus. Et constat in notario de interlinear verbi personaliter supra quartam lineam presens instrumenti a capite computando quod approbo ego notarius antedictus.

The usual and customary sign, which John Mansfeld puts to this curious instrument, by the side of its final and attestatory clause, is a beautifully executed monogram of the initial letters of his Christian name and surname, on the drawing of which he spent probably the greater part of a day. This artistic performance is a cross so drawn as to resemble the letter "J," the initial letter of the notary's surname appearing as the central object of the upper part of the cross, in the base of which the letters J and M again appear.

10 June, 4 Edward VI. Letters Patent of the grant for life by Edward the Sixth to Henry Neville of the office of keeper of the Sonnyngwelle Park within the forest of Wyndsor, and also of the office of forester of the ride called "the Ryding Forster," with the circuit called Battelles Walke or Battels Baylewise within the forest of Wyndsor; with wages of liiij. d. per day in respect to the keepership of Sonnyngwell Park, and further wages of liiij. d. ob. per day, in respect to the office of forester of Ryding Forster.

16 April, 1582. Warrant, addressed by Sir Henry Nevell, knt., to Richard Stafferton, gentleman, woodward of her Majesties woodes in Braie Wood. To permit M^r Woodward, clerk of the Queen's Honour and Castle of Windsor, to take six of the best timber oaks in Braye Woods, as part of the hundred oaks granted to him by Her Majesty, and to be felled in the forest of Windsor.

17 January, 1586. Inventorye of the goodes and chattels of Thomas Hitchmouthe, vicar of Warfilede, prayes by Gilbert Watlington, William Finche, and Steven Boyer.

— Paper of Fourteen Articles, headed "Points for Grosso to procure advertisement out of Spaine;" one of the points being "Whether the Armada be returned and yf yea, whether yt be kept together in one place or divided, and whether the souldiers be returned or dismissed." The agent for procuring secret intelligence of Spanish affairs is further instructed to ascertain, "What fleetes are setting out for the East and West Indies, and at what time and from what ports they are to set forth," and also to learn "Whether the queene be with child or nay."

19 September, 30 Elizabeth. Certificate of the grant for life, by Henry Hawys, mayor, William Austen and Christofer Barrowes, bailiffs, and the burgesses of the borough of New Windesore, co. Berks, of the office of Chief Steward of the same borough, to Sir Henry Nevell, knt.—Dated in the Guildhall of New Windesore.

2 June, 1591.—Memorandum entitled "Articles de la Capitulation que Monseigneur le Prince de Dombes entend accorder aux assieges de Guingant."

— 1591.—Sixteen news letters in Italian, dated from Rome or Venice in the months of September, October, and November 1591, and addressed by an anonymous correspondent to his friend the Worshipful M^r Thomas Savell, of London.

30 September, 1592. Copy of a Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Lieutenant of Oxon and Berks. For the apprehension and commitment of certain soldiers furnished by the said counties for her Majesties present service in Bretayne," guilty of "running from their general at the place where they should have imbarked."

— April, 1596. Memorandum touching the grant of "the office of Clerk of the Pipe, and of the engrossing of all leases to the Exchequers Seale, and of the writing of all paper bokes and Transcripts of Leases to Great Seale of England; and the writing of all other offices that are to passe the Seale of the Exchequer

"with the custodie of all Accomptes of Receaours and others, acceptable in the Exchequer and of all particulars and other Records which did belong to the Court of Augmentation," to Sir Edward Stafford; the said office, &c. having been "procured by Sir John Fortescue for Sir Edward Stafford."

14 April, 1599. Letter (French) from M^r J. Stallin to "Monseigneur L'Ambassadeur d'Angleterre au logis de S^r Henry Killigrew, on la part on il sera." Relating to purely personal and domestic matters, with the exception of the following items of intelligence in the last paragraph:—"Le Jeune prince D'Orange est icy, qui attend le vent yvre pour passer en Holand avec quelques soldats, qui il mene avec luy et certain nombre de Suisse. Il est bruit icy que ma Dame de Monceaux est morte en paine d'enfance, mais cela n'est encor tenu pour certain."—Dated from Dieppe.

19 July, 1599.—Memorandum of the French king's reply when he was pressed by the English Ambassador to repay to her the moneys which she lent his Majesty "durant les troubles de son royaume," and of which she is now in urgent need for the prosecution of great wars which Q. Eliz. has on her hands in Ireland and elsewhere. The memorandum is followed by a request for the Queen's particular instructions, in case the King of France should endeavour to postpone the required payments yet longer. Written in French this document (described by the heading "Proposition de l'ambassadeur d'Angleterre faite a Messieurs du conseil du Roy le 19 Juillet 1599") seems to be the rough sketch for a despatch from Sir Henry Nevill, knt., to his mistress, the Queen of England.

14 December, 1599. Letter from Sir H. Kyllgrew to Sir Henry Nevill, knt., Ambassador to the Queen's Majesty in France. Announcing that in consideration of his bodily weakness the Queen hath permitted "my Lord of Essex to goe and see herewith som other phisitions also more then he had before." The writer says on another matter, "The picture com from Florence I delyvered my brother with those conditions you prescnybed, but he tolde me the queyne was already provided of one as dyvers therebe here abroad among our courtoeurs."

24 December, Letter from Raphe Windwood to Sir Henry Nevill, knt., Lord Ambassador for Her Majesty with the French king. Correcting the error of a previous letter that on insufficient authority announced "that the peace was concluded in this treatie," whereas on further inquiry the writer finds himself without definite intelligence on the matter. Having mentioned in cypher his authorities for the misleading announcement, the writer adds, "There is a courier sent in post to the duke, vpon whose returne it is hoped that this treatie will have an end, which whatsoever it be, th'opinion is, that the king wilbe at Paris by the end of next month."—Dated from Lions.

11 March, 1600. Note from Sir Robert Cecyll to M^r Lock, secretary to the Lord Admiral of England. M^r Lock, I pray you tell Sir H. Nevill that in a Packet directed to him by y^e Name of Justus from Colnyll, there is much written in cypher, and therefore I desire to have it because it may be deciphered.—Your Louing friend, Ro. Cecyll.

5 July, 1600. Letter from J. Packer to Sir Henry Nevill, knt., "Lord Ambassador for her Majesty with the French King and Commissioner, at Bouloign." Touching a conversation which the writer has had with the Duke Montpensier. "I desired him to acquaint your Lordship," says the writer, "with the state of the matters of Savoy, whereunto I found him very willing. He told me that by the letter which he lately received from the king, there was no likelihood of any thing but warre. Yet the President Barillet had but even then been with him, and assured him that whatsoever was reported, his Master's intent was to give the king all satisfaction; which is likewise the opinion of the Princesse of Aurançe. . . The Count Fuentes is looked for certainly at Milan, about the end of this month, as I heard by 162, who commendeth himself to your Lordship, and desireth greatly to see you once againe, before his going out of France. He bringeth with him 4,000 men and a million and an half of gold, aswell in money as in billes. His authority is very great, and his title of a new edition, viz., Vicario. F. 154 giveth your Lordship many thanks for your good remembrance of him, and the assurance which you have given him touching the matter you commanded me to impart. I could learne nothing of him, but that the king is now determined to marry the Princess

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-BROOKS.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

"at Aiguon, which I have likewise heard of some other. Her stuff is not to be sent from hence this fortnight, though the kinges be already gone, and herself not to come till the beginning of October. The Nuncio went hence on Thursday last; the Venise Ambassador on Wednesday next is purposed to sett forward: but the Scottish Ambassador only excuseth himself, by reason of his indisposition. P. 158 is still in towne, but I have had very little occasion to use his name, though I have from tyme to tyme communicated with him such newes as I imagined your Lordship would have published. I have now given him note of the Irish newes for his master, which (God be thanked) is much contrary to that was written from one Captain Boiteux, of Bouloign, to E. 141, of a certaine overthrowe given her Majesties forces." The sure intelligence of the last battle has revived the spirits of the Princesse of Aurance, respecting which affair the writer, on the authority of W. 209, reports that "the Archduke hath sent a discours of the whole proceeding to the Spanish Ambassador, wherein it is said that Count Maurice his losse was full as great as is that with the Admirall." Though it is signed "J. Packer" this letter is in Raphe Winwood's peculiar handwriting.

2 November, 1600. Letter from Sir Henry Neville to M^r (afterwards Sir) Raphe Winwood, dated from London. Published in "Memorials of Affairs of State in The Reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James I.; Collected chiefly from the Original Papers of Sir Ralph Winwood, knt., some time one of the Principal Secretaries of State. In Three Volumes. By Edmund Sawyer, of Lincoln's-Inn, esq. (1725)," the collection commonly known as "Winwood's State Papers."

4 December, 1600. Letter from M^r (afterwards Sir) Raphe Winwood, to Sir Henry Neville, knt., her Majesties Ambassador for France. Giving a lively account of the arrival of Mary de Medicis at Lyons, and of Henry the Fourth's contentment with her beauty, and first personal interview with her. Dated from Lyons.—Published in Edmund Sawyer's "Winwood's State Papers" (1725).

8 December, 1600. Letter from M^r (afterwards Sir) Raphe Winwood, to Sir Henry Neville, containing the vivid description of the celebration of the marriage of Henry the Fourth of France, with Mary de Medicis, which was perused by Queen Elizabeth with an interest that caused her to make particular inquiries respecting the writer. Dated from Lyons.—This memorable epistle was published in "Winwood's State Papers" (1725); but the following postscript to the letter was not printed in Edmund Sawyer's Collection:—"P.S.—The Duke of Bouillon is not yet returned to this court, but the King hath sent once againe for him. The next month his quarter begins, at which time his Secretarie doth tell me he will be here. M^r De Rosny will shortly be at Paris. The ester for this yeare is in gros already dressed, and amounteth to 12 millions, whereof three are designed for the fonde of the warre. Ste. Catherine and Alinges are rendered. The bruit runs that Counsaill will shortly goe forward toward Paris. I hope it is your lordship's pleasure that upon their returne I likewise should returne, for the King will not stay long after them. Here hath bin speech that Amyens hath lately bin in daunger to be surprised by the Duke d'Aumale, and though it hath no show of probability, yet it is now beleaved. For my particular I have receaved no great fauor from Dissimulation's secretary. Yet I thinke when he shall come to rest in Paris some good use may be made of him. The king will shortly goe to Bourg. I purpose not to depart from hence, before I shall receive direction from your lordship. I sent by this bearer 2 passeports, th^{one} for the returning of my Ladies stuffe, which is stayed at Rouen; the other for the discharge of the imports of wine for the provision of your house, which to make it more authentical is warranted under the great seale of France."

21 December, 1600. Letter from M^r (afterwards Sir) Raphe Winwood to Sir Henry Neville, knt. Dated from Lyons.—Published in "Winwood's State Papers" (1725).

28 December, 1600. Letter from Sir Henry Neville to M^r (afterwards Sir) Raphe Winwood. Speaking of the gratification which M^r Winwood's account of the marriage of Henry the Fourth of France afforded her Majesty of England. "I understand," says the writer, "the queene receaved very greate contentment and satisfaction of your letter, and hath bin inquisitive of you both of my vnkle Killigrew and others, to whom I have given direction to answer, vpon the like occasion, that which may produce good effect towards — Paper of sixteen articles, with this descriptive heading, "A Memoriall of som pointes wherein I desire to understand her Majesties pleasure, either particularly in my instructions, or in generality by verball directions." Drawn by Sir Henry Nevill, this memorandum exhibits with singular clearness some of the principal matters to which he was required to give his more careful attention, whilst acting as Queen Elizabeth's ambassador in France:—(1) Touching the succession in France, he needs instructions whether he should aim at aggravating or healing the dissensions of the supporters and opponents of the young Prince of Conde, in favour of the latter policy it being observed that "the greatness of France is the only barre and bridle to the ambition of the Spaniard and his disseins against vs;" (2) Touching the heades of the protestants there, the ambassador would know whether he should stimulate their jealousies and fears, for their state in case of the king's death, and educate them by promises to look to the Queen of England for support and inspiration; (3) Touching the enterprise of the Marquisse of Saluces, he would know whether he should encourage the king of France to commit himself to it, "for that this enterprise in all appearance is to draw with it a breach and warre with Spaine, the only assured meanes of our quietnes;" (6) Touching the Kinges intended marriage, he inquires whether he should "intermeddle in it;" (8) Touching our fugitives, he desires orders whether he should "give access vnto any of them if they seeke it, or give care vnto any ouertures and discoveries that they shall offer;" (11) Touching Villeroi, the Kinges Secretary, he asks "Whether I may not give him comfort and assurance of her Majesties favour and good conceit towards him, which I understand he doth very much affect, and may well deserve both otherwise, and especially by imparting advertisements and intelligence out of Spaine." Article No. 14 runs thus:—"Touching the treaty with the Archduke, if it should proceede. Whether the States of the United Provinces, if they should joine in the treaty, may not be drawn to insist vpon these pointes, that those provinces should not be remitted vnto Spaine at any time but should ever descend to the next heire of the howse, not heeing Kinge of Spaine, in som such sort as was agreed on for the succession of England in the treaty of the marriage of Queene Mary to King Phillip, and of her Majestie to Monsieur, and that all forraigne forces should be avoided, to which it is likely that the rest of the provinces would willingly condescend and perhaps the Archduke alsoo to recover the whole to his obedience."—No date.

"you." Dated from London.—Published in "Winwood's State Papers" (1725).

11 March, 1606. Bond of Sir Henry Nevill, knt., of Pillingbere, co. Berks, in the sum of 100^l for the payment of the full sum of 50^l on the 14th day of next May, to Sir William Poole, knt., at the said Sir William's house, in the parish of St. Michael Bassishaw, in London.

13 March, 1608. Letter from M^{rs} Dora Greye to Lady —, Begging her ladyship to take the writer's daughter into her service for a twelve-month, as the young lady has a desire to visit London. The epistle touches in an interesting manner the condition of gentle serving-women in the time of James the First.

14 December, 1608. Letter from Robert Beseley to Sir Henry Nevill, knt., at Pillingbere. Respecting unpaid charges for the entertainment of certain scholars at Oxford. "Your nephews," says the writer, "are now destitute of a chamber. For the present shyt M^r Warden hath giuen them leave for some small while to lye in his lodging. The best hope of bettering this is by y^e departure of Sir Harry Poole's sonne, whose roome perhaps will be obtayned for some reasonable rent of M^r Brickenden, in whose disposing it is. If y^e cannot be they must be content wth such shyt as M^r Horu can make for them in his own chamber.—Dated from Merton Colledge.

29 November, 1614. Indenture of a lease for ten years, at a yearly rent of 40^l, by Sir Henry Nevill, of Pillingbere, co. Berks, knt., to Edward Nevill, of Sonnynghill, in the same county, of "all that the parsonage of Wargrave, in the said countie of Berks, and all manner of tythes in the parishes of Wargrave, together with the parsonage barnes, there called Mombury barnes."

18 July, 1615. Grant, for life, by the alderman and chief burgesses of the town of Wokingham, co. Berks, of the office of High Steward of the same borough to Sir Henry Nevill, knt.

28 February, 1616. Direction of the Court, (signed—Laur. Washington,) to the parties in the cause of Sir Henry Nevill, knt., and Elizabeth, lady Periam, plaintiffs, against Sir Robert Albany, knt., and Edward Staverton, gent., defendants, concerning fynes, herriotts, and other customes of the manor of Warfield."

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

18 February, 1638. Answers of the Jury to the articles given them in charge at the Court of Greenwich, holden for the Manor of Chepping Walden.

9 June, 1660. Certificate (signed—Manchester) that Sir Edward Griffin, knt., has been duly sworn and admitted to the office of Treasurer of the King's Chamber; which office was granted to him by letters patent, dated 29 January, 15 Charles I.

— 1602. List of officers of the king's household, and their salaries, under the heading "Salleryes payable " out of the Treasurer of the Chamber's Office yearly." Names of the officers not given.

30 May, 1663. Warrant under the sign-manual of Charles the Second, addressed to James Duke of Ormond, Lord Steward of the King's Household, and "to the rest of our Officers of Our Greencloth." For payment to Sir Edward Griffin, knt., Treasurer of the King's Chamber, the board-wages due to him according to the establishment made at York in 18 Charles I., from the time when the same Sir Edward was sworn into his said office till "he received his diet in kind."

— 1663. List of the servants of the King's Household with their salaries, under the heading, "A note of the King's servants' salaries, how farr they are in arreare." The names of the servants are not given.

— 1665. Five several schedules, touching the salaries of the servants of the king's household.

22 July, 1669. Schedule of salaries appointed to officers and servants of the king's household, under the heading "The Yerely Payments charged upon the Treasurer of his Majesty's Chamber (after all Retrenchments " and Orders of Council) stand now thus."

15 September, 1688. Letter from the Lord President Sunderland to ——— Sir, The King directs me to acquaint you that he thinks fit you should stand to serve in Parliament for the burrough of Reading, and that accordingly he desires you would loose no time in doing what shall be necessary in order to your election. I am, sir, Your Affectionate friend and servant, Sunderland P." Dated from Windsor.

15 October, 1694. Bond of William Hawkins, of New Windsor, gentleman, in the sum of five hundred pounds; to secure payment to their Majesties William and Mary of all sums of money due to them from the said William Hawkins, as Receiver-General of their Land Revenue in cos. Northampton and Rutland.

29 November, 1694. Letter from Robert lord Ferrers, High Steward, and Capital Bayliffe, of the liberty of Richmond and Middleham, co. York, to William Aldworth, esq., Auditor-General to her Majesty the Queen Dowager. Requesting the said auditor-general to issue his Debenture to the Receiver of the Queen Dowager's rents within the Archdeaconry of Richmond, for payment to the writer of the 150^l 19^s due to him in respect of his aforesaid offices of High Steward and Capital Bayliffe.—On the other side of the same sheet, Mr W^a Aldworth's order for the payment of the sum demanded.

1699-1700. Account (on ten stitched sheets of paper) of the Receipts and Payments for the Rt. Hon. the Countess of Suffolk from Lady-day 1699 to Lady-day 1700.

1709-1710. A Rentall of the Manors of Walden, &c., in Joynture to the Rt. Hon. Ann, Countess Dowager of Suffolk.

21 July, 1711. Schedule of "A Poll taken at Windsor " 21 June 1711, for Charles Aldworth esq., and Topham Foot, esq." The votes given to Mr. Aldworth being 149 and the votes given to Mr. Topham Foot being 41.

1 August, 12 George I. Certificate of the admission of Henry Grey, of Billingbeare, co. Berks, esq., into the office of Chief Steward of the town of Wokingham, cos. Berks and Wilts., in the time of Richard Nevell, gent., alderman, and Jacob Hayes, esq., Recorder and Sub-Steward of the same town.

— 1750. Papers relating to the Negotiation with Spain and the Treaty of Madrid, signed 5 Oct. 1750.

21 February, 1751. Letter from William Mildmay to the Hon. Colonel Yorke. Touching the claims of the King of France to St. Lucia, and the Duke of Bedford's curious action in respect to the memorial in which those claims were set forth.

8 April, 1751. Translation of a Letter in cypher from Mr Wall to Mons^r de Carvajal.—It is notorious how little satisfaction His Majesty received from the Prince of Wales's conduct, which occasioned the indifference he showed during his son's dangerous illness. Nevertheless the sincere affliction which His Majesty manifested as soon as he knew of his death, and the distinguished attentions which he has shown to the Princess Dowager and her children, has undeceived most people.

I have endeavoured to inform myself of what they propose doing upon this event (which is of so great consequence to the nation on account of His Majesty's advanced age, and the different parties which subsist), by indicating to the Ministers, my Lord Carteret and others of note, how much my Court would be concerned at so fatal an event, as she interests herself extremely in the solidity and tranquillity of the English government.

My Lord Carteret, who was the first I saw, told me, that they had asked him his opinion, and that he had answered, that they asked it in order to gain courage to move the matter themselves; however that he had no difficulty in telling it, and had accordingly declared to them, that it was proper to take such a resolution (without attending to private affections) as might make the nation easy, and the consistency of the Government known abroad; That if they did not do so, it were better to trust to Providence; but that he gave them warning that if they made a false step they would give him occasion to declare himself the most popular man in England tho' he had never courted the approbation of the people.

I did not see the Duke of Newcastle till yesterday. I told him that I came only to make him a visit, since I was persuaded that it was not a time to talk of business. I thought I found him very much out of humour, as well on account of the Prince's death, as for the Elector of Cologne's having escaped him. He would have me sit down, and after the first compliments, told me that it was not possible for me to imagine with what magnanimity and goodness of heart His Britannick Majesty conducted himself in this sad event, both with regard to his family and subjects, and that he must own that he was struck with wonder and compassion to see that tho' he was in good health, he considered the good of his kingdoms, and was careful to provide against all the accidents which might result as well from his own advanced age, and from the tender age of his successor. By his satisfaction I perceived that His Britannick Majesty had opened the matter himself and thereby rid the Duke of the difficulty he would otherwise have been under in touching so tender a point.

From this and other signs one may infer that His Britannick Majesty has taken the resolution of forming a Regency, and from the satisfaction of his Grace and others, I have reason to suppose that the Princess Dowager will be declared Regent, and that a Council will be named to assist her.

The Duke of Bedford seemed to me not pleased, and upon my mentioning to him the same subject, and in the same words, as to the Duke of Newcastle, he said he hoped His Majesty would live many years. I answered that his robust constitution prognosticated it; but that at all events minorities would not now be so much exposed to troubles as in former times, because the Lords have not now so much power over their vassals, as formerly. He said, it was true, but notwithstanding a minority would always occasion bad . . . , and gave for instance that, if five or six Lords had the army at their disposal much mischief might result from it, on account of their particular interests and ends. I granted him this, and changed the discourse with asking his opinion concerning the behaviour of the Elector of Cologne. He told me in a complaining way that his colleague had not sent him the last northern letters; but that he was not surprised at the proceeding of the said elector, and that he expected the French Ambassador every moment, who would doubtless come and offer this Elector's vote to His Britannick Majesty in consideration of some satisfaction for the Elector Palatine, and other things with regard to Sweden.

By what I have mentioned Your Excellency will observe that the two Dukes are not of the same way of thinking; since the one shews satisfaction and the other concern.

The satisfaction of the former makes me suppose that he has hopes, not to say is certain, that the Regency will not fall on the Duke of Cumberland, who is not his friend, and the greatest part of the nation will be glad of it, by which he is not well beloved. At the most he may perhaps be named one of the council out of form, if he condescends to accept it, having a right to be sole Regent. However the great difficulty will be to dispossess him of the command of the army.

The affection, which His Britannick Majesty has hitherto shewn for this Prince seems incompatible with removing him from an authority granted by Act of Parliament. However the Regent will not think herself safe if he continues with the said command. The Duke of Bedford, who is influenced by my Lord Sand-

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-BROOK.LORD
BRAY-
BROOK.

wich, desires no doubt that this Prince may be in authority.

They think of forming a small Household for Prince George, and bringing him to St. James's. I am, &c. Wall.—Dated from London.

15 April, 1754. Letter from the Duke of Bedford to ——. Congratulating the letter's recipient on the election of himself and his colleague to be Members of Parliament for Wallingford. Hoping the election may be favourable to his party on the morrow at Reading, the Duke alludes to "a little check at Brackley," where "one Mr Humberstone has stolen away a majority of the Votes." Dated from Streatham.

25 September, 1762. Copy or Fair Draft of a letter from the Duke of Bedford to the Earl of Egremont. Alluding to a previous account of "a conference between the Duke and Count de Choiseul and myself respecting the King of England's instructions in regard to the evacuation of Cleves, Wesel, Guelndres, &c.," and touching the terms of a projet now sent for a treaty. "I am convinced," the writer says of these terms, "you now have the last words of this court, and that if the string is attempted to be stretched one jot further, it will inevitably break." Dated from Paris.

14 November, 1762.—Letter from C. Jenkinson, esq. to Richard Nevill, esq. Reminding the writer of his undertaking to supply Lord Bute with information respecting the present state of French finances. The writer observes, "Mr Knight used to transmit last war accounts entitled Bref Etat des revences pour l'annee, &c., and the same des dépenses. He is said to have obtained them out of the office of the Comptroller General. Such accounts for the years 1760, 1761, and 1762 would be of the greatest use. Lord Bute mentioned that he would wish to have them by Mr Rigby at his return."—Dated from South Street.

22 November 1762. Letter from the Earl of Sandwich to ——. It being the Earl's intention to go by sea from England to Lisbon, en route for Madrid, at the court of which last named capital he has been appointed English ambassador, he begs his correspondent to execute commissions for him at Paris, for the efficient but not lavish maintenance of the pomp suitable to the representative of England at the Spanish Court. Dated from Charles Street.

26 December, 1762. Copy of letter from the Duke of Bedford to the Duc de Choiseul. Interceding for the miserable prisoners "détenus a Aiglemorte et sur les galeres pour cause de religion, dont je vous ai parlé l'autre jour a Versailles." Dated from Paris.

—1762-1763. Letters and draughts of documents, stitched together and described as "Some very Secret Papers relating to the Definitive Treaty and its consequences."

26 January, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Duke of Bedford to the Duc de Choiseul. Accompanying "le rapport du Colonel Desmaretz sur l'Etat de la cuvette, avec le plan de Dunkerque, que cet Officier avoit levé et envoyé en Angleterre pour servir d'éclaircissement à ses remarques." Dated from Paris.

16 February, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Egremont to the Duke of Bedford. Acknowledging the receipt of the duke's dispatch, "transmitting the Definitive Treaty with the accession of Portugal, signed the same day," and conveying in strong terms the approval with which the King of Great Britain regards the duke's part in bringing about the Treaty. Dated from Whitehall.

11 March, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Duke of Bedford to the Earl of Egremont. Touching the hostages and cannon taken from Brunswick and Wolfenbuttle; and reporting the Duc de Choiseul's dissatisfaction with the "Reigning Duke of Brunswick, who has protested the Bills of Exchange, which had been given, and received by the French, bout fide, for the saving the towns of Brunswick, &c. from pillage." Dated from Paris.

5 April, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Egremont to the Duke of Bedford. Touching measures for carrying out at Dunkirk the stipulations of the 13th Article of the Treaty, and also touching the disposition of the French government to avoid or defer the execution of the same stipulations. Dated from London.

12 April, 1763. Copy of a letter from Richard Neville, esq. to the Earl of Egremont. Announcing that the writer has with suitably flattering expressions delivered the King of England's picture to M^r de Bussy, who declared himself to be very sensible of the honour so rendered to him. Dated from Paris.

12 April, 1763. Rough draft of a letter from Richard Neville, esq., to the Earl of Egremont. Respecting the Duc de Praslin's complaint in regard to the conduct of certain English captains who have seized divers French ships, on the passage from France to St. Domingo, although the same ships were provided with the king's passports; the pretext of the said captain being the frivolous objection that the passports were impressed with the seal of the late and not the present king, from which it was inferred that "the whole was counterfeit." Dated from Paris.

16 April, 1763. Copy of a letter from Richard Neville, esq., to Robert Wood, esq. Apologizing for an official mishap that caused the writer to send Lord Egremont without explanation a paper not intended to be forwarded to him. "I am," says the writer, "a little unfortunate to stumble at the threshold, but I hope Lord Egremont's goodness will excuse me." Also, referring to the death of Lady Ossory, of which event it is said, "She died at Mont-auban, last Tuesday morning, and is most sincerely lamented by her sister and M^r Vernon, who had left her seemingly much better, but very few days before she died. We received likewise to-day the news of Lord Walgrave's death; so that from a cheerful house this is now become a very melancholy one." Dated from Paris.

18 April, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Egremont to Richard Neville, esq. Declaring the deep concern with which the King of England has heard of the unjustifiable conduct of divers captains of English ships, in seizing French vessels and maintaining their right to do so, because the passports of the same vessels were sealed with the late instead of the present king's seal. Dated from Whitehall.

21 April, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Egremont to Richard Neville, esq. Accompanying the account of charges for the subsistence of French prisoners of war in His Majesty's dominions; and begging that the English government may be furnished as soon as possible with the French Minister's corresponding account for the maintenance of English prisoners in French dominions; it being the wish of his Majesty of England that "these accounts should be adjusted without loss of time."

9 May, 1763. Letter from the Marquis de Grimaldi to the Duke of Bedford. Touching the charges for the maintenance of Spanish prisoners in England, taken during the course of the war; and the arrangement for the restitution of Manilla (de Manile). Dated from Marly.

16 May, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Duke of Bedford to His Excellency M. Le Duc de Praslin. In behalf of the prisoners detained at the galleys and elsewhere on account of their religion. Dated from Paris.

28 May, 1763. Letter from the Marquis de Grimaldi to the Duke of Bedford. In reply to the Duke's letter, conveying to the Marquis the orders of the King of England for the restitution of Manilla and the Philippine Islands. "D'après l'observation," says the writer, "que vous me faites, Monsieur, je vois que les ordres pour les susdites restitutions sont sous entendus dans le recit de l'Article 23 du traité définitif, ou l'insertion du mot d'Espagne donne bien à entendre que cette conquête de Manilla se trouve dans le cas de la restitution."

31 May, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Egremont to the Richard Neville, esq. Accompanying the King of England's letters accrediting Mr. Neville as his Majesty's Resident and Chargé d'Affaires, "which is the same rank as M^r D'Eon is invested with here."—Also copies of the same Letters of Credence.

6 June, 1763. Copy of a letter from Mons^{rs} de Ramsault to Colonel Desmaretz. Touching the demolition of works at Dunkirk.

10 June, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Shelburne to Richard Neville, esq. Introducing the writer's friend, Colonel Scott, to the earl's friendly consideration. Dated from Hill Street.

12 June, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Egremont to Richard Neville, esq. Announcing that the status and character of Resident were given to M^r Neville to make him the exact equal of the French Minister at the English Court; and that therefore he must not deliver his credentials without an audience of the most Christian King, or receive any honor inferior to the honour accorded to Mons^{rs} d'Eon at the court of St. James. Dated from Whitehall.

13 June, 1763. Letter from Richard Neville, esq., to the Earl of Egremont. Announcing the difficulty the writer has encountered in seeking to present his credentials at a private audience, it being the rule of French court that none save Ambassadors, Envoys, and Ministers Plenipotentiary, might have private audiences for the presentation of credentials.

14 June, 1763. Letter from M^r J. P. Desmaretz to the Earl of Egremont. Touching the demolition of works at Dunkirk in accordance with the stipulations of the present treaty. Dated from Dunkirk.

16 June, 1763. Letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Earl of Egremont. Giving a particular account of the writer's interview with the Duc de Praslin about the obstacle to his reception by the King of France at an audience in his present capacity of Resident; towards the end of which conference the Duc said, "Let your Court send you the character of Minister Plenipotentiary, we will send the same to Mons^r d'Eon." Dated from Paris.

21 July, 1763. Letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to Robert Wood, esq. Containing the following matter.—The Comte de Lauragais, a spark of parts, with some reading but without much judgment or discretion, is sent to the citadel of Metz for a treatise he has published here upon the Arrêt de Parlement relating to Inoculation. Tho' by all accounts, he treats the Parliament very cavalierly, yet it is doubted if he would have met for this alone so hard a fate, had he not likewise been author of Three Letters, one of which, to the Marshal de Noailles, treats the ministers, nay higher personages, with too much freedom. The first account I had of it was from Mons^r de Lauragais's father, the Duc de Brancas, who called upon me the other day, and surprized me by telling me his son intended sending his work to his friend the Earl of Pembroke thro' my channel in which the Duke begged me not only in his name, but in the ministers' likewise, to stop the packet and send it to him. Dated from Paris.

22 July, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Egremont to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Accompanying the new Letters of Credence, investing M^r Neville with the character of Minister Plenipotentiary at the French court, "M^r d'Eon having received from his court a new "Credential Letter giving him the character of Minister "Plenipotentiary at St. James's." Dated from Whitehall.

4 August, 1763. Copy of a letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Earl of Egremont. Announcing the writer's reception by his Most Christian Majesty, on the delivery of his credentials as Minister Plenipotentiary of the King of Great Britain at the French Court. Dated from Whitehall.

8 August, 1763. Letter from the Duc de Praslin to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Accompanying the reply of Mon. de Malesherbes to the demand of Mess^{rs} de Smollet and Churehill for the restoration of their books to them, this letter asks for precise information where the books should be sent to those gentlemen. Dated from Compiègne.

16 August, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Egremont to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Announcing that the Queen of Great Britain has given birth to a prince, which happy event is to be communicated with the usual ceremonies to the most Christian King and Queen, King Stanislaus, the Duke of Orleans, the Prince of Condé, and the Prince of Conti. Dated from Whitehall.

21 August, 1763. Draft of letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Earl of Egremont. Giving particulars of negotiations for the stipulated reduction of the harbour of Dunkirk. Dated from Paris.

23 August, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Halifax to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Announcing the death of the Earl of Egremont from an attack of apoplexy, upon which event the writer has been required "to take care "of such business as shall arise in the Southern Department." Dated from Whitehall.

1 September 1763. Letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Earl of Halifax. Containing special and secret information respecting the already signed "treaty of marriage between the Arch-duke Leopold "and the Infanta;" also about the contemplated marriage between "the Third Arch-Duke with the daughter "of the Hereditary Prince and Princess of Modena; "and the rumour of an approaching marriage between "the Duc de Berry and one of the arch-duchesses." Dated from Paris.

5 September, 1763. Letter from the Duke of Bedford to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Containing the following passage:—"You must have heard that M^r Pitt has "been sent for, and his Friends, the discontented great "Lords have followed him to court, but their demands "were so exorbitant, I may say insolent, that the "King, after having found what ill use they would "have made of his moderation, has determined to do "without them, and I doubt not his conduct will be "approved by the most considerable, and, indeed, all "the considerate part of the nation. Their demands "were not only that the Peace should be disavowed, "but that all in either House of Parliament, who had "voted or appeared in favour of it, should be discarded "the King's service. You may easily imagine that I "and my friends were to be made examples of, and "M^r Pitt did not scruple to tell the king that events "might possibly arise in consequence of the Peace, "which might make it criminal in me for having signed "it, and that I never more should be trusted with an "efficient place in the King's service, but that it might "be hereafter possible to give me a place of honor, "but of no trust. . . . You will be surprised to hear "in France, that I advised the King to send for M^r "Pitt, but it is true, hoping and having some reason to "believe that he would have been moderate, as well "with regard to the Peace as to the persons he would "have expected to have brought in with him." Dated from Woburn Abbey.

6 September, 1763. Letter from John Larpent, jun^r, to Richard Neville Neville, esq., Minister Plenipotentiary of his Britannic Majesty at the Court of France. Touching particulars relative to the present crisis, which the writer has received from conversations with M^r Wood, M^r Weston, and M^r Jenkinson.—Dated from St. James's.

9 September, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Halifax to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Announcing that in consequence of the melancholy death of the Earl of Egremont, the writer has been appointed Secretary of State for the Southern Province, the seals of the Northern Department, previously held by the same writer, having been delivered to the Earl of Sandwich. Dated from St. James's.

11 September, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Rochford to Richard Neville Neville, esq. As he is "very little "acquainted with the Chevalier D'Eon," the writer hopes to be excused for troubling M^r Neville for two passports, one for persons and the other for baggage, for the convenience of the writer on his journey through France to Spain. The passport to be made out for twelve persons, i.e., "Lord and Lady Rochford, two "secretaries, and eight servants." Dated from London.

16 September, 1763. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Halifax to M^r Desmaretz. Accompanying copies of M^r Neville's two letters touching "the great unwillingness "and dislike with which the Court of France receives the "demands of reducing the harbour of Dunkirk to the "state required by their treaties with England." Dated from St. James's.

16 September, 1763. Copy of letter from the Earl of Halifax to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Announcing that M^r Desmaretz has been instructed to insist, in accordance with former orders, on the stipulated reduction of the harbour of Dunkirk. Dated from St. James's.

23 September, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Sandwich to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Touching the constitution of the administration, which is said to have the Duke of Bedford's warm support, and to be "almost "entirely composed" of M^r Neville's "intimate friends." Dated from the Admiralty, London.

30 September, 1763. Letter from the Earl of Halifax to Richard Neville, esq. Insisting on the destruction of the works at Dunkirk, in accordance with stipulations of the Definitive Treaty of Paris. "The only abatement," the English minister writes, "which His Majesty "can make from his just Demand is the leaving the "canal of Furnes undismolished, as a provision for the "salubrity of the air, and the health of the inhabitants of Dunkirk." Dated from St. James's.

4 October, 1763. Draft of a letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Earl of Halifax. Describing the strenuous and cogent terms in which the writer has impressed on the Duc de Praslin that the stipulations of the late treaty must be executed on the part of France as completely as they had already been carried out on the part of England. With respect to the destruction of the harbour of Dunkirk, the Duc de Praslin is reported to have said "that if Dunkirk must be destroyed, "destroyed it should be, but he was convinced England "would be a greater sufferer by it than France itself." Dated from Paris.

9 October, 1763. Draft of a letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Duc de Praslin. For the destruction of works at Dunkirk, so that the object of the British nation in demanding the destruction of the harbour may be fully obtained. Dated from Paris.

24 October 1763. Copy of a letter from Richard Neville Neville, esq., to the Earl of Halifax. Giving the particulars of a conversation the writer has had with the Duc de Choiseul respecting the execution of stipulations of the

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

Definitive Treaty. In respect to matters at Dunkirk the writer says, "The Duc de Choiseul, taking me into a 'corner' in a most crowded room, told me at once, 'Well, the bason is ordered to be destroyed as soon as 'possible.' I asked him about the jettées, 'They shall 'be destroyed too,' says he, and then there will be an end of the port, and as to the canal of Bergues, which 'drains an extent of ten leagues of country, finds 'us but another écoulement, that shall go likewise, 'after which we shall hear no more of Dunkirk.'" Written after the Earl of Hertford's arrival at Paris at his lordship's especial request. This letter is dated from Paris.

— 1763. Packet of official papers (belonging originally to Richard Neville Aldworth Neville, M.P. successively for Tavistock, Wallingford, and Reading, Under Secretary of State, Secretary to the Embassy at Paris in 1763, and afterwards for a short time Minister Plenipotentiary at Paris), labelled "Papers connected with the 'Peace of 1763.'" Containing, with divers unimportant matters,—

(a.) Traduction des Extraits d'une Lettre du Comte d'Egremont au Duc de Bedford.

(b.) Statement of the financial position of France, entitled on the paper-wrapper, "Etat Actuel des Affaires secrètes et générales de Financo du Royaume de France. Contenant Les Revenus, et Depenses générales du Roy, avec des Remarques et partielières et intéressantes.

(c.) Extrait des Registres des Declarations des Maitres de Navires françois du Greffe de l'Amirauté de Dunkerque. Dn 22 Juillet 1763.

(d.) Note of Instructions extracted from the Earl of Egremont's Letter of Jan. 22, 1763.

(e.) Observations sur le Projet de Traité Definitif envoyé par la Cour de Londres; comprising fifty-six several papers of remarks on the articles of the Treaty.

14 March, 1764. Letter from David Hume to Mr Stuart.—Manifold have been the Persecutions, Dear Sir, which the unhappy Jews in several ages have suffered from the misguided zeal of the Christians; but there has at last arisen a Jew capable of avenging his injured nation, and striking terror into their proud oppressors. This formidable Jew is Mons^r de Pinto; and the unhappy Christian, who is chiefly exposed to all the effects of his cruelty, is your humble servant. He says that he has done the most signal services to England, while the Duke of Bedford was ambassador here. I do not question it, but they are unknown to me; he says that he is poor and must have a pension for his reward; I wish he may obtain it, but I cannot assist him. He sends me letters, which I transmit to you; but I cannot oblige you to answer them. He says that Lord Hertford must see justice done him if the Duke of Bedford neglects him; I do not believe that the Duke of Bedford neglects anybody that has done him a service; he grows angry, I exhort him to patience.

This, Dear Sir, is a very abridged account of the Dialogue, which passes every day between Mr Pinto and me; that is, every day, when he can break in upon me and lay hold of me. When he catches Lord Hertford, he is very copious on the same subject; but when he seizes poor Lord Beauchamp, his lordship has good reason to curse the day he was born mild and gentle and made incapable of doing or saying a harsh thing.

But to be serious with regard to this man, I imagine from what he tells me and from a letter of your's which he show'd me, that he had endeavoured to be useful to the Duke of Bedford and you during the negotiations of the Peace. Perhaps he was useful in some particulars; but to what extent you best know, and I am certain that you neither forget nor neglect him, tho' you have not answered his multiply'd letters. I should not think that it at all lay upon me to solicit you in his behalf, or even to write to you about him, had I not been forced by his constant teasing, which I could no otherwise get rid of. If the Duke of Bedford thinks him entitled to no reward, you would do this Family a great service by telling him so at once. If the Duke intends to do him service, he would be very happy to have the encouragement of some hint in his favour. I only beg of you to excuse my meddling at all in this affair, which, I am sensible, does not belong to me, and which I should have avoided, had it not been in a manner extorted from me. I am, Dear Sir, with great truth and sincerity, Your most obedient and most humble servant, David Hume. Dated from Paris.—Hume's hand does not state the name of the person to whom this curious letter was sent; but the epistle (a holograph) is endorsed in another writing, "Paris, 14th March 1764. Mr Hume. R. by 'Mr Stuart.'"

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

8 May, 1764. Letter from John Larpent, jun^r, to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Telling what steps the writer has taken to make a suitable present to M. de la Lire and giving reasons for not writing about the death of Madame Pompadour, which event "has not hitherto produced any change or alteration in the system of the court." In a postscript to this chatty letter it is said, "Lord and Lady Hertford, Lord Beauchamp, and 'Mr Hume desire me to present their compliments to 'you.'" Dated from Paris.

17 July, 1765. Letter from the Duke of Grafton to Richard Neville Neville, esq. Announcing that the king has no further occasion for the service of Mr R. Neville, as Paymaster of Pensions. Dated from Whitehall.

13 August, 1771. Commission, by George duke of St. Albans, Lord Lieutenant of Berkshire, to Richard Aldworth Neville, of Billingbere co Berks, esq., to be a Lieutenant in the Berks Militia.

15 February, 1782. Certificate that Richard Aldworth Neville of Billingbear, co. Berks, was on the aforementioned day admitted to the freedom of the borough of Reading, co. Berks. Signed by H. Deane, Town Clerk.

— 1784. Paper entitled "Observations relative to 'the Griffin Family.'" The endorsement certifies that the same memoir of the family of Griffin, drawn in the form of a petition to the sovereign, was "delivered to 'the King, at the time that I petitioned for the Barony 'of Howard de Walden.'"

8 December, 1786. Certificate (signed by Edward Wise, jun^r, Town-clerk) of the admission of Richard Aldworth Neville, esq., to the office of Chief Steward of the town and corporation of Wokingham, cos. Berks and Wilts.

8 December, 1786. Certificate of the admission of Richard Aldworth Neville, esq., to the freedom of the town and corporation of Wokingham, cos. Berks and Wilts.

14 March 1801. Letter from the Earl of Leicester to Lord Braybrooke. Making inquiries respecting a portrait of Theophilus, 2nd Earl of Suffolk, which is understood to be preserved at Audley End.

— — — Copy of a despatch from Mr Consul White to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Sandwich. Respecting the state of Algiers and the relations between Great Britain and that country.

Together with the writings described in the foregoing catalogues, Lord Braybrooke preserves at Audley End numerous papers illustrative of his genealogy, and many letters of no historical value, but of some slight biographical interest from H.R.H. Prince William Frederick (1819), and the following peers:—Bedford (1750, 1752, and 1754), Barrington and Effingham (1752), Bristol (1756), Argyll (1761), Newcastle (1763), Lyttelton (1765), Cornwallis (1767), Essex (1768), Camden (1792), Amherst (1793), Leicester (1801), Eldon (1804), Castlereagh (1809), Suffolk (1812), Moira (1813), Malmesbury (1820), and Stowell (1821).

II.—PAPERS (AMERICAN AND EAST INDIAN) OF CHARLES, FIRST MARQUIS CORNWALLIS.

Arranged in fifty-nine separate packets, that contain upwards of eight thousand several documents, the papers recently deposited through Lord Braybrooke's munificence at the Public Record Office, for the convenience of students, consist mainly of the writings (official or personal) that grew upon the hands of Charles. First Marquis Cornwallis during his successive periods of service in the American plantations and our East Indian dependencies. Valuable chiefly for their letters from Admiral Arbuthnot, Sir Henry Clinton, K.B., and Lord Rawdon, the American Papers comprise many notable communications to Lord Cornwallis from subordinate actors on either side of the struggle that ended in Great Britain's reluctant consent to the freedom and separate national existence of the insurgent colonies. The searcher of their multifarious ingredients comes also on not a few official notes that may remove uncertainty from the details of important negotiations, and a yet larger number of memoranda which may be serviceable to American biographers, though at the present date they have little political significance or historic interest. The numerous "paroles" and documents touching prisoners and exchanges of prisoners during the American War of Independence are not unlikely to yield dates and other minute pieces of testimony, for which domestic annalists and personal illustrators have hitherto been vainly seeking. As much may be said of a considerable proportion of those of the

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

East Indian Papers which, relating only to the trivial and transitory interests of comparatively obscure and insignificant persons, cannot under any circumstances be rated with the documentary evidences that are objects of peculiar concern to Her Majesty's Commission on Historical Manuscripts. To indicate the worthlessness of much of mere trash and literary refuse to be found in the fifty-nine packets of the unsifted collection, reference may be made to their hundreds of petitions for furlough or preferment by inferior civil or military servants, their numerous letters of complaint respecting petty official grievances by writers of the same professional humility, their applications for leave to contract marriage from persons in "the Company's service," their solicitations for protection and special privileges from commercial adventurers, their sets of proposals and tenders from pushing tradesmen, their epistles protesting against alleged miscarriages of justice by disappointed suitors, their entreaties for money from bankrupt or embarrassed traders, their prayers for enlargement by imprisoned debtors, their whining supplications for further aid by luckless scapegraces and wretched scribes, their appeals for mercy from convicted criminals. But if the collection were relieved of its waste paper there would remain a large assemblage of records claiming the consideration of students, and a still greater proportion of lighter documents for the entertainment of social illustrators and gleaners of biographical trifles. From the numerous transcripts of despatches and orders by the Governor-General the reader gathers little or nothing that cannot be acquired more readily from the three printed volumes of "The Correspondence of Charles, First Marquis Cornwallis," edited by Mr. Charles Ross, and published by Mr. John Murray in 1859. But the student, who would see fully and precisely all the circumstances and influences that determined the judgments and shaped the policy of the great soldier and civil administrator in the conduct of Indian affairs, should pass from the perusal of the published narrative to a careful examination of the despatches and minor notes of secret intelligence that, flowing steadily to him from residents and other political informants, enabled him to watch the intrigues and rivalries of native courts, and guided him in adopting measures to frustrate the dangerous projects of native princes. Cypher being largely used in these letters, the student unprovided with keys to the secret writing is not seldom at a loss as to the purport of a document; but in a large proportion of cases he finds copies at large side by side with the epistles in cypher. In a brief summary little can be done to set forth the manifold contents of so large a mass of correspondence and official memoranda; but to readers in any degree familiar with Anglo-Indian annals at the close of the last and the beginning of the present century, the mere mention of the names of Lord Cornwallis's principal correspondents will afford a general notion of the nature and quality of the most valuable part of the miscellaneous collection of manuscripts. Amongst the productions of those principal contributors to the collection are despatches or brief letters from Mr. Barlow, afterwards Sir George Barlow, Bart., Governor-General of India from the death of Lord Cornwallis in October 1805 to December 1807, and then Governor of Madras till November 1812; James Duncan for thirty-nine years a conspicuous servant of the East India Company, and Governor of Bombay at the time of his death in 1811, of whom Lord Cornwallis wrote to the Right Hon. Henry Dundas, "He is held in the highest estimation by every man," "both European and native in Bengal, and next to Mr. Shore was more capable of assisting me, particularly in revenue matters, than any man in the country"; George Forster, the Oriental scholar and explorer, who travelled overland from Bombay to Europe in the disguise of a native, escaping detection throughout the journey except on the one occasion, when he incautiously removed his turban and exposed a shaven skull, whose formation provoked suspicion and inquiry; the Hon. Lockhart Gordon, Judge-Advocate General; James Grant, Resident at Benares; Edward Hay, for many years secretary to the Supreme Council; Colonel Gabriel Harper, of the Bengal establishment; Edward Otto Ives, Resident at Lucknow; Richard Johnson, M.P. for Milborne Port from June 1791 to February 1794, after his retirement from Indian service; Sir William Jones, the famous Oriental scholar and Judge of the Supreme Court of Bengal; Captain John Kenanway (afterwards styled Sir John Kenanway, Bart.), Resident at Hyderabad, and one of Lord Cornwallis's most confidential agents; Captain William Kirkpatrick, when Resident at Scindiah's camp, William Larkins, Accountant-General under Warren Hastings as well as under Lord Cornwallis; Charles Warre Malet (afterwards styled Sir Charles Warre Malet, Bart.), Resident at Poonah; Robert Percival Pott, Resident at Moorshebad; John Shore, in later times created Sir John Shore, Bart. and Lord Teighmton in Ireland, who for several years sat in the Supreme Council of Bengal, and filled the office of Governor-General from October 1793 to March 1798; and J. Willes, Resident at Furruckabad. Together with letters of courtesy and friendliness from Warren Hastings and other greatly memorable personages, the collection contains also more or less noteworthy communications from — William Burke (Edmund's cousin, the "Honest William" of Goldsmith's "Retaliation") who served as under-secretary to Field-Marshal Conway from 1766 to January 1768, went to Madras in 1777 with despatches for Lord Pigot, returned to England as Agent to the Rajah of Tanore and going out again to India became Paymaster-General; the Right Hon. Henry Dundas; Colonel Floyd of the 8th dragoons, afterwards Sir John Floyd, Bart.; Alexander Macaulay; Colonel Norman Macleod; James Macpherson, M.P. for Camelford from October 1780 till his death, who enjoyed a pension of 700*l.* a year from Lord North, for writing in defence of American taxation; Lieutenant-Colonel Nightingall (in later time Lieutenant-General Sir Miles Nightingall, K.C.B.); Benjamin Roebuck, whose intemperate action against Governor Sir George Barlow resulted in his removal to a station on the coast where he died, after rendering the Government effective service in unravelling the Madras frauds; Peter Speke, described by Lord Cornwallis as "in private character a worthy and honest man, but very weak and open to the solicitations of individuals to support their most ruinous jobs, and totally unacquainted with all business of this country except silk-making"; and Pellegrine Treves, husband of Sir R. Sloper's natural daughter Kitty Stokes, and son of Treves the notorious London money lender, who, in answer to a question from the Prince of Wales, defined "a gentleman" as a man with a guinea in each of his pockets, who did not care a rush for either the Prince or his father.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

(1) 1741-1779. Packet, No. 1, (of Miscellaneous Papers); comprising some private letters, as well as official documents touching affairs in the American plantations in the years 1778 and 1779. The earliest letter of the packet (dated 26 December 1741 from John Cornwallis to Lord Cornwallis at Culford Hall in Suffolk) makes mention of "an ugly disagreement," between Lord Cholmondeley and the Duke of Newcastle; the writer touching on the balance of political parties, and saying by the way, "I dined yesterday with Horace when we were observing how well Sir Robert went through all this. Says Horace, 'a good heart and a good conscience will get the better of everything.' So, you see, we have the conscience on our side at least." Another curiosity of the parcel is the Lord Chancellor's summons (dated House of Lords, 30 June 1746) to Lord Cornwallis to attend at the trials of the Lords Kilmarnock, Cromartie, and Balmerino. The bundle contains also in a book of 48 closely written pages the copy of an official report (made May 1778), entitled "Description de la riviere de Susquehanna, et du pays qui la borde depuis Harris's Ferry jusqu'à l'embouchure," also in a book of 176 folio pages of clerly penmanship, a memoir entitled, "A Succinct Narrative of Najaf Khan to the present time, written in the year 1779."

(2) January, to July 1780.—Packet, No. 2, (of American Papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Admiral Arbuthnot, Lieut.-Col. Balfour, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Brown, Lieut.-Col. Alured Clark, Sir H. Clinton, Major Patrick Ferguson, Major Colin Graham, James Houston, Lieut.-Col. Innes, Baron de Kalb, Major McArthur, Governor Martin, General Moultrie, General Paterson, Lord Rawdon, James Robertson, General Robertson, Mr. Secretary Robinson, Lord Shelburne, James Simpson, Governor Tonnyn, Lt.-Col. George Turnbull, Major Wemy, Major James Wright, Governor Wright.

(3.) August to November 1780.—Packet, No. 3, (of American Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Captain Bain, Lt.-Col. Balfour, Thomas Boone, General John Campbell, Lieut.-Col. Alured Clark, Sir Henry Clinton K.B., Lt.-Col. Cruger, Major England, Major Patrick Ferguson, Colonel Mathew Floyd, Colonel

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

Robert Gray, Major Zach. Gibbs, Lieut.-Col. Hamilton, Lieut.-Colonel Alexander Gibbs, A. Knecht, Lieut.-Gen. Knyphausen, Major McArthur, Captain de Peyster, Lt.-Col. George Turnbull, General Washington (copies), Major Wemyss. Also, the address of inhabitants of Georgetown to Major Wemyss, with thirty-three signatures; the Commission of Earl Cornwallis to Lieut.-Col. James Carey to raise militia; and numerous letters (originals and copies) from Lord Rawdon to various officers of His Majesty's forces.

(4.) November and December 1780.—Packet, No. 4, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Lieut.-Colonels Allen, Balfour, Benson, and Thomas Brown, Governor Brûre, Major-Gen. Campbell, Lt.-Col. Alured Clarke, Sir H. Clinton, K.B., Capt. Coffin, Lieut.-Col. Cruger, J. Cruden, Brig.-Gen. Cunningham, Wellbore Ellis Doyle, Capt. Dunlop, Major Ewing, Major-Gen. Gates, Colonel Gray, Bernard Hale, Dr. Macnamara Hayes, Lieut. Henry Haldane, Governor Hatfield, Lt.-Col. Moses Kirkland, A. Knecht, Major-Gen. Leslie, Gen. MacArthur, Col. Mills, William Mure, the Bishop of Norwich, Capt. de Peyster, Major-Gen. Phillips, Lord Rawdon, Baron Reidesel, Capt. Rooback, Lt.-Col. Rugeley, Major Small, W. Smallwood, Lieut. Start, Lt.-Col. Tarleton, Major Tate, Lt.-Col. George Turnbull.

(5.) January to April 1781.—Packet, No. 5, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Lieut.-Colonel Balfour, Captain Barkley, Lieut.-Col. Alured Clarke, Sir H. Clinton K.B., Major Craig, Lieut.-Col. John Connolly, Major Simon Fraser, Captain Inglis, Lieut.-Col. Lovelace, Major-General Phillips, J. Simpson, Governor Tonnyn, Commissary Townshend, Major Wemyss, and Governor Wright; and several letters (originals and copies) from Lord Rawdon to officers of His Majesty's Forces.—Also to be found in the same lot of documents, (a.) Copies of despatches from Earl Cornwallis to Lord George Germain; (b.) A list of North Carolina Militia Paroles; (c.) Paper, headed "Substance of a Plan concisely stated and humbly offered to His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton by Hector MacAlester for subjecting the colony of Virginia to His Majesty's Government."

(6.) May to December 1781.—Packet, No. 6, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Capt. Jeffery Amherst, Captain Aplin, Brigadier-General Arnold, Admiral Arbuthnot, Lt.-Col. Balfour, Lt.-Governor Brûre, Lt.-Col. Alured Clarke, Sir H. Clinton, K.B., Major Craig, Lt.-Col. Cruger, Major England, Lieut. Ford, Lieut.-Col. de Fuent, Colonel Gould, Brig.-General Hamilton, Capt. Charles Hudson, Major-General Leslie, Lieut. Nutt, Lieut.-Col. Odell, Lieut. Patteson, R.N., Lord Rawdon, Lieut. Robertson, R.N., Capt. Rochford, Lieut.-Col. Stewart, Governor Tonnyn, Daniel Weir.—Also, copies of letters from the Marquis de la Fayette to Washington, from Washington to De la Fayette and Samuel Huntington, and from Thomas Jefferson to Capt. Gerlach.

(7.) 1782-85.—Packet, No. 7, (of miscellaneous papers, American and East Indian); comprising with other matters—(a.) Letter-book of "copies of letters from Earl Cornwallis, Lord Rawdon, and others, likewise of Memorial Letters, &c., &c., respecting the business of the sequestered property, as well real as personal." (b.) An address (on 24 closely written folio sheets) to the sons of Abraham, containing thoughts on the prophecy respecting the Restoration of the Jews. By a British-American Royalist. (c.) A comparative view (on 28 closely written folio sheets) of the Roman and British Empires; dedicated to the Rt.-Hon. Charles Earl Cornwallis, by a British-American Royalist. (d.) Letter from Warren Hastings to Mr. Macpherson, dated 6 Feb. 1785, on board the Berrington. (e.) Letter from Lord Macartney, K.B., to the Committee of Secrecy, dated 27 July 1785, from Calcutta. (f.) Considerable quantity of the official correspondence of Mr. Robert Percival Pott, resident at Moorsheadabad. (g.) Memoir (on 82 closely written folio pages) dated Calcutta 20 September 1785, and entitled, "Some observations on the English Possessions in India, their government, population, cultivation, produce and commerce."

(8.) January to July 1786.—Packet, No. 8; comprising letters of some, though trivial interest, to Lord Cornwallis from Sir George Colebrooke, W. Conyngham, A. Dalrymple, Duke of Gordon, Warren Hastings; but made up chiefly of the official correspondence of Mr. Robert Percival Pott, letters from the War Office, and printed forms of covenants and bonds used in the establishments of the East India Company.

(9.) August and September 1786.—Packet, No. 9, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from J. Addison, Lieut. James Anderson, W. Armstrong, Lieut. H. L. Berkeley, Rev. Thomas Blanchard, J. P. Burlton, Sir Archibald Campbell, Lieut. Cosby, F. H. Davies, Colonel Floyd, James Grant, (Resident at Benares), Colonel Gabriel Harpur, Samuel Kyle, Samuel Johnstone, Sir John Macpherson, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Captain Monson, Captain Ogilvie, R. J. Perrean, William Playdell, Robert Percival Pott, William Prescott, Lieut. Robinson, Lt.-Gen. Sloper, George Smith, Robert Orme Smith, William Wroughton, Sir George Yonge, (War Office).

(10.) October 1786.—Packet, No. 10, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from James Anderson (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), B. Burlton, Sir Archibald Campbell, Thomas Calvert, Sir Robert Chambers, Lieut. W. Craggs, Sir John Dalling, George Forster, A. L. Gilbert, Frank Gladwin, Charles Grant, Hon. Lockhart Gordon, James Grant (Resident at Benares), W. Hewett, Richard Johnstone, Lt.-Col. Gabriel Harper, J. J. Keighley, A. Lambert, Thomas Legh, F. de Luc, Lieut. C. Macaulay, C. Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Sir John Macpherson, Col. Norman Macleod, Bernard MacMahon, Captain Monson, John Peach, William Playdell, General Sloper, George Webster, J. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), W. Wodsworth, Allen Edward Young.

(11.) November 1786.—Packet, No. 11, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis, from Colonel Ahmuty, Lieut. James Anderson, Rev. F. Blanchard, B. Bryce, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Call, Lieut. J. Chevalier, James Christie, Capt. H. Churchill, E. Fenwick, George Forster, Robert Gosling, Capt. Gowan, James Grant (Resident at Benares), Major John Gratton, Lieut. Griffin, Lt.-Col. Gabriel Harper, E. Hay, Richard Johnson, Lieut. Isaac Humphrey, Capt. John Kennaway, Col. Knudson, Ensign W. E. Leadbeater, Hon. Robert Lindsay, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Captain Monson, Lieut. J. W. Rind, General Sloper, George Smith, Michael Topping, Adam Turnbull, W. Willis (Resident at Furruckabad).

(12.) December 1786.—Packet, No. 12, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Lieutenant Ahmuty, Henry Abbott, Lieut. James Anderson, George Allen, L'Abbe de la Baume, J. S. Booth, Robert Burns, Lt.-Col. Call, Captain H. Churchill, H. Colebrooke, George Drake, George Forster, F. Gladwin, Lockhart Gordon, B. Gomes, James Grant (Resident at Benares), John Haldane, Colonel Gabriel Harper, F. H. Herman, Richard Johnson, C. Keating, J. Kennedy, Capt. John Kennaway, Capt. William Kirkpatrick, John Macpherson, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Rev. D. Mackinnon, Hon. Capt. Monson, William Pye, Adam Turnbull, W. Wodsworth.

(13.) January 1787.—Packet, No. 13, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Earl Cornwallis from Robert Adair, E. Addison, Lieut. James Anderson, Capt. Anstruther, Sir Joseph Banks, Nathaniel Bateman, R. Bathurst, Sir Archibald Campbell, K.B., Jeremiah Church, W. Farquharson, Lieut. Fleming, George Forster, Captain Richard French, Y. Gardner, St. Leger Gillman, James Grant (Resident at Benares), Colonel Gabriel Harper, Patrick Heatley, Captain Kennaway, Captain William Kirkpatrick (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), Rev. William Lewis, Hon. Robert Lindsay, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), S. H. Macdowell (Collector at Bangalore), John Macpherson, Mr. Manson, Mr. Thomas Parkinson, John Peach, R. S. Plowden, John Sumner, Peter Speke, General Sloper, John Stables, Hon. Charles Stuart, James Uthoff, Captain Thomas Welsb, Colonel White, J. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), Captain Worship, Sir George Yonge (War Office).—The more noteworthy writings of the packet being, (1.) The letter by Jeremiah Church on the scandals attending domestic slavery in Calcutta; (2.) The letter by Sir Joseph Banks to Sir George Yonge, respecting a project for establishing a correspondence between the Botanical Garden at Calcutta and His Majesty's Botanical Garden at St. Vincent, with an appended catalogue of the various plants in the last named garden; (3.) The letter (24 closely written folio pages), by J. Willes, being a memoir of the government of Furruckabad "from the first establishment of the Government of the Patans of this district till the present time."

(14.) February 1787.—Packet, No. 14, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Earl Cornwallis from Colonel Blair (Colonel of the First Brigade at Cawnpore), Sir Archibald Campbell, Lady Campbell, Monsr.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

Dayot, G. Gardner, James Grant (Resident at Benares), Henry Haldane, Captain John Hamilton, Colonel Gabriel Harper, Captain Higgins, Richard Johnstone, Captain William Kirkpatrick (Resident at Scindiah's camp), Captain Knudson, Alexander Macleod (Resident at Tanjore), John Macpherson, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), John Moffat, John Peach, Robert Percival Pott (Resident at Moorsheadabad), Captain Roddam, Captain Sloper, John Sloper, John Stables, J. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), M. A. Williams, Sir George Yonge (War Office).—By far the most noteworthy document of this packet being a long and carefully elaborated letter (of forty closely written folio pages) from Captain William Kirkpatrick, Resident at Scindiah's camp, wherein the writer sets forth (to Lord Cornwallis) his several grounds for thinking Scindiah animated by hostility to English interests, and a settled purpose of "lowering our Government in the estimation of his neighbours." In conclusion, Captain Kirkpatrick recommends the discontinuance of the Resident at Scindiah; his presence there under existing circumstances being hurtful to the prestige of the East India Company and its government, whilst his permanent withdrawal would be prejudicial to Scindiah.

(15.) March 1787.—Packet, No. 15, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Earl Cornwallis from Lieutenant D. Anstruther, Lieutenant Anchmuty, J. I. Auriol, Colonel Blair, William Berrie, Hamilton Bird, Lieut.-Colonel Call, Major Cairnes, Lieutenant William Craggs, Alexander Davidson, Colonel Geo. B. Eyres, W. H. Faulknor, James Ferguson, George Forster, Joseph Fowke, R. Gale, James Grant (Resident at Benares), Colonel Gabriel Harper, Henry Edgar Jeffreys, Richard Johnson, Captain William Kirkpatrick (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), D. R. Leckie, Alexander Macanlay, L. H. Macdowell, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), James Meyrick, Robert Percival Pott (Resident at Moorsheadabad), William Pye, Henry Pyne, Captain Granby Sloper, Archibald Seton, Robert Orme Smith, J. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), J. Wilton, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(16.) April and May 1787.—Packet, No. 16 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from C. Benezet, W. Bruere, Sir Archibald Campbell, T. H. Davies, Alexander Davidson, W. H. Faulknor, George Forster, Capt. G. Gowan, Hon. Lockhart Gordon, James Grant (Resident at Benares), Lieut. R. B. Gregory, Thomas Henchman, Lieut. Thomas Hickman, Rev. William Johnson, Fryer Hadfield, Capt. W. Kirkpatrick, William Larkins, Robert Lindsay, C. Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Captain Monson, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, Col. Gabriel Parker, Captain Granby Sloper, H. Sturt, W. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), Colonel J. Yorke.

(17.) June 1787.—Packet, No. 17, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from G. H. Barlow, J. S. Booth, W. Bruere, Sir Archibald Campbell, Allen Cooper, Lieut. W. Craggs, Hiram Cox, William Dawson, Lieut.-Col. John Elphinstone, George Forster, Lockhart Gordon, Frank Gladwin, Lt. R. B. Gregory, G. Grand, Colonel Gabriel Harper (Resident at Lucnow), B. Hartley, W. Hewett, Robert Ireland, J. F. Keighley, Capt. W. Kirkpatrick, Sir John Macpherson, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Robert Peck, R. Percival Pott, G. Ritso, Robert Orme Smith, John Vernon, Colonel White, Samuel Young.

(18.) July and August, 1787.—Packet, No. 18, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from J. L. Auriol, Lieut. Henry Lionel Berkeley, William Berrie, Owen Bowen, Maria Duffield, Sir Archibald Campbell, J. Casement, Edward Curfey, George Forster, Frank Gladwin, Lockhart Gordon, Charles Grant, Colonel Gabriel Harper (Resident at Lucnow), Mr. Secretary E. Hay, Richard Kennaway, Capt. W. Kirkpatrick, Colonel Kyd, J. Lumsden, Thomas Lyon, Alexander Macanlay, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), D. Negus, Colonel Roddam, Colonel P. Ross, J. Shore, Hon. Charles Stuart, P. Treves (Acting Resident at Benares), Major C. H. White, J. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), Lieut. H. Williamson, W. Wodsworth.

(19.) September 1787.—Packet, No. 19, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from John L. Auriol, Frank Balfour, John Bebb, Charles Boddam, W. A. Brooke, Thomas Calvert, T. H. Davies, George Forster, John Gilchrist, Frank Gladwin, Charles Grant, James Grant, Col. Gabriel Harper, Mr. Secretary E. Hay, Ensign W. Hopper, Andrew Hunter, Captain W. Kirkpatrick, Colonel Kyd, W. Parkins, John Lloyd, Thomas Lyons, Alexander Macaulay, Captain Macleod, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Lt.-Col. Peter Murray, Major Palmer, Thomas Philpot, J. Shore, Hon. Charles Stuart, J. Willes (Resident at Furruckabad), J. Wilton.

(20.) October 1787.—Packet, No. 20 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Claude Benezet, Captain Thomas Blair, Thomas Calvert, Sir Archibald Campbell, Captain James King Combe, Lieut. Crockett, John Duncan (Resident at Benares), Lockhart Gordon, Charles Grant, John Hall, Colonel Gabriel Harper, Robert Ireland, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Frank Johnson, Lieut.-Col. Kyd, Lieutenant Loy, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Laurence Mercer, A. Molony, F. Mure, J. Neave (Assistant at Benares), William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), Samuel Skardon, Hon. Charles Stuart, L. M. Taylor, Col. White, J. Wombwell, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(21.) November and December 1787.—Packet, No. 21, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from William Armstrong, Lieut. William Atkinson, Samuel Bean, John Bebb, Major Cairnes, Lt.-Col. Thomas Call, Sir Archibald Campbell, Lieut. W. Craggs, Thomas Featherstone, George Forster, R. Gale, Capt. John Garstin, Hon. Lockhart Gordon, Charles Grant, Nicholas Grueber, J. E. Harrington, Major Hay, Mr. Secretary E. Hay, William Orby Hunter, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), William Johnson, Edward Ewer Jones, Benjamin Joy, Colonel Knudson, Captain Thomas Kearnan, C. Keating, Lieutenant Kelly, Thomas Law, Robert Lindsay, Lieutenant R. Llewellyn, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Monsieur Montmerli, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), Robert Peck, Robert Percival Pott, Richard Pye, Capt. Joseph Ronan, Granby Sloper, Peter Speke, Hon. Charles Stuart, Mrs. M. Watson, Lieut. Edmund Wells, James Wordsworth.

(22.) January and February 1788.—Packet, No. 22, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from William Armstrong, Claude Benezet, J. S. Booth, Cosby Burrowes, H. Brooke, W. Camac, Sir Archibald Campbell, J. Demaria, Le Chr. Debraux, John Duncan (Resident at Benares), Ensign William Duncanson, Jno. Durand, Captain Thomas Forrest, George Forster, Lt.-Col. Fullarton, J. P. Gardiner, Colonel Gabriel Harper, J. E. Harrington, Robert Ireland, Dr. Ralph Irving, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's court), Robert Jarrett, J. J. Keighley, John Kirkpatrick, Colonel Knudson, John Laird, Hon. Robt. Lindsay, John Lloyd, Thomas Lyon, Francis Magnus, Lieut. John Maccolme, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Thomas Marriott, Edward Maxwell, Hon. Capt. Monson, Mustepha, J. Neave (Assistant at Benares), William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), J. Percival Pott, Governor Andrew Ramsay, E. F. Stanhope, George Tyler, William Watts, Lieut. Edmund Wells, George Williamson, William Whitla, W. Wodsworth, Capt. G. Wood.

(23.) March and April 1788.—Packet, No. 23, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from William Armstrong, Col. Amherst, Claude Benezet, John Bebb, W. A. Brook, Capt. John Buchanan, Reuben Burrow, Sir Archibald Campbell, Niel Campbell, Stephen Cassan, Jeremiah Church, John Champain, Le Chr. Debraux, George Forster, Richard Fruch, Ensign William Graham, James Grant, J. Grattan, Lieut.-Col. Hartley, Warren Hastings, A. Heselrige, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's court), Lieut.-Col. G. Johnstone, J. Hutchinson, R. D. Leckie, Col. Knudson, Captain A. Kyd, Robert Ledlie, John Lloyd, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), H. Macdowell, E. C. Meyer, Laurence Mercer, Captain Pitts Middleton, J. Neave (Head Assistant at Benares), John Pagan, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindiah), R. Plowden, Rot. Percival Pott, Henry Pyne, Lieut. John Read, Lieut. J. N. Rind, John O'Reilly, Peter Speke, John Stonhouse, Lord Sydney, Lieut. Samuel Turner, Robert Walpole (dated from Lisbon, introducing Mr. Willoughby Hair), Colonel White, J. Willes, Alexander Wright. Amongst the private letters of this packet are two characteristic notes by Warren Hastings, introducing Mr. Julius Imhoff and Mr. Peter Touchet to Lord Cornwallis; and a letter from Lord Cornwallis's Suffolk steward, Mr. John Hutchinson of Brome, which gives the governor-general a large amount of local gossip, that would at the present date afford entertainment to readers specially interested in a particular district of that county. Of Mr. Julius Imhoff, Warren Hastings says, "He is very nearly related to me, and I have his interest very much at heart; and from what I yet know of his

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

"disposition I am persuaded he will not discredit either my regard for him, or any notice that your Lordship may be pleased to show him."

(24.) May and June 1788.—Packet, No. 24. (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from K. Amherst, J. S. Booth, Capt. Sam. Bradshaw, John Bristow, W. A. Brooke, M. Bruere, Lord Bulkeley, Lt.-Col. Call, Sir Archibald Campbell, Lieut. John Cunningham, Samuel Daniel, John Duncan (Resident at Benares), Richard Ercey, Lt.-Col. John Forbes, George Forster, R. Gale, G. Grand, John Hall, William Orby Hunter, John Innes, Robert Ireland, Ralph Irving, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Capt. John Kennaway, Capt. Wm. Kirkpatrick, Capt. Kyd, H. M. Macdowall, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), F. Mure, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Sindia), Ensign Edward Parry, B. Pile, Governor Andrew Ramsay, Capt. William Ratnay, A. Tufton, W. G. Walter, Colonel White, J. Wilton, W. Wodsworth, James Wordsworth, Ensign Robert Wynn.

(25.) July and August 1788.—Packet, No. 25. (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Robert Adair, J. Addison, Capt. Matthew Alexander, Lieut. W. Baker, Claude Benezet, R. Birch, Edward Brooke, Sir Archibald Campbell, Capt. John Cudmore, D. Cumming, Samuel Daniel, Le Chr. Debraux, J. F. Deluc, John Duncan (Resident at Benares), George Forster, Assistant-General John Grattan, Lieut. Greene, Robert Holme, Lieut. John Hughes, Edward Otto Ives (Resident with the Vizier's court), Edgar Jeffries, Capt. John Kennaway, Thomas William Kerr, Matthew Leslie, H. Lodge, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), James Meyrick, Hon. Capt. Monson, Lt.-Col. John Mordaunt, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Sindia), Lieut. John Robertson, Claud Russel, Ensign Peter Touchet, Lieut. Charles White, Colonel White, W. Wodsworth.

(26.) September and October 1788.—Packet, No. 26. (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters from J. Addison, W. A. Brook, Claude Benezet, Henry Bowen, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Call, Sir Archibald Campbell, J. Champion, Lt.-Col. John Cockerell, Valentine Connelly, Hiram Cox, John Crisp, David Cuming, Capt. John Cudmore, B. Cunningham, Le Chr. Debraux, Joseph Harrison Dixon, W. Driver, Jno. Duncan (Resident at Benares), Lieut. D. Falvey, E. Fenwick, Colonel Fullarton, George Forster, H. P. Forster, Robert Gairdner, Lieut. James Gray, John Hall, R. Hamilton, Ralph Harding, J. E. Harrington, George Hart, J. Higgins, Charles Hill, Captain W. Hunter, Vere Warner Hussey, William Hyndman, Edward Otto Ives (Resident with the Vizier's court), Henry Edgar Jeffries, Mrs. R. Johnson, Captain John Kennaway, Captain W. Kirkpatrick, Benjamin Lacam, D. R. Leckie, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Lieut. J. Marley, Laurence Mercer, Colonel John Mordaunt, John Mullens, Edward Pytts Middleton, Rev. John Owen, William Palmer (Resident with Scindia), John Peach, Robert Percival Pott, Jacob Rider, James Robertson, Claud Russel, Lieut. Jonathan Scott, A. Seton, Joseph Shelburne, Robert Sloper, Peter Touchet, J. Unthoff (Assistant at Poona), Colonel White, James Wordsworth, Benjamin Whitehead, Lieutenant Charles Wyatt.

(27.) November and December 1788.—Packet, No. 27. (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from J. Addison, William Armstrong, Lieut. Frederick Maitland Arnott, J. S. Booth, Lady Burgoyne, Sir Archibald Campbell, Lieutenant Cracroft, John Crofton, James Dickson, Jno. Duncan (Resident at Benares), William Foster, George Forster, Joseph Fowke, Lewis Grand, Lieutenant Greene, William Gudgeon, P. Heatley, A. W. Hearsey, John Herbert, Robert Holmes, Captain R. Humphreys, James Hunter, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's court), P. Ivory, J. J. Keighley, Capt. John Kennaway (Resident at Hydrabad), Colonel Kyd, Captain William Kirkpatrick, Benjamin Lacam, James Lynd, Thomas Lyons, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), H. Lodge, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Sindia), Robert Percival Pott, Richard Pye, Lieutenant B. Rock, Lieut.-Colonel Charles Ware, Andrew Weddell, Benjamin Whitehead, William Whitla, Thomas West, W. Wodsworth, Lieut.-Colonel Mark Wood. Containing also the following curious letter from Mustepha:—

Calcutta, this 19th December 1788.

Milord,—The bearer hereof shall have the honour to expose to your view, and I hope to introduce to your favourable acceptance a singular portfolio, the history whereof is as follows. So early as the year 1773, I had dedicated the sum of five thousand rupees out of the seven I was then worth towards giving some tokens of gratitude to several persons that had highly obliged me, but especially to Mr. John Graham, Samuel Middleton, and Governor Hastings, who by putting me that year in office introduced me to a small competency. These consisted of six couples of portfolios which I bespoke at Constantinople, my native city, where they excel in gold wire embroideries upon morocco. Three of these were destined for the governor with his name, the date and his coat of arms, which were engraved thereon with a motto of my contrivance "Famam acquirit eundo," and at bottom in a corner the initials of the words, "Dono Dedit Mustepha." All these arrived in Bengal probably in 1776, where the governor then, for reasons which I dare guess, thought proper to intercept them with my letters, and to withdraw from public sight so singular and so glittering a present; and for reasons which no man can vindicate kept them, they say, in his house, concealed for full ten years, although such a mark of gratitude could only do honour to both parties. At his departure, on his things being tumbled over, the box which contained those curiosities came to sight, and engaged several gentlemen of his family to take possession of them, as fair booty probably; when by one of the greatest of chances I came to hear of these being at Mr. Thomson's, attorney to the governor. On being claimed forthwith yesterday, and minutely described (although I had never seen them) they were immediately restored. There were four more in two different hands, but by all means in stranger's hands, being not so much as acquainted with the present possessors. Two of those recovered shall be sent to Mr. Barwell whose name they bear, and a third, destined to Samuel Middleton, esqre., deceased, shall be forwarded to his friend Governor Hastings. There remains one for which, milord, I supplicate your Lordship's acceptance, as it can be of no use to me, and of course it must be bestowed to some stranger. The offering which I take the liberty to make is, milord, far from being interested. In three days hence your Lordship shall hear jointly of my having dedicated to the relief of British insolvent debtors the benefits of an History of India, that has cost me much money and much bodily labour; and if I have been thereby endeavouring to show some tokens of gratitude to the British nation in general by coming to the assistance of its distressed members, shall it be thought strange or designing that, out of the same principle, I should have offered a token of respect and gratitude to a general who, by constantly being victorious against all the odds of numbers and means, has irrefragably demonstrated that, had all the British generals been endowed with as much activity and conduct as himself (for they all had courage in abundance), the subjection of those mighty Americans would have been long ago secured and riveted to the British empire. Accept, milord, from a foreigner naturalized, this mark of admiration. It is thoroughly disinterested, for I request neither office nor employ, nor favor, nor anything at all, unless it be common justice, I am, &c. &c., your Lordship's obliged humble servant, MUSTEPIA.—To Lord Charles Cornwallis, K.G., heretofore Commander of the British Forces in the Revolted Southern Colonies of America.

Particular attention may also be invited to some ten or twelve documents (contained in this packet) touching the conflict between Lieutenant Frederick Maitland Arnott and Mr. Edward Otto Ives, the Resident with the Vizier, which had its origin in a question of title to a bungalow and adjacent land in the vicinity of Lucnow, and in Lieutenant Arnott's difficulties in resisting the claim made to the same property by the Nawab Vizier himself, on the ground that the estate had only been lent to Colonel Mordaunt, the late occupier, who was incompetent to convey the land to the Lieutenant. Irritated by the prospect of losing an estate for which he had paid a large sum of money, and yet further incensed by a suspicion that Mr. Ives, instead of protecting him with proper firmness from spoliation, was secretly encouraging the vizier to assert his spurious title, in order that Mrs. Ives might have the place as a country residence, Lieutenant Arnott wrote to the Governor-General, preferring against Mr. and Mrs. Ives the charges of corruption and irregularity in accepting gifts, to which they replied in terms that afford a notable view of the extent to which the practice of presents prevailed in Anglo-Indian official circles in the times of Hastings and Cornwallis, and the limits within which the custom was deemed harmless and permissible. "Though bound by no oath," writes Mr. Otto Ives to Lord Cornwallis, under date 20 December 1788, "nor even a declaration, I entered on my appointment with the full determination of accepting no pecuniary

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

"emolument from his Excellency or his ministers, which resolution I scruple not to say I have intirely abided by, for I trust your Lordship cannot look upon the following circumstances as exceptions:—
"The state, necessary to be observed by the Resident in visiting the Nabob and the like, requiring two or three elephants and some camels for his sojourn, which I could by no means afford to keep, I have allowed those that I found on my arrival attached to the office, to be retained, and his Excellency to defray the charges of keeping them as heretofore.

"The repairs of his Excellency's house, which is appropriated to the Resident, are of course defrayed by him, and the franchises, mollics, &c. required for the use of the house and garden, belong to him.

"His Excellency on my entering my office sent me in the usual manner an honorary palankeen, which I found I could not send back without giving offence, and, therefore, though I could not receive it as a gift, I accepted the use of it, and allowed his bearers and mousaulchies to remain attached to it.

"An Hindostanny dinner, also, was sent me daily from his Excellency's kitchen, as it was to your Lordship while you were here, but as dinners of this kind are very ill drest, it was never put upon the table; and after a few months, hearing that the Nabob was charged ten rupees for it per diem, I requested the minister would discontinue so needless an expense. To this he objected as a thing that would hurt the Nabob's feelings, but proposed that the money should be paid to me to provide a dinner more to my liking. I refused this, and it was compromised by his appointing a man, who had been dismissed from my service and was just then setting off on his return to Moorsheadabad, to the charge of a separate Hindostanny cook-room, where there are prepared a few dishes which, though dressed more cleanly than they used to be, and therefore brought to table are seldom touched.

"The above are matters which Mr. Arnott has not alluded to, but which, now I am writing on the subject, I could not with satisfaction to myself be silent on. I now come to those which he has alluded to.

"It had been so long the custom at this court for presents to be received at entertainments, that after your Lordship's departure, I was teased to an excessive degree to accept them. I persisted, however, firmly in refusing everything on my own account. I had then the same attack to undergo in respect to the ladies of my family, and at length, importuned to a degree that I knew not how to answer without giving real offence, and fearing (I confess my weakness, if it be one) that the ladies themselves might think I was carrying the matter too far in altogether denying them such trifles, I consented that they should receive the muslins, shawls, and the like, provided they did not keep any of the jewels (of which a string of pearls was at that time before Mrs. Ives, worth near ten thousand rupees), and this rule has been observed at two or three subsequent entertainments.

"And here give me leave to lay before your Lordship my sentiments on this subject. I had two motives to refuse presents, one the dread of incurring the penalty of the law, and the other my own sense of honour united with the fear of your Lordship's displeasure.

"My sense of honour would have been wounded, and your Lordship's displeasure I conceived would have been justly added to the penalties of the law, had I, by taking presents, or by any other means, laid myself under such obligations as might destroy my free agency. But for muslins, shawls, and such trifles presented to my wife openly and before the world, which I never wished to conceal, nor was ashamed of, I conceived I laid myself open to the penalties of the law only, if any person should think it worth his while to sue for them, and that your Lordship, were you to know it, might think me imprudent but not criminal.

"With respect to the horses, the fact is this: we were in great distress on our arrival. The weak state of Mrs. Ives's health required exercise with quiet horses. We spent many months in searching for them without effect, and at last, Hyder Beg Khann persuaded her to accept of the use of some, which he had chosen of the same colour from his troop, and these we caused to be broken in for the carriage. I say accepted the use of them, because that was the footing he put it upon, though I do suppose in my heart that he never expected them back again. She had also a riding horse or two from the Nabob and Hyder Beg."

Her husband's asseverations on these matters are supported by Mrs. (Arabella) Ives with an affidavit, ending with these words, "and I further swear that I

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

"never have, to the best of my recollection and belief, received anything directly nor indirectly from the Nabob Vizier, or his minister, except horses, catables, shawls, muslins, and other cloaths or materials for cloaths; that all kinds of jewels, which have been offered with them have been rejected, and not taken by me, or any one for me, and that I refused a valuable diamond ring offered by the Nabob, and other valuable jewels sent me secretly by Hyder Beg Khann with a desire that I would accept them without the knowledge of my husband."

(28). January and February 1789.—Packet, No. 28, (of East Indian papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from K. Amherst, Robert Anderson, Stephen Bayard, Rev. J. Blanshard, Colonel H. Briscoe, Thomas Brooke, Sir Archibald Campbell, C. Coote, Nathaniel Collyer, Thomas Crichton, Jonathan Duncan (Resident at Benares), Capt. R. Duncanson, W. Dunkin, Colonel George Eyres, G. R. Foley, George Forster, Colonel J. Floyd, W. Farquharson, Richard Grant, John Hill, Colonel Gabriel Harper, Colonel Ireland, Edward Otto Ives (Resident with the Vizier's court), Capt. John Kennaway, Benjamin Lacom, R. D. Leckie, Capt. Francis Light, Jonathan Lloyd, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), G. Matthews, G. Meyer, James Meyrick, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, William Pawson, Samuel Peat, Richard Pye, Major James Smith, R. O. Smith, Lt.-Col. R. Smart, Andrew Thompson, Thos. Turner, Colonel White, Jno. Williams, Capt. Andrew Wight, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(29). March and April 1789.—Packet, No. 29, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from J. Addison, Lt.-Col. James Balfour, Lieut. H. L. Berkeley, J. L. Booth, Captain J. Brohier, W. A. Brooke, Major Robt. Davies, James Donnelly, Major Alexander Dow, J. Driver, Lieut. W. M. Duncanson, Colonel George Eyres, E. Fenwick, Colonel J. Floyd, George Forster, Robert Gregory, Warren Hastings (introducing Mr. Charles Chapman, with unusually strong commendations), Brigadier-General Mathew Horne, Robert Ireland, Edward Otto Ives (Resident with the Vizier's court), Capt. John Kennaway, Thomas Law, H. Macdowall, Major R. Mackenzie, Col. Norman Macleod, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), B. Mason, Laurence Mercer, James Meyrick, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, Capt. James Pringle, Alexander Read, Lieutenant J. N. Rind, R. Roche, Anthony Sadleir, Peter Speke, Lt.-Col. Stirling, Colonel J. Stuart, Peter Touchet, James Frashard, Col. White, J. Wilton, Lt.-Col. Wood, James Wordsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office), Samuel Young.

(30.) May and June 1789.—Packet, No. 30, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from John Bebb, George Edward Biddle, Capt. H. Bennet, Colonel Henry Briscoe, K. Chauvet, E. Close, Thomas Cotton, J. Dandridge, Colonel George B. Eyres, Crichton Fraser, Colonel J. Fullarton, Captain Richard French, Francis Gladwin, John Holland, Lieut. J. Home, Brigadier-General Mathew Horne, Capt. J. Hutchinson, Benjamin Hughes, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's court), Lieut.-Col. W. James, Captain John Kennaway, Capt. W. Kirkpatrick, Henry Lodge, Laurence Lyons, Colonel Norman Macleod, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Ensign Alexander Mitchell, Colonel John Murray, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, Capt. H. Palmer, John Peach, Jos. Price, Robert Percival Pott, Alexander Read, Colonel J. Stuart, Col. White, W. Wodsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office).—A dispatch from the Resident at Poona to the Governor General (dated 20 May 1789) contains the following passages touching customary presents:—
"On receipt of your Lordship's letter of the 16th of March, it became an object of my most solicitous attention to execute your commands on the subject of presents with effect, and at a meeting with Behroo Pant on the 27th of April, mentioned them to him as a singular instance of your Lordship's regard for this state, and desired that a day might be fixed for communicating it to the minister. I accordingly visited him on the 8th instant, when he opened the conversation by assuring me, with an appearance of great satisfaction, that my prediction relative to the Benaris pilgrims had been verified. . . . This topic dismissed, I entered on that of the presents, observing, that as my mission to this Court was meant to promote the friendship of the two states, so your Lordship, in the prosecution of that object, had been anxious to prevent its becoming an inconvenience or a burthen, conformable to which and to late orders from Europe, your Lordship had forbidden my becoming an incumbrance to this Court by the receipt

LORD
BLAY-
BROOKE.

"of presents; that however as you found your intention subject to a different construction that led to contract the grand object of my mission, and to prejudice the cordiality of our intercourse, your Lordship has been pleased, on the original principles of my appointment to admit of my resuming the ancient usage of a friendly interchange of presents. The minister, who had discovered much satisfaction during this declaration, immediately replied that this empire and that of the English were great and powerful, insensible of burthens such as I had mentioned, but pleased with them when incurred for friendly purposes. He was not, he said, ignorant of the orders that had been received by the Company's government on the subject of presents, but wise as they might be with respect to our own dominions, he could not conceive them meant to be applied to our intercourse with foreign and independent states and the powers of India, amongst whom and their representatives the interchange of presents was universal and indispensable, not as a matter of value and emolument, but as giving lustre and publicity to friendship: That therefore your Lordship's revocation of your former orders had given him great satisfaction. I embraced this opportunity to acquaint him that, while this point had been in agitation, I had received from your Lordships some cloths, the fabrick of Bengal, for the Peshwah and himself, which I had been prevented delivering by the late suspension of the usage, which I should now be happy to recommence by their presentment. . . . On the 10th instant I received a visit from Behroo Punt, who recommenced the interchange of presents by giving me the String of Pearls and Diamond Ring (that I had formerly returned) from the Minister and Hurry Pandit, barring all objection by assuring me that he acted by the minister's special order in renewal of our cordial intercourse. I accordingly made none, but received them on the footing he presented them, and hold them as a deposit on the Company's account."

(31.) July and August 1789.—Packet, No. 31 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from G. E. Biddle, Captain Samuel Black, Rev. J. Blanshard, J. S. Booth, Colonel Brisco, Rev. D. Brown, H. Chauvet, George Forster, Captain Charles Freeman, J. H. Harington, Thomas Harris, Brigadier-General Mathew Horne, Robert Holt, J. Horrebow, Andrew Hunter, William Orby Hunter, Dr. Ralph Irving, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's Court), Richard Johnson, Captain John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Joseph Yorke Kiulooh, Benjamin Lacam, William Larkins, John Lloyd, Charles Loyd, Lieutenant John Malcolm, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Laurence Mercer, E. C. Meyer, Hon. Captain Monson, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, Lieut. Edward Perks, Thomas Philpot, Captain Robert Rayne, Captain Alexander Read, R. Roche, James L. Ross, Archibald Seton, Lieut. Stamford, Hon. Chas. Stuart, Lieutenant Charles Sutherland, William Swainston, Lieut. George Turnour, A. Williamson, J. Wilton, James Wordsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office), Lieutenant Charles Wallace Young.—The letter in which J. Horrebow (captain and owner of a slave-ship) appeals to Lord Cornwallis for mitigation of the sentence, about to follow his conviction of trading in slaves, affords some curious particulars respecting the forbidden traffic. "I am," says the petitioner, "by birth a Dane, born in Copenhagen of a most respectable family, my father having been one of the Judges of the High Court of Judicature, a situation of great consequence and honour; my mother, the daughter of Major-General Furrsmann in the Danish service, and my relations on both sides have filled and do fill posts of great trust and confidence. Judge then, my Lord, how much I must feel in having thus by this public and ignominious trial and conviction disgraced my family, a family I can venture to say that never before received a stain. . . . With respect to the offence I have been guilty of I am now too fatally convinced of its illegality; if I had had that knowledge before, this disgrace and shame could never have befallen on me, for I do most solemnly assure your Lordship my conduct all through this business proceeded from ignorance of the laws of England, and from examples of its having been practised by foreigners. I had not an idea that it was illegal, being myself well acquainted with merchants of the first credit in England, who openly and avowedly carry on a similar traffic on the coast of Africa; and I was also confirmed in my idea of its not being illegal from my having known that it was a constant

LORD
GRAY-
BROOKE.

"and usual practice a few year since in Calcutta to sell slaves by public auction in the same manner as any other effects. Ignorance, my Lord, I am aware, is not a sufficient excuse, but in many cases will go a great way in extenuation of a crime, and which effect I trust and hope it will have in the present instance. Having been told at Serampore and Chandernagore by several people that a great profit was to be got or slaves at Mauritius, I too imprudently determined in purchasing some for that place, and employed a Monsieur Remy at Chandernagore to purchase them for me; he did so; the slaves were put on board my ship and sold at Columbo. . . . I humbly conceive it was more your Lordship's intention to show your great displeasure to a traffick of the sort being carried on and to prevent it in future by making a publick example, that your Lordship directed the prosecution against me, than any other motive; that end has been answered, and I have unfortunately been the object. It is the first example that has been made in this country, and I firmly believe sufficiently notorious to prevent others residing under the protection of the British Government attempting the like in future."

(32.) September and October 1789.—Packet, No. 32 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from J. Addison, Colonel Robert Abercromby, Colonel Ahmuty, R. Bathurst, John Bebb, Rev. J. Blanshard, Hon. R. H. Boddam, Ensign Jonathan Brown, W. Brune, Captain James Campbell, Colonel J. Capper, J. Champion, H. Chauvet, Frances (Lady) Chambers, Le Chevalier de Chastel, John Mabel Cooper, William Cowper, Alexander Davidson, C. B. Dent, Colonel George B. Eyres, John Farquhar, H. J. Forster, Captain Richard French, Lieut. Thomas Hawkins, Tileman Henschel, Robert Holt, Brig.-General Mathew Horne, William Orby Hunter, Jno. Hutchinson, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Lieut.-Col. W. Jones, Richard Johnson, Captain John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Mon. Labouchardiere, William Larkins, Charles Loyd, Lieut. John Macleod, Thomas Martin, Lieut.-Col. John R. Mattocks, T. Melvill, Colonel C. Morgan, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, Lieut. James Pennington, Thomas Phippard, Captain James Pringle, Captain Alexander Read, E. Sandford, Lieut. William Sandys, Hon. Charles Stuart, Lieutenant Tomkyns, Thomas Thrush, P. Treves, Lieut.-Colonel Charles Ware, Captain Lestock Wilson, James Wordsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(33.) November and December 1789.—Packet, No. 33 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Capt. Robert Anderson, William Armstrong, E. H. Barlow, William Baillie, R. Bathurst, Samuel Beachcroft, Lieut. Robert Bridgewater, Colonel Brisco, Reuben Burrow, George Colebrook, Colonel Collinson, Lieut.-Colonel Deare, Major James Dickson, Capt. Alexander Dirom, W. Douglas, George Forster, Colonel J. Fullarton, Alexandre Comte Gika, Lieutenant Thomas Giltum, Duke of Grafton, J. E. Harington, Thomas Harris, Lieut. Michael Hiltner, John Holland, Ensign Ewer Jones, Mrs. Richard Johnston, Capt. John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Colonel Robert Kyd, William Larkins, Francis Magnus, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Major George Maule, Mons. Mercier, James Meyrick, A. Montgomerie, Thomas Parley, Thomas Phillips, Lyon Prager, Anthony Sadleir, J. Shore, Peter Speke, Hon. Charles Stuart, Hon. Lieut. George Turnour, Lieut.-Col. Charles Warre. One of the more important documents of the packet being Captain Alexander Dirom's "Account of Tippoo Sultan his family and the Revenues of his Country; of his army and the principal Officers of his Civil and Military Establishments; Also of his Army at Coimbatore, and the cause and progress of his War with the Nairs."

(34.) January and February 1790.—Packet, No. 34 (of East Indian Papers); containing letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Colonel Ahmuty, the Duchess of Ancaster, Governor Bic, Lieutenant James Brunton, J. Brohier, Alexander Davidson, Captain Alexander Dixon, John Duncan (Resident at Benares), George Forster, R. Gale, James Grant, Phineas Hall, Sir Paul Jodrell (respecting libels on the writer in the Madras "Courier"), Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Richard Johnson, George Johnstone (Acting Resident at Lucnow), John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Colonel Robert Kyd, John Lloyd, Charles Loyd, Lieut. Macleod, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Lieut. Malcolm, Colonel C. Morgan, Lyon Prager, John Rawlins, Capt. Alexander Read, Benjamin Roebuck, Andrew Ross, Peter Speke, Rt. Hon. Charles

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

Townshend, Lieut. Charles Wyatt, George Webster, William Wilkinson, J. Willes, W. Wordsworth, James Wordsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(35.) March and April 1790.—Packet, No. 35 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from W. K. Amherst, Capt. Robert Blair, W. A. Brooke, Capt. H. Burges, Lt.-Col. Jno. Cockerell, Jona Cooper, Lt.-Col. Deare, Capt. Alexander Dixon, Col. Patrick Duff, Jonathan Duncan (Resident at Benares), George Forster, John Hutchinson, Edward Otto Ives (Resident with the Vizier's Court), John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Col. Kyd, Lieut. A. Macaulay, Capt. John Madan, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), B. Mason, F. Mure, Colonel J. Murray, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, Capt. Alexander Read, Benjamin Roebuck, A. Seton, Ensign W. Snodgrass, Peter Speke, J. Stonhouse, Hon. Charles Stuart, J. Willes, J. Wilton, Samuel Young.

(36.) May and June 1790.—Packet, No. 36 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from Thomas Brooke, W. A. Brooke, Lieut.-Colonel John Cockerell, Alexander Davidson, William Dick, Henry Dundas, Ensign Charles FitzHill, George Forster (Resident at Nagpore), Lieut. Thomas Gillam, W. Harding, William Orby Hunter, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's Court), Capt. John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Matthew Leslie, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Lieut. Miles Nightingall, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindia), J. Paterson, John Peach, Lieutenant Thomas Phipps, Capt. Alexander Read, Thomas Pearce, Benjamin Roebuck, Hon. Charles Stuart, Lieut.-Col. R. Stuart, G. Urignou, J. Willes, James Wordsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(37.) July and August 1790.—Packet, No. 37 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from H. Bathurst, Lieut. H. L. Berkeley, Rev. J. Blanshard, Colonel Briscoe, W. A. Brooke, Richard Browne, Dr. R. Bruce, W. R. Davis, J. H. Dixon, Jno. Duncan (Resident at Benares), Capt. Dundas, C. W. Duntzfelt, George Forster (Resident at Nagpore), M. Fulton, E. G. Furlye, Terence Gabagan, Capt. John French, Lieut.-Col. James Hartley, J. H. Harrington, Capt. A. W. Hearsey, J. Heatley, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's Court), Captain John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Robert Ledlie, Ensign Charles Mammen, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Laurence Mercer, G. C. Meyer, Colonel J. Murray, Pendoche Neale, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindia), Captain Richard Pennell, William Phillips, Capt. Alexander Read, Benjamin Roebuck, George Smith, Peter Speke, Edward Strettell, Hon. Charles Stuart, Peter Touchet, Lieut.-Col. Charles Ware, J. Willes, Captain Thomas Welsh, J. Wilton, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(38.) September and October 1790.—Packet, No. 38 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from William Anderson, John Harman Becher, W. A. Brooke, Colonel Capper, J. Chamier, W. Chauvet, James L. Dighton, Colonel Patrick Duff, Jno. Duncan (Resident at Benares), Lieut.-Colonel W. Elliot, George Forster (Resident at Nagpore), William Gudgeon, Thomas Harris, Captain George Howell, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at the Vizier's Court), Captain John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Laurence Mercer, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindia), Captain Alexander Read, Benjamin Roebuck, Major F. Shelly, Major Lewis Smith, J. Stonehouse, Ensign James Stuart.

(39.) November and December 1790.—Packet, No. 39 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Lord Cornwallis from William Berrie, J. Bristow, Thomas Brooke, W. A. Brooke, W. Burke, J. Burlton, Colonel F. Capper, Sir Robert Chambers, Lieut.-Colonel Jno. Cockerell, Lieut. J. Cunningham, Captain George Curtis, W. Driver, Jno. Duncan (Resident at Benares), Major S. Dyer, Captain W. Flint, Lieutenant Gillman, James Hartley, Lieutenant W. Horne, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Sir Paul Jodrell, Captain John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Mrs. Miriam Kelly, Lt.-Colonel Kyd, Captain Little, W. Mackintosh, Colonel A. Mackenzie, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), F. Maymound, Captain J. Meares, Laurence Mercer, James Miller, Colonel Thomas Musgrave, James Nicholas, Lieut. A. O'Hara, William Palmer (Resident with Mahajee Scindia), C. Parthenio, Lieutenant J. P. Pigott, Henry Ramas, Captain Alexander Read, John Read, Jacob Rider, Benjamin Roebuck, Melian Showers, Major Stirling, Hon. Charles Stuart, Lieut. Charles Sutherland, Colonel Wagenheim, Lieut.-Col. Swain

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

Ward, William Watts, George Webster, J. Wintle, Lieutenant Henry Williamson, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(40.) January 1791.—Packet, No. 40 (of East Indian Papers) comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from J. Addison, Lieut. James Brunton, Lt.-Col. John Cockerell, Major Cuppage, Captain Flint, Captain John French, Colonel J. Fullarton, Lt.-Col. James Hartley, Captain A. W. Hearsey, Edward Otto Ives, (Resident at Lucnow), John Kennaway, (Resident with the Nizam), Colonel A. Mackenzie and J. Malchoi (respecting Lieut.-Colonel Stuart's extraordinary capture by the 'Seiks'), Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), James Miller, Major H. Montgomery, General Musgrave, Captain Alexander Read, Lieut.-Colonel Patrick Ross, Lieut.-Col. Richard Tolson, Colonel Wangerheim, George Webster.

(41.) February 1791.—Packet, No. 41 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Captain J. W. Brohier, Lieut. James Brunton, Major Cuppage, Lieut. Davidson, Colonel Patrick Duff, Captain Flint, Colonel John Fullarton, Sir F. Gordon, Major Hartle, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Mons. Labouchardiere, John Kennaway (Resident with the Nizam), Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Colonel H. Mackenzie, Captain C. Mayne, James Meyrick, Major-General Thomas Musgrave, Lieut.-Colonel Tolson, John Turing, Governor Vandegraaff.

(42.) March and April, 1791.—Packet, No. 42 (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters and despatches to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Michael Atkinson, Lieut.-Col. James Browne, Lieut. Calcraft, Capt. James Campbell, Lieut. J. Cunningham, Major Cuppage, Lieut. James Davidson, Lieut.-Col. Geils, Captain Haldane, Ensign Charles Hill, J. Hudleston, Catherine Hawkesbury, Lieut. Joseph O'Halloran, Warren Hastings, John Hunter, John Hutchinson, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Lieut. B. H. Kelly, John Kennaway (Resident with the Nizam), Capt. John Lindsay, Colonel Mackenzie, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Colonel John Murray, General Thomas Musgrave, Lt.-Colonel Oldham, Rev. John Owen, William Palmer (Resident with the Mahajee Scindia), Richard Penn, Duke of Richmond, Nathaniel Smith, Peter Speke, Lieut. William Steuart, John Stewart, Mrs. M. Townshend. The letter from Warren Hastings (dated from Park Lane, 18 April 1791) commending Colonel Morgan to Lord Cornwallis being noteworthy by biographers.

(43.) May and June, 1791.—Packet, No. 43 (of East Indian Papers); comprising despatches and letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from G. H. Barlow (Calcutta), Oliver Colt, Lieut. James Davidson, Charles Eustace (Dublin), Major John Gore, Major Grattan, Lord Hinchinbrook, Capt. Hunter, John Kennaway (Resident with the Nizam), Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, Captain John Little, John Mackenzie, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Mr. James Miller, Colonel John Murray, Lt.-Col. Oldham, Lady Pelham, William Petrie, General Richard Phillipson, Capt. Alexander Read, Lieut.-Colonel Patrick Ross, Lieut.-Col. Steuart, Major Lewis Smith, J. Unthoff, Captain Thomas Welsh, Major William Young.

(44.) July and August, 1791.—Packet, No. 44 (of East Indian Papers); comprising despatches and letters from Captain Beaton, John Champain, Major Cuppage, Samuel Charters, J. Dashwood, Lieut. James Davidson, Charles Eustace (Dublin), Capt. W. Flint, J. Le Gross, Capt. Richard Hardinge, Major Orby Hunter, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), John Kennaway (Resident at the Nizam's Court), N. E. Kindersley, Captain A. Kyd, Capt. John Little, Capt. John Macintyre, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Major George Maule, James Meyrick, Col. John Murray, Thomas Myers, Ann Nightingale (Dieppe), Lieut. Oates, Lieut.-Col. John Oldham, Major Orr, William Petrie, Capt. John Rattray, Capt. Alexander Read, Major R. Roberts, James Rowles, Lt.-Col. Showers, Lt.-Col. Tolson, Lady Waldegrave, Capt. Thomas Welsh, Capt. James Williamson.

(45.) September and October, 1791.—Packet, No. 45 (of East Indian Papers); comprising despatches and letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Col. Ahmuty, Col. James Balfour, George Bingham, Sir Charles Blunt, Capt. Bowser, W. A. Brooke, Robert Bruce, Colonel Briscoe, David Burges, Rev. A. T. Clarke, Lord Chatham, Major Cuppage, J. Dashwood, J. L. Dighton, Lieut. John Fortnum, Orby Hunter, Robert Ireland, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Mrs. Johnstone (Madras), John Kennaway (Resident at the Nizam's Court), Captain John Little, Colonel A. Mackenzie, Charles Warre

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

Malet (Resident at Poona), Russell Manners, Capt. Monson, Col. Morgan, Mr. J. Motte, F. Mure, Colonel John Murray, General Thomas Musgrave, C. Reynolds, John Ryley, Capt. Richard Scott, Lt.-Col. Showers, Major Stirling, Lt.-Col. Stuart, Capt. James Williamson, Mr. J. Wintle.

(46.) November and December 1791.—Packet, No. 46, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Colonel Ahmty, William Adair, Claude Benezet, Charles Birch, Major Bruce, J. Buller, C. Cockerell, Major Cuppage, Major Curfy, Mary Douglas, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Dundas, Captain Dundas, Capt. Edwards, Sir William Fawcett, Colonel J. Fullarton, Lieut. Thomas Hickman, John Hutchinson, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), John Kennaway (Resident at the Nizam's Court), Capt. Little, H. Lodge, James Macpherson, Major Forbes Ross Macdonald, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), James Meyrick, Josiah Morgan, General Musgrave, Colonel Pearson, William Petrie, J. Price, Lt.-Colonel Ranstone, Lieut. Charles Leighton Simpson, Edward Smith, J. B. Smith, Lieut. William Stuart (Assistant at Hyderabad), Mrs. M. Townshend, J. Wintle. Some of the private letters of this packet repay perusal. Writing from Gibraltar, William Adair says "His Royal Highness, Prince Edward, of whom report had been very unfavourable, has been here about nine months, and has conducted himself with such regular strictness and propriety as has given very great satisfaction to every one, especially the Commander-in-Chief, Major-General O'Hara. He is the very reverse of intemperance, hates drink and play, never swears, and as to amours we know nothing of them. He is tall and well-made in person, is sensible, clear, and distinct in his manner of expression, rather pointed-free from the quick manner of the family." In the course of a long letter of chat (dated from Conduit Street, 31 December 1791), Edward Smith says of another of the Royal Dukes, "You may have been surprised at our Duke of York's bringing home a wife, but unfashionable as it may appear, yet true it is he really fell in love and she too. Her fortune (as a Princess) is reputedly small, but I have reason to believe that the King of Prussia privately makes her ample allowance, and every farthing is very convenient to H.R.H. The onset here pleases much, and everything yet seen of her seems dictated by prudence and foresight, so that it is hoped she may be of every possible happiness and service to the Duke with his family."

(47.) January and February 1792.—Packet, No. 47, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Earl Cornwallis from William Armstrong, Claude Benezet, William Burroughs, Catherine Cornwallis, Samuel Charters, Major Cuppage, E. J. Curfy, Colonel Patrick Duff, R. W. Fitzhugh, Sir William Dunkin, Colonel Fox, Thomas Graham, Lord Hawkesbury, Tilman Henckell, Lord Hinchinbrook, J. Hudleston, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), Colonel M. Mackenzie, Alexander Macleod, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), James Meyrick, Colonel John Murray, William Petrie, General Richard Phillipson, Captain Alexander Read, Lieut.-General Robert Robinson, Lieut. William Stuart, G. Taswell, Rt. Hon. Charles Townshend, J. Wintle, James Wordsworth, Sir George Yonge (War Office). Some of dispatches for Sir John Kennaway, Bart. (Resident at Hyderabad), Charles Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), and Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona) being especially worthy of examination. Also, a noteworthy paper entitled "A List of Promotions in His Majesty's Forces in the East Indies, that have taken place in consequences of Recommendations from Lord Cornwallis; with Observations."

(48.) March and April 1792.—Packet, No. 48, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from William Baillie, Colonel James Balfour, Col. H. Brisco, Colonel Bridges, J. Boyd, W. A. Brooke, Sir Charles Bunbury, Lieut.-Col. Cockerell, Charles Coates, Lord Craven, Major Cuppage, Major Stair Dalrymple, Lieut. John Davidson, John Duncan, James Dunkin, Frederick Fitzroy, Thomas Graham, General Grant, Sir Frederick Haldimand, Lord Hillsborough, Lord Howe (introducing Mr. Henry Strachey), J. Hudleston, Lieut. Samuel Hunter, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), S. Lushington, Major Forbes Ross Macdonald, Col. H. Mackenzie, Colonel Norman Macleod, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Frederick Montague, Colonel John Murray, Lord Onslow, Thomas Philpott, Robert Percival Pott, J. Rennell, Alexander Read, Lt.-Colonel Showers, Lieut.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

William Stenart, Capt. Charles Stewart, Mr. Henry Strachey (introducing his eldest son), George Webster, Sir George Yonge (War Office).

(49.) May and June 1792.—Packet, No. 49, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Earl Cornwallis from Lord Auckland, Captain Simon Baillie, Lieut. J. M. Chalmers, Robert Chapman, Major Cuppage, Major Dalrymple, Colonel Patrick Duff, Thomas Graham, Lieut. Samuel Hunter, William Honman, Edward Otto Ives (Resident at Lucnow), John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), J. W. Lankeet, Rev. Duncan Mackay, Bernard McMahon, Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Philip Mannington, Lieut. John Missing, Daniel Murray, Colonel John Murray, William Petrie, Mr. Joseph Price, Captain Alexander Read, Lieut. William Stuart, Lieut.-Colonel F. Stuart, L. M. Taylor, Lieut.-Colonel Tolson, Captain W. Vincent, Major A. Wynet, Sir George Yonge (War Office).—Also a parcel of correspondence and memoranda respecting the affairs of the Nabob of Arcot.

(50.) 1792.—Packet, No. 50, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Earl Cornwallis from Lieut. Lionel Berkeley, Colonel John Brathwaite, Major Bolter, Colonel Briscoe, David Burgess, Lieut. Cunninghamham, Lieut. George Dick, Henry Martin D'Este, Major Dyer, Colonel Fullarton, James Grant, Thomas Harris, B. Hartley, Lieut. Thomas Hawkins, Tileman Henckell, Rev. F. Holscher, William Orby Hunter, William Macleod, Lieut. Mercer, Henry Chicheley Michell, Captain Monson, Colonel Morgan, Lieut. F. A. Muller, Lieut.-Colonel Nesbitt, James Pennington, R. J. Perrean, Lt.-Colonel Ranstone, Captain Alexander Read, Lieut. Reade, John Rider, Mr. Secretary G. Robinson, Melian (wife of Colonel) Showers, Lieut. P. Sundt, Colonel Symes, J. Willes, John Yeomans, Sir George Yonge (War Office), Lieut. William Youngson.

(51.) January to March 1793.—Packet, No. 51, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Colonel John Brathwaite, David Baird, General J. Carnac, Lieut.-Colonel John Cockerell, Edward Coles, Lieut. Henry Martin D'Este, Captain William Douglas, Colonel Floyd, John Gilchrist, Lieut. St. Leger Gillman, Lieut. Rich. Hay, J. Hatch, James Irvine, Ernest Ives, Lieut. Henry Mercer, Henry Chicheley Michell, James Miller, Lieut. Robert McGregor, Lieut.-Colonel Nesbitt, Sir Charles Oakley, Richard Oakes, Lieut. William Oliphant, Major R. C. Roberts, Lieut. J. Shaw, Captain Spry, Major Vanas, George Webster, Lieut. Henry White, Captain Andrew Wright.

(52.) April—July 1793.—Packet No. 52, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Captain Simon Baillie, Richard Birch, Lieut. Paris Bradshaw, Colonel John Brathwaite, Colonel H. Briscoe, Captain Carnegie, Samuel Charters, Monsr. Deschamps, Thomas Edwards, Lieut. C. W. Emerson, Colonel C. Fraser, Lieut. St. Leger Gillman, Charles Gladwine, Lieut. Thomas Friskey Hare, Lieut. Thomas Hardwicke, Vere Warner Hussey, John Law, Captain Lloyd, Rev. John Loftie, Mr. McNab, Lieut. J. Missing, Lieut. Mercer, James Musgrave, Sir Charles Oakley, Major Orr, Lieut.-Colonel Patterson, Captain Alexander Read, Lieut. Wm. Sandys, and George Williamson.

(53.) July—September 1793.—Packet, No. 53, (of East Indian papers); comprising letters to Charles Earl Cornwallis from Lord Ailesbury, Lucretia Anstey, Shearman Bird, Col. J. Brathwaite, Colonel Briscoe, Thomas Brooke, Captain J. Campbell, Peter Chabert, Rev. Abraham Thomas Clarke, Lieut.-Colonel Cockerell, Edward Coles, Lieut. John Conyngham, Lieut. Corner, Lieut. M. Dove, John Duncan, Lieut. Sutton, Dominick Donnelly, S. Ewart, Lieut. Fetherstone, Colonel J. Floyd, A. Grant, Tilman Henckell, Lieut. Hickman, Major Forbes Ross Macdonald, Lieut.-Colonel Hamilton Maxwell, Lieut. Magrath, Lieut. W. Montgomery, John Kennaway (Resident at Hyderabad), Charles Warre Malet (Resident at Poona), Philip Mannington, A. Montgomery, Daniel Negus, Major William Palmer, William Page, Thomas Parr, John Paterson, Rev. Christian Pohl, Lieut.-Colonel Ranstone, Lieut.-Colonel Patrick Ross, Ensign Stewart, C. Smart, P. Treves, Lieut. W. A. Thompson, Lieut.-Colonel Tolson, Adam Turnbull, Lieut. Vargandt, J. Willes, Lieut.-Colonel Mark Wood, Sir George Yonge (War Office).—Also, a curious memoir (covering thirty-seven closely written pages) by Robert Morris, barrister-at-law, complaining of his exclusion by the Calcutta judges from the Calcutta bar, there being in the complainant's opinion no sufficient grounds for the exclusion. The memorialist, however, admitting that in 1772, without the permission of the young lady's guardians, he made a secret marriage in Flanders with an heiress (having 30,000*l.* for her fortune), the natural daughter of the last Lord Baltimore, when she was only twelve and a half years old, which marriage had since been declared null and void.

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

(54.) 1794.—Packet, No. 54, (of East Indian and other papers); comprising letters to Marquis Cornwallis from G. H. Barlow (Secretary of Government, Calcutta), H. Beaufoy, Colonel John Murray, Colonel Paterson, Major William Scott.—Also, copy of instructions to Jonathan Dunean, (Resident at Benares), and official reports from Lieutenant Richard Fletcher (Royal Engineers), to the Duke of Richmond, dated from Prince Rupert's Head, Dominica, touching works of fortification.

(55.) 1795.—Packet, No. 55, (of East Indian Papers); comprising letters to Marquis Cornwallis (Master-General of His Majesty's Ordnance), from G. H. Barlow (Secretary of Government, Calcutta), Major Blair, Captain Booth (Royal Engineers), General Drummond, Rt. Hon. Henry Dundas (House Guards), Charles Morgan (Judge Advocate General), Sir John Murray (Calcutta), Major William Scott, General John Small, Charles Stuart, and Lieut.-Colonel William Twiss.

(56.) 1796-1797.—Packet No. 56, (of East India Papers); comprising letters to the Marquis Cornwallis, from G. H. Barlow (Secretary to Government, Council Chamber, Calcutta), and Major William Scott written for the information of the Marquis respecting Indian affairs after his return to England; Mr. Barlow's letters relating to Lord Hobart's "violent and arbitrary proceedings," and Major Scott's epistles being noteworthy for their evidence respecting a mutinous and revolutionary movement at Futtighur and Khaupoor amongst the officers of the Indian army, whose transient disaffection seems to have originated in annoyance at the delay in issuing "the long looked for regulations" for the abatement of their particular grievances. Writing on 24 February 1796, at a distance of twenty miles from Futtighur, where the alarming discontent first made itself manifest, Major Scott says, "This danger, however, seemed to approach in a combination to extort from Government such concessions and regulations as the Army should approve of. From the Papers which Government got a sight of it appeared that a plan was forming to establish a sort of military independence. Organization, legislative and executive committees, with all the cant of modern revolution, were talked off, with as much freedom and self-importance as in any paper read at the National Assembly of Paris. But though, I believe with few exceptions, all were implicated to a certain degree, pledged to secrecy under solemn ties, and associated for mutual support, yet many startled at a measure which was likely to bring the question between the Government and the Army to a serious issue. The first stand was made by the Artillery at the Presidency, but the most effectual opposition was made at Khaupoor. It is believed that this wild scheme originated at Futtighur, and that all the officers at that station had either engaged on it from will, been drawn into it from inadvertency, or dragged into it from irresolution." Having described the steps taken of the suppression of a rebellious ferment that for a brief time threatened to become an open revolt, the writer expresses a strong opinion that the danger is over. In a subsequent letter (dated 15 Jan. 1797), Major Scott speaks with approbation of the conciliatory firmness with which the chief military authority encountered this perilous agitation of the army. "Had coercion been attempted," he says, "the men, who were led into the combination from want of thought or want of firmness to resist, would have lost the power of retracting, and been precipitated into a participation of the confusion, which some turbulent and adventurous spirits were on the watch to excite. It has been acknowledged to me by several of both parties, the mountain and the moderates, that the General's prudent and conciliatory conduct saved the Army; this is, in fact, admitting that had the decision come to the sword Government must in the end have prevailed; but tumults, foreign to the original object, would have grown out of the confusion; after subduing your Army, you must have employed it to quell the rebellion of your subjects; and the Army itself must have been kept down by the same means that corrected it. The wild beast is now tamed instead of chained; but it will be said that we have tamed him with sops." In palliation of the army's misconduct the writer insists that its discontent was by no means groundless. Of the army, however, he has no good opinion, declaring it as remarkable for "captiousness, avarice, folly, and supineness," as it should be for

LORD
BRAY-
BROOKE.

"zeal, energy, and ability." This packet contains also some purely private and personal correspondence; several of the unofficial letters being from Lords Liverpool, Sidmouth, and Hobart.

(57.) 1782-1793.—Packet, No. 57, (of East Indian manuscript books and documents); containing—

(a.) 27 September 1782.—Narrative of the Second War with Hyder Aly down to the 27th September 1782, by Major William Sydenham of the Fort St. George establishment. An official memoir of 260 closely written folio pages.

(b.) 20 December 1784.—Grant's Political Survey of the Northern Circars; being a memoir of the history, government, resources, and revenues of the Northern Circars, by James Grant; with an introductory letter to the Honourable Warren Hastings Esq., Governor-General, and Council in their Secret Political Department. Folio of 210 leaves, closely written on both sides.

(c.) 1785.—A folio setting forth on its first 58 pages the main points and arguments of Sir John Burgoyne's defence of his conduct before a court-martial, when he was on his trial "for refusing, on the 19th of September 1783, to obey the orders of the President and Select Committee of the Council of Fort St. George, which he knew and expressly acknowledged to be the Government of the country," and also (inter alia) for "refusing to put himself, or that part of the army which was composed of His Majesty's Forces under the command of Lieutenant-General Lang." Headed "Address to Lieutenant-General Sir Jno. Dalling President and Officers, Members of this Court Martial," and written in the first person, the document appears to be a sketch of an address for his defence, prepared by Sir John Burgoyne himself, and written by his own hand.

(d.) 1786 to 1793.—Letter-Register of letters sent from India by Lord Cornwallis to his numerous correspondents in England, during the afore-mentioned term, note being taken of the ships or private carriers by which or whom the letters were dispatched. Nothing given of the contents of the epistles.

(e.) Two important papers of data touching the peculations, extortions, and frauds alleged to have been perpetrated by Governor Holland and his brother. Paper, No. 1, described on the back, "Case as to Holland's conduct in the non-payment of the Nizam's Peshcuth," and the Heavy Balances of Subsidy from the Nabob of Arcot, and undue remissions to the Rajah of Tanjore." Paper, No. 2, endorsed "Private Communications of Corruption and Peculation," and headed "A supplement to the cases relating to charges of delinquency against the late Government of Madras."

(58.) 1781 to 1819.—An additional Packet of papers relating chiefly to the capitulation of the garrisons of York and Gloucester in Virginia, U. S., and to steps taken for rendering due honour in 1806, to the memory of Charles Marquis Cornwallis. Comprising with other matters—

(a.) 19 October 1781.—Two severa. copies of the Articles of Capitulation of the said garrisons, with copies of letters that passed between George Washington and Earl Cornwallis for the settlement of the same articles.

(b.) February 1806.—Copy of the resolutions of regret and testimony passed by the Court of Directors of the East India Company in respect to the death and services of the Marquis Cornwallis, with correspondence (including letters by Earl Minto and Viscount Castlereagh) respecting the same resolutions.

(c.) 2 January 1819.—Pencil drawing by Lieutenant W. E. Stephen of the Engineers, of the mausoleum erected at Ghazepoor in the honour of Marquis Cornwallis, "the total probable cost," of the work "from beginning to end" being "about one lac of rupees."

(59.) 1798-1797. Official Letter-Book of Charles, Marquis Cornwallis, Master-General of His Majesty's Ordnance.

At the close of this account of the American and East Indian writings, which Lord Braybrooke has considerably sent to the great store-house of our national archives, it may be remarked that Lord Cornwallis's Irish MSS. (1798-1801) having come in former time through another channel to the same resting place, the Public Record Office has at present in its keeping an almost perfect collection of the Marquis's official papers.

JOHN CORDY JAFFRESON.

LOD ARBUTH-
NOTT.

LOD ARBUTH-
NOTT

REPORT on the MANUSCRIPTS of the RIGHT HONOUR-ABLE JOHN, VISCOUNT OF ARBUTHNOTT, at ARBUTH-NOTT HOUSE, in the COUNTY of KINCARDINE. By WILLIAM FRASER, EDINBURGH.

The noble family of Arbuthnot were fortunate in possessing a family chronicler, from whose labours we are enabled to glean fuller information as to the earlier members of the family than might otherwise have been the case. Mr. Alexander Arbuthnot, Principal of King's College, Aberdeen, himself one of the younger scions of the family, began if he did not complete a MS. History entitled "Originis et Incrementi Arbutnoticae" "Familie Descriptio Historica" etc. The existing MS. is stated to have been translated from the original Latin into Scotch by Mr. W. Morison, parson of Benholm, in the County of Kincardine, and contains the Latin and Scotch on alternative pages, both written by the same hand. It is doubtful, however, if Principal Arbuthnot completed the original MS. as the translated copy of it now stands. The somewhat inflated introduction addressed thus, as translated, "To the Verie Notabell and Wyse man Andrew Arbuthnot, Cheif of the Hous of Arbuthnot," bears the signature "M. R. Arbuthnotus" no doubt for Mr. Robert Arbuthnot, who succeeded the Principal in the parsonage of Arbuthnot, and survived till about 1607. Although this is so, however, it is distinctly stated in the title page, that the History was "compyled first be M. A. Arbuthnot, Principall of the most renowned Col- lege of Aberdeen, thairefter englishit be M. V. Morison, persone of Benholme Kirke." The translator was presented to Benholme in 1577, and died on 15 November 1587, four years after Principal Arbuthnot, who probably began the compilation about 1568, while it is to be noted that Andrew the Laird of Arbuthnot, to whom it is dedicated, did not succeed to the estate until 1579.

The MS. contains, besides the proper history of the family, a dissertation on the various orders of nobility, their rise, and distinctions of rank etc., interspersed with occasional moral and political reflections, which gradually lead up to the true subject of the work. The writer refers to the negligence with which Scotch nobility treated the history of their own families, praises the Romans and other ancient nations for their attention to their own history, and contends that the story of noble forefathers is an incentive to their successors to follow good deeds. To set a good example and encourage others to follow out his purpose, he proposes to lay a foundation of the history of the antiquity of the house of Arbuthnot.

The writer goes on to deduce the origin of the name of Arbuthnot from the lands so called, but states that who was the first possessor thereof was unknown. He concludes however that the original occupier of the lands must have been Forester of the Mearns, which he thinks then corresponded with the later office of Sheriff. As a proof he narrates that the Hill of Garvoch when possessed three hundred years previously by the "Clane" of Arbuthnot was covered with wood.

The historian does not condescend upon the name of the first of that clan; but he maintains that upwards of four centuries previous to the period at which he wrote, a certain Hew Arbuthnot possessed the lands of that name. This Hew is said to have engaged in a dispute with the Bishop of St. Andrews as to possession of the lands called the Kirktown of Arbuthnot. This controversy was continued by Hew's alleged son, Duncan of Arbuthnot, and finally settled by a "Definitive decret" dated 11th April 1206, in favor of the Bishop. This decree is now the oldest extant of the papers in the possession of Lord Arbuthnot, and the above mentioned Duncan of Arbuthnot, or Abirbuthnot, is therefore the first of the family as instructed by their own muniments. The decree was pronounced by Patrick Abbot of Dunfermline, Henry Abbot of Arbroath, and several other Abbots and Priors convened as a synod. They narrate the dispute as to the lands between the said Bishop and Duncan of Arbuthnot, and that of these lands the latter "spoiled the Kirk," but they say nothing of the controversy having been handed down from father to son.

Duncan of Abirbuthnot was succeeded by his son Hugh, and he in turn was succeeded by his son also styled Hugh, and surnamed "the Blond," from his fair hair, which he wore long.

Hugh the Blond was succeeded in the direct line by Philip of Abirbuthnot. Of him little is known from these muniments, except that he was a benefactor to the Church of the Carmelite Friars of Aberdeen. The family historian however relates, quaintly enough, a somewhat romantic episode in his life. We are told that Philip having no male heirs by his first wife, who was a daughter of Sir William Keith, Great Marischal of Scotland, gave his two daughters honorably in marriage with large portions, without partitioning his estate. Philip then dreading the ancient house should be ruined through division of the heritage between his daughters, so grieved about the matter, that from that or other causes he fell into "ane heave disease." Thinking himself dying, he summoned his father-in-law to ask his advice, and especially as to waiving the right of the daughters to a partition of the estate. To which Lord Marischal answered frankly, "as the natur of men is addicted in their avin particular, lytell regarding the weill of wtheris" that he need not trouble himself with that matter, for a sufficient provision was made to his grandchildren by the laws, as the whole property would fall to them, and advised him to be careful to recover his own health, and to leave his daughters alone. Philip of Arbuthnot took this advice deeply to heart, and being determined to preserve his family inheritance intact, after bidding a courteous farewell to his father-in-law, he began to take "good courage" and strove against his weakness. The result was that his sickness passed off, and he gradually regained his former health. To promote his convalescence, however, as soon as he was able to travel, he went, carried in a litter, to Edinburgh, there to obtain the benefit of medical advice. As his strength returned he began to think of marrying again, and visiting frequently at the Castle of Dalkeith held by Sir William Douglas, he found that "this lord had certane dochtaris, virginis, and meit for marriage." "Lyking their bewtie and conditionis" he [Philip] proposed to their father for one of them. Being accepted, the marriage was completed, as the family historian says with magnificent preparations. The result gratified Sir Philip of Arbuthnot's wishes, as his wife bore him a son Hugh, who inherited the estates, and many other children.

This son Hugh who is the first called of Arbuthnot, played a considerable part in the history of his house, though no documents executed by him remain, save his Testament, dated 13 March 1446, and confirmed 29 June 1447. Here however Principal Arbuthnot comes to our aid, and by his plain straightforward narrative not only adds to our knowledge of the family, but also throws discredit on a revolting tradition as to the death of John Melvill of Glenbervie, Sheriff of the Mearns, about 1420. Tradition states that he having incensed all the neighbouring barons by his tyranny, was grievously complained of to the Regent of Scotland, who is said to have exclaimed "Sorrow gin that Sheriff were sodden, and suppit in broo [broth]." Whereupon it is declared, the unfortunate Sheriff was decoyed to a hunting party, seized and actually put to death in the manner indicated. This story however is in no way referred to by Principal Arbuthnot. He narrates that the laird of Glenbervie, puffed up with riches and the number of his dependants, chiefly because he had a great number of Highlandmen at command, despised his neighbours. Hugh of Arbuthnot being his nearest neighbour suffered most, but not being able alone to repress Melvill, made a league with other barons and was chosen their chief. A day of conference between the Sheriff and his opponents was appointed, but the result of their meeting was only greater provocation. Wherefore the barons "persewed hime as he was returning home, and having overtane him, nocht far frome S. James Kirk of Garvah hill, thai set wpon him and slayis him." After the murder, the confederates knowing that Hugh of Arbuthnot, being their chief, would be marked as a special subject for vengeance, left their own houses and mustered to defend the house of Arbuthnot. Finding however that the place was not sufficiently strong, they laid the foundation of the present castle, and raised the work to such a height as to form a safe refuge in all local feuds. On this the chronicler remarks, that the deed which might have brought ruin, resulted in greater honour to the family and the acquiring of a stronger castle. It will be seen from this narrative that the more revolting elements of the tradition are discredited, the affair being resolved into a mere local feud, and the murder done in hot blood, after provocation, and not under the guise of friendship or with savage accessories.

One circumstance, interesting to the antiquary, followed this dispute, namely that Hugh of Arbuthnot and others of the confederates, being of kin to Macduff

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

Earl of Fife, claimed the privilege granted in such cases to the clan of Macduff. What that was we learn to be as follows: That all they of the clan of Macduff should have no judge in any action, except treason, but the Earl of Fife only, the chief of that clan, and that it should be lawful to them of that family, always to appeal home to their own clan. So the confederates found security to the Sheriff of Fife, the protector of this privilege, that they would answer according to the law, and thus escaped all other trouble of law by that privilege. They who enjoyed such privilege, according to Principal Arbuthnot, found security to "present thaimselfis to judgment for thair thrie headis; first, that promisit to preif that that war off the clane of Makduff, and thairfor aucht to haif the former privilege; next that that haif done no odious cryme quhy that suld be excludit from that privilege. Thridlie quhat sumeur, conforme to the law, the chief of the clane sall inyoine that sall obey it."

The writer adds "I haif collectet theis thingis out of the lretres of that privilege granted to Hew and his associatis in that slaughter quhilk (as ane old monument) ar keepit in the cofferis of Arbuthnot." It would appear however that these letters are not now in the family Charter Chest. But the full account given above may set at rest a question which has been raised by antiquaries, as to how far the privilege of the clan Macduff extended, i.e. whether it could be conceded to those who were guilty of premeditated murder. The circumstances narrated, clearly imply that the crime was done in hot blood, and therefore fell within the privilege.

The narrative further states that Hugh of Arbuthnot being sufficiently strengthened by law and force against the feud of Glenbervie, sustained the same until by the labours of judges and friends matters were arranged between the parties. A chapel was built at Drumlithe, in the Parish of Glenbervie, and richly endowed, and a priest was appointed, under the patronage of the parson of Glenbervie, to pray daily for the soul of John Mcvill, who had been slain in the feud.

Principal Arbuthnot gives us little more of Hugh's history; we learn however, that his wife was Margaret Keith, daughter to Robert Keith of Dumottar, Earl Marischal of Scotland, and predeceased him, dying in 1419. Hugh himself lived until 1447 and was succeeded by his son Robert, who survived his father only three years, as he died in 1450.

Robert was succeeded by his eldest son David, of whom nothing is known save as to his marriage. He died on the 8th October 1470.

Robert, who succeeded David, was a man of great ability; according to the family historian, a singular man and of great estimation in the Mearns, who by many good qualities and honourable deeds promoted the dignity of the family. He completed the Castle of Arbuthnot, founded in 1420 by Hugh of Arbuthnot, as above related. Built to the height of two stories, it was yet unfinished, and the rest of the house not much enlarged. Robert however at great expense thatched it, ornamented the head thereof with "eavies, galreis, and battilmentis" [original Latin, "murorum sum mitatem primis suggrandiis et pergulis"] after the manner of castles. He added also to the castle a new house, which he called "the game" [Latin, "geminam adem"]. He also built over against the castle another chamber or vault roofed with slate, the uppermost part of which he destined for a kitchen. He was also the first to build a "battaling wall" about the castle in front, where he also built a handsome vaulted gateway, with a chamber above it, called the "foirtoure" which was afterwards made higher, and slated, by his grandson. He was not less zealous however in making important additions to the church of the parish of Arbuthnot, to which he presented two bells. He built the aisle called the Aisle of Arbuthnot. He also provided a chapel and built a priest's chamber, endowing the chapel with a yearly sum of £10 Scots.

The late Bishop Forbes of Brechin, in his preface to the "Missale de Arbuthnot" afterwards to be referred to, speaks in high praise of the ecclesiastical buildings above noted, and gives a particular description of their modern aspect, but he does not specially indicate this Robert as the architect, though naming him as the endower of the chapel.

But though he was so zealous in ecclesiastical matters, the Laird of Arbuthnot did not neglect public affairs. In the Appendix to the Second Volume of Nisbet's Heraldry, which contains an account of the family of Arbuthnot, two royal letters are quoted, the one written by King James III., and the other by King James IV., neither of which documents are now in the family archives. In the first of these letters, dated 3 January 1483, King James III., then in the midst of his troubles with his brother the Duke of Albany, writes to the Laird to come to his assistance, in consequence of the treasonable gatherings to attack him. Also on 22 September 1490, King James IV., writes from Stirling in regard to the disturbances caused by the Earl of Marischal, Lord Forbes, and others, who had made a league against the King, at Dumbarton, urging the Laird of Arbuthnot to fortify and secure his castle for the King's service.

The Laird also was not unmindful to enlarge his estate, and did so by acquiring more than one considerable property. He was twice married; first to a daughter of Wischart of Pittaro, by whom he had one son, Ambrose, who died when young. His second wife was Margaret, or Mariota Scrimgeour, daughter of the Laird of Dudhope and Constable of Dundee, widow of Robert Graham of Fintry. Her character is highly eulogised by the family historian.

Besides good works at home the Laird of Arbuthnot and his wife seem to have dispensed their charity abroad, as we find documents indicating their reception into, and privileges from more than one religious order. [Nos. 22, 23, and 24 infra]. There is also an indulgence conferred for contributions to the expedition against the Turks, dated 30 April 1482 [No. 21 infra]. Under this Laird and his lady, the MS. known as the "Missale de Arbuthnot," and two other devotional MSS., one a Psalter and the other an "Office of the Blessed Virgin," were compiled [Nos. 1, 2, and 3 infra]. These were written by the chaplain, Mr. James Sybbald, Vicar of Arbuthnot.

It may be noted that the church for which these MSS. were written, and which was restored and added to as already stated, was dedicated to Saint Terman. By hagiologists he is called S. Terrenanus, and Torannan, or Ternog [in Irish], and is celebrated in ecclesiastical tradition as the disciple of S. Palladius, the apostle sent by Pope Celestine to the Christian Scots in A.D. 431, and as the Archbishop to the Picts. The episcopal seat, as we learn from other sources, was at Abernethy, in Strathern, and the diocese included the Pictish kingdom.

Robert of Arbuthnot died on 3rd November 1505, and was succeeded by his son James. His wife survived him until the year 1518.

James, the next Laird, was not so active as his father, though he seems to have inherited somewhat of the latter's religious zeal, as we find a license granted to him by King James V. to go on pilgrimage to the shrine of St. John of Amiens, in France, in the year 1520 [No. 26 infra]. He died, not long afterward, in March 1521.

Concerning the later members of the family we have little particular information from the family muniments. But a successor of Principal Arbuthnot's in the living of Arbuthnot, also named Alexander Arbuthnot, who died about 1694, gives us a continuation of the family history to the death of the second viscount. The original MS. of this continuation is not, however, among the papers of the family, but in the library of the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh. From a copy made in 1820 for the late Viscount Arbuthnot, we gather one or two items of interest.

James of Arbuthnot was succeeded by his son Robert, of whom the chief thing that we learn is that he was thrice married, and by his second and third wives had eighteen sons and daughters. He however took some part in the political movements of the time, as we find a letter to him from James Earl of Arran, Governor of Scotland, dated 13 March 1549, desiring him to meet the Governor at Edinburgh, to march against an expected invasion of the English [No. 27 infra]. He adhered to the King's party in the troubled time following Queen Mary's flight into England. We learn this from a letter [No. 28 infra] dated 13th July 1568, signed by the Regent Murray, summoning the Laird to Parliament. There is also a letter to him dated 20 December 1575, from the Regent Morton, desiring him to set at liberty one of the "broken men" of the borders who had been in his custody [No. 29 infra]. Robert died on the 15th of October 1579, and was succeeded by his son Andrew, who is described as an excellent son of an excellent father, for by his honest industry, and prudent management of his affairs, he augmented his fortune very much. Probably this last circumstance procured for him the notice of King James VI., who addressed several letters to him. In the first of these, dated 7th May 1583, the King sends his servant, Alexander Young, on a special mission, and to obtain a proof of the Laird's good will [No. 30 infra]. On 14th November 1588 [No. 32 infra] His Majesty summoned the Laird to attend Parliament, and on 7th April 1589, he is charged to join a force of his Majesty's subjects to go against conspirators who are dangerous to the true religion, &c. [No. 33 infra]. On the 30th August 1589, on the plea that his marriage is now concluded, and the Queen hourly expected to arrive, the King desires that the Laird will contribute towards the expenses of the occasion "sic quantitie of fatt beif and mutton on futt, ryld foulis, and veynysown or other stuff meitt for this purpos as possible ye may provide or furnishe of your awin or be your moyane." [No. 34 infra]. In October, in place of the Queen arriving, the King sailed to meet her, and on his return we find a second requisition, dated 11th May 1590, for provisions for the Queen's coronation, to be forwarded by the 18th instant, and to be delivered "at the auld chaucehouse" [mint] to Andrew Melville, master of the household. [No. 35 infra].

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

Andrew of Arbuthnott died on the 6th of March 1606, and was succeeded by his eldest son Robert, who was knighted by King James VI. in 1609. In the account of the Arbuthnott family, printed in the Appendix to Nisbet's Heraldry, Vol. II. there is printed at length a letter, dated from Greenwich, 14th June 1608, addressed to the "Laird of Arbuthnott," in which the King earnestly desires the Laird to be present in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, summoned to meet on the 28th July following, at Linlithgow "as weil for composing of the present differences in the same, as for some order to be taken with this greit incesse and growthe of papists within that kingdome." The King further adds, "we are to desyre you earnestly . . . by your counsell and advice to furder the pacifying of all question that is presently in the church, and to assist such courses, that sall be proponed for suppressing of contraire professors. Wherein noways doubting bot your owne zeale and affection to the trowth professed sall be motives sufficient, and ye sall also therewith gayne our special thanks according, as ye will learn more particularly from . . . the Erle of Dunbar . . . our Commissioner to that meeting." That letter is not now in the family archives.

According to genealogists, including even the family historian, Sir Robert Arbuthnott died in September 1615, but the family monuments shew that he survived till 1631. Being without issue, however, he in December 1615 resigned the estate in favour of his nephew Robert, son of his next brother James, who was knighted during his uncle's lifetime. The family historian comments on the character of the first Sir Robert, and his Christian deathbed.

Of his nephew and successor the historian also speaks in high terms. He was carefully educated in France and bore the character of a well accomplished gentleman, of a stately comely personage, and of a courteous affable behaviour. He was hospitable, prudent, eloquent, so that he was always chosen by the rest of the barons to represent them before the highest courts of the kingdom. He died comparatively young in 1633. We learn nothing of his history from the family monuments, but that he was twice married, having issue only by his second wife. There is, however, an interesting letter (without date) written to him by Peter Bruce, D.D., sometime Principal of the College of St. Leonard's, at St. Andrew's, who was one of the Court of High Commission [No. 40 infra].

The son of the preceding, also called Robert, was by King Charles I., on 16th November 1641, created Viscount Arbuthnott, Lord Inverberrie. He does not appear to have been an active partisan, or to have taken much share in public affairs. There is, however, one long letter [No. 41 infra] addressed to him, by W. Rait, the Laird of Halgreen, giving the result of an heritors' meeting held to consider assessments, and the requisition for recruits made in the shire, for the Earl Marischall's regiment. It gives a glimpse of the exactions made in such cases. The Earl threatens, that if his demands were not complied with, that "a sojourn of ffortnight" should be sent, with two regiments, to quarter in the shire.

Robert first Viscount of Arbuthnott died in 1655, and was succeeded by his eldest son, also called Robert, as second Viscount, who apparently took a more active share in local and other interests. There is a letter dated 3rd September 1656, signed by General Monk, addressed to "Colonell Ralph Cobbet, Governor of "Dundee," in relation to the monthly assessment for Kincairdine, and which no doubt came into the Vis-count's hands as one of those authorized by the Council to dispose of the money raised for defraying public engagements [No. 42 infra]. His Lordship also seems to have sought, without success, to be placed on the local "table" or ecclesiastical committee of his district, as the famous Mr. Samuel Rutherford writes from St. Andrew's that there was then no vacancy, or it would have been given to his lordship [No. 43 infra]. The Viscount also acted as High Sheriff of the shire of Kincairdine, being addressed as such in an order from the Protector's Council, dated 23 December 1658, desiring him to distribute certain letters and declarations to the respective Presbyteries in his Sherifdom [No. 44 infra]. As one of the heritors in the parish of Kinneff, he with others consulted the Archdeacon of St. Andrew's as to a successor to the lately deceased Mr. James Granger, minister of that parish, who so faithfully secreted and saved the regalia, during the Commonwealth in Scotland. The Archdeacon of St. Andrew's was then Mr. Andrew Honyman, afterwards Bishop of Orkney, who was in 1668 wounded by an assassin's bullet, intended for Archbishop Sharp. One remark in the Archdeacon's reply [No. 45 infra] is curious, as his own brother was presented to the vacant charge. He says, "Your Lordship may be sure that in presenting I will labour your satisfaction; for the tyme I am not cleare to present any, but shall do it before the right expyre legallie."

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

The Viscount was also concerned in military movements after the restoration. On 9th April 1664 Andrew, second Lord Fraser of Stanwood and Munchells, writes expressing regret that the shire should still be so much troubled with quartering, and advising that the gentlemen of the Mearns should petition the Council regarding "broken men," that orders might be given to suppress such persons [No. 46 infra]. Lord Arbuthnott also, as captain of one of the militia troops in the shire of Kincairdine, and Lord Marischall's part of Aberdeen, received instructions from the Privy Council as to the movements of the troop, dated 27 April 1676 [No. 37 infra]; and on 21st June 1679, the Earl of Aboyne writes appointing a rendezvous on the next day at Laurencekirk [No. 47 infra].

Robert second Viscount of Arbuthnott died on 16th June 1682, his last public act we learn from the papers being to take the test, which he did on 5th December 1681, as certified by a document of that date [No. 38 infra]. His eldest son, also named Robert, succeeded as third Viscount, from whom the present Viscount directly descends.

A few words may be added as to the present state of the Arbuthnott family muniments. By direction of the late John Viscount of Arbuthnott they were arranged and carefully inventoried in 1820-23. The inventory consists of three large volumes, narrating the writs and titles of the family estates, which with few exceptions are of little or no public interest. The entries below, under the heading of "Ancient Charters," are copied from this inventory, as on my inspection of the original muniments at Arbuthnott House, the first twelve charters specified in that inventory could not then be found, and Lord Arbuthnott could not recollect if they had been lent to any person. Besides that inventory there are three similar volumes of inlaid papers, one containing original royal and official letters, and the other two containing original family letters, accounts, and papers, the more interesting of which are hereafter noted. There are also, as already indicated, various separate MSS., which are duly reported on.

The following report is arranged thus:—

1. MS. Books in the possession of Lord Arbuthnott.
2. Ancient Charters.
3. Royal letters, Ecclesiastical Absolutions, and other official papers, from 1482 to 1681.
4. Family and other letters, and miscellaneous papers.

1. MANUSCRIPT BOOKS IN THE POSSESSION OF LORD ARBUTHNOTT.

Of these, three may be named together, as being written by the same scribe, and about the same date, the work known as the "Missale de Arbuthnott" and two other devotional MSS., mentioned by Bishop Forbes in his preface to that work, printed by him in 1864.

1. The first in date is described as a "Psalter of the Chapel of our Lady in the Parish Church of S. Ternan" of Arbuthnott, in the diocese of St. Andrew's. It is an octavo containing 142 leaves of vellum, in the original binding. According to the colophon at the end, it was written and finished on March 4th 1482, by James

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

Sybbald, then the chaplain of the family. A curious inscription on the last leaf runs thus: "Sit liber hic donec fluvius formica marinos ebibat, et totum testudo perambularet orbem. Robertus de Arbuthnot." A sentence written on a blank leaf at the beginning of the MS. states that the book was handed over "ad sacrum sacellum gloriose Virginis" by the founder of the chapel, in 1506, the year of his death.

2. A volume described as an "Office of the Blessed Virgin, which was used in her chapel beside the choir of the Parish Church of S. Ternan of Arbuthnot" in the diocese of S. Andrew's, which is a small folio containing 80 leaves of vellum, in the original binding, covered with the ancient linen slip or chemisette. It has still attached to it the original veils of silk or crape to protect the illuminated pages. The illuminations, according to Bishop Forbes, are six in number, and rudely drawn. From a rubric at the end of the volume he infers that it was written between 1471 and 1484.

3. The MS. known as the "Missale de Arbuthnot," or, according to its full title, "Liber Ecclesie Beati Terrenani de Arbuthnot, Missale secundum usum ecclesie Sancti Andree in Scotia." The book is still in the original binding, and is a "large folio of 246 leaves, written on vellum in two columns in a remarkably clear and distinct hand." A colophon sets forth that the work was written and completed on 22nd February 1491, at the Church of Arbuthnot, to the praise and honor of the most blessed Confessor Terrenanus, Archbishop, patron of the said Church, by James Sybbald, vicar of the same. Who St. Ternan was has already been stated. As to the ritualistic peculiarities of the Missal, and the points wherein, while following the use of Salisbury, it yet differs therefrom, such can scarcely be discussed here, but they are duly set forth in Bishop Forbes' preface to the printed work. One discrepancy however may be referred to, namely, that the Calendar of this Missal, which is curious and copious, differs greatly from the Proprium Sanctorum, containing many more Scotch Saints and fewer English ones. Among other instances the following occur: The feast of S. Botolph, a Saxon Saint, is found here, and not in the Sarum. The office of Saint Palladius, the ancient Apostle to the Scots [July 6], is not in the Sarum Missal. The office for the Eleven thousand Virgins [11 October] contains a curious sequence beginning "Virginalis turma sexus," not found in the Sarum, York, or Hereford Offices. On 25 October, the commemoration of the Translation of S. John of Beverley is omitted. Bishop Forbes queries if this be a silent protest against the supremacy of the metropolitical power of York, seeing that the saint's banner was borne against Scotland at the battle of the Standard, and other disastrous fields. On 9th November, a feast of S. Salvator occurs, the mass in which is declared by the Very Reverend Dr. Rock to be "a great liturgical curiosity." It commemorates the miraculous bleeding of a crucifix which "had been blasphemously wounded by some Jews at Beirút, 'tempore Constantinii junioris,' as related in 'the acts of the second Council of Nice.'" This feast is not found in any of the three Offices above mentioned. It has a fine sequence, beginning "Christo vero Salvatori."

At the beginning of the book there occurs an anathema in the Scotch language, which we learn from the heading is to be solemnly published in the churches four times in the year. It solemnly excommunicates all evil doers with bell, book, and candle, but reserves the greater part of its fulminations for those who meddle with the teinds or hinder the disposal of these by the parsons at their own will, or who disturb the freedom of the church in any way. Among other general clauses there is one directed against those that "castis" their children at church doors, or elsewhere, to perish, and one against those who make false charters to disinherit any man of lands or goods.

4. The history of the family of Arbuthnot already referred to, the full title of which is "Originis et incrementi Arbythnoticæ Familie Descriptio Historica, ubi verè Nobilitatis ratio et series succincte ac explicate pertractatur." The last clause refers, as already stated, to a dissertation on the various orders of nobility, which prefaces the proper history of the family. A full description of this MS. has been given above.

5. A MS. entitled "A continuation of the genealogie of the noble family of Arbuthnot. By Mr. Alexander Arbuthnot, sometime minister at the Kirk of Arbuthnot." This is however only a copy, the original being, as already stated, among the MSS. in the Library of the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh.

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

6. A MS. containing a politico-theological treatise, entitled "The case of Praying for all actual Governors as such, without regard to their Right or Titles, impartially consider'd; In a Letter, To The Reverend Mr. Patrick Cockburn, A.M., Minister of St. Paul's Chapel in Aberdeen: occasioned by a late controversy concerning his sermon of the Duty and Benefit of praying for our Superiors. By a disinterested By-stander and a sincere Friend to him in the Truth." The MS. is written in a distinct hand, on 107 pages of foolscap paper. It is dated "London 29 May 1738." There is no clue to the authorship of it. The subject matter is a series of objections to the principles stated in the sermon referred to. Mr. Cockburn seems to have laid it down as a broad rule, that they who pray for their actual Governors (whatever Right they have to that Authority) come nearer to the scripture doctrine than those who refuse so to pray. This principle the writer of the MS. combats, through a long series of arguments and quotations from the sermon, and from various writers, because such principle, if strictly applied, would sanction prayer for Oliver Cromwell or any other Usurper, to which he stoutly objects. His teaching is that those only are Kings and Governors who are so according to the fundamental constitution of their respective kingdoms, and therefore only such ought to be prayed for.

II. ANCIENT CHARTERS.

7. Definitive sentence pronounced by Patrick of Dunfermline, Henry of Aberbrothock, Rimbald of Scone, and Guido of Lindores, Abbots; and Thomas of St. Andrew's, John of May, Berengarius of Restenoth, Priors; and Ranulf Archdeacon of St. Andrew's and the deans and clergy who were present in synod at Perth the 11th April 1206, in the action debated before them between William bishop of St. Andrew's, on one part, and Duncan of Aberbrothock, on the other part, concerning the land of Aberbrothock which is called Kirketun, which the said Bishop claimed of right, and asserted that Duncan had despoiled. Parties being heard, and the truth being fully inquired into and understood, through unexceptionable witnesses, the synod published a definitive sentence, adjudging both the possession and property of the said land "et hominum qui in ea manserint" to belong to the Church of St. Andrew's and to the said Bishop William, and imposing perpetual silence on Duncan and his successors. The attestations of the witnesses are appended at length, John de Hastinkes being the first sworn. [No. 1 of Inventory of Arbuthnot.]

8. Charter by Bernard the son of William the son of Bernard, granting and confirming to the Abbot and Convent of Aberbrothock, two oxgates of land, which are called Rath, of the territory of Katerlyn, which his father William had bestowed on the monks in pure and perpetual alms. Witnesses, Duncan of Abirbuthnot and others. Dated before 1214. [No. 2 of Inventory.]

9. Charter by Robert son of Warnehal and Richenda his spouse, to the Abbot and Convent of Aberbrothock, in free and perpetual alms, of their whole fee [feodum] in the Parish of Fordoun in Mearns. Witnesses, Sir Duncan of Abirbuthnot, Hugh his son, and others. Dated about 1238. [No. 3 of Inventory.]

10. Charter by Cristina, daughter of Walter Corbet, with consent of her husband William son of Earl Patrick [fifth Earl of Dunbar], and of her mother Alicia de Valonius, conveying to the church and canons of St. Andrews, in pure alms, Martin son of Vniat, a tenant of the said canons in their land "in villa mauricii," with the sons and daughters of the said Martin, who had been a serf [natiuum] of her father the late Walter Corbet. Witnesses, Alwin of Aberbuteunanth and others. Dated before 1241. [No. 4.]

11. Charter by Hugh, called the Blond, lord of Aberbuthenoth, to the Church and Monks at Arbroath, in pure and perpetual alms, of one oxgate of land in which is situated the Church of Garvech, with the patronage of said church, and with pasture for 100 sheep, four horses, 10 oxen, 20 cows, and one bull, with fuel and other easements. Dated at Arbroath, 2nd August 1282. [No. 5.]

12. Charter by William [Fraser] Bishop of St. Andrew's confirming the above grant to the Monks of Arbroath. Dated at Monymail, 26th September 1283. [No. 6.]

13. Charter by Agnes de Montfort to Symon called Shaklock, of the half davat land of Slains, within the tenement of Kinnef. Dated on Sunday, 20th July 1315. [No. 7.]

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

14. Charter by Robert, styled "Janitor de Kincardyn" in le Mernes, to Duncan Kemble, burgess of Aberdeen, of the lands of Arduithie, to be holden of the said Robert and his heirs, for the payment of sixpence sterling yearly. Witnesses. Sir Alexander Fraser, sheriff of Mearns, Symon his brother, and John of Benham. Dated about 1330. [No. 6.]

15. Charter by Philip of Abirbuthnot of that ilk, conveying to the Carmelite Friars of Aberdeen, an annual rent of 13 shillings and fourpence sterling, yearly, payable from his whole land of Abirbuthnot, towards the repair of the Church of said Friars. Dated at Aberdeen, 25 April 1355. [No. 9.]

16. Charter by David II. King of Scots confirming the immediately preceding grant to the Carmelite Friars. Dated at Aberdeen, 17 August 1366. [No. 10.]

17. Charter by David II. confirming the Charter [No. 13 supra] by Agnes de Montfort to Symon called Shaklock. [No. 11.]

Nos. 7 to 17 inclusive, of the above, not now found in the family archives.

18. Charter by Queen Mary to Robert Beaton of Creich, Captain of the Castle and Palace of Falkland, and his heirs erecting the lands and village of Fordoun into a burgh of barony, with power to the inhabitants thereof to pass and repass along the wood at the foot of the hill of Fordoun, as also to buy and sell wine, wax, bread, lint, and wool, and all other merchandise, and to have bakers, brewers, and all other artificers necessary pertaining to a free burgh, with power to the burgesses thereof to elect bailies and other officers necessary for the government thereof, and to have a weekly market, and a yearly fair on the day of S. Palladius, with power to levy all tolls, customs, and dues whatsoever, of the said weekly market and fair, and lastly, with power to the said Robert Beaton and his aforesaid to let the lands and burrow roods of the said town of Fordoun. To be holden of the Queen and her successors in free burghage. [No. 358].

19. Retour of the valuation of the lands spiritual and temporal, of the County of Kincardine, made before William Earl Marischal, Sheriff Principal of Kincardine, and David Barclay of Mathers, deputy to the Earl, by Robert Arbuthnot of that ilk, Archibald Douglas of Glenbervie, John Wishart of Pitarro, John Strachan of Thornton, George Straiton of that ilk, David Wood of Craig, the foresaid David Barclay, Robert Graham of Morphee, John Wood of Fettercairn, Alexander Burnet of Leys, John Strachan of Monboddio, Walter Bisset ffar of Easter Kinneff, Andrew Stewart of Logie-cowie, Robert Melville of Harvieston, William Hay of Urie, Alexander Bannerman of Elsieck, David Strachan of Westmeston, John Middleton in Kilhill, and Robert Keith in Barnhill, by which the said persons of inquest return the valuation of the said county as follows: the church lands of Arbuthnot pertaining to Robert Arbuthnot of that ilk in feu farm of the Archbishop of St. Andrew's, 10 shillings, and other church lands, according to their respective values, the Archbishop of St. Andrew's being the chief superior; and the temporal lands of said county, namely, the barony of Arbuthnot, 20*l*.; and others, including lands pertaining in property to the Sovereign, within the Thanedomes of Fettercairn and Aberluthnot. And these lands were returned in time of peace. Council House of Inverbervie, 4th March 1554. From the books of the County of Kincardine by Mr. John Fullartoun, scribe. [No. 360.]

20. Cognition taken by Mr. Alexander Arbuthnot, Principal of the College of Aberdeen, Paul Frazer Chanter of Brechin, and others, commissioners appointed by the commissioners of Edinburgh, to examine the writs and evidents then in the house of Arbuthnot and to make an inventory of the same. Whereupon they put certain writs respecting the liferent rights of Helen Clephan, relict of Robert Arbuthnot of that ilk, into a Flanders chest in the wardrobe room, and delivered the key to Alexander Bishop of Brechin, then husband of the said Helen, the said chest and writs to remain in the house of Arbuthnot for her behoof, and Andrew Arbuthnot then of that ilk to permit access to them on security that they be replaced, and further the said commissioners put the writs and evidents respecting the said Andrew of Arbuthnot into the Charter Chest and delivered to him the key thereof. Dated at Arbuthnot, 6th February 1580. [No. 456.]

III. ECCLESIASTICAL ABSOLUTIONS, ROYAL AND OFFICIAL LETTERS, &c.

21. Indulgence by Brother John Litster of the minor brethren of the Observantines in Scotland, and Brother Emir de Hamel of the same order in those parts beyond the mountains, to Robert Arbuthnot of that ilk and Marion Scrymgeour his lady for contributing to the Expedition to the Holy Land against the Turks, with the form of absolution granted thereupon. Arbuthnot, 30 April 1482. [No. 65, Inventory of Arbuthnot Writs.]

22. Letter by the Vicar General of the Order of the Observantines, receiving Robert Arbuthnot and his wife into the privileges of that order. In Christo sibi carissimis Roberto de Arbuthnot domino eiusdem, eiusque sponse ac vtriusque sexus prolibus, Deo ac beato Francisco deuotis, Frater Johannes Grohin, Reuerendissimi patris ministri generalis ordinis sacri minorum, super omnes fratres eiusdem ordinis Cismontanarum pertinentes de observantia nuncupatos Generalis Vicarius, Salutem in Domino, ac bonis perfrui semperiternis ferendis vestre deuotionis affectus quem ad nostrum geritis ordinem exigencia digna requirit, et quia in temporalibus non possumus vicem vestre caritati respondere, in spiritualibus tamen quantum nobis auctore Deo suppetit, prout que nostris apud Deum seruamus desideris, et quantum vestra promeretur caritas vestris beneficiis gratitudini debito compensemus. Quapropter vos ad nostram confraternitatem recipio, in vita pariter et in morte, plenam et specialem participationem omnium carismatum et operum meritoriorum, videlicet, missarum, orationum, diuinorum officiorum, deuotionum, suffragiorum, ieiuniorum, vigiliarum, disciplinarum, ceterorumque bonorum spiritualium, tenore presentium vobis graciosè conferendo, que per fratres michi subditos, sorores Sancte Clare, necnon fratres et sorores de penitencia, fieri dederit auctor omnium bonorum Dei filius, et multiplici suffragiorum adiuti presidio, et hic augmentum gracie et in futuro mereamini eterne vite premia possidere, volens et dum obitus vester quem Deus in longum ad bonorum operum lucrosa exercicia protrahere dignetur in nostris denunciabitur capitalis pro vobis fiant omnes eedem que pro precipuis benefactoribus nostris et in nostro ordine hactenus laudabiliter fieri consuetum. In cuius concessionis testimonium sigillum prelati officii mei cum manu mea duxi presentibus appendendum. Datum in Conuentu nostro Sancte Marie de Angelis apud Tholosam provincie Aquitanie, tempore generalis capitali super festo Penthecostes inibi celebrati, Anno Domini millesimo quadringentesimo octuagesimo septimo. (Signed) J. Smaloyssel de mandato R. p. v. q.

23. Licence by the Pope to Robert Arbuthnot to have a portable altar for the celebration of mass, etc. Julianus miseratione diuina Episcopus Ostiensis dilectis in Christo nobilibus Roberto de Arbuthnot laico, domino temporalis dicti loci et eius imprensiarum vxori diocesis Sancti Andree salutem in Domino; sincere deuotionis affectus quem ad Romanam geritis ecclesiam, quantum cum Deo possumus fauorabiliter annuamus, hinc est quod nos deuotis vestris supplicationibus inclinati vt liceat nobis et uestrum cultibet habere altare portabile, cum debita reuerentia super quo in locis congruentibus et honestis, per proprium vel alium sacerdotem ydoneum, missam et alia diuina officia sine iuris alieni preiudicio, in uestra et cuiuslibet uestrum ac familiarium uestrorum domesticorum presentia positis facere, celebrari auctoritate Domini Pape cuius penitentie curam gerimus, et de eius speciali mandato super hoc vniuersi uocis oraculo nobis facto. Deuotione uestre tenore presentium indulgemus. Datum. Rome apud Sanctum Marcum sub sigillo officii penitentie. Nonas Maii Pontificatus Domini Innocentii Pape viii Anno Septimo.

24. Letter of Reception of Robert Arbuthnot and his wife, into the fraternity of St. John of Jerusalem. Deuotis in Christo sibi dilectis nos Frater Willelmus Knollis miles, preceptor sacre domus beati Iohannis in Jerusalem, salutem et augmentum continuum celestium gracionum exigentibus uestrarum deuotionum affectibus, quos ad nostrum ordinem antedictum piis intentionibus geritis et caritatis operibus ostenditis, et quod nos temporaliter retribuere non valamus in terris, saltem oracionum suffragiis compensemus in celis, hinc est quod vos in filium et filiam suscipiendo spirituales vos Robertum Arbuthnot et Mariotam Scrymgeour in fratrem et sororem totius ordinis antedicti aggregamus, vigore cuius fraternitatis eritis absoluti per confessorum ydoneum de omnibus uestris confessis contritis et oblitis, per tres dies solemnes anni videlicet die ceno Domini, die apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et die assumptionis beate Marie Virginis, et in articulo mortis, tocens quociens eritis constituti cum multis aliis priuilegiis que causa breuitatis in presenti scripto imponere non possumus. In cuius rei testimonium sigillum officii nostri presentibus est affixum.

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

Forma absolucionis in vita et in mortis articulo. Misericorditer, etc. Dominus noster Jhesus Christ qui dedit potestatem ligandi atque solvendi ipse te absoluit, et ego te ob solito autoritate apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et totius matris ecclesie, atque virtute istius privilegii papalis in quantum claus ecclesie se extendunt in hac parte et sitis absoluti ante tribunal Domini nostri Jhesus Christ, et habeatis vitam eternam in secula seculorum.

25. Receipt by Andrew [Stewart] Bishop of Caithness, Commendator of Kelso and Ferne, and Treasurer of King James the Fourth to Master James Wischart of Pettarowe, for one hundred merks Scots, paid on behalf of James Arbuthnot of that ilk, as composition for new infentment given to him of the barony of Arbuthnot. Dated at Linlithgow, 17 May 1512.

Signed, "Andras epūs cathan them."

Episcopal seal impressed.

26. License under the Privy Seal of King James V. setting forth that "forsamekle as our Ionit James V. Arbuthnot of that ilk is of our benevolence and licence speciall quhilkis we gif to him, to pas in his pilgrimage to Sanct Johne of Ameenice in the realme of France and other placis beyond sey in his pilgrimage and erandis he has thare ado. We have thairfor takin under our ferme pece, speciall protectionn, maintenance, suple, defence, and safeguard, the said James Arbuthnot of that ilk and all sundry his "landis," etc.; all actions affecting him or his, to be respited between the date hereof, the day of his return to Scotland, and 40 days thereafter; the said James further to be freed from all compearance before any of the King's Judges, etc. Dated at Edinburgh, the 23rd November 1520.

(Signed) A. Lygait, Ja. Cancelar, Ar. Erle of Hantle, C. Erl of Ergyle, G. byschop of Aberd.

27. Letter by James Hamilton Earl of Arran, Governor of Scotland, to the Laird of Arbuthnot, informing him "that thair is ane army of Ingland makand ready" quhilk intendis schortlie to invaid this realme and "cum in the invart partis thairfor to byrne, hery, and "destroy the Quenis liegis," and indicating the Governor's intention to pass forward himself to hinder them, and summoning the laird and his friends to be in Edinburgh on 13th April next, with 40 days provisions. Dated at Edinburgh, 13 March 1549.

"Signed, your gwd frend James G."

28. Letter by James Stewart Earl of Murray, Regent of Scotland, to the Laird of Arbuthnot, intimating the approach of Parliament, "quhairn diners materis ar to "be entreitit to the glorie of God, the promoting of the King our lordis autoritie and service and the "publict quietnes and commodite of this his realme, at "quhilk parliament it is convenient that all nobill men "and gentilmen quha hes declarit thame obedient to "his hienes and his autoritie be present," and begging the Laird as "one of this nowmer" to be in Edinburgh on 14th August next, prepared to remain till the end of the Parliament. Dated at Edinburgh, the 13th July 1568.

Signed "James, Regent."

29. Letter by James Earl of Morton, Regent of Scotland, to the Laird of Arbuthnot, stating that new surieties had been received from the "brokin men in "habiting the bourdour, quhilkis we have directit to "be kept in other places," and desiring the laird to set free "Thome Johnnestoun sone to David of the Bankis" now in the laird's custody, that "he may depart hame "to his duelling place or friends at his pleasour." Dated at Holyrood House, 20 December 1575.

Signed by the Regent.

30. Letter from King James the Sixth directed to "our richt traist friend the Laird of Arbuthnett" sending his "servitour Alexander Young for ane speciall "erand of ouris to be communicat to you quhairn we "desyre you firmilie to credit him and that be him we "may understand and have a pruf of your gude will "at this tyme (the occasioun so craving it) as ye will "do ws acceptabill and gude pleasour to be thankfullie "rememberit quhen youre erand may fall in our way," etc. Dated at Holyrood House, 7th May 1583. Signed by the King.

31. Letter by King James the Sixth ratifying, with the consent of Parliament, a charter of donation made by the King, with consent of the deceased Mathew Earl of Lennox his highness' grandfather, Regent for the time, to Mr. David Lindesay, Minister at Leith, his heirs and assignees, of all lands and others formerly belonging to the Friars Carmelite, sometime situate beside the Burgh of Innerberrie, together with a recent confirmation and new donation of the said lands. Decerning the said charter to be of full force and effect to the said Mr.

David and his foresaids that they may possess the said lands, etc.; subscribed by the King at the day of A.D. 1587.

LORD
ARBUTHNOTT.

32. Letter from King James the Sixth, to the Laird of Arbuthnot beginning "Traist freind we greit yow "hartlie weil. Being desyrous to put some spedie "ordour to the reformatioun of sundre thingis that ar "amiss bayth in religioun and policie and therin to "use the adwyse of sum specialis of our nobilitie [etc.] "best affected to religioun and the Common weil of "this our realme," and summoning the Laird to Holyrood House on the 24th November "instant to assist "ws with your goud counsaill" etc. Dated at Holyrood House, the 14th November 1588. Signed by the King.

33. Letter from King James VI. to the Laird of Arbuthnot, advising him that "thair is bandis, practizes, "conspiracieis, conventicles, and conventions of men in "armes in sundrie partis of our realme without our "previe or allowance (quhatsoever hes bene reportit "in the contrair) quhilk apperis dangerous to the trew "religioun, and to the inquieting of our persone and "estait, pretendent our name to cloik thair vnlachfull "doings and to draw our lieges the rather to follow "thame, to thair greit inconvenient and trable of our "hale realme," desiring the Laird with his kin, friends, and servants and all the force he can muster "armit with "speirs and hagsbutts" to come with all possible diligence to the King at Edinburgh. Dated at Edinburgh, 7 April 1589.

34. Letter from King James the Sixth to the Laird of Arbuthnot, informing him that his "marriage now "at Godis pleasour being coucludit and the Quene our "bedfellow hourlie looked for to arrive, it becummis "ws to haue sic as accompanies hir, weil and honor- "able interteiniet, as our ambassadouris hes fund the "lyk in prufi already" for which reason the King desires that the Laird "will send hither to the help of "the honorable charges to be maid in this actioun sic "quantitie of fatt beif and muttoun on fatt, vyld "follis and venysoun or vther stuf meit for this "parpois as possiblie ye may," and that "with all dili- "gence" the same to be delivered to Mr. Walter Neasch, master of the "lairdner," appointed to receive the same and to give his "ticket thairepon, that we may "particularlie knau the gude wills of all men and "acknowledge it accordingly when tyme serves;" also the Master of the Household is to be informed "quhat "sal be lipuit [trusied] for, that we be nocht dissa- "pointit" etc. Dated at Edinburgh, the 30th August 1589.

35. Letter from King James Sixth to the Laird of Arbuthnot, informing the latter that "sen our vuage, "praised be God, hes bene prosperous, the day of the "coronation of the Quene our dearest spous approach- "ing vpon the xvii day of this present, we request "yow . . . that ye will not fail to haif hither sic support "of stuf and prouisoun as ye haif alreddy or is able "to gett according to our former lettres" to be deliv- "ered to the Master of the Household, Mr. Andrew Melville, at the "auid cuinze house" [Mint] who should receive the same and make report in writing of "euery "mammis furthwardnes and guidwill in this behalf," etc. Dated at Holyrood House, 11th May 1590.

36. Letter by the Privy Council of Scotland giving "full licence and libertie to Robert Vicecount of Ar- "buthnot, Sir John Carnegie of Craig, Sir Alexander Carnegie of Balmamoe, William Rait of Halgrein, "and Robert Arbuthnot of Fyndowrie, and suche as "shal be in eache of thair companies, to eat and feed "upon flesche during this forbidden tyme of Lentron, " . . . And also vpon wednesdaies, frydaies, and sat- "terdaies for the space of a yeir efter the dait heirof," without any crime or danger to be incurred by any of the parties, notwithstanding any statute or proclamation to the contrary. At Edinburgh, the day of March 1642. Signed by the Earl of Loudoun, Chancellor, the Marquis of Argyll, and several other members of the Council.

37. Letter by the Privy Council of Scotland to "The Viscount of Arbuthnot, Captain of one [of] the "Militia troops in the shyr of Kincardine and Mar- "shall's part of Aberdeen," intimating a rendezvous of the militia troop under his command, to be kept at Aberdeen on 3rd June next, at which "the muster "maistour generall, or one deputed by him," is to attend, and desiring the viscount to give usual notice to the Commissioners of the militia and others interested. Dated at Edinburgh, 27 April 1676. (Signed) Rothes. Cancell.

Endorsed on the above order is a memorandum by the Viscount that the letter was received on 19 May, and on the 20th an order was directed to Thos. Burnet to "advertise" the leaders to send their proportions to a previous rendezvous, and that they meet the troop at the Bridge of Dee upon 2nd June to keep the general rendezvous on the 3rd before the muster master general and the collector, a previous rendezvous being appointed at Boghall on 30th May, and the Commissioners to meet there.

LORD
ARBUTH-
NOTT.

38. Certificate dated at Edinburgh, 5th December 1681, stating that on that day "Robert Viscount of Arbutnott did take and signe the Test appoynted by the sext Act of this current Parliament, as being anyways concerned in publick debts that he might have the benefite thereof," and that "in presence of the Lord President of the Session," etc. Signed, Will. Paterson.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS LETTERS, etc.

39. Letter from the Master of Marischall to the Laird of Arbutnott, in which he says that he understands the latter is willing that his eldest son should spend a part of his time in the Master's Company, "quhairinto I think my self oblist wnto yow assurand you that he shall be no owerways visit and tratit thane my self" and shall laik no thing . . . for his fordrance that lrys in my power. Fardermoir the minister our cousing schew me ye wald haue knawin in quhat equipage concerning his hors, servants, and claisit war meit he suld be; my opinion is that he will nocht mistar [need] any servants in respect myne sall haue that command to weit wpon him; and also concerning his hors, indeid I think he will mistar tasy in respect of the Kingis grace daylie ryding, quhairat both I and he man continually be present; as to his manner of cleything, in that he may haue his awin fre will yit seing he will be esteemed as off my company I think it will nocht be onmeit to be in black, bot in all thais ye sall do as ye think guid . . . I suppose that I sall nocht gang to the court quhill efter my Lord Marris bryddel quhill will be in the end of this moneth so that in the mense tyme gif ye and he thinks guid he may cum over heir and pas the tyme in hunting or any oder pastyme as sall occurre," etc. From Dunottar, 22nd October 1580. Signed, "Master Marshall."

40. A Letter to "the Laird of Arbutnott, younger" [father of the first Viscount], from Peter Bruce, D.D. sometime Principal of the College of St. Leonard's at St. Andrew's, expressing his sense of the Laird's friendship, and his regret "that malitius evil suld be" "ane hindrans to you from manie guid purposis and vertuns exerceysis, yet quhat evil is so great save the fyre of hell of quhilk sum gud is nott to be extract," etc. The writer expresses the comfort he has amidst infirmity and hastening old age in the thought that his family will find a friend in the Laird. After some remarks relative to the Laird's own family, he says "I have send to the Laird [Sir Robert Arbutnott, elder] the rosmarie quhilk ye wrett for, and wes not sent in my absens because yon thoctit it suld haue bein gottin in Dundie, and ane tobaco box quhilk I pray you request him receive in gud part as a poor takin of my maist hartely affection to him," etc. Dated at St. Andrew's, October 18 [about 1630]. "Yours if can be, mair nor myne awin. Peter Bruce."

41. Letter to the first Viscount of Arbutnott from the Laird of Halgrein, stating that he and all the heritors in the shire were much obliged for his lordship's communication, dated 20 January, regarding the levy of recruits for Lord Marischall's regiment, and narrating what had been done since; that the heritors had met and consulted, and had presented to Lord Marischall certain answers, signed by 20 of their number, setting forth that as "my Lord and his Lieutenant-Colonel did crane a recrue to his regiment, we had tryed and found that ther wes of the first and second lenies 8 scor deficientis and moneys be his captaines and vnder officiaris taken for them in great rigour and that to the great impouershing of the countrey and disappointing the publick service, and if they had taken men really it might haue bene a competent and reasonabill supplie and recrue; nixt we wer only holden to recrue, not the whol regiment but our awin four companies, and forther we offered four scor men, albeit it wes beyond ponar and that we had done nor nor our ducs already; 3rdlie, manie schyres had not as yet given their aucht man at all; and lastlie we had na ucu to spair, no not to labour the ground, sen quhat be lenies, quhat be fugitives, quhat be weaknes and pouertie, we vnder took to proue that our rollis wer mor nor half les sen they ver first

LORD
ARBUTH-
NOTT

"taken vp." The writer further states that Lord Marischall on receipt of this was highly incensed, excused his officers, that although they took money they yet made a complete muster, "and nixt he assured us that if we did not yield" or at least "agree with him in a reasonabill way he shuld cans wts put out in spyt of our heartis more nor the doubill he would be content with presentlie . . . he knew the parliament would honsoeuer recrue his regiment and for us it behoud us nocht the-les to put furth our 8th man, and recrue strangers, he promised that a sojour of fortoun shuld be sent to us with tua regimentis and quarter still in our schyre, quhill the 8th man was exactlie taken up." The heritors, however, "stiffilie" opposed his lordship, and at last the parties agreed that 70 men should be furnished, his lordship promising "to get us fred not only from our 8th man but from all forder lenies both of foot and hors." The writer assures Lord Arbutnott that in subdividing or apportioning the men his lands shall not be wronged, yet he wishes his lordship's own presence, adding "this is very improper tyme, now in tyme of wark to list men, but we ar too rash and precipitat in all our carandis," etc. Dated at Halgrein, 4 February 1645. Signed, "W. Rait of Halgrein."

42. Letter from the Protector's Council in Scotland to "Colonnell Ralph Cobbet, Governour of Dundee," as to a bond given by the collector of the monthly assessment in the shire of Kincardine, for the payment of the money exacted from the said shire, to the persons authorised by the Council to dispose of these moneys in defraying the public engagements of the shire, and that Colonel David Barclay being satisfied (on behalf of the shire) with the security offered, and desiring the release of the Collector, Mr. Thomas Stewart, the Council have set him at liberty, and desire Colonel Cobbet to communicate the bond to the persons authorised as above, that they may require payment of the money. Signed in name of the Council at Edinburgh, 3rd September 1656, by "George Mouck."

43. Letter from Mr. Samuel Rutherford to the second Viscount of Arbutnott. "My Lord, If there had bene [any] place at our table racing, I should think I were vndericet to refuse your Lordship or the some of so truly a noble father. Ther is not any but one and that place was by promise ingadged with too others which shal vace, a year agoe to some others; if your lordship be pleased to ask D. Colveill he nor I know not of any racing. I would not have failed to ansuer the gentilmann who wrote for his some with your lordship were it not the bearer's opportunity on Saterdag escaped me. I shall desyr your Lordship humbly to accept of the reality of all possible satisfaction in that kynd or of any obsequious respects of one whoe am, my noble Lord, your Lordships at all due observance in God. S. Andrews, 17 July 1658." Signed, "Samuel Rutherford."

44. Letter from the Protector's Council to the second Viscount of Arbutnott, as "High Sheriff of the Shyre of Kincardine" that "his Highnes Council heere have thought fit to send you heerewith Letters and Declarations to the respective Presbiteries or thaire respective Moderators within your sherrifdome" desiring their speedy delivery to the parties by safe hands. Dated at Holyrood House, 23 December 1658.

45. Letter from Mr. Andrew Honyman [Archdeacon of St. Andrew's, afterwards Bishop of Orkney] to the second Viscount of Arbutnott, acknowledging receipt of a letter from his lordship and other heritors of the parish of Kinneff. That he had notice a few days before of the death of Mr. James Granger. In reference to the appointment of a new minister he says, "I have hitherto forborne till better advyce, your lordship may be sure that in presenting I will labour your satisfaction; for the tyme I am not cleare to present any but shall do it before the right expyre legallie." He then refers to a matter to be cleared up before presentation. Mr. Alexander Gladstones [a former incumbent] had 300 marks of tack duty from the parish, of which, in 1618, he resigned 200, which was ratified by the Commissioners of Plantation of Churches. The writer, however, thinks that Mr. Gladstones had no power to bind his successors, and that the Commissioners ratification could not reach beyond his own time to alienate the 200 marks. He aims at reducing the tack duty again to 300 marks, and hopes "the iustice" and equity of the matter will speake for itself," etc. Dated at St. Andrew's, April 22, 1663. Signed, M. Andr. Honyman.

46. Letter from Andrew, second Lord Frazer of Stanywood and Muchalls, to the second Viscount Arbutnott thanking the latter for his kindness to himself and his men, and hoping that the Viscount will "suffer no pairtie to be putt upon them . . . what in reason they ought to doe, I sall see them performe itt to the vtmost of ther power; I am sory the shyr sould be so much troubled with quartering, yett it wer hard to lay mor vpon poor men then they ar able to bear. It is great sham and prejudice that the countrie sould be soe troubled with broken men, therfor I think it expedient your Lordship and the rest of the Gentlemen in the Mairnes mak an addresse to the Counsell, and truelle represent the state of the countrie to them and craue they may give order to supress such insulences." This will be found necessary lest "your goeing about your ducty in your own and the countries preseruatione be misconstrued." He has ordered his men to wait on the Viscount "vpon aduertisement," and hopes that if the latter receive any notice that "they be troubled he thcs robbers" he will cause his people, "be assisting vnto them in recoverie of ther goods," etc. Dated at Muchalls, 9th August 1664. (Signed) "Fraser."

LORD
ARBU-
NOTH.

47. Letter [holograph] from Charles first Earl of Aboyne to the second Viscount of Arhuthnott, announcing his march from Aberdeen, and in His Majesty's name requiring the Viscount to meet him on the morrow at "St. Laurence Church in the Mearnes" to receive farther instructions "in what concerns His Majesty's service," etc. In a postscript the Earl desires "sufficient advertisement" to be made to "vther persones who han gone hom about ther affairs within the shyr of Kincardine" that they also may keep the rendezvous. Dated from "Elsik," 21 June 1679. Signed, "Aboyne."

WILLIAM FRASER.

Edinburgh, 32, Castle Street,
12th February 1880.

EARL OF
GLASGOW.

REPORT on the MUNIMENTS of The RIGHT HONOURABLE GEORGE FREDERICK BOYLE EARL OF GLASGOW at CRAWFORD PRIORY in the county of FIFE, by WILLIAM FRASER, Edinburgh.

In connexion with the recent claim to the ancient peerage of Lord Lindsay of the Byres, with the other dignities of Earl of Lindsay, Viscount of Garnock, etc., which were adjudged in April 1878 to Sir John Lindsay Bethune of Kilconquhar, I had occasion to inspect the muniments of the distinguished family of Lindsay. As the estate of Struthers, formerly Ochterutherstruther, now known as Crawford Priory, and other estates of the Earls of Lindsay were inherited in 1833 by George Earl of Glasgow as heir of entail, on the death of Lady Mary Lindsay Crawford, many of the ancient charters are now in the charter-room at Crawford Priory. These charters were carefully examined by me and adduced as evidence in the House of Lords, by permission of the present Earl of Glasgow. Before returning them to Lord Glasgow, I have thought it proper, with his permission, to give a short account of them so far as not noticed in Mr. Stuart's report of 1872.

The muniments at Crawford Priory throw very clear light on the line of distinguished men who held the ancient dignity of Lord Lindsay of the Byres. But the history of the family has been already given in outline in a former report by me, in 1874, on the Kilconquhar muniments of Sir John Bethune, now Earl of Lindsay.

In the present report will be found several charters relating to the earldom of Fife while it was yet held by the descendants of Macduff; one, indeed, probably as early as the first decade of the 13th century, granted by Malcolm Earl of Fife to Sir Ness of Ramsay. Some of the charters also bring before us early members of the families of Lundy and Ramsay of the Crannoch, in connection with whom appear several writs by Sir Walter Halyburton, Lord Dirlton, son-in-law of Robert Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, and one of the hostages for King James the First.

The lands of the Struthers, here mentioned under some other forms by no means euphonious, Kirkfether, and the superiority of Latham, long the chief possessions of the Lindsays of the Byres after they had parted with Dunnottar to the Keiths in 1380, were held of the see of St. Andrews; the church of St. Mary de Rupe, or of the Heugh, near St. Andrews, held the superiority of the lands of Balmain; while the abbey of Culross held the superiority of at least a portion of the lands of Cassindoly. Some of the principal charters of those ecclesiastical possessions between the years 1437 and 1565, have been noticed, the last being a resignation by Lord Lindsay, the bitter opponent of Queen Mary, and her stern guardian at Lochleven, into the hands of John Hamilton, archbishop of St. Andrews, one of the most faithful adherents of the unfortunate queen, who for his fidelity was executed at Stirling in 1571. Hamilton was the successor of Cardinal David Beaton (the cardinal spells his own name "David Betoun" on the seal mentioned in No. 15), who also appears in this report (A.D. 1543) in the somewhat equivocal act of granting lands to his three illegitimate children, David, Alexander, and John. The first is designated of North Melgund, and was placed under the pupillage of John Lord Borthwick, a staunch friend of the old faith (No. 16). After the murder of Beaton, some time elapsed before the appointment of his successor, and during the vacancy the episcopal duties were performed by the vicars-general, James Stewart, half-brother of the queen, then prior of St. Andrews and afterwards Earl of Moray, and the well-known John Winram, then sub-prior and professor at St. Andrews (No. 17). The report also gives abstracts of charters by Archbishop James Beaton, and by his vain predecessor Andrew Forman (Nos. 13, 14). In No. 13, one of the witnesses is John Major the Scottish historian, and teacher of Patrick Hamilton, Knox, and Buchanan. In 1491 William Elphinstone, bishop of Aberdeen, was acting as vicar-general of William Schivas, archbishop of St. Andrews, who was then abroad (No. 9). Among the Miscellaneous Papers, the inquest of 1512 is interesting, not only as giving the value of agricultural produce at that time, but because we find among the Fife lairds engaged in the appraising of certain lands and their products, two of the most distinguished names in the naval and poetic annals of Scotland, Sir Andrew Wood of Largo, admiral, and David Lyndesay of the Mount, satirist, and Lyon-king-at-arms (No. 41). The Robert Lindsay in Pitscottie, acting as procurator for Patrick Lord Lindsay in 1574, may be the historian of that name. Of his personal history nothing is known, but he lived beyond 1565, as his chronicle closes with that year. (No. 25).

Several of the papers have interest for students of legal and social antiquities. The Notarial Instrument, No. 39 of the report, tells how the Master of Lindsay, believing his right to be prejudiced by the tillage of some land near Largo Law, in Fife, which he claimed as common in connexion with other lands of his, protested against the cultivation by "throwing back the newly ploughed land." This document is probably unique of its kind in Scotland.

The report has been arranged into the following divisions:—

- I. Charters of the Earls of Fife.
- II. Charters of Dunnottar.
- III. Charters relating to the see of St. Andrews.
- IV. Charters relating to the Church of St. Mary de Rupe, or of the Heugh, St. Andrews.
- V. Charters relating to the abbeys of Culross and Holyrood.
- VI. Miscellaneous charters.

I. CHARTERS OF THE EARLS OF FIFE.

1. Charter by Malcolm Earl of Fife to Sir Ness of Ramsay of the lands of Lediferin. Circa 1210.

Malcolm comes de Fyf, omnibus ha litteras usuris nel audituris, salutem in Domino. Nouerit universitas uestra me dedisse et concessisse, et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse domino Nesso de Ramesey, filio Nessi de Ramesey, et hereditibus suis, totam terram de Lediferin per rectas diuisas suas, et cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, excepto bosco quod pro bosco habebatur quando dictam terram ei donani: Tenendam et abendam de me et hereditibus meis, sibi et hereditibus suis, libere et quiete, plenarie et honorifice, ab omni seruitio, consuetudine, et exactione, in terris, in aquis, in pratis et pascuis, in moris et marisis, in stagnis et molendinis, in uilis et semitis, et in omnibus aliis aisaiementis dicte terre pertinentibus, adeo libere et quiete et honorifice sicut aliquis comes nel baro in regno Socie terram suam aliqui dare potest: Reddende michi et hereditibus meis singulis annis quedam calcaria deaurata uel xij denarios, ad festum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli; et faciendo fornescum seruicium domini Regis quantum ad dictam terram pertinet. Testibus, domnis Johanne de Struelin, Johanne filio Michaelis, W. de Valloniis,

EARL OF
GLASGOW

EARL OF
GLASGOW.

Salomone de Thomaistun, Thoma de Kelmeron, M. de Abirnithy, et multis aliis.

2. Charter by Christian of Hay, daughter and heiress of the deceased John of Hay, laird of Portebrothok, whereby she in her pure widowhood gives and confirms to John of Ramesey, son of Sir Ness of Ramesey, her kinsman, and his heirs or assignees, her lands of Forthir, for his homage and service: To be held by him and his heirs of the granter and her heirs, for payment to her of six pounds sterling yearly, and for rendering to her lord, the Earl of Fife, the half service of a knight, and suit at the court of the Earl, and forensic service to the king so far as pertained to the said land, etc. Witnesses, Sirs Duncan Earl of Fife, David of Grame, Michael lord of Wemes, David of Wemes, David of Berkeley sheriff of Fife, Michael of Wemes son of Sir David, and Henry of Prendirgest, knights: Robert of Lawedir, Hugh of Lonchore, Malcolm of Balmaharg, and others. Circa 1315.

3. Charter by Duncan Earl of Fife to Maurice of Spens of the lands of Peterothy and Crostoun. Circa 1345.

Omnibus hoc scriptum visuris vel audituris, Duncannus comes de Fyff, eternam in Domino salutem. Nouerit vniuersitas vestra nos dedisse, concessisse, et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse, Mauricio dei Spens, pro homagio et fidei seruicio suo nobis impenso, totas terras nostras de Peterothy et de Crostoun: Tenendas et habendas dicto Mauricio et heredibus suis de nobis et heredibus nostris, in feodo et hereditate, per omnes rectas metas et diuicias suas, et cum omnibus iustis suis pertinentiis, commoditatibus, libertatibus, et aysamentiis, ad dictas terras spectantibus sen quoquo modo de iure in posterum spectare valeantibus; in boscis, planis, moris, marosis, stagnis, aquis, pascuis et pasturis, pratis, molendinis et bracinis, ac ceteris aliis libertatibus quibuscunque tam non nominatis quam nominatis, tam sub terra quam supra terram, libere, quiete, bene et in pace, sine aliquo retinemento: Faciendo inde dictus Mauricius et heredes sui nobis et heredibus nostris tres sectas annuatim ad tria placita nostra capitalia apud Cuprum in Fyff, et forensecum seruicium domino nostro Regi quantum ad dictas terras de iure pertinet, pro omnibus aliis seruiciis, exactionibus secularibus seu demandis, que de dictis terris exigi poterint seu requiri: Nos vero dictus Duncannus et heredes nostri dictas terras cum pertinentiis predicto Mauricio et heredibus suis, ut predictum est, contra omnes homines et feminas warandizabimus, acquietabimus, et in perpetuum defendemus. Hiis testibus, dominis Roberto de Irskyn tunc balliis nostro, Willelmo de Dyssnughtoun, militibus, domino Bricio de Crechy, rectore de Kynwle, tunc camerario nostro, Thoma de Lundy domino eiusdem Matheo Sybald, Michaeli de Balfoure, Johanne de Malauilla, et multis aliis.

II. CHARTERS OF DUNDEE.

4. Transumpt executed at Lythgus, 26th February 1386, at the instance of Sir William de Lyndissey, lord of the Biris, of the following charter of 31 October 1382.

Robertus Dei gracia Rex Scottorum omnibus probis hominibus tunc terre sue, tam clericis quam laicis, salutem. Sciatis nos dedisse, concessisse, et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse, dilecto et fidei nostro Murthaco de Glacister et Alicie sponse sue terras dominicas de Dunoty cum pertinentiis ac eciam terras de Estirfethy et Westerfethy cum pertinentiis infra vicecomitatum de Kyncardyn: Quasquidem terras cum pertinentiis Thomas de Collie, non vi aut metu ductus nec errore lapsus sed mera et spontanea voluntate sua, nobis per fustum et baculum sursum reddidit, pureque et simpliciter resignauit, ac totum ius suum et clameum que in dictis terris cum pertinentiis habuit vel habere potuit pro se et heredibus suis omnino quietum clamauit inperpetuum: Tenendas et habendas eisdem Murthaco et Alicie et eorum diutius viucenti et heredibus iuter ipsos legitime procreatis sen procreandis, quibus fortasse deficientibus, heredibus dicti Murthaci aut assignatis legitimis quibuscunque, de nobis et heredibus nostris in feodo et hereditate, per omnes rectas metas et diuicias suas, cum omnibus et singulis libertatibus, commoditatibus, aysamentiis . . . In cuius rei testimonium presenti carte sigillum nostrum precepimus apponi: hiis testibus, venerabilibus in Christo patribus, Willelmo et Johanne, cancellario nostro, Saucti Andree et Dunkeldensis ecclesiarum episcopis; Johanne primogenito nostro de Carric; Roberto comite de Fyffe et de Menithete, filio nostro dilecto; Willelmo de Douglas et Marr, consanguineo nostro, comitibus; Jacobo de Lyndesay, nepote nostro karissimo, et Ryberto Erskyne, consanguineo nostro, militibus. Apud Perth, vltimo die mensis Octobris regni anno nostri duodecimo.

5. Charter by King Robert the Third, whereby he grants to William of Lyndesay, knight, eight pounds sterling of annual rent out of the lands of Dunoter, which the said Sir William and Christian, his spouse, had surrendered in the King's hands, who had given the said lands with the castle to William of Keth, marischal, and Robert of Keth, his son, knights, by a charter of tailzie, excepting the said eight pounds yearly. To be held by the said William of Lyndesay, etc. of the Crown, until William of Lyndesay and his heirs or assignees were heritably infeft in an eight-pound-land of old extent in the lordship of Tulch-Fraser, in the shire of Stirling, or eight pounds of annual rent out of the lands of Dreme, in the shire of Edinburgh, to be held in chief of the Crown; after which infeftment the annual rent from Dunnotar to revert to the granters. Witnesses: Walter Bishop of St. Andrews, Matthew Bishop of Glasgow, Robert Earl of Fife and Menteith, the King's brother, etc. Dated at Perth, 29 June, in the fourth year of the king's reign. [1393].

III. CHARTERS RELATING TO THE SEE OF ST. ANDREWS.

6. Procuratory of Resignation by George de Dunbar, Earl of the Marches and Lord of Kylonquhare, into the hands of James Bishop of St. Andrews, of the lands of Lathame, and superiority thereof, in the lordship of Kylonquhar and regality of St. Andrews, held by him of the said bishop in chief. Dated at Kylonquhare, 24 October 1452.

7. Charter by James Bishop of St. Andrews, with consent of the chapter, to his kinsman John Lord Lyndesey of Byris, of the lands of Outhirothirodyr, with their annexes and dependancies, to wit, the lands of Kyrkforthyr and superiority of Lathame, in the shire of Fife and regality of St. Andrews; which lands and superiority had before belonged to the said John, and had been resigned by him, and which superiority had belonged formerly to George of Dunbar, laird of Kylonquhare, knight, and having been resigned by him had thereafter been conferred on the said John: all which lands and superiority are hereby united into the barony of Outhirothirstradyr; to be held of the granter and his successors, bishops of St. Andrews, for rendering three suits at the three head courts at St. Andrews, and paying yearly six silver pennies from the lands of Outhirothirstradyr, and 40s. Scots of kain from the lands of Kyrkforthyr, to the bishop and his successors. St. Andrews, 2 May 1454. Witnesses: Hugh Kennedy, archdeacon; John of Scheues, doctor of canon law, official principal of St. Andrews; Walter Stewart, canon of Glasgow; Sir Henry of Wardlaw, of Tory, and Sir Patrick Hepburn of Walchtoun, knights.

8. Precept of Clare Constat by William Archbishop of St. Andrews, in favour of David Lord Lindisay of Biris, as heir of his father John Lord Lindisay of Biris, for seising him in the lands of Ouchterrudistradyr and the superiority of Lathame, in the regality of St. Andrews and shire of Fife. Edinburgh, 20 March 1482-3.

9. Precept of seisiu by William [Elphinstone] bishop of Aberdeen and vicar-general of William Archbishop of St. Andrews, who was then abroad, directing Henry Scheues, of Kilquhns, steward of the regality of St. Andrews, to give seisin to John Lindesay, lord of the Byris, as brother and heir of the late David Lindesay, lord of the Byris, in the lands of Outhyruthyrstradyr, etc. St. Andrews, 25th January 1491.

[In the instrument of 30th January, which is in Scotch, Henry Scheues, designates himself "ano of the" stewarts of ye regality of Sanct Androis, till Robert "of Burne mayr of ffee of ye said regalie."]

10. Procuratory of resignation by John Lord Lindesay, of Birys, appointing William Bishop of Aberdeen, David Seton, rector of Fethirkarne, John Elphinstone, of Pendreich, Andrew Elphinstone, and Alexander Inglis of Terwait, his procurators for resigning into the hands of James Duke of Ross, postulate of St. Andrews, or John, prior of the metropolitan kirk of St. Andrews and vicar-general, as lord superior, all his lands of Ouchterthirstradyr, in favour of his brother, Patrick Lindesay, of Kirkforthir and his heirs. Dated at Edinburgh, 4 October 1497.

11. Notarial instrument, certifying that in presence of James, elect of St. Andrews, Duke of Ross, John, prior of the metropolitan kirk of St. Andrews and vicar-general of the same, and David Meldrum, canon of Dunkeld, and official principal of St. Andrews, and others, personally appeared George Lyndesaye, brother of John Lord Lyndesaye, of Byris, and his apparent heir, and asserted that it had reached his ears that William Lyndesaye, his brother, had made an appeal from the said vicar-general aeneit the infestment of Patrick Lyndesaye, in the lands and lordship of Och-tirstrodur, under the name of the said George, asserting he was skaitheid therethrough: but the said George asserts that such appeal is false, frivolous, and vain, and that he never gave consent to it, but entirely consented to the said infestment of the said Patrick in virtue of the resignation of the said John Lord Lyndesaye, of Byris, and ratified the charters thereupon; and he further confessed that had such resignation not been made, he still consented, and would ever consent to such, in favour of the said Patrick: and further, if the said John Lord Lyndesaye happened to die, leaving the said George alive, he promised and bound himself to the said Patrick to cause himself to be seised in the said lands with advice of the said Patrick, and afterwards to resign them in Patrick's favour, so that he might brook them for ever; and swore never to challenge or molest him in his right to the said lands under penalty of 1,000 merks Scots to the King, 1,000 merks to the fabric of the metropolitan kirk of St. Andrews, and 1,000 merks to the said Patrick in name of loss, skaitheid, etc.

EARL OF
GLASGOW.

Dated at the Palace of St. Andrews, 26 October 1498. Witnesses: Gavin Dunbar, dean of the cathedral kirk of Moray [afterwards Bishop of Aberdeen], David Setoune, and John Schenes, rectors of the parish kirks of Fethirkarne and Inchebrick, Alexander Inglis of Tervot, etc.

12. Charter by James "Sanctiandree archiepiscopus, totius regni Scotie primas, sedisque Apostolice legatus natus, dux Rossie, marchio de Ormond, comes de Ardmach, ac dominus de Brechin et Nevar," with consent of the chapter, to Patrick, Lord of Lyndesaye of Byris, of Ochterruthirstruthir, with the castle and manor-place, Kyrkforthir, and the superiority of Lathame, in the regality of St. Andrews; which belonged to the said Patrick heritably, and were resigned by him at the palace of St. Andrews on 10th April: to be held by him and his heirs whosoever of the archbishop and his successors, for payment of six silver pennies yearly. Dated at the Metropolitan Kirk of St. Andrews, 16th June 1499.

13. Precept of Seizin by "Andreas misericordie divina Sanctiandree archiepiscopus, totius regni Scotie primas, legatus natus ac Apostolice sedis cum potestate et facultate legati de latere per universum regnum predictum legatus, necnon commendatarius perpetuus monasterii de Dunfermiling" to Thomas Dischyntoun, steward of the regality of St. Andrews, John Ferny, and David Grundeistoun, his bailies, for the infestment of John Lyndesaye of Peterov, knight, in "our" lands of Ochterruthirstruthir, its castle, &c., the lands of Kirkforthir, and the superiority of Lathame, which had been resigned by Patrick Lord Lindsay of the Byres into the hands of the grantor as lord-superior. Dated at Edinburgh, "of our consecration the sixteenth year, and of our translation to the metropolitanis of the kingdom," 27th May 1517.

Signed—"Andreas archiepiscopus.

"S^r [i.e. Sancti Andree] legatus Soccie."

In a charter of the same lands dated at "our metropolitan church of St. Andrews," 12 June 1517, Forman adopts the same title as in the above precept, and signs with the following proud array of titles, extending over nearly the whole width of the writ—"Andreas archiepiscopus Sanctiandree totius regni Soccie primas Apostolice sedis cum potestate de latere legatus."

14. Charter by James Beton, "archbishop of St. Andrews, primate of the whole realm of Scotland, legatus natus," to his "consanguineus," John Lord Lindsay of the Byres, of Ochterruthirstruthir, Kirkforthar, and superiority of Lathame. St. Andrews, 14 April 1532.

Also a precept of seizin, dated 15 April 1532. Both writs are signed—"Jacobus Sancti Andree."

The witnesses to the charter are, Andrew bishop of Caithness, George abbot of Dunfermline, the grantor's nephew, Masters John Weddall, rector of St. Andrew's University and principal official of the diocese, John Major, Peter Sacellan, doctors of theology, David Murray of Balward, knight, William Murray of Tullibardin, John Beton of Creicht, Robert Dury of Dury, Masters Henry Lumysden, chamberlain, Abraham Cro-ichtoun, rector of Crawfordjohn, and Andrew Oliphant, secretary.

15. Charter by Cardinal Beton, as follows:—

David, be the mercy of God cardinale and archiepiscopo of Sanctandris, primate of all Scotland, &c., to all and sindrie quhaiss knawledge thir our letteris sal to cum, gretting in God cuerlesting. Witt ze ws to hane gevin, grantit and disposit, and be the tenour herof gevis, grantis, and disponis to our weilbelouit David Beton of Northmelgound, and to Alexander and Johnne Betonis his brethir, thair airis and assignais quhatsumeur, all and hail the mailles, firmes, rentes, profitis, commoditeis, casualiteis, dewiteis, and pectinentis, of all and sindrie the landis and tenandrie of Authermoussy and Carny, with the toune [etc.], lyand in our regality of Sanctandris and schirrefdom of Fife's for all and hail the space and termes that the forsaid landis [etc.] he beue in the handis of ws or our predecessouris, archiepiscopis of Sanctandris, as superioris and ourlordis of the samyn be ressonne of nonentre, recognitioun, or vthirwaiss, sen ye decess of vnuquhill Alexander and David his sone, Erlis of Cranford, that last decess or ony vthir last and immediat lauchfull tenant thairfo to ws or our predecessouris forsaid, and ay and quhill the lauchfull entre of the richtoun air or airis of the samyn yairto, with pover to the saidis David, Alexander, and Johnne, and to thair airis and assignais, to intromit, vptak, and apply to thair vs and profit ye saidis mailles [etc.]. In witness of the quhill, to this our letter of gift and disposicion aboun writtin subscriuit with our hand our round seill is appendit. At Strueling the twenty thrid day of December the zeir of Our thousand fyve hundreth and forty three zenis, befor thir witness—Master Bernard Baillie, persoun of Lambintoun, Master Adam Myre, Schir James Authimuly, Richard Baillie.

• DAVID CARD^{inalis} ST^{atus} ANDREE.

[The seal of the cardinal is in perfect condition.]

16. Three papers, dated 1544, with reference to the wardship by Lord Borthwick of David Betone of Northmelgound.

17. Charter by James, perpetual commendator of the priory of the metropolitan church of St. Andrews, and John Vinram, professor of theology and sub-prior of the said church, vicars-general during the vacancy of the see, acting with consent of the chapter of the priory capitularly assembled, to Patrick Lindsay, son and heir apparent of John Lord Lindsay of the Byres, of the lauds and lordship of Auchterthyrstruthir, Kirkforthar, and the superiority of Lathame, in the regality of St. Andrews, which had been resigned by the said Lord John into the vicars' hands. Dated 5th April 1547.

The vicariate seal is appended.

18. Preculatory by Patrick Lord Lyndsay, of the Byris, for resigning in the hands of John archbishop of St. Andrews, his overlord, his lauds of Auchterthyrstruther, etc., in favour of James Lyndesaye, his son and heir apparent. Dated at the Struther, 17th September 1565, and signed by Patrick Lyndsay.

IV. CHARTERS RELATING TO THE CHURCH OF ST. MARY DE RUPE, ST. ANDREWS.

19. Preculatory by Thomas Mortimere, portioner of Balmane, appointing Sir Walter of Ogilby of Lumtrethin, Sir Alexander Ramsay of Dalnuly, Sir Andrew of Ogilby of Inchmartyn, knights, John Liddale, John of Haliaburton, James Ramsay of Clatty, and others, his procurators, to resign in the hands of Sir Hugh Kennedy, provost of the Chapel Royal of St. Mary's of St. Andrews, as superior, his third part of the lands of Balmane in the shire of Fife, which were held of the forsaid Hugh in chief. Dundee 30th May 1438.

20. License, in Scots, by John Kennedy, "prouest" of the colleg kirk of our Lady the Kingis chapel "sitwat within the cite of Sanctandris," to John of Lumysden of Ardre, to redeem the third part of the lands of Balmane "fra oure weilbelouet brothir Alexander Kennedy of Vrvel." St. Andrews, 9th March 1467.

21. Precept of Seizin, in Scots, by Sir James Allerdas, provost "of our Lady kirk of the Hewicht of Sanctandros," for the infestment of Patrick Lindsay, "lord fere" of the Byres, in the third of Balmane, its corn and wauk mills, etc., in the regality of St. Andrews, which had been resigned by John Lord Lindsay. Given at the kirk of the Hewicht, May 1498.

EARL OF
GLASGOW.

22. Instrument of Seizin, dated 18th September 1521, proceeding on a precept by Sir James Kincragy, provost of the church of St. Mary de Rupe in St. Andrews, to Alexander Lindsay and Walter Lindsay, his bailies, for the infeftment of John master of Lindsay of Peterbarrie, knight, and Elizabeth Landy his spouse, in the third part of the lands of Balmane, in the regality of St Andrews, which had been resigned by Sir Patrick Lord Lindsay into the hands of the provost as superior. Precept dated at St. Andrews, 28th August 1521.

23. Various charters, dated 1521 and 1530, with precept of sasine, dated 1521, bearing on the Lindsay holding of Balmane, and signed by "Jacobus Kincragy, prepositus ecclesie Beate Marie in Rupe prope ciuitatem Sancti Andree, manu propria scriptit."

24. Precept of Clare Constat by James Lermouth, provost of the college kirk of St Mary de Rupe, near St. Andrews, directing Patrick Lermouth of Dersy, knight, his bailie, to infeft Patrick Lord Lyndesaye as heir to his father John Lord Lyndesay of Byris, in the two-part of Balmane. St. Andrews, 13th March 1563-4.

25. Procuratory, in Scots, under the sign-manual of Patrick Lord Lindsay, directing Robert Lindsay in Pitscottie, to pass to the presence and resign into the hands of Mr. James Lermouth, provost of the college kirk beside St. Andrews, called Kirk Ilwich, of two parts of the lands of Balmane, for new infeftment in favour of James Lindsay, Lord Patrick's son, and En-fama Leslie his future spouse. Struther, 18th February 1573-4.

V. CHARTERS RELATING TO THE ABBEYS OF CULROSS AND HOLYROOD.

26. Charter by James of Kyninmond, knight, lord of that ilk, to Sir John of Lyndesay, knight, lord of the Byris, of the lands of Cassyndoli in the shire of Fife. To be held by him, his heirs and assignees, from the grantor and his heirs, of the Earl of Fife, with reservation to the said James and his heirs of the tenantry of Wester Petescottay. Witnesses: John Lummysden of Glegernoch, sheriff of Fife. Henry Maleville, son and heir of Robert Maleville laird of Carnbee, etc. Dated at the Kirk of S ras, 30th March 1440.

27. Precept of Clare Constat by Alexander, perpetual commendator of the monastery of Culross, for the infeftment of Patrick Lord Lindsay of the Biris, as nearest heir of the deceased John Lord Lindsay, in the third part of the lands of Cassinduly, in Fife. Dated about 1500.

Signed: "Alex^r. commendatarius de Culros."

28. Indenture made between the abbot and convent of the monastery of the Holy Rood, and Sir William More, lord of Abircora, knight, whereby they grant their land of Esthathmore, then called Qwarehill, in the shire of Stirling, which had been resigned by him; to be held by him and the heirs male of his body, whom failing to Sir William of Lyndisay, knight, and Christian his spouse, and the heirs male of their bodies, whom failing the heirs male of the body of either, whom failing the daughters of the said Sir William More, etc.,—one of the heirs of tailzie being William More, natural son of the said Sir William More: of the foresaid abbot and convent, for payment of nine merks sterling yearly. Dated at the monastery of Holyrood, 16th September 1382.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS CHARTERS.

29. Confirmation by King Robert the Second to Gilbert Grant Sernyse, of the grant of the lands of Stratheryng made of old to Gilbert by Walter de Landyn, to be held of the Crown. Witnesses: Walter bishop of St. Andrews, Matthew bishop of Glasgow, Robert Earl of Fife and Menteth, the king's dearest brother, Archibald Earl of Douglas and Lord of Galloway, Mr. Duncan Petyt archdeacon of Glasgow, chancellor of Scotland, James de Douglas Lord of Dalkeith, and Thomas de Erskyne, the king's kinsmen. Stirling, 10th December 1388.

30. Procuratory of resignation of Elbotill and the Bernis, 10th November 1437.

Be it made kende til ale men thour thir present letteris me Valter the Ramsay of Crannoch til haue made, constitut, and ordanyt, and be thir my present letteris makis, constitutis, and ordanys my vele belufit frendis and speciale deputtis, Schere Patrik of Hebburne of Valehtoun, knyght, Alexander Hebburne and Johne of Congyltoun of that ilk, my fullle procuratouris and speciale deputtis, coniunctly and seuerally, of al my landis of Elbotill and the Bernis, with thar pertinens, lyande with in the barony of Drylhtoun, with in the scheryadome of Louthiane, to resing and vp gryf in the handis of ane honorabill and a mycht lorde and my our-larde of the saide landis, Schere Valter of Halyburtoun, Lorde Drylhtoun, toggydder with a letter of resignacioun made vnder my sele tharapour: Ferme and stabill hafande and for til haue quhatsum enir thynghe the forsaide Schere Patrik, Alexander, and John, or ane of thaim, coniunctly or denytly, into my name in the forsaide resignacioun leddis to be done, as it afferis til a procuratour to do, or at I mycht do ande I ware thar in propyr personu. In the vtues of the quiblik thyng my sele is to-put: in the burgh of Couper the x day of Nouember, the yher of our Lorde j^m cccccxx and sewyne yheris, befor thir witnes, Johne of Lummysden of Glegernoch, Schere Johne of Kynloch, cheplane, Thome of Dempstartoun and Thome of Grundistoun with other syndry.

31. Charter by Walter of Haliburton, knight, lord of that ilk, to John Lyndissay, knight, lord of Byris, of his lands within the town and territory of Elbotill and the half of Bernis, in the barony of Dreltoun, which had been resigned into the grantor's hands by Walter Ramsay lord of Crannoch: to be held for two silver pennies for Elbotill, and twelve pennies for the half of the Bernis. Perth, 20th November 1437.

32. Letters of Regress by Walter of Haliburton, knight lord of that ilk, to Walter the Ramsay of Crannoch and his heirs to Elbotill and half of the Bernis, should resignation be obtained from Sir John the Lyndissay, knight, lord of the Byris. Edinburgh, 14th June 1438.

33. Notarial instrument of ratification, certifying that on the 12th August 1471, in presence of "venerabilis circumspectique ac magne sciencie viri," Sir David Kay, doctor of canon law, rector of the parish church of Ydify, and official principal of St. Andrews, sitting in judgment, and of the notary public and witnesses, compared Master James Lyndesay, rector of the parish church of Benhame, brother german of David Lyndesay laird of Piteravry, and his procurator, and asked of Jonet Ramsay, spouse of the said David Lyndesay, whether she were freely and willingly pleased to approve and ratify all the resignations of her lands in the hands of the King as superior of certain of her lands, and in the hands of the other superiors, to the said David Lyndesay and his heirs, and if she would declare that such resignations and grants were made before the marriage of the said David and her, and would give her oath not to revoke aught contained in them thereafter, to which she, out of the presence of her spouse, of her free will as it seemed to the official, notary and bystanders, modestly made answer, saying she of her free will and without compulsion had made the said resignations and grants and ratified them, and declared that they were made before her marriage, and made oath not to revoke them. Done in the kirk of the Holy Trinity at St. Andrews in the chapel of St. Bartholomew situate within the said Kirk, 12th August 1471.

34. Letters of Resignation by Jonet Ramsay of Cran-[noch], into the hands of James King of Scots, of the lands of Edyndowny, in the shire of Fife, held of the King in chief, appointing Gilbert Kenedy, Alexander Kenedy of Vrvell, etc., procurators. St. Andrews, 16th April, 1458.

35. Retour of Nicholas Skryngmour as heir to his deceased brother William Skryngmour in the lands of Lillok, in the lordship of Piclatho in Fife. Tolbooth of Cupar, 17th October. 1475

Sealed by John Balfour sheriff-depute. Among the jury are John Kyninmond of that ilk, knight, and William Scot of Balwery.

36. Precept of Seisin under the quarter seal of King James the Fourth, directing David Lindsay of Month, John Lindsay his brother, and others his sheriffs to give seisin to Patrick Lindsay of Kirkforthir, brother of John Lord Lindsay of the Byres of the lands and barony of Abercorne, viz. Philpstoun, Dadingstoun, and Newton in the shires of Edinburgh and Linlithgow, Gledovane in the stewartry of Strathern and shire of Perth, and others resigned by John Lord Lindsay. Edinburgh, 28th October, A.R.R. 10. [1497.]

37. Instrument of Seizin proceeding on a precept by William Landy, lord superior of Stratharlie, to Andrew Landy his brother and bailie, for infeftment of Sir Patrick Lord Lindsay of Byris in the third part of Stratharlie in Fife. Precept dated at St. Andrews, 7th March 1498.

EARL OF GLASGOW.

EARL OF
GLASGOW.

[In an instrument of resignation of 17th February 1517, Andrew Lundy is designated of Stratharie at the time William Lundy was superior.]

38. Precept of Seizin by Marioria Bercla, lady of half the barony and lands of Craufurdjhone, directed to Robert Crechtoun, John Crechtoun, Thomas Craufurde, and James Craufurde, to infeft Malcolm Craufurde, her eldest son and apparent heir in the said lands and the donation of the parish church of Craufurdjhone. Kylbryn, 8th May, 1499.

39. Notarial Instrument, recording that John, master of Lindsay, of Peterowry, knight, went to the lands of Melgum and Langrenis near Largo Law, and declared publicly to the bystanders that those lands were newly ploughed and tilled without his consent by the tenants of Hanhill and Monturpye, that they belonged to his lands of Peterowry and Edinowry in common, and that this new work was to his injury, whereupon he interrupted the work "per reiectionem sulci nouiter arati" so as to protect himself from "jus silencii." Dated 15th April 1508.

40. "The Reversoun of sex marks annuale of Balmane," 1510.

This obligation, dated at "the Stothir" 14th May 1510, and written in the Scots dialect, illustrates some of the peculiar forms of the period. It is by David Balfour, of Petecullo, to Patrick Lord Lindsay, of the Byres. Balfour had an annual rent of 6 merks from Lord Patrick, and he engages to resign it "incontinent" on the payment by the latter of 40*l*. Scots haile and "togidder apone ane day betuix the sonne rising and to" "passing of the samyne, wpon the hie altare within the" "parochie kirk of Luqheris." If warning were given by Lord Patrick personally or at high mass in the church twenty-one days before the payment, and the possessor of the annual were to be absent at the time of payment, Lord Patrick should have free ingress to the six merks and "broik the samyn but only process of" "law, stop, play, or impediment," and the 40*l*. were to be "pute in sickir or sewer keping in the montyme" in the hands of the prouest and chanovnis of Sanctsaluatoris College within the cite of Sanctandros."

41. Inquest, 1512.

Hec inquisicio facta fuit super fundum terrarum de Lawdisferou incementum infra vicecomitatum de Fife, coram honorabili viro Johanne Schewas clavigero vicecomitis in hac parte per supremum dominum nostrum Regem specialiter ac litterarum constituto, die secundo mensis Aprilis Anno Domini millesimo quingentesimo duodecimo, per hos subscriptos, viz.: Andream Wod de Largo militem, Johannem Claphen de Caslogy, Nicolaum Hay de Fudy [etc.], David Lyndesay de Month, Andream Lundy de Stretharie, Thomam Muncur de le Mouthe [etc.]; qui de mandato dicti vicecomitis uirtute litterarum regalium desuper directarum iurati, appreciarunt bona mobilia super fundo terrarum de Parbroith et Lawdesfroune infra vicecomitatum predictum existentia, vna cum omnibus et singulis prescriptis terris de Parbroith et Lawdisfroun cum molendino et pertinenciis in hunc qui sequitur modum, viz. :—

In primis, octo celdras anenarum seminataram in Parbroith, prec. bolle sex solid, et viii. d.

Summa - - - 42 lib. 13*s*. 4*d*.

Item, duodecim bollas frumenti, prec bolle 13*s*. 4*d*.

Summa - - - 8 lib.

Item, 12 bolle pisarum, prec. bolle 6*s*. 8*d*.

Summa - - - 4 lib.

Item, in horreo et orto eiusdem, decem celdras ordeï, prec. bolle 10*s*.

Summa - - - 80 lib.

Item, centum sexaginta oues matrices, prec. pecii 4*s*. 6*d*.

Summa - - - 40 lib. 10*s*.

Item, viginti boues, prec. pecii 20*s*.

Summa - - - 20 lib.

Item, nouem vakkas, prec. pecii 20*s*.

Summa - - - 9 lib.

Item, tres equos, ad summam, 5 lib.

Item, in fundo de Lawdisferoun.

[Stock valued much as on Parbroath.]

Summa totalis - - - 236 lib. 10*s*.

Then follows a valuation of the lands of Parbroath, etc., which had been for 50 years in the hands of the Crown by reason of non-entry. After this valuation John Schewas assigned to John Seiton, nephew and heir-apparent of Alexander Seiton, of Parbroath, the goods and profits of the said lands.

EARL OF
GLASGOW.

Seveu of the eight seals originally attached to this document still exist, and among them is that of the great Scottish admiral Sir Andrew Wood, who, curiously enough, appears in the above document with the Scottish poet, Sir David Lindsay, and a number of Fife lairds, as a valuator of oats and oxen.

42. Charter by William Lundy, lord of the feu of the lands and barony of Lundy, proceeding on the resignation of Patrick Lord Lindsay, of the Biris, to John Master Lindsay, of Peterowry, knight, of the third part of the lands of Stretharie, in the barony of Lundy, in Fife. St. Andrews, 12th March, 1517-18.

43. Confirmation., dated at Dumbarton 30th May, 1524, by King James the Fifth, with consent of John Duke of Albany, governor, of a charter by Patrick Lord Lyndesay to his eldest son and apparent heir. John Lyndesay of Peterury, knight, and his heirs-male, of the lordship of Byris. viz., the mains of Byris, Coittis, Mongois Wells, etc., in the constabulary of Haddington, the barony of Abercorn, etc.: Reserving to the granter his frank-tenement of the lands and a reasonable terce to Isobel Pitcarne his spouse. Witnesses, David Pitcarne, archdeacon of Brechin, John Spens of Maristoun, etc. Strowthir, 29th April, 1524.

44. Warrant by John Earl of Mar, treasurer, to John Lord Lindsay, for his hereditary right to the customs of herring, etc., of the port of St. Andrews. Edinburgh, 18th March, 1623.

WILLIAM FRASER.

Edinburgh, 32 Castle Street,
17 January, 1879.

REPORT ON THE MANUSCRIPTS OF MISS HAMILTON OF BARNES AND COCHNO IN THE COUNTY OF DUMBARTON, BY WILLIAM FRASER, EDINBURGH.

Miss
HAMILTON.

The Hamiltons of Barnes are a branch of the Hamiltons of Raploch, who again are a branch of the noble house of Hamilton. Gavin Hamilton of Raploch, was commendator of the Abbey of Kilwinning immediately before and after the Reformation. He acquired the lands of Barnes in the year 1560 from his kinsman, John Hamilton, archbishop of Saint Andrews, as abbot of the monastery of Paisley. The grant by the archbishop as abbot of Paisley was confirmed both by King James the Sixth and Claud Hamilton abbot of Paisley. The eldest son of the commendator of Kilwinning, was Gavin Hamilton of Raploch and Barnes. His second son of that laird of Raploch and grandson of the Commendator was Claud Hamilton, who married Katharine Knox, of the family of Knox of Ranfurle, in the county of Renfrew. Claud Hamilton was provided by his father, Gavin Hamilton of Raploch and Barnes, to the lands of Barnes by a charter dated in the year 1575. The descendants have inherited the lands from that date to the present day. Claud Hamilton who was the representative of the family of Barnes, in the time of King Charles the Second, frequently attended field conventions, and was fined repeatedly for such infractions of the laws then in force against persons who deserted their parish churches. John Hamilton, one of the younger brothers of that Claud Hamilton, was concerned in the rising of the Earl of Argyll in the year 1685, but he received from King James the Seventh a remission for that treason on 10th November 1687.

A few of the feudal charters are noted in this report, as showing several points of form in grants of land both by churchmen and laymen; and also letters of excommunication for non-fulfilling of an agreement regarding the redemption of certain lands in the year 1548, [vide No. 4.] Several miscellaneous papers are also noted as showing the disturbed state of the Lowlands from the incursions of the Highlanders at the time of the Revolution of 1688. An impost, known as the "Watch Meal" of Dumbarton, is explained in these papers.

1. Charter by Alexander Douchall, son of William Douchall and Helen Gilquhammatie, to Andrew Hammiltoun, captain of the castle of Dumbarton, of the lands of Easter Cochay in the earldom of Lennox, parish of Kilpatrick, and shire of Dumbarton: to be held from the granter and his heirs of the abbot and convent of the monastery of Paisley, for payment of 13 merks Scots, with five shillings

"boyne siluir" and five "lang cariages," in name of feufarm. Edinburgh, 1 March 1546-7.

This charter was ratified by the grantor in 1554, after he attained his majority.

2. Public instrument, containing a process of ratification by John Lander, archdeacon of Teviotdale, and George Clapartoun, sub-dean of the chapel royal of Stirling, judges delegate appointed by letters of Antony, grand penitentiary of the Pope, whereby they find that the gift of the lands of Easter Cochnay made by Alexander, abbot of Kilwinning, acting as procurator for John, abbot of Paisley, to William Douchall and Helen Gilquhammy, and Alexander their son, was made for the weal of the monastery; and therefore they confirm the gift and writs thereupon made. Dated at St. Anthony's Aisle in the College Kirk of St. Giles, Edinburgh, 22nd March, 1546-7.

This charter contains at length (1.) The letters of the Grand Penitentiary. (2.) The charter by Alexander, abbot of Kilwinning. (3.)

The commission by John abbot of Paisley to Alexander abbot of Kilwinning.

3. Agreement between Hew Crawford, of Kilbirny and Drumry, and Andrew Hamilton, captain of Dumbarton Castle, whereby the former binds himself to redeem the four merk-land of Hutchinstoun, in the shire of Dumbarton, before Whitsunday next; and the latter binds himself to deliver 300 merks for the purpose of redemption. The former further undertakes to give the latter infefment in the above lands and those of the Hoill, under a reversion of 500 merks. The contract was to be inserted in the Official of Glasgow's books, and the parties to be admonished to observe it. Glasgow, 28th March 1548.

4. Letters of excommunication against Hew Crawford for non-execution of the above agreement in the following terms:

Officialis Glasguensis, curatis de Kilpatrick et Kilbirny, seu cuiunque alteri capellano curato vel non curato Glasguensis diocesis, salutem. Vigore cuiusdam contractus initii inter honorabiles personas, viz., Hugonem Crawford de Kilbirny et Drumry, ab una, et Andream Hammylton capitaneum castri de Dumbartane, ab altera partibus; iuxta cuius continentiam prefati Hugo et Andreas ex eorum propriis confessionibus sub excommunicationis pena moniti erant legitime apud acta nostre curie ad perimplenda et observanda omnia et singula contenta in eodem, et hoc primo, 2^o 3^o, et peremptorie ac sub excommunicationis pena. Et ut informamur ex parte ipsius Andree, ipse Hugo suam partem dicti contractus sibi Andree minime perimplevit et signanter istam clausulam subsequentem viz.: [Here follows part of the contract in Scotch:] Vobis et igitur et vestrum cultibet, in virtute sancte obedientie et sub pena suspensionis a divinis, stricte precipimus et mandamus quatenus dictum Hugonem sic premonitum et monitionibus nostris huiusmodi non patientem, quem in hiis scriptis excommunicavimus, vos sic per nos fore excommunicatum in singulis ecclesiis vestris omnibus diebus dominicis, festis et aliis, infra missarum solemniam, ut moris est, publice ac solemniter denunciatis, a dicta denunciacione modo cessantes per implicationem dicte clause [etc.] vnum xij. pro expensis [etc.] Datum sub sigillo officii nostri, apud Glasgw, die xliij^a mensis Julii anno Domini m^o quingentesimo xlvij^o.

A docquet runs: Dominica vltima mensis Julii execute fuerunt presentes apud Kilbirny per curatum eiusdem publice coram parochianis, tempore misse, etc.

5. Notarial instrument recording an agreement whereby Andrew Hamilton of Cochnoch, with consent of John archbishop of St. Andrews and abbot of Paisley, "contentit, applesit, satisfiet, and as"sithit plesandly" the tenants and "fermoreris" of Easter Cochnoch, by giving them other mailings or farms in Wester Cochnoch, for those they had renounced right to in Easter Cochnoch, 13 November 1555.
6. Charter by John archbishop of St. Andrews and abbot of the monastery of Paisley, whereby for an augmentation of annual rent, a sum of money, and manifold favours done to the abbey, he grants to Gavin, perpetual commendator of Kilwinning, and to Gavin Hamilton, his son, heritably, etc.,

the lands of Barnys, Culboi Wester, and Culboi Easter, in the abbot's barony of Kilpatrick, within the regality of Paisley and shire of Lennox, to be held in feufarm of the abbey under such augmentation of the old rental as is specified in the charter. One of the witnesses is Mr. Alexander Forest, provost of the College Kirk of St. Mary of the Fields at Edinburgh. Paisley, 20 March 1560-1.

7. Charter by King James the Sixth confirming the foregoing charter and another, and having as much strength and force to the said Gavin Hamilton, his heirs and assigns, as if it had been granted before the death of the said Gavin, commendator of Kilwinning, or the process of forfeiture led in parliament against him and John archbishop of St. Andrews, and the said Gavin himself, for certain crimes of treason and lese-majesty, of which they were convicted in parliament. Dalkeith, 26 October 1574.
8. Confirmation by Claud, commendator of Paisley, of the charter of 20 March 1560 (supra, No. 6). Paisley, 20 May 1575.
9. Precept by Lord Claud, commendator of Paisley, directing Robert Crawford, "granitar" of the abbey, to give seizin of Barns, etc., to Gavin Hamilton, son of Gavin, late commendator of Kilwinning. Paisley, 1575.
10. Letter of pension, in Scotch, by Lord Claud, commendator of Paisley, for the sum of 135*l*. 6*s*. yearly to Gavin Hamilton, of Roploch; to which effect he assigns mailis, etc. out of the lands of Barnis, Culbowie Easter, and Culbowie Wester in the shire of Dumbarton, and out of Granis in the barony of Renfrew, extending to 35*l*. 6*s*.; and binds himself to pay 100*l*. yearly out of the readiest of the fruits of the "twapart" of the benefice and patrimony of Paisley. Paisley, 19 January 1577.
11. Charter by Claud, commendator of Paisley, confirming a charter by Gavin Hamilton, of Roploch, of the lands of Bornis and Culbowie Easter and Wester to Claud Hamilton, his son, and the heirs male of his body, whom failing to Gavin, the said Claud's brother, etc., to be held heritably of the commendator of Paisley. Paisley, 20 January 1577-8.

Subjoined is a ratification of the above (dated at Place of Blakistoun, 6 April 1610) by James Earl of Abercorn, as commissioner for his father, Claud, commendator of Paisley.

12. Notarial instrument on the refusal of Claud Hamilton, of Cochnoch, to infest Luke Stirriling in an annual rent of 10 merks, for which he had a precept from William abbot of Paisley. Dated 31 March 1580.
13. Notarial instrument narrating that Luke Stirriling, having in his hands a precept from the chancery of the abbot and convent of Paisley, in the third form, under testimony of their seal, charging Claud Hamilton, of Cochnoch, to invest and infest the said Luke (as in the preceding instrument No. 12), accompanied with a notary public and witnesses, passed to the castle of Cochnoch, as the dwelling place of the said Claud, to present the precept and crave infestment, but that the door of the fortalice was shut against him, and he was repulsed by Claud's servants; whereupon, after knocking three times, he affixed the precept to the door, making intimation thereof to the servants and porter. Done at the said fortalice, 1 May 1580.
14. Charter by William, commendator of the monastery of Paisley, whereby he grants to Robert Fowlis, brother of James Fowlis of Colinton, the lands of Wester Cochnoch, then occupied by Claud Hamilton and his sub-tenants; to be held of the commendator for 3*l*. 15*s*. Scots, the ancient ferme, 10*s*. for diets in autumn, and carriages; with 5*s*. 4*d*. for the culture of grain, the sum for which all the grain grown on the above lands were ground at the abbey's mill of Drumtochir. Paisley, 7 January 1580-1.
15. Charter by Alexander Seyton of Vrachair, perpetual commendator of Pluscarden and feu-farmer of Wester Cochnoch, to Claud Hamilton of Cochnoch, etc. of the lands of Wester Cochnoch, in the regality of Paisley, to be held of the grantor and his heirs. Edinburgh, 27 July 1587.
16. Charter by James Earl of Abercorn, Lord Paisley and Kilpatrick, giving heritably and irredeemably to Robert Hamilton of Barnes, the lands of Easter Cochna, Wester Cochna, Bellwarthill, the superiority of Meikle Fairlay, in the regality of Paisley and shire of Dumbarton : to be held of the grantor and his heirs for 26 merks yearly, three suits at the three head courts of the regality of Paisley, taking the grain to the mill of Duntocher for payment of the knaveship, and paying the watch-meal in use and wont to be paid to the keepers of Dumbarton Castle. Paisley, 6 May 1647.

Miss
HAMILTON.

17. Remission by King James the Seventh to John Hamilton, son of the deceased Robert Hamilton of Barnes, for the crime of treason and lese-majesty in accession to the rebellion excited in Scotland in 1685 by Archibald Earl of Argyll; the remission extending to his life and liberty, goods and estates. Whitehall, 10 November 1687.

There are many receipts and other documents relating to the "watch-meal" of Kilpatrick, an old cess made for the defence of the district. This tax or mail, then owned by the Duchess of Lennox and Duke of Montrose, became the subject of litigation before the Scottish lords of session for some time about the year 1700. During the process the lords gave a commission to Sir James Smollett of Bonhill and Tobias Smollett his son [uncle of the novelist, his namesake,] to take the depositions of various persons interested in the matter in dispute.

Towards the close of the 17th century, the district still required careful and methodical defence against highland raiders. A paper entitled "The Roll of the Watchkeepers within the regality of Kilpatrick, 1680," gives a list of the watchers, between 70 and 80 in number, with the following provisions—"In caise of allarme of ane hostile invasion of the muire, in our onne defence James Hamilton, Barnes' brother, to comend all against the broken and vagabond Highlanders, and the rest of the lordships to assist if neid beis.

"The appointment is thatt everie six nights ther be on of the abovescriit corporalls, with eleven men, shall meitt at the Queen's Seatt in the muire and ther to receive such orders as to the design abovescriit as the corporall upon the place shall find expedient; and particularly thatt upon the appearance of or upon the theft newly comitted by thesse Highlaud robbers, thatt immediattly thy aquaint the captain, quho is to advertish the comander of those appointed for this busines, and everie absent is, except upon just and reasonable excuses, to pay fortie shilling Scots to the baillie, the half quherof is to be employed in provyding this watch with ammunition; and the corporall to give up the absents upon oath."

At the time of the Revolution of 1688 the district was threatened with the old Highland scourge. The laird of Barnes, who seems at that time to have represented his shire in the Scottish Parliament, was requested in 1689 (1) "to represent to the Council the sad condition of the country by the insults of the Highland robbers, who, pretending King James's commission, gather together for robberies and depredation in greater numbers nor the country is able to resist, and in all probability will lay all waste upon the borders of the Highlands in Dumbartonshire and the west end of Stirlingshire . . . And that the garrisons planted there are not able to deal with them, neither for their number, nor the manner of their travel, and bounds, in which they haunt, as was lately seen in the garrison of Drummakill, at the hership taken out of Kilmarnock;" (2) To recommend the strengthening of the garrisons of Drummakill and Cardross to 200 men, with an out-watch of 200 men to lie in small parties, moving from place to place, as covertly as possible, from the head of Loch Lomond to the foot of Loch Tay, men and officers alike to be Lowland. (3) To petition the council for the appointment of officers in all the parishes bordering on the Highlands, to raise 50 or 60 men out of each parish, who should be ready to march at 12 hours warning. (4) To recommend a committee of gentlemen resident on the borders of the Highlands, who should meet weekly, discuss intelligence, give orders to the garrisons, watch the country, and have power to deal summarily with suspected persons.

Miss
HAMILTON.

WILLIAM FRASER.

Edinburgh, 32 Castle Street,
13 May 1879.

REPORT ON THE MANUSCRIPTS OF ALEXANDER CHARLES STUART, ESQ., OF EAGLESCARNE. BY WILLIAM FRASER, EDINBURGH.

A.C.
STUART,
ESQ.

The estate of Eaglescarne, in the county of Haddington, was held by a younger branch of the family of Haliburton until the middle of last century, when it was acquired by Mr. Patrick Lindsay, a cadet of the ancient house of Lindsay of the Byres, through his marriage with Margaret, only daughter of Thomas Haliburton, of Eaglescarne. Many of the papers in this collection refer to the private affairs of the family of Haliburton, but the chief interest of the collection rests on the letters of the Lindsay family written during the first half of the eighteenth century. Mr. Patrick Lindsay, father of the husband of Margaret Haliburton, was a prominent Burgess and merchant of Edinburgh, and was elected to the office of Lord Provost of the city, the highest municipal honour. After holding this office he was returned to Parliament as member for the city, the interests of which he seems to have represented with no small vigour. While he was a member of the House of Commons, the now historic Porteous riots, universally known through the graphic narrative of Sir Walter Scott in the "Heart of Midlothian," occurred in the metropolis of Scotland. The occasion of these riots may be here briefly stated. On a Sunday in April 1736, two criminals, named respectively Wilson and Robertson, who had been condemned to death for the robbery of the excise office at Pittenweem, were taken to one of the churches in Edinburgh in charge of four soldiers, to worship with the congregation. While in church, Wilson, who was a very powerful man, suddenly laid hold of the four soldiers, and, keeping them engaged, allowed his companion to escape. None of the congregation sought to stop the fugitive; and the disinterested conduct of Wilson, who was then led back to prison, raised for him feelings of pity among the populace. On the morning of his execution, which took place shortly after, some of the spectators pelted the executioner and the city guard, under command of Captain Porteous, with stones. Porteous then ordered his men to fire upon the crowd, with the result that six or seven people were killed and others wounded. The friends of those killed and the townspeople generally then called for vengeance upon Porteous. He was tried and condemned to death, but was afterwards reprieved, which still more exasperated the mob. People flocked to Edinburgh from other places to swell the numbers that were already thirsting for Porteous's blood. They overpowered the city guard, dragged forth the unfortunate man, and executed him forthwith. Mr. Lindsay appears in the novel of Sir Walter Scott, already named, as having undertaken to carry a verbal message from the Lord Provost to Colonel Moyle, who was in command of the forces at the Canongate, but that officer declined to interfere without a written warrant from the municipal authorities. The first paper in the present Report is a minute description by Alexander Wilson, Lord Provost of Edinburgh, of the riot which took place at the execution of Andrew Wilson, written on the 15th of April, the day following the riot. The other letters in this division of the Report, from Duncan Forbes of Culloden, Mr. George Irving, an Edinburgh advocate, and the Lord Provost of the city, reveal the anxious state of the official mind, and the fearful excitement of the populace, which had not subsided even at the beginning of 1737.

The letters noted below under the heading "Letters chiefly regarding the licensing of a theatre in Edinburgh," illustrate a curious squabble that occurred in Edinburgh in the early half of last century. Allan Ramsay, the poet, Sir John Clerk, of Penicuik, and other prominent citizens, were strongly in favour of the proposed playhouse, while the town council and the authorities of the University were as firmly opposed to it. Feeling on both sides ran high, Ramsay declaring, with regard to the opposition of the principal of the University, that "all the sputter was about a bit school which they nickname a college," the other side not being one whit behind in complimentary allusions. The playful letter of Allan Ramsay has quite an equal in that of the poetic baron, who makes the quiet thrust at his opponents "that our young ministers preach with a "better grace and tone since a playhouse was first encouraged in Edinburgh." It may be mentioned that in 1737, the magistrates had closed the Edinburgh theatre, the erection of which in 1731, had been due to the enterprise of Ramsay.

A.C.
STUART,
Esq.

In this division has also been included another letter by the author of "The Gentle Shepherd," a humorous and most graceful plea by the poet for a pension to his son Allan, the well-known portrait painter, who was then only 22 years of age, but had already attained such local note that his fond parent could say "it was not a "bad politick for young beauties to be seen and known "in my son's painting room."

Among the papers on the rebellion of 1745 will be found a "Journal of Route with the Hessians" from 5th March to 3rd April 1746, evidently written by one who accompanied this corps, and affording a minute and faithful, if not extremely interesting, narrative of the movements of the 6,000 Hessians, who were commanded by John Earl of Crawford. This corps was engaged in occupying the passes into the Lowlands, but was not compelled into any serious conflict with the rebels.

The letters of Thomas Gordon, a successful political pamphleteer during the ministry of Sir Robert Walpole, but who is now remembered only for his translations of Tacitus and Sallust, are not without interest, as affording an intimate view of a peculiar literary phenomenon of that period.

The report has been arranged in the following divisions:—

- I. Letters on the Porteous Riots, 1736-7.
- II. Letters, chiefly on the licensing of a theatre in Edinburgh, 1739.
- III. Papers on the Rebellion of 1745-6.
- IV. Miscellaneous papers, 1679-1747.

I.

1. Alexander Wilson, Lord Provost of Edinburgh, to Patrick Lindsay, M.P.

Edinburgh, 15 April 1736.

"You have the trouble of this to acquaint you of a verie unlucky accident quihich happened yesterday here on occasion of the execution of Andrew Wilson, who was lately condemned by the Lords of Justiciary for robbing the excise office at Pittenweem. Some of the multitude of spectators threw stones at the executioner when he was going up the ladder to cutt down the criminall, & forced him back, & some of the criminall's friends reached up from the ground & cutt the rope; but after he had hung about twenty-five minuts, so that he was quite dead, tho' before the signal had been given by the magistratts, which was expressly ordered to be waited for. Some of the stones lighted amongst the party of our City Guard, commanded by Captain Porteous, and they, after drawing off a little from the scaffold towards the Bow and Corn Mercat, fired about twenty sharp shots directly amongst the middle of the croud & killed seven or eight persons dead upon the spot and wounded as many dangerously. Upon a pre-cognition taken last night and this day, it seems very evident that Captain Porteous himself fired the first shot, and ordered his men to fire, tho' he denied both. You may be very sure the whole town is not a little alarmed at this accident & eager to have the actors in it punished, which indeed justice seems to require. I've granted warrant, upon what appeared from the pre-cognition, for imprisoning Captain Porteous in order to his tryall. I've also granted warrant for imprisoning fourteen of the soldiers who appeared, by inspection of their arms, to have fired. And they and their captain are now in close prison; and it will be necessary to proceed to bring them to tryall, for quieting the minds of the inhabitants. But I would take it as an obligation from you that you would lay the case before our friends at London, particularly my Lord Isla, His Majesty's advocate & solicitor, as to making the tryall before the Lords of Justiciary, or before our own court as sheriffs. The former seems to us to be the more advisable qhatsoever should be the event of the tryall. I must likewise acquaint you of another accident which happened on the Sunday before, and discovered the humour of the town to be very strongly on the syde of the criminalls who were condemned on the above account, which was that Robertson, the other person condemned, made his escape out of the church, in the face of the congregation, the guard who were attending them having been taken up in holding the other criminal, who was a strong man [and] laid hands on the four soldiers who were attending them, and kepted them fast until Robertson escaped. And not a person put out their hand to stop Robertson; on the contrary, everybody made way for him. This and some other marks of the humour of the town, made us apply to General Moyl for a party of the soldiers of the Canon-gate, and two or three companies of them were sent up to us, with directions to do nothing but att the sight and by the directions of the magistratts, quihich they very regularly and punctually obeyed, and by good fortune had no share in the misfortune that happned, for we brought them no furder than the Lawn Mercat, where I staid with them, and they gave offence to nobody. But their presence, I believe, had a good effect to prevent disorders which we had some reason to suspect would have been attempted. Bailie Crockett and B[ailie] Hamilton attended the execution, but had gone up to the house where the magistratts commonly go all such occasions, before the above-mentioned disorder began; and it happned so much of a sudden that it was impossible to prevent it. . . ."

2. Mr. George Irving to Mr. Patrick Lindsay, M.P.

Edinburgh, 17 April 1736.

"Thinks Robertson's escape cannot be well accounted for, "though not to be charged on the administrators. "As for the execution, you have a copy of the pre-cognition, as far as could be taken, transmitted by "Lord Provost. . . . The city is in great indignation "against Porteous, and crying loudly for vengeance "suddenly. This mischief, I think, has arisen from "his madness. However, a prosecution against him is "a critical thing. Should it be neglected, people "would be disquieted, and should it go on, a city guard "may be of little use, unless it proceed on his acting "contrary to orders, or without orders, which I believe "may be the case." He thinks that Porteous, as captain of the City Guard, should not be tried before the Justiciary, but before the Lord Provost.

3. The same to the same.

Edinburgh, 19th April 1736.

"The pre-cognition against Porteous takes up all our time. I believe it will be employment for us all this week.

"Some of the soldiers are beginning to give evidence against him. It is a pitiful case. The fury of the populace is still growing against him, and will do so probably while more of the wounded are dying. One Ballantine, a young gentleman, died this morning; and other two are in great danger. The Justice Clerk came to town upon Bailie Hamilton's waiting on him, and was with the magistratts in the council chamber yesterday after sermons a considerable time. My Lord Provost this day waited on Lords Newhall and Strichan to prevent wrong impressions. . . ."

"No resolution is yet taken when nor how to proceed. Some are for advising Mr. Dundas, who came home last week. Others are for sending up a state of the matter to advise the advocat and solicitor. I own I am of opinion with the latter, and that no trial should be begun till they return. However, I am apprehensive it will be difficult to get them into it, because of the loud crys of the people for speedy justice.

"A resolution is taken in order to quiet the minds of the people a little that Porteous, on Wednesday next, be dismissed from his office."

4. Lord Provost Wilson to Patrick Lindsay, M.P.

Edinburgh, 23 April, 1736.

"As the proceeding to a tryal of Captain Porteous is insisted on with great keenness and the competency of the city's jurisdiction may be doubtful (however reasonable and necessary it may be for the city to have a power to try even capital offences of their soldiers and officers in the execution of their duty) a resolution is taken to have an opinion from my Lord Advocat and Mr. Solicitor concerning the same. Wherefore a memorial is drawn up by Mr. Haldan, stating the city's right to such a jurisdiction. . . ."

"If the magistratts are incompetent the tryal before the justiciary cannot be brought on till first of June, and will be attended with a considerable expense. However, to quiet the minds of the people, it is absolutely necessary that it be carried on so soon as possible, in such manner as the Advocate and Solicitor shall advise.

"Inclosed you also have an abstract of the rest of the pre-cognition, whence you'll observe that, notwith-

A.C.
STUART,
Esq.

A. C.
STUART,
Esq.

standing of former accounts, the number of deaths does not yet exceed six.

"Upon Wednesday last the council did unanimously dismiss Captain Porteous from his office, which he held only during their pleasure. This was most agreeable to every one."

5. Mr. George Irving to Mr. Lindsay.—"Edinburgh, 23 April 1736.—The dismissal of Captain Porteous from his office quieted the minds of the people a little, but their anxiety to bring him speedily to justice abates nothing. By reason of that, and by a panic which has seized the soldiers and even some others, it was thought inexpedient for several nights to beat any taptu; and even now it is thought inexpedient to let the soldiers seize beggars on the streets, tho' of late they are become too frequent, or to allow the soldiers to point for cess."

"These things considered make it necessary to concert when and where Porteous shall be tried speedily, and hence it is this express is forwarded to have the opinion of the Advocate and Solicitor, in obtaining of which no time should be lost nor in transmitting it."
The writer still advocates trial by the magistrates, as they could give a charge to fire, so they should have right of trial; otherwise their command would be powerless. If not a competent court, then let the direction of the guard be in the hands of the Justiciary.

6. Duncan Forbes of Culloden, Lord Advocate, afterwards President of the Court of Session, to Mr. Lindsay.
"Culloden, 11 September 1736.—Dear Peter.—A tour
I was obliged to make throw Strathspey, to Gordon Castle, and so back again throw Murray, was the reason why I missed the last post, and omitted to return you Mr. Trelawney's letter, which I take to be a strong picture of his mind. I have such faith in his sobriety and evenness of temper, that I hope he will return safe to us; but I doubt the very talent for which I love him chiefly will prevent this jaunt's being so beneficial to his family as his friends may wish. If I thought a letter from me would reach him in England, and knew where it would find him, I should trouble him with a line or two to wish him a good voyage, an honourable government, and a safe return."

"It is natural enough for you to imagine that I have some leisure here, but I solemnly declare the persecution I met with here is greater and more disagreeable than any I ever yet have been cursed with, and if it continue, I shall, I believe, be forced to fly the country.
Whilst I am writing, the nonsense of about half-a-score of fools, who wait to get drunk at dinner, mars the connection of this scrawl."

"Porteous's reprieve is owing, I perceive, to the application of General Wade. I wish it may have a good effect."

7. Mr. Irving to Mr. Lindsay.—"Edinburgh, 18th January 1737. There were daily appearing fresh instances of the consequences of the late dismal affairs. Licen-tiousness is turned to such a height here that about ten days ago, Henry Osborn, under night, as he was walking home, was attacked & insulted by a gang of barbers' servants. Three of them are convicted and are in prison." The shops of two merchants had been broken into during the preceding week. On Sunday morning "a gang of street walkers" assailed a sentry near the Nether Bow, seized his arms, and "beat him so barbarously that he is in the utmost danger;" and the same night a similar gang assaulted the sentries at the Provost's lodging. Rough, a basket-maker's servant, and Henderson, a barber's assistant, were apprehended as accessory to the Nether Bow assault, and warrants were issued for the seizure of four others.
Every second night six soldiers and two town officers went about in disguise to make apprehensions. The city guard still in a panic and of little use.

8. The same to the same.—"Edinburgh, 27th January, 1737.—"Porteous' affair has already been attended with many ill consequences to this place, and a parliamentary enquiry may add thereto; for, tho' the innocence of the magistrates shall appear as clear as sunshine, which I hope will be the case both as to accession or convivance, yet it will create great trouble and expense and may weaken the hands of the magistrates, so as authority may not be kept here without some other aid."

"Your friends here are perswaded that you'll exert yourself to prevent, as far as in you lays, any further expense, and at the same time do perceive that in the relation you stand in to the town, your information or affirmation may be under some suspicion of partiality."

A. C.
STUART,
Esq.

"There is likewise enclosed a copie of a letter from Porteous's widow, vindicating the magistrats from the vile aspersions thrown upon them."

"It is not only notour, as is known to yourself, but also, were it necessary, a proof may be brought to show that the surprize was such, and the inhabitants were so intimidated, as that it was impossible for the magistrats to have any force sufficient to have prevented the mischief, unless they had got it from the military, and it is to yourself known as well as to many others that that could not be obtained timeously. Neither should the magistrats nor community be suspected of convivance because there is no discovery so as some of the guilty may be brought to punishment, for it was done in the night by strangers and the lawless sort of inhabitants in disguise. No means has been omitted to attain to a discovery, and both the first and second acts of council have contributed thereto, whereby multitudes have fled and thereby taken guilt on them. While an enquiry was on by the Lord Advocate and Solicitor, who have laboured therein with great assiduity, the magistrats never failed to give what concurrence and assistance thereto that was required. The magistrats also discovered those who transported themselves from Glasgow; and a list thereof was delivered to the solicitor, whereof you have a copie by this or by next post. There were sundry also taken up and imprisoned, some whereof remain unengaged."

II. Letters, chiefly on the Licensing of a Theatre in Edinburgh, 1739.

9. Allan Ramsay to Lord Provost Lindsay. "Edinburgh, 5 April 1735.—"My Lord, Duty to you as our chief magistrate demands my service, but a constant esteem and affection I have ever had for you, which engages my heart, must ever bind me yours and make me execute your commands with pleasure. When I write to you I have little more to say but to tell you so much, and keep myself in a distant view, now when the grandes of Britain endeavour to engross you all to themselves. Two days ago I paid my respects to your lady and family, and had the pleasure to see them all hearty and well. Miss Peggy Stuart, Sir James's sister, was married the other day to Mr.
Calderwood of Polton. My son had made one excellent half-length picture of her, and I begin to think it not a bad politick for young beautys to be seen and known in my son's painting room, where so many of the beau-monde so frequently resort. I am daily teaz'd with advices about sending the young man abroad. I am perswaded, my Lord, they are in the right (vos pop.) and it would certainly turn out more to their advantage as well as his, if that genius which he has received from the bounty of nature were enriched with what he might acquire by an acquaintance with the works of Titian, Rafael, Corregio, & other immortal artists. But how is this to be done? I know one way. My Lord Ilay does not disregard me (dinna laugh). I had his Lordship in my closet the day before he left this place, near two hours, making bas-reliefs.
He was much pleas'd with my art, lug'd out some curious antique gems which I took molds of, and promised to bring me a boxfull the next time he comes down. My dear and valuable patron, the Advocate, has honoured me often with his approbation and beneficence, and you yourself have, in frequent instances, shewn your friendship, not to name many more leading persons by whom I have been favoured for what I have done, when I took the air on Parnassus. Now, if my Lord Ilay, Coloden, and the Provost of Edinburgh had a mind, they could say to my son—YOUNG MAN, foras-much as it has been reported to His most gracious Majesty George the Second, whom God long preserve, that you have a promising genius for painting, and since your father, who never lifted his pen against his sovereign or thrown aspersions on those whom he delights to honour, like many of the scoun-drell scribblers, but has behaved himself like a prudent and loyal subject, yet has it not in his power to perfitte your education as it ought, thus sayeth His Majesty, OUR WILL is, and we order and give to Allan Ramsay, painter, the sum of 100 guineas per annum, for five years, to carry him abroad for his improvement in painting, and, in return, be it to give us as a mark of his gratitude, one of his best performances from the Tuscan Gallery or the Vatican, and serve us in his way when commanded."

"This may do, and I know nothing to hinder it if the foresaid patrons approve of the proposal. Sir

A. C.
STUART,
Esq.

"Robert should not oppose it if he were informed that my boy is spreading his picture through this country, which he took from a fine original of his master's, Mr. Hyssing, in which we see that frank openness accompanied with the steady resolution and evenness of mind, which make eminent parts of his great character. Let beagles bark who are bawled of by the bane. Wishing you health and a happy return, I am, &c."

10. Sir John Clerk, of Pencuik, to Mr. Lindsay, 4 April, 1739. Sends a more correct draught of certain letters in the north frieze of Roslin Chapel, "now that the chapel has been clean'd from all the weeds and fog [moss] which grew about . . . Allan Ramsay, I am told, is in great spirits from the appearance of a bill authorizing plays in Edinburgh . . . I do assure you it will displease nobody but ministers who, by their trade, must be displeased, or some antiquated folks who can be pleased with nothing of this kind. The narrow, enthusiastick spirit which governs multitudes in Edinburgh wants much to be enlarged by some contrivance of this kind, and I have been very sensible that our young ministers preach with a better grace and tone since a playhouse was first encouraged in Edinburgh."

11. Allan Ramsay to Patrick Lindsay, M.P. Edinburgh, 5th April 1739. "Sir, I am sorry that you may be in some manner obliged sometimes by your situation to have offices put in your hand that cannot be agreeable; particularly, before this reaches you, you'll have a petition or two, to desire your assistance towards the impoverishing and stupefying the good town, by getting everything that tends towards politeness or good humour banished, that antichristian and gloomy enthusiasm and contention may prevail. Who requires it? You know them well enough. The least and meanest of the place are the most bulky. Does some of better thinking join them? 'Tis all grimace. Some of the now leaders against the playhouse within these three years had their annual tickets! Fly for shame! Will mankind never, with one accord, learn to rise above the arrogant pride of priestcraft? It is certain we can never be happy and social till this period. Sir, you are not to esteem an address from a few to be from the town council, for many would not concur and sign, particularly the conveneer, the commanding captain, and treasurer, as I am told, with many others. However, I hope the parliament will have more regard to the general desire of the best in our nation who frequent our city, and to the inclinations of most of the citizens, than to refuse His Majesty the power of obliging them. As for my private share in a case of this consequence, that can bear little weight; though some weak heads here are foolish enough to say that all this parliamentary affair is rais'd about me. I thank them for complimenting me so far; I never imagined myself before to be of the hundredth part so much note. However, as far as lies in my small power, I am willing to serve my king and country; and, in so far as I have been one of the agents in this affair of our playhouse, I think I have been in my duty and endeavouring to serve the city where I live, better than that violent, most learned Regent Ro. Stuart, who is at the bottom of all this spatter about a bit school that they nickname a college. But, it is my opinion that we had better want this same shadow of an university as to turn our town into a sour, dull hole. You would have been diverted to have seen Hwel, the d[ean of] guild officer, and some such like, running about to all the little people, to get them to sign the petition against the graceless playhouse. I sup'd with Baron Clerk this night. He is clear for the playhouse; said he wrote to you by this post, wherein he hinted to you something in its favour. You may make what use of this letter you please. But whether in favour or against my side of question, I shall ever maintain for you, in my heart, the esteem your friendship in other matters demands from, Sir, your, &c."

12. James Colquhoun, Lord Provost of Edinburgh, to Mr. Lindsay 5 April 1739.—Refers to the Bleaching Bill and the Merchant Company's petition.—"The Bill to authorize a playhouse here justly alarms the whole body of the inhabitants, and therefore the council did yesterday unanimously resolve to petition the Parliament against it, which was accordingly signed in council. The D[ean of] Guild and a great number of merchants have signed another, and the Principal, in name of the College have signed a third; all which I have herewith sent you, which you'll present in what manner you think best . . .

I 120.

A. C.
STUART,
Esq.

"The Council have authorised me to write you, to take all legal method to oppose it, and, if . . . expedient, to employ council. As our people are apprehensive this bill may be pushed through, the Council have directed me to send their petitions by express . . . I am told Allan Ramsay and some others are endeavouring a subscription in favours of the bill. You may easily guess what sort of hands will be got to it."

In a letter, under date 14 April, the same writer says,—"Allan Ramsay got a petition in favour of the bill signed by a good number of gentlemen and ladies, and, I hear, got a great number of names added to it in an odd way, but the bulk of the burghers and constant residents are extremely against it."

III. Papers on the Rebellion of 1745-6.

13. Printed pass by Prince Charles Edward to Patrick Lindsay, with two surgeons, allowing them "to pass" and repass from Edinburgh to Prestonpans without "lett or molestation." Holyroodhouse, 23 April 1745.

14. Lord George Murray's releasement of Mr. Lindsay's parole. States that the latter, after coming out of the Castle of Edinburgh, on Sunday, the 29 September, "gave his parole not to return without liberty," and, as he came on a message regarding the town of Edinburgh, he is now at liberty to return, giving no information as to military affairs of what has hapned since that time."

15. Copy of the obligation signed by the officers on parole, who had been captured at Gladsnuir, dated Holyroodhouse, 28 September 1745. Requires the officers to repair to Perth, and to remain there for fifteen days and procure furniture for the place to be appointed for them afterwards. States that an escort would be appointed to prevent insults from straggling soldiers, from any surprise from Stirling Castle, &c.

16. Copy of the wounded officers' parole.

17. List of persons to be attainted, fifty-six in number.

18. List of the clans, with the sums paid them by Sir P. Murray for King William.

19. Order of Battle of Sir John Cope's army, 20 September 1745.

20. Journal of Route with the Hessians. Left Edinburgh the 5th March 1746, and went by Hoptoun, Stirling, and Creif to Perth, where we arrived the 9th, nothing material having happen'd during the march. Two battalions were left at Creif, and the other 4 with Prince and Hussars came to Perth.

The 14th.—The Prince, Lord Crawford, and their suites went to Dunkeld to visit the Duke and reconnoitre the country. Nothing material happen'd there, but that everybody, from Prince to groom's boy, got excessively drunk with arrack punch. We intended next day to go by Castle Menzies and Taybridge to Taymouth, but the news of the rebels' approach towards Blair made it expedient to return to Perth. Nothing extraordinary happen'd till the 23^d, when express orders came from H.R.H. the Duke, for the 4 regiments, the Hussars, and St. George's Dragoons to march immediately from Perth to the relief of Blair; and accordingly, on the 24th, at 6 in the morning, they marched to Nairn House, halting there that day; and next morning advice came that the rebels had quitted Dunkeld, and a party of ours that were at Little Dunkeld had taken possession of it. There had been continual firing for the 2 preceding days betwixt our Dragoons & Hussars, and the rebels that were on the opposite side of the river, during which time one of our Hussars was wounded.

25th.—Halted at Nairn, and orders were that day given for 500 Hessian Foot and 50 Dragoons to march from Creif to the Bridge of Tay, and keep that post; and for St. George's Dragoons to march to Dalponey and Dunkeld.

27th.—Small parties of Dragoons and Hussars were sent out a-reconnoitring. They went 8 or 9 miles, exchanged shots with the out-parties of the rebels, and returned in the evening, giving account that 4 or 500 of the rebels were this side the pass.

28th. A rumour being spread that the rebels intended to attack the army here, the Prince thought proper to order the 2 regiments of foot, and Naizon's and Hamilton's Dragoons to march from Creif to Dunkeld, leaving the detachment at Taybridge. However, tho' expected next day, they did not arrive till the 30th.

29th.—At 4 in the morning, a hussar that belonged to an out-party came in a great hurry to acquaint the Prince that the rebels were marching up, in two columns, to attack the army, and that he did not think they would

R r

A.C.
STUART.
Esq.

be above four miles from us at that time. The 4 regiments of foot and St. George's Dragoons were therefore accordingly order'd to be drawn up on a strong ground above the Duke's house, which had been before marked out. The Dragoons were placed in the center, with a regiment and a half of foot on each flank, and the Grenadier Regiment posted in a field, a little way to the right of the army, where, 'twas thought the enemy would first make their attack, as being the best road for coming to us. But after being about an hour in the field, some of the partys and messengers that had been sent out, came in, who assured us that the enemy was not nearer than 10 miles, and that what the Hussars took to be the rebel army, was only a row of trees, or some such thing; so that the army returned again to their quarters. (The Hussars, on the first alarm, had been all sent out to reconnoitre.)

30th.—Nothing extraordinary happen'd, except that a volunteer Hussar who had been taken prisoner the day before by an accident of his horse being shot under him, returned to Dunkeld about 12 o'clock, with a letter from Lord George Murray to the Prince, which was wrote in a very high strain, desiring to know in what manner the Hussar troops were to act, and, if they would settle any cartel with relation to prisoners, for that he did not imagine they would act like the English, with whom there was no faith to be kept, having broken their parole of honour, and that they had begun by freely releasing the Hussar.

30th March, Dunkeld.—The same evening, two hussars that had been out upon a reconnoitring party came in wounded, the one in the thigh and t'other in the knee, by musket balls, but not dangerous.

31st.—The D. of Athol's gardiner having escaped out of Blair Castle with letters which gave an account that the garrison cou'd not hold out much longer, for that the rebels were firing upon them incessantly from their battery of two cannons with red-hot bullets, that a great part of the roof was beat down, and continually in danger of the house being in fire about their ears. Lord Crawford did therefore repeat his entreatys for the march of the Hussars to its relief. Accordingly, in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, 400 Foot and all the Dragoons marched to Dowly, 5 miles from Dunkeld.

1st April.—Lord Crawford, with St. George's Dragoons being two squadrons, marched from Dowly at 6 in the morning to reconnoitre the enemy (having sent two partys of Dragoons and Hussars before), he, in case of necessity, being to be supported by the foot and Naizon's and Hamilton's Dragoons who were left at Dowly, drawn up in order of battle, and continued so till he should return or send them word. He marched on very quietly as far as Moulinarne, when he was informed that the rebel army was drawn up in order of battle about 2 miles from thence. Accordingly, upon advancing a little farther, we saw them drawn up on the top of a little green hill cover'd with long heath, with a brush of wood upon their right flank, where they continued for a little time, till, seeing our two first partys, the one of 30 dragoons and some hussars, and t'other of 100 dragoons, advance, the remainder following, they march'd off that ground from their right, and drew up again across the high road behind the village of Pitlochry upon plain ground. They were drawn up in one line only, 2 men deep, and the men standing wide to magnify their numbers, which we reckoned to be about 800. We was not more than a quarter of a mile from them, and, some hussars and dragoons being sent out to annoy them, they continued but a few minutes upon that also, when, facing about, they retreated very fast, tho' in good order, to the pass, which was about a mile from the ground they had left. Some of the hussars pursued them so close, that they had very nearly come up with three of their officers mounted, who had stay'd behind; but one of Lord Crawford's hussars, who was foremost, being wounded in the foot by a highlander that fired on him from behind a stone, and another being wounded in the breast, they were oblig'd to leave off the pursuit. We advanced, however, very quietly to within half a quarter of a mile of the entry to the pass, and stood some time to reconnoitre the enemy, who had taken possession of all the tops of the hills, as well as the pass itself; so that my Lord, having no foot along with him, thought proper to return, making a circuit by Moulin, from which place there is a narrow road up the hill, by which foot may very well go and avoid the pass. We afterwards made a large tour, reconnoitring all the grounds about, in order to choose proper places for the outposts and sentinels; which being done, he returned with the body of the cavalry to Moulinarne, where he intended to have lain all night and return next morning with the foot to attack the rebels; "mais à dix heures du soir,

"il recevoit une lettre du Prince de Hesse, importante que lui et les generaux, ayant consulté sur le projet de la dite expedition, étoit d'opinion qu'il ne pouvoit pas se faire, et pour ces raisons, il avoit donné ordre au Colonel qui commandoit le detachement à Dowley de se tenir prêt retourner à Dunkeld le moment qu'il auroit avis de Milord Crawford, qu'il est aussi prêt." My Lord, therefore, finding it impossible to go any further without Foot, resolved to return very early in the morning to Dunkeld; and accordingly, at one o'clock in the morning, sent, with as much secrecy as possible, to the dragoons and hussars that were upon the outposts, to join him immediately with everything belonging to them, with orders to leave their fires burning; which orders were executed with the greatest regularity and dispatch, no one imagining but that they were going upon a private expedition against the enemy, till betwixt 2 and 3, that we began our march towards Dunkeld, the baggage being in the center of the two squadrons and my Lord in the rear. We continued our march to Dowley, which is 5 miles from Moulinarne; there was joined by the detachment of foot, and marched with them to Dunkeld.

2d April.—We had not been two hours at Dunkeld when certain accounts came that the rebels, at 2 in the morning, had not only abandoned the pass of Gillcranky, but also the siege of Blair, and had not stop'd till they were twelve miles beyond Blair, in the country of Rannoch. This precipitate retreat was supposed to be occasioned, not only by our body's having advanced and lying so near them and that they might suppose the whole Hessian army was behind us, but also by the 50 dragoons posted at Taybridge having (by Lord Crawford's orders) made a movement towards them at the same time we moved from Dowley, which might make them afraid of being taken both in front and rear. It was resolved, upon this news, that at 3 in the afternoon, Lord Crawford should again march to Moulinarne with the dragoons and the same detachment of 400 grenadiers, and that the Prince should next day march to the same place with a detachment of 1,000 foot, accompany'd by General Wolfe.

3rd April.—Lord Crawford march'd at 8 in the morning for Blair. He left the 400 foot and dragoons on a plain ground, north end of the pass, there to continue and defend it till the provisions should be put into the garrison of Blair. My Lord was received by Sir A. Agnew at the head of his garrison, dined there, and returned in the afternoon to Moulinarne, where the Prince with his detachment was already arrived.

IV. Miscellaneous Papers, 1679-1747.

21. Warrant by John Duke of Lauderdale, as sheriff-principal of Haddington, for George Halliburton of Eaglescarmie, as his depute, to hold courts at the ordinary places accustomed, issue precepts for summoning persons within the said bounds guilty or that shall be guilty of contravening the laws made against separation and withdrawing from public ordinances, keeping or being present at conventicles, persons guilty of disorder by baptisms and marriages, resetting and communing with intercommuned persons and vagrant preachers, etc., in conformity to a letter of the Privy Council, dated 11 March 1679. Whitehall, 3 April 1679.

22. Copy letter, 16 November 1736, from Mr. Patrick Lindsay to Mr. Onslow, Speaker of the House of Commons. The Convention of Royal Burghs had appointed such of their number as were members of Parliament to present the Speaker with a gift of table linen, and "were of opinion that, as persons of the first rank must have occasion of seeing your table linen, this mark of their respect and esteem of you may have the effect to recommend our manufactures to the London mercate." The Speaker, in his reply, 23 November, encloses one hundred pounds "towards the encouragement of an undertaking I have always most heartily wished success to," to be disposed of in some branch of manufacture, as Mr. Lindsay and the Lord Advocate should direct.

23. Mr. Thomas Gordon to Mr. Patrick Lindsay, 4 July 1732. "Yours to me by Lord Crawford came but lately to my hands, and I have since seen him several times, but have not yet had much conversation with him. He seems to have a frank, honest, and friendly mind, and mends upon acquaintance. I see he has good qualities, and, upon the whole, I like him. When we have drunk together alone once or twice, I will tell you more. I intend to call upon him to-morrow or next day for that purpose. I am very

A.C.
STUART.
Esq.

A. C.
STUART, Esq.DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

"glad to see him so much with Lord Islay, who seems to love him. I have taken many occasions to mention you to that Lord and to his brother. . . .
"Has the new edition of the 'Independent Whig' reached you, in two pocket volumes? There is a fifth part of it, new, and, at the latter end, a letter to—ourselves. Have you seen the 'Facts and Reasonings of the Bishop of Chichester's Sermon examined'? It is what I do not own to everybody, tho' many have guessed."

24. The same to the same, 20th December 1735. Refers favourably, but in a patronising tone to Provost Lindsay's book "The Interest of Scotland considered." Gordon was distributing the copies. "Yesterday I gave the Duke his; we dined together at the Bedford Head, with Lord Chief Justice Vaughan. . . . I gave a book to Jack Hill of the Customs, and another to Mr. Horace Walpole, and one to Sir Charles Wager."

25. The same to the same, 29 November 1736. Speaks of the Duke of Argyll "as an extraordinary man, in some respects, perhaps, unequalled, and never exceeded by any man at any time. I wish he thought himself as happy as he really is if he could but think so! I am still in favour with him, as I find from all proofs and all hands; and I value such distinction, as it deserves, very highly. I was concerned to hear him mention you with some sharpness upon your late riot, but equally pleased afterwards to hear him speak of you in very kind strains."

26. The same to the same. "The Summer-house, July 1st, 1740. "All your news about peace and Sir R. [Walpole] are wild and groundless. He is perfectly well, and in as high spirits as ever I knew him. I was with him last Friday from morning till night, without any other company but Lord Ch—ly and Miss [Walpole]. He seems not to think of peace, nor to be concerned about the success of the war. . . . The E. Indiamen are now in all likelihood, by the computation of sailors, within 25 degrees of the line. . . . Admiral Stuart says he would ensure the whole fleet for half-a-crown."

27. Mr. Jo. Wight to Mr. Lindsay. "Old Palace Yard, Westminster, 16 April 1747. Lovat was beheaded on Tower Hill on the 9th instant, and behaved more properly on that day than he did during his trial. He examined no witness in his defence, but complained of undue methods used in Scotland to prevent his witnesses, which, however, he was not able to prove."

With reference to the Bill for abolition of heritable jurisdictions in Scotland, the writer states, "This Bill was some time ago brought into the House of Lords by the Lord Chancellor, but lost. The House of Commons should call it a Money Bill, and it might miscarry upon a dispute between the two Houses. It was let sleep in the House of Lords, and to-day brought into the House of Commons, and on Tuesday last they had a great debate on the 2d reading of it, when it was carried—for the Bill, 233; against, 102. But it will still be opposed in the further progress of it in the Committee; but, from this division, you will easily imagine the opposers can have but little prospect of success."

Besides the above, there are several letters (1640–41) from John second Earl of Lauderdale to Mr. Thomas Haliburton, on matters of small importance; a Manx Act of Parliament, dated 22 September 1726, prohibiting under severe penalties, the exportation of salt from the Isle of Man "to any part of Great Brittain;" a Memorial for John Spottiswood of that ilk, regarding the lands of New Abbey (1730); and several essays by Mr. Patrick Lindsay, with other papers which need not be particularly mentioned.

WILLIAM FRASER.

Edinburgh, 32, Castle Street,
15 January 1879.

SECOND REPORT ON HISTORICAL MSS. BELONGING TO THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF CANTERBURY.

A description of the Chartae Antiquae—the detached documents—contained in the archives of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, appeared in the 5th Report of the Historical MSS Commission. The documents there noticed were all original records,—writs, charters, letters, compositions, papal bulls, &c., a large proportion of them still authenticated by the seals of the great personages from whom they emanated. These Chartae Antiquae amount to only about a thousand in number, and, as a matter of course, do not include more than a portion of the important papers which during many centuries must have come into the hands of the Prior and Chapter of Christ Church, the chronicle of whose history they enshrine. Large numbers of other originals have perished, but contemporary copies of them have been preserved in the REGISTERS of the Convent, and with the contents of these REGISTERS it is proposed to deal in the present report.

F. 28. In the Library of the Dean and Chapter there is a volume of an unusually interesting kind; it is THE KENTISH DOMESDAY OF THE MONASTERY OF CHRIST CHURCH; compiled, apparently, immediately after the DOMESDAY DOMINI REGIS, and embodying all the information contained in the National Survey which appeared to the managers of the caputal estates to be of value to their house. Of course at one time this book had its place among the carefully guarded muniments in the monastic Treasury, but at some unknown date it found its way into the Library, ranking only as a literary curiosity.

The record is written on eight folios of vellum, each measuring 21 by 16 inches, in a beautifully clear character, with neatly coloured capitals heading the paragraphs. Internal evidence indicates that the compilation was made near the beginning of the 12th century, and the style of the handwriting so well corresponds with that date, it may be believed that the present volume is the original, from which other copies, known to exist, were taken. In certain points the scribe has been careful to reproduce some of the peculiarities of the Exchequer MS. from which he copied, this being especially evident in the smaller capital letters τ and ϕ, which have the curved top stroke seen in those of the ancient record.

As to the differences existing between the two surveys, it may be said, broadly speaking, that all the items of the King's Domesday which relate to the number and status of the tenants, and to the ploughs which they owned, are omitted from this compilation, whilst, on the other hand, the quantity of land, the rent, and the gerguma are invariably retained. Considerable variation occurs in the manner in which the names of places are spelled in the two Domesdays; for example, Moxocetune of the one becomes MONEKETUNE of the other; Gechem, Iecham, &c., but in spite of these differences there can be no doubt but that in this volume we have a record suggested by and to a considerable extent copied from the Domesday of William the Conqueror; many things useful to the stewards of the Monastery being added to what is there contained, and others there recorded, but useless to them, omitted.

One or two entries taken from both records placed side by side will serve to show the points both of agreement and of divergence.

| MONASTIC. | DOMESDAY. | ROYAL. |
|---|---|--------|
| De Estrege. Estrege est manerium monachoru et de cibo eorum et in tēpore E regis se defendebat pro vii. sull', et nunc similiter. Et in alia parte est dimidium sull' unum joc' et v. acerces Gedinges et valet xxx. et vii. lib. et x. sol. et iii. denarios int' totum. | In lest de Estreia. In Estrei Hundredo. Ipse Archiepiscopus tenet Estrei. Pro vii. sollis se defendit. Terra est. In dominio sunt iii. carucae. Ibi i. molinus et dimidium de xxx. solidis, et iii. salinae de iiiii. solidis. Et xviii. acre prati. Silva x. porcorum. Et in Getinge tenent monachi Cantuarienses dimidium sollin et unum jugum et v. acras. Et ibi habent vi. villanos cum ii carucis et dimidia. Inter totum t. r. e. et post valebat xxvi. libras et x. solidos et iiiii. denarios et i. ferding. | |

In each case we find that the manor contains 7 sullings, and Geding (pars alia) half a sulling and a jugum and 5 acres. The total value is much greater in the Christ Church record, which may be accounted for by improvements taking place during the years intervening between the compilation of one survey and the other. The tone of the later record is more English than that of the king's survey.

| MONASTIC. | DOMESDAY. | ROYAL. |
|---|--|--------|
| De Eadesham. Edishā est maneriu monachoru Sce. Trinitatis et de cibo eor' et in | Edesham. Ipse Archiepiscopus tenet Edesham. pro xviii. se defendit. Terra est. In dominio ii carucae sunt et | | tempore E regis se defoudebat pro xviii. Snll' et nc similiter, et de gabro reddit xvi. lib' et

xvi. sol' et iiii. den' et valet xxx. lib' de firma, et c sol' de Gersuma.
Et ex hiis sull' habet
Rodbertus filius Wat-sonis ii, id est Egedorn qui valet vii. lib'. Et tam' qui tenet reddit in-de viiii. lib. Et Roge-rius tenet ex hiis i. snll' ad Berahā qui valet iiii.
lib'. Hoc manerium habet Hundret in se ipso.

dimidia. Et c Villani cum xiii. Bordariis, habent xxxvi.
carucas. Ibi xiii. acres prati.
Et iiii. Servi. Silva ad clausuram. De terra hujus ma-nerii tenent ii. milites de Archiepiscopatu solinis. Et ibi habent in dominio iiii. carucas.
Et xviii. villani cum v. Bordariis habent i. carucam. Totum manerium t. r. e. valebat xl.
lib. Quando recepit similiter.
Modo reddit xlvi. libras et xxvi. solidos et iiii. denarios.
Et Archiepiscopo c. solidos de Garsumme. Quod milites tenent valet xi. libras. Et tamen reddunt xiii. libras.

the knight has to furnish, expressed in terms of the shilling and its fractions, thus:

| | | | |
|----------------------------|---|---|------------|
| Rofensis episcopus - | - | - | x. |
| Hamo vicecomes - | - | - | vi. |
| Robertus filius Watsonis - | - | - | vi. |
| Willelmus fil. Radulphi - | - | - | vii. & d'. |
| Willelmus de Dettinge - | - | - | d'. |
| Ordgarus - | - | - | q. |

That is, the bishop paid 10s.; Will. fitz Ralph, 7s. 1d.; William of Depling, 1d.; and Ordgar a farthing (quadrans). About one name in ten is English, the rest being Norman.

On the last three pages there are written three narratives, which as precedents, were considered worthy to be recorded with especial care. The events narrated all took place in the days of Prior Alan, when Archbishop Richard occupied the see of Canterbury.

The first history relates how, in 1181, Robert de Mortimer, who had been excommunicated for trespass on the common at Deopham, intruded himself into a procession and service at Canterbury; how the Prior, after vainly endeavouring to rouse the timid Archbishop to resent the intrusion, caused Mortimer to be ejected, "in verecundia et rubore, fastibus."

The second tells of the dispute which arose when Walter Bishop of Rochester being dead the monks of that church elected Waleran, without paying proper submission to Christ Church.

The last deals with the recovery of the church of Eynesford from the heirs of the person who, many years before, had given it to the convent.

A considerable space is here given to the description of this volume, because, in the Registers of Christ Church, which will next be described, in every case where "Domesday Dni. Regis" is quoted in connexion with a Kentish manor, the words are taken from this Monastic Domesday.

The Ancient Registers of the Priory of Christ Church, Canterbury.

These volumes, about twenty in number, are lettered
A, B, C, &c., and fall easily into three classes.

1. The Cartularies.

2. The Records of the Acts of the Prior and Chapter acting as Custodes Spiritualitatis, sede vacante.

3. The ordinary conventual registers, written up from day to day by the Cancellarii of the monastery, and chiefly occupied by matters connected with the domestic discipline of the convent, but also containing frequent notices of secular matters, here and there interspersed.

The volumes marked A, B, C, D, and E, with some parts of I and J, belong to the first class. They are thick parchment folios, in which are collected copies of all the instruments in existence at the dates of the com-pilations relating to the title by which the Prior and Convent claimed their privileges, and the rents and services issuing from their numerous manors. The originals of the deeds here copied are, the grants and wills by which estates first passed to the monastery, papal confirmations and royal charters establishing the monastery in its rights, and lastly, records of suits, agreements, compositions, and demises, which show how the property, after its acquisition, was managed so as to bring profit to the owners. Appendant to this latter class of deeds are extents or surveys of manors, and rent-rolls showing the payments, either in money or produce, and services which the several classes of tenants were bound to pay to their lords at Canterbury.

The first four volumes are compounded from at least two sets of registers, broken up and intermingled. All the documentary evidence referring to each manor has been collected from both the earlier and later parts, and placed in apposition, with but little regard to chronological sequence. Of the registers thus divided and re-combined, one set was compiled in the days of Prior Eastry, at the beginning of the 14th century, and the other during the incumbencies of Priors Chillenden and Wodnesborough, within the first 20 years of the 15th.
The Register E is complete in itself and belongs entirely to the 14th century. It has been suggested that Prior Eastry left to his successors a single volume, self contained like E, and that Prior Chillenden broke it up into four copiously interleaved registers, upon the blank leaves of which he caused his Cancellarii to post up all the information acquired since the time of Eastry's compilation.

The volumes as we now find them were bound, and, to some extent, re-arranged by Mr. Samuel Norris, who held the office of auditor to the Dean and Chapter in the reign of George the First. A memorandum in Norris's handwriting, which occurs on the fly-leaf of C, shows that his arrangement of the schedae was not

Here in both cases it is recorded that the knights paid two pounds more than the real rent of their land.

With this partial comparison of the two records I leave that part of the subject, and proceed to give a sketch of the whole contents of the volume; remarking that for the manors of the Convent which lay beyond the boundaries of the shire of Kent, the "Domesday Dni. Regis" was used in the cartularies of Christ Church, the quotations in the descriptions being taken literatim from that work.

The first page, under the title:

He snut consuetudines archiepiscopi in pascha de presbiteris et ecclesiis, gives a list of eighty-seven churches, with the amount of the contribution due from each set opposite the name; these vary from 50s. from Dover (De doforis), to 7d. from Seasalter (Saealcaltre) and several others of the same class.

Hec sunt que debentur de Sco. Angustino singulis annis Ecclesie x'pi.

The Abbey was bound to pay to the Priory, seven pence, thirty farthing loaves, two best sheep, two jars of mead, one of beer, and six hundred pence, all to be delivered "in cena Domini."

Iste ecclesie pertinent ad Scm. Martinum dc doforis.

A list of thirteen churches and monasteries "infra civitatem."

Ad folcestan pertinent, &c.

Ad Limenam, &c.

Ad Liminges, &c.

Ad Middelune, &c.

Ad Niwantunum, &c.

Ad Tornham, &c.

Ad Wyngesham.

Ad Mægdestane, &c.

Ad Wy, &c.

Ad Cyrringe, &c.

Hec est institutio antiqua ante adventum Dom.
Lanfranci archiepi.

This title is followed by a short list of the principal churches of the diocese, with their ancient contributions to Christ Church in honey, bread, mutton, and money.
It is remarkable that the two parishes named Boughton are put together, thus:

De duobus Boctunis, de mnoquoque iiii. agnos, et xxx. panes, &c.

Romescot de Easte Kent.

Hec sunt maneria Archiepiscopatus.

Here only the names are given.

Hec sunt maneria monachorum in cent.

Five pages are here occupied by the descriptions of the several manors of the Archbishop, and of the Convent of Christ Church; all modelled upon Domesday, and therefore resembling those of Eastry and Adisham, given above in full.

Incipiunt terre Episcopatus de Rovecestre.

These are described in a similar manner.

Per totam civitatem Cantuarie habet Rex sacam et socam, &c.

This account of the city of Canterbury is taken litera-tim from Domesday, and it is followed by much abridged extracts from the same record referring to a large number of parishes in Kent.

Under the title:

De Militibus Archiepiscopi,

there is a list of names with a number standing opposite to each, evidently representing the contribution which satisfactory, even to himself. It reads thus: "Ne quid antiqui percat schedae sex primae, ut ut discrepta jam collectae, libro praepontuntur. Ita etiam et octodecem aliae consumuntur, et in finem priuae partis libri rejiuntur. Quos omnes qui potest proprios in locos reponat."

Reg. A. The register lettered A. is a parchment volume of 600 folios, each measuring 16 by 10 inches. At the beginning are 165 copies of papal bulls and apostolic letters. Many of the earliest of these are copied from Malmesbury, but they are followed by others not so copied.

Classified titles:

Honorius II.

Appointing Abp. William to be Legate in England.

Eugenius III.

To Abp. Theobald, confirming the primacy of Canterbury.

Adrian IV.

Confirming the privileges of Ch. Ch.

Alexander III.

To Abp. Becket, confirming all the privileges of Ch. Ch.

To the same, forbidding him to crown the (younger) King "absque juramento."

To the Abp. of York and the Bps., forbidding them to crown the (younger) King.

Suspending Roger Abp. of York, and Hugh Bp. of Durham who, Abp. Becket being in exile and not consenting, had crowned the King.

To the suffragan Bps. of the province, suspending the Abp. of York and the Bp. of Durham, and excommunicating the Bps. of London, Sarum, and Rochester, with Geoffrey Ridel, Archdeacon of Canterbury.

To Abp. Richard, appointing him Legate.

To the same, "de coronacione regis," confirming to the Abps. of Cant. the exclusive right of crowning and anointing the Kings of England, if the ceremony take place in the province of Canterbury, or in any church immediately dependent upon the Roman See.

Confirming to Ch. Ch. the oblations brought to the tomb of S. Thomas.

Confirming the restoration, by Abp. Anselm, of the moiety of the profits of the High Altar, to the Convent of Ch. Ch.

Allowing the privilege of wearing the dalmatic and tunic on certain festivals.

Concerning the uses to which the oblations of S. Thomas were to be applied.

Exempting the lands of Ch. Ch. from payment of small tithes.

Declaring S. Martin's of Dover to be a cell of, and subject to Ch. Ch.

Declaring the supremacy of the Church of Canterbury over that of Rochester.

Declaring that the see of Rochester shall be administered by the Chapter of Canterbury sede Roffensi vacante.

Defining the position of the Archdeacon of Canterbury in the Chapter of Ch. Ch.

Empowering the Convent of Ch. Ch. to appeal to Rome whenever aggrieved.

Ratifying an exchange of lands with S. Augustine's Abbey.

Forbidding the bestowal of offices upon persons not capable of personally performing the duties.

Confirming the possession of the estates of Ch. Ch., especially of those connected with the Cellarer's office.

Confirming the estates and privileges of Ch. Ch., and especially the churches of Rokyng and Deopham.

Confirming all the towns, churches and privileges of Ch. Ch.

Lucius III.

Confirming the oblations of S. Thomas.

Urban III.

Granting to the monks of Ch. Ch. the privilege of being corrected only in their own chapter.

Confirming to Ch. Ch. a grant of almost complete self-government.

Confirming, and naming, all the estates of Ch. Ch.

Celestine III.

Approving a promise made to Ch. Ch. by King Richard I.

Confirming the oblations of S. Thomas.

Confirming, and naming, all the estates of Ch. Ch.

Annulling a permission, given to Abp. Baldwin, to found a College of Canons.

Innocent III.

Ratifying King John's grant of free elections in the English Church.

Granting the privilege of the Dalmatic, Gloves, and Mantle (in mensa).

Permitting the Convent to sing the "Gloria" in Lent.

Confirming the oblations of S. Thomas.

Granting to Ch. Ch. a large measure of self-government.

A similar privilege.

Exempting the lands of the Convent from the payment of small tithes.

Confirming a similar exemption given by Alex. III.

Ratifying a sentence pronounced in a suit against S. John's Kilkenny by the Treasurer of Lismore, the Judge Delegate.

Providing for the perpetual observance of the rule of S. Benedict in Ch. Ch., naming the Bishops subject to Canterbury, and confirming all the estates of the Convent.

To the Suffragan Bishops, requiring them to enforce the destruction of the College of Secular Canons at Lambeth. This contains a history of the foundation of the College.

Confirming the gift, by Louis VII., of the "Wine of St Thomas."

Honorius III.

Granting to the Prior the privilege of the Ring.

Granting the privilege of the Mitre.

Allowing the monks to wear black caps (pilleos) in the choir.

Excusing the Prior and Precentor from the hearing of causes in cases where they are not specially named judges delegate.

Confirming the oblations of S. Thomas.

Granting the privilege of self-government.

Confirming to Ch. Ch. the Church of Halstow, given by Abp. Hubert to the Library; also the tithes of Culinge and Blowere, given to the poor.

Pardoning, in the Convent, the offence of having celebrated during the general interdict.

Granting that the Chapter shall not be bound to obey any summons which does not make especial mention of Ch. Ch.

Declaring that the Ch. of Rochester shall be administered by Ch. Ch. Sede Roffi vacante.

Commanding the Monastery of S. Martin's Dover not to admit persons to their order without the assent of the Chapter of Ch. Ch.

Confirming and naming all the estates and privileges of Ch. Ch., and declaring the subjection of S. Martin's Dover.

Ratifying several endowments of the Altars of Sts. Dunstan, Elphege, and Blaise.

Gregory IX.

Confirming King John's Charter granting free elections in the church.

Acknowledging that the election of the Prior of Ch. Ch. belongs to the monks alone.

Excusing the Prior from the duty of executing the sentences of delegate judges.

Confirming the oblations of S. Thomas.

Excusing the lands of Ch. Ch. from payment of small tithes.

Providing that past payments of small tithes by tenants of Ch. Ch. shall not make the future payment of such tithes compulsory.

Declaring that S. Martin's Dover is a cell of and subject to Ch. Ch.

Confirming to Ch. Ch. the Churches of Halstow, St. Dunstan's in the East, Farningham, and Deopham.

To Abp. Edmund directing that monks of Ch. Ch. secretly consulting the Abp. on points of discipline shall not be imprisoned (by the Prior).

Promising that he will not in future intrude his nominees into corrodies in Ch. Ch.

"Non absque dolore" (a bull so named in Ch. Ch.).—Requiring despoilers of Ch. Ch. to make restitution.

Assuring the Convent against loss from the fact that some of their tenants have paid small tithes.

Re-affirming all the privileges of Ch. Ch. which have lapsed from lack of use.

Confirming the great charter of privileges given to Ch. Ch. by Abp. Becket.

Confirming the estates and liberties of Ch. Ch.

Pronouncing final sentence in the matter of the Chapels and Colleges of Hackington and Maidstone, and reciting the arguments urged both by the Abps. and the Convent.

Granting to the Prior the privilege of receiving the professions of novices becoming monks, sede vacante.

Assuring the convent against prejudice arising from the tearing off of the seal from Abp. Becket's great charter.

Appointing arbitrators in the tithe suit of Ch. Ch. against the Rectors of Cliff.

Innocent IV.

Granting to the Abp. the privilege of the pallium, "extra (as well as "intra") provinciam."

Granting to the Chapter of Ch. Ch. the right of election of the Archbishops of Canterbury without the intervention of the suffragan Bps. of the province.

Allowing the Abp. to celebrate in interdicted places.

Promising that nominees of the Pope (provisors) shall not be intruded into churches in the patronage of Ch. Ch.

Declaring that the Chapter of Ch. Ch. are not bound to pay debts of an Abp. contracted after his confirmation.

Alexander IV.

Allowing the chapter (archiepiscopo absente, vel sede vacante) to pronounce ecclesiastical censures against malefactors.

Confirming to Ch. Ch. the tithes of Bocking, Hadeleigh, and other parishes.

A similar confirmation of tithes at Monkton, &c.

Promising that provisors shall not be intruded into the churches of Ch. Ch.

Urban IV.

Empowering the Prior of Ch. Ch. to absolve monks and others lying under ecclesiastical censures.

Forbidding the chapter to pledge the credit of the convent as security for loans.

Confirming the general liberties of the convent.

Providing that the convent shall not be bound to pay debts unless they have been contracted for the common benefit.

Gregory X.

Declaring that the Chapter of Ch. Ch. is not bound to pay the debts of their predecessors unless the debt has been incurred for the common good.

Nicholas III.

Empowering the Convent of Ch. Ch. to acquire tithes.

Permitting the Convent of Ch. Ch. to celebrate mass during a general interdict.

Empowering the Chapter of Ch. Ch. to sue for churches which belong to clerks retreating to the monastery.

Providing that the property of the convent shall not be dealt with but by course of law.

Confirming all the existing privileges of Ch. Ch.

Martin IV.

Confirming all the privileges of Ch. Ch.

Honorius IV.

Confirming all the privileges of Ch. Ch.

Celestine V.

Relating to the custody of the monastic seal, deposition of the Prior, &c.

Boniface VIII.

Excusing the convent from payment of small tithes.

Exempting S. Augustine's Abbey from all manner of episcopal jurisdiction.

Excusing the convent from payment of the tenth granted for the conquest of the Holy Land, on the ground that their possessions are "alms given to the poor."

Clement V.

To Abp. Winchelsey on the coronation of Edw. II.

John XXII.

Confirming the existing privileges of Ch. Ch.

Innocent VI.

Confirming a composition made by the Abps. of Canterbury and York, concerning the right of the latter to carry his cross erect in the province of the former.

Urban V.

Re-affirming all such privileges as may have lapsed for lack of use.

Gregory XI.

To Thomas de Southam, Archdeacon of Oxford, requiring him to cause restitution to be made of all tithes and other possessions abstracted from Ch. Ch.

Urban VI.

Granting to the Prior the privileges of the tunic, dalmatic, gloves, and ring; also, in the absence of the Archbishop, of the pastoral staff and sandals.

Granting to the Prior the unconditional use of the staff.—Excusing the chapter from attendance at general chapters of the Benedictine Order in England.

Gregory XII.

Confirming the Church of Northfleet to Abp.

Arundel's Chantry.

Alexander VI.

Ratifying the jurisdiction of the Abp. (and, sede vacante, of the Prior of Ch. Ch.) in the several dioceses of the Province of Canterbury, sedibus ibidem vacantibus.

Ratifying the right of the Abp. to grant probate of the wills of testators who own property in several dioceses.

Royal Charters are copied in this register in considerable numbers. The Codicelli granted by Pre-Norman Kings, some in Latin and others in English, are all to be found in the Codex Diplomaticus, and in Wilkins' Concilia by the references "Reg. Ch. Ch. Cantuar.," and "Chart. Antiq. Ch. Ch. Cantuar." Other charters and letters patent were given by the following Norman and Plantagenet Kings.

William I.

A charter of general protection, Latinè.

A charter confirming the restitution to Ch. Ch. of property in Sandwich by Bp. Odo.

Restoring the Ch. of Newington to Ch. Ch., empowering the Convent to deal freely with their estates.

Grant of liberties (sac. & soc. &c.), Latinè & Anglicè.

William II.

Grant of liberties to Abp. Anselm and Ch. Ch.

Henry I.

Grant of sac. & soc. &c., Latinè.

Empowering the convent to deal freely with their estates.

Empowering the convent to take recognizances touching alienated estates.

Grant of the manor of Brook.

Charter of liberties, Latinè & Anglicè.

Stephen.

Two charters confirming the liberties of Ch. Ch.

Grant of the manor of Berksores.

Ratifying an exchange of land between Ch. Ch. and Henry de Ria.

Confirming the liberties of Ch. Ch.

Settling the reversion of the manor of Stisted on Ch. Ch.

Henry II.

Charter of general protection.

Grant of liberties (sac. & soc. &c.)

Ratification of an exchange of lands between Ch. Ch. and Gervase de Cornhill.

Empowering the convent to deal freely with their estates.

Concerning the customs of the port of Sandwich. Empowering the convent to take recognizances of alienated estates.

Ratification of an exchange of lands with S^t Augustine's Abbey.

Charter of liberties, Latinè & Anglicè.

Confirmation of the manor of Brook to Ch. Ch.

Ratification of an exchange of lands with Lambin Friese.

Extended grant of lands at Berksores, and Leysdown in Sheppey.

Grant of free-warren in the manors of Ch. Ch.

Ratification of a demise at fee farm of the manor of Southchurch.

Confirmation of W. de Tracy's gift of a hundred shillings of land at Docombe in Devon.

Writ directing the sheriff to put the convent in possession of land at Hollingbourne.

A writ directed to the "Præpositi" of the city of Canterbury concerning the (military) roadway on the inside of the city walls (Queningate Lane).

Assuring to the convent quiet possession of their London estates.

Forbidding the breaking up of common pasture at Deopham.

Announcing that Ch. Ch. is under the King's protection.

Requiring sheriffs to restore fugitive bondmen (nativi) to Ch. Ch.

Exemption from Geld and Danegeld.

Confirming to the convent all the mills in Canterbury which they had in the days of Henry I. Henry fitz Henry (III. Rex Junior).

Exemption from Geld and Danegeld.

Richard I.

Empowering the convent to take recognizances of alienated estates.

Grant of sac. & soc. &c.

Exemption from Geld and Danegeld.

Grant of Blean Wood to Ch. Ch.

Grant of quiet possession of assarts.

Charter of general protection.

John (as Earl of Mortain).

Confirming his father's grant of Blean Wood.

Grant of a weekly market at Orpington.

John (as King).

Writ to sheriffs, foresters, and bailiffs requiring them to reinstate the monks of Ch. Ch. on their return from exile.

Littere Johannis Regis, priori &c. directe, de pace et securitate Monachorum Ecclesie Christi Cantuar, per ipsum exulatorum, redituum in Angliam.

Letters Patent addressed to the tenants of Ch. Ch., requiring them to return to their allegiance to the monks, to whom, by the hands of Pandulf the Legate, the King has restored their estates.

Henry III. (here named IV., Rex Junior being reckoned Henry III.).

Exemption of the county of Kent from the tax of "Furraginm" to Dover Castle.

Granting to Ch. Ch. 71 perches of the military road within the city walls. (Queningate Lane.)

Grant of a market at Reding, Kent.

Adjusting the Grand Assise to Gavelkind tenants. Writ addressed to the Escheator touching the exemption of S' Augustine's Abbey from tallage.

Writ directing an inquisition into the liability of S' Augustine's Abbey, the Priory of S. Gregory, and the Priory of Ch. Ch. to the payment of tallage.

Edward I.

Confirming the liberties of Ch. Ch.

Recognition of the genuineness of a receipt exhibited as a proof of the payment of the tenth for the Holy Land.

Letters releasing the convent from a penalty of 3,000 mares, imposed on Thomas Ringmere's resignation of the Priory.

Ratification of an exchange of lands with S. Augustine's.

Licence to amortize land in Wincheap.

Licence to amortize lands in Walworth.

Ratification of the gift to Ch. Ch., by Queen Eleanor, of the manors of West Farleigh and Teston (Terstane).

Grant of houses in Canterbury late belonging to banished Jews.

Acknowledgment that the chapter have the right to americiaments and felons' and fugitives' goods in all their manors.

Licence to amortize lands in Eastry, Ickham, Godmersham, Elverton, Westwell, Chart, East Chart, Hollingbourne, Mersham, Bocking, Mongeham, and Chartham.

Grant of the manor of Borley, Essex, in lieu of thirty pounds a year out of the manor of West-cliff.

Confirmation of the confirmation of the great charters by Henry III.

Licence to amortize land in Wincheap.

Grant of the manors of West Farleigh and Teston by Queen Eleanor.

Ratification of the foundation of the new chantry in the Almonry of Ch. Ch.

Edward II.

Confirmation of ecclesiastical liberties.

Grant of free warren in the manors (nominativ) of Ch. Ch.

Ratification of an exchange of lands with S. Augustine's.

Edward III.

Assurance of protection to the clergy.

Recognition of a verdict given in favour of Ch. Ch. and against the Crown in a matter of Wreck.

Pardon for a contravention of the statute de Religiosis.

General grant of free warren.

Licence to acquire a tenement in S. Alphege parish, Canterbury.

Licence, permitting the Rector of S. Peter's, Canterbury, to acquire a rectory house, statuto non obstante.

Richard II.

Grant to Ch. Ch. of four annual fairs to be held in the precincts.

Charter by which the King renounces his right to nominate to two perpetual corrodies in Ch. Ch.

Writ directing an inquisition into the circumstances of the gift to Ch. Ch., by John Roper of Westgate, of a tenement known as the Crown Inn, in St. Andrew's parish.

Henry IV.

Confirmation of Richard's grant of four fairs.

Confirmation of Richard's renunciation of his right to two corrodies in Ch. Ch.

The King's great charter of liberties confirming and extending all ancient privileges of Ch. Ch. Canterbury.

Licence empowering Abp. Arundel to appropriate the Ch. of Northfleet to his new chantry in the Nave of Ch. Ch.

Edward IV.

Pardon of a contravention of the statute of mortmain.

A few charters granted by Archbishops to the Convent of Canterbury, follow those of the Kings.

Anselm.

De libera dispositione rerum nostrarum.

Ralph.

De Sapacre (Chichester) quam nobis dedit.

De Trincheberst. This is the gift of the rent and services of a place in Aldington.

Theobald.

Testamentum. This document, executed on his deathbed by the Archbishop, directs the distribution of the remains of his worldly goods among the poor. Among his executors appears the name of John of Salisbury, the Archbishop's faithful clerk. With a proneness to the employment of ecclesiastical censures which was characteristic of the man, he says of all who may attempt to defraud the poor of his bounty, "anathematis sententia condemnamus;" and of the king's officers he writes, "se fidelium communione noverint esse privatos, et tanquam sacrilegi et excommunicati ab introitu omnium ecclesiarum absteineant," if in the exercise of their duty they in any way impede the almoners in their distribution of the prelate's goods.

The Abp. and his monks were often at variance, but with them he on several occasions showed that in spite of his energetic cursing in matters of business, he was of a meek and forgiving spirit. The following charters are all of a conciliating character.

"Ne clerici nec Archidiaconus intrarent Capitulum nisi fuerint a nobis specialiter vocati, et quod Archidiaconus sedeat super suppedaneo Archiepiscopi, et non alibi."

"De ecclesia de Halegesto," which the Abp. gave to the Convent.

De ecclesia de Bothage (S. Mary Bothaw).

De subiectione Doverensis Ecclesie. The Abp. writes to the Chapter of Ch. Ch. that he has founded a Benedictine Convent in the Ch. of S. Martin, Dover; in which the Prior is always to be a professed monk of Canterbury; and the convent itself always subject to the Church of Canterbury.

Carta qua confirmat Conventui tres obediencias, scilicet, Cellarium, Camerarium, et Sacristarium, cum suis pertineniciis.

He permits the burial in the cemetery of Ch. Ch. of persons from other parishes.

He confirms the appropriation of the Church of Crundale.

Thomas Becket.

His great charter of liberties given to Ch. Ch.

Baldwin.

De ecclesia de Halgesto, the appropriation of which he ratifies.

Stephen.

De ecclesia de Halegestow.

Confirmatio ecclesie de Frenningham (Farningham).

Eadmund.

De octo libris redditus in manerio suo de Raculore. He restores a rent which his predecessors had withheld.

Ne Archiepiscopi capiant Prioratum in manibus suis cum vacaverit.

Boniface.

Testimonium quod Prior N. de Sandwico cessit gratis.

De ecclesia de Halegesto.

Littera Archiepi Ballivis suis pro libertatibus nostris. Here he commands his bailiffs to respect the property of the convent.

Littera Archiepi Officiali Archidiaconi Cant. directa nt excommunicaret invasores libertatum nostrarum.

Peckham.

He informs the Chapter in a letter, meant to have the force of a record, that he has made a metropolitan visitation of the Welsh dioceses, where he was loyally received by all the Bishops except by him of S. David's, whom, however, he put to silence, making him confess that his church, with the others in Wales, was subject to the see of Canterbury.

Confirmatio compositionis de decimis mariscorum de Clyve.

Simon Mepham.

De ratificatione compositionis Norwicensis. The chapter of Norwich had agreed, by deed, that when their see was vacant the Abp. should exercise the episcopal jurisdiction in their diocese; and also that, if the see of Canterbury were vacant at the same time, the Prior of Ch. Ch. should be accepted as the Archbishop's vicegerent. This was one of many compositions of the same kind which will readily be recognized by their titles, when they come to be mentioned in this report.

Thomas Arundel.

He confirms, amplifies, and limits the provisions of the great charter of liberties which Henry IV. gave to Ch. Ch. in his first year.

ALTARS AND SHRINES.—In this register there are immense numbers of deeds by which lands, tenements, and rents, all very small individually but in the aggregate large, were settled upon the various altars in the cathedral church. The altars whose title deeds are preserved were :

The Shrines of St. Thomas, of St. Dunstan, of St. Elphege, and St. Blaise, the first of them being emphatically THE SHRINE; "PERPETRUM" alone, without the addition of the Martyr's name, having always been considered a sufficiently precise designation for it. Altars were endowed, dedicated to St. Martin, St. Stephen, Sts. Peter and Paul, St. Anselm, St. John Evangelist, St. Gregory, St. Michael, St. Edward, Holy Cross (inter chorum et Navem), Holy Cross (in australi parte ecclesie), Our Lady (Sce. Marie in Navi), and Our Lady of the Crypt (Sce. Marie in Cryptis), with one altar in the Chapel of the Infirmary : Altare Sce. Marie in Infirmaria.

Of St. Thomas, whose name and cultus eclipsed all others at Canterbury during three centuries, very few traces are to be found in this register, this being also the case, for good reasons, in the muniments of Ch. Ch. generally. But besides the "feretory" just mentioned, we have notices of his so-named Great Charter, from which the seal was torn by an accident, a misfortune so great that a bull was granted by Gregory IX. to restore the validity of the deed. Of the nephews and relations of the Martyr, several of whom maintained their connexion with the convent for nearly fifty years, we only meet with two in this volume, Thomas the nephew, and Andrew, also known from his office as Andrea de Anla, who is described as "Cognatus Sci Thome." The first three benefactors whose endowments of the Shrine are here recorded were Robert de Brus, Alan Seneschal of the King of Scots, and Walter the son of this Alan. To the deed executed by Walter, the name of Thomas, the Saint's nephew, is appended as a witness.

COMPOSITIONS.—Under this title are registered a considerable number of agreements, to which the Chapter of Ch. Ch. were usually parties. Many of these were made with chapters of the cathedral churches of suffragan bishops. They all relate to jurisdiction during the vacancy of the subject see, and will be recognized by their titles at once.

In 1352, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York settled, by a composition, the long standing variance between their sees, arising from the ambition of the northern prelate of carrying his cross erect in the southern province. A copy of the compromise is in this volume, as are also the following made between :

Abp. Hubert and the Chapter in the matter of his College of Secular Canons at Lambeth.

Abp. Edmund and the Chapter as to debts owing by the see to the convent.

Abp. Boniface and the Chapter, concerning the return of writs and the right to amerciaments in the manors of the monastery.

The Convent of Ch. Ch. and the Abbey of St. Augustine's, respecting conflicting claims where the jurisdictions of the two houses came into contact and conflict, as they did at Sandwich, in the navigation of the Stour, and in various ways on the coast of the Isle of Thanet.

Abp. Boniface and the Chapter of Worcester.

Abp. Kilwardby and the Chapter of S. Paul's.

Abp. Peckham and the Chapter of Sarum.

Inter nos et Episcopos suffraganeos. This relates to jurisdiction sede vacante.

Inter nos et Rectorem de Clyve de decimis mariscorum ibidem. This is one of several similar examples.

Inter nos et Abbatem de Missenden de communâ de Riseburgh monachorum.

Inter Bonafacium, et nos, et Comitem Gloucestrie de manerio de l'unbregg.

Inter nos et Augustinenses. The convents appoint arbitrators to settle their disputes.

Inter nos et Priorem et Conventum de Ledes de bosco et pastura de la Blen.

Domus Dei de Ospreng de diversis terris.

Inter nos et conventum Monialium Sci. Sepulchri, de Bosco de Blen.

Inter nos et Canonicos Sci. Gregorii, de Bosco de Blen. Composicio Archiepi. Thome Arundel de probacione testamentorum.

Inter Archidiaconum Cant. et Sub-diaconum Lincoln de installatione Episcoporum Lincoln.

De jurisdictione in dioc. Norwic., sede ibidem vacante.

Inter Episcopum Norwic. et capitulum ejusdem facta per Dm. Thomam Arundel.

Inter nos et Monasterium Sci Augustini de quadam via communi juxta crucem Sci. Martini.

DEPRECATORY LETTERS, CAUTIONES, AND PROFESSIONS OF CANONICAL OBEDIENCE.

From the earliest times the Convent of Canterbury claimed the monopoly of the consecration of the Suffragan Bishops of the Southern Provinces, and even of those of Wales and Ireland. This demand, at first disputed and not always couced, came, however, to be generally respected after Abp. Becket had insisted upon it in his Great Charter confirmed after a time by Gregory the IX. The deprecatory letters were written either by the Elect himself, by the King, or by the Archbishop; in either case a request was made that, for certain reasons always stated, the Elect might be consecrated elsewhere than at Canterbury. The request appears to have been invariably granted, and letters of "alibi consecrari" were issued, in which it was provided that the new bishop should guarantee the Church of Canterbury against injury arising from the concession, and that he should make his profession of obedience in the usual way. The guarantee was contained in the "Cautio," which gave the required assurance expressed in a short form of words. The "Profession of Obedience" was pronounced orally to the Archbishop or his deputy, and a written and signed copy was handed in at the same time. There are copies of many of these documents in this register, and one is here selected as an example, which, while bearing a general resemblance to the usual form, shows how this was varied to meet exceptional circumstances.

These documents refer to the consecration of Joceline de Wells, Bp. of Bath in A.D. 1206.

Caucio J(ohannis) Sce. Marie in Via Lata Diaconi Cardinalis de consecratione Episcopi Bathoniensis.

J. dei gratia Sce Marie in Via Lata Diac. cardinalis, Apostolicæ sedis Legatus, dilectis fratribus Priori et Conventui Cant. in vero Salutari salutem. Volentes indemnitati vestre sine alieni juris injuria providere super eo quod, sede Cantuar. vacante, dilectum fratrem nostrum J. Bathoniensem electum in ecclesia de Radyng, fecimus in episcopum consecrari, legacionis qua fungimur auctoritate, statumius ut nec per hoc vobis et ecclesie vestre, nec alii, ullum impostorem prejudicium generetur.

Caucio Joscelini Epi. Bathon. de consecratione sua.

Universis sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quos, &c. Joscelinus dei gratia Bathoniensis Episcopus eternam in Domino salutem. Noverit universitas vestra Dominum Willelmum Episcopum London, die Sancte Trinitatis, anno ab incarnatione Domini mccvii, in capella Sce. Marie de Radyng, vacante sede Cant., me in Episcopum Bathoniensem consecrasse.

Et ne hoc quod mea consecratio alias quam in Ecclesia Cant. celebrata fuit eidem ecclesie aliquid prejudicium generetur impostemum, hoc, scilicet, quod consecratio mea in Ecclesia Cant. non fuit celebrata, auctoritate Dni. Johis Sce. Marie in Via Lata Diaconi Cardinalis, et tunc Apostolice sedis Legati, factum fuisse protestamur.

Professio Joceolini Bathon. Episcopi. Ego Joceolini Bathoniensis electus Antistes Sce. Dorobornensis ecclesie et Archiepiscopi in ea canonice substituendis canonicam obedientiam me per omnia exhibiturum promitto. Et per manum propriam signo crucis confirmo.

Several of the "Professions" were made by Irish bishops consecrated before the Conquest, so that, besides the names of English prelates, those of Dublin, Waterford, and Limerick are here found.

The records of the (2) Councils of Bacaneeld; of Winchester, for the settlement of the primacy; and of London (1075), and also of the great Folkmote on Pennenden Heath in 1072, occur in a hand of the 15th cent.

Towards the end of the volume some folios, written at the end of the 13th cent., are inserted, containing regulations for conducting the domestic economy of the monastery. These chiefly relate to the fees and allowances assigned to the lay servants of the convent. In a list of perquisites served out at Christmas and Easter we find that:

The Archbishop was entitled to: 381 fowls at 3d. each, 15 porkers (fresshyngs) at 2s. 6d. each, 2,700 eggs at 6d. the hundred, 20 lambs at 6d. each, and 20 cheeses at 3d. each. The monks in the infirmary, the Janitor Curie, the Seneschal, the Janitor Curie Archiepiscopi, the Custos Curie Archiepiscopi, the Janitor and Lotrix of the church, and the workmen in the tailor's shop all received the same kind of gifts as the Archbishop, but less liberal in quantity in proportion to their lower rank.

All the charters and other instruments connected with the 1,600 gallons of wine which Louis VII. gave to Ch. Ch., known as the "wine of S. Thomas," are here copied and arranged in chronological order. This collection is the more valuable because, although the originals of most of the documents here copied still exist in the Chartæ Antiquæ, not a few have disappeared.

Agreements of confraternity, by which monasteries undertook to perform religious services for each other, and other acts of mutual charity, were made between the Convent of Ch. Ch. and those of St. Maurice of Angers, of Amboise, of Lyons, and of S. Bertin, in France; and with S. Augustine's Abbey in Canterbury.

Early in the 14th cent. the Priors drew up fresh regulations for services in the church on festival days, and the Chapter having agreed that the new feasts of Corpus Christi and of the Oblation and Conception of the Virgin should be adopted at Canterbury, measures were taken for their orderly celebration. The following are entered in this register.

De servicio in Octabis Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et vigilia Translacionis Sci. Thome Martiris, et de servicio Translacionis Sci. Benedicti.

The preamble states that for a long time the services celebrated on these minor festivals had fallen into confusion; so that in the days of Prior Chillenden, circ. 1400, it was necessary to draw up these new ordinances.

De servicio in festum animarum.

De duobus fratribus et quatuor clericis assignatis ad missam Beate Marie, ultra numerum consuetum.

De festis Oblacionis et Concepcionis Beate Marie in perpetuum celebrandis.

On the 4th December 1321 it was decided in full Chapter that these two festivals should be yearly celebrated, "in cappis solempnibus, cum tota historia de festo Nativitatis ejusdem, verbo Nativitatis in Oblationem et Concepcionem mutato."

Ordinacio Capituli de festivitate Corporis Christi.

By this article, dated 1317, Corpus Christi day was declared to be a principal feast. It was at the same time decreed that any monk absent from the special services appointed for the festival, should on the next day have but half his commons in the refectory, and be forbidden to eat or drink elsewhere.

De Epistola et Ewangelio legendis in festis principalibus.

By this order of Chapter, dated 1308, all doubt was removed as to whose duty it was to read the Epistle and Gospel on festival days. It was provided, however, that if the gospeller for the week be "Diaconus solempnem" "vocen non habens," one of the better-qualified brethren might be assigned to take his place.

De torticis magni altaris.

This refers to the two large tapers, of 12 lbs. each, which were lighted at the most solemn part only of the service. As soon as the words "Sanctus! Sanctus!!" are uttered by the celebrant, two brethren are directed to light the two tapers, standing behind the altar, then to hold them to the right and left of the priest until he come to the words "unde et memores," at which point they are to go again behind the altar and extinguish the tapers. If either of the taper-bearers happened to break his taper he was punished by abstinence (pane et potagio tantum in refectorio reficiatur) until the taper was replaced.

De petitionibus clericorum rectorum ad habitum monachalem in Capitulo faciendis.

This article prescribes the formalities with which new brethren ought to be received. How they should be warned of the great austerity of the rule of St. Benedict, so that even at the last moment they may recede, if they have not courage to persevere. How they are to be prompted, by a person appointed for the purpose, to say they are ready to suffer and obey; in token of which they are to kiss the feet of the President of the Chapter.

De professionibus novicorum die professionis sue in Capitulo faciendis.

Similar, but more exacting formalities, adapted for those who, having been initiated according to the last article, wished to be raised to the full degree of a brother of the chapter.

De professionibus ordinandorum in Capitulo faciendis.

Similar professions of constancy and obedience to be exacted from monks about to be admitted to holy orders in the Chapter House.

The remaining Orders of Chapter have reference to the temporal affairs of the House.

De custodia prisme in prioratu Ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar.

Littera Capituli de tribus missis et alius beneficiis spiritualibus impetratum concessis Dno. Regi Edwardo filio Regis H.

Littera Dni. Regis E. filii Regis H. de XXX marcis perdonatis Priori et Conventui.

In consequence of some transgression at the time of the resignation of Prior Ringmer, in 1284, the King took the priory into his own hands, but allowed it to be ransomed by a promise to pay 3,000 marcs. This debt by the present letter he remits. There can be no doubt but that these two letters are closely connected.

Ordinacio Capituli de cantaria sex presbyterorum in Nova Capella elemosinarie.

Confirmaciones Dni. Walteri Archiepi., et Dni. Regis Edwardi de eadem Capella.

Qualiter servicium fieri debet per totum annum in eadem Capella.

A copy of the Constitutions of Clarendon has the title.

Constitutiones Regis H. secundi pro quibus Beatus Thomas fuit martyrizatus.

The rules for storing and serving out malt and barley for the use of the house occupy many pages.

THE REGISTER "B." is a parchment volume similar in size and appearance to "A."; it is made up of 450 folios, written, as in the last case, at two separate dates, the earlier portion about A.D. 1300, and the later soon after A.D. 1400. Except a few miscellaneous matters bound in at the end, it contains only a minute history of the manors belonging to Ch. Ch., written from a lawyer's or land-steward's point of view. The first acquisition, with a copy of the deed or grant, if it were known to exist; the quotation "ad hoc" from Domesday; the rents and the tenants' names; the deeds recording purchases, sales, demises, and exchanges of the whole or part of the property, are all here entered in a most orderly manner. There is an endorsement on the book "Extra 'Kanciam,'" and accordingly we find that the manors here dealt with are those which lay beyond the borders of the county of Kent. To this rule there are one or two exceptions. The leaves of miscellaneous matter seem to have come from the same ancient compilation as those at the end of "A," for, with rubricated titles as in that case, they consist of orders of chapter regulating the domestic economy of the monastery, and strictly restraining irregularities in the brewer, the baker, the maltman, and their assistants.

The manorial records all follow one pattern, it will therefore be sufficient to collect the names of the manors treated of, and to notice in detail the heads comprised under a single typical title. By this means a person in search of information concerning any manor will be able to see, 1. If the manor in question is here noticed; 2.

If, judging from the selected specimen, the information here stored up is of the kind which he requires.

The extracts from Domesday which occur in the notice of almost every manor are invariably described as taken from "Domesday Dni. Regis," or even "In libro qui dicitur Domesday Dni. Regis in Thesauraria apud Westminster, &c."

Specimen.

"Donacio Manerii de Bokkyng. Ego Ætheric et Leofuina, annuente Deo et Rege Athelredo, donamus terram juris nostri apud Bocking et Meseage ad Ecclesiam Sci. Salvatoris in Dorobernia ad vicum Monachorum ibidem Deo servientium pro salute anime mee hoc igitur donum datum coram Rege Athelredo, ipso Rege concedente et conseniente, et statim precipiente hoc scriptum componere et coram eo legere. Quod et factum est ab his quorum nomina hic subitus annotata sunt.

†Ego Athelredus Rex et Monarcha totius Britannie hoc donum signo crucis confirmo †Ego Alfricus Archiepiscopus Dorobernie signo agie crucis hanc concessionem confirmo, &c., &c., &c." Domesday Dni. Regis.

Here is inserted the appropriate extract, from the king's Domesday if the manor was without the limits of the County of Kent, and from the monastic Domesday if it lay within the shire.

Redditus assisi de Bokkyng.

De termino Sci. Thom. Apli. xlv.s. iiij.d. ob.

De termino Palmarum l.s. x.d. q.

&c., &c., &c.

De redditu de Wald per ann. liij.s. viii.d.

De quadam Drova in Boxfeld novi redd. per ann. viii.d.

&c., &c., &c.

Summa: xvii.li. xiiij.s. ix.d. ob. q.

Galline et vomeres.

De xliij. gallinis redditus—per capit. i.d. ob.—v.s. iii.d.

De ij. vomeribus—p. c. vom. viii.d.—iiij.s. viii.d. (sic.)

Firme in denariis.

De terra in Wondrede dimissa ad firmam—xiiij.s. iii.d.

De Molendino folorect. dimisso ad profectum Dni., lxxvj. s. viij.d. Summa iiij. li.

Md. quod tenentes debent Heriettas.

Allocaciones. Allowances of food to the men who perform services by way of rent. These are to be deducted from the profits of the manor.

Opera. Rents paid in daywork, each day's work being valued at one half-penny.

Allocaciones Operum. Deductions from the above.

Expense Operum. These include the making of hedges, the spreading of manure, &c., and are also Deductions from the profit.

Arrura Yemalis. A service as rent.

Arrura Avene. Spring ploughing.

Warect. Pasture on fallows?

Herciatura. Harrowing by way of rent.

A memorandum here sets forth how many days work the several classes of tenants are bound to perform. All the customary tenants together are required to reap 82½ acres of wheat, and as many of oats. All the "Cotland" tenants to cut all the barley and pease sown in the manor. All the "Cotland and Forland" tenants, 'conjunctim,' 21 acres 3 rods of Siligim (? siliginis) at the beginning of August.

Opera et Consuetudines. Under this head, divided into the sub-titles Arrura and Falcatura, is an estimate of the money value of these services of the tenants.

Extencio terrarum.

This includes a statement of the relative space occupied by the several kinds of crops, with their estimated values communibus annis. The total amounting to £10. 2. 4.

Extencio pratorum.

This is a similar estimate of the average value of the pasture land, which exceeds that of the arable, being £17. 15. 10½.

Extenta Manerii facta ibidem A.D. m.ccc. nono, coram Joh. le Doo tunc Sensehallo.

The land is thus divided and valued, on an average communibus annis.

Messuagium, Curtilagium, Gardinum, Pannagium.

Summa 15s. 6d.

Columbarium, molendina cum stagnis.

Summa £7. 3s. 8d.

Bosci (Bocking Park and Le Hoo).

Summa 53s.

Terra in Dominico.

Summa £10. 5. 0

Here is inserted a memorandum exactly describing the dimensions of a perch of land; followed by the quantity of each kind of corn which ought to be sown on an acre.

Prata falcabilia.

Summa 34s.

Pastura communis.

Summa 20s.

Perquisita Curie.

Summa 60s.

Barley and oats which the smaller tenants, by custom, give to the lord.

Summa 40s.

Virgata Terre. This is a list of the tenants who hold at least a virgate of land.

Dimidia Virgata. A list of tenants holding only a half-virgate.

Forlondz. The several Forlonds of the manor were designated Wysemannesforlond, Sulesforlond, Prnde-forlond, &c., apparently from the name of some early holder. The dimension of this division of land is not given, but it must have been considerable, since each one is shared by from three to seven tenants, who pay a common small money rent quarterly, and perform numerous, and strictly defined, services on the demesne lands.

Cotlondz. These were small holdings, a single tenant often occupying more than one, paying a rent of both money and services.

Novi redditus de adquisicione custodis et ballivorum.

Summa 22s. 9d. and 1 capon.

Libertates.

These are the prior's feudal privileges, which are enumerated; other rights, not of the same kind, being Free-warren, Heriots, and Reliefs.

The title deeds of the various parts of the manor then follow, even including copies of those by which the lands were held by persons who afterwards sold or gave them to the convent; together with writs, records of inquiries, leases, and all other evidences by which the estate of the convent in the manor might be ascertained and defended. As a rule those deeds which record gifts, whether of pieces of land or of rentcharges, are written by the hand of the scribe of the early 14th cent.; whilst those recording purchases and lawsuits are by that of him who wrote a hundred years later.

This being the method by which the value of a manor was appraised and the vicissitudes of its lands recorded, it will only be necessary to collect the names of the manors whose records are contained in the volume, seeing that the names of tenants and cyphers of value being changed, the documentary history of one manor, might do for any other.

Farningham, given in A.D. 1010 by Abp. Elphege, who names it Werehord.

Orpington, acquired before the Conquest (teste Domesday).

Whaleworth. Istud Manerium dedit Scs. Edwardus Rex.

Faukeshall. Given by Edward the Black Prince as the endowment of his chantry in Christ Church.

Middleton (Essex). Given in 959 by Agelward, "minister Regis Eadgari." His name was apparently Athelward, but the scribe mistook the thorn for g.

Southchurch (Essex). Lifstans dedit Southcherche monachis ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar., et postea Henricus Rex secundus per cartam suam confirmavit.

Lallyng (Essex). Given in 991 by Brithnoth on his going to fight the Pagans (Danes).

Bocking. Given by Ætheric and Leofwinn.

Yllegh (Eleigh Monachorum). Given by Brithnoth with Lallyng.

Stystede (Essex). Given by Godwin and Wulf-gith in the reign of Edward the Confessor.

Sandwich. Given by King Edgar in 966 at the suggestion of Abp. Dunstan.

Borley (Essex). Given by Edward I. in consideration of land of 30l. annual value which he took.

Hadleigh (Suff.). Given by Brithnoth with Lallyng.

Bury St. Edmund was not a manor of Ch. Ch., but in consequence of frequent suits between the two monasteries, many of the title deeds of Bury found their way into this collection.

Deopham (Norfolk) was acquired thus: Hubert de Rye gave to Ch. Ch. the Manor of Muchberdesham early in the 12th century, after the donor's death the convent was disseised, and when, by the assistance of Abp. Theobald, they obtained a judgment in their favour (after the lapse of many years), the heirs of the Donor declared that the manor had been alienated, and an innocent holder held and maintained possession. At last the Abp. brought Henry de Rye, the descendant and heir of Hubert, to repentance and restitution, the Manor of Deopham being offered instead of Muchberdesham.

Ash Bocking (Norfolk). The church of this parish was given by Gwydo de Esse, son of Walter de Hasfeld, in A.D. 1259.

London. The estates of the convent in London consisted of houses, rent-charges, and advowsons of churches, all acquired by grants or purchase, during a long series of years.

Norman le Want gave land in Southwark.

Will. Pentecost, two acres there.

Alan FitzSymon de Wyton, land there.

Hervey FitzFulcher, a boundary ditch there.

Walter fil. Ric. Textoris, land there.

Edith fil. Alex., two acres there.

Walter fil. Ric. de Estede, land there.

Arnold fil. Alulf, land there.

Rich Aswy, 15s. 4d. rent.

Alan fil. Radulf de Hyberniam, 12d. rent.

Reginald de Cornhell, the rents issuing from two houses in Friday Street.

The Nunnery of St. Sepulchre's, Cant., two houses in Friday Street.

Robert de Burwell, a rent of 60s. in Friday Street.

Ralph de Cornhell, a rent of 4s.

Richard Scharp, a rent of 7s.

The Convent of St. Mary, Southwark, 24d. rent.

Stephen Juvenis, a messuage in St. Magnus.

Rob. Asse, a rent of 2s.

To the Abbot of Lesnes leave was given to build an oratory.

To Roger le Duc, the same.

Stephen fil. Andree Blund gave a rent of 18s., in St. Mary Magdalen, Milk Street.

Juliana, relicta Josephi le Akatur, a rent of 5s., in St. Margaret, Bridge Street.

Will. de Say, a rent of 16s. in Southwark.

John Wilming (Marescallus Dni. Regis), a rent of 2s. in All Saints, Gracechurch.

John Coleman, a rent of 7s. issuing from the messuage of the Abbot of Lesnes at Timberhith.

Matthew le Chaudeler, a rent of 10s. in St. Clements (1296).

In 1326 the convent, in rebuilding a house in Bow Churchyard, encroached upon the churchyard. To avoid the pulling down of the house they came to terms with a committee of the parishioners, among whom the name of "Willelmus le Chaucer, dictus le Taverneir," appears.

Robert le Kelsey gave a rent of 50s. in West Cheap in 1304.

Laurence Duket and Matilda his wife gave a rent of 7s., in St. Michael Paternoster Church.

Abp. Stephen demised to Rich. Esperon (al. Sperun) lands and houses which Reginald de Cornhell surrendered to the Abp. after his exile, "pro excessibus" "quas fecit in Archiepiscopatu Cant. tempore exilii" "nostri, quando curam et custodiam ejusdem Archiepiscopatus habuit ex parte Dni. Regis." These lands lay in St. Matthew's, Friday Street, and St. Michael, Quisenhithe (versus Ripam Regine).

The convent asserted their right to the patronage of the Church of St. Vedast.

Abp. Stephen gave the Church of St. Dunstan (in the East) to Ch. Ch., to furnish funds for the repair of the Cathedral.

In 1277 the Rector of Aldermaricherche was an Italian and non-resident. The Convent of Ch. Ch., who owned the advowson of the benefice, made inquiries, found that he was married, and living as a layman in Italy. They caused him to be deprived, and presented another, who, after a lawsuit consequent upon the opposition of two other claimants to the patronage, was instituted.

Cecilia, widow of Wulfpin, known as Cecilia de Bothawexjuxta Londonestane, gave a house, &c., in 1152.

Aelgar, a priest, gave his church, "ecclesiam suam" "nobis concessit," to the convent, who granted it for life to Helye son of the same Aelgar, reserving a pension to themselves of 5s. It was agreed that the church should descend "de parente in parentem," from one heir of Helye to another for ever, provided that the next heir "ecclesia dignus fuerit."

Innumerable other title deeds relating to London are here copied, including many enrolled in the Hastings Court of the city.

A Rent-roll of London estates occupies many pages; the parishes concerned being:—

St. Clement; St. Michael versus Pontem; All Hallows, Gracechurch; St. Dionis. Backchurch.

Here occurs a summary of the pensions payable to Ch. Ch. from London churches:—

St. Magnus; St. Michael, Crooked Lane; St. Clement, Candelwyke-strete; St. Leonard, East Chepe; St. Benet; St. Mary Colechurch; St. Mary de Arcubus; St. Lawrence; St. Mary Vetus (al. Ealdermary); St. Michael in Riola.

Another summary occurs here of all lands, houses, and churches in London which belong to Ch. Ch.

Another summary with the title: "Iste ecclesie subscripto sunt de antiquo patronatu venerabilium virorum Dni. Prioris et Capituli Ecclesie Cantuarien. in civitate London."

An assessment made in 1322 is recorded under the title:

Assessio reddituum de tribus solidis de libra anno regni Regis Edwardi filii Regis Edwardi quintodecimo.

A chirograph executed between Roger (Walden, intruded) Abp. of Cant., the Convent of Cant., and the Abbot and Convent of Westminster, relates to the privileges of the last of the parties; especially to those connected with the coronation of the Kings of England.

A similar indenture, made between the same and Abp. Chichele, stipulates that the Abbey should retain oblations made there, even in the presence of the Archbishop.

Barnes (Bernes). The only deed under this head relates to a change made by Abp. Arundel, in 1396, by which the Vicarage and Vicar were transformed into a Rectory and Rector.

Cobham (Kent).

Composicio inter Ecclesiam Cantuar. et collegium de Cobeham, de viginti denariis annualis redditus recipiendis in ecclesia Cant. in vigilia Ascensionis Domini de ecclesia de Rolyvdenne.

De Voto in Hibernia.

A rent owing from the Cistercian Abbey of De Voto or Tynterne in Ireland, was commonly in arrear, and the papers here copied record attempts to enforce payment, and excuses for delaying it.

Scotland.

The Abbot of Arbroath agrees to pay to Ch. Ch. an annual pension of a hundred shillings, which Alex. III. of Scotland had settled on Ch. Ch., to be employed in feeding thirteen poor people every Tuesday in the (Guest) Hall of the convent. There are three letters, dated in 1279 and 1283.

A letter of David Bruce has the sufficient title:

"Carta Davidis Regis Socie ut Monach. de Dumfremel de Capitulo nostro sibi Abbatem accipiant, si de suo noluerint."

Two instruments constituting the Treaty of Norham have the title:—

"Transcripta duarum cartarum, signatarum sigillis magnatum Socie, ordinancium Dni. Edwardum II. (sic) Regem Anglie supremum Dominum totius Socie, coram quo tractabitur cui, ratione sanguinis proximioris, regnum pertinebit; eo quod ipse tunc Regi Anglie homagium faciet, anno millmo. cc. nonagesimo primo"

The title "Fines levate in Curia Regis," heads a series of thirty-nine pedes finium relating to property belonging to the convent, levied between 1192 and 1293.

Aghene (near old Romney). The only deed relating to this manor is a conveyance of fourteen acres executed in the 14th cent.

Eylwarton (near Ospringe). Land, but not manorial rights, was acquired in the 14th cent.

Merstham. Land acquired by purchase early in the 14th cent.

Westerham.

The convent having lost much cattle by pestilence, and land by inundation, in the 14th cent. induced Hamo de Heche, Bp. of Rochester, to appropriate to them the Church of Westerham, pensions being reserved to the Bp. and the Vicar. The original petition contains a list of the animals and the acres which had perished.

Patching (Pecceges, Sussex).

Given in A.D. 947 by Wulwric, with the consent of King Eadred and the (dowager) Queen Ediva.

Wodeton.

Given with Farningham by Abp. Elphege in A.D. 1010. (Cheyham) Cheam, a "member" of Merstham, given before the conquest.

Merstham.

Given in A.D. by Abp. Athelstan, called also Living; by the same deed as that by which he gave Cheam.

Horsley (Surrey).

Given in 1036 by Thored with the assent of King Cnut. Halton (Bucks).

Given to Ch. Ch. before the conquest.

Risborough Monachorum (Bucks).

Given in A.D. 995 by Aswin Bishop of Dorchester.

Among the deeds relating to this manor is one worthy of notice. It is a Royal Charter of Ethelred II. testifying to the fact that when the Danes ravaged Kent they sent notice that they intended to destroy Canterbury with its cathedral, but that they would allow it to be ransomed if the money promised by Abp. Siricinus were paid immediately. In great trouble the Abp. applied to a Bishop named Espy (Aswin), who lent the necessary money, "nonaginta videlicet libras meri argenti ducasque purissimi auri manucas," receiving in exchange by way of security a transfer, before witnesses, of all the Abp.'s rights in Risborough. The boundaries of the land are not given here, but a reference to the original codicellus is substituted:

Est autem predictum rus talibus circumcinctum terminis, qui continentur in originali codicello isto litteris Saxonis et Saxonico ydidiomate conscripto.

In the donation of the land by Aswin of Dorchester, he refers to this mortgage, and restores the land in these words, which bear date in the same year with the mortgage:—

Anno D'nie Incarnacionis dcccxcv., Indiccione, vij. Ego Ascinus Dorcestrensis Ecclesie Pontifex, reddo Ecclesie Xpi, et Alfrico Archiepo. Metropolitanæ sedis terram de Risberghe cum libro ejusdem terre, pro salute anime mee. Quam videlicet terram Sigericus Arepnus. ejusdem Ecclesie Xpi., predecessor prefati Archiepi, Alfrici, dedit in vadimonium pro pecunia quam a me mntuo accepit.

The Domesday of this manor has a peculiarity; at the time of the survey it was in the hands of a lessee, and therefore the value to the church was the same both T.R.E. and "modo," hence at the survey no distinction was drawn between the number of ploughs, &c. at the two dates.

Hoc manerium tenuit Esгарus Scalre de ecclesia Xⁱ Cant., ita quod non poterat separari ab Ecclesia tempore Regis E.

Newington (Newynton, Newtune, Oxon.).

Given to Ch. Ch., A.D. 997, by Elfgyfu Ymma, along with Britewell an adjoining hamlet, a paten and chalice containing thirteen marcs of gold, with some gold-embroidered vestments.

Oxford.

The papers here collected refer almost exclusively to Canterbury College, founded by Abp. Islip in 1363. The foundation deed, the statutes, the licenses for amortizing the site and the endowments, records of some financial embarrassments, and the whole "processus" "Johannis Wyclif," who in 1370, with Willerin Selby, Willerin Middelworth, and Richard Benger, all seculars, ousted the monkish warden and fellows, and usurped their places. One long instrument recites a petition laid before Henry IV. by Abp. Arundel, asking him to annul an exemption given to the University of Oxford by Richard II. by virtue of which the Archbishop's right of visitation was denied. The petition was accepted by the King, Lords and Commons; and in accordance with its prayer they gave to it "the force of a law." To still further fortify the Abp.'s position the King caused the present exemption to be made.

Deccombe, Devon.

William de Tracy, one of the murderers of Abp. Becket, gave, by way of atonement, a hundred shillings of land at Deccombe in Moreton Hampstead. Henry II. approved the gift, and the land was dealt with in the manner shown by the deeds here preserved.

Under the title "De Diuersis" there are set forth a large number of deeds belonging to small estates not sufficiently important to claim a separate department for each. These are chiefly small rent-charges, and relate to the following places:—

Ostringehangr (Westenhanger); Flotham and Strangmore (Warehorn); Tilbury; Westenhanger and Berewyke; Greenway at Harmodele (the partly obliterated Roman way at the Canterbury end of the "Stone Street"); Lyden near Sandwich; Elham; four "denns" in the Weald restored to Lanfranc by Odo the Bishop, namely: Lossenham, Adalardendenn, Blacecot, and Aodeun; Exeter; the Church of Tofts; Boston St. Botulf; Norwich; Halbeach in Holland (Lincol.); the Chantry of Seven-oaks; Goseham Mill (at Merlane); Lincoln; Daruall in Everwyksyre; Stourmouth Mill; Winterringham in Lyndesey; Petersfield; Saltfleet; a lease for 99 years of the mill and mill-pond at Bixbrode in Newington, Oxon., granted in 1453.

About 40 folios at the end of the volume are occupied by matters connected with rural and domestic economy, with a few notices of legal matters, such as might be considered proper to be known by the Chapter of Ch. Ch., who were lords of manors holding courts, and land-owners. These articles are, many of them, identical with those contained in the "Liber Henrici Prioris," Galba E. 4. of the MSS. Cott.

1. Hoscobderye.

The first chapter is a short treatise, in French, on the manner of managing a farm by deputy, Ici aprent la manere coment hom deit charger bailifs e provez sur lur acunte rendre de un maner, e coment hom dite maner garder.

The subdivisions of the subject are indicated by the titles:—

De coust de charettes.

Le Office de Provost.

Repouns de Semayl.

Comment hom deyt alower les ouvours en aust e on tens de fenesun.

Coment la tere deit estre mesuree.

Respouns de issue de la Graunge.

Respouns de la Dayerye.

Respouns de vaches e de genices.

Respouns de berbyz e de lur blaunc.

Coment hom deit mettre le issue de son estor a feure.

Ici finist hoscobderye.

Ici commence les estatuz des marchaundz fet a Westm. le an xiii. (1285).

A copy of the Statute of Acton Burnel confirmed in Parliament.

Les usages e custumes de Cunte de Kent.

A description of the peculiarities of the tenure of real estate in Kent.

This, which is not an original article, contains in the description of Gavelkind tenure a variant of the old rhyme "Dunt dest ist en Kentys; Se fauler to the boghe, se sone to the loghe."

Exposicio cujusdam usagii in Comitatu Kent quod dicitur Gavelate.

Qualiter homagia et fidelitates sunt capiende.

A description of the form to be observed in swearing fealty, by a freemen, a vileyen, and a minor, Gallicè.

Extenta Manerii.

This is a careful demonstration of all the points which a surveyor, making an extent of one of the monastic manors, ought to observe and record.

Qualiter et quare braciatries et pistores debent subire iudicium pillorii et tumberelli.

Incipit assisa Panis.

The not uncommon calculation of how much the several sorts of leaves ought to weigh, varying with the rise and fall in the price of a quarter of corn.

De ballivis et servientibus imprisonandis pro arceragia compoti sui, in statutis Westm. secundis.

This title, by its use of the plural, shows that what is ordinarily known as the "Statute of Westm." the "Secund," was at the time recognised as a collection of statutes.

De redditibus Serviencium retentis per biennium, et de remedio ejusdem.

De Wastura in bosco, turbario et piscaria, et omnibus aliis communibus.

De pena illorum qui rapiunt mulieres contra voluntatem suam.

De pena illorum qui rapiunt mulieres que post raptum consentiunt.

De pena illorum qui abducunt mulieres cum bonis viri sui.

De pena illorum qui rapiunt moniales vel abducunt.

De ponderibus et mensuris diversorum mercimonia.

A description of the stone and formal of lead; the last (leahst) of herrings; the last and daker of leather; the dozen of gloves, parchment, and white leather; the hundredweight of wax, zukur, pepper, cummin, almonds, and alum. The weights and measures of flax, thread, canvas, glass, and other goods are here all set down.

De pondere monete, et mensura galon. et bussell.

De doleo vini, justa cerevisie, et bolla serviencium in diversis officiis, quantum continere debeat.
Cera, et antiqua assisa ponderis et mesure coreorum in Sacristaria Ecclesie Xpi. Cant.

Assisa antiqua candelarum.

"Candle que dicuntur Jube ad legendum lectiones in choro debent esse x. pollicis, unde xvi. faciunt i. lib.
Candle ad missas et ad vigiles in choro, &c. Candle qui dicuntur Rideres pro equitantibus pro negotiis ecclesie, &c."

Candle ad buettas ad circumc'one et ad vigiliis mortuorum, &c.

Candle in domo infirmorum, &c.

Candle in Camera Prioris in Yeme, &c.

Liberacio communis candelarum per manus Magistri Subsacriste.

De caseo.

How cheese is to be weighed, by the King's weight and by Lanfranc's.

De servicio in Refectorio.

Describing how the "ferculum" for two persons ought to consist of: Soles, 4; plaice (playz), 2; red herrings, 8; mackerel, 2, &c.

Feoda illius qui intrinizare debet singulos episcopos Cant. Provincie, tam sede Cant. plena quam vacante.

Ista pertinent ad feoda Comitum Glovernie pro officio Senescalli die intronizationis ejuslibet (Ar-chiepi.) Cant., si tamen summonitionis fuerit et venerit ad faciendum servicium snam, et non aliter.

Ista pertinent ad feoda ejusdem Comitum pro officio Pincernarii die supradicto si tamen summoni-tus, &c.

Antiqua firma bladi unius septimane.

This describes a week's supply of corn for the monastery.

Item de firma ad Bertonam.

The tenants' weekly delivery to the storehouse.

Ista pertinent ad officium Anle Hospicii Xpi.
Cant.

The duties of the Steward of the Hall, the chief of them being the placing of the dishes on the table for both monks and guests, and also for the company in the Prior's chamber. He was allowed most liberal commons in the kitchen and cellar for himself and his "garcio," with corn for the horse which by the rules he was bound to keep.

Ista pertinent ad officium Portarii exterioris curie faciendum.

Feoda Portarii exterioris.

He had 20 shillings a year, with commons, pickings from every brewing, a daily handful of corn from every occupied corn crib in the monastery, and at Martinmas "quartam partem de groynes, et de auribus, et de candis porcorum, et quartam partem de collibus, et "caudis boum et vacarum de quibus sknye extrahun-tur. Alio vero tempore anni nichil capiat de lardaria."

Ista pertinent ad officium portarii cimiterii faciendum.

Feoda portarii cimiterii.

De Hospitale Sci. Jacobi extra Cantuariam.

This hospital for the sequestration of 25 leprous women was fallen into a state of disorder in the reign of Henry II. (1164), sound and healthy women contending for the sisterhood in rivalry with the lepers for whom the refuge was intended. To remedy this, Pope Alex.
III. sent Apostolic letters to the Prior and Chapter of Christ Church, requiring them to reform the abuse.
These letters, with a confirmation by the King, are here copied. Some thirty years afterwards the revenues were so mismanaged that the house failed to pay its way, whereupon Prior Geoffrey, of Ch. Ch., took the revenues into his own hands, and refounded the hospital upon a sound footing.

Expositio verborum Anglicorum sequensium.

A translation, and explanation in French, of the old English terms Sak, Sokne, Toln, Theam, &c. The list extends to 47 terms, and ends rather badly with:—
"Cherchesonde—une mesure de ble ke checuu home
"soleyt enveyer a Seynt Eglise en tens de Bretun."

Qualiter dies concordantes dantur in Banco.

Jura ecclesie Xi Cant. debita post mortem suffraganeorum snorum.

This states the "rights" of the Church to certain chattels of defunct bishops, their palfreys and harness, rings, seals, &c. being included. The customary offering varied in the several sees.

Summa taxationis omnium bonorum ecclesiasticorum in tota Provincia Cantuar. secundum verum valorem.

This gives only the gross sums of each diocese.

Forma communis professionis Episcoporum, Sede
Cantuar. plena.

Forma professionis si Archiepiscopus absens fuerit, (et) vices suas alteri commiserit suffraganeo.

Forma communis professionis Episcoporum sede
Cant vacante.

Forma professionis Episcoporum consecratorum in Curia Romanum, sede Cant. plena.

Forma professionis Episcoporum consecratorum
in Curia Romana, sede Cant. vacante.

Forma professionis Abbatum, sede Cant. plena.

Forma professionis Abbatum, sede Cantuar
vacante.

Forma eligendi Priorem Cant.

This details even the most minute steps in the process of election.

De vacacione Prioratus post resignationem Dni.
Thome Ringmere quondam Prioris Ecclesie Xpi.
Cantuar.

A narrative of the resignation of Ringmere, who withdrew to the stricter Cistercian Order, which resignation was followed by the seizure of the priory into the King's hand.

Ceo sunt les chapitres de Vewe de Francplegg.

A detailed account of the articles into which the court is required to enquire, and in which it is justified in interfering.

Diversi casus in placitis terre.

Six knotty cases concerning the law of real estate, stated and resolved. Example: "Se le fiz del eyne
"frere demande herytege vers le fiz del pusnez frere, e
"le pusnez murge seysi, e sun fiz entre apres ly, le
"fiz del eynez frere ne recouvera james vers ly; car
"cest le cas le Roy."

Declaracio Prohibicionis Regie.

This is a copy of the writ "Circumspecte agatis," which is evidently written here with an idea that it is a writ of protection to the Bishop of Norwich.

Certa mensura pollicis, palme, pedis, passus, et aliorum.

Mensura unius pollicis incipit ex transverso radi-cum unguium pollicis. Quatuor pollices unam palmam faciunt; quatuor palme unum pedem; pes et dimidius cubitus parvum faciunt; sex parvi cubiti cubitum magnum faciunt; quinque pedes passum faciunt; centum viginti quinque passus stadium unum; octo stadia unum miliare faciunt; duo miliaria unam len-cam complent. Et sic fuit Archa Noe de nxl. passibus, qui continent quatuor stadia et quadraginta passus secundum Hugonem de Sco. Victore Memorandum quod ulna communis regni Anglie con-tinet tres pedes; et regia virga communis continet sexdecim pedes et dimidium. Item xl. virgate continent unam quarentenam. Item septem quarentene et dimidia tres virgate dimidia pes continent unum miliare. Item duo miliaria continent unam leucam secundum geometriam.

Numerus, acrarum seminataram, molendinorum, et summa de firmis molendinorum, et summa de metecorn servicium totius Prioratus annuatim.

Here are set down in a 15th cent. hand the details of acts of husbandry in the whole of the manors of Ch. Ch.
Four principal officers had the charge of conducting the cultivation:

1. The Custos of East Kent, who ruled the district expressed by his title.
2. The Custos of the Weald (Wald), who governed the flat country of West Kent, including Romney Marsh.
3. The Custos of Essex, who had charge of the estates in East Anglia.
4. The Custos of Surrey, who ruled Surrey, Oxon., and Bucks.

Each manor is described in the same form, thus:

Example. Mersham.

De Frumento - - - xliij. aer.

De Ordeo - - - xvii. aer.

De Anena - - - xxx. aer.

De Pisis, Fabis, et Vescis - xxxvi. aer.

Summa acrarum - - - cxv. aer.

Summa de firma molend., nichil.

Summa de mete corn - - - xxxviii. summe.

Summa summarum omnium acrarum seminatarum viii. celix.

Summa omnium molendinorum, liiij.

Summa de firma molendinorum, pccc. iiij. xiiij.

summe.

Summa de mete corn, ij. cxv. summe.

Nomina Comitatum Anglie.

Nomina maneriorum totius Prioratus, in quibus Comitatus, Diocesis, et Hundredis consistunt.

Nomina Comitatum Wallie.

These are four, Anglesey, Caernarvan, Meroneth, Flint.

Memorandum quod omnes Episcopi subscripti sunt suffraganei Dni. Archiep. Cant.

Redditus Elemosinarii Eccle. Xpi. Cant de Ganelkendes, et domibus, et placeis locatis in Civitate Cant. Anno Dni. mcccv^o.

De hiis que facere debet Subelemosinarius die Cene.

On the Thursday following Palm Sunday the sub-almoner was directed to collect alms from all the family of Ch. Ch. including the guests. A part of the sum collected was distributed among the officers of the house, and the rest to the poor with the following ceremonial :

"Post Capitulum sub-elemosinarius intrare debet curiam et vocari (sic) singulos pauperes, et ducere per claustrum ad altare Beati Johannis iuxta chorum, et celebrare Missam de Spiritu Sancto, qua finita reducere debet pauperes per Claustrum in Aula, et ibi singuli pauperes recipere debent unum panem qui dicitur Smalepys, pisces (sic), sal, et iij. allecia. Et potare quantum voluerint. Residuum potus remanebit ad elemosinam Postea lavare debent pauperes pedes suos, vel ante si voluerint. Et post missam in conventu, dum conventus recipit panem et bibere per visum Cellarii et Granetarii, intrabunt pauperes claustrum expectantes mandatum. Post prandium peracto mandato in conventu et tota elemosina cervisie portata in elemosinaria, sub-elemosinarius liberabit cuilibet servienti qui interfuerit mandato unam lagenam cervisie, de gratia."

De obitu Lanfranci.

This anniversary, observed on the 28th May, was marked in the convent by the distribution of a large quantity of bread. The keeper of the Great Campanile had 32 wheaten loaves "de pane Lanfranci," 32 commons of fish, or if he preferred it 12^l, with 8d. in lieu of cheese and beer. Seven hundred loaves of wheaten bread were estimated as the allowance required by the monks and the familia, 3,400 being given to the poor.

Solidata serviencium in elemosinaria et liberationes.

De Wrecco maris apud Holewest, in Marisco de Romene.

De Wrecco apud Brodhell.

Two cases, recorded as precedents, in which the convent recovered, against the Abp., in 1282 and 1305, merchandise cast by wreck on to the shore within the bounds of manors of the convent.

Beneficia ecclesiastica prelati vel religiosi non appropriata in diocesi Cantuar., et in iurisdiccionebus immediatis ejusdem, una cum Taxa, Decima, et medietate decime singulorum, in decanatibus immediate subsequentibus :

Spiritualia ac temporalia prelati vel religiosi appropriata in dioc. Cant., et in iurisdiccionebus suis immediatis, cum Taxa, &c.

These two tables, in which those articles of the taxation of Nicholas IV. in which the church of Canterbury was interested are compressed, occupy the last 21 pages of the register.

Reg. C.—The Register C. is a parchment folio of 500 pages, lettered on the back "Liber dictus Bertona I." Like the last-described volume it deals with the estates of Ch. Ch. through all their changes from the time of the first acquisition until the date of the compilation of the register, but unlike the former it confines itself to the manors in the county of Kent.

Barton (Bertona), which gives its name to this and the following volume, is the manor first described.

Donacio manerii. A^o Dni. dcccxxxii. Rex Athulfus dedit . . . strictu Celnothi Archiepi. ad opus monachorum Eccle. Xpi in Dorobernia villam, iuxta civitatem Dorobernie, que vocatur Bertun, ad quam pertinent quinque jugera et duo prata apud Schettingham et aliud apud Tanintune, omnia libere sicut Adesham.

The Domesday extract tells that this manor was also known as Northwood.

Northwode, modo dictus Bertone, est manerium monachorum, &c.

In 1302 John de Northampton, a resident in the Barton, feloniously killed John Short, and was arrested by the bailiffs of the city of Canterbury. This was an invasion of the manorial rights of the prior and chapter, and it was accordingly resisted. After a long delay the prior's claim was successful, and the prisoner being handed over to his agents, was hanged on the gallows of the monastery at Hollingbourne in August 1304; two years and a half after his crime.

Adisham,

Anno Dnice. incarnationis dxcvi. ego Eadbaldus Rex Kancie, filius Ethelberti Regis, a Deo punctus, et per ejus misericordiam, perque monicionem Dni. Laurencii Archiepi., conversus a pravitate vite mee, pro recuperanda salute anime mee, proque spe remunerationis future, concedo ecclesie Xpi. in Dorobernia, et familie in eadem ecclesia Deo servienti, terram juris mei nomine Adesham, &c.

This, obviously forged, grant is followed by two memoranda.

Mem. xiii. kl. Feb. obiit Eadbaldus Rex Anglorum, filius Ethelberti Regis quem beatus Augustinus ad fidem Christi convertit.

Mem. xvii. kl. Junii obiit Berta regina Anglorum uxor Ethelberti Regis.

These appear to have been subjoined to the grant in order to give a contemporary look to the whole.

Eastry.

Donacio manerii. A^o dcccxxxix. Ego Athulf Rex do Celnotho Archiepo. karissimo meo partem terre juris mei nomine Eastria, Asta, Delham, scilicet vii. juga, que videlicet terra adjacet ecclesie Sce. Marie apud Liminge, &c. Eastry does not now adjoin Liminge.

Anno Dnice. incarnationis dcccxlvi. presente Athulfo Rege et Ethelstano filio ejus, confirmatum est donum Osuulfi ducis quod dedit ecclesie Xpi. in Dorobernia, hoc est Estrestan, Hamatede, quam terram prefatus Rex, proclamavit liberam ab omni, &c.

Anno Dni. dcccclxxix. Ethelredus Rex dedit ecclesie in Dorobernia Sandwic ad vestitum monachorum, et Estreyam ad cibum, &c.

In the first half of the 12th cent. the tithes of Eastry were annexed by Prior Walter to the almonry of Ch. Ch. In 1290 Abp. Peckham collated a clerk to half the church of Eastry, but when the convent protested that the tithes were all theirs, he disclaimed any intention of invading their rights, and wrote that he only did, as far as he knew, as his predecessors had done.

Donacio de Lyden juxta Sandwycum. Anno Dni. dcccxlvi. Offa Rex Jamberto Archiepo. rogante dedit monachis Hyden juxta Sandwycum, &c.

Lyden adjoined the confines of Eastry, and was esteemed a part of it.

At the end of the 13th century endless suits went on concerning the partition of the tithes of Eastry between the convent of Ch. Ch. and the rectors collated (by the ancient usurpation of Abp. Baldwin) by the Abp. In the end the church, with those of Monkton and Teynham, was restored to Ch. Ch. by Abp. Islip.

A considerable space is taken up by instruments relating to the embanking of the marshes in Eastry and Sandwiche. The first document which shows any sign of organised public effort in this direction is a commission dated 16th Edward III., by which John de Lovetot and Henry de Apuldefeld are appointed commissioners for superintending the sewers and walls in Kent. Their survey ended with this result : "Summa totalis omnium acrarum que sunt sub periculo maris in Hundredis "de Estria et Quernylo mmdciii. acre.

Sandwich as a part of Eastry has its share of deeds, beginning with a copy of the charter of Cnut, by which he gave the town and port to Ch. Ch.

Mongeham.

An imperfect account of this manor occurs. It contains only conveyances of various kinds, and records no first gift, nor any act of historical significance.

Langdon.

This is a similar imperfect record.

Dover.

A few rents in the town were given to Ch. Ch., the earliest, apparently, in the 12th cent. Alfred de Dofris was the benefactor; Robert, Ealwin, Edric, Brice, Kyneward, Odelm, Turstan, Baldwin, and Osbern being witnesses. The date was before the middle of the cent., two witnesses being canons of St. Martin's, who must have been impossible after the introduction of the Benedictine rule into the church by Abp. Theobald. The disputes between the convent of Ch. Ch. and St. Martin's, Dover, which continued for two centuries, occupy five or six pages in the register.

Forwich.

The account of Forwich is only a fragment. This was a place of great importance to Ch. Ch. from the fact that the convent owned a quay there at the point at which the narrowness of the river put a stop to navigation. It was to this quay that all the Caen stone, wine, alum, and other imported merchandise for the use of the monastery was brought by ship. It unfortunately happened that the rival monastery of St. Augustine's owned the soil of the town,

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

and had feudal rights there, whilst the mayor and jurats represented the King, and by royal grants possessed all the rights of a corporate town, as well as others derived from their connexion with the Cinque Ports. These three jurisdictions conflicting produced a copious store of suits, arbitrations, and compositions, the records of which are partially copied here.

Thornden Wood, in the parish of Swalecliff.

This wood was a valuable property, supplying the convent with fuel and timber for building at little cost for carriage. It, with several tenements on the outskirts, appears to have been acquired gradually by grants and purchases of small parcels.

Seasalter.

The convent owned several tenements in this parish, but their most valuable property there was the church, which, after having the advowson for a long series of years, they were permitted to convert "in propriis" by Gregory IX. in his 10th year. The manor belonged to Ch. Ch. at the time of the Domesday Survey, but in 1437 it was found necessary to publicly assert the claim of the convent by an inquisition, by which it was found that the manor was the property of Christ Church, and that they had made good their claim to a wreck which had occurred in that year of a great ship belonging to the Duke of Norfolk.

The Forest of Bleau was given to the convent by Richard I., and after his day many small parcels of land, and some tenements, were acquired by grant and purchase.

At various times the Priory of Lodes, Eastbridge Hospital, the Priory of St. Gregory, Cant., and the Nunnery of St. Sepulchre's, Cant., possessed or claimed rights here, but these claims were one by one disposed of by purchase or successful opposition.

Ickham.

Donacio manerii. Anno Dnice. incarnationis dccxcj. Ego Offa Rex concedo Ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar. terram juris mei quindecim aratrorum in provincia Cancina in hiis postmonitionis locis, id est, Ickham, Perhamstede, Rokinga, et in saltru qui dicitur Andred; pascua porcorum in hiis locis, Dunwalyngden, Sandyrste, Suthelymyngden; et in silvis qui (sic) dicuntur, Bokholte, Bleau, Heabric, et aliud inter torrentem nomine Northburnan et Hagena, Treou, et pastum unius gregis juxta Thyngenden et quinquaginta porcorum Bymmansede. Hauc predictam donacionem, &c.

At a view of Frankpledge, held before the Seneschal of the Priory in 1419, the following scale of rents and services was agreed to by the Seneschal, representing the convent on the one part, and the Cotarii of the manor on the other. This throws considerable light upon the status to which the Cotmanni of Domesday had attained in the 15th cent.

"Imprimis quilibet Cotarius sive Cotmannus de qualibet acra de tenuta Cotmannorum solvet annuatim ad festa Annunciacionis dominice et Sci. Petri quod dicitur ad Vincula, equis porcionibus, in denariis ijs. vj. d. Et ad Festum Pasche de qualibet acra unum ovum. Item de quolibet cotton' (cotarium?) ad Festum Natalis Dni. unam gallinam. Item quilibet ipsorum habens quinque acras tenure predicte inveniet unum hominem competentem ad metendum per unum diem in Autumpno. Et quilibet eorum habens decem acras tenure predicte inveniet duos homines competentes ad metendum in Autumpno. Et qui majus vel minus habuerit inveniet hominem vel homines secundum quantitatem ararum suarum, vel solvet pro quolibet homine predicto ad festum Assumpcionis Beate Marie, v.d., videlicet pro quolibet acra i. d. Et sic secundum quantitatem tenure sue ad eleccionem domini. Inveniendo dominus vel firmarius, si qui fuerit manerii predicti, homini aut hominibus predictis vidualia talibus laborariis vel laborario, per illum diem, oportuna. Et faciet sectam curio de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas, et relevationem cum acciderit, et consuetudinem suam crevisse sicut de antiquitate fieri consuevit."

Among the endowed anniversaries in Ch. Ch. was one in commemoration of Robert de Lodclaw, celebrated at Our Lady's altar in the nave. This was not, as was the ordinary course, established and endowed once for all by the person to be commemorated, but, for some years after the foundation, people apparently not related, and living as far apart as Pluckley and Ickham, left rents "Anniversario Roberti de Lodclawe." Two or more of these endowments were charged on land in Ickham by the brothers and sons of John de Welles (there is a chapel of Wells in Howlett's Park). One of the grants bears the date 1284, the others being undated. In Register A. a separate chapter "de Anniversario Robi de Lodclawe" is set apart among the records of the endowments of altars.

Wingham.

Archbishop Kilwardby, with license of Pope Gregory X., divided the revenues of the great parish of Wingham, which embraced Ash, Goodnestone, and other, now distinct, places, into several prebends. The arrangement, not being satisfactory, was not carried out, but in 1282 Abp. Peckham broke up the parish into four, strictly assigning to each portion the lands from which its tithes were to be drawn. At the same time he founded at Wingham a college of secular canons, which attained to considerable celebrity, being the frequent resting place of the archbishops when they visited the diocese, and the place whence their official letters were often dated. The instruments of foundation and the statutes of the college are entered in this register under the title of Ickham.

Munkton.—Donacio Manerii de Munkton.

This manor, with many other endowments, was given by Eadgifu, widow of Edward the Elder, always known in Ch. Ch. as "Queen Ediva." Her benevolence towards the priory was so great that she was considered almost a second founder, and her portrait, of 15th cent. date, now hangs in the cathedral library. The instrument which claims to be her charter of donation is here copied as follows, merely formal words being omitted:

"Anno Dnice. incarnationis dcccclxi. Ego Ediva Regina, mater Eadmundi et Eadredi Regum, pro salute anime mee, concedo Ecclesie Xpi. in Dorobernia has terras, Mepeham, Culyng, Lenham, Peckham, Fernleage, Monketon, Ealdynton, liberab ab omni, &c. Qualiter autem iste terre michi venerunt opere pecunie diu intimare omnibus, scilicet, Odono Archidiacono tociusque Britannie primati et familie Xpi. et monachis in Dorobernia civitate. Contigit aliquem patrem meum Sigelinum habere necessitatem xxx^{ta} librum, quas a quodam principe nomine Goda multo accepit, et pro vadimonio eidem dedit terram que nominatur Culyng, qui tenuit eam vij. annos; septimo itaque anno expedicio preparabatur per omnem Kanciam cum qua Sigelinum patrem meum ire oportuit, qui, cum se separaret, venerunt illi in mentem xxx^{ta} libras quas Goda debebat, quas statim ei reddere fecit; et quia illum filium nec filiam nisi me habuit, heredem me fecit illius terre et omnium terrarum suarum, et libros michi dedit. Sorte tunc evenit patrem meum in bello cecidisse. Postquam autem idem Goda audivit eum defunctum in bello esse, negavit sibi xxx^{ta} libras persolvas fuisse, terramque quam pro vadimonio recepit detinuit fere per sex annos. Sexto vero anno quidam propinquus meus nomine Bryxiedyrng cepit instanter conqueri apud optimates autem et principes, et sapientes regni de injuria propinque sue a Goda facta. Optimates autem et sapientes pro justicia invenerunt, et hoc justo judicio decreverunt quod ego filia et heres ejus eram patrem meum purgare deberem, videlicet, sacramento xxx^{ta} libras easdem patrem meum persolvissse; quod teste toto regno apud Egelesford peregi; sed nec tunc quidam potui terram meam habere quoadusque amici mei Regem Edwardum adierunt et illum pro eadem terra requisierunt, qui, videlicet, rex eidem Godoni super omnem honorem quem de rege tenuit predictam terram interdixit, sique terram dimisit. Non multo autem tempore post, contigit eundem Godonem coram rege ita inculpari quod per iudicium iudicatus sit perdere omnia que de rege tenuit, vitanique ejus esse in iudicio regis. Rex autem dedit eundem michi et omnia sua cum libris omnium terrarum suarum, ut de eo facerem secundum quod promeruit. Ego autem pro timore Dei non ausa fui redere ei secundum quod contra me promeruerat; sed reddidi ei omnes terras suas extra terram duorum aratrorum apud Osterland, libros autem terrarum non reddidi ei, probare enim volui quam fidem de beneficio contra tot injurias michi ab illo illatas tenere vellet. Defuncto autem domino meo Rege Edwardo, Athelstanus filius ejus suscepit regnum, quem, videlicet, regem requisivit idem Goda ut pro eo me rogaret quatinus ei redderem libros terrarum suarum. Ego autem, devicta amore Regis Athelstani, ei omnes libros terrarum suarum reddidi excepto libro de Osterland, quem scilicet humiliter bona voluntate dimisit. Insuper pro se et omnibus parentibus suis, natis et nondum natis, nunquam quicquam facturis de predicta terra secum acceptis xj. comparibus suis michi sacramentum fecit. Hoc autem factum est in loco qui nominatur Hamle juxta Lewys. Ego autem Ediva habui terram cum libro de Osterlande diebus duorum Regum Ethelstani et Eadmundi filiorum meorum, Eadredo, quoque filio meo, defuncto despoliata sum omnibus rebus meis et terris meis. Duo quoque filii jam sepe nominati Godonis, Leofstans, et Leovricus, abstulerunt michi duas superiores nominatas Culyng et Osterlande, veneruntque ad puerum Eadwyn

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

(Eadwig), qui tunc noviter levatus erat in regem, et dixerunt se majorem iusticiam in illis terris habere quam me. Remansi ergo illis terris, et omnibus aliis, privata ad tempora Eadgari Regis, qui, cum vidisset me ita dehonestatum ac despoliatum, congregatis principibus Anglie, intellexit enim me cum magna iniusticia rebus et terris meis despoliatum, idemque Rex Eadgarus restituit michi terras meas et omnia mea. Ego autem, licentia et consensu illius, &c., omnes terras meas et libros terrarum, propria manu mea, posui super altare Xpi. in ecclesia que sita est in Dorobernia, &c.

A confirmation was given by Ethelred II.

An addition was made to the manor by Henry VI. of a piece of land on the shore. The charter of donation has the title:—

“Carta graciosi domini Regis Henrici Sexti de le Hosand oblata ad summum altare ecclesie nostre Cantuarie, per manus ejusdem Regis sabbato tercie ebdomade Quadragesime A^o. Dni. mcccxxxix.”

There is here a copy of the charter by which Abp. Richard (I.) gave to the convent of Ch. Ch. the churches of Eastry and Monkton, together with a confirmation by Alex. III., and a note which states that Lucius III. gave a similar confirmation. The Abp.'s charter was witnessed, among others, by Peter of Blois. After the gift by Richard came the spoliation, or resumption, by Baldwin, and lastly, the restoration to the convent by Abp. Islip, whose act was approved and confirmed by Edward III. in 1375.

Chartham.

This manor was given by Elfred (Dux) in A.D. 871. The copy of Elfred's deed, which is written in English, here given, was made by a scribe of the 15th cent. who could not correctly read or write the old form of the language, the consequence being that it is almost incomprehensible; but it is immediately followed by a Latin translation of the effective words. A charter of Eadward (Confessor) follows, by which the ancient donation is confirmed, the manor of Walworth being coupled with that of Chartham, and a list added of all the lands “quas, ut michi indicatum est, ad presens Ecclesia Xpi. habet.”

Godmersham.

In the charter of Coenulf of Mercia, by whom the manor was first given, the date is two years after the donor's death. The remarkable similarity of all those codicelli makes it plain that they were written to order, and all of one pattern; nevertheless the central fact, the gift by the personage named in the charter, may generally be accepted as true, although in most cases the “hoc,” if there were one, having perished, something was concocted to take its place, to be used as evidence when necessary in courts of law and elsewhere.

“Anno Dnice. incarnationis dccxxii. Ego Cenulfus Rex Kancie Wlfredo Archiepo. ad opus monachorum Ecclesie Xpi. in Dorobernia pro salute anime mee concedo partem terre juris mei nomine Melctum, &c. Item eodem anno Beornulfus Rex (Dux?) dedit. . . . villam Godmersham, &c.”

“Anno Dnice. incarnationis mxxvii. Ego Ethelnothus Archiepiscopus. . . . comparavi septuaginta duabus marcis puri argenti a Syredo Duce terram que vocatur Godmersham ad opus et victum monachorum Ecclesie Xpi. &c.”

In 1365 Edward III. by charter granted to the convent the privilege of holding a weekly market at Godmersham on Tuesdays, and a fair of two days' duration annually on the Thursday and Friday in the Whitsun week.

There was a custom in the Middle Ages of annexing to manors situate in the more fertile districts pasture land in the “Denns” of the waste, to which the cattle were driven in the summer, or when the weather was dry enough to permit it. This custom is illustrated by the case of the Denn of Schlepnyden in Smarden, which was annexed to Godmersham, many miles away, where the land was held “per fidelitatem ejuslibet eorum” “tenencium et per sectam ad curiam de Godmersham.”

In 1364 Hamo atte Halle founded, by royal license, a chantry dedicated to Our Lady in the church of Godmersham; endowing it with two messuages and a hundred and forty acres of land. For the licence to amortize the founder paid the King ten pounds. The endowment was afterwards increased by Gilbert de Hilles, who added land of the annual value of twenty-six shillings and eight-pence.

In 1399 the church was appropriated to the convent, by licence from Richard II., Boniface IX. approving.

Brook.

“Istud manerium de Broke dedit Ecclesie Xpi. Cant. Karlemannus Leuita, ad postea Henricus Rex primus idem manerium per cartam suam eidem ecclesie contulit, et Henricus Rex secundus per cartam suam confirmavit.”

Mersham.

“Ego Eadwardus Rex Stigando Archiepiscopo, et Wlfrico Abbati Sci. Augustini, et Oswaldo Vicecomiti ceterisque, &c. Notifico vobis quod Ego concedo donationem Sumardi et Matildis uxoris illius, quam dederunt Ecclesie Xpi. in Dorobernia. . . . villam scilicet que nominatur Merseham. . . . Si quis illam villam a jure predictae Ecclesie aliquo modo auferre conatus fuerit; sociatus Beelzebub principi demoniorum commendetur.”

A “Denn” in the parish of Halden, named Poppydenn was held by rents and services and by suit of the court of Mersham. One part of the rent, a payment of three shillings, was assigned, “pro quadam consuetudine vocatur Daungyr.” Harlakyndenn was also annexed to Mersham.

Rokinge.

This manor was recovered, after alienation, by a fine levied in the King's Bench in the 5th Edward I.

A confirmation by Abp. Theobald, copied among the deeds of the manor, shows that it was given to Ch. Ch. by William de Einesford in the 12th cent.

Appledore.

“Anno Dni. mxxxv. Ego Cunt clemencia Dei Rex Anglorum concedo fideli meo Eadsino episcopo ecclesiam Sci. Martini que sita est extra civitatem Doroberniam in orientali parte ejusdem civitatis; terras Apeldre, videlicet, Palstre, et Wythriceshamme dedi ad opus Ecclesie Xpi. Siquis hoc donum, &c.”

Some deeds of the 12th cent. show how the marsh was reclaimed a little at a time. The Priors Wibert and Odo give permission to certain persons, who are described as “Anglicos,” although they bear the names Simon and Baldewyn, to fence out the sea from as much of the marsh as they can. In payment for the work they are to hold the land rent free for two years, only defending it against the sea and the King.

The deeds of Aghene, Orgarswyke, and Fairfield, are included among the records of this manor.

At the end of the volume there are a few miscellaneous records.

Processus de Ponte de Sturrey. A question as to whether Ch. Ch. or St. Augustine's Abbey was bound to repair.

Hii sunt redditus assignatis Canonis de tenentibus Ecclesie de Wyngham.

Ordinacio Ecclesie Collegiate de Olecumbe.

Carta de Reculver quam dicantur Scs. Dunstanus et manu sua propria conscripta. Of this well-known Charter two contemporary copies exist, one in the Cathedral Library, and the other in the British Museum. Of course, each one claims to be in the autograph of the Saint, although it is plain that they are both counterparts written by a clerk.

Reg. D. The Register D. is a parchment book of about 300 folios, in all respects similar to and a continuation of that marked C., being occupied by the records of the Manors of Ch. Ch. in Kent.

Westwell is the first manor described; the original donation appears to have been forgotten, and the legal title takes its rise in 1241.

“A.D. mcccii. . . . placitum fuit de toto Manerio de Westwelle, et sic recordatum fuit. . . . quod Rex et predecessores sui dederunt predictum manerium monachis Ecclesie. Sec. Trinitatis Deo servitilium in puram et perpetuum elemosinam, ut scripta eorum plenius testantur in folio secundo et tercio subsequentibus.”

These last words do not refer to this volume, in which no records of Westwell of earlier date than the reign of Henry III. are found. At that time the convent endeavoured, and at last successfully, to recover the manor into their own hands. The records of several suits occur, by which the priors and the convent effectually urged their claims in opposition to various “deforcians,” who, being in possession, asserted that they held their portions of the manor at a perpetual fee farm rent. The judgment above written indicates the termination of this series of suits. The peculiarities of Kentish tenures are abundantly exemplified in this register.

The patronage of the church was acquired, in A.D. 1400, by an exchange with Abp. Arundel, who surrendered that of Westwell, receiving in exchange the advowson of “Aldermancherche in civitate London.”

In 1373 a dispute which had long raged between the Rectors of Westwell and Boughton Aluph, on the subject of the titles in certain debatable lands, was settled by the intervention of Abp. Wittlesey, who directed that the Rector of Westwell should yearly pay to him of Boughton a sum of thirty-three shillings and four-pence, in full of all demands.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

Great Chart.

"Anno Dnice. incarnationis dccccxxxix. Ego Ceolnoth gratia Dei Archiep. Dorobernie comparani propria prœcunia mea terram nomine Cheart, a quodam principe vocato Heleth, consensiente et concedente domino meo Rege Athulfio, et eandem terram liberam proclamante ab omni seculari servicio et regio tributo, exceptis, &c."

The "Denn" of Thesedenne in Biddenden was annexed to the manor of Great Chart.

Little Chart.

"Restitutio manerii de Parva Chert. Anno Dnice. incarn. dcccxcix. Ego Cenulfus Rex, venerabili Archiepo. Athelardo rogante, reddo Ecclesie Xpi. que est in Dorobernia, quasdam terras quas olim Rex Offa eidem ecclesie ablatas suis contulit ministris. Hec sunt, Cerringes, Selebentes Coart, Bryningland, et Burian, in parte occidente Berham. Has . . . reddo liberas ab omni, &c. Si quis dehinc eadem, &c."

The "Denn" of Monkensode was annexed to this manor, also Helgaryndenn, in Pluckley, and Bethersden.

Osebert de Plukele gave two shillings rent charged on land at Little Chart to the anniversary of Robert de Lodelawe celebrated at Our Lady's altar in Ch. Ch.

In 1329, the convent of Ch. Ch. recovered damages amounting to seventy pounds from sundry trespassers who had cut timber in the woods of the monastery at Little Chart and elsewhere. The cause was tried at Maidstone before the justices in Eyre.

In 1397 the manor of Calehill in this parish was demised by the Prior and Chapter of Ch. Ch. to Thomas de Brokbell at a fee farm rent of eighteen pounds four shillings and three-pence, his fealty to the lords being reserved. The convent held this manor direct from the king in pure and perpetual alms. Brockbell's heirs having released their interest in the manor, the convent demised the whole manor of Little Chart, apparently including that of Calehill, to John Darell (armiger), in 1494.

Hollingbourne.

Anno Dnice. incarn. dccccxxxix. Ego Athelstanus filius Ethelredi Regis cum consensu et licencia ejus concedo ecclesie Xpi. in Dorobernia terras meas nomine Helyngburna quam emi a patre meo, &c.

In the Cathedral muniments there exist several copies of a will made by this Æthelstan, in which, using the vernacular tongue, he bequeaths Hollingbourne to the convent. This will, of which the date is 1015, is printed in the Codex. Dip.

By a deed dated in 1387, the Prior and Chapter, as lords of Hollingbourne, permit certain tenants to alienate land in the manor to the minister and brethren of the Trinity House of Motynden.

In 1385 the Chapter of Ch. Ch. agreed to receive into their alms two scholars from the College of the Holy Trinity of Bredgar, to be maintained by the Chapter until they arrived at the age of twenty-four years, "prout hactenus aliis pauperibus scolariis dicte 'Elemosinarie ministrari consuevit est." As soon as one scholar was superannuated, another was to be appointed, candidates being required to be "bone vite, conversacionis honeste, competentes legere, et versum culum cursorium canere scientes."

The "denns" of Hokyubery and Herberisfeld in the Weald were annexed to the manor of Hollingbourne.

In 1404, the Convent of Leds agreed to observe the obit of Nicholas Potyn, and gave to the Prior and Chapter of Ch. Ch., who were trustees of Potyn's interests, power to distrain in their manor of Densted (near Canterbury) for a sum of four pounds for each default in the celebration of the anniversary.

Loose.

This manor appears among those of the Convent in Domesday, but no record of its acquisition appears to exist.

In 1412, Stephen Bellenham, John Beaufiz, Peter Colepeper, William Sibthorp (vicar of Yalding), and others, feoffees of John Frenyngham of Loose, in accordance with his will, demised to John son of Reginald Pympe the manor of Otteham, with the advowson of the church, West Barmelyng with the advowson, and lands in Loose, Linton, Botton Moncheuss, Hunton, East Farleigh, Yalding, Marden, Staplehurst, and Maidstone, to him and the heirs of his body, in consideration of the foundation by him of two chaplains to sing daily for the souls of John Frenyngham and his kin. One daily mass was to be celebrated in the church of the Monastery of Boxley, at the altar of St. Stephen, before which the bodies of Frenyngham, of Alice his wife, of Sir Ralph his father, of Katherine his mother, are buried; the other in East Farleigh Church, in the newly built Lady Chapel, for the benefit of the souls of the before-mentioned John, Alice, and Ralph, and of John grandfather of the testator, and Agnes grandmother, who were also (apparently, for the sense is obscure) grandparents of Hugh and Thomas Earls of Stafford, and of Ralph the brother of Earl Thomas. The masses were to terminate at the end of eighty years.

East Farleigh.

"Vide donacionem hujus manerii in uanerio de 'Monketon factam per dominam Edivam Reginam."

West Farleigh and Teston.

Donacio Maneriorum de Westfarleigh et Testane.

Carta Alianore Regine de, &c.

Alianora Dei gratia Regina Anglie, &c. Sciatis quod ædificas et concessimus, &c., Priori et Conventui Sœ. Trinitatis Cantuar. in liberam, puram et perp^{am} elemosinam maneria nostra de Westfarleigh et Therstane cum omnibus redditibus, &c.

Carta confirmatoria Regis Edwardi.

A writ of Edward II. to the Sheriff of Kent requires him to acquit the tenants of Westfarleigh from suit at the sheriff's turn.

The family of Wilburgham had claims to this manor, as they asserted, superior to those of the Queen, and after her death they endeavoured to eject the prior and chapter. They pleaded that Roger Loveday conveyed it to the Queen after having unjustly disseised themselves. A fine levied in 1304 brought the suit (real or fictitious) to a close.

Among the outgoing from the Manor of Peckham, whose records are included under the same title as those of West Farleigh, an item occurs of thirty-one shillings and fivepence, being "Redditus de Lodlowe pertinens 'ad anniversario (sic.);" this is in 1371.

Berkesore and Leysdown in Sheppey.

These manors were given by Henry II., and confirmed by Henry (Rex junior, III., or Fitz Henry).

Halstow.

Vide donacionem ecclie. de Halgesto pertinentis ad officium Precentoris inter cartas Archiepiscoporum.

The church was appropriated to the convent by Abp. Theobald, and confirmed by his successors down to John Peckham. The profits of the church were given for repairing the books of the convent. A vicarage, perhaps more than one, was ordained in the church, to which John the nephew of Abp. Becket, and son of his sister Agnes, was presented by the prior and chapter.

By a license granted by Richard II. in 1381, the convent was permitted to purchase a small portion of land in Halstow. A field known as Crumbeisfield was given by Alured de Gare, and these parcels, with the church, constituted the whole of the convent's interest in this place.

Elverton (in villa de Stone juxta Ospreng).

The records of this manor are introduced by a remarkable judgment pronounced in 1153. It takes in the beginning a Domesday like form, and reads thus:—

Ailwardintune est terra monachorum Ecclie. Xpi. Cant. et de mensa eorum. Ista terra dat iiii. lib. et x. sol. ad victum eorum, et iij. sol. ad altare Xpi, pro omnibus serviciis et consuetudinibus que ad terram pertinent. De ista eadem terra quidam viccomites, Radulfus Picot nomine, scottum et Deneveld et de northum et cetera que terris reddi solent exigebat injuste. Tandem autem, post multos sermones et placita inde habita, ventum est in comitatum quod idem Radulfus apud Castmores tenuit. Et ibidem, per judicium totius Comitatus, ostensum et diracionatum est, a iusticiis vel ministris Regis, vel ab alio aliquo, nichil omnino de predictis exigi vel accipi debere, nec aliquem potestatem super eandem terram habere preter monachos Ecclie. Xpi. Cant., quia dominica terra eorum est. Isti nominati presentes fuerunt in Comitatu visi (sic) hoc diracionatum fuit. Acum est autem hoc tempore Regis Stephani et Archiepi. Theobaldi, sub predicto viccomite, apud Castan, Anno ab incarn^{te} Dni. mccc^{to}.

About twenty names of the persons who composed this county court here follow, headed by Ralph Picot the sheriff, who presided, and was just enough to certify and approve a judgment which was given against himself. The oligarchy which represented the county, all bore Norman names except three, Aelwinus de Cliva, Turstanns dapifer Episcopi, and Helelnoth prepositus de Holingbourne.

A man living at Stone in Ospringe, whose name often occurs in the title-deeds of this manor, was described as "Semannus att Stone," as though there were some stone at the spot, sufficiently remarkable to have given the designation to the man in the 13th cent. and to the place down to our own time.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

In 1227 Abp. Langton united the church of Tenham to the archdeaconry of Canterbury, then held by his own brother Simon. To ensure the concurrence of the monks of Ch. Ch. (lords of Eilwarton in the hamlet of Stone, in the parish of Tenham) it was covenanted by the Abp. and the Archd., in words identical in both their warranties:—"Quod predicti Prior et Conventus imperpetuum libere et quiete et pacifice possideant decimas de Eylwarton, majores et minores, sicut ab antiquis temporibus possederunt, sitas infra limites parochie de Stanes, capelle de Tenham. Ita quod parochiani de Stanes, pertinentes ad antiquum dominium Ecclesie. Xpi., plenarie et sine qualibet calumpnia, percipiant omnia jura spiritualia in ecclesia de Stanes, decimas suas majores et minores, sicut consueverunt, reddentes Ecclesie. Xpi. Cant."

From this it appears that the chapel of Stanes was at the date separated from the mother church of Tenham, and constituted a parish church with separate tithes. The little church of Stone, with its Roman chancel walls, and its still existing high altar of stone, is the parish church whose origin is here recorded. Possibly the abundance of stones in the Roman building, whose foundations lie under the clump of trees adjoining the chapel, may have given rise to the name of Stanes.

Preston and Copton, near Faversham.

These manors belonged to the convent before the compilation of Domesday, but there is no trace of the first acquisition. A memorandum states that the prior and convent of Ch. Ch. in A.D. 1289 allowed their tenants who held their lands by uncertain services and other base tenures to commute them for fixed money payments. The names of the several tenants who were subject to be called upon to collect the prior's provisions, to drive swine to the woods and to Canterbury, and to perform other similar services, are here given, with the annual sum for which the services were commuted set against the name of each. These sums were but small, the largest being twopence and the smallest one halfpenny.

Selgrave near Faversham.

This manor was acquired by purchase in 1393 from Dame Elizabeth Spigurnel, to whom it had descended from Ralph Sauzavey (miles). The manor was bought to furnish a perpetual income for a newly founded chantry, and licenses for amortization were granted by Richard II., who waived the statute de Religiosis, and by the Abbot of Faversham, the mesne lord, whose consent was necessary to make the conveyance legal.

In 1340 Abp. Stratford confirmed the appropriation to the abbey of Faversham of the churches of Preston and Boughton-under-Blean; but before doing so, to guard the church of Canterbury against loss, he required the abbey to assign five marks from the fruits of Boughton to the infirmary of Ch. Ch., and two from Preston to the sacristy.

In 1275 the Domus Dei of Ospringe had acquired lands in the fee of Ch. Ch. in the manors of Adisham and Staple. Having thus become the men of the Prior and Chapter, the Master and brothers of the house of Ospringe were called upon to render fealty to Ch. Ch.; which they undertook to do by a composition here copied.

Cliff-at-Hoo, Clyve.

This manor, the acquisition of which is not here recorded, belonged to the convent before the Conquest. The marshes of the manor afforded most valuable pasturage, and the rectors of the parish became rich or poor according as the tithes of these were paid or withheld. In the 13th cent., the rectors (many in succession) demanded tithes from the marshes belonging to Ch. Ch.; the convent, on the other hand, refused to pay anything, alleging that their manors were universally exempt from tithes. Archbishops and popes intervened, delegate judges were appointed and heard evidence, but came to no decision, at least to none from which an appeal did not lie to some other tribunal: until at last both parties being outwitted agreed to a composition, by which neither obtained exactly what he had been fighting for. Instruments of all sorts connected with these disputes are preserved in this register.

An early grant of two rents amounting together to 12*d.* heads the title-deeds of Cliff. In spite of the Saxon character of the names it is certain that the date of this deed is more recent than the Norman conquest, and that others still more ancient have been lost.

"Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego Wlvordus filius Wlvredii dedi et concessi, &c., totum redditum meum in Clyve, videlicet duodecem denarios, de quibus Alanus filius Eilwini mihi annuatim solebat reddere decem denarios et Elias filius Walteri de Tanet duos denarios, &c. His testibus: Ricardo monacho, Galfrido de Fraxino, Aldwino Sprot, Willelmo Kidenot, Willelmo Busin, Willelmo filio Eilweker, Thomas Plebion, Eilwekero Preton."

Meopham.

This manor is included in Queen Ediva's gift of Monkton, &c., which see. By a charter of Abp. Richard (12th cent.), which is here copied, the church of Meopham was appropriated to the almonry of Ch. Ch.; but, as appears by another deed, being pressed by Pope Alexander III., the Abp. was compelled to institute one Virgilius, a foreigner, to the rectory. The convent, making the best of a bad bargain, consented to allow Virgil to enjoy the benefice for his life, after which they proposed that the Abp.'s benevolence should take effect. The convent were disappointed in their hope, for Abp. Baldwin resumed the benefice, and the patronage remained with him and his successors for two centuries, at which period the church was re-appropriated to the convent by Abp. Courtenay in 1386.

In 1322, the prior of Ch. Ch., as mesne lord of the manor of Meopham, granted letters patent to Master Edmund de Mepham and Simon his brother, "sacrae paginae professores," allowing them to bestow where they will a chapel and a messuage with two acres of land attached, known as the "Capella et messuagium de la Dene" in Meopham, statuto non obstante.

A few pages at the end of this register are taken up with miscellaneous matters, among them a nearly obliterated, but still legible, list, having the title:

Losti, hundredi, cum villatis tocius Kancie, et feoda militum infra comitatum.

A list of quitrants and manorial dues payable from the several manors of the convent, drawn up by some zealous "custos maueriorum," with the date A.D. 1451, is thus introduced:

"Eventum humane condicionis cito labitur memoria, idcirco ad rei geste memoriam quancunque scriptura necessaria probatur, eapropter ad honorem Dni. nostri Jhu. Xpi., glorioseque virginis Beate Marie, ac gloriosi Martiris Thome (these four words are, imperfectly, erased), hoc opusculum, ad perpetuum memoriale, sub brevi compendio ex arduis et fatigis laboribus compilavi, sub anno Domini mcccc^o. Nam si mens humana singula cordetenus, quod absurdum est, rememorare valeret, sequeretur tunc, quod scribere nichil aliud esset quam laborem laboribus anticipare. Et ideo in hujus operis exordio, primo tractat auctor de modo et forma relevandi in diversis maneriis et dominiis prioratus, secundum dictorum maneriorum consuetudines actenus usitatas &c."

Reg. E. Register E is a magnificent volume of 408 leaves of fine vellum, each measuring 16 by 11 inches. Its title, "Registrum omnium Cartarum et Compositionum Ecclesie Cantuar.," completely explains the contents. In it are collected copies of all the deeds by virtue of which the monastery held its estates and privileges from the greatest to the least; from the Magna Carta "Dat. per manum nostram in prato quod vocatur 'Runingmed,'" to the "Carta Alicie filie Thome Coffyn de Chertelham de tribus denariis redditus."

The first forty-two folios are dedicated to a complete table of contents, the whole of the deeds in the register being on the first page distributed under nine principal titles.

1. Carte Regum de Vimis Francie.
2. Carte de redditibus et pedagiis in regno Francie.
3. Codicelli.
4. Carte Regum Anglie de libertate ecclesiastica.
5. Carte Regum Anglie (de diversis negotiis).
6. Carte Episcoporum.
7. Compositiones.
8. Carte de Feretro et de Altaribus.
9. Carte maneriorum, reddituum, et terrarum.

The remainder of the table of contents is occupied by a catalogue of every deed in the collection, 1,995 in number, ranked under one or other of the above-written nine titles; the last of which, being too comprehensive to be dealt with at one blow, is distributed into subsections each headed by the name of the manor or estate to which the deeds refer.

This volume was evidently compiled in the early part of the 14th cent. under the care of Prior Henry of Eastry, a man of great business capacity, whose directing hand has left its traces in every department of the priory of Christ Church. At the end of the 12th cent. and all through the 13th, benefactors, stimulated at first by the recent, and afterwards by the widely spread fame of St. Thomas the second patron of the church, flocked to his shrine, bringing with them offerings, mostly of money or other portable property, but also in great numbers with gifts of lands, rents, and other sources of perennial

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

income. By the end of the 13th cent. this class of offerings seems almost to have died out, and then it was that Prior Eastry, seeing that the title deeds were not likely to be greatly increased in number, caused this present volume to be drawn up, with, at the same time, a more roughly executed counterpart. The counterpart was broken up into four volumes, interleaved with blank pages, about 100 years after it was first compiled, and it then became the registers A., B., C., and D., a description of whose contents has hitherto occupied this report; at the same time the sister volume, this present grand register E., escaped mutilation.

The handwriting, apparently the work of two scribes only, is beautifully neat and clear, and the graceful form and bright tints of the small capitals with which each deed begins are remarkably graceful and attractive. These are coloured alternately with vermilion and a greyish blue preparation of cobalt, and from each there issues a sheaf of flowing lines and tendrils, red for the blue capitals and blue for the red, which extending upwards and downwards meet those of the capitals above and below, thus decorating the whole of the left-hand margin of each page.

A difference there is between the contents of this volume and those of A., B., C., and D.; it is this: this register E. was compiled about A.D. 1300, and has not been since added to, whilst in the other volumes, already described, on the inserted blank leaves are written copies of all the deeds added to the monastic muniments up to about A.D. 1430.

At the end of the register about 50 parchment folios have been included by the bookbinder; they are much smaller in size than the leaves of the register, and are in a very dilapidated condition.

The title of the libellus is:

Registrum inceptum in Ecclesia Xpi. Cantuar. Anno Dni. m. primo, quarto nonas Septembris, anno regni Regis Henrici Septimi decimo septimo, anno translationis Henrici Dene Archiepi. primo. Tempore venerabilis in Xpo. patris Dom. Thome Goldstone prioris, sacre pagine professoris, Johanne Waltham et Rogero Benett Cancellariis existentibus, sacreque theologie baccalariis.

From this it appears that this is the ordinary register of the monastery for the date, containing copies of all commissions, appointments to offices, presentations to benefices, and other instruments with which the convent was in any way concerned.

One of the earliest documents is a deed by which Abp. Dene settled an annuity of twenty pounds upon Sir Reginald Bray, the standing counsel of the see, and the tutor to Prince Arthur, in consideration "pro bono" "consilio suo nobis impenso et in futurum nobis successoribus nostris impendendo." The annuity being charged upon the lands of the See of Canterbury ("per cipendus (redditus) de et in omnibus terris at tene-mentis nostris in com. Midds"); it was necessary, in order to attest the validity of the grant, that it should be countersigned by the Chapter of Ch. Ch., and hence it is entered in this register.

A letter appointing an apparitor general of the Abp.'s court shows that when Dene came from Lanthony he did not overlook his Welsh friends: the name of the new officer was "Ryse ap Myrddyth."

In March 1502 the convent send letters to the King announcing the death of their Abp., and asking for a congé d'élire; after which follow copies of all the commissions by which it was usual to appoint officers to exercise their functions sede vacante. The Abp. being dead, and the Prior and Chapter custodes spiritualitatis, their presentations to benefices now become collations.

The King's license to elect an Abp. came accompanied by the following letter:—

"By the King. To our trusty and well beloved in God the Prior and the Convent of Chyrchurche in Canterbury.

"Trusty and welbeloved in God, we grete you well, and where, upon the decease of your spiritual Pastor and Gouernor the late Archiebisschop of Caunterburye, ye made unbyll instance unto us to have our licence reall to procede to your election of a nother person to succede into the saide place and dygnite; wher upon we considering well the same to the see of mooste honour, auctorite and preeminence by reason of the primacy therof within this our reame, and beyng fully mynded, therfore and for other causys us moving, to proryde such a substantiall and discrete man, endyd with vertu and kunnyng, and wordely wyse-doun as shalbe mete therunto, and hable nott only to execute the charge and cure therof both spiritually and temporally to Godd's pleasure and to the well and honour of the saide Churche, but also, besides that, to doo unto us and our realme good and acceptably service, haue ofte revolved this matter in our mynde and rype remembrance, and, by goode leyser and deliberacion, beholding inwardly among all other the profounde kunnyng vertuous conversacion and thapprvyd greate wysdom whiche the righte reuerent fader in God our right trusty counsellor the bysshopp of London experymently is knowen to be of, have therfore, and for other hys manyfold vertues and meritis, namyd hym as a person mete in our opinion unto the forseide dignite. Wyllyng you therfore to procede in your election of the saide reuerent fader, accordyng to this our nominacion, wherunto wee licence you by thys presentes, nott doubtyng butt that ye shall haue in hym suche a spiritual Pastor and Gouernor as by hys demenure God shalbe singularly pleasyd, wee and oure reame well seryyd, and your saide Churche honoryd and avauanced. Even undre our signet, at our Castell of Notyngham, the xv. day of August."

This is followed by the Processus of the election of Abp. Warham, and the Certificate sent to him as Bishop of London announcing his election to the See of Canterbury.

The deed of foundation of the King's Chapel in Westminster Abbey was confirmed in Ch. Ch., and announced in this form:

Anno regni Regis Henrici Septimi decimo nono tercio die Agusti, sigillati erant, sigillo nostro communi, libri qui dicuntur septipartiti inter illustrissimum Principem, et Abbatem Sci. Petri Westminsterii London. Et duodecimo die mensis ejusdem, mane circiter horam octavam, convocatis singulis confratribus, in Capitulo nostro, coram reverendo in Xpo. patre Dno. Ricardo Wynton. Episcopo, Doctore Goldstone hujus ecclesie Priore, et Magro. Johanne Fyneux Dni. Regis Justiciario, omnia et singula que tercio die mensis Augusti acta erant tunc rata et approbata habuimus, et auctoritate capituli nostri, quantum ad nos pertinuit, confirmavimus.

A similar memorandum relates that the convent on Nov. 8 in the same year agreed to celebrate the king's anniversary in accordance with the terms of a quadruplicate indenture, one part of which "pendet ad altare" "Sci. Andree Apostoli, ut quilibet Conventus inspicere potest, &c." This indenture is the book bound in blue velvet which is described among the Chart. Ant. Cant. (W. 450) in the fifth report of the Hist. MSS. Comm.

Reg. F. The Register marked F. is a parchment volume of 290 folios, almost exclusively filled with copies of wills proved before the commissary of the prior and chapter of Christ Church, sede vacante. Other matters which occupy a comparatively small number of pages are deserving of notice, if it be only to draw attention to the lists of large numbers of names of persons, of parish clergymen, executors, churchwardens, and others in the dioceses of Norwich, Winchester, Chichester, Bath and Wells, and Lichfield and Coventry; all of which sees fell vacant at the time that the see of Canterbury was also empty, and in which therefore the Prior of Christ Church, by his agents, made visitations; making use of the opportunely vacant sees to keep alive his right of exercising all those spiritual functions which were performed by the Archbishop, sede Cant. plena.

This register, although written throughout by one hand, relates to two distinct vacancies of the see of Canterbury, separated from each other by a space of a year and four months, that namely which began on the death of Cardinal Morton in Oct. 1500, and that which followed the death of Abp. Henry Deane in Feb. 1502. The short pages bound into the end of Reg. E. record the acts of secular jurisdiction which fell to the share of the prior of Ch. Ch. during the latter of these vacancies, and in the present volume the acts of spiritual authority are recorded.

The great title which forms the frontispiece to the volume reads:—

Testamenta, coram ven. viro Magro. Willelmo Barons Legum Doctore, prerogative ecclesie Xpi. Cant. custode, ac venerabilium religiosorumque virorum Prioris et Capituli ejusdem (ad quos omnes et omnimoda jurisdictio spiritualis et ecclesiastica que ad Archiepum. Cant. pertinuit sede plena, ipsa sede jam vacante notorie dinoscitur pertinere), commissario in hac parte sufficienter et legitime deputato, probata, ejusque auctoritate vigore commissionis sue . . . cujus tenor inferius scribitur, dicta vacacione durante, approbata, et insinuata, inferius registrata sunt et conscripta.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

This is followed by the Commissary's commission.

It will be seen that these wills, having been proved before the Commissary of the Prior, were copied into this volume and retained at Canterbury in the hands of the monks of Ch. Ch., never coming within the cognizance of the officials of the Archbishop's Prerogative Court. It follows, therefore, that it would be in vain to make a sea ch in the Will Office in London, or in the district office of the Registrar of the Probate Court at Canterbury for information concerning them. In fact this register contains four hundred wills which, up to the present time, have been unknown to genealogists; it will therefore be useful to subjoin a list of the testators' names, with their places of abode. It is to be remembered that the first of these wills was proved in October 1500, and the last in August 1503; also that from June 1501 to Feb. 1502, Henry Deane being then Abp., all wills were proved in his court, and are therefore not to be found in this collection.

Wills proved before the Commissary of the Prior of Canterbury, sede Cant. vacante, between October 1500 and June 1501.

John Morton, Archbishop of Canterbury.
Joan Viscountess Lisle (bur' in St. Mich', Cornhill).
Thomas Jan, Bishop of Norwich.
Thomas Langton, Bishop of Winchester.
Thomas Madders, priest, of Croydon.
John Lambert, of Sutton in Holland, Linc.
John Halewell, of Bigbury, dioc. Exon.
John Bostok, canon residentiary of Sarum
Alice Gilbert, of Fovant.
William Dawstowe, of Taunton.
John Halse, sen., of Corscomb.
John Barker, merchant of the Staple.
Richard Harrys, of Glastonbury.
Thomas Key, of South Petherton.
John Thomas, of Bristol.
John Dyar, of Taunton.
William Jenyco, of Glastonbury.
William Coddying, of St. George's, Southwark.
Paul Whityng, of Clavering, Essex.
Arthur Radcliff, brewer, of London.
John Baker, of Peckham, Surrey.
Robert Wolterton, clerk, of Bodney, Norf.
William Banner, of Bristol.
Thomas Bendyshe, of Hadleigh, Suff.
John Tyall, of Colchester.
Robert Yugo, of London, gent.
Henry Wynger, haberdasher, of London.
John Hervy, Dean of Hereford.
Richard Bolles, of Haugh, Linc.
Thomas Hords, of Bridgenorth.
Hammond Sutton, of Wickford.
John Sorell, of Wisbeach.
Hugh Browne, of Panyer Alley, London.
William Reynolds, of Sherborne.
John Brewood, of Horkesley.
Will. Dallyng, canon of St. Mary Overy.
Thomas Prowde, of Bristol.
Will. Cheyne, of Fen Ditton.
John Wheeler, of Haddenham, Cambs.
John Newton, of Whittlesford.
Thomas Rokes, sen., of Falley, Bucks.
Thomas Harris, of Blunsden St. Andrew.
John Roo, of St. Lawrence, Jewry.
Gruff ap Res ap Eden, of Yale.
Nich. Pontysbury, of Shrewsbury.
Thomas Cokke, of Bloxham.
Hugh Pemberton, alderman of London.
Alice Stokys, of Send.
Thomas Philippe, of Montacute.
Robert Manfeld, of Taplow.
Henry Cokke, of Walden.
Thomas Seward, of Walden.
John Powdych, of Wisbeach.
Margaret (wife of John) Moris, of Worcester.
Edmund Ascombe, of Hounslow.
Thomas Coke, of Bloxham.
Will. Machen, wireseller, of London.
Thomas Deuman, medicus, Collyweston?
Will. Philippe, of Bosume, Essex.
William Harwell, of Warwick.
Hugh Hunteley, of Duxton.
John Okyngton, of Okington, Cambs.
Richard Wanor, of Barking.
Thomas Hynton, of Fleet, Linc.
William Spenser, of Stamford.
Will. Cosshehan, of Cranbrook.
Reginald Deke, of Stoke-by-Clare.
John Ridon, of Battersea (Battrichesey).
John Eyerby, fishmonger, of London.

James Wexham, draper, of Hastings.
Richard Chantry, canon of Stoke College.
Thomas Watts, of Beauchamp Roding.
Cristiana Gaysway, of Nayland.
Will. Marrant, of Hadleigh.
John Redhode, of Chipping Wycombe.
Will. Jelle, butcher, of London.
Reginald Mutte, vicar of Sutton Courtenay, Berks.
John Wright, of Ely.
John Palmer, of Lambeth.
Rich. Knollys, draper, of London.
John Wheler, joiner, of London.
John Busshie, of Steeple Morden.
Humphrey Forster, of Harpenden.
John Drylande, of St. Bartholomew the Less.
Isabel Dryland (wife of John), of the same.
Thomas Warley, of Slough in Upton.
Robert Hatlost, grocer, of London.
John Hegge, notary, of Norwich.
John Frende, of Harrow.
Richard Martham, of Winchelsea.
Robert Ryppon, senr., of Lee, Kent.
John Vynying alias Dyer, of Wincauton (Vyncaiton).
John Hyndford, of Estooker (Esstover, Somerset?).
John Beytham, of Stratford (Essex prob?).
Thomas Wheler, of Soke (Winchester).
John Popyr, of St. Olave's, Southwark.
John Crilford, of Royston.
John Boteler, of Brounfeld, Essex.
Thomas Presey, of Bishopston.
John Penmyng, brewer, of London.
Will. Westbroke, haberdasher, of London.
John Dawson, of St. Olave's, Southwark.
Rich. Frende, of Prittlewell.
Edith Boulonde, of All Hallows, Winchester.
John Breton, of Colchester.
Will. Catelyn, of West Malling.
John Adam, of Cambridge.
Robert Tylnay, of Witchford (Wittiforth, Ely).
John Warkeworth, Master of St. Peter's, Cambridge.
Thomas Bryan, Chief Justice of the King's Bench.
Roger Keyff, of Melford.
Symon Lynche, of Cranbrook.
Will. Polgrave, tailor, of London.
Leticia Sturdy, widow of John, of London.
John Wynor, of Bradford-on-Avon.
Margaret Odyngsellys, wife of Jerad, of Long Eggington.
Nicholas Moyn, of Colne Comitis (Earl's Colne).
John Robyns.
Will. Fryer, of Chipping Wycombe.
John Clos, Dean of Chichester.
Robert Trowbryng, of Bridport.
Robert Richard, of Halden.
Cristiana Samforth, of Kingston-on-Thames.
John Hamond, of West Moulsey.
Thomas Nycols, of Fifield Bavant.
Thomas Say, of Abingdon.
Richard Hyllie, knt., of London.
John Avenyng, of Cirencester.
Thomas Browne, junr, vintner, of London.
Will. Page, of Willesden.
John Sturdy, tallow-chandler, of London.
Richard Clerk, of St. Magnus, London.
Robert Heryonge, of Hoxton.
Rich. Tendryng, tailor, of London.
Henry Hayter, of Kingstou-on-Thames.
Alice Abbot, of Cambridge.
Wyba Tornor, of Hadley.
John Dinton, of Bourne, Linc.
Rich. White, of Nayland.
John Burnard, of Taunton.
John att Water, of Wells.
Nicholas Clere, of Colchester.
Richard Grope, of Long Ditton.
John Hesewell, of Cambridge.
Gilbert Carleton, clerk and Vicar of Farningham.
Robert Holcote, Vicar of Bampton, Oxon.
Rich. Peers, of Shapwick.
John Treffrey, knt., of St. Finbar's, Fowey.
John Hawkyngs, of Turkeadan.
Robert Whityng.
John Clerke, Northampton.
Will. Smalley, alias Hewet, of Coventry.
John Getyn, of Northampton.
Agnes Webbey, wife of Will. Pewterer, of London.
Rich. Newton, of Monkton, dioc. St. David's.
Steph. Havile, of Oxford.
Robert Sergeaunt, of Stoke Nayland.
John Chapman, of Compton Martin.
John Forster, Esquire, of London.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

John Raven, of Shitlington, Linc. dioc.
Rob. Wilby, tallow-chandler, of London.
Henry Wentworth, kn.
John Hale, of Finchfield.
Will. Kelet, Clerk in Chancery.
Agnes Bromall, of London.
Thomas Fisser, of Winchelsea.
William Hun-ton, of Kingston-on-Thames.
John Benne, stockfishmonger, of London.
James Rushton, haberdasher, of London.
Margaret Yonge.
Will. Milet, of Dartford.
Robert Tate, alderman of London.
Robert Weston, mercer, of Mondon.
John Ravenyng, of London.
Nicholas Chedworth, of Hackney.
Rich. Butler, of Earl's Colne.
Will. Bolton, Vicar of Little Abington.
John Warde, alderman and grocer, of London.
Will. Buck, tailor, of London.
Will. Haryot, sen., draper, of London.
Henry Boode, of Burnham, Essex.
Will. Carew, kn., of Bury St. Edmund.
John Druze, of Bristol.
Robert Gerard, of Fornham St. Genovese.
Anne Codyngton, of Codyngton.
Will. Laurens, of Boxted, Essex.
John Myles, of Apsden, Herts.
John Hyde, of Sonning.
Thomas Ingram, of Stortford.
Will. Mydwynre, of Northleach.
Peter Peckham, of Denham, Bucks.
Thomas May, of Wadhurst.
Edward Westby, gent., of London.
Thomas Harvy, of Tollard Royal.
Isabel Smethyng, of Salisbury.
John Doggel, priest, Canon of Salisbury (?).
Robert Cook, clerk.
Walter Royisbrok, of Stowmarket.
Joan Brygge, of Worcester.
Will. Wotton, draper, of London.
Symon Smyth, of Long Melford.
John Lambe, tyler, of London.
Robert Thorpe, alderman, of Norwich.
Will. Tendryng, of Colchester.
John Rylyng, alias Cawston, hurer., of London.
Jane Redmyde, dan. of the Duchess of Norfolk.
Will. Stokedale, Dean of the College of Leicester.
Thomas Dalley, Vicar of Cheping, Berks.
Will. Hertwell, cutler, of London.
William Knyght, yeoman of the Crown.
John Dudeley, of Hatheryngton, Sussex.
Nich. Cromer, of Bristol.
Isabel Hede, of St. Margaret's, Southwark.
Agnes Colstyle, of Kidderminster.
Hugh Lewys, of Ipswich.
Will. Aprene, Rector of Crudwell.
George Witting, of Shaftesbury.
Rauf Tykhull, of Blechingley.
Thomas Symmys, vicar of Mayfield.
Philip Bulwyke (of London ?).
Richard Stanwardyn, draper, of Coventry.
Thomas Waityng, Fellow of the College of Plasshy.
Thomas Kelett, of Horsham.
John Mascall, of London.
Richard Hurst, of St. George beside Eastchepe.
John Saunden, barber, of Cambridge.
Will. Folifote, carpenter, of Cambridge.
Thomas Williamson, priest, of Burgh.
John Warner, jun., armourer, of London.
Robert Hardy, of Stickney.
Will. Massett, grocer, of London.
Will. Southworth, grocer, of London.
Will. Beel, of Pinchbeck.
Roger Barthelot, ironmonger, of London.
John Whiteharte, of Milton, Sarum dioc.
Roger Knokyn, of Newbury.
Christopher Browne, of Kendal.
Thomas Kylygrewe, of Penryn.
Thomas Ewen, grocer, of London.
William Wadyngton, fishmonger, London.
John Bolley, of Hollingbourne.
Isabel Meryke, of St. Mary extra Muros, Winchester.
John Sapcote, kn., of Hartland.
John Crosby, gentleman, of London.
Thomas quondam Francisci, quondam Johannis de Gyngyngis de Lucca.
Roger Passheley, gent., of London.
Will. Wallpole, of Thurlow St. Peter's.
Thomas Rokley, skinner, of London.
John Decon, tailor, of London.

Rich. Bonde, of Uffington.

John Style, grocer, of London.

Vacacio episcopatus Norwicensis per obitum bono memorie Thome Jane, &c.

Institutions.

Here follow the records of institutions to sixty-eight benefices in the dioc. of Norwich, the names of the late, and of the new, curate being given in each case.

Sequitur testamenta in Dioc. Norwic. appro-bata, &c.

The wills are those of:—

Alianore Tounesend, Lady of Reynham Mary.

Robert Crane, of Walsingham.

John Dene, tanner, of Lynn.

William Lexham, of Walsingham.

John Smyth, of Sheringham.

Thomas Stevynson, parson of West Wrotham.

Edmund Peers, of Yarmouth.

John Cooke, of Walpott.

John Hayns, clerk, of Strampeshaugh.

Rich. Taylour, of Polstead.

John Raynolds, of East Bergholt.

Agnes Page, of Polstead.

John Amye, of Hynterisham (Hintlesham ?).

Anne Newport, of Ipswich.

Rich. Garrard, of Narford.

Alice Sewall, of East Walton.

Edmund Watts, clerk, of Bridgham.

Rob. Delfi, of Oughtewell.

Rob. Dod, Vicar of Islington (Islington).

Agnes Gyls, of Crabbow.

Richard Habham, of Upwell.

John Blisse, of Wroton.

Richard Nutman, of Tilney.

Agnes Moote, of West Lynn.

Katherine Rawlyn, of Lynn.

John Futsche, of Fransham.

Joan Stalon, of Norwich.

John Harman, sen., of Westleton.

Robert Fullere, priest, of Houghton.

James Hayward, of North Barsham.

Margaret Portland, of Alisham.

Richard Clerk, of Sibton.

Margaret Ryghtwyse, widow of Thomas, of Sall.

Edmund Thurston, of Rendham.

John Estan, of Estrynton.

Robert Cook, Weyrode.

Thomas Nyilson, of Norwich.

Walter Croft, of Norforth.

Robert Rogers, of Drayton.

Alice Gerrard, wife of Thomas, of Heynford.

Thomas Aldham, of Pyrlleston.

Agnes Herry, wife of Thomas, of Wramplyngham.

John Saxmondham, alias Cowper, of Glenham.

Thomas Bramford, of Felixstow.

Robert Bene, of Walton.

Robert Baldwyne, of Asyngton, Suff.

Joan Yorke, of Framlingham.

Thomas Maister, of Woodbridge.

Will. Gage, clerk, of Woolpit.

Richard Angewell, of Thetford.

Thomas Spenser, of Downham Hithe.

Thomas Plomer, of Swaffham.

William Doo, of Fincham.

John Pykes, of Ronighton. Holme (Runham or Runton ?).

Robert Moote, of West Lynn.

John Synnow, of Southacre.

Alice Lambe, of Wells (by the Sea).

Margaret Shelton, wife of Sir Rauf, of Shelton.

Thomas Tryour, of Deopham.

Robert Baker, of Attleborough.

Robert Chapeleyn, of Wymondham.

Robert Brampton, of Attleborough.

Rich. Pynnes, of East Dereham.

Will. Fratt, of Monesley.

Robert Woode, of Norwich.

Thomas Aylemer, grocer, of Norwich.

Thomas Percy, of Hockering.

John Hamelyn, of East Harling.

John Vincent, of North Tudeham.

Richard Smith, of Bungay.

Robert Adred, of Beccles.

William Ponde, of Corton.

William Aleyn, of Pakefield.

John Rypynge, of Mutford.

John Sonde, of Southwold.

John Baldwyn, of Walpole.

William Porter, of Peasenahall.

Rich. Hawkyng, priest, of Middleton.

Rich. Grenlyng, of Werbaston.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

Will. Harpou, of Holton.
Rich. Huntman, of Wickham.
Will. Holland, of Framlingham.
Johr. Flegge, of Needham Market.
Henry Wyngfeld, clerk, of Letheringham.
Nicholas Bunt, of Fincham.
Geoffrey Skete, of Downham.
Thomas Chapleyn, of Bungay.
Alan Kelston, of Wells-by-the-Sea.
Henry Clyston, clerk, of Postwick.
John Barker, parson of Westwick, Norwich.
Will. Doraunt, of Henstead.
Thomas Elham, of Bungay.
Emma Makke, of Salthouse.
Robert Percy, of Wetheringsett.
Will. Fisher, of Castleacre, Norwich.
Will. Payne, of Blythburgh.
Rich. Rysyng, of Antingham.
Margaret Jorden, of Lowestoft.
Rob. Ballys, of Thetford.
Elizabeth Morley, of Carrow.
Robert Launce, of Mendham.
John Spynk, of Cromer.
Margaret Tornor, of Norwich.
John Aunsell, of Smallburgh.
Thomas Crane, of Palgrave.
Will. Vyncent, senr., of Walsingham.
Will. Aleyn, of North Lopham.
John Skete, senr., of Kersey.
Thomas Berrey, of Needham Market.
William Hardyng, of Woodbridge.
Thomas Astley, esquire, of Blakeney (?).
Thomas Dey, potter, of Heigham.
Will. Mowth, of Lynn Episcopi.
John Odam, of Tilney.
Elizabeth Wyngfeld, wife of Sir John, of Letheringham.
Barth. Skete, of Wangford.
Will. Aleyn, of Pakefield.
Emma Hetirtou, of Alby by Hanworth.
Dame Bate Tygo, chastwoman, of Lynn.
Will. Aubrey, of Woolpit.
Rob. Manger, parson of Wheatacreburgh.
Thomas Cawsell, of Wallington.
Will. Jacob, of Lavenham.
Thomas Drovry, of Yaxham.
Simond Toke, of Betele (St. Mary Magdalene).
Thomas Davy, of St. Michael Coslany, Norwich.
Richard Heryng, of Walsingham.
William Warde, priest, of Iteringham.
Margaret Ward, of Beccles.
Agnes Baker, of Mutford.
Geoffrey Alyn, of Terrington.
Will. Aylemer, rector of Combs.
John Grys, gent., of Norwich.
John Sutton, of London and Kirkley.
John Watur, skinner, of Norwich.
Alex. Hart, of Ipswich.
Alex. Syr, of Bradfield.
Nicholas Bunt, of Fincham.
Robert Calton, of Norwich.
Florence Walley, Bishop of Clogher, Suffrag^a of Norwich.
John Tye, of Melford.
Rob. Gardyner, of Leyham.
Will. Cooke, alias Wright, of Sprowston.
James Norman, of Baldingham, in the psh. of St Margaret of Shipman.
Peter Blake, of Wimbitsham.
Joan Curson, of Ingoldsthorpe.
Walter Judy, of Walsingham.
John Stokyll, of Ashfield.
Will. Barker, of Thelneham St. Nicholas.
Will. Bedyll, of Burnham St. Gregory.
Thomas Morse, of Stratford.
Rich. Halewik, of Hertford, Norwic. dioc.
Thomas Sekker, of Shropham.
Robert Alwethir, parson of Redenhall and Alburgh.
John Anchier, of Sudbury.
Joan Drake, wife of Stephen Bryan, alderman of Norwich.
Commissiones administrationum . . . ab intestato decedentum.

Here follow Memoranda of about sixty commissions granted for the administration of the goods of intestate persons in the Dioc. of Norwich.

Computus magistris Rogeri Church . . . Ven. virorum Thome . . . Prioris Ecclesie Xpi. Cant.
. . . officialis, ac Mag^r Will. Potkyn . . . notarii, ejus in hac parte actorum Scribe. De omnibus . . . pecuniarum summis per eos ratione exercicii jurisdictionis episcopalis in dioc. Norwic. . . . receptis.

Under this title follow—

Recepta pro primis fructibus beneficiorum.
Pensiones debite . . . annuatim Epo. Norwic. pro beneficiis subscriptis, &c.
Sinodalia de denariis Sci. Petri per Archidiaconos . . . annuatim . . . debita.

Pro dimissionibus testamentorum.

The names entered under this last title are those of the persons whose wills are noted above.

Registrum Reverendi Patris Thome Goldstone Ecclesie Metropolitice Xpi. Cantuariensis Prioris . . . de et super probationibus testamentorum coram . . . Dno. Rogero Church . . . Prioris et capituli predictorum Commissario, sede Archiepali. Cant. per obitum bone memorie Domini Henrici Deane . . . Anno Dni. mcccclii., &c.

Copies of the following wills are then entered:—

Henry (Dean), Abp. of Canterbury.
Edward (Story), Bp. of Chichester.
George Veer, knt., buried at Earls Colne.
Will. Cosby, merchant, of Dartmouth.
Will. Gantford, of Yalding.
John Fen, of Clare, Norwic. dioc.
Thomas Tylor, jun., of Beckley.
Will. Crosse, mercer, of London.
Will. Walker, of Newland, Heref. dioc.
Rob. Wilde, parson of Wrasteling, Linc. dioc.
Will. Aishford, clerk, of Feniton St. Andrew.
Henry Newell, bailiff of the hundred of Hoo.
Elizabeth Blounte, wife of Sir Humphrey, of Kinlet.
Rich. Trafford, of Oakham.
Rich. Middelmore, esquire, of Edgbaston.
John Bedill, alias Sclett(er), of Stratford-on-Avon.
John Pykman, clerk, of Bath and Wells dioc.
Margaret Colyer, of Buckingham.
Will. Rosse, Burgess, of Calais.
Geoffrey Serman, of Sideling.
John Boidens, bookseller, of London.
John Gorney, of Wrrington.
Robert Ledge, of Kingston Seymour.
Robert Fulsham, clerk, of the Pallant in Chichester.
Elizabeth Coup(er), wife of Thomas, of Quennington.
Will. Combes, of Stoke juxta Guildford.
Rob. Russell, of Exeter.
Thomas Kysing, mercer, of London.
John Baker, of Winchester.
John Percyvall, knt., late Mayor of London.
John Frende, goldsmith, of London.
John Etton, of Frishy.
Thomas Spence, stockfishmonger, of London.
Agnes Smart, wife of John, grocer, of London.
Henry Rigewell, of Dullington, Cambs.
Elizabeth Bigod, of South Stoke, Oxon.
Thomas Bond, of Exeter and of the "City of the Groyne in Galicia."
Thomas Thwaytes, knt., mercer, of London, and Burgess of Calais.
John Gooday, of Sudbury.
Thomas Barnardiston, knt., of Barnardiston.
Katherine Vaughan, wife of John, of Bristol.
John Wheeler, of Guildford.
John Hussey, of Kingston-on-Thames.
Will. Shert, of Twinstead.
Edward Shuldham, clerk, parson of Therfield.
Rich. Cornish, gent., of London.
Philip Williamson, brewer, of St. Olave's Southwark.
Thomas Hawtryns, of Littledean.
Margaret Pyly, of Lynn.
Thomas Wagstaff, of Yarmouth, about to go on pilgrimage to St. Jamys of Gales.
John Codde, of Yalding.
John Baile, of Wermondsford, Essex.
John Coker, of Wells.
Robert Gollisbon, of Tewkesbury.
Thomas Radway, of Cirencester.
Richard Smyth, of Chipping Norton.
Alice Mydwynter, of Northleach.
Rich. Fulwood, esq., of Tamworth.
Thomas Lavell, esq., of Lincolnshire.
John Spyce, of Tetbury.
John Bayton, of Ludlow.
John Boneham, of Haselbury.
Katherine Craforth, of Oakham.
John Knoyle, master of the College of Lingfield.
Will. Braunche, gent., of Fleet.
John Dryland, gent., of London.
William Cooke, of Oundle.
Henry Keysy, potecary, of Cambridge.
John Mercroft, gent., of Tavistock.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

Elizabeth Charles, of Cambridge.
Will. Satton, priest of St. Stephen's Walbrook.
Matthew Cachemay, of Brailes.
Walter Povey, tailor, of London.
John Legh, gent., of Addington.
John Fitzherbert, Remembrancer in the Exchequer.
Will. Purches, mercer and alderman of London.
Adrian Whetehill, esq., of London.
Geoffrey Dormer, of Thame.
John Salisbury, of Barnstable.
John Hyll, senr., leather-seller, of London.
James Harrison, of St. Michael's, Oxford.
Joan Hebson, of St. Mary Magdalen, Southwark.
Thomas Boterell, draper, of London.
Edith Latymer, of Stalbridge.
Christopher Burton, of Loughborough.
Simon Jakson, of Wyberton.
Symon Ayleward, Master of Arts, of Winchester.
John Claymonde, sen., gent., of Frampton.
John Foxe, senr., of Whitham in Selwood.
John Melle, of Horsley.
Marion Dagnell.
Robert Rawlyns.
Will. Thonge, potecary, of Northampton.
Simon Gan, of West Stow.
Andrew Bridge, of Soham.
William Dyxson.
Robert Lynton, of London.
Will. Toker, of Soke, Winchester.
Nich. Hamlyn, of Farnham.
Henry Morland, Vicar of Aketon, Norwic. dioc.
Peter Playter, of Cheam.
Richard Beycham, of Hertford.
John Strode, Hove (Hovra), dioc. Chich.
John Chambyr, Canon Residentiary of Chichester.
Henry Love, of Chelmsford.
John Jakson, brewer, of London.
Will. Rufford, of Clifton-on-Teme.
Thomas Cooke, of Bristol.
Katherine Blounte, Shelsley Walsh.
Elizabeth Saxby, of Northampton.
Will. Pellett, of Steyning.
Peter Giggyswyke, of Blackmore.
Ralph Payn, of Carisbrook.
Edmund Skopam, of London.
Robert Cheyny, knt., of Salisbury.
Walter Stable, of Orpington.
Rob. Russell, priest, of Cambridge.
Will. Wood, priest, of Rampton and Yorkshire.
John Retforth, of Wedmore.
Nicholas Pakker, Wapley.
Richard Carpenter, priest, of Ramsbury.
John Uffenham, of Downron.
Alice Uffenham, of Downton.
Martin Ferrers, of St. Andrew's, Holborn.
John Turner, of Dursley.
John Gaskyn, of Chارminster.
Geoffrey Downyng, of Beauchamp St. Paul.
Thomas Clerk, of Potton.
Will. Braunche, of Fleet.
John Bevers, of "Edmeston."
Will. Nottynge, of Foster Lane, London.
Peter Pertebyn, of Sherborne.
Thomas Michell, of Cannington.
Will. Breer, of Crawley, Sussex.
Thomas Huse, of Sturminster Castell.
Rich. Rogers, of Bluntisham.
John Jenkyn, alias Pendyne, of St. Columb.
Will. Sparke, of Fakenham.
John Lygh, of Chippenham.
Will. Wade, of Tewkesbury.
Robert Capynger, of Woolpit.
Will. Smyth, of Liston.
Henry Frank, grocer, of London.
John Sweham, of Maidstone.
Will. Samford, of Bruton.
Richard Streyn, of Broadway.
John Reed, merchant of the staple, of Wrangle.
John Levyngg, of Sudbury.
Thom. Hayes, of Bury St. Edmund.
Will. Brograve, sen., draper of London, and of Beckenham.
Rich. Poplar, fishmonger, of London.
Rich. Lytton, knt., "Treasurer Remembrer" of the Exchequer.
Joan Boureman, of the Isle of Wight.
Henry Pollyng, of Tolliton.
Walter Quynon, priest, of Ipswich.
Robert Coke, of Lowestoft.
Thomas Maldon, mercer, of Sudbury.

Richard Hastings, Lord Willoughby.
John Love, of Reading.
John Elys, of Newbury.
Robert Dore, alias Sadlar, of Devizes.
Thomas Appowell, of Wells.
Hugh White, of Henley-on-Thames.
Simond Whettrett, of Tydd St. Giles.
John Clarevaux, of Dry Drayton.
John Kyrtou.
Will. Andrew, of Maidenhead.
William Pychard, of Cambridge.
Ralph Hodson, goldsmith, of London.
Richard Wolworth, of Wickwar.
William Aleyn, of Wokingham.
Robert Father, of Tewkesbury.
Oliver (King), Bp. of Bath and Wells.
Richard Hale, of Worcester.
John Bradbury, of Sleaford.
Thomas Handys, mercer, of London.
John Lee, goldsmith, of London.
John Chapman, sen., of Coggeshall.
Ragnald Bray, knt., buried at Windsor.
Agnes Wybarne, of Ticehurst.
John Durham, Burgess of Calais.
Agnes Thorp, of Cambridge.
Hugh Browne, mercer, of London.
John Wodeward, capper, of London.
Margaret Gaynesford, of Carshalton.
John Payn, draper, of Worcester.
Richard Harpham, leather-seller, of London.
Ralph Payn, of Tewkesbury.
Thomas Mugworthy, vicar of Sevenoaks.
Robert Barker, clothmaker, of Colchester.
Richard Hervy, of Meldreth.
John Thomas, vicar of All Saints, Bristol.
Roger Holbroke, of Chew.
John Bill, of Ashwell, Herts.
William Reeve, of Bulmer.
William Roberts, Hitchin.
John Lovell, of Watford.
John Netheway, of Taunton.
Richard Streyn, of Broadway.
Roger Masball, of Walton, Norwic. dioc.
Richard Londesdale, of Coventry.
Richard Hyll, of Tewkesbury.
Richard Bowyll, alias Bower, of Sherborne(?).
Robert Stokys, of Melbourne.
Anne Hudson, of Cambridge.
Robert Boiton, of Cambridge.
Will. Claryon, of Bocking.
Will. Hertwell, knt., of Preston.
Thomas Wyne, of "Wyndey."
Will. Perker, of Walsingham.
John Smyth, of Bulmer.
Richard Raynold, of Potton.
Stephen Wybourne, of St. Olave's, Southwark.
Richard Stevens, of Broadway.
Simeon Hille, of Okeford.
Agnes Baker, of Peckham, Surrey.
John Tympley, of Ipswich.
Thomas Dyngley, of Kingston-on-Thames.
Will. Balle, of Colchester.
Joan Brygges, of Salisbury.
Rich. Dawson, of Uttoxeter.
Alex. Williamson, of Winceby.
Hamond Delft, of Ourwell.
John Prynchpole, of London.
Will. Barnarde, of Chaddesley.
John Walter, of Bristol.
John Hether, of Winford, Sarum dioc.
Richard Wyche, of Castle Cary.
Walter Wyde, of Glastonbury.
Robert Welymet, of Lavenham.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

Vacacio sedis epalis. Cicestren. per obitum . .

Dni. Edwardi Story . . . a die mersis Marcii
A.D. mdcv., usque ad xxviii^m diem mensis Januarii extunc proxime sequentem.

Among the papers relating to the vacancy are the following:—

The commission of Dr. Adam Facet, the Commissary-General of the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury, the see of Canterbury being still vacant.

The notices sent to the several deaneries of the dioc. of Chich., summoning the clergy to attend Dr. Facet's visitations on certain fixed days.

Processus visitacionis. This gives shortly the names of the deaneries and religious houses visited on the 19 days occupied by the visitation.

Institutiones beneficiorum. Giving the names of the old and the new incumbents.

Procuraciones tempore visitacionis hujusmodi debite. This gives the name of each benefice, its taxed value, and the proportion paid in procurations.

Dimisiones testamentorum tempore hujusmodi vacacionis. The names of testators and the fees paid are alone given.

Beneficia appropriata mense episcopali. Cicestrensi. Denarii Sci. Petri et Synodalia.

During the vacancy the Abbot of Battle died, and the convent elected William Westfield to be his successor. The king, having approved the election, directed letters patent to the custos spiritualitatis of the diocese, directing him to institute the new abbot. This mandate of the king was obeyed, after a series of formalities somewhat extended beyond those that were usual when the see of Chichester was occupied by a bishop.

Vacacio sedis Epalis. Bathon. et Wellen. per obitum bone memorie Dni. Oliver Kyng nuper Epi. ibidem, viz., a die mensis Sep^r A.D. m^occii. usque ad xxiv. diem mensis Jan. extunc proxime sequentem.

After this title there follows a series of documents similar to those in the case of the vacant see of Chichester.

Compotus per magrm. Philippum Agard, commissarium, et Wilhelmum Potkyn registrarium factus, de omnibus pretextu vacacionis sedis epalis. Covent. et Lich. debitis.

The other papers relating to the vacancy of the see of Coventry follow this statement of accounts, and there is a list of ordinations of acolytes, sub-deacons, deacons, and priests, performed by John Bell, Bp. of Mayo (Maionensis), acting by the authority of the prior and chapter of Canterbury.

An incomplete title refers to the vacancy of the see of Llandaff. A skeleton form was written with blanks, which have not been filled in, left for names and dates.

Stitched into the end of the volume are a number of paper leaves, containing a copy of some correspondence which passed between King Henry VIII. and Abp. Warham in 1512-13, concerning the probate of wills, which under certain circumstances the Abp. claimed in all the dioceses of his province. His demands do not appear to have been unreasonable, or the powers claimed more extensive than those which were allowed up to a recent date, when all wills were proved in the Abp.'s court which dealt with property lying in several dioceses.

The bishops of London, Lincoln, Exeter, and Chester had appealed to Rome, where the suit had hung long in suspense, or, as the king, whose sympathies appear to have been with the bishops, expresses it, "the sayd ples "holde longe hange yn the corte of Rome and . . . "somewhat redonde to our dishonour." In order to bring the affair to a speedy conclusion the king proposed certain articles for the acceptance of the parties. The Abp. demurred, at the same time professing that he was as ready to obey the king "as his powerest subjecte," except in cases where obedience would be contrary to the canon law, to his oath to the Pope, or to "the ryght, "title, interesse, and long possession of my church "continued tyme oute of mynd, the whiche I was sworne "solemnly upon the Holy Evangelists to defende, keepe, "and maynteyne, at the tyme of my translation." The King's angry reply is dated Canterbury, 22 June 1513, and to this also the Abp. gave an unyielding answer. On the 16th July the King writes from Calais to the Queen, requiring her to call the Abp., with two or three of the council, in order to insist upon his immediate submission. The Abp. was called, and appeared, but he still stiffly held his ground, sending to the Queen, in writing, a copy of the answer which he had made to her, verbally, before the Council. This contumacy produced another letter from the King, dated "from ovr cite "of Torney, the xxix. day of Septembre, A.D. m^occxiiij.," wherein he complains that the Abp. has disregarded his thrice expressed command, and he adds, "we will, and, "eftsones which is the ivth tyme, estricly charge you "that ye not only conforme you to the sayd ordynance, "but also certifye us by your wryting immediately upon "the receipt of these lettres that ye wol do so, not "fayling hereof as ye wol avoide oure grevous displea- "sure." To this letter the Abp. answers that he has already expressed his determination, with the reasons upon which it is founded; he accuses the Bp. of Winchester of malice and double dealing, begging the King to let the Bishop write for himself direct to the Abp., when it is promised, rather threatened, that a sufficient and appropriate answer will be sent to him. It is implied that so long as the letters pass through the hands of the King a ceremonious civility is exacted by custom, but that a letter sent by the Abp. direct to the Bishop would be remarkable rather for force than suavity. The correspondence does not carry the business any further, but as we know that the Abp.'s authority in the matter in question was not retrenched, it may be presumed that there was no more said on either side.

Reg. G. The register G. is a volume of 300 vellum folios each 12 by 9 inches. The pages are very closely written, and, as the title, "Sede Vacante," indicates, entirely taken up with one subject, the transactions, namely, of the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury during several vacancies of the Archbishopric See. The first vacancy here recorded is that which began with the death of Abp. Stratford in A.D. 1345, the last that which ended at the election of Abp. Chichele in 1413.

Prefixed to the register proper are 24 leaves of parchment bearing a title written by a comparatively modern hand:

Tractatus de privilegiis et prerogativis Archiepiscopatus Cantuariensis.

Also, in a hand of the 14th cent., contemporary with the text of the treatise, another:

Extracta diversorum Registorum Dominorum Cantuar. Eccle. Archiepiscoporum super iuribus et consuetudinibus Eccle. Cantuar.

These titles sufficiently explain that every right which the Archbishop of Canterbury, and in the vacancy of the see, the Prior and Chapter, could claim, are here set down in the briefest possible form, with, in many cases, references to the places where evidence on the subject may be found. This compilation appears to have been made soon after the death of Abp. Winchelsey for the information of the Chapter, upon whom, during the vacancy of the see, most of the Archbishopric privileges here enumerated devolved. An examination of the many sections into which this tract is divided shows that there is no privilege therein claimed which has not already been noticed in the cartularies among the Chartes and Compositions; but the brief statements and the abundant marginal sub-titles render the treatise very convenient for reference; a large collection of precedents also adds to its utility.

The "Sede Vacante" Register begins with the title:

Registrum . . . per Nich. de Ystete confectum de tempore vacacionis Archiepatus. Cant. post obitum Johis. de Stretford, qui moriebatur die Sabbati in vigilia Sci. Barthi. Apli. A.D. m^occclviii. &c.

The usual commissions to commissaries, &c. follow the title.

Copies of all documents received by or issuing from the officials of the chapter are entered in the register at their full length. Some of the subjects of these are here noticed, selected to show what great matters as well as what little ones served to set in motion the machinery of ecclesiastical law.

Excommunications of the rector of Buckland, and the vicars of Guston and St. Margaret at Cliff, all near Dover, who having been summoned to profess canonical obedience to the Prior and Chapter failed to appear, and so incurred ecclesiastical censures. Citations and sentences relating to this subject occur frequently.

A new abbot of Langdon (Dover) was summoned to receive benediction at the hands of the Prior and Chapter. The Bishop of Llandaff was deputed to consecrate churches and altars.

The rural dean of Dover and some of his clergy were deputed to receive, from the King's officers, any clerks who, having been convicted of felony, pleaded their clergy, and thus became the prisoners of their Ordinary.

The prior, sub-prior, precentor, sacrist, and cellarer of Dover were excommunicated for the offence of refusing to profess obedience to Christ Church, represented by the Prior and Chapter.

The vicar of Sittingbourne was warned that he must reside on his benefice.

"Decretum electionis Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi."

"Recomendacio domini Pape pro electo."

"Card" (inali).

These three documents relate the (ineffectual) first election of Thomas Bredwardin; the last being a recommendation of the elect to some unnamed cardinal at the Curia. It has no title, but "Card." is written in the margin.

The Dover monks continuing obstinate, further proceedings were taken against them, and a "prohibicio regia" obtained to restrain them.

"Instituciones beneficiorum."

Among these it appears that to Simon Islip, within a year to be Abp., the benefice of Pagham was commended "juxta tenorem constitutionis Bonifaciane."

"Publicatio Bullarum de et super provisione Archiepiscopatus Cant." This is a copy of the bull by which Clement VI., superseding the election of Bredwardine, provided John Ufford, dean of Lincoln.

Bishop Beek of Lincoln having died, the official of the chapter sued his executors for the customary heriot.

John Raper, a canon of Bilsington, whom Abp. Stratford had consecrated prior of Cumbwell, was deposed, readmitted to Bilsington, and, by way of penance, placed last in choir and cloister, all by the authority of the chapter of Cant., and in consequence of his excesses.

A commission to the Bishop of Llandaff, empowering him, as deputy for the Chapter of Cant., to grant probate of the will of Laurence de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, who possessed land in several dioceses, and the probate of whose will, therefore, pertained to the prerogative of the Archbishop, or his vice-gerent.

A monition addressed to Elizabeth Kirkby, Lady of Horton, warning her to break off her adulterous connexion with Robert Lad, of Eynesford. In the margin the rubricator has drawn a comical figure in vermilion of the culprit in an exaggerated penitent attitude. On the next page is the lady's absolution.

The Bishop of London, one of the exors. of Abp. Stratford, renouncing, the Prior and Chapter absolve him from all responsibility in regard to the will; thus leaving the Bishop of Chichester the sole executor.

A coadjutor was imposed upon the Vicar of Lenham, "qui contractus et perpetuo impedimento detentus . . . inutilis redditur."

By virtue of his prerogative power, the Prior grants letters of administration of the goods of an intestate rector of Boughton Aluph. This was at the time considered an important precedent, and is marked with a special Nota Bene.

The prior and chapter deputed their commissary to make a visitation of the parochial and collegiate church of Maidstone. When the officers arrived on the spot they found the doors locked and a jeering crowd assembled in the churchyard, who "nostris clericis, ibidem 'existentibus, graves minas, et cruciatu corporum, 'furibunda rabie, intulerunt."

John Chetwynde, a clerk imprisoned in Maidstone gaol, "in foro seculari convictus" of a robbery, was handed over to the prior "proud ad forum Ecclesie" "pertinuit." The sufferers by the theft were two Italians who lost "centum forenos vocatos Egles."

Another clerk, one William Cok, convicted of the same robbery, petitions the Chapter to allow him to purge himself; whereupon the commissary is directed to give him a day, and to announce to all who intend to oppose the purgation that they must appear on the day; and if there be no opposition that the clerk will be liberated.

The vicar of Sittingbourne, not heeding the former monition, has not returned into residence, and is therefore sentenced to deprivation.

John Petyt of Bridge, by thirty-six compurgators, clears himself from a charge of incest; but he is convicted of adultery, and sentenced to the penance of walking before the procession in Ch. Ch. for three Sundays, carrying a taper of four pounds; the taper at the completion of the penance to be offered to St. Thomas.

Collations and institutions to benefices in the dioc. of Canterbury here follow in great numbers. At the time, the great pestilence known as the "Black Death" was raging, and vacancies occurred in a large proportion of the benefices in the diocese.

A master was appointed to Eastbridge Hospital, and Margaret Terry was placed, as a provisior, in the office of prioress of the nunnery of St. Sepulchre, Cant.

After these comes the title:

Non plus de tempore vacationis Archiepiscopatus Cant. quia die Sab. xvij. die mens. Julii, A.D. mcccxlx. proclamatum fuit super provisione Magri. Joh. de Oford facta de Archiepapatu.

The Bull of provision of Clement VI. follows, with the formal record of the election by the Convent, which ratified the Pope's Bull.

Permission was given to the Abbot of St. Augustine's Abbey to unite the parishes of St. Mary de Castro and St. John le Poor, in the city of Cant.

"Cesarius, Episcopus Ecclesie S. Marie de Rosis," was commissioned by the Prior to confer Holy Orders, and shortly after to consecrate an addition to the churchyard of St. Clement's, Sandwich, the great plague having filled the old cemetery.

The Prior of St. Gregory's in Cant. having died, and the cautions having chosen a successor, he was confirmed, inducted, and installed by the chapter of Ch. Ch.

Another master was appointed to Eastbridge Hospital. Margaret Terry, whom the chapter of Ch. Ch. had provided for the office of prioress of St. Sepulchre's nunnery, was found to be a secular person not bound by the vows of a Benedictine nun; she was therefore displaced, admitted to make her profession, and immediately reinstated in the office.

A memorandum, written in large letters and underlined with red, draws attention to the rapid succession of Archbishops at this time.

"Computatis mensibus et diebus anni unius; in uno et eodem anno plus duobus diebus tres vacationes Ecclesie Cantuar. fuerunt; prima videlicet vacacio die Sabbati in vigilia Sci. Bartholomei anno Domini mcccxlviij. per obitum Johannis de Stretford dudum Cantuar. Arepi.; secunda vero vacacio die Mercurii in vigilia Ascensionis Domini, videlicet vicesima die mensis Maii, A.D. mcccxlx., per mortem Johannis de Oford nuper Cantuar. Electi; tertia nempe vacacio die Mercurii, videlicet, vicesima sexta die mensis Augusti, A.D. mcccxlx. predicto, per obitum Thome Bredwardyn, ultimi Cantuar. Archiepi.; et de ista tertia vacatione sequitur hoc Registrum Dominorum Prioris et Capituli Cantuar., sede vacante."

During this vacancy, as was usual, the prior and chapter took every opportunity of exercising the spiritual authority which devolved upon them by the death of the Archbishop, carefully recording in their register each act which could be employed as a precedent for future use. Some of these acts, which were outside the common routine of commissions, collations, and institutions, are noticed below.

The chapter commended the church of Cranbrook to W. Richman, stipulating, in compliance with the Bonifacian constitution, that he should provide a competent stipend for a vicar.

"Mem. quod sexto die mensis Augusti, A.D. mcccxlx. obijt Wulstanus (de Brondesford) Wygorniensis Episcopus apud Hertelbury, sede Cant. tunc plena de Thoma Bredwardyn Cant. Arepo., qui moribatur xxvij^{to} die Augusti anno predicto. Et postea xi^{to} die Sept. A^o predicto, super executione jurisdictionis et potestatis episcopalis, emanavit commissio sub hac forma."

Hereupon follow commissions to the prior and sub-prior of Worcester, empowering them to exercise episcopal authority in their diocese as delegates of the prior and chapter of Canterbury.

The church of Ulcomb, Kent, was commended to Stephen Lucas, priest.

Under the date 26th Sept. 1349 there is a memorandum of a transaction which was plainly considered by the convent to be one of great significance.

"Mem. Quod xxvi. die mensis Sept. . . . Dns. Robertus Dei gratia Prior Ecclesie Xpi. Cant., in capella manerii sui de Chertham, Cant. dioc., habita primitus deliberacione de persona ydonea preficienda in Priorem ibidem (sc. Bilsington, already mentioned in some documents on the same page), juxta potestatem superscriptam prohibet eidem ecclesie in hunc modum, &c." The Augustinian canons of Bilsington had disagreed about the election of a new prior, upon which the prior of Canterbury (possibly not without collusion with some of the Bilsington canons) provided them with a superior in a rather high-handed style. This memorandum is written in large letters underscored with red in a most emphatic manner, thus showing how important the precedent was in the eyes of the chapter of Ch. Ch.

All through the autumn of 1349 many benefices fell vacant, the Black Death still continuing its ravages, although with a less degree of virulence.

On 10th Sept. the monks of Worcester elected John de Eresham (Thursby) to be their new bishop, and the chapter of Canterbury confirmed him.

The Consistory Court of the Abp. being suspended, sede vacante, the official of the chapter held a court having similar jurisdiction, registering the records of suits in this volume. These fill a large space, but are of too trifling a character, in most cases, to require a notice here. Except for the change of title of the presiding judge, the proceedings, whether undertaken "ex officio" or "ad instantiam partium," were in all respects similar to those of the Abp.'s consistory.

In Sept. 1349 the Bp. of Rochester was requested to confer Holy Orders, and to profess monks in Ch. Ch.

The churches of St. Mary Gredin and St. Edmund de Redyngate, both in Canterbury, and both appropriated to the nunnery of St. Sepulchre, were, by permission of the chapter of Ch. Ch., sede vacante, united, "ob exilitatem fructuum beneficiorum."

On the 9th Sept. 1349 the convent proceeded to the election of an archbishop, and unanimously chose Simon Islip, canon of Lincoln, proceeding by way of compromise, that is, by entrusting the election to a committee of thirteen selected monks, whose choice was accepted by the rest of the convent. On the seventh of October Clement VI. appointed the same Simon Islip to the archbishopric, disregarding the election of the convent, the Bull of Provision being here copied. In each case where the Register records the "process of election" of an abp., the names of all the monks in the convent, and their titles if they bore office, are given in the order of seniority.

By a mistake of the binder the register goes back after this date to the year 1348, and again treats of the vacancy caused by the death of Abp. Stratford, and to the election which ended in the first choice of Thomas Bredwardyn, "canonicum London, et virum eximium et famosum." The processus electionis in this case is unusually full of minute details about the election of the compromissarii and their powers, indicating that the method of appointing a committee to act for the whole convent was not well understood.

After the election three letters were dispatched to the Curia by the hands of Jacobus de Oxene, a monk of Ch. Ch. One letter was addressed to the Pope and the other two to the Cardinal Bishop of Palestrina and the Cardinal "Quatuor (sanctorum) coronatorum" respectively.

With the title, "Littere concernentes jurisdictionem nostram tempore prescripte vacationis, &c.," all the commissions usual upon such occasions are copied, beginning with one appointing John Leech as temporary official of the see, to conduct the jurisdiction until the permanent official could be selected by the Bp. of London, in accordance with an ancient composition made between the sees of Canterbury and London.

At the end of September 1348 the mortality arising from the "Black Death" reached an alarming extent, and the Prior addressed a mandate to the Bishop of London, requiring him to communicate it to the other Bishops of the province. The copy here given has the title:—

Mandatum missum Epo. London. ut ceteris Coepiscopis Suffraganeis ipse idem publicet, et tam ipse quam illi processiones faciant pro mortalitate.

A license was granted to Laurence Fastolf, Rector of Cliff, allowing him to have an altar "infra mansum Rectorie de Clyve;" and the Bishop of Llandaff was deputed to consecrate this altar, dedicating it to St. Laurence. This Laurence Fastolf, with Richard Vachan Archdeacon of Surrey as his colleague, was appointed "auditor causarum" for the Chapter of Ch. Ch., sede vacante. A license for an oratory was also granted to Robert de Grofhurst of Apedale in Goudhurst. There is a place, in Horsmonden parish, adjoining to Goudhurst, named Grovehurst, and in Horsmonden Church is the brass of — de Grofhurst.

Among the documents relating to Abp. Bredwardyn's election are the "littera pro licencia eligendi," sent by the Chapter to the King; and the congé d'être sent in reply by the King to the Chapter.

The register then passes to the vacancy following the death of Abp. Islip in 1366. The usual commissions, filling several pages, are followed by the letter to the King asking license to elect, and this by one addressed to William (Edyndon) Bp. of Winchester, announcing that the convent has chosen him to be their Archbishop.

In May a curious letter was written by the Chapter of Cant. to their official, requiring him to show favour to the "Questors" of the Hospital of St. Anthony (dioc. of Vienna). It is stated that people had given pigs and other gifts to the Questors, and that others had unlawfully taken them away.

The official of the convent having granted probate of the wills of Thomas Bradewell, rector of Shoreham, and of Matilda de Veer, Countess of Oxford, the Wills themselves are here copied at length.

The See of Bangor becoming vacant, by the death of Bp. Ryngested, the Chapter appoint Elias de Rondon to be their commissary in that diocese.

To keep their rights alive, the Chapter of Ch. Ch. send notice to the Prior and Chapter of the Augustinian Canons of St. Gregory in Canterbury, that it is proposed to make a visitation of their house. Four monks of Ch. Ch. are deputed to make the visitation, but they are refused admission, and the Prior of St. Gregory's is pronounced excommunicate. Alarmed by the sentence the Prior yields, is absolved, and visited.

Having a page to itself is a short chronicle of the career of Abp. Langham, who succeeded Abp. Islip in the sec. It relates that he was first Abbot of Westminster, then Bp. of Ely, and lastly, having been nominated by Urban V. to the see of Canterbury, the convent there not having been consulted, he was translated from Ely, and enthroned in Canterbury by Prior Robert Hathbrand. At the feast, following the enthronization, held in the Palace Hall, Bartholomew de Burgherssch acted as deputy for the Earl of Gloucester, who, as tenant of the manor of Trimbridge, was bound to set the first dish upon the table.

Bp. Edyndon dying, having on his deathbed declined the Archbishopric of Canterbury, the see of Winchester fell vacant, and a commissary was appointed to exercise the jurisdiction belonging to the Chapter of Cant. in that diocese.

By the binder's carelessness the process of election of Abp. Edyndon follows the papers relating to transactions which took place after his death.

No record of the election of Abp. Simon Langham in 1366, has occurred in this volume, but in 1368 comes the title:

Registrum Cantuar., sede ibidem vacante per creacionem Dni. Simonis de Langham ultimi Cantuar. Archiepi. in Cardinale sedis Apostolice assumpti: quem Dns. Papa xxii^{mo} die mensis Septemb. creavit: et die xxvii. mensis Novemb. A.D. mcccxlvi. idem Dns. Archiepus spiritualitatem et omnimodam jurisdictionem ecclesiasticam eidem Priori et Capitulo tradidit seu liberavit.

The Will of Alesia widow of Richard Rokesele of Charing, here copied, was proved before the "Auditores Causarum" of the Convent of Ch. Ch.

In January 1368 the prior issued a mandate requiring the clergy of his diocese to offer prayers for the repose of the soul of Lionel late Duke of Clarence. This was done in consequence of letters sent by Edward III., having the following form: "Edward par la grace de Dieu . . . au gardien del espiritueltes del Erceveschie de Cantebirs, la see vacante, salut; come nostre trescher filz Leonell nadgaires due de Clarence soit ja trepassez de cest siecle, a la volente nostre seigneur, a ceo qe nous avons receu vraie nouvelle des parties de Lumbardie par on il morust; vous priens cherelement on chargeant, qe vous faces solemnement celebrer les exquies mesme nostre filz, si bien en loglie metropolitike de Cantebirs, come en toutes autres eglises collegiales et conventuelles, &c."

A note of the probate of the Will of Juliana (de Leybourne) Countess of Huntingdon occurs under the date 1368, but no copy of the will is made.

During this vacancy of the see only four clerks were inducted, a great contrast with the vacancies twenty years before, when, in consequence of the great pestilence, more than ten times as many livings became vacant.

The vacancy of the see came to an end on Jan. 16th, 1368, when a Bull of Urban V. was read in the Chapter House, appointing William de Whytelesye, Bishop of Worcester, to the see of Canterbury. This archbishop died in June 1374, and the prior and chapter again became custodes spiritualitatis archiepiscopatus. Within a month the king's license to elect a new Abp. was asked for and received; upon which the convent rashly re-elected Simon Langham, Bishop of Palestrina, who happened to be in England, acting as Papal Nuntius, at the time. The King had already compelled Langham to resign his archbishopric on the occasion of his promotion to the cardinalate, and as was to be expected he resented this postulation of the same person by the monks of Ch. Ch. The intelligence of this re-election was sent to the King, the Pope, and to the Abp. elect himself.

A commission was issued to the Bishop of Cloyne (Chuanensis), empowering him to reconcile the chapel of Stanford in Lyminge, polluted by the shedding of blood.

In 1374, the Questors of St. Mary of Bethlehem extra Bischoffsgate, and of the monastery "de Alto Passu," visited Canterbury, and received letters of recommendation from the chapter.

In the same year the Bishops of Pampeluna and Sinigaglia, Papal nuntii, having endeavoured at Bruges to promote the peace of Christendom, came to England and demanded a large sum from the clergy as payment for their services. This demand caused considerable correspondence between the chapter and the suffragan bishops; copies of the letters being entered in the register.

A similar demand made by the Abp. of Ravenna produced a similar effect.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

Gwyllerin, Archd. of Cant., and Rector of Teyntam and Lympne, died in 1374, having sold lead, glass, and books from his churches and rectory houses, and allowed the fabric of the churches and the walls of the churchyards to go to ruin. His successor applied for an inquisition to assess the dilapidations; which was granted by the chapter. This Gwyllerin is called by Dart William de Indidis.

On 26th May 1375, a bull of Gregory XI. was read in the Chapter House, appointing Simon de Sudbury, Bp. of London, to the see of Canterbury.

In March 1374 it was reported to the Prior that the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Cant., had been polluted by the shedding of blood therein; he therefore ordered an inquisition to be made, and, in accordance with the information thus obtained, he declared, "dictam ecclesiam occasione premissorum minime fuisse aut esse pollutam, set a casu fortuito, absque violentia quacunque sanguinem effusum in eadem nullatenus fuisse." The Will of James Andreu, citizen and clothworker of London, is here copied.

The ancient Grammar School of Canterbury is mentioned in an appointment of John Borton, clerk, to the office of head master. It is expressly stated that the office (magisterium) is "ad nostram spectans collationem."

The prior sends a petition to the Bp. of Rochester, asking him to consecrate chrism for the use of the diocese of Canterbury.

A petition addressed by the prior to the King, entitled "Intimacio Regi pre excommunicato capiendū," asks the intervention of the secular arm in the case of an excommunicated person who has remained impenitent for forty days.

The re-election of Simon Langham to the Archbishopric is again related at very great length; and many instruments connected with the claims for payment of the Bishops of Pampeluna and Sinigaglia are, owing to the binder's mistake, inserted in this part of the Register.

A composition was made between the Abbot of Lesnes and the Prior of Ledes, in the matter of the churches of Newington and Stockbury. This was the settlement, by the arbitration of the late Abp. Islip, of a dispute as to which of the two parishes had a right to the tithes of certain debateable lands lying on the boundaries of each.

A copy of the will of Abp. Wittelsey occupies only a few lines. He leaves all his estate, real and personal, to be administered at the discretion of his executors; bequeathing no special legacies, except a vestment "capelle mee de Wittelsey," and all his books of Theology and Law to St. Peter's College, Cambridge.

Another copy of the collation of Master John Borton to the Head Mastership of the Canterbury Grammar School is here given, with this emphatic form of institution appended: "et te per ferule et virge tradicōnem investimus in eisdem."

In 1380 Abp. Islip's College in Oxford was in difficulties, and the Prior and Chapter of Ch. Ch. gave permission to the warden to raise a loan, pledging the credit of the college as security.

In 1375 a general chapter of the Black Monks in England was assembled at Northampton, the Prior of Canterbury being summoned to attend; this summons it is known, although this Register does not mention the matter, he utterly refused to obey, considering himself to be the head and president of all the English Benedictines. Irritated by the prior's contemptuous reply to their summons, the Benedictine Chapter appointed the Abbot of Battle to make in their name an official visitation of the Priory and Church of Canterbury. Appealing to the Abp. Sudbury, the Prior of Ch. Ch. procured from him a letter, written in the Chapter House of Ch. Ch., utterly forbidding him, as the head of the mother church and monastery of all England, to obey any summons from anyone, or to submit to the visitation of anyone but himself and his successors. Backed by this authority, the prior successfully stood his ground against the chapter of his order. The story is told here at length under the triumphant title:

Notetur inprascripta littera patefaciens quomodo abbas de Bello, ad tunc Visitator per Capitulum generale deputatus, presumebat visitare ecclesiam istam Cantuar., sed passus est repulsum, prout patet inferior.

The kings of England had acquired a habit, rather than a right, of nominating three of their followers to corrodies in the monastery of Ch. Ch. The holders of these corrodies obtained, day by day, food from the kitchen, drink from the cellar, and clothing from the chamberlain's department of the convent. This right, which was most burdensome to the monks, was nominally, but not really, surrendered by Edward III., who nevertheless on the 5th Dec. 1375 appointed John Kent to succeed to the vacancy caused by the death of Nicholas Wayte, on whom this "liberacionem" had been bestowed for life.

In the reign of Richard II. the king renounced this privilege, and the convent in return undertook to perform certain religious services on behalf of him and his first Queen.

Simon Langham, having been elected for a second time to the see of Canterbury, and peremptorily rejected by the King, was, or seemed to be, offended with the monks for presuming to elect him. To assuage his anger a letter was written to him by the chapter so elegant, in style not in matter, that it elicited from a reader in the next century the marginal expression of admiration, "Nota litteram bene conceptam sed incorrectam." It reads thus:—

"Amantissime Pater et Domine dilectissime, voce lamentabili, admodum clamantis Susanne, vociferare cogimur dum consolacionis litteras expectantes epistolas recepimus meroris. . . . Nec tepescat erga nos, pater dulcis, favor pristina caritatis, sed iram indignacionis vestre, si libeat, avertentes, quam Altissimum rogatimus ut avertat. Ita ut in vobis sicut in lapide angulari, more solito, figamus anchoram spei nostre, magnificaque mediacione vestra amabilius cooperante, navicula Christi et navigantes in ea quiescant in pace, ipsorumque negocia promovenda ardentius ad vota. Ad universis ecclesie regimen et munimen dirigit paternitatem vestram Trinitas Sancta. Dat. Cantuar. &c."

The chapter here seems to hint that, although the cardinal had missed the archbishopric, something better might yet be in store for him. It is remarkable that in the address of this letter the chapter ventured to describe their correspondent as "Cardinalis Cantuariensis."

A similar letter, which the critic of the 15th cent. also found to be "bona sed incorrecta," follows the first. The two are so much alike that it is probable they were alternative forms, drawn up so that one or other might be approved and dispatched.

When Cardinal Langham died in 1379 he bequeathed a vestment to Ch. Ch. In the acquittance given to his executors on the receipt of this legacy the testator is described as: "Dns. Simo Episcopus Penestrensis (sic) Cardinalis, Cardinalis," vulgariter nuncupatus, "Ecclesie sue Cantuariensis."

In some of the cathedral registers of the 16th cent. "letters of confraternity" occur on every page. The most ancient example is found in the present volume, and bears date 1379. By it Rob. de Stratton is admitted to full society with the chapter.

The title, "Procuratorium in negocio subieccionis" "pretense Capituli generalis nigrorum (monachorum)" "in Anglia," shows the ill will which the chapter of Canterbury bore to the claims of the chapter of the order.

Acquietancia facta Duo. Regi Ricardo Secundo de cxxxv. lib. xl. sol. et j. d.

King Edward III., Philippa his Queen, and the Black Prince had incurred a debt of £261. 8. 10. to Ch. Ch. for money laid out on their behalf. The above named sum was delivered in part payment by John Bacon, clerk, at Midsummer, A.D. 1380.

Brother Will. Bragg of Ch. Ch. being about to visit foreign parts, is furnished with a letter of recommendation, written in a bombastic style which must have taxed the powers of the scribe, and would probably greatly influence Bragg's welcome when he arrived "ad partes transmarinas."

The prior and chapter acknowledge the receipt, from the executors of Robert Rede, late Bp. of Chichester, of a professional cope, the customary fee due from a Suffragan Bishop at the time of his profession of canonical obedience.

The title which heads the documents relating to the vacancy following the murder of Abp. Sudbury, in A.D. 1381, contains an allusion to the crime.

Registrum . . . sede ibidem vacante per obitum bone memorie Simonis de Sudbury nuper Cantuar. Archiepi., qui moriebatur et decollatus fuit apud montem turris extra muros civitatis London per communes comitatuum Kancie, Essexie Midelexie, et Surrey tunc surgentes, die Veneris, videlicet xiiij die mensis Junii, A.D. mcccxxxij, &c.

On the last day of July 1381 the chapter sent letters to the King announcing that they had chosen (postu lavinus—the usual formula) William (Courtenay) to be their Abp.; also others to the bishop to ask him to accept the dignity which they had conferred.

On 16th July in the same year the prior, as eustos spiritualitatis archiepiscopatus, received a summons to a parliament to be held at Westminster on the Monday after Sept. 14.

In the autumn the proctors of the hospital of St. Mary of Hastings received letters of recommendation to the archdeacon and the other clergy of the diocese.

On the 7th August letters were sent to the Pope, asking for his assistance in promoting the election to the archbishopric of William Courtenay, whose process of election is here recorded at length.

In the same year the chapter issued letters to the Dean and Chapter of Coventry, announcing that:—
“Ex rei evidenciam est deductum in publicum notionem quod venerabilis in Xpo. pater Dns. Robertus, Dei gratia Covent. et Lich. episcopus, de nostro ecclesie suffraganeus, a diu fuit et est corporis oculis orbatus ex toto, ac corporis ceteram debilitate et senio contractus . . . igitur . . . vos monemus quatinus emendem ven. patrem episcopum vestrum, infra decem dierum spacium debito et solite requiratis nt, iuxta formam constitutionis Dni. Bonifacii Pape VIIIⁱ, sibi coadjutorem vel coadjutores assumat.”

Joined to the certificate of probate of the will of Abp. Sudbury is an abstract of the will itself.

In October 1381 three proctors were appointed by the chapter to represent them in a parliament to be held at Westminster on the morrow of All Saints.

In the same month a bull of Urban VI. was received authorising the translation of William Courtenay from the see of London to that of Canterbury.

The formalities observed on the exchange of the benefices of Tunstall and Eussynden (Linc. dioc.) were so complete and satisfactory, that an official of the next cent^y drew attention to the formulæ employed, by the marginal note:—“Processus permutacionis qui valde est formalis et notabilis.”

Vacancies having occurred in the offices of the convent, the prior sent up to the Abp. the names of three brethren from whom one might be chosen for the office of butler, and three other candidates for the office of cellarer. On this occasion the Abp. waived his right of appointment, and permitted the prior to choose for himself. Below the letter in which this is expressed, there is a copy of one written by Abp. Wittelsey in 1369, by which the prior is empowered to elect and deprive monastic officers without any reference to the Abp.

On the death of Abp. Courtenay a fresh register was begun by the chapter, in the title it is said of the Abp.:—

Vacacio Sedis Archiepiscopatus Cantuar. post obitum pie memorie Dni. Willelmi Courtenay, filii comitis Devonie, qui, ultimo die mensis Julii, A.D. mccc nonagesimo sexto, in manerio de Maydenston diem clausit extremum, et, de precepto Dni. Regis tunc Cantuarie versus mare existentis, sepultus fuit in Ecclesia Cant., &c.

The congé d'élire authorising the chapter to elect a successor to William Courtenay was dated from the Chapter House of Canterbury on 3^d August following, and the chapter at once proceeded to choose Thomas Arundel, Abp. of York, sending a formal notice of the election to Boniface IX. and to the King.

Commissio capitali directa Dno. Thome Arundell (Ebor. Archiep.) Cantuar. Electo ad coronandum Isabellam Reginam Anglie auctoritate capitali Cantuar. eo quod Bulle ejusdem Dni. eo tempore non fuerunt presentate. A.D. mcccxcvi.

There being no legally qualified Abp. of Cant., the Abp. elect is by this commission deputed by the chapter to crown the second wife of Richard II.

The will of John Bolde, of Adisham, is copied and proved:—Also those of John Culpiper, of East Farleigh; Agnes Gardiner, of Romney; John Spenser, Rector of St. Elphage, Canterbury; of William Wyllington, of Bishopsbourne; of Joan Hoo, alias Goodheve, of Canterbury; of Abp. Courtenay; of Ralph Sayneger, of Uleomb; of William Uncle, of Woodchurch in Thanet; of Robert Hapissford, of Barham; of William of St. Nicholas in Thanet; of John Miller, of Egerton; of Robert atte Broke, Rector of Mongeham; of Roger of Manstone in Thanet; of Thomas Wigtoft, Rector of Calstock, Cornwall; of John Stalgate, of St. Lawrence in Thanet; of John Beggebury, of Cranbrook; of Robert Herlyng, clerk, of St. Peter's, Sandwich; of William Hamon, of Broomfield; of Margery Mendham, of Canterbury; and of John Septvans, of Ash, Kent.

The title of the Register in which the Acta Capitali, “sede vacante per obitum Dni. Thome Arundell, filii “Comitis Arundell,” states that he died at the house of the Archdeacon of Canterbury, in Hackington.

By letters dimissory leave was given to John Oxney, a monk of Ch. Ch., to seek ordination at the hands of any bishop he might choose.

On 27 March 1413 (error for 1414?) notice was sent to the master of Balliol College informing him of the intention of the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury to make a visitation of his college. This rather daring act was apparently undertaken with the master's connivance. The notice reads thus:—

“Johannes, &c., sede ibidem vacante, dilecto nobis in Xpo. Magistro Thome Chace, Magistro Aule sive Collegii de Balliolo Oxon., salutem in Dno. Quia, ad instantem vestram et dicti Collegii consociorum requisicionem, ob nonnullorum gravium criminum et defectuum, insolenciarum, et excessuum, nobis expositorum, reformationem, correctionem, et punicionem, in eadem Collegio jam de novo commissorum, Vos et dictum Collegium vestrum, tam in capite quam in membris, annuente Altissimo, intendimus visitare, tenore presencium, preemptorie vos citamus, et per vos, omnes et singulos socios ejusdem Collegii ac alios quoscunque, qui hujusmodi visitacioni nostre de jure vel consuetudine interesse debeant, citari volumus; et mandamus quod compareatis, et quilibet eorum compareat, coram nobis aut nostris in hac parte commissariis . . . in Capella infra Collegium vestrum predictum situata, xvi. die mensis Aprilis . . . Dat. Cant. sub sigillo nostro, quo in presenti vacacione ad causas et negocia utimur, xxiii. die mensis Martii, A.D. mccccxliiii.”

The commission authorising the deputies of the chapter to make the visitation states distinctly that it was undertaken at the request of the master and fellows, and therefore it was not an act of official self-assertion on the part of the chapter. The commission is in these words:—

“Johannes, &c., venerabilibus viris Abbati de Osney, Linc. dioc., ac Magro. Philippo Morgan utriusque juris Doctori, salutem in Dno. Ex parte dilectorum nobis in Xpo. Magri. Thome Chace, Magistri Aule sive Collegii de Balliolo, extra muros Oxon., ac ejusdem Collegii Consociorum, uuper fuimus ac sumus sepius et instanter requisiti, quatinus ob reformationem, correctionem, et punicionem nonnullorum criminum et defectuum insolenciarum et excessuum, per consocios dicti Collegii et alios jam de novo commissorum et pullulancium, que, si tolerarentur, in destructionem dicti Collegii finalem verisimiliter renarent ut formidatur, vellemus eidem Collegio nostre visitacionis officio suffragari. Nos igitur, volentes prout ex debito tenemus quieti dicti Collegii et in eo studencium salubrius providere, ad visitandum auctoritate nostra dictum Collegium, tam in capite, &c., vobis committimus, &c.”

No other documents relating to the visitation are found in this place.

A copy of Abp. Arundel's will occupies two pages, and is followed by the will of Thomas Burye of Lambroherst, written in French.

The King's license to elect an Abp. was dated 25 Feb. 1414, and on the 2nd March the convent chose Henry Chichele, Bp. of St. David's, to be their pastor. The congé d'élire of Henry IV. follows the usual formula. It gives the monks permission to choose (eligere) an Abp., and, while nominating no one, stipulates that he must be a person “Deo devotus, ecclesie vestre necessarius, nobisque et regno nostro utilis.” In a short time after the date of this election the formula was changed. In the decretum electionis the chapter still describe their act as a “postulatio,” not as an election.

By the death of Bp. Bourghull, the see of Coventry and Lichfield was unoccupied during the vacancy of the see of Cant. The chapter nominated two canons of Lichfield to be their commissaries in that diocese, but no records of their acts are here preserved.

The Register G. ends with a copy of the will of Bp. Bourghull in a greatly defaced condition.

Reg. H. Register H. is a small vellum folio compounded of ten distinct libelli, all different in subject, date, and even size. These are so carelessly arranged that the whole of the folios relating to the same subject are not always to be found placed together, one or more gatherings of a different date being interposed. The folios of the volume, as may well be imagined, are not consecutively numbered.

The ten parts which go to make up the book may be thus shortly described.

1. Twenty-four folios, of early 13th cent. date, occupied by a rental giving details of rents issuing from tenements in Canterbury, from outlying manors, and from detached estates in Exeter, Lincoln, &c., also of pensions and synodals due from various churches.

2. The ordinary conventual register containing the records of monastic business from A.D. 1355 to 1373.

3. A revised rental compiled in 1420.

4. Copies, beautifully executed, of three compositions made by the Chapter of Ch. Ch. with that of St. Augustine's Abbey.

5. "Extenciones maneriorum:" a short statement of the rents and services payable from the several manors of the church. This is written in a most graceful current hand of about A.D. 1230; the titles are rubricated, and the paragraphs and marginal notes emphasised by coloured paragraph-indicators.

6. A well written copy of the composition made between the Convent of Ch. Ch. and Abp. Boniface in 1259. The original indenture of the deed exists among the Chartæ Antiquæ, and several other copies occur in various Registers.

7. "Redditus assisi maneriorum:" this is a continuation of 5.

8. "Assise scaecarii." The balance-sheets of the monastic officers prepared for the annual audit.

9. Twelve pages of a Canterbury rental of the early 13th cent.

10. Copies of about eighty title-deeds relating to gifts to the church up to about A.D. 1290. Duplicates of these occur more than once in the Cartularies already noticed in this report.

The first section is written in four columns: the parish or manor; the name of the tenant; the amount of rent; short description of the tenement, just enough to enable the collector to identify it. The tenants' names show a mixture of French and English, as a few copied in the order in which they stand will show.

"Alfwinnus corvesier, Radulf de Warewic, Henricus Cod, Gunnilda relicta Cluth, Tomas capellanus, olim Cristina mater Thome, Hen. fil. Elfbriet, Henr. et Sim. filii Aelfwini, Frumbaldus fil. Hachenild, Reginaldus de Cornhelle."

The descriptions have this form:

"De terra Odonis satoris que est juxta terram Willi. de Cherteham.

"De terra quadam extra Nortgate quam eminus de uxore Guarini mazonis.

"De terra quadam que est juxta fossam civitatis contra Sem. Augustinum.

At the end of the rental there occurs an entry which gives the date of the compilation.

"De novo redditu.—De Bercariis de Clive et Osterlaude ante exilium.

"De augmento redditus bercariarum de Clyve post exilium nostrum, per Justum et Osbertum de Ospreng xiii. lib. ij. sol. vij. d. et ob.

"Item per eodem anno Domini m^{ccc}xxviii^o."

The exilium here mentioned refers to the banishment of the convent, by King John, in A.D. 1207, and the repatriation in 1314. The note which bears the precise date (1229) was written as an addition to the original account, which it is therefore clear was compiled between the return from exile in A.D. 1214 and the date of the note in A.D. 1229.

The second section of this volume, the ordinary Conventual Register consists of, perhaps, a hundred folios, and as it contains a record of the business transactions of the monastery, it will be proper to give the titles of some of the documents here copied, seeing that they are contributions towards the history of the house.

At the head of the libellus stands the title.

Regist. temp. J. de Northburne et S. de Tilmanston tunc Cancellarii.

The pages being bound at random, it must be understood that these extracts do not follow each other in chronological order.

Procuratorium ad finem faciendum de causa et materia questionis et discordie inter nos, ex parte una, et Priorem et conventum Sci. Martini Dovour, ex altera. 1350.

Two monks are appointed to carry out a composition, by which the discord, which had lasted almost a century, was ultimately composed.

Littera, antiquo sigillo nostro "ad causas" de nolo signata quod vents sigillum disruptum fuit, concessa abbati et monachis de Voto, ordinis Cistercie. Anno Dni. m^{ccc}cl.

Littera directa Dno. Pape, que quidem littera continet negotium Dni. Archiepi. i. ad ejus instantiam Sedi Apostolice per conventum dirigitur. 8th Feb. 1350.

The letter prays the reigning Pope to acquit the see of Cant. from the payments which were customary in the vacancy and at the refilling of the see; alleging the great loss which the Abp. and the convent had suffered by the pestilence of the two preceding years. They say:

"Dispendia describere nimis foret diffusum, et vix sufficimus enarrare, terre siquidem plurime ipsius Ecclesie jacuerant, et adhuc jacent, pro defectu cultorum inculte, item plura edificia decidebant, et que nunc remanent, cum non sint qui ea inhabitarent, manifestam minuantur ruinam; ac, deficientibus tenentibus, non supersunt qui de redditibus potuerint respondere. Terre insuper annis proximis, maximis culte laboribus et sumptibus excessivis, nullos quasi fructus reddentes pejus quam steriles remanserunt."

In a notice of exchange of benefices the cancellarius has made a curious slip of the pen. The notice is addressed: "Dno. Simoni Dei gratia Arepi, &c.," but the scribe, from carelessness, has spelled the Abp.'s name "Simony."

Several extracts from the great roll of the Exchequer (Edw. III. a^o xxiii.) relate to the successful attempt of the convent to evade payment from their manors of the Relief demanded at the knighting of the Black Prince.

Littera indentata inter Eleemosinarium Ecclesie Xpi. et Rectorem de Estry super divisione ejusdam place.

The Rector of Eastry and the Almoner of Ch. Ch., between whom the profits of the benefice were divided, were seldom in accord. The difficulty of making an equitable division led, sometimes to suits, sometimes to agreements with mutual concessions, as in the present case.

In ancient days Adam de Charing founded a Lepers' hospital at Romney, in honour of St. Stephen and St. Thomas; by lapse of time and neglect this had fallen into decay, and was again refounded by John Fraunceys in 1363. A ratification of the re-endowment by the Abp. and the Chapter cites John Fraunceys's deed at length.

In 1364 W. Topelive was appointed Steward or Seneschal of the Liberties of Ch. Ch. The fees of his office were: for the custody of the liberties in Sussex, forty shillings a year, with a mare for his clerk; also forty marks sterling by two annual payments from the manor of Godmersham.

In 1364 the Church of Boxley, of which the Convent of Rochester had been the patrons from the time of Abp. Theobald, was assigned to Boxley monastery "in proprios usus" by Abp. Islip.

Leases of the "Denns" in the Weald, which were attached to manors lying at a distance from the Weald, were granted to tenants upon terms and by deeds somewhat differing from those by which ordinary land was let. A considerable number of these deeds are here to be found bearing a title in this form:

De fundo in Denna commissa Thome Balden et aliis.

In 1364 Abp. Islip appropriated the Church of Buckland to the monastery of St. Martin, Dover. In the petition of the convent, asking for this favour, the prior urges that the house is greatly impoverished, "propter sterilitatem terrarum olim frugiferarum;" and also he pleads that so many kings and great men, landing at Dover, claim hospitality from the monastery as to cause expenditure to outrun income.

In 1365 the Convent of Ch. Ch., in consideration of the "immensa beneficia" which they had received at the King's hand, resigned to him the advowson of the Church of St. Vedast, in London.

Servicia Hospitalis de Maydenstane commutata in pecuniam.

The hospital held land under the Abp. by a base tenure, being bound to perform uncertain and burdensome services. These were commuted for a money rent, in 1364, by the favour of Abp. Islip.

Officium Bedelli de Arcubus commissum (a capitulo) Rob. Brassington.

Restitutio ecclesiarum de Eastry et Monkton Ecclesie Xpi. a Dno. Simone Islep. Arepo.

Abp. Richard gave, Baldwin took away, and Simon restored these churches.

Appropriacio Ecclesie de Byslington Prioratui de Bysyngton, 1366.

De custodia parcorum warrenarum, &c., in comitatibus Sussex, Surrey, et Midds. Johanni de Burgh concessa.

He was appointed Ranger of the Abp.'s parks for life at a salary of 10l.

De custodia Palatii Arepi. apud Cantuar. Roberto Hyche concessa.

In 1370 the benefice of Pagham, appropriated to Cant' College in Oxford, was vacant, and the King proposed, the priory of Ch. Ch. being vacant by the death of Prior Hathbrand, to present to it. This aggression the chapter resented, alleging that they had papal bulls which onsted the King from his right of patronage during the vacancy of the priory. They say the "jurisperiti" advised them that the Pope could not give away temporalities, especially if they belonged to the King, and therefore they ask for help from the Abp.

The power of attorney authorising a proctor at the Curia Romana to act for the chapter in the matter of the intrusion of John Wyclif and others into Canterbury College, Oxon., 1371.

An indenture made between the Prior and Chapter of Ch. Ch. on the one part, and Thomas son of the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, clerk (Thomas Arundel afterwards Abp.), on the other, testifies that the former have granted to the latter an annuity of a hundred marks, to be paid "a Londres en la Eglise de Saint Poel sur les condicions "cusuantz; cest assavoir, que si le dit Thomas suit "avance a benefice de Saint Eglise de la value de "cent livers tiele que le voudra retenir par le dit "priour ou ses successors, ou par cause de eaux, ou "q'il soit cree en évesq, qe adonc la dite rente de cent "marc cesse a tous jours. Et si la dite rente de cent "marc soit adierens en partie ou en tout, &c."

Carta Johis. Tyce.

The convent grant to John Tyce and his wife Cecilia, for their joint lives :

"Duos panes conventuales, et duas lagenas corevisie melioris conventuales, quolibet die recipiendi. Et octiam eidem Johanni annuatim durante vita sua unam robam de secta armigerorum nostrorum, &c."

The prior and chapter demise to Nicholas Brember and Idonea his wife, lands at Harrow, to hold to them and their heirs for ever of the chapter, at the accustomed rents and services. 1471.

The master of Eastbridge Hospital, Cant., demises lands to John Roper on the same terms. 1471.

Obligacio cujusdam annui redditus facta Priori et conventui Scc. Frydeswyde, Oxon., de Collegio "Aula Cant." unenupato.

A part of the site of the college stood on land belonging to the adjoining priory, a rent being paid for the occupation.

Manumissio Nativi.

The deed with this title is an acknowledgment by the prior of Ch. Ch. that he has perused a deed of Abp. Witlesey "in hec verba :

"W. permissione divina, &c. Cum nuper in manus nostras omnia terras, &c. que Johannes atte Broke de Radewelde, junior, tenet de hereditate facta uxoris sue in Com. Sussex scsiri locimus, co quod dictus Johannes natus noster extitit ut accepimus, quia tamen volumus eidem Johanni gratiam in hac parte facere specialiter, Sciatis quod nos dictum Johannem cum tota sequela sua manumittimus et ab omni iugo servitutis absolvimus, ipsunque cum tota sequela sua predicta liberum et ab omni servitute quietum et liberum . . . esse volumus. 1373."

Littera missoria Duo. Archiepo. de . . . et de capitulo generali Nigrorum Monachorum.

The prior, having refused to appear to a summons calling upon him to attend a Benedictine chapter, has been heavily fined by the "presidents," and still further punishments are threatened, he therefore begs the Abp. to intervene for the protection of the liberties of the church of Canterbury.

De custodia palatii concessa Johanni Huddebovill.

The custos was housekeeper in the Archbishop's absence, and his fees were a bushel of wheat a week, and an esquire's livery gown every year.

De custodia Ostii Claustris ecclesie nostri.

The prior appoints a layman to the office, who took his payment as follows :

"De celario dictae ecclesie nostre, unum smalpeys, unum fetyus, unum justam secunde servisie, et unum ferculum de coquina. Percipiet et dictus Johannes, diebus Lune et Jovis cujuslibet ebdomade, de refectorio unum panem monachalem, et unam justam servisie conventus, et pro solidis suis per annum sex solidis et octo denariis. 1377."

Quomodo Rex presentavit Archidiaconum Cantuar. sede ibidem vacante.

The prior and chapter admit Henry Wakefield to the office to which the King, hac vice verus patronus, has presented him.

Statuta collegii de Ruschworth Norwic. dioc.

The Bishop of Norwich having officially visited the college lately founded by Edmund de Ganeville, has revised and approved the statutes. The Abp. ratified the Bishop's acts, and signified the same to the chapter of Cant.

Littera concessa Henrico de Wodhull monacho monasterii de Abyndon.

Littera commendatoria abbatis et conventus monasterii de Abyndon.

Littera professionis Hen. Wodhull.

Henry Wodhull, a Benedictine monk of Abingdon, and a Doctor of Divinity, with the consent of his superiors, leaves his own monastery, and is received as a brother of Ch. Ch.

Littera de institutione duarum cantariorum Dni. Principis.

This is the confirmation by the prior and chapter of the foundation deed of the Chantry endowed, on his marriage, by Edward the Black Prince, whose charter is recited at length. 1362.

De materia concernente Dm. Archiepiscopum et Dm. Comitem Arundel de diversis.

This is a composition settling a long-standing dispute. The indenture testifies :

"Que come de grant temps eient este debatz entre les predeceussors le dit Ercevesq, Ercevesques de Caunterbirys, et les auncestres le dit comte, les predeceussors du dit Ercevesq demandantz des auncestres le dit comte un annuel rente de treize deymos ou corfs en temps de grece et de treize deymos ou bisses en temps de fermeson a payer annuellement ou mesmes les serons au manoir le dit Ercevesq de Slyndon. Les auncestres du dit comte dedisantz et denyantz lavandite rente estre due."

By the present compromise the Archbishop for himself and his successors releases the count and his heirs from the payment of the venison in consideration of a prompt payment to him of a hundred and forty mares, with which he may purchase land for the Church, the earl paying the costs of amortisation.

Littera de Cantaria in ecclesia de Reycolvre fundata per Dm. Thomam Nywe de Woltone.

The founder was rector of Aldington and a vicar in the church of Reclwyer. In this deed of foundation the chantry is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the Blessed Virgin, and All Saints, "pro salute venerabilis in Xpo. "patris et domini Simonis Cantuar. Archiepi "et mea, Ade, Margerie, Wilhelmi, Roberti, et Lucae "de Watyndon, dum vixerimus, et animabus nostris "cum mortui fuerimus; animabus et Johannis et "Emme parentum meorum, Nicholai de Tyngewik, "Thome de Osteleye, quondam Rectorum dictae ecclesie, "dominorum meorum, Hamonis Underwalle, Johannis "Cok, Thome Emme Johannis Blower, Roberti Shep- "hurde, Kristine, Sarre, Margerie, Willemi, Johan- "nis, Jacobi, Kristine, Johannis, Henrici, Johannis, "Matildis, et omnium qui mee administrationis tem- "pore in parochia dictae ecclesie de Reclwyre decesserunt, "et qui in subsidium sequentis cantarie aliquid contu- "lerunt et conferent in futurum." 1355.

Ordinacio Hospitalis de Eastbrygg in civitate Cantuar. et appropriacio ecclesie Scti. Nicholai.

The hospital of St. Thomas of Eastbridge had at the date of the present ordination (1352) been long in difficulties. It was founded "ad miserabilium personarum "et pauperum receptionem et sustentacionem," but the masters had so far mismanaged the revenues that the founder's intentions were no longer carried out. It had even become a custom to accept a round sum from persons who wished to become inmates, and then to admit them to all the privileges of the place, with board and lodging for life. To remedy these abuses, Abp. Stratford refounded the institution, adding the profits of the church of St. Nicholas in Thancet to bring the income to a serviceable amount. A few years after the date of Abp. Stratford's intervention Adam le Eyr, a London citizen, endowed the hospital with land of the yearly value of ten pounds, in consideration of which perpetual rent, he was granted a small hall and an adjoining chamber in the hospital, and the enjoyment of the yearly ten pounds for his life.

Composicio inter nos et cives Cantuar. de Mildredesmele.

The convent owned St. Mildred's Mill, while King's Mill, some half mile down stream, belonged to the citizens. Disputes, about damming back the water, dredging of shallows, and similar matters, had gone on for a long time, and this composition was made between the parties with a view to ending them. By it the citizens undertake to :—"mundier et purgier nettement "la dictie riviere des schameies et collections de terre "et autres estures quelconques a lour propres custages. "solom lauciene cours, parente mesmes les deus "moleyns. mcccviij." This settlement was not arrived at until the convent had brought an action against the bailiffs of the city, but, the agreement being made, the citizens loyally adhered to it, as is proved by a note which testifies that in 1431 the convent had had no cause to complain.

Corrodium concessum Thome Sprot et Juliane uxori sue. mcccvii.

Thomas Sprot, of Marsham, is hereby appointed porter of the court-gate. The daily allowance for board consisted of:—A conventual loaf, a loaf called smalpeys, a gallon and a half of superior ale, and a gallon and a half of an inferior sort called cantale. From the kitchen at dinner two commons (a third being added on all principal feasts) from each conventual dish, one being cooked with broth, being such as is served to a brother of the House, "et quodam conventus cenat" puppice, in Refectorio scilicet, percipiant sicut unus "de confratribus nostris ibidem cenantibus."

De domibus pauperum de Herbaldoune et Northgate.

The hospitals of St. John Baptist, Northgate Cant., and St. Nicholas of Harbledown had a grievance. The Archbps. were accustomed to contribute yearly a hundred and twenty pounds, and from the church of Reculver, appropriated "auctoritate Apostolica, ad men- sam Archiporum," twenty pounds more. While the see was occupied this income was sufficient for the wants of the hospitals; but when it was vacant, the temporalities being in the King's hand, the hospitals ordinarily missed their income altogether. By the present deed Abp. Islip settles a fixed competent income upon the two charities. The original deed is in the possession of the archdeacon of Canterbury, the patron of both hospitals.

Littera pro Portitore brevium.

This is the form of the credentials furnished to the messenger who carried from one monastery to another notices of the deaths of Canterbury monks. The phrases employed in the composition are so singularly like those found in Bishop Hotham's mortuary roll (Chart. Antiq. E. 191.), that there is little doubt that the composer of this letter was familiar with the Ely document. The formula runs thus:—

"Universis, &c. Quia quidam confratres et canonici et familiares nostri, quorum nomina in breviculis nostris universitati vestre inscripta transmittimus, nuper a carnis ergastulo sunt erepti, et, ut credere fas est, divina pietate opitulante, ad superne civitatis ineffabile gaudium misericorditer evocati; qui quidem illa generali et communi nichilominus includebantur sententia, quod nullus natus a sordibus nec infans unius diei, si sit vita ejus super terram, frateritatem vestram ex caritatis visceribus requiramus et rogamus, quatinus devotis orationum suffragiis, et ceteris beneficiorum adminiculis, eorum transitum apud aures divine pietatis vobis placeat commendare; necnon T. latori presentium, victualia dignemini caritative conferre, ut sic prolixioris vic spatia, vestris suffultis auxiliis, potius valeat adimplere; ac nos, imposterum obligati ad similia, pro nostre parvitatibus competencia vestris in hac parte vicem libentius rependere debeamus. Universitatem vestram salvet, protegat, et sanctificet omnis Conditor et Redemptor."

Mannmissio Thome Palmer, sacerdotis.

Abp. Islip, having learned that Thomas the Rector of Foulton, a son of one of his own Nativi, had obtained Holy Orders, calls him before him, submits him to an examination, and, having found him to be a sufficiently learned clerk, manumits him.

Littera signata per sigillum commune, de uno pane et una justa cerevisie concessis Magistro T. Masbury.

To Thomas Masbury, juris peritus, who has done good service to the monastery, a daily corrody is awarded for life.

Littera continens negotium concordie inter Priorem et conventum et Ballivos et communitatem de Gypeswile.

The bailiffs of Ipswich had from time to time levied toll upon the tenants of Christchurch who carried produce to the town from their farms in the neighbourhood. The convent, on the strength of many royal charters, claimed immunity from toll throughout England. To prevent all differences for the future, William of Canterbury, sub-prior of Ch. Ch., and "Monsieur Arnaud "Savage," the representatives of the convent, held a conference with John de Wynkfeld, deputed to represent the town, and agreed upon the terms embodied in this memorandum.

In 1358 Abp. Islip appointed his butler to be porter of the court-gate of the monastery; and to his head-groom (marescallus) he gave the office of keeper of the palace. To John le Venour (venatori nostro) he gave the custody of the woods and warrens in the manor of Slyndon, Sussex.

In October 1360 Abp. Islip gave notice that he intended to make a visitation of the cathedral and its dependant monastery, upon which the prior summoned all absent monks to return home, and signified to the Abp. that he was dutifully ready to receive him.

De Cantaria de Sevenoke.

William de Cherwode and Walter de Multon refound the chapel of the Hospital of St. John at Sevenoke, finding the revenues so diminished that they were not sufficient to provide "one simple priest." They endow the restored chantry with all the lands which they acquired, apparently as trustees, from Cecilia widow of Gamaliel atte Watre, prescribing in this deed what services were to be performed in the chapel, and directing that the names of Cecilia, Gamaliel, and their kin, should be daily commemorated. 1359.

Littera licencie facta Gilberto de Hilles et Hamoni ate Halle pro Cantaria facienda (in ecclia. de Godmersham).

Littere appropriacionis ecclesie de Pagham (Collegio Cant. Oxon.). 1363.

The revised "Rentale" of 1420, which here cuts short the business register of Ch. Ch., has a rubricated title which states that it was compiled "anno Jubileo Sci. Thome Martiris gloriosi."

The three compositions which form the fourth part of this volume are but copies of those already described in the Cartularies.

Abp. Boniface's composition, forming the sixth part, has also been described.

Assisa Scaccarii, anno Domini mccc.

In this, the eighth, section of the Register are collected well written copies of the accounts of receipts and payments, drawn up by the several officers of the monastery for the audit days of the years 1252, and ten following years. At the head of each yearly report stands an assise, fixing the market value for the year of the several kinds of farm produce which might be offered as rent in lieu of money, and to which it was necessary that the vouchers of those who had bought or sold produce during the year should conform. Some of these accounts record only the dealings of the chamberlain, the sacrist, and others, who were professed monks dwelling within the precincts; whilst others contain the purchases and sales of the servants or farm bailiffs of the outlying manors.

From the eleven assises we learn the prices of a measure (seam?) of:

| | Highest. | Lowest. |
|-----------------------------|----------|---------|
| | s. d. | s. d. |
| Wheat - - - | - 9 0 | 4 0 |
| Pease - - - | - 9 0 | 4 0 |
| Barley - - - | - 7 0 | 2 8 |
| Oats - - - | - 7 0 | 3 4 |
| Horse corn - - | - 4 0 | 2 0 |
| A weight of cheese - | - 12 0 | 10 0 |
| A stoup (stoppa) of honey - | 1 6 | 1 6 |

The chamberlain debits himself with money received, and gives himself credit for the goods which he has bought for the use of the community. The articles purchased for this department consist of cloth, black and grey, linen, serge for linings, canvas, and furs, all to make garments for the brethren; white and black leather for their shoes, with grease and dripping apparently to grease them. Horses and harness come within the range of the chamberlain's bargains.

The sacrist provided incense and wax, tapers and tallow candles, to be used in the daily services. For repairing those parts of the church which were under his charge he bought lime, iron, lead, and solder; he paid wages to plumbers and smiths, and provided colours for decorations and glass for the windows. In addition to these items he yearly claimed credit for about five pounds under the head "Sonitus et ornatus;" the bells concerned in the sonitus required "oleum," "corde, et corium," and numberless small decorations under the title honestas cost money.

The cellarer's account is necessarily a long and a large one.

The serjeants (servientes manerierum) account for produce of land and stock, debiting themselves with the fruits of the earth and the issue (exitus) of the cattle, and on the other hand they claim credit for store in hand, for expenses, and for losses of cattle by accident or disease.

The treasurer winds up each annual report with what is meant for a general balance, which, arithmetically, is usually faulty. It need not be a subject for much surprise if he took small pains to be quite accurate, even setting down his "sundries" at more than a hundred and fifty pounds, when at last the summa summarum had to be expressed in this form :

Summa totius debiti nostri - MMDCCCL. mare.
Et debentur nobis - c. libri.

The Custodes of the shrines and altars to which the pilgrims most resorted, here account for the oblations made at the holy places under their charge. The average of yearly offerings of the eleven years which appear in this Register were:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|-----------------------------|----|----|----|
| To the shrine of St. Thomas | 71 | 11 | 0 |
| The corona | 25 | 6 | 3 |
| The altar of the martyrdom | 7 | 14 | 4 |
| The tomb in the crypt | 4 | 12 | 10 |

These were all ordinary years, but once in fifty years, when the jubilee of the saint was celebrated, pilgrims were attracted to Canterbury in very large numbers, as many as a hundred thousand in one week are recorded, and then the offerings were proportionally increased.

The ninth division of this volume is a carefully written list of rents payable to the convent, and issuing from tenements in Canterbury. The date of this rent-roll is not far from A.D. 1200. In the list of tenants hereditary surnames, as we now know them, do not occur; examples of cognomina then in use, taken from a single column of names, will show this: Odo Sutor, Will. de Cheileham, Bartholomew Cocus, Symo de Pistrino, Wlveva vidua, Salomon le Flamang, Robert le Blund, Nigellus filius Aubri, Symon Presbyter, Johannes filius ejusdem, Symo Pelliparius, Wymundus, Reginaldus Aurifaber, Johannes filius Rogeri, Snnewine, Suauus mercator, Hugo de Aula.

Reg. I. The Register marked I. is a small but thick volume, composed of 477 parchment folios, measuring 10 by 7 inches. Three distinct libelli have been bound together to form the volume, and these not having been originally all of a size, the binder has cut down the larger leaves as nearly as he dared to the dimensions of the smallest. Of the three sections of the Register, the first is a hand cartulary, a portable collection of many of the charters of Kings and Archbishops, and of the Papal Bulls, which have already been noticed in the large Registers A. B., C., and D. These are beautifully written, with large capitals decorated, not with colour, but with pen and ink arabesques, executed chiefly in black, with a few red lines, an original brownish compound of the two colours mixed together being employed to form a closely hatched ground. The latest Royal Charter is that by which King John granted free elections of bishops, in A.D. 1214; the latest Archiepiscopal Charter, one of Boniface, dated in A.D. 1250; and the latest Bull, one granted by Gregory IX. in 1271. From these facts, combined with the evidence of the handwriting, it may be inferred, that in the first part of the Register we have a handy book of reference of small size, drawn up under the superintendence of Prior Eastry, on his accession to the headship of the priory (1285); a book containing all the charters which required to be quoted most frequently, those being omitted, to lessen the bulk of the book, which were not in frequent use as evidences.

Attention having been drawn to this little collection, no more need be said of it, except that appended to one charter, relating to the manor of Chatham, is the candid note: "Istam non habemus, sed scribitur in 'chronicis Mariani'" also, that the index to the Papal Bulls of 13th cent. date is numbered in Arabic figures; a key to the use of them, consisting of the new numerals written under the corresponding Roman symbols, occupies an, otherwise blank, page facing the index.

The second section of the volume is occupied by an immense number of letters patent and writs, all more or less touching the property or the privileges of Ch. Ch., issued between Aa. Dni. 1290 and 1340. These seem to have been all copied by one scribe who, having formed his style of writing in accordance with the fashion of the earlier date, did not change it in his old age when it had become generally obsolete. As the dates of these writs furnish an important contribution to the Regesta of Edward I., II., and III., it will be necessary to notice them in detail.

Writ, Edw. I., Dat. Westm., 20th June 1290.

" " Dat. Northampton die Lune in fci. Augustini Epi. (Aug. 28) 1290.

Letter, Queen Eleanor, Markham, 19th Nov. 1290.

Writ, Edw. I., Esherogg, 7th Jan. 1291.

" " Cantuar., 27th July 1293.

" " Cantuar., 22nd April 1294.

Writ, Edw. I., Westm., 20th June 1290.

" " Westm., 12th July 1290.

" " Westm., 14th July 1290.

" " Teste W. Carleton, apd. Westm., 22nd July 1290.

" " Devizes, 17th Sept. 1291.

" " Guildford, 1st May 1292.

" " Westm., 28th Mar. 1292.

" " Nottingham, 12th Nov. 1292.

" " Newcastle, 6th Jan. 1293.

" " Teste J. Cobham, Westm., 28th Jan. 1293.

" " Cantuar., 1st Jan. 1294.

" " Stirling, 1st June 1304.

" " Westm., 27th May 1290.

" " York, 1st Oct. 1299.

" " Peebles, 14th Aug. 1301.

" " Teste W. de Carlton, York, 25th June 1302.

" " Newcastle, 8th Aug. 1306.

" " Teste Epo. Lich., York, 16th April 1301.

" " Edw. II., Berwick, 24th July 1313.

Dispensatio Dni. Thome de Ringemere quondam Prioris Ecclesie Xpi. Cant.

This instrument of Abp. Winchelsey contains Apostolic letters from Celestine V., allowing the late Prior Ringemere, who had already been a Benedictine, a Cistercian, and an Augustinian Eremita, to return to his first order in Chertsey Abbey.

Writ, Edw. II., Teste W. de Norwic, Westm., 16th May 1321.

" " Teste W. de Norwic, 22nd Oct. 1322.

Here the series of writs is suspended, and one consisting of ecclesiastical instruments begins.

Littera citatoria quare non debemus scribere (Regi) pro capcione excommunicati.

Abp. Peckham requires the prior to cite a late mayor of Canterbury, who has remained obdurate after forty days of excommunication, adding: "pro ipsius excom-
"municati capcione Majestati Regie minime scribere
"debemus."

Confirmacio indulgenciarum.

Abp. Peckham, in 1285, confirms all privileges granted to Ch. Ch. "a Dno. Rege Edwarde ac filio suo "juvenulo Edwardo."

Procuratorium de vinis Francie colligendis.

Walter, dictus de Sco. Dionisio, is appointed agent at Poissy for gathering the "wine of St. Thomas." Another person is made protector of the liberties of Ch. Ch. at the port of Wytsand.

The see of Canterbury being vacant in 1278, by the death of Abp. Kilwardby, the chapter assumed the spiritual jurisdiction of the province, as usual. One of their first acts was the excommunication of the Archdeacon of Cant., who had infringed the liberties of the convent.

Approved forms of various kinds of letters, in frequent use in the monastic chancery, are here copied. A bishop to an abbot, asking for dimissory letters for a monk of the abbey, who wishes to exchange "ad arcio-
"rem ordinem;" the letters dimissory asked for; a request that the head of a distant monastery will give board and lodging to an agent of Ch. Ch. as long as he may require it; minatory letter to an abbot who receives a fugitive monk, &c.

Two Papal nuntii, the Cardinals of Albano and Palestina, were exacting heavy procurations from the English clergy at the beginning of the 14th cent. A letter occurs here from Abp. Winchelsey, directing the prior to pay the tax for a second year.

A letter from Edw. I. to Abp. Winchelsey, reminding him that the clergy in convocation at Westminster had promised him a tenth for the defence of the kingdom unless peace were made with France. The peace not being probable, the Abp. is required to assemble the clergy at Bury St. Edmund's to carry out the conditional promise. Berwick, 26th Aug. 1296.

A letter from Abp. Winchelsey, who acknowledges that the clergy are bound, if only by their own interests, to assist in the defence of the land, summoning the prior and chapter to a convocation at St. Paul's, on St. Hilary's day 1296, to discuss the matter of a subsidy to the King. On the 17th July 1297 the Abp. summons another convocation "apud Novum Templum, London," and still another on St. Edmund's day (20th Nov.) at the same place. In the meantime the prior, alarmed by the action of the Abp., and fearing that the King would seize the temporalities of the See, issued letters patent informing all men that the property of the church of Canterbury was vested in the prior and convent, and was totally distinct from the official estate of the Abp.

Protestacio Regis E. filii Regis H. quando liberavit Dno. R. de Kilwardby temporalia Archiepiscopatus Cantuar.

The King, at the delivery, addressed the elect and others there assembled by the mouth of his clerk Iterius Bocharius, accepting the elect who had been provided by the Pope, but, while reciting the legal and proper method of election, giving notice that for the future he would not deliver the temporals to any papal nominee. 1272.

Littera Archiepi. Cant. (Kilwardby) ad orandum pro statu suo.

Secunda Bulla de decima Dno. E. Regi Anglie in subsidio Terre Sancte concessa.

Boniface VIII., alluding to the grant of a tenth of ecclesiastical benefices made by Nicholas IV., recites the circumstances under which the Bishops of Winchester and Lincoln were first appointed collectors, and then deprived of the office. He here appoints the Abbot of Waltham and the Dean of St. Paul's to be the collectors, giving them authority to compel the payment of sums detained by their predecessors by ecclesiastical censures. Bulla de provisione Norwic elect.

Boniface VIII., taking advantage of a double election at Ely, provided one of the candidates for the see by his own authority, selecting Ralph Walpole, at the time Bp. of Norwich; at the same time boldly sending notice of the act to the King, "Bulla Regi Anglie de eodem," here copied, being the notice so sent. 1299.

Prima carta continens de maneris et redditibus in Hibernia venditis.

A statement of the dealings of the chapter of Ch. Ch. with the Abbot of Tynterne or De Voto in Ireland.

Carta Hamonis de Cravequer de homagio Jacobi de Tutesham.

Hamo, son of Robert de Creveceur, grants a mill at Farleigh to be held by suit and service.

Inquisitio facta in plena curia de Estreia, in festo Sci. Michis. mccciii.

An adjustment of rents, &c., settled in the Court Baron.

Terre quas Johanna que fuit uxor Walteri Culpeper tenet in Eastfarlegh de gratia Dni. Regis. mcccxxv.

Littera testimonialis de resignatione N. de Sandwich quondam Prioris Cant.

Littera pro expensis levandis Epi. Grossetani Nuncii Papalis. 1290.

Bulla recepta pro eisdem expensis.

This is the bishop's letter demanding payment, and reciting the Bull by which Nicholas IV. appointed him his nuntius to the King of England "pro quibusdam ecclesie Romanae negotiis."

Declaratio decime Dno. E. Regi concessa A^o Dⁱ nce. nonagesimo primo.

This is the letter of Nicholas IV., appointing the Bps. of Lincoln and Winchester to be collectors of the "decima" in subsidium Terre Sancte."

Declaratio decime Lugdun. concessa.

This is a long letter of instructions, given by Gregory X. to his agent in England, concerning the method by which the tenth for the Holy Land, granted at the Council of Lyons, should be collected. It is followed by the Bull of Nicholas IV., authorising the collection of the tenth.

Articuli inquisitionis de cruce signatis et de bonis legatis in subsidium Terre Sancte.

This is a list of eighteen articles, containing the inquiries which are to be made into the numbers of those who have been signed by the cross, and the amount of contributions collected for the relief of the Holy Land. Arrangements are made for commuting the personal service of those who are unable to perform their vows.

Littera submissionis pro transgressionem facta.

Nicholas de Sandwich and Walter de Valoynes have trespassed in Westwell park, the land of the Prior of Ch. Ch. They have been indicted and convicted, and now bind themselves to good behaviour in recognizances of ten pounds each.

De fugitivo monendo quod redeat ad monasterium.

This is an insulting mouition sent by Abp. Peckham to Thomas Ringmere, who, resigning his office of prior of Ch. Ch., went to Beaulieu Abbey and became a Cistercian. The great offence, however, by which he has incurred the anger of the Abp. was that, leaving Beaulieu, he went to reside at Brookwood "et habitum monachalem . . . resumpsit in nostrum et ecclesie nostre et fratrum nostrorum injuria et contempto"

De fugitivo compellendo quod redeat.

Littera inhibitionis ne quis communicet cum fugitivo.

These are other papers in the same matter, the first being issued by the Bp. of Winchester, in whose diocese Brookwood was included.

Abp. Peckham having died, and the see being vacant the usual commissions were issued.

Legitimacio et dispensacio ad omnes ordines et ad beneficium cum cura recipiendum.

John de Chut, a subdeacon, and born of divorced parents, had been refused admission to superior orders by Abp. Peckham; he therefore applied to Pope Martin IV., who gave him letters dispensing him from his disability.

Induacio clericis presentati infra sacros ordines.

A layman was inducted, by mandate from the chapter sede vacante, to the rectory of Llanccaddok, on the presentation of J. de Hasting, and in accordance with the constitutions of the Council of Lyons.

Obligacio decime deposita.

The collectors of the tenth deposited two hundred pounds with the chapter of Ch. Ch. for safe custody, and by this bond the latter pledge themselves to restore the sum when properly called upon to do so.

Bulla de concilio London celebrando, per archiepiscopum, vel capitulum eo absente.

This is the Bull of Honorius IV. describing the critical situation of the fortress of Acre, and requiring the Abp. to call a council of the clergy to devise means for relieving the Holy Land.

Littera nuncii Dni. Pape pro expensis suis colligendis.

Two instruments record how Celestine V. sent a nuntius assigning him a liberal daily salary, and how the nuntius found a difficulty in getting his money.

A copy of a bull of Alexander IV. is here inserted, it forbids the granting of holy orders or benefices to practitioners in secular law or to advocates, however distinguished they may be, unless they have other more appropriate qualifications for the priesthood.

Another document relates to the Bps. of Albano and Palestrina and their claims for procurations.

Bulla Epi. Clonfertensis de tabellionibus faciendis.

Boniface VIII., at the petition of the Bp. of Clonfert, permits him to appoint two notaries in his diocese.

Petitio capituli pro xxx. lib.

The prior and chapter at the request of the King had yielded to him the port of Sandwich, worth 60*l.* a year, and had received lands of 30*l.* with a promise of the balance, which they now press for. Gallicie.

De pondere et mensura vitri.

A calculation of the area which a hundredweight of glass of various kinds would cover. How much glass would be required for a window of given dimensions.

Littera Cleri Francie Cardinali pro subsidio Regis Francie faciendis.

Consultacio Summi pontificis ad litteram predicatam. (1297.)

In the first of these two documents the bishops of France, describing the desolation of the country, and the disasters produced by foreign invasion and internal disaffection, write to the Cardinal N., asking him to intercede with Boniface VIII., who, by the Bull "Clericis laicos," had forbidden them to raise any funds for assisting the King in the defence of the country. They point out to the Cardinal that if the King, through lack of money, is unable to repress the foreign invaders, the church in France (ecclesia Gallicana) will suffer quite as much as the laity. In the second the Pope writes that the bull was not meant to apply to extreme cases such as the bishops have described: "non tamen fuit mentis nostre intentio ipsi Regi aliisque principibus secularibus in tam arcte necessitatibus articulo positus . . . viam subventionis excludi." He then gives leave to the clergy of France to tax themselves for the defence of the realm. The date of this consultacio is the last day of February 1297.

De indulgentia Summi Pontificis in anno Jubileo. Declaracio ejusdem.

Boniface VIII. proclaims the Roman Jubilee of A.D. 1300, declaring each succeeding hundredth year a year of jubilee, and ratifying all the indulgences granted by former pontiffs to pilgrims visiting Rome at the appointed time. The second document states the terms upon which the indulgence may be obtained. All who die by the way, all who set out for the festival but are hindered by circumstances from reaching the end of the journey, and all who arrive at Rome after the Christmas day upon which the indulgences come to an end, are assured that, their good intentions being taken into account, they will obtain the benefits which they have derived from a more prosperous journey.

A large part of a bull by which Boniface VIII. exempted the diocese and city of Winchester from archiepiscopal jurisdiction is here copied.

De treugis inter Reges Anglie, Alemannie, et Francie.

The Bishops of Albaño and Palestrina publish their letters of credence, in which Boniface VIII. appoints them nuntii for the purpose of proposing and concluding a truce between the Kings. He, writing in May, requires the Kings, under threats of terrible penalties, to agree to a cessation of hostilities for a year beginning at the ensuing feast of St. John Bapt. 1294. A second instrument of the same character follows, dated two years later.

Sentencia lata contra Cardinales de Columnis.

The first lines, reading as follows, declare the substance of this long document. "In nomine Dei Amen.

"Hec est sententia deponicionis Dominorum Jacobi et Petri de Columnis cardinalium lata a Bonifacio Papa Octavo Anno Dni. mccc nonagesimo septimo." This is a copy of the bull often quoted as an instance of the ungovernable vehemence of Boniface's language, and a proof of the bitterness of his hatred of the Ghibelline politics of the Colonnas.

A letter addressed "Inquisitoribus heretice pravitatis" "Predicatorum Minorum(que) fratrum ordinum," declares that the whole Colonna family are afflicted with the taint "non tam cismaticæ quam insanic," and it requires the inquisitors to take them and all their kin, wherever they may be found, and to deal with them in the most severe manner the law of the church will allow.

Declaracio (ejnsdem) pape super nova constitutione sua de immunitate ecclesiarum (in regno Francie.)

An undated explanation of the bull "Clericis Laicos," by which some of the uncompromising character of the bull is softened. It is addressed to the prelates and nobles of France.

Arbitrium Dni. Pape inter Reges Anglie et Francie.

This is a contemporary copy of the scheme for peace which Boniface VIII., to whom Philip and Edward had referred their dispute, drew up for the purpose of ending the war between the countries. The arbitrator expressly states that the question has been referred to him as being Benedict Gaetani a private person and not in his character as Pope.

De predicatoribus et confessionibus audiendis Fratrū Predicatorum et Minorum.

Boniface VIII. lays down precise rules for the conduct of the friars in their ministrations. Liberty is given to them to preach and hear confessions in almost any place, a few reservations being made in favour of bishops and other prelates of the secular clergy.

De nova exemptione Abbatīs et conventus Sci. Augustini.

Under this title is a copy of Apostolic letters of Boniface VIII., written to the Abbots of Westminster, Waltham, and Bury, to whom the publication was intrusted. He refers to the dignity and antiquity of the monastery, and relates, at considerable length, the privileges which had been conferred upon it by many successive archbishops; all of these, however, he says, were much diminished in value by the inconveniences and vexations occasioned by the claims of the abps. and bishops of a right to exercise ordinary jurisdiction over the abbey and its subjects. He therefore from the date of the letters (1299), by the plenitude of Apostolic power, totally exempts the monastery and its dependents, in whatever diocese lying, from all archiepiscopal and episcopal jurisdiction.

Breve de custodia Prioratus vacante Prioratu. West., 1 June 1285.

On the resignation of Prior Ringmere, Edw. I. seized the temporalities, claiming the same rights as he had in a vacant diocese. On the election of a new prior, he ordered his escheator, H. de Bray, to deliver all the property of the priory of which he had possession to the just-elected prior; at the same time he imposed a very large fine, upon grounds which do not appear, but afterwards he remitted it.

Writ, Edw. I., West., 1st July 1285.

" " Wintonia, 6th Oct. 1285.

" " Cantuar., 8th May 1286.

" " Westm., 28th April 1286.

Breve Regis de redditibus in v. portibus non taxandis in tallagiis.

This matter does not touch the Priory of Ch. Ch. Alexander de Balliol held some tenements in Dover from the King in capite, but he claimed exemption from tallage, relying on the privileges of the town as one of the Cinque Ports. Several writs are here copied, but not dated. They are directed to Steph. de Penchester, the Lord Warden: the first makes claim for payment of tallage; the claim becomes less urgent as time goes on, and at last Balliol is acquitted from the payment.

Carta mariscorum de Romene.

This title heads several documents relating to the extent, drainage, and boundaries of the land of the Convent of Ch. Ch. in Romney Marsh, A.D. 1280, &c.

Writ, Edw. I., Odiham, 15th Dec. 1289.

" " Woodstock, 10th April 1290.

" " Westm., 16th May 1290.

" " Westm., 26th May 1290.

Littera Regine Anglie de cumibz, et kayes, et acquitancia thelonie, et cumjubilat consuetudinis in Sandwico.

The prior and chapter having handed over to Queen Eleanor all their rights in Sandwich port and town, reserved their houses and wharfs, and also obtained from her exemption from customary payments. A writ of Queen Eleanor here occurs directed to the mayor, &c. of Sandwich. It recites that "Jehan Brithyne de Diepe amena nadgeres une navee de vins en le port de Sandwiz," for the Prior of Canterbury, who, nevertheless, refused to pay the freight. The mayor is required to summon the parties and to see justice done.

A writ, Edw. I. Yoredale, 13 Aug. 1290. In this writ, directed to his bailiffs of Rochester, the King states that the prior and chapter of Ch. Ch. have "infangenethef" et utfangenethef" throughout the kingdom, and that, notwithstanding these privileges, the bailiffs have in their prison a tenant of the chapter charged with a felony committed at Hollingbourne, within the liberties of the monastery. The prisoner, it is ordered, must be surrendered at once to the seneschal of Ch. Ch.

Forma taxacionis xv^{mo} concessa Dno. Edwardo Regi. In festo Sci. Michis. anno gracie m^{ccc} nonagesimo.

A minute narrative in French of the process of assessment of the fifteenth of lay property granted to the King by the Parliament of Clipstone. "Cest assaver ke les dens chivalers chefs assurs firent venir devanz eus, de cheskm hundred de conte, taunz e teus de plus prudes homes del hundred, des queus il poyent elire une xij. des meus vaillanz del hundred, ke meus e plus loialment savoient e voloient asscer e taxer les biens de cheskm, quel part kil furent, ansi bien en champ, com en meson, on aylurs, le jour del Saint Michel ou avant pus la egle de Anst."

The rolls were thus compiled: "Et firent les taxurs tantost comencer deus routes de la taxacion kil firent, en les queus furent contenus les Noms de cheskm ke fu taxe, e la sune dunt il fu charge del quinzime; e le un roule sua tuz jurs le autre en escripture. E de ces rolles, kamit la taxacion fu parfete, le un demura ver les deus chivalers taxurs, e le autre fut envece tantost, de-suz lur seaus, al Tresorer e as Barons. E les taxurs ne lur clers rien ne pristrent pur chapitres liverer ne pur tailles fere." The Convent of Ch. Ch. was not formally assessed to this fifteenth, a compromise was made with the Exchequer, and on the 22nd Jan. 1291 they received a general acquittance.

Writ, Edw. I., Ashridge, 24th Jan. 1291.

Apud La Bruere, 1st Mar. 1291.

A writ of the King's Bench, directed to the bailiffs of Edmund Earl of Cornwall, declares that the tenants of Ch. Ch. are free from toll throughout England, but that, nevertheless, these bailiffs had levied exactions upon the Devonshire tenants of the convent going into the city of Exeter: "tunc ab hiis districcionibus et gravaminibus . . . sine dilacione inferendis desistatis." Ashridge, 16th Jan. 1291.

Writ, Edw. I., Apud Sm. Edmundum, 10th May 1291.

" " Norham, 5th June 1291.

" " Norham, 4th June 1291.

" " Norham, 8th June 1291.

" " Amesbury, 11th Sept. 1291.

A king's writ, not dated, requires the sheriff of Kent to do right to Robert of Elstec, rector of Woudham, who has been ejected from his church, and robbed of his goods by "quibusdam malefactoribus."

A writ, issued by W. de March, Treasurer of the Realm, directs the sheriff of Kent to prevent the importation of clipped and base money, and to search for and destroy all within his hailiwick.

The sheriff of Kent is directed to arrest William, Walter, and Peter de Valoynes, who have trespassed upon the lands and warrens of Ch. Ch. within the county. Teste Steph. de Poncester prope Cantuar., 20th Dec. 1291.

The Commissioners of Sewers (Justiciarii ad wallas et fossas juxta costerium maris) proceed against landholders who have allowed their marshes to become inundated. 1292.

Writ, Edw. I., Burton Lazars, 1st Sept. 1291.

" " Bury St. Edmund, 28th April 1292.

" " Pickering, 28th Aug. 1292.

This relates to the summoning of the officers of the forests in Essex, to appear before the justices itinerant.

Writ, Edw. I., Newcastle, 2nd Jan. 1293.

" " Westm., 6th Feb. 1292.

" " Westm., 12th June 1293.

Commissio Dni. W. de Leyburn versus Vasconia.

Dat. Westm. vij. die Jun., A. xxii. (1294).

This warrant empowers Sir William de Leybourne to impress men and ships in the Cinque Ports and elsewhere for service against the French.

Writ, Edw. I., Westm., 10th June 1294.

" " Westm., 14th June 1294.

This is the summons to the military tenants of the crown, even including ecclesiastics holding in capite, to assemble in arms at Portsmouth on the 1st Sept.

Writ, Edw. I., Portsmouth, 19th Aug. 1294.

" " Westm., 19th Sept. 1294.

By this the sheriff is required to release all wool and wool-fells arrested in his county, on payment of three or five marks the pack, according to the quality.

Writ, Edw. I., Aberconway, 4th Feb. 1294.

By this the King requires Ralph de Berners and David le Graunt, custodes archiepiscopatus vacantis post obitum J. Peckham, to surrender the temporalities of the see to Robert Winchelsey, archdeacon of Essex, elect of Canterbury, and approved by the King.

A letter from the Bishop of London announces that Adolphus (Rex Romanorum), with whom the King of England had formed an alliance, had not fulfilled his share in the treaty.

Writ, Edw. I., Westm., 14th Aug. 1295.

This is a writ ad quod damnum, directing an inquisition into the acquisition by Ch. Ch. of the house of a banished Jew in Canterbury.

Writ, Edw. I., Westm., 24th Sept. 1294.

" " St. Alban's, 30 Dec. 1295.

Ornamenta ecclesiastica de Capella Dni. Archiepi. liberata Dno. Roberto de Ellham apud Northwyc, A.D. m^{cc} nonages. liij.

This is an inventory of Abp. Winchelsey's "chapel," which accompanied him in his visitations. The great silver cross, the pastoral staff, the mitre, gloves, ring, vestments, and books, together with a sumpter horse (summarius) to carry all the articles, are included in the list. As a rule one single article of each kind was taken, but of some of the lighter vestments two or three are found. Some of the articles had historical as well as intrinsic value; thus the crozier and mitre had belonged to Abp. Peckham, a cope to Abp. Kilwardby, an alb, stole, and maniple were the gift of Queen Eleanor, and a chasuble, tunic, and dalmatic had once been owned by Abp. Living (Æthelstan), who lived before the Norman Conquest.

A royal proclamation narrates at great length the King's account of the disputes between himself and the Earl of Hereford and the Earl Marshal. After claiming credit for the purity of his own intentions he explains that this narrative is written: "kar akunes 'geutz purreint dire e fere entendre al peple akune 'paroles non verreyes, des queles le mesme peple porreient estre meuz de eus porter envers lur seigneur 'lige autrement ke fere ne dussent Le 'Roy sur ceo veni ke tuz en sachent la verite 'laquelle sensuyt.' If then relates how "grant 'partie de geutz dames dengleterre, les uns par priere 'les autres par sonnoise du Roy, vindrent a Landres," how, for the marshalling of the troops, he appointed a muster at St. Paul's, where the armed multitude were ordered to meet the Earls; and how, the same evening, the Earls sent a "bille," by the hands of Sir Robert Esturay, protesting against being thus forced to enter upon the performance of the duties of their offices, which they did not mean to do, and asking the King to entrust the duties to some other officer of his household. The King adds: "Et le Roy rescue la dite bille e eu 'conseil sur ceo, pour ceo kil ly sembla kil avient 'meyns aviscement maunde, e ne voleit mie kil en 'feussent surpris, envoya a eux Mons. Geoffrey de Geynvill, Mons. Thom. de Berkleye, Mons. Jon Tregoz le Constable de la Tour, le Gardeyn de "Lundres, Mons. Roger Brabason, e Mons. Willame "de Bereford, pur euz meuz aviser sur ceo, e kil purveissent en teu maner kil ne faissent chose ke put "torner en prejudice du Roy, ne de lur estat demaigne. "E si autrement ne se vouissent aviser, ke lors, lur "fust demande si il avoient la dite bille e les paroles "ilokes conteneues; les queles il avoient, tut outre. "E kant cest avoement fu reporte au Roy, il eu sur ceo "conseil, mist en luy le comte de Hereford, Constable, "Mons. Thom. de Berkeleye, e en luy le Comte Mare- "schall Mons. Geffray de Geynvill, pur ceo ke les ditz "contes avoient requis ke le Roy comandast a autres, "si com il est contenuz en la dite bille." Then the Earls left London, but, by the intervention of Abp. Winchelsey, a meeting was arranged to take place at Waltham; when the Abp. and the Bps. went thither the Earls did not appear, but they sent Fitz-Roger and Segrave to say "kil ny pureient venir adunkz par "akunes resons." The story is then told of a safe-conduct given to the Earls in order to induce them to come to the King at St. Alban's, of which they did not take advantage, for they would hold no communication with him. The King complains that a false report had been spread, which averred that the Earls had proposed to him certain articles for the common profit of the Realm.—"Ore put estre ke akune genz unt fet en "tendant al peple ke les cuntes mostreront au Roy "certein articles pur le commun profite du peple "e du realme e ke le Rey deit aver seuse, "de quey le Rey ne fet riens." The articles are, nevertheless, discussed one by one, and it is argued that the King's acts, of which complaint was made, were all prompted by motives of patriotism. To the chief of all the articles: "pur aver le confortement de la Graunte "Chartre des franchises de Engleterre e de la Chartre de "la Forest," the King assents readily, on the condition, "sy ly graunterent un commun donn, tel com ly est "mut besoignable en poynt de ore." From the completeness of this short history it must be inferred that it was drawn up shortly after the middle of July, A.D. 1297, when the events occurred. This document is interesting as being a contemporary MS. account of the transactions of a week of events as momentous as any which have directed the current of English History. References to this narrative occur in the text-books, and a copy is to be found in Henningburgh's Annals. The last clause must have been extorted from so proud a King by pressing necessities; it reads: "E prie le Roy "tote les bone gentz de son realme ke, pur ceo ke il "al honour de Dieu, e de luy, e de eux, e du realme, e "pur pardurable pes, e pur mettre en bon estat son "realme, ad enpris ceo veiage a fere, e il ad graunt "affiance ke les bone priores de ces bone gentz ly purront mut ayder e valer a mettre ceste besoigne a bone "syn, kil voillent prier, e fere prier, entivement pur "luy, e pur ceus ky ovesk ly vont."

Writ, Edw. I., Chilton, 22nd July 1299.

" " Westm., 30th March 1300.

This, addressed to the Sheriff of Kent, orders that three knights, or other legal and discreet men of the county, shall be elected "by common consent" (de vestro communi assensu), to appear in a Parliament at York on the morrow of Ascension Day for the purpose of witnessing a final confirmation of the charters.

Writ, Edw. I., Blidam, 27 Jan. 1300.

The sheriff is commanded to see that all who owe the King military service shall meet him at Carlisle on St. John Baptist's Day, for the invasion of Scotland. For furnishing supplies, it is added, "preterea volumus, et "fibi precipimus, quod de bobus, porcis, et multonibus "vinis, necnon gallinis, pullis, ovis, casco, et aliis hiis "victualibus, interim providendis; et ea omnia usque "Karliolum, contra adventum nostrum, venire facias."

A corrody in Christ Church, lodging, food, and clothing, is conferred by Edward I. upon W. de Alba Nolete, "venatorem, una cum garcione sua."

Writ, Edw. I., Westm., 26 March 1300. Pollards and crocards, which by a previous proclamation the King had allowed to pass for half their nominal value, "ita, "viz, quod duo recipientur pro uno sterlingo," are by this writ utterly to be suppressed.

Proclamation, Edw. I., Graham, 20th Jan. 1300.

Writ, Edw. I., Carlisle, 3rd Nov. 1300.

Proclamation, Edw. I., Windsor, 28th January 1300.—These all relate to the circulation of Pollards, Crocards, and other foreign tokens.

Billa liberata prelati et proceribus ex parte Dni. Regis, in Parlamento suo Lincolnie, in octabis Sci. Hillarii, A.D. mccc., regni regis E. xxix.

Billa prelaturum et procerum regni liberata Dno. Regi ex parte totius communitatis in Parlamento Lincoln, anno supradicto.

The second of these titles heads the twelve articles, praying for reforms, presented to the King in the parliament of Lincoln in Jan. 1301, not, as the title has it, in 1300. The first title heads the King's answer, given at full length in the original French, and ending with the salvo, "issint qe sauve soit le serment le Roy, "e le lur endroit de la couronne."

Preposita ex parte Archiep. Caut. in scriptis coram Papa de mandato suo contra abbatem et conventum Sci. Augustini, xvi. kl. Feb., A.D. m^occc^o.

In this Abp. Winchelsey protests against the exemption from episcopal jurisdiction which Boniface VIII. gave to St. Augustine's. He pleads that it was obtained by fraud and misrepresentation; that the Pope's Bull professed only to be a confirmation of an ancient exemption, which, the Abp. says, never existed. Other papers relating to the same subject occupy several pages of the register.

De deposito ducentarum librarum decime. 1301.

Many instruments occur here relating to the tenth collected for the Holy Land. Two hundred pounds were given to the prior of Ch. Ch. for safe-keeping, and the withdrawal of that sum from his custody caused much correspondence.

Bulla de Translacione Sci. Lodowyci Regis Francie.

Boniface VIII., after a long biography of Louis IX. beginning at his early boyhood, recites and approves the narratives of some miracles worked by him, he congratulates the Royal House of France upon their kinship to such a king, and the people on the lustre his sanctity lends to their land, and at last, these details filling several pages of close writing, he announces: "Nos de "sanctitate vite, et miraculorum veritate, ipsius "beatissimi Lodowyci, curiose ac solempnis inquisitionis diligencia, . . . certitudinem optinentes: "Ipsum, de communi fratum nostrorum, et prelaturum "omnium, tunc apud Sedem Apostolicam existentium, "consilio et assensu, die Dominica iii^a idus Augusti "(1297), Sanctorum Cathalogi duximus ascribendum." Pilgrims visiting the new tomb at the Festival of the Translation in years to come are awarded a remission of a year and forty days "de iniunctis sibi penitentiis"; whilst to those who pay their devotions there at any other time only forty days of indulgence are granted.

Bulla Archiep. Cant. pro Scottis.

Bulla Regi Anglie pro Scottis.

Boniface VIII., hearing of the great oppression of the Scots by the agents of the King of England, informs the Abp. and the King, in two distinct instruments, that, to end the war, "negocium ad decisionem et determinationem sedis Apostolicę reduciamus, et eciam reservamus, ac decernimus irritum et inane si secus, scienter vel ignoranter, a quocunque in hac parte contigit "attemptari. Dat. Anagnine iv. kl. Julii. Anno r^o," 27 June 1299.

De capa Abbatis de Langedon.

In this letter, addressed by the Abp. to his commissary, the latter is required to demand from the Abbot of Langedon the customary gift of a cope for use in the choir of Ch. Ch., which all prelates receiving benediction there were bound to offer.

De procreatione Epi. Spoletani Nuncii Dni. Pape. A demand for procurations made in 1301.

Provocacio Dni. Archiepi. contra execucionem ecclesie de Pagham.

During the vacancy of the see the king had presented his clerk to the church of Pagham, an act which Robert Winchelsey, when he became Abp., resisted with all the force of law; hence several provocations, &c.

Bulla decime in subsidium Romane Ecclesie imposita.

The Bull by which Boniface VIII. imposed a tax of a tenth upon the clergy of England for three years, 26 Feb. 1301. Other papers, relating to the method by which the tenth was to be collected, and to the appointment of the Abbot of Faversham to the office of collector for the diocese of Canterbury, are copied in this part of the register.

Execucio contra Dm. Roberti de Burgheshe pro incarceratione Abbatis de Faversham.

A mandate from Abp. Winchelsey requiring the archdeacon of Cant. to cite Sir Robert to answer for his offence. February 1301.

Aggravacio sentencie contra eundem.

The offender, having taken no notice of the citation, incurs the sentence of the greater excommunication, March 1301.

Sentencia excommunicationis contra John de Lewes et alios presbyteros. 3rd March 1301.

Abp. Winchelsey denounces sentence of excommunication against certain priests who have celebrated in churches interdicted by him.

De quinta decima temporalium taxanda.

Edward I. explains that in collecting the fifteenth granted by parliament, goods merely spiritual are to be exempted. Roxburgh, 9th Feb. 1302.

Citacio prelaturum et cleri Francie coram papa. 5th Dec. 1301.

Suspensio gratiarum et indulgenciarum concessarum Regi Francie per Sedem Apostolicam. 5 Dec. 1301.

Bulla de subiectione Regis Francie curie Romane.

These three papers mark steps in the bitter struggle between Boniface VIII. and Philip IV. backed by his, more Gallican than Roman, clergy. The last of the three is contemptuously brief, and contrasts with this pope's usual verbosity. "Bonifacius Eps., servus servorum Dei, filio suo Philippo Regi Francie, &c. Scire "te volumus quod in spiritualibus et temporalibus nobis "subes. Beneficiorum vel prebendarum ad te collacio "nulla spectat, et si aliquorum vacancium custodiam "habes, usus et fructus eorum successoribus rescres, et "si qua contalisti, collacionem hujusmodi . . . revocamus, aliud credentes hereticos reputamus."

De Convocacione cleri apud Novum Templum Lond. in crastino Asencionis Domini. Anno Dni. mccc. secundo.

Abp. Winchelsey cites the prior personally, and the chapter by one proctor, to attend a Convocation of the clergy at the time and place above named, "efficaciter "tractaturi et ordinaturi quid ad honorem Dei et "reformationem status ecclesie . . . sit agendum." 18th April 1302.

De sepultura et oblationibus Roberti le Boursier interfecti juxta Newentone.

Abp. Winchelsey relates how, "nuper quidam Robertus dictus Boursier peregre proficissens juxta villam "de Newentone, per quendam Sathane satellitem interemptus fuisse, et in via publica postmodum vili "traditus sepulture; non post multum temporis intervallum, at publice referabatur, tot circa sepulchrum "ipsius defuncti signa et prodigia prodire, de quibus "non est nostrum diffinire, quod nonnulli ex devocione "ad locum predictum confluisse incepterunt et adhuc "pro veneratione divini numinis, sicut credimus, confluisse non desistunt." The place of burial was inconvenient, and therefore the Abp. ordered that the body should be transferred to the churchyard of the parish in which the murder took place. As there was some doubt on this point, the Abp. himself visited the spot and held an inquisition, by which it was decided that the death took place in the parish of Hartlip, and to that churchyard he ordered the corpse to be carried. Again two difficulties arose, first, the Vicar of Hartlip refused to receive it, and, next, some of the men of Hartlip had already removed it to another grave, by the roadside, in the parish of Newington. Under those circumstances it was decided that the final interment should take place in Newington churchyard, and that the vicar there should have any credit and profits that might arise therefrom. There are many points in this story which resemble the incidents in the legend of St. William of Perth, who is buried at Rochester.

Excusacio Prelaturum Francie—Littera directa per communitatem cleri regni Francie cardinalibus et summo pontifici.

Responsum Pape ad excusacionem prelaturum Francie, &c.

These are copies of the remonstrance of the French bishops, and of the pope's angry answer, dated in 1297. The documents will be recognised by the pope's description of Peter Flotte:—"Beliall ille Petrus "Flote, semiviridis corpore, menti totaliter excecatus."

Inhibicio Officialis Curie Cantuar.

This is merely a formal paper in a suit concerning tithes at Ifeld. The Rector of Northfleet sued the Abbess of Malling, and the Prior of Ch. Ch. was judge in the cause; so that when this was moved by appeal into the Court of Arches, the prior, as a matter of form, was inhibited from proceeding in the matter.

Bulla de corporibus defunctorum non eviscerandis vel membris separandis.

Boniface VIII. forbids a peculiar practice of embalming persons who die at a distance from their homes. He thus explains the process to which he objects:—"corpus, "ex quodam impie pietatis affectu truculenter exviscerant, ac idem membratim vel in frusta inhumaniter "concidentes, subsequenter aquis immersa, exponunt "ignibus dequoquendum, et tandem ab ossibus tegn-

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

"mento carnis excusso idem ad partes predictas (in patriam propriam) mittunt tumulandum; quod non solum divine majestatis conspectui abominabile plurimum redditur, set, et, humane considerationis obtentibus occurrat vehementius abhorrendum."

Breve de vi laicali in ecclesiis amovenda. Westm. 14th Aug. 1302.

The Sheriff of Kent is required to put the chapter of Ch. Ch. again into possession of all the (named) lands and benefices, from which they had been expelled when the King seized the possessions of the monastery five years before.

Ordinacio prelatorum et cleri Anglie contra violatores libertatum et invasores bonorum ecclesiasticorum.

Abp. Winchelsey, writing to his commissary, sums up the penalties denounced against enemies of the church in two convocations of the clergy: one held at Hilary-tide in 1296, the other (apud Novum Templum) at Midsummer last past, that is in 1298. The general denunciation of invaders of the rights of the church, who were declared excommunicate ipso facto, was made at the first council by the Abps., the Bps. "nobis in pontificibus libus assistentes." At the second convocation the Prince, with consent of the King's council, re-affirmed the denunciations, and confirmed the charters, the King himself being "in partibus transmarinis." Orders were given that copies of the charters should be sent to all cathedral churches, where they were to be read "in the vulgar tongue, so that every one might understand their import, twice in the year." The denunciations of particular offenders were entrusted first to the bishops, and then extended to inferior prelates, and even to the vicars of parish churches, who, however, were bound to communicate with their bishop at the first opportunity after they had pronounced the sentence. The same sentence was incurred by all who laid violent hands upon ecclesiastics, although, or rather especially, if they acted by virtue of a warrant issued by a secular authority. On his own authority the Abp. adds that the "processiones sollempnes et orationum suffragia que pro statu Terre Sancte, et pace ac tranquillitate et prosperitate ecclesie, Regis, et regni, dudum salutriter ordinavimus . . . negligenter, et andivimus, ommissa sunt." He therefore orders that they shall be more diligently performed. At the King's request, as appears in the manifesto already noticed in this report, prayers were demanded "pro eo et suis in expedicione presentium quam contra hostes ipsius et regni nuper assumpsit." Edward is here said to have asked for these intercessions "per nuncios suos," as if he were still abroad, and the result of the war yet impending, but the Abp.'s letter is dated 15th July 1298, three months after the King's return. It is not impossible that the clerk who copied the letter into the register made a mistake in the dates. Dat. apud Otteford, idus Julii, A. D. mcccxviii.

Breve inquisitionis etatis R. de Kirkeby. mcccxi.

John Kirkeby held land from the Prior at Hadleigh. At his death an inquest was held to ascertain the age of Roger his heir. It does not appear that this John was the same person with the King's Treasurer and Counsellor who died in 1290.

Nova statuta regni Francie pro guerra Flandrie. Philip IV. forbids his subjects to leave the kingdom without license, putting those who disobey out of his protection, "excludantur a fructu qui onera recusant." Horses and mules (mulos magnos et parvos) are declared to be contraband of war, as are also gold and silver.

Carta Regis E. de terris adquisitis post Statutum. Westm., 14 Nov. 1302.

This is an abstract of a charter containing a long list of lands and tenements acquired by the convent of Ch. Ch. since the passing of the statute "de religiosis," which are here amortized by the King's license.

Littera cautionaria de libro accomodato restituendo.

The borrower acknowledges that he has in his possession "Glossa Hostiensis in duobus voluminibus de precio xii. marcarum," and he, with two sureties, gives this bond as a pledge for their safe return.

De auxilio non faciendo ad filiam Regis maritandam de feodis militaribus que tenentur in puram et perpetuam elemosinam. Langley, 10th Feb. 1303.

De homine vinerato supervidendo si periculum mortis imminet, et de vinerato replegiando si vuleratus in notorio periculo non fuerit. Leutone, 9th April 1303.

This writ applies to a particular case, but it is drawn so as to imply that the principle is of general application.

Breve pro Archiepiscopo, de prisona capto vi et armis per ballivos Cant. infra Berthonam Priores et Conventus sibi deliberando. Guildford, 20th Jan. 1303.

This case of John Carter who, having killed a man within a manor of the convent, was arrested by the police of the city, is often alluded to in these registers.

Declaracio privilegii nove exemptionis Abbatis et Conventus Sci. Augustini Cant.

Bouiface VIII., at the petition of the Abbot, had granted to the convent complete immunity from episcopal jurisdiction, but, after remonstrances from Abp. Winchelsey, he in this explanation greatly modifies and restricts the exemption.

Sermo quem fecit Papa in puppico quam confirmavit Regem Romanorum.

This is the copy of the allocution of Boniface VIII. made on the occasion of his confirmation to Albert I. of the title of King of the Romans. After the speech of the Pope follows one made by a certain "clericus dicti Regis," who in his master's name made a complete recantation, and almost acknowledged that the dignity was confirmed by the Pope alone. The Pope's speech begins: "Scribitur in Genesio primo, fecit Deus duo luminaria magna, unum ut preesset diei, aliud ut preesset nocti. Et licet ista verba, secundum communem expositionem, possent ad diversas personas referri, nos tamen ad eandem personam referimus." Of Rudolph, Albert's father, and his good faith, he says, "dicere consequerunt in partibus illis, quod videntur aliquem suum promissum non tenere, dixerunt ipsi, 'Iste non est Rudolphus Rex Alenannie.'"

Littera de venacione concessa.

By this warrant, written in French, Will. de Broouse, Lord of the Honours of Goer and Brember, authorises his foresters in the Forest of St. Leonard's to deliver to the messenger of the Prior of Ch. Ch. eight deer "bons e gras." The warrant is dated from Canterbury on the morrow of St. Mark, 1303.

Breve de ecclesiis appropriatis Abbati et Conventui Sci. Augustini. West., 30th Nov. 1302.

The King who had, at the instance of Abp. Winchelsey, caused the convent of St. Augustine's to be despoiled of their church of Selling, now, upon further information, requires the sheriff to reinstate them.

Bulla de revocatione obligacionum, et juramentorum factorum in prejudicium Imperatoris. Anagni, 31 May 1303.

By this Boniface VIII. annuls all oaths and treaties by which the Emperor Albert I. was hampered at the time of his reconciliation with the Pope.

Forma ordinacionis pacis et confederacionis inite inter Reges Anglie et Francie.

This is a copy of the heads of the treaty of July 1303, sent up for the information of the sheriff of Kent.

Novum breve de transgressionibus factis in diversis locis. Dumerline, 6th Nov. 1603.

This writ, addressed to three of the King's Justices, tells an extraordinary story of an outrage upon Abp. Winchelsey and an official of his at some date not named. Some ruffians broke by night into the Abp.'s house at Canterbury, "ipse in eodem manso existente," and insulted and wounded his servants, carrying off some of his goods. Then without any notice in the writ there is a change of time and scene; Canterbury by night is hidden and Selling by day appears. The actors seem, though this is not certain, to be the same. Whoever they were they fell upon Robert Cristian, Dean of Ospringe, who was serving citations for the Abp., et "ipsum versus posteriora equi illius retroversum, et eandem ejusdam equi in manu sua, loco ferri, tenentem, equitate inhumaniter complerunt ipsum eciam sic equitatem per medium ejusdem ville de Selling, cantibus et choreis illudendo, duxerunt, et postea eandem illam et auriculas ac labia equi abiderunt, et ipsum Decanum in Intum sordidum proecerunt." Thus what at first appeared to be the beginning of a second Canterbury Martyrdom, ended in a piece of coarse and cruel horse-play.

Breve Regis de decima in subsidium Ecclesie Romane imposita de tercio anno levanda. Dumerline, 10th Dec. 1304.

Boniface VIII., having imposed a tax of the tenth upon ecclesiastical property, for the support of the Roman See, afterwards ceded the first moiety to the King of England, with the promise that the second moiety should also be given if he himself lived to the term appointed for its collection, or if the Sicilian war should

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

come to an end. Boniface died before the time arrived, but the King, nevertheless, in this writ addressed to the sub-collectors, reproves them for remissness in gathering the money, the whole of which he claims for himself.

Bulla Benedicti Pope XIⁱ de omnibus gratiis et provisionibus Bonifacii Pape VIIIⁱ revocatis. Lateran, 6th Nov. 1301.

Pope Benedict revokes and annuls all appointments made by his predecessor.

Confirmacio Hospitalis de Maydenstane. 1261.

Copy of an old charter by which Roger, Prior of Ch. Ch., assents to the foundation and endowment, by Abp. Boniface, of the hospital of Maidstone.

Littera Dni. Archiepi. monitoria pro rebus ecclesie restituendis. 1303.

The Abp. warns certain monks and others, who have obtained possession of ornaments and other goods belonging to the Church of Canterbury, that they must restore them to the prior at once.

Littera monitoria de minutis decimis non exigendis contra privilegium Sedis Apostolice, viz. "Non absque dolore."

The rector of Smarden has demanded small tithes from tenants of Ch. Ch. in defiance of the Bull known in the Convent by the title "Non absque dolore;" and the Abbot of Faversham, who has been appointed, by the Holy See, protector of Ch. Ch., warns him not to do so again.

Bulla de dedecate decime, in subsidium Ecclesie Romano impositæ, Dno. Regi Anglie concessæ.

The instrument by which Boniface VIII. gives to King Edward the first moiety of the tenth alluded to.

Breve de inquisitione de omnimodis incendiis et pacis perturbacionibus. Stirling, 26th May 1304.

The sheriff is to make inquisition as to the perpetrators of homicide and arson, which have been frequent in the county.

Breve de hominibus et tenentibus Archiepi. attachiatis in Cantuar. eidem Archiepo. deliberandis. Stirling, 1st June 1304.

Processus Dni. Benedicti Pope XIⁱ contra illos qui manus violentes iniecerunt in Dm. Bonifacium VIII^m.

This is a proclamation denouncing William de Norgaret and his fellows.

Bulla de dispensacione faciendâ.

This paper in the suit between Abp. Winchelsey and St. Augustine's Abbey contains a mandate from Benedict XI., requiring the Prior of Ch. Ch. to offer a pardon, tempered by penance, to rectors and vicars of churches in the patronage of the Abbey who, following the example of their patrons, have resisted the Abp.'s authority. They are to be dispensed for past offences, and warned to offend no more.

Littera de pensione magistri G. de Seo. Leofardo.

By this letter under the convent seal, an annual stipend of fifty marcs for life is conferred upon a canon of Wells, who, as proctor in the Curia for the convent, has done good service to the monastery. A mansio, sufficient for the habitation of the proctor and his familia, is awarded to him in the precincts of Ch. Ch., together with stables for his horses, and fuel for his kitchen and chamber. The date is A.D. 1286.

Breve de iudicio de recognicione debiti—facta secundum formam Statuti de Acton Burnel, de mercatoribus et eorum debitis levandis.

This writ, although it records an actual transaction, appears to be registered here for the sake of the formula.

Writ. Edw. I., Westm. 6th April 1305.

Littera executoria super condemnatione et sententia definitiva contra Hen. de Hollane parochianum de Westelyve.

In 1305 an important parishioner had withdrawn his attendance and his oblations from his own parish church, and carried them elsewhere. He was cited before the commissary by the Chapter of Ch. Ch., to whom the church was appropriated, and by this sentence was condemned, under pain of further penalties, to make up his arrears and to abstain from offending in future.

Littera supplicatoria Dno. Pape pro electo confirmando. Cantuar. 6th June 1305.

Edward I., addressing Clement V. as "B. Archiepo. Bardegalensi in Summo Pontifici electo," asks him to confirm William de Greenfeld as Abp. of York.

Commissio pro procuracione Epi. levandâ. Oct. 1305.

Concerning the procurations of a papal nuntius.

Breve de evasione clericorum liberatorum Ordinariorum. Wynton., 12th March 1306.

Convicted clerks given in charge to the Abp. had escaped.

Bulla de ratificacione confirmacionis Dni. R. de Baldok Epi. Lond.

Bishop Baldock's election by the Chapter of St. Paul's had, in the time of Benedict XI., been appealed against in the Curia by Peter de Dene, Canon of St. Paul's; in this Bulla Clement V. announces that the appeal has been withdrawn, and that he ratifies the election.

Littera de potestate faciendi tres Tabelliones.

This letter of request is addressed by the Prior of Ch. Ch. to Bassianus de Allayato of Milan, Count Palatine.

Forma dispensacionis cum clerico illegitime nato, et littera inquisitionis super eadem.

John de Brun, a priest, born from a marriage which was canonically incestuous, has his disability removed by Clement V.; he having made a journey to Rome to seek a dispensation.

Littera cautionis Dni. Regis de xxx^{ma} sibi concessa pro auxilio ad filium suum primogenitum militem faciendum; quod non cedat prelati[s] [et] proceribus et populo in prejudicium in futurum. Westm., 30th May 1306.

Bulla executoria de provisione annue pensionis. Clement V. requires the Abbot of St. Augustine's to provide John Pakere of Sandwich, clerk, with a pension of 15 marcs as compensation for a benefice to which they had failed to present him.

Breve de Statuto Wynton. observato et observando. Llanercoast, 7th Dec. 1306.

A letter in French acknowledges the receipt from the Prior of Ch. Ch. of 5*l.* for two tuns of French wine; being 4*l.* 1*s.* for "le primer coust des vins, e. iiii. sol." "pur la nef, e. xii. d. per un curar qe vint de Burdeans."

Donum Regis E. de Ducatu Aquitanie simpliciter. Wynton., 7th April 1306.

Littera directa Baronibus et aliis subjectis Aquitanie per Regem.

These relate to the Duchy which was conferred upon the Prince when he was knighted.

Potestas procuratoribus per Principem.

Robert de Burghersh and John de Burne are appointed to exercise the powers of Seneschals in the Duchy.

Execucio de procuracione Epi. Sabiniensis, Cardinalis, Nunci.

Execucio provisionis et collacionis Archidiaconatus Cantuar. tempore Dni. Pape Clementis V^o.

The Pope appoints Bernando de Ecii de Libreto, a foreigner and a boy under age, to the archdeaconry, he being already a canon of Bourdeaux. The Bishop of Lichfield and the Abbots of St. Augustine's and Waltham are deputed to see the collation carried into effect, and to overrule the expected opposition of the Abp. and of the Prior and Chapter of Ch. Ch.; a task which they perform with offensive zeal.

Ordinacio facta per Dm. Regem et totum consilium suum pro statu Ecclesie Anglicane in Parlamento apud Karliol in octabis Sci. Hillarii, anno regni Regis E. xxxv., viz. A.D. mcccvi^o.

This is the ordinance made at Carlisle, by the King's Council, for the purpose of checking the extortions practised by W. de Testa the Nuntius, to whom the Pope committed the administration of the archbishopric of Canterbury during the time of Archbishop Winchelsey's suspension. The second part of the date in the title, "viz. mcccvi^o," which is written in another hand, and with paler ink than the rest of the title, antedates the ordinances by a year.

Statutum Regis factum in parlamento apud Karliol, anno regni sui xxxv., viz. Anno Gracie mcccvi^o.

This statute, enacted at the same time with the Ordinance last mentioned, is directed against the imposition of taxes upon English monasteries by their foreign Abbots. It also, which is more important, forbids the carrying of money so collected out of the kingdom.

Execucio contra falsos predicatorum et Questuarios. 1307.

Littera Archiepi. contra falsos, &c. 1308.

In the first of these documents William de Testa, the administrator of the see of Cant., a "Sede Apostolica deputatus," and in the second Abp. Winchelsey after his return from exile, warn the suffragan bishops of the province that: "quidam, fingentes se collectores et receptores pecuniarum que Ecclesie Xpi. Cant., in qua corpus gloriosi Martiris Sci. Thome [requiescit]; pia devocione fideliem offerunt, pro nonnullis questus et falsos colores, colligunt et extorquent; licet ad hoc a nobis et dicta

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

"Ecclesia . . . nullam sufficientem penitus habeant potestatem."

Citacio Rectorum et Vicariorum pro sinodalibus et processionalibus subtractis. 1307.

The Commissary of Cant., referring to the ancient custom in accordance with which the beneficed clergy of the diocese were used to come with oblations in solemn procession to the cathedral at Whitsuntide, cites several rectors and vicars who have failed in these particulars.

Breve (Edw. II.) de bonis ecclesiasticis non taxandis ad xx^{am}. Dover, 18th Jan. 1308.

Commissio Dni. R. Archiepi. de coronacione Regis.

The Abp., from Poitou, deposes the Bp. of Winchester to crown the King. The original of this is among the Chart. Ant. Ecclesie. Xpi.

Bulla de revocatione suspensionis Dni. R[oberti] Archiepi. Feb. 1308.

Littera Pape Clementis V^{ti} Dno. Arepo. directa de eodem. Feb. 1308.

Revocacio commissionis facte Archiepo. Ebor. per Sedem Apostolicam pro coronacione Regis Edwardi filii Regis R. Feb. 1308.

Commissio (facta H. Priori Ecclesie. Xpi.) Vicario generali Dni. Archiepi. Cant. Feb. 1307 (ecclesiastical year).

Commissio Seneschalli (Arepi.).

Commissio Seneschalli libertatum.

These all mark steps in the recovery of his dignity by Abp. Winchelsey.

Breve Regis de custodia Honoris de Thonebregg. Westm., 6 June 1290.

The King takes the honour of Tonbridge into his own hand, warranting the Abp., from whom the Earl of Gloucester held it, from all damage.

De antiqua firma de Manerio de Terryng, xviii. li.

The Abp. received the 18l. of rent in money or produce at his choice. Under this title are set down the various articles: corn, cattle, poultry, eggs, &c., with the equivalent value of each.

Littera Dni. Regis directa Dno. Pape pro restitutione Archiepi. Cant.

Edward II. requests Clement V. to reinstate Abp. Winchelsey, whom he had suspended. He says that for his own part the Abp. "nobis non sit obnoxius," and that even his father before his death "injuriis quas dictus Dns. Archiepus. commiserat erga eum eodem indulserit, Salvatoris clemencia inspirante."

Carta Henrici Regis tercii de custodia de Tonebregg.

Carta Regis Edwardi de eodem. Westm., 6 June 1290.

Item de eodem. Senewhare, 18 June 1273.

Littera citacionis contra Executores Epi. Wynton. defuncti pro capta.

Littera citacionis Dni. R. Archiepi. Epo. Elyens pro capta chori solvenda.

Breve Justiciariis Wallarum de walla reparanda, et dampnis taxandis et reparandis. Westm., 23 Oct. 1274.

Bulla Hospitalariorum de subsidio Terre Sancte, et indulgentia concessa pro eodem.

Clement V., addressing the Abp. of Cant. and his suffragans, describes the capture of Acre and the miserable condition of the Christians in the Holy Land. He extols the valour and devotion of the knights of the Hospital, and, having taken counsel with the leaders of the order, proposes that an expedition under their command should pass over into Syria. He requires the Abp. and his clergy, regular and secular, to signify to their flocks, choosing especially times of confession, that money is required for this new crusade: and he empowers them to promise indulgences to all who contribute; the amount of penance remitted to be in exact proportion to the sums, large or small, contributed. Boxes are directed to be put up in prominent parts of all cathedral and parish churches for the reception of alms, care being taken to secure each box with three locks, the keys being entrusted to three separate persons. A form of prayer for the success of the expedition is concluded in the Bull.

Incipit: "Exurgat Deus et inimici, &c." Explicit: "Et vestre sollicitudinis studium palmam glorie, que causam Dei gerentibus pro digna retributione rependitur, mereatur." Dat. Poitiers, 13th Aug. 1307.

Bulla de dispensacione Clericorum pro subsidio Terre Sancte.

By this the Pope excused the clergy of Europe from contributions towards the expenses of the expedition which the Hospitallers contemplated in the next spring, advocated in the last mentioned Bull. 13 Aug. 1307.

Bulla de commutacione abstinentie et conjuslibet peregrinationis pro subsidio Terre Sancte. Dat. nt supra.

This title explains itself.

De feoditate Dni. H. Exon. Epi.

"Memor" quod . . . anno Dni. mccc nono . . . Walterus Exon. Epus. juravit et fecit feoditatem Dno. H. Priori Ecclesie Xpi. Cant., in aula Dni. Archiepi. . . . de terra quam tenet de eodem priore in Horsleigh."

Breve si sit ad dampnum. Edw. II., West., 8th Dec. 1310.

Littera Dni. Archiepi. contra violatores jurium et libertatum Ecclesie.

This relates to pretended patrons who attempt to intrude their nominees into churches in the patronage of Ch. Ch.

De cruce Ebor. non portanda London.

Item de eodem negotio.

Two letters, one written by Abp. Winchelsey, in remotis agens, and the other by the Prior of Ch. Ch., the Abps.' Vicar General, addressed to the Bp. of London. They say that it is reported that the Abp. of York intends to have his cross carried before him in London, whither he is summoned to attend Parliament. The Bp. is warned to prevent the Abp. displaying the cross, giving benediction, or performing any other pontifical act in the southern province; also, notice is to be given to the inhabitants of places where he halts that they are forbidden to ring the church bells, or to make any show "reverencie pontificalis" under pain of the greater excommunication.

Commissio Magri. R. de Ros ad recipiendum resignationem Electi Exon. de precentoria ejusdem Ecclesie. 24th Mar. 1307.

Walter Stapledon, the Bishop of Exeter elected, had at the time of his promotion filled the office of precentor, and this could only be resigned, sede Exon. vacante, into the hands of the Abp., who was at Rome, or his commissary.

De divorcio inter Hen. de Chikewelle et Aliciam uxorem ejus.

The husband claimed the lands of his wife which Walter de Langton, Bp. of Lichfield and formerly treasurer of Edward I., had given to some one who seems to have had no title to them. The husband asserting that there had been no divorce "celebrated" in the Abps' court, this writ was served on the commissary to cause him to confirm or refute the husband's statement.

Bulla de procuracione W. de Testa.

The Pope requires the clergy to tax themselves so far as to allow a stipend of seven shillings a day, besides his maintenance, to W. de Testa, the nuntius to whom the administration of the See of Cant. was entrusted during the suspension of Abp. Winchelsey.

Breve de Molendino de Lyden. Wigton, 7 Aug. 1310.

Breve de amerciamentis et cattalis dampnatorum et fugitivorum allocandis Archiepo et Ecclesie Xpi. Cant. Lulithgow (Lydyseu), 23 Oct. 1310.

Ordinacio facta in pleno Capitulo iiij. idus April. A.D. mccc. nono.

"Omnes mensure tam bladi quam brasii . . . sint minus assisi . . . secundum Standardum Regis. Nec licet alicui de cetero hujusmodi mensuras nec etiam justam cerevisie . . . nec pondera alicue augere vel minuire . . . sub pena inferius annotata."

The regulations for the measurement of corn, &c., which occur here and there in the registers, are given in this place in a complete form, and the "Mensura Lanfranci," which was larger than the King's standard, is superseded by the smaller measure; after having been used in the Convent for two centuries.

Bulla de accusantibus Bonificium papam V^{to} non audiendis.

When Clement V. caused Apostolic letters to be written putting to silence the detractors of his penultimate predecessor Boniface VIIIth, the letters were so carelessly drawn that they did not indicate to which of the eight deceased Bonifaces they were intended to refer; it was therefore decided that this Bulla should be drawn up to explain the former. From the title it might be inferred that the Bull had really, in Ch. Ch., been supposed to relate to a Pope of the 7th century.

Breve de exclusio de Menesse reparanda. Berwick. 22 Nov. 1310.

This, at first sight, incomprehensible title refers to a sluice at Worth Minnis.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

Carta Regis Johannis de personis ecclesiasticis pro nullo delicto ntelegandis. Anno suo xv^{mo}.
Carta Regis Johannis de clericis pro quocunque crimine incarcerationis Archiepo. Cant. liberandis quandocumque per ipsum fuerint requisiti.

Littera Arepi. (Roberti) ad tractandum malefactorum.

The Abp., quoting the anathema of St. Thomas and the provisions of the council of Oxford denouncing abstractors of church goods, requires the Dean of Rochester to cite John de Hanysewh who detains two horses belonging to the Prior of Ch. Ch. 1311.

Littera Epi. Menevensis de gracia Magri. R. de Haute, Rectoris ecclesie de Westerham, sedibus Cant. et Menev. vacantibus. 1312.

The Bishop retains Haute as his standing counsel at a salary of five marks, to be continued until a benefice can be provided for him in Wales.

Littera prelatorum Anglie Dno. Pape directa pro recommendatione Universitatis Oxon. Dat. London. in concilio provinciali, A.D. mcccxi.

The Bishops in council assembled ask the Pope to assist in promoting the welfare of the University, "que a diebus antiquis pane vite et intellectu esurientes," "cibavit, et potavit scientes aqua sapientie salutaris," "et que inter lucernas Ecclesie Anglicane velud sidus irradiat matutinum."

Bulla de cassacione ordinis Milicie Templi. 6 May 1312.

By this instrument Clement V., in accordance with an ordinance of the Council of Vienne, declares the order dissolved, and directs that the members, under the supervision of provincial councils, shall be distributed in monasteries of the established orders, care being taken that only a few are placed in each house. He does not touch upon the disposal of the property of the order.

Bulla de pace tractanda inter Regem Anglie et proceres regni. Dat. in priuato de Gransello prope Malav[er]sanam in Vasconiciensi diocesi. 25 May 1313.

The Pope appoints Arnald Card. of St. Prisca and Arnald Bp. of Palestrina to be his nuntii for the purpose of mediating between the King and his nobles. These Apostolic letters are addressed to the latter.

Littera testimonialis de peregrino.

This is the blank form of the certificate which the devout obtained as an abiding proof that they had accomplished the Canterbury pilgrimage. It reads thus: "Universis pateat per presentes, quod quarto die mensis Novembris, anno Dni. mccc. duodecimo, N. de L. ad Ecclesiam Cantuar. causa peregrinationis, ut dicebat, accessit, et limina Beati Thome martiris et alia ejusdem ecclesie sanctuariorum personaliter visitavit. Et hec, omnibus quorum interest, nos, Hen. permissione divina Prior Ecclesie Xpi. Cant. predicte, tenore presencium, intimamus. In cujus rei testimonium has litteras nostras, sigillo nostro munitas, fieri fecimus patentes. Dat. Cant., &c."

Breve quod iusticiarii reddant iudicium de molen-dino de Lyden. Berwick, 20 April 1311.

Breve de eodem.

Inquisicio de eodem. March 1311.

Inquisicio de stallis de Burgate in Cantuar. Mich^l, 1312.

The tenants of the priory had converted their houses into shops facing the city market, to the damage, as was alleged, of the dealers frequenting it.

Nova carta Quinque Portuum de confirmacione libertatum suarum.

Nova carta Baronum de Sandwyco de custodia orphanorum, &c. in portum predictum. Westm., 15 Feb. 1290.

Confirmacio Cartarum libertatum Quinque Portuum. Westm., 26th July 1313.

Three instruments in which Edward II. recites and approves his father's acts.

Breve de summonicione Itineris. 1313.

J. Morant and W. de Cleydone, "Custodes Archiepi- scopatus Cant.," transmit to the bailiffs of the convent the writ which they have received from the sheriff summoning them to meet the Justices itinerant.

Littera Dni. Comitiss Gloucestrie de bonis nostris de Merstham salvandis, 1313.

Gilbert de Clare, having bought all the cattle and corn on the manor of the convent of Ch. Ch. at Merstham for the sustenance of his house at Blotchingley, warns the King's officers not to take any of them on any pretence.

Bulla de decima sexannali de tempore Clementis Pape Vⁱ. Avignon, 1 Dec. 1312.

It tells how the tenth for the Holy Land imposed for six years at the Council of Vienne was to be collected.

Bulla de torneamentis et iustis prohibitis. Paris, 10th Oct. 1312.

Tournaments are forbidden by an Act of the Council of Vienne; not so much because they are in themselves immoral, as because they cause a waste of life and money which ought to be employed in the crusade—which did not take place.

Littera Comitiss Bolonie de acquietancia Dni. (Roberti) Archiepi. Cant. pro applicatione et trans- itu ejusdem apud Whytsand. Easter 1306.

Littera de convocacione Cleri apud Westm. in crastino Ascensionis Dni. anno, mcccxiv.

Abp. Walter transmits to the prior a writ of the King asking for a subsidy from the clergy towards the Scottish war. The summons was unusual in form, and the clergy of the diocese of Cant. objected to it in twelve articles. To these the Abp. replied on the 6th June, urging that the clergy should grant the subsidy "necessitate urgente."

Bulla de absolucione Petri de Gavaston ad cantelam. Avignon, 26 April 1309.

The Abp. and clergy of England have, as the Pope asserts, excommunicated and exiled Piers Gaveston in haste, and without giving him an opportunity of defending himself; he therefore requires them to withdraw their sentence until his nuntius, Hugh Gerald, precentor of Perigord, shall have inquired into the affair.

Confirmacio Regis E. filii Regis E. super ordina- cione Henrici de Bathon de marisco de Romenal.

This and other documents here copied deal with the embanking of Romney Marsh from the time of Henry III.

Littera Dni. Walteri Archiepi. de Parlamento apud Westm. in octab. Sci. Hillarii, anno regni Regis octavo. 1 Dec. 1314.

The writ calling on the prior to appear personally and the chapter by two proctors.

Protestacio Cleri contra formam citationis pre- dicte.

Consensus Cleri de subsidio Dno. Regi faciendo sub condicionibus infrascriptis.

The clergy, as in the previous year, objected to the terms of the writ by which they were summoned, but were persuaded to grant the subsidy with reservations as set forth in seven articles.

Littera citationis Prepositi de Wyngham pro Dno. Vitali de Testa. 13 Mar. 1314.

The provost is cited to a visitation which Prior Eastry, by authority of Guillelmus tt. Sci. Ciriaci in Thermis Presb. Card., intends to make of the College of Wyngham. The citation is written so briefly that it conveys no idea what was the connexion between the College and De Testa, and is chiefly taken up with the Prior's protest against his being thus employed; ancient papal privileges exempting the Prior of Ch. Ch. from the duty of acting as Judge Delegate.

Prohibicio Dni. E. Regis filii Regis E. facta Archiepo. Ebor. pro Archiepo. Cantuar. de baja- lacione crucis sue in Provincia Ebor. Ebor., 3 Sept. 1314.

The King tells the Abp. of York that he has summoned a Parliament to be held at York on the morrow of Christmas, and that he hears that the Abp. has made great preparations to hinder the Abp. of Cant. from entering the province with his cross carried before him. Under these circumstances the southern Abp. hesitates to attend the Parliament, his absence from which would much weaken the King's Council. Hence the King enjoins upon the Abp. of York that he in no wise molest the Abp. of Cant., but receive him with honour, and allow him to be accompanied by all the accustomed ensigns of his dignity. At the same time, letters of similar import were sent to the Dean and Chapter of York, and to Thomas Earl of Lancaster, to Earl Warrene, to Henry Percy, to the Mayor and bailiffs of York, and to the sheriff of York.

Littera Dni. Walteri Archiepi. pro processioneibus faciendis pro negotiis regni et aeris serenitate.

The year having been marked by political troubles and by weather destructive to the crops, the Abp. orders that "faciat sollemnes, cum pulsacione cani- panarum, processiones, et decantacionem soliam" "Letanie, cum missa sollempni ad id congrua ut Clerus et Populus ad expiationem excessuum et devocionem congruam, per oraciones, jejunia, cleme- sinas, et alia caritatis opera, extentur; et ira Dei per humanam denervetur ut timetur accensa hiis plac-

"bilibus hostiis mitigeur." Dat. Lambeth, 14 July 1315.

Novum statutum Regis de numero ferculorum in mensa, et de nunciis et ystrionibus non recipiendis ad mensam. Langley, 6th Aug. 1315.

The King regulates the number of courses which shall be served at the tables of his nobles and churchmen, and prescribes simplicity in the entertainments.

Breve de Assisa vini vendendi.

Indentura de mitra et baculo pastorali cedrino Dni. Johannis Archiepi. et rubeo vestimento Dni. Roberti Archiepi. liberatis Dno. Waltero nunc Archiepo. per litteras suam superscriptam.

Abp. Walter, writing from "Bocton in itinere hac die Sci. Jeronimi," asks the Prior to lend him "mitram preciosam, ac baculum pastoralium, neonem et vestimentum integrum de samito rubeo, brudatum desuper ramunculis arborum, quorum baculi et mitre bone memorie Johannes similiter et vestimenti Robertus predecessores nostri . . . successores suis usum legavit." The request was complied with, the Abp.'s clerk and messenger giving an indented receipt, and lastly there comes the memorandum, "Postea predicta omnia restituta fuerunt Duo. R. de Dovor Sacriste."

Littera (summonitio) Dni. Walteri Archiepi. pro Parlamento Lincoln. Anno mcccv.

Commissio ad eligendum de qualibet villa unum peditem pro guerra Socie. Langley, 26 March 1316.

Informacio super commissione predicta.

The commission, which is more fully explained by the informatio, was issued by the authority of the Parliament held at Lincoln at Hilary-tide 1315(?)

Citacio de processione pentecostali Rectorum Ecclesiarum Dovor. subtracta. June 1316.

De processionibus et oracionibus faciendis pro pace et postilencia.

The Abp. of Cant. addressing the bishops of his province requires them to again offer prayers and perform religious rites such as were usual in times of distress. He gives a harrowing description of the state of the land: "Sane regnum Anglie, quod frugum habundancia ultra cetera regna per mundi climata diffusa, quodque pro ceteris regnis pacis pulcritudine ab olim gaudere consuevit, propter aeris intemperiem aut tantam famis miseriam, tantarumque dissensionis et discordie necnon inimicorum insidancium captivitatem . . . est deductum, quod ejusdem regni populus, deficientibus alimentis, et annona tam subtracta, compellitur miserabiliter mendicare, ipsiusque populi pars non modica per famis miseriam cruciata prout, prodolor, sic necata, et pacis quietudine porsus exulata," &c.

Motiva Capituli Ecclesie Xpi. Cant. contra novam ordinationem factam de Ecclesia de Reculver.

The motion recites that in the days of Abps. Kilwardby and Peckham sundry salutary ordinances were made for the government and privileges of the Church of Reculver, which was appropriated to the maintenance of the Abp.'s table, these rules being adopted with the consent of the chapter, asked for and granted. Some new ordinances have been made, the consent of the chapter not being asked for, and against these, six articles are objected.

Anathematizacio facta in Ecclesia Xpi. Cant. per Dm. Robertum Wynchelosey Arepm. pontificalibus indutum die Dominica infra octabas Nativitatis Beate Marie A.D. mcccv., presentibus Dno. Aniano Bangor. Epo. pontificalibus induto, ac et Priore et Conventu sacris vestibus indutis, et Priore Sci. Gregorii et omnibus Rectoribus et Vicariis et Presbyteris parochialibus civitatis Cantuar. superpellicis indutis; Prelatis cereis, et aliis candelas accensis in manibus suis tenentibus.

This is the speech and formula of malediction employed by Abp. Winchelsey when he, in accordance with the constitution of Otto and Otobon, solemnly, and generally, cursed all who abstracted the goods of the Church, or assailed its liberties.

Nova ordinacio Regis facta A.D. mcccvii. de blado, equis, vel aliis bonis non capiendis.

Protects the cattle and farm produce, both of clergy and laity, against the purveyors of the royal household.

Bulla Johannis Pape XXII. de trengis inter Regem Anglie et Robertum de Buys gerentem se pro Rege Socie. Arignon, 1st May 1317.

John XXII. "ex plenitudine potestatis" proclaims (indicit) a truce to last for two years, with a view to a permanent peace. He absolves the vassals on each side from any oaths by which they are bound to continue the war, and repeals any papal indulgence by which either party may have been promised immunity from excommunication, a privilege which would have deprived him of much of his coercive power.

Littera Dni. Archiepi. de justis prohibendis. 4 Sept. 1318.

The Abp. addressing the prior of Ch. Ch. writes: "Quidam milites, veneno invidie et rancoris ac odii successi fomite, sature zizanie procurante, justas, ex conducto, a sacris canonibus sub penis gravissimis interdictis, apud Sydingbourne facere noviter ordinauerunt; unde necesse hominum, et animarum solent pericula pervenire, et, quod summe timendum existit, regit turbacio intrinseca, que jam diu invaluit, et per Dei misericordiam creditur nunc sedari, posset, quod absit, materiam recidivi discriminis provocare." The prior is required to announce that all who assist the jousts by their presence, by the loan of arms, or by the gift of money, will be subject to the sentence of the greater excommunication, to be removed by the Pope alone.

Breve Regis pro xl. hominibus armatis de civitate Cant. mittendis in auxilium Dni. Regis contra Scottos, A.D. mcccixv., Nottingham, 12 Aug. This is addressed to the bailiffs of the city of Cant., and does not concern the convent of Ch. Ch.

Peticio pro vinis Francie.

The prior asks the Queen of England to obtain the arrears of the wine of St. Thomas: "les arrearages de . . . j. anns passez de les vins qe le Roy Lovys jadis dona a Saint Thomas a Poicy e a Triel . . . par ses lettres a la Roine de France e a Mounseigneur Charles qe il voillent estre aidantz e conseilantz au procurateurs les ditz Priour et Convent."

Breve pro Priore et de Conventu de ordinacione Prioris Dovor. Sens, 12 Aug. 1287.

Littera Dni. R. de Hengham de placito advocacionis Prioratus Sci. Martini, Dovor. 1287.

Breve de execucione judicii pro Duo. Archiepo. redditu, de advocacione Prioratus Dovor. Blankford, 11 Jan. 1287.

Staurum dimissum in Archiepatu. Cant. post Dm. R. de Kylwybar quondam Arepm. Cant., A.D. mcccxxvii.

An inventory of the stotti, boves, and carectarii founs, or the several manors of the Archbishopric after the death of A. p. Robert. They amounted to 46 cart-horses, 212 young cattle, and 414 oxen. The horses were valued at 9s. each, the stirks at 2s. 6d., and the oxen at 10s.

Liberacio facta Dno. Waltero Archiepo. Cant. per Dm. Steph. de Gravesend, London. Epm., in festo consecrationis ejusdem Epi. die Dominica, viz., xix Kal. Feb., A.D. mcccxxvii.

Besides a whole carcass of an ox, another of a pig, and another of a calf, 24 rabbits, 36 capons, 50 water fowl, and 200 larks, with six barrels of best wine, and 36 of commoner for the clerks, were provided; also large numbers of wax torches and tapers, and of candles, together with food for the horses; and for the dressing-room three new towels, each of three yards; 27 yards of white linen, and 16 of canvas. 20 marcs which, the Bp. assigned for distribution among the Abps.' servants, did not come to hand: "sed non fuerunt solute," is the note added in a firm hand and in very black ink.

Breve de obediencia Monachorum Dovor. Kirkham, 9th Apl. 1284.

Ad istud breve sic responsum fuit.

Littera comitis Lancastrie de miraculis Dni. Roberti Archiepi.

Earl Thomas, a ready patron of the monastery, had been asked to intercede with the Pope for the canonization of Abp. Winchelsey, whose sufferings at the hand of Edward I. had rendered him very popular with the liberal politicians of his day. The Earl naturally writes, and this is the second time that he has asked for information on the same subject: "Sires nous vous prions, come avamnt ces heures nous avons prie, qe vous voillez tesmoigner, par voie notoire et par voz lettres patentes, queux miracles Dieux oeuvre pur l'ercesse Robert de Canturbire qd darrein feust, et ad oever; pur ly ausi bien en sa vie come apres sa mort. Et les miracles qe mendent en escript deuant sa tombe," &c.

Carta Dni. Walteri Arepi. de finibus et exitibus hominum suorum habendis ad vitam suam.

This is a King's writ (dated Ely, 7th April 1314) giving to the Abp. the fines and americiations of his tenants, which were usually the perquisites of the crown.

Bulla Johannis Pape XXII. directa Waltero Archiepo. Cant. et aliis sex Episcopis sub eodem tenore pro statu Ecclesie. Avignon, 1st Aug. 1317. He bewails the condition of the church in England and addressing the Abp., he hopes that "verbum Dei in ore tuo, quod alligatum esse non expedit . . . specialiter carissimum in Xpo. filium nostrum Edwardum . . . ad viam veritatis et justicie . . . reducat."

Bulla J. Pape XXII. de decima annuali Dno. Regi Anglie concessa ad instantiam prelatorum Provincie Cant. Avignon, 29 May 1319. The Pope ratifies the concession, at the petition of the clergy.

Littera Walteri Archiepi. pro obolo de qualibet marca levando et colligendo ad opus Universitatis Oxon. Lambeth, 8 Aug. 1319.

The Abp. informs his commissary, with directions to take the steps necessarily consequent on the information, that when the clergy in convocation, at Easter last past, granted help to the King for his Scottish war, they also unanimously agreed that the collectors of the King's subsidy should, while collecting that tenth, also collect a halfpenny in the marc of all ecclesiastical incomes for the use of the University, which was in great straits through the general dearth of provisions.

Forma commissionis Dni. Walteri Archiepi. facte London, et Cicest. Episcopis ad inquirendum de vita et miraculis Dni. Roberti Archiepi. predecessoris sui. Harling, 14th Nov. 1319.

This commission was issued for the purpose of collecting the information asked for by the Earl of Lancaster as a preliminary step to the canonization of Abp. Winchelsey.

Obligacio Comitum de Pembrok et Warene et Hen. de Perci pro captione Petri de Gavastone in castello de Scardeburgh. Scarborough, 19th May 1312.

This is the safe conduct, afterwards violated, given by the Earls to Gaveston as a condition of the surrender of the castle.

Breve Regis, de Borle, de xvij^{ma} non taxanda nec levanda. Westm., 17 Nov. 1320.

De calumpnia Rectoris Ecclesie Beate Marie de Arcubus Lond., quam facit de muro nove domus nostre lapidee in Chepe.

This is a letter without address, but evidently intended for the instruction of some one who had been chosen to arbitrate between the chapter of Ch. Ch. and the parson of Bow Church. It relates that 60 years before the (not mentioned) date, the steeple of the church threatened to fall upon a house belonging to the convent. The parson of the time, and the parishioners, being warned by the convent that they would be held accountable if any damage was done to the house by their neglect, began to repair the steeple, which, however, fell, and crushed the house, killing three men. For 50 years the convent was too poor to begin the reconstruction, but when they had funds in hand they called an inquisition "des bons gentz de Londres," to settle exactly the site on which they were entitled to build. The building finished, the parson declared the churchyard had been encroached upon, and began an action for trespass. These instructions beg the arbitrator to put pressure upon the plaintiff, and on his patron, to make him withdraw his suit.

De custodia comitatus Kancie tempore turbacionis regni, anno regni Regis E. (II.) xiii^o.

This title includes (1) the commission of Edmund of Woodstock, Constable of Dover and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, empowering him to act as the King's Lieutenant in Kent; and (2) a writ requiring the Earl to summon the notables of the county to hear the King's will concerning the defence of the kingdom. These are both dated from Dover, on the 16th June and the 3rd July 1321 respectively.

Revocacio sentencie late, sede vacante, contra monachos Dovor.

The sentence had been pronounced by the commissary of Cant., and this revocation was written by the judges delegated by the Curia. London, 4 Aug. 1321.

Breve de resistencia facta Dno. Isabelle Regino Anglie ad castrum de Ledes. Anno Dni. m^occc^oxxi^o. Apud Turrin Lond., 16 Oct. 1321.

Item de eodem. Apud Turrin, 17th Oct. 1321.

Commissio Justiciariorum ad audiendum et terminandum querelas et transgressionis tangentes Dm. Barth^m de Badesmere et sibi adherentes pro detentione castrorum de Tonebregg et de Ledes contra voluntatem Regis.

Commissio altera de castro de Ledes.

These four documents relate to the offence of Barth. de Badesmere, who refused to admit the Queen to his castle of Ledes during her journey to Dover. In the first writ the sheriff of Kent is required to attend the King with the posse comitatus in an attack upon the castle. This is not found in the Fœdera, but the second writ, which empowers the Earl of Athol and others to operate against the fortress in the King's absence, is in that collection. Neither of the commissions of the justices is dated.

Processus exilii Dominorum H. Dispenser senioris, et H. filii sui, in Parlamento London. in quindena Sci. Johis. Bapt., A.D. m^occc^oxxi^o.

Littera Dni. Regis de remissione et quietancia concessa Comitibus et Baronibus de omnibus dampnis et transgressionibus quibuscunque factis ratione exilii dictorum H. et H.

Judicium exilii predictorum H. et H.

Processus revocationis exilii Dominorum H. et H. Dispenser, cum petitione dictorum H. et H.

Les erreurs assignez en la agard del exil.

Forma revocationis exilii predictorum H. et H.

Littera Dni. Regis de protectione Dni. H.

Despencer juniors.

These six documents, all but the last written in French, describe the coalition formed by the barons in 1321 for the purpose of destroying the power of the two Despensers. Hume, in that part of his History of England which narrates these transactions, gives as his reference Sir James Tyrell's Chronicle, who in his turn professes to have derived his information from these Canterbury Registers. It is probable that these documents and those relating to Badesmere's offence found their way into these records in consequence of the great friendship and respect which Abp. Walter Reynold, who was of course entangled in these revolutionary proceedings, entertained for Henry of Eastry, at the time Prior of Ch. Ch. Letters of the Abp. to the Prior are extant which show both the writer's perplexity, the embarrassment of a man with no strong sympathy for either side, and his respect for his correspondent's opinion.

The preamble of the articles in which the indictment against the two Sir Hughs is contained, reads thus: "Que cum le dit Sire Hugh le fiz, al Parliament 'Everwyk, feust nome et assentu de estre en le office du Chamberlein nostre Seignur le Roi, de servir en cel office cum asseroit. A quel Parliament fust auxint assentu qe certains prelatz et autres grans du roialme demorreient pres du Rei par secons del an, pour meus conseilier notr. Seig. le Roy, sanz queux nules groces besoignes ne se deveroit faire; le dit Sire Hugh le fiz ad tref a lay Sire Hugh le pierre, qe ne fist meint assentu ne accordee 'Parl' de demoirer ensi pres du Roi, et entre eux deux accrochant a eux roial poer sur le Rei, ses ministres, et le guiemet du roialme, a deshonour du Roi . . . ent compassantz de esloigner le coer notr. Seig. le Roi des Piers de la tere, pour aver entre eux deux soul 'gouvernement de la tere."

The misdemeanours laid to the charge of the favourites are digested into twelve articles, the greater part of them being accusations of rapacity and avarice (couveitise). It is distinctly stated that the Prelates and the Commons joined in the prosecution; and one charge, which states that the accused denied bishops, abbots, and priors elect their usual access to the King, could only have proceeded from the clergy, the barons having no interest in the grievance. A speech is inserted in the processus spoken by some advocate of the King, who promises that a deliberate statement of the wishes of the council of nobles shall be obeyed. Then the nobles restate their case in a more statesmanlike manner than before, charging the Despensers with violations of constitutional law as it was then understood.

The judgment decrees that "Sire Hugh le fiz, et Sire Hugh le pierre soient desherites a touz jours come 'desheriteurs de la corone et ennemis du Roy et son poeple, et qe ils soyent del tot exiles hors del reume sanz retour en nul temps. Et les donoms port a 'Douvre et nule port allours a voider et a passer hors 'del realme," &c. The King's indemnity to the prosecutors, followed almost immediately by the processus of the recall of the exiles, then come in their turn.

It will be remarked that, whilst noticing the instruments of a public nature, such as relate to the policy of the kingdom and not to the concerns of the monastery of Ch. Ch. alone, few or no references are made in this report to the collections of Rymer, Wilkins, &c. The reason of this is that those documents which do not occur in those collections so greatly out-number those

DEAN AND
CHAPTER
OF CANTER-
BURY.

which do, that it has not been thought necessary to draw attention to the exceptions.

The same Register "I," whose contents have here filled so large a space, bears farther record of the interest which the revolution of 1320 to 1327 excited in the Canterbury monastery; but the examination of these matters must be left for another report.

J. BRIGSTOCKE SHEPARD.

CORPORATION
OF CHESTER.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF CHESTER.

Few provincial cities possess archives so numerous and valuable as those which, after suffering severely from curious misadventures, have been lately re-arranged and deposited in the Muniment Room of the new Town Hall of the city of Chester. Consisting of charters, municipal books, letters and corporation accounts, civic grants and leases, and upwards of fourteen hundred sets of filed documents, the entire collection may be roughly computed to have in its several divisions more than two hundred thousand separate writings.

The historical value of the majority of the matters to be found in so large an accumulation of writings is of course comparatively trivial; but whilst a considerable minority of the documents claim a certain measure of consideration from students some of the more ancient manuscripts are especially interesting and important.

Beginning with a curious writ, addressed by Henry the Second to his bailiffs of the city of Durham, the charters cover a period of more than seven hundred years; and some of the earlier concessions, in this remarkable series of historic evidences, deserve particular attention. The charters of Ranulph earl of Chester (Randle Blunville, the 4th Earl of Chester of the De Meschines family) afford some curious illustrations of the dependence of the burghers on the earls of Chester in the 12th century. The three charters of King John to the citizens of Chester, for their protection and freedom of trade in Ireland,—two of the instruments having been executed before the Earl of Moreton's accession to the English throne,—are important items in the list of our records touching the intercourse of the peoples of the sister islands in the times of Richard the First and his brother. Especial attention may also be invited to those passages of the charter of 1 Richard II., which describe the state of the river Dee and the commercial condition of Chester at the opening of the king's reign, and for sixty years earlier; it being equally strange and significant that this beautifully written and perfectly preserved record should have escaped the observation of the authorities, who are chiefly accountable for the general misconception that the Dee was navigable for vessels of ordinary burthen up to the city's walls till an early date of the seventeenth century, and that the port of Chester had in former times experienced no serious inconvenience from gradual depositions of mud and silt in the channel of the river.

Another series of writings to which much importance may be assigned is the collection of mayors' books and sheriffs' books, beginning with the remains of registers that were penned in the time of Richard the Second. Though they are not deficient in data for the general historian, the mayors' books will be chiefly serviceable to local chroniclers. More may, however, be said of the sheriffs' books, which afford us means for estimating the populousness and prosperity of the city from the time of Henry the Fifth to the time of James the First, and add considerably to our knowledge of the relations of England and Ireland in the days when Dublin looked to West Chester for official dispatches and the latest news from the sovereign's court, and when English troops ordered on Irish service were sent from their respective counties to the havens of the Dee for embarkation. The value of the remarkable body of correspondence, which is so striking a feature of the Chester archives, is also in a large measure due to the official relations which the north-western city maintained through successive generations with Westminster on the one hand and Dublin on the other. Of the 539 letters and miscellaneous notes, described in the ensuing catalogue, a considerable proportion may be designated as papers touching Irish affairs, from the accession of Elizabeth to the last years of James the First.

Though it would be unjust to charge them with indifference to the value of their multifarious records, or with a culpable disregard of their obligations to defend such interesting memorials from destruction, the people of Chester cannot be congratulated without reserve on the present condition of their writings. Fortunately the charters are in a fairly good state, with the exception of two or three parchments that have suffered much from neglect or mischance. A few of the evidences of royal grants have altogether escaped defacement. For instance, the just mentioned charter of 1 Richard II. is as clean as a new glove, and as legible as it was on the day of sealing. Nor is there much to regret in the general condition of the letters, most of which were rescued from moth and moisture by a former town clerk of Chester, and put in the two stately folios of the Great Letter Book. But a large proportion of the municipal grants and leases have suffered greatly from long exposure to damp and dirt, and in some cases have been rendered altogether or partly illegible by the action of fire and water. A yet worse account must be given of the mayors' books and sheriffs' books. The number and greatness of the gaps in the series of the two sets of volumes are indicated in the ensuing catalogue; and whilst many of the books have perished utterly, neglect and misusage have reduced as many of them to a few packets of detached leaves and pieces of leaves. In surveying the moth-eaten and rotten remains of this extremely entertaining division of the city's records, one is divided between thankfulness that so much has narrowly escaped destruction, and regret that so much has altogether passed away.

The fact is that the people of Chester have been less remiss than unfortunate in the custody of their records. Before my visit to Chester the writings had been systematically examined and re-arranged by at least three able antiquaries, working separately at three distinct times, since the opening of the present century. Twice within the last thirty years they have been put in order; and twice in the same short period they have been thrown in confusion and put in jeopardy by mischance. On the first occasion of misadventure the injured muniments were drenched with rain that entered a room which, through some misapprehension or neglect of orders, had been prematurely unroofed by a builder's workmen. On the second occasion the manuscripts were exposed to fire as well as water,—the fire which destroyed the old Town Hall of Chester in 1861, and the water that was used to put out the conflagration. In the confusion attending and immediately consequent on this accident, the writings were taken to the old City Gaol, and put away in a room that was neither dry nor properly ventilated; and there they lay in moisture and disorder, covered with dust and nursing the seeds of slow decay, till the Town Council of Chester applied to the Deputy Keeper of the Records in the summer of 1878 for advice and assistance.

In consequence of suggestions made by the late Sir Thomas Hardy, only a few weeks before his death, the documents were conveyed from the building in which they had been lying for seventeen years, to the large lecture-room of the new Town Hall, where they were laid in piles on five long tables, made of planks and trestles, from the foot of the dais to the bottom of the stately chamber. Before my arrival at Chester much had been done for the classification of this large accumulation of records by Mr. Orme, a choir-singer of Chester Cathedral,—a man of much intelligence and exemplary zeal, who had been employed by the Town Council to remove the manuscripts. But it was beyond the power of a man who could not read ancient handwritings, to classify the rolls and files that had lost their descriptive labels, the hundreds of blackened documents that had escaped from their proper bundles, and the large number of volumes that bore on their covers no clearly legible statements of their contents. On one table there appeared a pile of unlabelled rolls that contained a dozen different kinds of records. On another table there had been built up a wall of volumes, that on examination was found to consist of mayors' books, sheriffs' books, pentice court books, passage court books, rentals, treasurers' account books, assembly books, and several other kinds of municipal registers, put together by porters, without any regard to their differences of age, form, and contents. Having taken a preliminary view of the two folios of the letter books, I set to work on the undescribed and indescribable piles of books and documents; and whilst I was slowly performing this needful but unpleasant task, workmen brought into the lecture room more boxes and crates filled with historic manuscripts and literary rubbish. Though it was no part of my instructions that I should arrange the disordered documents for the benefit of the corporation, I soon found that it would be impossible for me to examine systematically and effectively so large an accumulation of manuscripts without reducing them to something like order. The magnitude and unlooked for difficulties of the task that lay before me were at first slightly depressing. But things gradually assumed a brighter appearance; and when the records had been relieved of their confusion the annoyances of uncougeual toil were forgotten in the pleasure of studying the more interesting matters noticed in the following lists.

CORPORATION
OF CHESTER.

(a.) Charters and Letters Patent.

(1.) Henry II. Licence to the burgesses of Chester to buy and sell at Durham, as they were wont to do in the time of Henry I.—Henricus Dei gracia Rex Anglie et Dux Normannie et Aquitanie et Comes Andegavie baluis suis de Dunclina, salutem:—Precipio quod Burgenses Cestrie possint emere et vendere ad detaillum (or doraillum) apud Dunclinam habendo et faciendo easdem consuetudines quas faciebant tempore Regis Henrici aui mei et easdem ibi habeant rectitudines et libertates et liberas consuetudines quas tempore illo habere solebant. Teste, Willelmo filio Aldi dapifero. Apud Wintoniam.

(2.) Charter of Ranulph earl of Chester to his men of Chester and their heirs.—Rannulphus Comes Cestrie Constabulario, Dapifero, Justiciario, Vicecomitibus, Baronibus, Militibus, Balliis et omnibus hominibus suis presentibus et futuris:—Sciatis me concessisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse dominicis hominibus meis Cestrie et eorum heredibus quod nullus aliquod genus mercimonii quod ad ciuitatem Cestrie per mare aut per terram venerit emat aut vendat nisi ipsi aut eorum heredes aut per eorum gratum nisi in nundinis assisis in nativitate Sancti Johannis Baptiste, et in festo Sancti Michaelis. Quare uolo quod predicti homines mei et eorum heredes habeant et teneant antedictam libertatem de me et heredibus meis imperpetuum libere, quiete, honorifice et pacifice. Et prohibeo super forisfacturam meam decem librarum ad opus meum capiendarum ne aliquis eos super dicta libertate impediatur aut grauetur. Testibus H. tunc Abbate Cestrie, Philippo de Orrebi tunc Justiciario Cestrie, Guarino de Vernum, Guillelmo de Venab', Petro clerico, Rogero de Menilgar, Hugone et Thoma dispensariis, Alredo de Suligny, Guillelmo pincerna, Normano pantul', Ada de Yeland, David de malo passu, Jolteram de Kellew, Ricardo de Kinglega, Hugone et Galfrido de Dutton, Magistro Hugone, et multis aliis.

(3.) Charter of Ranulph earl of Chester to his citizens of Chester.—Rannulphus Comes Cestrie constabulario suo et dapifero et omnibus baronibus et balliis suis et omnibus hominibus suis Francigenis et Anglicis tam futuris quam presentibus salutem:—Notum sit vobis omnibus me dedisse et concessisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse omnibus ciuibus meis de Cestria Gildam suam mercaleam cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus quas illi vngquam melius et liberius et quietius habuerunt temporibus antecessorum meorum in predicta Gilda. Et prohibeo super forisfacturam meam x. librarum ne aliqui eos inde disturbet. Testibus hiis,—Rogero Constabulo o Cestrie, Radulpho de Monte Alto senescalio Cestrie, Radulpho de Menilwar', Willelmo et Roberto Patrie, Philippo de Orrebi, Ricardo et Willelmo de Boidele, Ricardo Phitone, Liulpho de Twamlawa, Radulpho de Danenh', Warino de Vernum, Roberto filio Picoti, Petro clerico comitis, Ricardo Piscce, Herberto de Pulford, Willelmo de Verd', Thoma clerico comitis presencium scriptore, et multis aliis.—Apud Cestriam.

(4.) Charter of Ranulph earl of Chester to the citizens of Chester.—Rannulphus comes Cestrie Constabulario, Dapifero, Justiciario, Balliis et omnibus Baronibus et omnibus hominibus suis, Francigenis et Anglicis tam futuris quam presentibus, salutem: Notum sit vobis omnibus me dedisse et concessisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse omnibus ciuibus meis de Cestria omnes liberas consuetudines quas illi vngquam melius et liberius aut quietius habuerunt temporibus aliquorum predecessorum meorum, et nominatim quietanciam et relaxationem recognitionis et proportionem in ciuitate Cestrie in perpetuum. Et quod si ciuis aliquis de predicta ciuitate mea moriatur, ejus testamentum rationabiliter factum ratum et firmum habeatur, vbiunque ipse moriatur. Et quod si ciuis fecerit empionem aliquam de clara die et coram testibus, et sequela postea venerit de Francigenis vel de Anglicis qui possit rationabiliter emptum disracionare, ciuis qui illam empionem fecerit quietus sit de me et Balliis meis, perdendo tantummodo et reddendo quod emerit, si aliter non possit vendicanti satisfacere. Si vero sequela enererit de Wallense qui possit rationabiliter rem emptam disracionare precium rei empte ciui reddat quod idem ciuis rationabiliter poterit demonstrare se dedisse pro re empta. Et quod si ciuis in ciuitate predicta de cattallis suis cuiquam comodaerit, licet ei namum capere in ipsa ciuitate pro cattallis suis recuperandis sine licencia postulata a vice comite uel ab aliis balliis meis. Et si aliquis ciuis de predicta ciuitate in seruiuo meo occisus fuerit, de cattallis suis fiat ac si ipse rationabile testamentum fecisset. Has omnes libertates predictas et has consuetudines predictis ciuibus dedi et concessi et presenti carta mea confirmaui eis et heredibus suis, habendas et tenendas de me et de meis heredibus libere et quiete et pacifice in perpetuum. Et prohibeo ne quis eos inde disturbet aut heredes eorum super forisfacturam meam de xx. libris. Hiis testibus, Rogero Constabulario Cestrie, Radulpho de Monte Alto senescalio Cestrie, Radulpho de Menilwar', Willelmo et Roberto Patrie, Philippo de Orrebi, Ricardo et Willelmo de Boidell, Ricardo Phitone, Liulpho de Twamlawa, Radulpho de Daneh, Warino de Vernum, Roberto filio Picoti, Petro clerico comitis, Ricardo piscce, Herberto de Pulford, Willelmo de Verdum, Thoma clerico, et multis aliis apud Cestriam.

(5.) Richard I. Charter of John Earl of Moreton to the citizens of Chester.—Johannes Comes Moretonie et dominus Hibernie omnibus Justiciariis, Constabulariis, et aliis balliis et fidelibus suis de tota Hibernia salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse ciuibus de Cestria omnes libertates et liberas consuetudines quas habere consueverunt in terra nostra de Hibernia tempore domini Regis Henrici patris mei, et Ideo nobis precipio quod omnes illas libertates et liberas consuetudines eis habere permittatis sicut carta domini Regis patris mei testatur quod habere debeant, et nobis firmiter prohibeo ne super hoc eos in aliquo nexetis, uel aliquam injuriam uel molestiam eis inde faciatis uel fieri permittatis. Testibus Rogero de Plan, Rogero de Arundeuille, Stephano Ridel cancellario meo. Apud Lutegashalle.

(6.) Richard I. Charter of John Earl of Moreton to the citizens of Chester.—Johannes Comes Moretonie, et dominus Hibernie, Justiciario, Constabulario, et omnibus balliis suis de tota Hibernia salutem. Precipio vobis quod custodiatis et protegatis ciues de Cestria, et omnes res et possessiones eorum, et non faciatis uel fieri permittatis eis aliquam injuriam uel molestiam, et si aliquid forte cepertis de rebus uel cattallis eorum, uidete quod ad rationabile forum illud capiat, eos ita bene pacetis uel in denariis uel in mercaturis ad gratum suum quod inde clameos non audiam, et quod ipsi non disturbentur de itineribus suis pro defectu pacamenti nostri, et precipio quod ipsi libere et quiete possint emere et uendere infra bargum et extra sine omni vexatione et gravamine et molestia, saluis inde rationabilibus consuetudinibus meis. Testibus, Stephano Ridel cancellario meo, Rogero de Plan', Rogero de Arundeuille, Ricardo de Vernon. Apud Lutegashalle.

(7.) 3 May, 3 John. Charter of King John to the Citizens of Chester.—Johannes Dei gracia Rex Anglie, Dominus Hybernie, &c. &c., omnibus Justiciariis, Constabulariis, et aliis Balliis et fidelibus suis de Tota Hybernia, salutem. Sciatis nos concessisse et presenti carta nostra confirmasse ciuibus de Cestria omnes libertates et liberas consuetudines quas habere consueverunt in terra nostra de Hybernia tempore domini Regis Henrici patris nostri. Et ideo precipimus quod omnes illas libertates et liberas consuetudines eis habere permittatis, sicut Carta domini Regis patris nostri rationabiliter testatur quod habere debeant, et nobis firmiter prohibemus ne super hoc eos in aliquo nexetis uel aliquam injuriam uel molestiam eis inde faciatis uel fieri permittatis, sicut Carta nostra quam eis fecimus dum essemus Comes Moreton rationabiliter testatur. Testibus H. Sarr' episcopo, T. filio Petri comitis Essex, Willelmo Marescallo, Hugone Bard', Symone de Pateshull, Radulpho de Stok', Eustacio de Fauch'. Datum per manum S. Wellensi Archidiacono apud Merlebridge, iii. die Maii anno Regni nostri tercio.

(8.) Henry III. Charter of John Le Scot earl of Chester and Huntingdon, to the citizens of Chester.—Johannes comes Cestrie et Huntendon' Constabulario suo, Dapifero, Justiciario, Baronibus, Militibus, Balliis suis et ministris et omnibus fidelibus suis presentibus et futuris, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et hanc presenti carta mea confirmasse omnibus ciuibus mei Cestrie quod nullus mercator aliquod genus mercimonii quod ad ciuitatem Cestrie per mare aut per terram venerit emat uel uendat, nisi ipsi ciues mei Cestrie et eorum heredes uel per eorum gratum, nisi in nundinis assisis, scilicet in Nativitate Sancti Johannis Baptiste et in festo Sancti Michaelis. Item concessi et hanc presenti carta mea confirmari eisdem ciuibus meis

Cestrie, quod si cuius fecerit empconem aliquam et coram testibus, et sequela poster venerit de Francigenis uel de Anglicis qui racionabiliter possit emptum illud disracionare, cuius qui empconem illam fecerit quietus sit de me et de Ballinis meis, perdendo tantummodo et reddendo quod emerit, si aliter non possit vendicanti satisfacere: si nero sequela uenerit de Walense, qui possit racionabiliter rem emptam disracionare precium rei emptę cui reddet, quod idem cuius racionabiliter poterit demonstrare se dedisse pro re emptā. Item concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui dictis ciuibus meis Cestrie Gildam suam mercalem habendam et tenendam adeo libere, quiete et honorifice, sicut eam habuerunt in tempore aunculi mei domini Rannulphi comitis Cestrie et Lincolnie. Item concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui prefatis ciuibus meis Cestrie, quod nulla capcio fiat in ciuitate Cestrie preterquam ad opus domini comitis et Justiciarii sui dum fuerint ibidem, et hoc si tresdecim denariati pro duodecim denariis, nisi tantummodo de cernisia scilicet quatuor sextarii de et esse iiii^o denar., et nullus habeat capcionem illam cernisie preterquam dominus comes et Justiciarius, et illa capcio fiat per ordinem in circuitu ubi fieri debet. Preterea concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui memoratis ciuibus meis Cestrie omnes libertates et omnes liberas consuetudines quas illi melius et liberius aut quietius habuerunt de aunculo meo Rannulpho comite Cestrie et Lincolnie secundum tenorem magne carte quam eis dedit quum fuit comes Cestrie et Lincolnie: In qua carta ad maiorem securitatem eis faciendam sigillum meum simul cum sigillo aunculi mei Rannulphi comitis Cestrie et Lincolnie apposui. Has vero prenomatas et superscriptas libertates et liberas consuetudines omnes concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui dilectis et fidelibus meis, scilicet, omnibus ciuibus meis Cestrie, habendas et tenendas illis et heredibus illorum de me et de heredibus meis in perpetuum libere et quiete, pacifice et honorifice. Quare uolo et firmiter precipio quod super dictis libertatibus et consuetudinibus nemo illis unquam faciat impedimentum aut grauamen super forisfacturam decem librarum; set omnes balliui mei ipsos et eorum libertates et liberas consuetudines et iura protegant et manuteneant. Ego siquidem et heredes mei omnes prenomatas et superscriptas libertates et liberas consuetudines sepedictis ciuibus meis Cestrie et heredibus illorum contra omnes homines warantizabimus, et in huius rei testimonium presentem cartam sigillo meo muniri. Hiis testibus. Ricardo Plit^o Justiciario Cestrie, Henrico de Adichel, Hugone Phitone, Willelmo de Lai, Willelmo de Malo passu: Willelmo de Venables, Guarino de Vernon, Walkelino de Arderne, Rogero de Memgaric, Hamone de Masci, Willelmo Patricio, Rannulpho de Paeris, Ricardo de Sibache, Hugone de Cholmundele, Ricardo de Kingest et multis aliis.

(9.) 8 December, 22 Henry III. Charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation by Henry the Third to the citizens of Chester; confirming the charter "De relaxatione recognitionis et proportamenti in ciuitate Cestrie," &c. &c., of Rannulph Earl of Chester. The clauses of confirmation and attestation being "Nos igitur hanc donationem et concessionem ratam et gratam habentes eam pro nobis et heredibus nostris concedimus et sigillo nostro confirmamus, sicut carta predicta Comitibus Cestrie racionabiliter testatur. Hiis testibus, Johanne Comite Lincolnie Constabulario Cestrie, Simone de Monte forti, Amaurico de Sancto Amando, Johanne de Plesseto, Ricardo filio Hugonis et aliis. Datum per manum Venerabilis Patris R. Cycestris episcopi cancellarii nostri apud Westmonasterium octauo die Decembris, anno regni nostri vicesimo secundo."

(10.) 8 December, 22 Henry III. Charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation by Henry the Third to the citizens of Chester. Confirming the charter of Rannulph Earl of Chester, whereby the said earl granted to the said citizens "gildam suam mercalem cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus quas illi unquam melius et liberius aut quietius habuerunt temporibus antecessorum meorum in predicta Gilda." The clauses of confirmation and attestation being, "Nos igitur hanc donationem et concessionem ratam et gratam habentes, eam pro nobis et heredibus nostris concedimus et sigillo nostro confirmamus, sicut carta predicta Comitibus Cestrie racionabiliter testatur. Hiis testibus, J. comite Lincolnie constabulario Cestrie, Simone de Monte Forti, Amaurico de Sancto Amando, Johanne de Plesseto, Ricardo filio Hugonis et aliis. Datum per manum Venerabilis Patris R. Cycestris episcopi Cancellarii nostri, apud Westmonasterium, viii. die Decembris anno, regni nostri vicesimo secundo."

(11.) 23 October, 23 Henry III. Charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation by Henry the Third to the citizens of Chester; confirming the Charter of Rannulph Earl of Chester, whereby the said earl granted to the said citizens "quod nullus aliquod genus mercimonii quod ad ciuitatem Cestrie per mare aut per terram uenerit emat aut vendat, nisi ipsi et eorum heredes aut per eorum gratum, nisi in nundinis assisis in Natuiate Sancti Johannis Baptiste et in festo Sancti Michaelis." The clauses of confirmation and attestation being, "Nos igitur predictam concessionem ratam habentes et gratam, ipsam pro nobis et heredibus nostris concedimus et confirmamus. Hiis testibus, Ricardo comite Pictavie et Cornubie, Johanne de Lacy comite Lincolnie et constabulario Cestrie, Hunfrido de Boun comite Essex et Hereford, Stephano Segane, Willelmo de Cantilupo, Bertramo de Criol, Amaurico de Sancto Amando, Petro de Malo Lacu, Galfrido Dispensario, Johanne de Lexington, Johanne Tubant, et aliis. Datum per manum nostram apud Westmonasterium, tercio die Octobris anno regni nostri vicesimo tercio."

(12.)—12 June, 28 Edward I. Charter by Edward the First of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter whereby Henry III. in the 22nd year of his reign confirmed the charter of Rannulph earl of Chester, granting amongst other things to the citizens of Chester "quod tanciam ac relaxationem recognicionis ac proportamenti in ciuitate Cestria;" and also of Insuperimus and Confirmation of another charter, whereby Henry the Third in the 23rd year of his reign confirmed another charter of the same Rannulph earl of Chester, granting to the citizens of Chester for ever the monopoly of all marketable things in the same city, "nisi in nundinis assisis in Natuiate Sancti Johannis Baptiste et in festo Sancti Michaelis."—With divers other concessions to the same citizens, viz., (a) the free-farm of the said city and its liberties at an annual rent to the king and his heirs of one hundred pounds for ever; (b), the privilege of electing from themselves coroners, with power to discharge all the functions of coroners within the city of Chester; (c) the grant "quod habeant placita corone nostre de hiis que infra eandem libertatem emererunt coram Maiore et Balliis dicte ciuitatis in curia nostra eiusdem ciuitatis placitanda, et amerciamenta ac omnia alia que ad nos pertinent in hac parte percipiant sicut nos ea prius percipere consueuimus;" (d) the grant for ever to the same citizens, "quod habeant Sok Sak Tol et Theam Infangenthet et Utfangenthet," with quitance for ever, "per totam terram et potestatem nostram de theolonio passagio festagio muragio panagio pontagio et tallagio Leue et de Danegeld Geywit et omnibus aliis consuetudinibus tam in Anglia quam in omnibus aliis terris nostris;" (e) freedom from arrest for themselves and their goods, "pro aliquo debito de quo fideiussores aut principales non existerint debitores;" (f) the concession "quod ipsi cives nostri pro transgressione aut forisfactura seruientium eorum bona aut catalla sua in manibus ipsorum seruientium inuenta seu alicubi locorum per ipsos seruientes deposita quatenus ea sua esse sufficienter probare poterunt non amittant;" (g) the grant that after death, whether they left wills or died intestate, the goods of citizens should not be confiscated by the king or his heirs, but should pass in their integrity to their heirs, executors, or nearest friends;" (h) the concession "quod nullus balliunus vel minister noster alius quam Balliui eiusdem ciuitatis summoniciones attachiamenta vel districtiones aliquas infra libertatem ciuitatis predictę faciat seu officium balliui exerceat nisi in defectum eorumdem ciuium vel balliuorum predictorum;" (j) the concession that on being arrested for any matters whatever citizens should be taken forthwith to the gaol at Northgate, and to no other gaol, and be there imprisoned and nowhere else, until they be delivered from the same in accordance with the law and custom of the same city; and (k) the concession to the same citizens of the vacant ground within the liberties of their city.—Dated at York, "per manum nostram;" and witnessed by the bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, the bishop of Carlisle, Roger Bigod earl of Norfolk and marshal of England, Otto de Grandi Sono, Walter de Bello Campo, the steward of the king's household, John de Mettingham, Peter Mellor, William Haward, John de Merkes, Peter de Tadington, and others.—Also a duplicate of this same charter, with the great seal attached to it.

(13.)—16. Edward II. Indenture of the agreement between the mayor and citizens of Chester and John Clypeston, for the building of the New Tower, commonly called the Water Tower.—At the present time, legible only in a few places.

(14).—25 December, 1 Edward III. Letters Patent by Edward the Third of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter touching the franchises and privileges of the citizens of Chester, dated by his grandfather Edward the First at York, on the 12th of June, in the 25th year of his reign.—Dated at Worcester “per manum nostram.”—Also duplicate, sealed with the seal of the Exchequer of Chester, of this same charter bearing the Great Seal.

(15).—25 Edward III. Writ by Edward Prince of Wales (the Black Prince) to the Mayor and citizens of Chester, on his grant for life to Richard earl of Arundel of the fee-farm of one hundred livres yearly, coming from the said city to the said prince.

Edward eisnez filz au noble Roi Dengleterre et de France, Prince de Gales, Duc de Cornewaille et Comite de Cestre, A noz bien amez Maier et citeins de nostre dit citee de Cestre salut.—Pour ceo que nous auons grauntez a nostre cher et bien amez Monsieur Richard Comite Darundelle la fee ferme de cent livres quels vous nous estes tesnuz par an a paier de nostre dit citee, a auoir et tenir a terme de vie et qil peusse destreindre par mesme la ferme a quel hure quil soit aderere com apiert par vne endenture entre nous et le dit comite sur ce faite. Vous mandons que a dit Comite et as ses attournez soiez entendantz et respoinantz en le paiement de la dite ferme soloint le purport de nostre dit graunt, siq' nulle covenante parente nous et le dit comite faite ne pourra estre enfreinte en defaute de vostre noun paiement. Et ce ne lesser. En tesmoignance de queiue chose a cestes nos lettres patentes anous mys nostre seal. Don a Londres le vnsyisme de Novembre, lan du regne le Roy Edward tiercz apres le conquest Dengleterre vintisme quinte, de France duzisme.

(16). 9 March, 28 Edward III. Charter by Edward Prince of Wales, commonly called the Black Prince, of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation whereby his father Edward the Third, in the first year of his reign, confirmed at Worcester the charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation, touching the liberties of the citizens of Chester, dated by Edward the First at York, on the 12th of June, in the 25th year of his reign. Confirming anew the above-named charters, and all charters confirmed by them, this charter, dated by the Black Prince at Chester, states precisely the limits of the liberties of the said city, Ordaining—“quod diuise mete et bunde ciuitatis predictae et libertatis eiusdem decetero teneantur et obseruentur infra limites et loca subscripta, et pro diuisis metis et bundis ciuitatis predictae exunc in perpetuum habeantur et teneantur, et quod libertates ciuitatis eiusdem infra eadem loca et limites et vsque ad ea iuxta vim formam et effectum concessionum de eisdem libertatibus per predecessores et progenitores nostros et nos dictis ciuibz factarum absque impedimento nostro vel heredum nostrorum Justiciariorum Camerariorum Vicecomitum Escacorum aut aliorum quorumcumque ministrorum nostrorum aut heredum nostrorum perpetuis temporibus exerceantur, videlicet a Clauerton Lodex opposito pontis ferrei et sic ascendendo per quoddam sicheum vsque Grenediche similiter vocatum le Meredyche sequendo illud fossatum vsque quandam viam que ducit de Bromfeld vsque Cestriam vsque Oldediche iuxta quandam marleram et sic sequendo fossatum illud vsque partem bolaiem vsque ad quandam viam que ducit vsque partes occidentales inter terram Roberti de Bradesford et terram Michaelis Scot vsque ad capud fossati illius, et sic sequendo terram predicti Roberti de Bradesford vsque ad terram Prioris et monalium Cestrie, que quidem terra fuit prius Thome Damers et deinde sequendo quoddam sicheum vsque ad quandam viam que ducit de Cestria vsque Kynarton, et vltra illam viam vsque ad villam de Bache, et sic per medium ville illius ex parte boreali vsque Le Londpal in Salteney similiter vocatum le Bakelup, et sic sequendo illud pul vsque ad aquam de Dee, et deinde ex transuerso aque illius vsque ad quandam riunlum ex altera parte eiusdem aque de Dee descendente in eandem aquam apud le Pulbrige et sic sequendo riunlum illud vsque ad le Stanenbrugge et deinde vsque le Bachepul, et sic sequendo filum aque de le Bachepul vsque ad quoddam sicheum vocatum Flokeresbrok et sic sequendo Flokeresbrok vsque Dispediche, et sic sequendo illud vsque partes orientales et postea sequendo illud fossatum vsque partem australem vsque viam que ducit de Stanfordbrugge vsque Cestriam, sequendo viam illam vsque ad quoddam fossatum ex parte orientali capelle de Boghton “et deinde vsque viam que ducit de Cestria versus “Torperleggh” sequendo viam illam dimittendo grangeam Leprosorum ex parte orientali vsque in le “Holgheway que ducit vsque Potherhache subitus montem aque de Dee, et sic sequendo ripam aque illius vsque Huntynndon-Wode, et deinde vsque ad pontem “ferrenum predictum.”—This charter (of a writ addressed to the bishop, &c., &c., and all the prince's lieges of his whole county of Chester) is witnessed by R. the bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, Bartholomew de Burghessh, junr, the Prince's Justice of Chester. John de Wynsfield, Nigel Loryng the Prince's chamberlain, Edmund Wanney steward of the Prince's household, Hugh de Venables, John de Legh, Peter de Thorneton, knits, John de Brunham junior chamberlain of Chester, and others.

(17).—Edward III. Claims of Robert of Eton in respect to the Serjeantry of the river Dee.

(18).—10 April, 1 Richard II. Charter for the remission for ten years to the citizens of Chester of the yearly payment of seventy-three pounds ten shillings one penny and one half-penny, part of the one hundred and three pounds ten shillings one penny and one half-penny, due every year to the king and his heirs, for the yearly fee-farm of one hundred pounds due from the same citizens by virtue of a charter dated by Edward the First, and from a further rent of seventy shillings one penny and one half-penny due to the king and his heirs “pro costumali redditu Camerali redditu et longigable rent et pro aliis libertatibus et entumis concessis certis occupationibus et artificis infra dictam ciuitatem nostram.” In the statement of the considerations occasioning this large remission of yearly dues, it is observed that the humble petition of the citizens of Chester have informed the king how, when the aforesaid rents were fixed, and long afterwards, “erat bonus portus ad dictam nostram ciuitatem, ad quem portum multi ac diuersi mercatores tunc temporis dicte ciuitatis nostre Cestrie existenciam, ac alii huius regni nostri Anglie et aliorum regnorum ac terrarum communem cursum ac recursum transitis ac redditus cum manibus ac mercimoniis suis ad dictum portum dicte ciuitatis nostre habebant ibidem portum sui salutaris facientes ad dictorum ciuitatis cinium nostrorum ac inhabitancium ibidem existencium grandia proficua ac diuiciarum incrementa. Et qualiter nunc taliter existit quod per spacium sexaginta annorum iam ultimo preteritorum grandis aque cursus dicti portus per quem dicti mercatores nostri cursum ac recursum vsque et a dicta ciuitate cum nauibus ac mercimoniis suis habebant per sabulorum maris vrectum quotidie cadentem ac multiplicentem in chanelia ibidem subtrahitur, adeo quod dictus portus penitus destruitur ac recuperari non potest, ita quod nulla nauis mercatoria per duodecim milliaria ac magis dicte ciuitati appropinquare possit, sic quod nulla nauis mercatoria dicte ciuitatis nostre pertinens est nec per longum tempus erat, sed ille in defectu portus predicti penitus destruitur ac deaustantur ad dictorum ciuitatis ac cinium grandia detrimenta, desolacionem ac depauperitatem; ac vterius vbi illi de marchia Wallie quotidie accustomati erant emere ac vendere ac adquirere suum panem et serueiciam ad dictam nostram ciuitatem, modo causa capcionis theologie ad nostras portas ibidem ab antiquo tempore accustomati se subtrahunt, que fuit ac adhuc est ad magnum detrimentum ac depauperitatem dicte nostre ciuitatis ac cinium, ac theolonarum ac custumarum nostrarum adminutacionem ibidem, eo quod predicta ciuitas stat ac se adiungit super marchiam Wallie predictae.”—Teste meipso apud Cestriam.

(19).—10 December, 3 Richard II.—Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter aforementioned, touching the liberties of the citizens of Chester and the boundaries of their city, dated at Chester by the king's father, Edward Prince of Wales, commonly called the Black Prince, on 9 March, 28 Edward III.—Dated at Westminster, “per manum nostram.”

(20.) 25 July, 11 Richard II. Remission of the murage hitherto paid to the king by the city of Chester, and also of the king's profits from the passage of the river Dee, until the ruined bridge over the same river shall have been restored.—Ricardus, &c. Sciatis quod de gracia nostra speciali et ad supplicationem ligoorum nostrorum comitatus ville nostre Cestrie ac per considerationem quod quamplures de ligeis nostris dicte ville nostre venientes et alii abinde transientes in aqua de Dee submersi extiterunt postquam pons ejusdem ville vltra aquam predictam dirutus extitit et confrac-

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

tus, accciam quod eadem villa ea de causa maxime depauperata prout sumus informati, concessimus fabricæ et reparacioni pontis predicti omnia proficua passagii aque predictæ apud Cestriam et muragium quod pro muris ibidem concedi solebat, habenda eisdem fabricæ et reparacioni quousque pons ille recte et racionabiliter perficiatur, &c., &c. Teste me ipso apud castrum nostrum Cestrie vicesimo quinto die Julii anno regni nostri undecimo.

(21.) 31 March, 18 Richard II. Letters Patent of a precept, under the seal of the king's exchequer of Chester, addressed to all his bailiffs, faithful subjects and tenants in the counties of Chester and Flynt; enjoining them to pay all murage, still to be collected from them within the city of Chester during the next four years, to such collectors as the mayor and commune of Chester may see fit to appoint to receive the same; the king having been moved by the humble supplication of the said mayor and citizens to grant them the murage, to be gathered in Chester during that term, for the repair of the city's walls and pavements. Dated at Chester.

(22.) 19 July, 22 Richard II. Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter, touching the liberties and boundaries of Chester and the privileges of its citizens, dated at Chester on 9 March, 25 Edward III., by the king's father Edward the Black Prince. This charter is an exact transcript of the Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the Black Prince's charter, dated by the king at Westminster on the 10th of December in the third year of his reign, from which earlier document, bearing the Great Seal, it differs only by having the seal of the principality of Chester appended to it, instead of the Great Seal, and by having the following words added to the transcription, "In cujus rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes sigillo Principatus nostri Cestrie signatas. Datum apud Cestriam, decimo nono die Julii, regni nostri vicesimo secundo."

(23.) 23 February, 2 Henry IV. Letters Patent (in the form of a writ addressed to the prince's bishops, abbots, &c., and faithful men of his whole county of Chester) by the Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation dated 10 December in the 3rd year of Richard II. at Westminster, whereby the said king (Richard the Second) confirmed the charter, touching the liberties of the citizens of Chester and the boundaries of their city, dated by his father Edward the Black Prince at Chester on 9 March, 25 Edward III. Dated "per manum nos tram apud Kenyngton."

(24.) 3 November, 5 Henry IV.—Pardon to all and each of the king's lieges of the town of Chester of all treasons, insurrections, rebellions, and felonies committed by them "contra nos et ligeanciam suam cum Henrico Percy filiz iam defuncto et aliis rebellibus nostris de assensu ipsius Henrici Percy ante hec tempora," with remission of all outlawries and forfeitures consequent on the said offences. In the preamble it is stated that this pardon is granted at the supplication of the king's most dear son Henry Prince of Wales, and because the "maior et communis ciuitatis Cestrie nobis concesserunt quandam finem trescentiarum marcarum per ipsos nobis soluendarum, et quod ipsi ad custus suos proprios inuenient eskippamentum sufficienti pro hominibus ad proficiendum in obsequio nostro per mare pro presenti rescussu castri de Beaumareys ordinatis et ordinandis ac victualia sufficiencia pro eskippamento hominum predictorum."—Teste me ipso apud Cirencestriam.

(25.) 5 March, 8 Henry IV. Grant for five years to the mayor and citizens of Chester, by Henry Prince of Wales and earl of Chester, of all the profit and emolument "de prisæ et capione muragii infra ciuitatem nostram antedictam qualitercumque penencia prout et sicut idem muragium ante hec tempora melius et plenius aliquo tempore capi et percipi solebat in emendacionem et sustentacionem murorum ciuitatis nostre predictæ, Promisso omnino quod una medietas muragii predicti super muros antedictos, et altera medietas eiusdem super complementum et perfectionem Turreis super pontem de Dee, per ministros et officarios Castri nostri Cestrie tempore Ricardi nuper Regis Anglie secundi post conquestum incepte."

(26.) 20 November, 4 Henry VI. Letters Patent by Henry the Sixth of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation dated 23 February, 2 Henry IV., whereby the father of the said king (Henry the Sixth), when he was Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, confirmed the Letters Patent, dated 10 December, 3 Richard II., whereby the last-named king confirmed the charter, dated by his father the Black Prince at Chester on 9 March, 25 Edward III., respecting the liberties of the citizens of Chester and the bounds of their city. With re-confirmation of all charters confirmed by all or any of the aforesaid charters. Dated at Westminster.

(27.) 4 August, 23 Henry VI. Letters Patent of release add quietclaim, for a term of fifty years, to the citizens of Chester, of the yearly payment of fifty pounds, being one half of the annual rent of one hundred pounds at which the citizens of Chester hold the said city with all its liberties in fee-farm, by virtue of a charter from Edward the First. The considerations occasioning this remission are said to be the depression of the city consequent on the gradual destruction of its port, and the further distress and depopulation consequent on a certain insurrection and rebellion in Wales. The statement of decadence of the business of the port and the gradually silting up of the channel of the river is an almost exact repetition of the statement in the charter of 1 Richard II. respecting the same matters. As to the effects of the Welsh rebellion the charter says, "Et postquam dictus portus taliter destructus fuit, quedam insurreccio et rebellio in Wallia contigebant, qua rebellione durante nemo dicte ciuitatis nostre victualia seu aliqua alia mercimonia cum nullo Wallico vendere vel emere andebat nec potera. Set dictam ciuitatem nostram vt homines guerre a Wallicis ad tunc rebellibus existentibus indies ac noctanter enodire (sic), ubi dicti Wallici ante rebellionem cum dictis ciuibz nostris tam victualia quam omnimodo alia mercimonia ad grande incrementum dictorum ciuitatis et ciuium nostrorum emere ac vendere vtebantur: Que victualia et mercimonia subtraherentur pro rebellionem que erat et est non modicum detrimentum et depauperas dictorum ciuitatis et ciuium nostrorum pro eo quod predicta ciuitas stat et adijungit super marchiam Wallie predictam, pro quibus causis ante repetitis multi cines et alii dicte ciuitatis nostre inhabitantes a dicta ciuitate nostra subtrahuntur et in aliis huius regni nostri partibus causa sue firme onerum magnorum et importabilium sunt inhabitantes, ita quod dicte nostre ciuitatis maior pars vastata, desolata, ruinosa, et minime inhabitata existit."

(28.) 20 November, 35 Henry VI.—Letters Patent of pardon and release to John Southworth and Henry Kyrr, late sheriffs of the city of Chester, and also to James Hurlston and Richard Hawardyn, late sheriffs of the same city, and also to Richard Massy and Richard Raynford, late sheriffs of the same city; and also to Robert Rogerson and Thomas Gerard, late sheriffs of the same city; and also to John Troghford and Ralph Mareschall, late sheriffs of the same city; and also to John Gosnour and John Barowe, late sheriffs of the same city; and also to Thomas Kent and William Hankyn, late sheriffs of the same city, in respect to a certain sum of twenty-five marks due to the king from the said city in each of seven successive years, but neither paid to his use nor levied by the sheriffs aforesaid during their respective shrievalties. From the preamble to the pardon it appears that the king had in former time remitted and quietclaimed, for a term of fifty years, to the citizens of Chester fifty pounds yearly of the fee farm of the said city, and the seven several sums of twenty-five marks were due to him by virtue of the Act of Resumption, enacted by Parliament on the 6th of November, in the 28th year of his reign, by which Act twenty-five marcs per annum of the remitted fee farm had been resumed into his hands.

(29.) 21 March, 1 Henry VII. Letters Patent of remission for ever to the citizens of Chester of eighty of the one hundred pounds of annual rent at which the same citizens have from ancient time held their said city at fee-farm from the king's predecessors; so that henceforth the said citizens and their successors for ever may hold the city in fee-farm from the king and his successors at an annual rent of only twenty pounds. The said remission being made in consideration of the extreme poverty of the city, almost a fourth part of which is said to be in a state of destruction and desolation.—Dated at Chester.

(30.) 6 April, 21 Henry VII.—The Great Charter of Henry VII. to the citizens of Chester, made out of pure affection, &c., "ac in consideracione boni gestus et grandium sumptuum et expensarum ciuium eiusdem ciuitatis, necnon gratitutorum seruiciorum nobis per ipsos contra aduersarios et rebelles nostros multipliciter impensorum."—Granting, amongst other things, that henceforth the whole land of the city (the king's castle of Chester situated within the walls of the same city being excepted) be exempt and separate from the county of Chester; that the same city be henceforth styled the county of the city of Chester; that the citizens may henceforth yearly elect 24 aldermen and 40 common-councillmen; that one of the aldermen may be elected to the office of Recorder by the aldermen, sheriffs, common council; that the citizens may yearly elect a mayor in a way and under conditions set forth; that the mayor may be Escheator and Clerk of the Market; that the citizens may yearly elect two sheriffs for the coming year, in manner and under conditions precisely set forth; that the sheriffs may hold a monthly county court on Monday like other sheriffs, "Et quod predicti vicecomites civitatis Cestrie et eorum successores imperpetuum curias suas ibidem similiter teneant, videlicet diebus Martis, Jouis et Veneris qualibet septimana, et omnia plicita et assisas per querelas sine breui nostro coram ipsis de omnibus contractis et casibus infra civitatis predictae preiunctis et limites eiusdem emergentibus modo et forma sicut ante hec tempora habere et facere consueverunt;" that out of the king's presence the mayor of Chester may carry his sword, or cause it to be borne before him, with point erect; that the sergeants of the maces of the mayor and sheriffs of the city may bear their gilt or silver or silver-plated maces, adorned with the royal arms, as well in the presence of the king and his heirs as in the presence of his consort; that the mayor of Chester may yearly elect two citizens to be coroners, who shall have power to discharge all the functions of the office of a coroner within the same city; that the mayor and citizens may yearly elect two citizens to be surveyors of the walls of the city, with the name of "muragers," and with power to collect and receive "quoddam subsidium siue custumam in dicta ciuitate vulgariter vocatum "murage" prout ab antiquo in dicta ciuitate leuatum fuit propter sustentacionem et edificacionem murorum predictorum;" that no steward or marshal or clerk of the market of the king's household, or of the household of any of his heirs, may do ought in the way of his official duty within Chester; that the mayor and citizens may hold plea of lands, &c., as well as trespass, &c. by plaint without the king's writ before the mayor and sheriffs of Chester; that citizens of Chester be not liable to be impleaded elsewhere for lands, contracts, covenants, trespasses, or demands arising within the city; "et quod habebant curiam suam vocatam le portmote et coronmote coram maiore ciuitatis predictae pro tempore existente, tenendam eisdem modo et forma quibus antiquitus teneri consueverunt;" that the mayor for the time being, the Recorder, and those aldermen who have been mayors be justices of the peace without any other commission; that the justices of the peace of Chester, or four of them, of whom the Mayor and the Recorder for the time being are to be two, be the justices of the king and his heirs "ad inquirendum per sacramentum proborum et legalium hominum tam de ciuitate predicta quam de libertate, suburbis, hamelettis, terris, &c., ejusdem per quos Rei Veritas melius sciri poterit de tempore in tempus quociens et quando eis melius videbitur expedire de quomodocumque felonis, transgressiouiibus, forstallariis, et regrataris ibidem de tempore in tempus factis et perpetratis, de quibus cumque conuenientis contra pacem et in perturbacionem populi nostri, &c., &c."—Altogether releasing the citizens from the obligations of their ancient feefarm of the city, and remitting to them all arrears of payments due from them to the king's exchequer in respect of the said fee-farm, the charter grants to them for ever the whole city of Chester, its hamlets and its suburbs, with all lands, tenements, profits, and the ancient custom called murage, and all other things pertaining to the same, at an annual rent of twenty pounds of silver. Dated at Chester.

(32.) 20 February, 30 Henry VIII. Copy of a Grant of Pardon to William Danyson, David Midelton and others, merchants of the city of Chester, for ignorantly and without evil intent shipping and exporting from Chester certain and "sundry dikers of leather," in violation of the provisions of the enactment of the king's twenty-seventh year touching the shipment and exportation of leather.

(32.) 13 July, 20 Henry VIII. Charter of a grant for ever by the Friars Minors of Chester of the nave and three aisles of their church to the merchants and sailors of Chester, for a place in which to store and repair sails and things requisite for their ships.—Omnibus Christi fidelibus hoc presens scriptum visuris vel audituris Willelmus gardianus fratrum minorum Cestrie et ejusdem loci conventus salutem in Domino sempiternam:—Sciatis nos prefatos gardianum et conventum dedisse et concessisse et hoc presenti scripto nostro confirmasse marchatoribus et nautis civitatis Cestrie naue ecclesie nostre quum construxerunt una cum tribus ejusdem ecclesie isalis ad predictorum marchatorum et nautarum perpetuum usum pro velis et aliis rebus necessariis ad naves suas pertinentibus componendis et reficiendis, quocienscumque opus fuerit sicuti hactenus consueverint eadem condicione quod prefati marchatores et nautae suis propriis expensis ejusdem ecclesie et insularum reparacione seruant. In cuius rei testimonium nos prefati gardianus et conventus huic presenti scripto nostro sigillum nostrum commune apponi fecimus. Datum in domo nostra capitulari, xiii. die mensis Julii, anno regni regis Henrici octavi vicesimo.

(31.) 4 May, 20 Henry VIII. Letters Patent by Arthur Plantagenet viscount Lisle, K.G., Vice-admiral of England and Lieutenant of Henry duke of Richmond and Somerset and earl of Nottingham and Lord High Admiral, to the mayor and citizens of Chester. Approving, ratifying and confirming the certificate of the said Vice-admiral's Commissary General and Special, John Wodhall, certifying that, by virtue of grants made by Hugh Lupus, earl of Chester, and confirmed by successive kings, all lands and ports within the liberties of the city of Chester are exempt from the Lord Admiral's jurisdiction, and that the citizens of Chester, and all farmers, tenants, and other men within the same liberties, enjoy the same exemption. Dated in London, and sealed with the Vice-admiral's seal of his said office of Admiralty of England.

(34.) 4 June, 38 Henry VIII. Letters Patent of Inspecimus and Exemplification of a decree made by the king's council in the Star Chamber, and sent at his order into his chancery, authorising the citizens of Chester to assemble in common hall on the 11th instant, and elect (in the ordinary way of electing mayors of the said city) an interim mayor to serve in the place of William Holcroft the lately deceased mayor, who was elected to the said office by virtue of Henry the Seventh's charter, which ordained that the mayor of Chester for every coming year should be elected on Friday next after the feast of Saint Dionysius, and omitted to make provision for the election of another chief magistrate in case of a mayor dying during his term of office. It is ordered by the decree that the mayor elected in place of the deceased John Holcroft shall hold office only till the Friday after the next feast of St. Dionysius, when another election of a mayor is to be made in accordance with the directions of Henry the Seventh's charter.—Teste meipso apud Westmonasterium.

(35.) 3 April, 1562. Articles and Orders appoyntyd and set forth by M^r John Cowper, mayor of the city of Chester, and his Worshipful Brethren to be observed and kept at the Gardyn Buttes of the Backsyde of the Mausion Howse of John Bellingham the joyner without Eastgate of the said citie. Seven orders on a skin of parchment, signed "John Cowper, Mayor."

(36.) 14 June, 16 Elizabeth. Letters Patent of Queen Elizabeth to the citizens of Chester, of Inspecimus and Confirmation of the Great Charter of Henry VII., dated in the 21st year of his reign; with Further Grant, amongst other things, that, in the case of the Mayor or one of the Sheriffs of Chester dying within his term of office, the citizens may elect another person in a manner and under conditions precisely set forth to serve in the place of the deceased mayor or sheriff until the end of term, for which the same deceased mayor or sheriff was elected; and that the mayor and citizens and their successors may have the custody of the persons and estates of the orphans of the said city. Dated at Westminster.

(37.) 11 October, 20 Elizabeth. Warrant of Edward earl of Lincoln, baron of Clinton and Say, K.G., Lord High Admiral, for the release from arrest and immediate discharge of a certain ship of the port of London, named the Greyhound, and now lying under arrest in the port of Chester. The immediate liberation of the vessel is ordered, anything in a previous warrant for its arrest, dated on 6 Sept. ult., notwithstanding. On the dorse a memorandum of the execution of the warrant. Also, on the dorse, in modern hand-writing, a curious misdescription of the document by a scribe who mistook it for a warrant to arrest the vessel in question. The same misdescription appears in the Index of the Chester muniments.

(38.) 3 October, 23 Elizabeth. Bond of John Robinson, merchant of Chester, James Wilkinson, officer of Sir Francis Walsingham, knt., farmer of the queen's customs of the port of Chester, and Robert Thornton, gentleman, in the sum of 100*l.*, to hold the Mayor and citizens of Chester, Thomas Tetlowe and Thomas Lynaker, the sheriffs of Chester, Thomas Throp, water-bailiff of Chester, and Thomas Ripon and Thomas Richardson, harmless in all suits respecting a seizure of a cargo of corn made on a warrant of the earl of Derby, lieutenant of cos. Lancaster, Chester and the city of Chester, in execution of orders for restraining the exportation of corn beyond seas.

(39.) — 30 Elizabeth. Warrant of Charles lord Howard, baron of Effingham, Lord High Admiral, to Vice-admirals, sheriffs, and others, for the execution of a decree of Julius Cesar, Doctor of Laws and Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, in the suit of John Hendeman and Everard Shrowder, of Breme, against Roger Darwall, Thomas Bagnalle and Geoffrey Cooke, of the city of Chester, condemning the said Roger, Thomas and Geoffry in the amount of one hundred marks to be paid to the said John Hendeman and Everard Shrowder; viz., forty marks to be paid by Roger Darwall, forty marks by Thomas Bagnalle, and twenty marks by Geoffrey Cooke or his surety Robert Evans, of Chester.

(40.) 30 May, 1590. Commission by the Archbishop of Canterbury, with the seal of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury appended thereto, appointing John Darbye, of the city of New Sarum, in the county of Wiltes, to be an apparitor of the said court, and to discharge all the functions of that office in Wiltshire, Hampshire, and Berkshire.

(41.) 4 May, 44 Elizabeth. Indented certificate that Owen Jones, mercer and citizen of Chester, duly appointed for the matter under consideration by John Ratcliffe, mayor of the said city, has received from Vincent Skynner, esq., one of the officers of the Receipt of the Exchequer, and had out of the Treasury of the same Exchequer "one standard bushell, gallou, quarter " and "pinte of brasse," and has duly paid the various charges for the same measures.

(42.) 7 February, 2 James I. Letters Patent, by James the First to the citizens of Chester, of Inspecimus and Confirmation of the Letters Patent, dated 14 June, 16 Elizabeth, of Inspecimus and Confirmation of the charter dated in the 21st year of Henry VII. to the same citizens, with further grant of power to the citizens of Chester for the election of a mayor or sheriff in a case of a mayor or sheriff of Chester dying during his year of office. Dated at Westminster.

(43.) 25 May, 12 James I. Indented certificate that James Bingley, esq., auditor of the Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer, has given to John Blanchard, a citizen of Chester, duly authorised to act for his city in the business under consideration, and that the said John Blanchard has received from the said James Bingley "one standard brasen bushell having his Hightnes " style and armes embossed thereon," and stamped at the bottom with the Exchequer stamp, to be kept in some convenient place of Chester, and there used as a standard bushell measure, in lieu of a certain other standard bushell measure delivered out of Queen Elizabeth's Exchequer in the 44th year of her reign, to the mayor and citizens, and no longer fit for use between buyer and seller.

(44.) 14 March, 15 James I. Grant during pleasure by Charles, Prince of Wales and earl of Chester, to Henry Harpur, gentleman, of the mastership or keeping of the St. Giles's Hospital for infirm people of Boughton, outside the east bar of the city of Chester, (magisterium sive custodiam Hospitalis Infirmorum Sancti Egidii de Boughton extra Barras orientales ciuitatis nostre Cestrie), together with all the profits and perquisites of the same office, even as Peter Maynewaringo or Henry Coney or Thomas Harpur, or any other previous master of the said office, held and received the same, — Teste mcipso apud Cestriam.

(45.) 19 September, 8 Charles I. Commission to the Mayor and Sheriffs and the other "head officers" of the city of Chester, to collect contributions from benevolent persons within the said city and its liberties, for the repair of St. Paul's cathedral in London.

(46.) 20 December, 9 Charles I. Another commission addressed to the Mayor, Sheriffs and other "head officers" of the city of Chester. For the collection of contributions from benevolent persons within the said city and its liberties, for the repair of St. Paul's Cathedral. Dated at Westminster.

(47.) October 1635. Warrant of the Vice-Admiral's Court to all sheriffs, bailiffs, constables, &c., to cause all seamen, fishermen or others of the port of Chester, to appear on Friday the 9th inst., before Matthew Anderson, bachelor of laws and Judge of the Admiralty Court or his deputy, at the house of John Tilston, of Eastgate Street.

(48.)—10 January, 17 Charles I.—Commission addressed to the Mayor and to the Recorder of Chester for the time being, and also to Charles Walley, William Gamwell and Robert Harvey, aldermen of Chester; authorising them "to tender and administer to all and " every commander and commanders, officer and officers, " souldyer and souldyers whiche shall passe bye or " through our said citye or the lymittes or precinctes " thereof to serve in the wars against the Rebels in " our realme of Ireland the oath of supremacy " in a certain statute of 1 Elizabeth, and the oath of allegiance contained in a certain act of parliament of 3 James I. —Dated at Westminster.

(49.)—23 June 1655.—Grant by Oliver Cromwell, by the grace of God Lord Protector of the Commonwealth, &c., of the patronage and care of the Hospital of St. John the Baptist, of the city of Chester, to the mayor, aldermen, and citizens of the same city; with further grant of the office of keeper or warden of the same hospital to the Major of Chester for the time being, to have and hold the said office during his mayoralty and no longer, and in like manner to every succeeding mayor for the time being.—Dated at Westminster.

(50.)—6 June, 16 Charles II.—Letters Patent of Charles the Second to the citizens of Chester. For the renewal and confirmation of the liberties and powers granted by a charter of 21 Henry VII., and another charter of 16 Elizabeth; and for their enlargement in a few particulars.—Dated at Westminster.

(51.)—26 November 1670.—Indented certificate that Thomas Willcock, mayor of the city of West Chester, has received at the Court of the Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer several measures of brass, for the use of the people of Chester, from the Commissioners and chamberlains for the Treasury.

(52.)—4 February, 37 Charles II.—Letters Patent of Charles the Second to the citizens, for the re-constitution of the corporation of the county of the city of Chester. Containing the following clause, no table for the names of the excepted persons, "Et quod cives et inhabitantes " civitatis predicte (Rogerio Whitley, armigero, Thoma " Whitley, filio ejusdem Rogeri, Johanne Manwaring, " armigero, Willelmo Williams, nuper Recordatore " civitatis predicte, Georgio Booth, Willelmo Streete, " Georgio Manwaring et Michaele Johnson tantummodo exceptis) sint una Communitas et corpus corporatum et politicum in re et facto per se."—Dated at Westminster.

(53.)—15 September, 4 James II.—Letters Patent of James the Second for the re-incorporation of the citizens and city of Chester, as a corporation to be henceforth styled and known as the county of the city of Chester, with a mayor, recorder, aldermen, sheriffs, common councillors, and divers subordinate officers. Appointing Thomas Stanley, bart., to be the first mayor; Richard Leving, esq., to be the first recorder; the same Thomas Stanley and Richard Leving, and the beloved Major-General Robert Werden, Peter Shakerley, Thomas Simpson, Roger Whitley, George Booth, Thomas Whitley, John Manwaring, George Manwaring, Peter Edwards, Henry Lloyd, John Anderson, Richard Wright, Thomas Cooper, Richard Bridge dyer, Thomas Wright, Thomas Hand, Michael Johnson, Robert Murray, Thomas Fernehagh, Benjamin Crickley, Robert Huett, Robert Denteth and Lewis Williams to be the first aldermen; and John Wright, Richard Bridge, Nathaniell Basnett, Joseph Basnett, John Pugh, Thomas Minshall, Ralph Wally, Timothy Deane, John Kineston, Thomas Boulbourne, Charles Leech, Robert Anderson, Edward Boroughs, Samuel Kerkcs, Henrie Hall, Arthur Bellend, William Bristow, Thomas Bolland, John Holland, Samuel Gerard, Richard Minshall, Henry Pemberton, Robert Spark, William Mercer, Randal Aston, Philip Williams, Randall Wilson, Henry Bennett, Richard Higginson, Peter Pemberton, William Crew, Nathaniell Beaven, Peter Lloyd, John Hilton, William Cockayne, Samuel Farington, John Kerkcs, Thomas Young, Thomas Jackson, and Edward Hnicks, to be the first common councillors; Timothy Deane and John Kynaston to be the first sheriffs; Thomas Simpson to be the first town-clerk; Thomas Whitley and John Mainwaring to be the first coroners; George Mainwaring and Peter Edwards to be the first surveyors of the walls of the city; Roger Whitley and George Booth to be the first treasurers; Thomas Jackson and Edward Hnicks to be the first "leave lookers" of the city; Joseph Lingley to be the first sword-bearer; Powell Williams to be the first mace-bearer; Edward Farry to be the first yeoman of the pentice; and John Warmingham, gentleman, to be the first crier or hall keeper of the said city, under the same new charter. It is especially provided that the said mayor, recorder, aldermen, common councillors, and other officers and their official successors, are and shall be under no obligation to take the oath of supremacy set forth in a certain statute of 1 Elizabeth, or the oath of allegiance set forth in a certain statute of 3 James I., or the oaths prescribed in the statute of 13 Charles II. "for the well-governing and regulating of Corporations," or to take the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in accordance with the rite of the Established Church, or to make any declaration or subscription required by the aforesaid statute of Charles or by a later statute of 25 Charles II., entitled "An Act for preventing dangers which may happen from Popish Recusants."—Dated at Westminster.

(54).—26 October, 4 James II.—Letters Patent of Pardon to the mayor and citizens of the city of Chester, in respect to an indictment against them in Hillary term, of 35-36 Charles II., and in Trinity term of the 36th year of the same king: with remission of all forfeitures, pains, and penalties consequent thereon.

(55).—5 September, 1 William and Mary.—Commission to William Street, esq., mayor of the city of Chester, Edward Wynne, esq., George Booth, Richard Levings, esq., William Ince, George Mainwaring, John Anderson, Peter Edwards, Richard Wright, aldermen, Michael Johnson, Robert Murray, and Joseph Basnett, gentlemen, and to the member of parliament for the city of Chester; to put in execution the act lately made in parliament, granting to their Majesties "an aid of twelve pence in the pound for one year for the necessary defence of their realms."

(56).—12 February, 8 William III.—Commission to Henry Lloyd, Thomas Hand, Benjamin Crutchley, Robert Murray, Michael Johnson, aldermen of the city of Chester, Mr. Timothy Dean, grocer, Mr. John Holland, draper, and Morgan Whitley, esq., to be commissioners in the said city for putting in execution the lately made Act of Parliament "for granting an aid to his Majesty as well by a Land Tax as by several subsidies and other duties payable for one year."—Dated at Westminster.

(57).—5 March, 12 William III.—Commission of Gaol Delivery for the city of Chester, addressed to William Earl of Derby, chamberlain of the County Palatine of Chester, Joseph Jekyl, knt., justice of Chester, Salathiel Lovell, knt., serjeant-at-law, recorder of London, another justice of Chester, William Bennett, esq., mayor of the city of Chester, and others.

(58).—24 July, 3 Anne.—Commission by Hugh Lord Viscount Cholmondeley, Lord Lieutenant of the County Palatine of Chester, to John Hurleston, esq., to be captain of a company of the militia of the said county.

(59).—20 October, 17 George II.—Grant to John Dutton, of Englishcomb, co. Somerset, of the custody of the person with the government of Samuel Catherrall, late of Oriel College, Oxford, who has been duly found to be a lunatic by a commission de Lunatico Inquirendo. With further grant to Frances Catherrall of the city of Chester, spinster, of the custody and management of the said lunatic's manors, messuages, tenements, and other estate, under the inspection and direction of the court of Chancery.

(60).—7 November, 44 George III.—Grant to the mayor and citizens of Chester that the mayor of the same city for the time being may appoint as his deputy any one of the aldermen for the time being who shall have served in the office of mayor of the said city.

(61).—27 February, 6 William IV.—Grant that a separate Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace shall continue to be holden in and for the borough of Chester.

(b.) Books.

(1.) Act of Parliament (A.D. 1825) (printed) for erecting an additional bridge over the River Dee in the city of Chester.

(2.) Alehouse-Keeper and Victuallers' Recognizances Books for years 20 James I.; A.D. 1653; 9 to 33 George II.; 1 to 4, 11 to 28, 39 to 48 George III.; 59 George III. to 1 George IV.; and 2 to 5 George the Fourth.

(3.) Annuitants' Receipt Books (A.D. 1765, 1766, 1772). Containing acknowledgments of the payment of annuities by the Corporation of Chester to divers persons, annuitants of the said corporation by virtue of a bond under the seal of the Mayor and Citizens of Chester, bearing date 24 December 1757.

(4.) Apprentices' Indentures' Book (A.D. 1690 to 1794.

(5.) Assembly Books. Being the Books of minutes of proceedings at Assemblies in Common Hall of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, for the transaction of municipal business.

1. Assembly Book for years 1539 to 1624 inclusive. This volume suffered greatly from exposure to damp in a cellar in Bloomsbury Square, London, whither it had been brought in an early year of the present century, together with other records from Chester, so that it might be in the custody of a solicitor for purposes of evidence touching matters then in litigation. On this lawyer's removal from Bloomsbury Square to another part of town, the Chester writings appear to have altogether escaped his recollection. Anyhow they were left to rot in the cellar for several years, when they were fortunately discovered and restored to their rightful owners by Mr. Walker, the present town-clerk of Chester. The book would at this date be in still worse condition, had it not shortly after its recovery fallen into the hands of Mr. Black, the archaeologist, who was authorised to repair the injured leaves and take measures for the preservation of all that remained of so interesting a record, —containing, with other matters,

(a.) An Index to the contents of the volume.

(b.) A list of the Mayors and Sheriffs of Chester, beginning in an early year of Edward the Third, and continued by various writers to the year of our Lord 1784.

(c.) Two statements of the bounds and limits of the city of Chester. One of them, entitled "The meyzes and boundes of the circuite of the liberties of the citie of Chester, newly viewed by Henry Gee, mayre of the same citie, by the adynse and consent of his most ancient and discrete brederne in the second tyme of his Mayoraltye, and as the same now be known and cauled;" the year of Henry Gee's second mayoralty having been in 31 and 32 Henry VIII.

(d.) List of the streets and lanes of Chester in the time of Edward III., headed, "Hereafter folowthe the names of all the streets and lanes within the Citie of Chester and suburbs of the same, as they wer named in the dayes of kinge Edward the thridde and afore by the recorde therof in wryting in a table, and copied herin by the commandment of the Worshipfull Rychard Dutton, mayor of the said citie."

(e.) An Account of the several wards of the city of Chester, headed, "Item, Hereafter folowth all the wardes of the citie of Chester, viewed and set out by the worshipfull Henry Gee, Mayre of the said citie, as appereth by a tabull made of the same."

(f.) A Rental described thus, "Hereafter folioith the Gabul Renthes which the sherreffes be charged with, vewyd and sett forth in the tyme of the worshipfull Henry Gee in the first tyme of his mayraltie, anno Domini 1533, in the xxv. yere of the reigne of King Henry the eyght."

(g.) Table of customs, described thus, "These customos folowing be receued and taken within the citie of Chestre most commonlye amongst othe customes herein not named by the officers underwrytton according to the graunt of the said citie, and veed tyme out of mynde to be taken as folowth hereafter by the commandement of Henry Gee, mayre." The underwritten officers being the muryngers, sherreffes, recorder, lenelokers, bontys or lyghtners, carters, and porters of the city.

(h.) Table of the varions fees due from divers sources and on varions occasions to the mayor, swordbearer, serjeant of the peace, four serjeants of the mace, yeoman of the pendice, the sheriffs' two yeomen, the crier, wall-bailiff, and bellman of the city of Chester, under the following heading—"Here after folioith the Feis belonging to officers of this citie as the be yoused in the secunde tyme of the worshipfulle Henry Gee, beyng mayre anno Domini 1540."

(i.) Table of the various fees accruing from their offices to the recorder and to the clerk of the pentice of the city of Chester, under this heading, "Memorandum that it is orderyd at Asemble in the Pendice holdyn the vth day of Octobre in the xxxii. yere of kynge Henrye the Eight by Henry Gee, mayre of this citie, the sherreffs and aldermen and commyn counsell of the same for the feys of the Recorder in the cortwes in the Commyn Hall or elswher before the mayre, and also for feys belonging to the shireffes clerke in the courte of the Pendice of the said cytye, providyd alwayes that the feis hereafter wrytyn may be addyd or mynysshed by the mayre, sherriffes, aldermen, and the common counsell from tyme to tyme."

(k.) Memorandum respecting the form and manner of calling the watch on Christmas-eve and two following with a list of certain customary tenants bound to render homage to the city of Chester, 34 Henry VIII.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

(l.) Rental of the city of Chester under this heading,—
“The Rentalle of the common rentes and rents of Assie belonging to the cite of Chestre by yere, renouate and made by Henry Gee, draper, maire of the same cite, in the first yere of his meyrealte aswell by dyserse old reutalles by his diligens with other of his brethern to vici the same the xiiith day of Auguste in the xviith yere of the reign of King Henry the eyght.”

(m.) Order of Assembly, made 21 November, 31 Henry VIII., that no one exercise a craft within the liberties of Chester unless he be free of the city.

(n.) Order of Assembly, of the same date, that none but freemen be officers of the mayor and sheriff's of Chester.

(o.) Orders of Assembly, made in the same year, for discouraging vagrancy and idleness, and punishing dishonest beggars.

(p.) Orders for the regulation of the corn-market. It is directed that no corn be offered for sale before the ringing of the market-bell; after which signal ordinary householders of the city may buy corn for their proper use till one o'clock, when bakers may buy till two o'clock—
“And then at ii. of the clocke it shalbe lawfull to all and every the comon people to come into the saide markyt and ther to bye at ther libertez till iii. of the clock all manar of corne and grayne.”

(p.) Orders, made in the 31st year of Henry VIII., for the encouragement of archery and the regulation of the sports on Shrove Tuesday. The Shrove Tuesday sports took place in the presence of the Mayor and Aldermen, and owed their success in a great degree to the drapers', saddlers', and shoemakers' companies. It is recorded in the memorandum, “That the said occupacions of shoumaeres, which alwaye time out of maner remembrance hane genen and deliuered yerely vpon tuesday comonly cauled Shrofe tuesday, otherwysse Gowdnesday, at afternone of the same, vnto the drapars afore the mayre of the cite, at the Cros vpon the Rode-hee, one bale of leather cauled a fount baule, of the value of iiii. iiiii.d. or above, to play at from thens to the comon haule of the said cite. And further at pleasure of enille disposed persons, wherefore hath ryssen grete incouenyence, &c.—Fromhensforth shall yerlye vpon the said Tuesday gene and deliuer vnto the said drapars afore the mayre of the said cite for the tyme being, at the said playes and tyme, six gleaunes of siluer, to the value of enery of them vi.d. or above at the discretion of the drapars, and the Mayre of the said cite for the tyme being, To whom shall run best and furthest vpon foot before them upon the said Rode-hee that day or anye other daye after at the Drapers pleasure, with the ouersyght of the Mayre for the tyme beyng; and also that the said occupacion of saddlers within the said cite which be all the same tyme of no maner remembrance hane genen and deliuered yerely the said place and tyme enery master of them vnto the said drapars, afore the mayre for the tyme being, a payntyd baule of wood with floures and armes upon the poynte of a spere, being goodly arayd vpon horsbak accordingly,—from hensforth shall the said tuesday houre and place gyue and deliuer vnto the said drapars afore the mayre for the tyme beyng vpon horsbak a bell of syluer to the value of iiii. iiiii.d. or above, to be ordred as is aforesaid by the drapars and the mayre of the said cite for the tyme being to whome shall runne best and furthest vpon horsbak before them the said daye and tyme and place; and that also every man that hayth bene maryed within the said cite sithens Shraffs tuesday last past, shall vpon the said Shraffs tuesday next to come, at the said tyme and place, gene and deliuer vnto the said drapars afore the mayre now being an arrow of siluer, to the value of fyve pence or above, in value and recompence of such baule of silke or veluet.”

(q.) Curious order, made in 32 Henry VIII., against excesses of feasting and expense at the churching of women after childbirth: whereby it is ordained that “from hensforth ther shall be no such dishes, metes and wyues vsed to be brought to eny woman at childbed nor at churching, nor also that no woman except the mydwife shall go into the house with hur that is churched, but to bryng hur home to the dore, and so to departe, vpon payne of fortyfour of v.i.s. viii.d. to be leuied ageynst the person that ouith the house, and iiii.s. iiiii.d. of enery other person offending the said order as oft as anye of thaym shalbe found giltye in the same. Provided that the moders and systers

“with the systers in lane of the woman so churchid may lauffely enter and go into the house with the mydwife.”

(r.) Order, made 32 Henry VIII., for correcting and putting an end to irregularities amongst women in the wearing of caps, kerchiefs, and hats; whereby it is ordained, “That after the eyght day of September next comyng, no manar single or vmaryed woman within the saide cite shall weyn vpon hur hede eny whyte cap or of other colour vnder payne of iiii.s. for every tyme so offending, nor that eny wyfe, wedo, or other woman or mayde wythin the same cite after the daye aforesaid shall weare eny hatt of blacke or other colour onles it be when she rydes or els goith on walking abroad into the foldes or country, under payne of iiii.s. iiiii.d., and every tyme so offending this ordinaunce. Provided allwayes, that all women being very aged or diseased with grete sickenes may for ther bealthe and necessary comfort of ther healtthe vse hattes and capes as they hane done aforetyme.”

(s.) Order, made on 4 September, 35 Henry VIII., for building a new Town Hall; whereby it was ordained, “that ther shalbe a new Comen Hanle erectyd, builded, and made within the Northgate Strete of the saide cyte, that is to wyt in Saynte Nicolas Chapill, nygh vnto Sent Werburge of the said cite; and towards the belldinge of the same, at the said Assemble, by the advyse of the said mayre, the said aldermen, and comen counsell of the same cytie and frelye gyfte and the grant their partie and porcion of a comon bargayne of lii. tones of ierne lately discharged wythin the said cytie by Senceo Dermiche, hyspaniard, and the said Mayre being hedd of the occupacion of Iron-mongers gaue three tonne of Iron, which amounteth to the somme of xxiii.li. sterling, frely to the bellding of the said comen haule; and emedyatly set workemen to frame and belde the same hall in the yere “aboute sayde.”

(t.)—Copy of Earl Ranulph's charter for the nuns of Chester:—Ranulphus comes Cestrie episcopus, &c., &c. Sciatis me dedisse et in perpetuum elemozinam concessisse Deo et Sancte Marie, et monialibus Cestrie nostris in Christo sororibus, illas croftas quas Hugo filius Olinori de dominio meo tenuit concessione et bona voluntate ipsius Hugonis, ita quod illas clamavit quietas coram me et Comitissa et plurimis baronum meorum, liberas et immunes ab omnibus secularibus serviciis et omnimodo subiectione ad edificandam ibi ecclesiam in honore Dei et Sancte Marie, in Remissionem peccatorum et ad fundamentum sui edificii. Volo igitur et precipio quod ecclesia ista in Elemozina mea fundata de tolneto et omni exactione seculari libera sit et quieta, et curiam suam et dignitatem ac libertatem in omnibus, et per omnia prout libera existit elemosina habent. Quare vobis mando diligenter et in Domino obsecro (quatenus predictam ecclesiam et moniales ibidem Deo et Sancte Marie servientes cum omnibus ad illas pertinentibus pro Deo et communi salute mee videlicet anime et vestrarum, manteneatis et protegatis, et ne patiamini quod elemosina mea depravetur neque moniales in ea manentes ab aliquibus vexentur. Testibus, Johanne filio comitis Fulconis de Brichsand, Radulpho Mansell, Ricardo pincerna. Apud Cestriam.—Also, copy of a charter of Insepimus and Confirmation of the charter whereby Hugh earl of Chester confirmed to the nuns of the Blessed Mary of Chester all the privileges conferred on them by his father earl Ranulph or others.

(u.)—Order, made 30 May, 17 Elizabeth, “That the plaies comonly called the Whitson plaies at Mid-sommer next comynge, shalbe sett furth and plaied in such orderly manner and sorte as the same hane bene accustomed, with such correction and amendement as shalbe thought convenient by the said Maior, and all charges of the said plaies to be supported and borne by th inhabitants of the said cite.”

(v.)—Several orders, made on 13 May and 1 June, 26 Elizabeth, for rendering due honour to the Earl of Leicester on the occasion of his coming to Chester. One of the entries running thus, “at which day” (i.e., the first of June) “mociun was made whether more convenient in stid of the former banquet appoynted at the laste former Assembly to be prepared for the Erle of Leicester, to hane that faire standinge cupp, which Mr. John Tillson nowe hath bought, and that cnp with xl. angels of goodle to be presented to his Honor, which cupp is valued after xviii. li. or there aboutes, yet wilbe had for lesse, as is supposed. And vpon consideration and good adviement therof had and vpon understandinge that his honor delyteth not in banquettes, neyther shalbe occasioned to stay the

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

"tyme thereof in this city. It is at this Assembly fully concluded and agreed vpon by the saide maior and aldermen, sherifes and common counsaile of the saide cite, That the saide banquet shalbe spared, and that the saide cupp and number of Angelles shalbe his presented to honour."

(w.)—Order of Assembly, made 26 June, 26 Elizabeth, respecting the Earl of Leicester's letter, begging that a certain Mr John Edwards, a wealthy man, might be admitted to the franchise of the city of Chester. After much debate the Assembly reluctantly determined to refuse the earl's petition, and to deny the franchise of their city to Mr. Edwards, in consideration that he was much too rich for a city of poor traders. "The conveyence and inconvenience thereof," it is recorded, "was duly considered of, and albeit the whole incorporation was moste desyrous to accomplysh his honours suche requeste, yet consideringe what hurte and hinderances he, the saide Edwards, might doe the occupiers of euery occupation in this citie, being a man of greate substance, and by that substance would take all the whole trade vnto his own handes, and thereby vndoe the roste of the sayde occupacions:—It is nowe by the saide maior, aldermen, and sherifes and comen counsaile fully determined that the said John Edwards is no fytt person to be receyued into the franchises of this citie. And to that ende a letter vnto his honour's lordship signefying the same, and most humbly besceching his honours patience in that behalf."

(x.) Orders, made 18 April, 31 Elizabeth, touching the embroiderers and weavers of Chester. "And at the same Assemblie," it is recorded, "the imbroiderers exhibited the supplicacion againste the weavers, which is red; and for a newe graunte. . . . And also the said weuers exhibited the supplicacion againste the saide imbroiderers for that they kepe a silke weaver, which the weavers affirme belonge to them, workinge with reed and shuttle. It is ordered that the same shalbe further considered of."

(y.) Order made 9 July 1589, "That suche as be nowe meare marchauntes there for the trade of Spayne and Portugall, and all other free citizens of that cite that are or hereafter shalbe of that societie or company, or otherwise vse the trade of merchandize there, shall or maie together with there trade of marchandize vse the benefit of retayling in some one trade, to wit, either to be a draper, mercer, vintner, ironmonger, or suche like, beinge noe manual occupation; and so to contynue to theym selves, their widowes, children, and apprentices without alteration after once choise by them so made. And alsoe that all retaylers within the said cite, aswell those which haue not heretofore vsed the trade of marchandize, as those which heretofore haue vsed it, and suche as hereafter shalbe retaylers and willinge to vse the trade of marchandize shall and may likewise be at there libertie to vse the trade of merchandize."

(z.) Order touching the barber-surgeons, made 19 October, 35 Elizabeth. "And moreover," it is recorded, "at this Assembly the Barbor surgeons haue exhibited their bill againste forren surgeons, prayinge that they may be excluded, or ells to enter into bandes not to trade their occupacions within the saide cite hereafter: It is nowe at this Assembly fully ordered that all such offenders shall be called before Mr. Maior, and constrained to shewe their lycens of admittance or ells be restrayned."

(aa.)—Order, made 30 July, 11 James I., touching the appointment of "waites" for the city. "And finallye, at this Assemblie," it is recorded, "George Callie, musician, exhibiteth his petition, desiringe that he and his felowe musitians may be admitted waytes of this citie in steed of the Waytes now absent, fyndinge instruments of his owne charge to performe the service; which is deferred to be graunted vntill it may be vnderstoode what are become of the old waytes."—Also, under the same date, a complete list of the Trained Soldiers of the city of Chester.

(bb.) Order, made 20 October, 13 James I., touching the use of the town-hall by stage-players:—"Moreover, at the same Assemblie consideration was had of the comon brute and scandall whiche this citie hath of late incurred and sustained by admittinge of Stage Plaiers to acte their obscene and vnlawfull plaies or tragedies in the Comon Hall of this citie, thereby conuertinge the same, beinge appointed and ordained for the iudiciall hearinge and determininge of criminall offences, and for the solempne meetinge and concourse of this howse, into a stage for plaiers and a receptacle for idle persons; and consideringe likewise the many disorders which by reason of plaies acted in the night time doe often times happen and fall out to the discredit of the government of this citie, and to the great disturbance of quiet and well disposed people, and beinge further informed that men's seruantes and apprentices neglectinge their masters' busines doe resort to Inn howses to behold such plaies, and there manie times wastefullie spend their masters' goodes:—For avoidinge of all whiche inconveniences, It is ordered that from hensforth noe Stage Plaiers vpon anie pretence or colour whatsoever shalbe admitted or licenced to set vp anie stage in the said Comon Hall or to acte anie tragedie or comedie or any other plaie by what name soever they shall terme yt, in the said hall or anie other place within this citie or the liberties therof in the night time or after vi. of the clocke in the eveninge."

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

(cc.)—Order, made 20 October, 17 James I., touching a controversy between the clothiers and weavers of the city of Chester:—"Also where the Company of Clothiers petitioned to the whole Assemblie that they might haue libertie for the settinge vpp of loomes within the citie for weaueing of such yarne as they themselves made, or else that they weavers within this citie would content themselves with their ancient pryces, as formerlie and of late itt hath bene accustomed by them to be taken; Itt was thereupon ordered that the companie of weavers should see this petition and give their answer therevnto, either at the next Assembly or else to Mr. Maior and his brethren in the Pentence, when and where it should bee further considered vpon."

II.—Assembly Book for years 1624 to 1684 inclusive. The most noteworthy of orders entered on its leaves being those that relate to measures for the defence of the city of Chester during the civil war between Charles the First and the Parliament. The volume contains also some interesting entries respecting the prevalence of the plague in and about Chester in the 7th year of Charles the First, and the disputes between the mercers, silk-weavers, and linen-draperies, in the 10th year of the same king.

(a.) Order, made 6 September, 18 Charles I., "on consideration of the present and imminent dangers that are vpon the land," for the collection by assessment from the inhabitants of Chester of the sum of one hundred marks "for the reparation of the gates and fortification of the said city."—Also, order of the same date for strictly levying all "magazin money," heretofore assessed on the same inhabitants, but as yet unpaid, for the purchase of powder and shot.

(b.) Order, made 28 September, 18 Charles I., for collecting by assessment from the inhabitants of Chester the sum of 300l.; two of the same three hundred pounds to be given to the king, and one to the Prince of Wales.

(c.) Order, made 21 October, 18 Charles I., for raising and arming three hundred soldiers, in addition to the trained band already in arms, for the defence of the city.

(d.) Orders, made 11 November, 18 Charles I., for the defence of the city:—viz., for keeping eight soldiers on guard day and night at the East, North, Water, Bridge, Fore, and Cowlane Gates, at each gate, four of them being musketeers and four halberdiers; for keeping day and night a guard of two musketeers and two halberdiers at the New Gate; for maintaining day and night at the High Cross "a court of guard" consisting of twelve persons, appointed to direct the guards at the several gates; for the selection of eight men from the trained band to instruct the soldiers of the watch in the use of their arms; and for providing the same soldiers with adequate weapons and proper payment. At the same time order was given for a general muster on the following Monday of all the soldiers, volunteers as well as trained handmen, of the city.

(e.) Record of a resolution, made 6 December, 18 Charles I., "That wee shall ioyne together in a mutuall association for the defence of this city against all forces whatsoever that shall come in any hostile manner for to invade this city or to disturbe the peace thereof." With orders of the same date for a general contribution from the inhabitants of the city towards the charge of making an adequate provision of arms and ammunition, constructing outworks and planting ordnance. It being "further ordered by the said Assembly that Mr. Maior, Captain Gamul, Alderman Throppe, Mr. Owen Hughes, Mr. John Whittell, Humphrey Lloyd and Daniel Greatbatch shalbe overseers of the said worke; and that Mr. Robert

“Wright, Mr. Richard Bradshawe, Mr. Edward Hutton, and Mr. Thomas Mottershead shall be collectors of the said contribution and moneys.”

(f.) Order, made 3 February, 18 Charles I., for levying by rate from the citizens and other inhabitants of Chester of the sum of 500*l*. for making the fortifications and carrying on the defence of the same city.

(g.) Order, made 17 February, 18 Charles I., for the strict and punctual collection by the constables of the moneys appointed to be levied for military exigencies, so that the soldiers may be paid their weekly wages every week:

(h.) Order, made 19 July, 20 Charles I., for levying moneys by weekly payments for the repair of “the mudwalls;”—Justices of the peace being taxed twelve-pence, other aldermen tenpence, sheriffs eightpence, common-councillmen sixpence each per week for the said work; all other inhabitants of the city being assessed for the same purpose, in proportion to their means.—“And further at this Assembly it was likewise ordered that the sum of fifty pounds shall be forthwith assessed upon the citizens and all other inhabitants of this city, for the speedie repaying of the citie gates, making of Perculles, cleansing of the dicke by the Eastgate, and other things requisite for the good and safety of this garrison.”

(j.) Order, made 3 September, 20 Charles I., for levying from the citizens, residents, and wealthier soldiers of the city, the sum of one hundred pounds per week for the maintenance of the garrison; 60*l*. of the said weekly tax to be levied on the citizens and ancient inhabitants of Chester, and the other 40 “to be assessed” and levied upon such nobilitie, gentrie, clergie and others, which are come for protection into this citie.”

(k.) Order, made 3 September, 20 Charles I., for the abatement of a nuisance near the draw-bridge recently constructed at the East Gate for the defence of the city.—“And lastly, at this Assembly, Mr. John Adlington and others of the inhabitants neere the Eastgate preferred their petition, thereby shewing that since the erecting of the Drawe-Bridge at the same Gate the said petitioners’ sellers (when any raine falls) are drowned, and such noysome smell procede thereby, that they are not able to abide in their houses, much lesse to make vse of their said sellers, and the reason is for that the Drawe Bridge ditch is dampned and choaked vp with filth, having noe way to evacuate; and therefore they humbly besought this Assembly that some course might be thought upon which the defects aforesaid might be amended for the prevention of infection; which petition being taken into consideration, it was by general consent ordered that the said ditch shalbe cleansed, and a perculles made for the Eastgate aforesaid, and for to oversee the said workes Mr. Robert Harvie, alderman, is by this house desired to take the paines, and therein to follow such directions as he shall receive from the Governor of the Citie.”

(l.) Order, made 31 January, 20 Charles I., “That as much of the antient Plate of this city as will amonte to the sum of one hundred poundes shalbo forthwith converted into coyne for the necessary vse and defence of this city and towards the payment of the cities debts.”—Also, an order for stringent measures to be taken against those citizens and other inhabitants who, to the great prejudice of his Majesty’s service, have neglected to pay their proportion of the weekly tax of one hundred pounds, and of a certain other tax for the city’s defence.

(m.) Order, made 18 February, 20 Charles I., touching “Prince Rupert’s foot regiment.—“At which Assembly it was motioned by the Right Worshipfull the Maior of this citie, that some course might be thought upon for the speedie raisinge of moneys for his Highnes Prince Rupert’s foote regiment now resident in this garrison; whereupon Information was given by his Majesties Commissioners for sequestring of delinquents’ estates for the mayntenance of the said garrison that severall summes of money was to them due (for the use of the said garrison) for delinquents’ estates, from the persons hereinaft mentioned; it was thereupon agreed and ordered by this Assembly (together with the said Commissioners), that fortie poundes out of the said delinquents estates shalbe transferred over to Serjant-Major Michel, to be levied and gathered by such as the said Maior shall (in that behaffe) appointe, for the vse of the said regiment, from the said persons mencioned and expressed (in parte payment of such summes as are by them due to the aforesaid Commissioners for the use aforesaid); that is to saye from Mr. Edward Russell twelue poundes, from John Grey tenn poundes, from Docto Maiuwareing tenn poundes, from Mr. William Allen foure poundes, and from Sir Hugh Calveley foure poundes; and it is further ordered that Alderman Parnell and Alderman Broster (Treasurers for this citie) shall fourthwith repaire to the said gentlemen to acquainte them with this order, to the ende they may provide for the payment thereof.”

(n.) Order, made 20 October, 21 Charles I., for levying two hundred poundes or thereabouts . . . for the mayntenance of the soldiars and the other necessaries belonging to the garrison.”

(m.) Copy of the Order of the Parliament, made at Westminster, 1 October 1646, for the better government of the city of Chester, now that it has been reduced to the authority of parliament. Beginning.—“Whereas the Citie of Chester hath bin from the beginning of these vnnatural wars vnder the power of the enemy, and many aldermen, sherriffes peeres, and common counsellmen of the said citie have taken vp armes or otherwise bin violent fomenters of these vnnatural wars against the Parliament; and the said citie being now by the Providence of God reduced to the obedience of the Parliament, And whereas Charles Walley, mayor of the said citie, Nicholas Ince, and Randall Holme the younger, Thomas Cooper, Thomas Thoppe, Sir Thomas Smith, Francis Gannall, and Robert Breewood, recorder, Richard Dutton, and Robert Sproston, aldermen and justices of the peace of the said citie, James earle of Darby, John earl Rivers, Richard Broster, and Thomas Savage, aldermen, Humphrey Phillipps, Edward Hutton, Thomas Weston, Richard Wright, Humphrey Lloyd, Richard Tailor, and Arthure Walley, sherriffes peeres, and common-councillmen of the same citie have taken vp armes or bin violent opposers of the parliament and their proceedings, Bee it therefore ordered and ordained by the Lords and Commons of Parliament assembled, that the said Charles Walley, maior, &c., &c., shalbe removed and discharged, and hereby are removed and discharged of and from their respective places of mayor, recorder, sherriffes, aldermen, justices of the peace, sherriffes peeres, and common-councillmen, &c., &c.”

III.—Assembly Book for the years 1684 to 1724, inclusive.

IV. Assembly Book begun in the year 1805, as a Register of orders of Assemblies, and used subsequently as a Minutes Book by the City Land Committee, Finance Committee, and other committees.

(6.) Assize of Bread Order Book (A.D. 1767–1768). A record of weekly orders, showing the variations in the price of bread during thirteen successive months.

(7.) Common-Place Book of matters relating to the Corporation of Chester, begun in the year 1801, and ending with “An Account of Expired Leases and Grants put into Boxes in the Record Room, with the number of the division contained on each box, the 29th August 1806.” The numerous deeds of this collection of writings are classified under the following headings:—First Division, Without the Bars Second Division, Bridge Street and Skinners Lane, &c.; Third Division, Eastgate Street; Fourth Division, Foregate Street; Fifth Division, Handbridge; Sixth Division, Northgate Street; Seventh Division, Without the Northgate; Eighth Division, Watogate Street; Ninth Division, Without the Watergate; Tenth Division, Lauds in the country; Eleventh Division, Hospital Lands.—This volume contains also a summary of Orders of Assemblies from 20 January 1624 to 19 September 1798.

(8.) Drawers of the Dee.—Book of the Company and Occupation of the Owners and Drawers of the Deo (A.D. 1572 to 1712). Containing the orders of the company for the government of its members, and the regulation of the fishing of the Dee by nets; with records of admissions into the company, and annual accounts of moneys received and expended by the alderman and stewards of the guild.—The record for A.D. 1572 opens thus:—“Anno Domini 1572, William Crosse, alderman; Robert Hey and Richard Meales, stewards. It is ordered that noe skarman shall travell vpon Dee Water at after day light withe boate, excepte that he be by the consent of the whole company licensed to drawe at any tyme, vpon payne of iii*l*., iii*d*., and also that noe boate shall travell vpon Dee Water in the morninge at any tyme afore foure of the clocke in the morninge, vpon payne of forfeiteure for every defaulto iii*l*., iii*d*.. And alsoe that noe free man nor skarman of the same occupation shall not draw any fishe with a draughtnet in the water of Dee betwixe

"the Bridge of Dee and the Rockes beneath the new Tower, but at the hower appointed by the mooste election of the same compenye. And there shalbe noe hower set at after fyve of the clocke vpon Saterdaie in the aftermoone, vpon payne of forfeiture vi.s. viii.d. for every defawlte. . . . Item it is agreed vpon that if eny skarmor or skarmen doe at any time take eny trowtes or salmond frey with there draught netes and doe not caste them into the water againe, the saide skarmor or skarmen so offending shall paye iii.s. iiiii.d. apece."

(9.) Genealogies of Earls of Chester, drawn and emblazoned, temp. Elizabeth. A Book of six richly emblazoned genealogical charts on vellum; exhibiting the lineage of the earls of Chester from Hugh Lupus, and the pedigrees of Scot earl of Chester, Quincy earls of Winchester, Lacy earls of Lincoln, and Mortimer barons of Mortimer, Richard's Castle, and Chirke, and earls of March. One of the six charts is imperfect, the labels being without inscription, though the emblazonments and the numbers of those labels show that the sketch was prepared for a genealogical table of the House of Lancaster during the civil wars. The pedigree of the Mortimers is a copy of a genealogical table long preserved at Wigmore Abbey, and is illustrated by the following explanatory note by the heraldic draughtsman: "This Hugh lord Mortimer had the leading of the vaward in the battaile that Willm. Conqueror gave to Edgar Atheling and Swane the son of the kinge of Denmark at Yorke the 3 yere of his raigne. This Hugh Lord Mortimer fownded the Abbey of Wigmore, where the original of this descent was truly kepte and recorded in the booke of the foundation of the same Abbey, which booke remayneth with me Clarencieux Kinge of Armes, and this descent is a trew copy thereof." The scribe's penmanship shows him to have been of the Elizabethan time. On the dorse of the first chart appears this inscription, "William Howard 1610—Ex dono domini Willelmi Howard de Naworth." This same chart is embellished with a richly coloured picture of an Earl of Chester sitting enthroned in parliament, with his barons and spiritual lords, an engraving of which appears in Ormerod's Cheshire.

(10.) Jury Book (A.D. 1750 to 1779). Consisting of lists of the jurors who served on grand or other juries in the city of Chester during the said period.

(11.) Lease-Ledger (folio), A.D. 1574 to 1705. Containing, together with copies of indentures for leases and other grants, various memoranda touching local events, some of which deserve notice from collectors of materials for social history.

(a.) Copy of a letter, dated 10 November 1575, from John Savage:—After my right hartie comendacions, Where it hanthe bene enformed to the Prevey Counsell that I caused the plays laste at Chester to be sett forwarde only of my selfe, whiche yourselves do know ap- the contrary, and they were by Comon Assemblie pointed as remayneth in recorde. For the easinge and qualeyfyng all controuersies growen abowte the same I am moste hartely to desyre you to sende me a certificate vnder your handdes and seale of youre cite to testefy that the same plays were sett forwarde as well by the counsell of the cite as for the common-welth of the same: whereby their honors may be the better satisfied thereof, and hopinge thereby to reduce all suche matters quiett as are risen nowe againste me and Mr. Hankye, whom you muste make mencyon of in the certificate as well as my self, whiche I pray you may be sente me with as muche convenient speede as is possible. So for this tyme I bidd you farewell. At London the xth of November 1575. Your loveing frende, John Savage.

(b.) Memorandum of regulations for the Chester Horse Races, temp. James I.; not dated, but entered, by the scribe employed to keep the record in that king's time, and an extract from the will of Robert Shingleton, esq., dated 12 August 1612. The rules were probably entered in the ledger just before the Chester Races of April 1613, and may have been originally drawn from those races.

Articles to be performed for certain orders touchinge the runninge of a race for twoe bells and likewise for a cuppe to be runne for at the Ringe vpon Saint George his day, being the three-and-twentieth of April, as followeth,—

First, it is agreed vpon that the race for the bells and runninge at the Ringe for the cuppe shall be houlden and kepte vpon St. George his day, except it fall out to light vpon Saturday or Saboath day. Then they shalbe runne vpon Monday next followinge, and the warninge by the drum and cryer shalbe vpon Saturday or the day next before St. George day not being the Saboath.

Secondlie, every man that bringeth in his horse for the race shall put in for to runn for the Bells xx.s., except him that bringeth in the best bell, which shall pay but vis. viii.d., and him that bringeth in the second bell xiii.s. iiiii.d. And he that winneth the firste bell shall have twoe partes of the money that is laid down. And he that winneth the second bell shall have the third parte, which is the residue of the money that is putt in. And every one that rydeth shall waye or be made in weight just tenne stone waight. And to be wayed vpon the Roodey in a paire of scales which shall be set vpp neare unto house where the Maior and his brethren standeth.

Thirdlie, averie one that runneth at the ringe for the cuppe shall put in i.s. vi.d. a man, excepte him that bringeth in the cup accordinge to his covenante by bounde at the tyme appointed, whose shall put nothinge in for three times runninge at the ringe. And whoe- soever doth take it the first three tymes shall have the vse of the cupp accordinge to the covenantes, and soe much money as was put in. And if none doe take it the first three times, then shall all loose their money that they put in at the first, and the said money to be given to the Maior for the tyme beinge for the vse of the poore and prisoners of the Northgate. And they all or as many of them as please to put in newe money, viz., i.s. vi.d. euerie man as before is mencioned, to haue all the last money that was putt in and the vse of the cupp as afore is expressed. Provided alwayes that he that shall winne the game shall pay and give to the prisoners of the North Gate v.s. to the clerke for wrighting of their names downe i.s. vi.d.

Fourthlie, the that winne the Bells shall give to the prisoners in the Northgate x.s., viz., he that winneth the best bell shall give vis. viii.d., and he that winneth the second iiii.s. iiiii.d., if they runne above three horses, and if they runne but three they shall allowe but vis. viii.d. to be paid equalle amongst them.

Fiftie, he that winneth the said bells and cuppe shalbe bounden to the Maior and Citizens of this cite to bringe in the said bells and cupp every yere with one or twoe sufficient surties for the deluery of the said bells of the same waight and goodness as they were when they received them vpp to the Maior or his depute for the time beinge vpon St. George his day, in the Inner Pentice of the said cite of Chester, before twelue of the clocke at noone vpon the same day, beinge the three and twentieth of April, vpon payne of forfeiture of their boundes. Alsoe, they shall pay to the clerke when they doe enter into boundes for making their boundes xii.d. for every bounde.

Lastlie, for givinge of the starte, either Mr. Sheriffes for the time being, or whom Mr. Maior will appointe. And that noe horses, geldinges, or mare shall come vpon the Roodey, but onlie those that doe runne, untill the race be ended. And alsoe that the ryders shall not offer one to another any foule play in their ridinge vpon payne of ymprisonment. And these articles and orders to be kept and performed vnioliated, vpon payne of punishment and forfeiture of the boundes and covenantes.

(12.) Letter Book: Two large folio volumes. Containing nine-tenths of the epistles, petitions, notes and other writings, described in a later section of this report, under the head of "Letters."

(13.) Mayors' Books. An imperfect series of Mayors' Books from the year 16-17 Richard II. to 3-4 William IV., consisting of municipal year books for the following years: 16-17, 17-18, 19-20, 21-22, 22-23 of Richard II.; 6-7, 7-8, 9-10, 11-12, 14-15 of Henry IV.; 2-3, 7-8 of Henry V.; 27-28, 30-31, 31-32, 32-33, 33-34, 34-35, 36-37, 37-38 of Henry VI.; 1-2, 2-3, 6-7, 8-9, 9-10, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17 of Edward IV.; 2-3, 3-4, 4-5, 6-7, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17, 17-18, 19-20, 20-21, 22-23, 23-24 of Henry VII.; 24 Henry VII.—1 Henry VIII., 2-3, 12-13, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 25-26, 28-29, 30-31, 32-33, 33-34, 34-35, 35-36, 36-37, of Henry VIII.; 38 Henry VIII.—1 Edward VI., 1-2, 2-3 Edward VI.; 6 Edward VI.—1 Mary, 1-2 Mary, 1 and 2-2 and 3, 2 and 3-3 and 4 Philip and Mary; 5-6, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14, 15-16, 17-18, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 24-25, 25-26, 29-30, 31-32, 32-33, 33-34, 34-35, 36-37, 37-38, 38-39, 39-40, 40-41, 41-42, of Elizabeth; 3-4, 4-5, 6-7, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14, 15-16, 20-21, 21-22 of James I.; 4-5, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13 of Charles I.; 3-4, 12-13, 15-16, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 28-29, 29-30 Charles II.; 2-3, 3-4 of James II.; 4 James II.—1

William and Mary; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4, 4-5, 5-6 of William and Mary, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 13-14 of William III.; 1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 11-12, 12-13 Anne; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4, 5-6, 6-7, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13 of George I.; 2-3, 5-6, 11-12, 16-17, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 25-26, 26-27, 27-28, 28-29, 29-30, 30-31, 33-34 of George II.; 3-4, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14, 14-15, 16-17, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 25-26, 27-28, 28-29, 29-30, 31-32, 35-36, 36-37, 37-38, 38-39, 39-40, 42-43, 43-44, 44-45, 47-48, 48-49, 51-52, 53-54, 54-55, 55-56, 57-58, 58-59 of George III., 60 George III.—1 George IV.; 1-2, 2-3, 8-9 of George IV.; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4 William IV.

It having been the ancient custom for the Mayor of Chester to enter upon his office on the Friday next following the feast of St. Dionysius, the Mayoral year began and ended on that day.

Kept and made up, as some of their covers and fly-leaves inform the reader, by successive clerks of the Pendice Court of the city of Chester, these books give the names of the aldermen, common-councillors, and subordinate officers of the corporation, together with lists of the bakers and butchers licensed to follow their callings within the liberties of the city. Chiefly useful in former time for their records of admissions to the Merchants' Guild and municipal franchise, their entries of verdicts and judgments delivered at Assizes of Bread and Ale, and their brief reports of pleas and other proceedings in courts of Portmote and Crownmote, they are especially entertaining and valuable at the present date for their numerous memoranda of civic movements, and their occasional references to matters of wider interest. It may not, however, be imagined that these annual registers have escaped the injuries which neglect and exposure to damp are wont to inflict on manuscripts. Indeed no division of the Chester archives has suffered more cruelly in these later years from mould and rot than these curious volumes. Decay and violent misusage have reduced some of the older books to a few detached sheets or fragments of leaves; and in many cases the writing has almost completely faded from the pages which mischance has not diminished. A better account may, however, be given of the condition of several of the books, which, though they may not be altogether free from stains and defacements, are sound throughout, and only a few degrees less legible than they were three or four centuries since, on coming fresh from the hands of their producers.

The following extracts from a few of the older books will indicate the style and quality of the occasional memoranda.

(a.) 17 Richard II. Inquisicio capta coram Gilbert. Trusselle maiore Cestrie die Lune proximo post festum Sancti Jacobi Apostoli anno regni regis Ricardi secundi decimo septimo, per sacramentum Willelmi de Wybunburg, Johannis de Laghton, Ricardi le Fourbour, Hugonis de Hokenhulle, Willelmi le Fourbour, Willelmi de Jus, Johannis de Tyldesley, Thome de Tappourley glouer, Johannis de Salesbury mercer, Thome de Fulsagh glouer, Simonis de Lokeswelle coraysarii et Willelmi Hondeson fyssher juratorum. Qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod Willelmus de le Goldesmyth de Cestria, Johannes Logganer spyer et Johannes Lukes per assensum affinitatem et confederaciam inter eos factos die Veneris proximo post festum Ascensionis Domini anno regni regis Ricardi secundi sexto-decimo in Cestria de nouo ordinauerunt, fabricauerunt et contrafecerant numisma siue eugnum domini Regis Anglie et fecerunt falsum metallum simul mixtum cum argento cupro, plumbo et alkenamy pro bono ad vendendum diuersis hominibus tam civitatis Cestrie quam patrie et de eodem falso metallo ita nequitur mixto contrafecerunt operauerunt et fabricauerunt monetam regiam videlicet denarios falsos dictos grossos, grossos et obolos, ac zonas, chapas et loketes, ac plura alia heresia inabilia secreta de die in diem et nocte in noctem contiue infra dictam ciuitatem a predicto die Veneris vsque festum Sancti Jacobi apostoli tunc proxime sequens, et illos falsos denarios dictos grossos, grossos, obolos, zonas chapas et loketes delibauerunt pacauerunt et venderunt quampluribus hominibus populi domini Regis pro bono et abili argento, in deceptionem et nocumentum tocius populi et prejudicium corone dicti Regis Anglie.

(b.) 22 Richard II. Inquisicio capta apud Cestriam coram vicecomitibus Cestrie die Veneris in crastino Corporis Christi anno regni regis Ricardi secundi xxii., per sacramentum Ricardi de Daycote, Johannis le Glouer Henrici le Coryser, Willelmi Mody, Johannis Russelle portour, Willelmi de Hulfeld couper, Johannis Chirche coryser, Ricardi Short shippemon, Andree le Fremon, Roberti de Theuwall skynner, Willelmi le Tayllour et Ricardi del Halgh, juratorum, qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod Willelmus de Wybunburg senior, Henricus de Felday webster, Thomas Bragot webster, Willelmus de Stretton walker, Thomas le Challoner de Estegatestrete, Thomas de Brynstache heuster, Ricardus de Werburton webster, Willelmus Tay challoner, Rogerus le challoner de Foregatestrete, Hugo de Thurstanton weuer, Ricardus del Hope weuer, Henry Hurtebache, Willelmus Shaghe webster, Ricardus Whyte walker, Willelmus Bull heuster, Ricardus Byme webster, Johannes le Erls challoner, Ricardus Gardeyn walker, Willelmus Bryn walker, Willelmus Porter walker, Ricardus de Hale, Willelmus Thomassone heuster, Johannes Howelle webster, Hugo Bargeyn, Hugo de Legh, Johannes de Ince senior, David Bron webster, Johannes Mair walker, Willelmus le Sherman, Nicholas le Sherman, Johannes le Sherman, Thomas Jakos sherman, Johannes de Shottam sherman, Johannes le Challoner de Saint Joneslane, Willelmus le Challoner, Ricardus Gretegoe webster, Willelmus Haslore webster, Thomas le Spencer walker, Henricus Senys webster, Johannes le Webster de Castellane, Symon le webster de Hawardyn, Johannes de Frodesham, Willelmus Capemaker, et plures alii magistri textores venerunt vi et armis cum polaxes, baculis punctis, baslardis, et aliis diuersis armaturis cogitatione premeditata die Jouis in festo Corporis Christi anno regni Regis Ricardi secundi xxii^{do}, exposito ecclesiam Beati Petri Cestrie pariter congregati insultum fecerunt Willelmo de Wybunbur Juniore, Thome del Dame et aliis complurimis seruientibus suis vocatis jourmaynen in magnam affram tocius populi ciuitatis contra pacem domini Regis, &c., &c.

(c.) 37-38 Henry VI. Computos Ricardi Raynford et Radulphi Marshall Thesaurariorum ciuitatis Cestrie factus coram Bartholomaeo Loyalton, Rogero Ledesham, Roberto Bruyn, Henrico Hirn, Thoma Cotyngham, Thoma Fernys, Johanne Herford et Thoma Waltham auditoribus assignatis per Johannem Sottheworth maiorem eiusdem ciuitatis, pro anno sui maioratús ibidem, et per xliiii^{to} et xlviii^{to} homines dicte ciuitatis ad computum predictum audiendum de omnino receptis in eodem officio a die Veneris proximo post festum Sancti Dionisii, anno regni Regis Henrici Sexti 37, vsque eundem diem Veneris anno regni ejusdem Regis xxxviii.

Arreagia

OMNIS COMPITUS.

In primis onerant se de xliiii^{to} v.s. iii^{to}.d. de communi redditu dicte ciuitatis recepto per tempus predictum prout patet per Rentale eiusdem.

Item onerant se de x^{to} xlii^{to}.s. iii^{to}.d. de personis intransibilibus franchisesiam dicte ciuitatis infra tempus predictum.

Item de vi^{to}.s. viii^{to}.d. de demariis receptis pro errore corrigendo de Johanne Dymock infra idem tempus.

Summa totalis Recepte per tempus predictum, xxv^{to} li. v.s. iii^{to}.d.

PETITIO ALLOCANDI.

Item computantes petunt allocari de Solucionibus subscriptis factis per tempus idem.

Nicholao Danyell maiori per idem tempus, xi^{to} li. vi^{to}.s. viii^{to}.d.

Item, Johanni Hawardyn pro consilio per idem tempus, x^{to} li.

Item, Radulpho Bold, pro consilio suo per idem tempus, xx^{to} s.

Item, Ricardo Carlyle, pro consilio suo per idem tempus, xlii^{to} s. iii^{to}.d.

Item, Thome Godefelow, pro consilio suo per idem tempus, xlii^{to} s. iii^{to}.d.

Item, Hugoni Dutton gladifero per idem tempus, x^{to} li.

Item, Johanni Stycher seijeant per idem tempus, x^{to} li.

Item, cisdem Thesaurariis pro labore suo per idem tempus, xlii^{to} s. iii^{to}.d.

Item, pro reparacione domus Thesaurarii eiusdem ciuitatis, xx^{to} s.

Item, pro vino domino Stauley, v.s. iii^{to}.d.

Item, pro tenementis Johannis Maynwaryng in decasu in lane, xvi^{to} d.

Item, pro Philippo Aldersey, iii^{to}.d.

Summa totalis petitionis allocandi, xxi^{to} li. xlii^{to}.s. vii^{to}.d.

Et remanet in manibus Thesaurariorum, iii^{to} li. x^{to} s. viii^{to}.d.

(d.) 16-17 Edward IV. "Haue iu mynde that where "as on James Dokray of Droghda marchaunt boght of

CORPORATION
OF CHESTER.CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.

"on Clement Bagot of Bristowe marchaunt certain marchandise, wech in valewe amounted to the summe of xx. marcs, for which duty the seid James was bounden in an obligacion to the seid Clement paialle at a certain fest theyn specified, and the seid Clement sende the seid obligacion to William Stanmere of Chestre, whom God parcion, and made hym his attorney to receyve the same summe, for which summe of xx. marcs the seid James Dockray in the presence of Hugh Masey squier mair of the cite of Chestre, Henry Berymyncham and Roger Lightfote shirrefs of the same, Richard Sharpe, Robert Noturville, Richard Huxley, Rauf Daneport, and mony other in the Pentice of the seid cite upon Wenesday next after the fest of Seint Myr Magdelyn in the xviith year of the reign of Kyng Edward the Fourth made faith, and toke it upon his charge as he should answere afore Jesu Criste at the dredefulle howre of dome. That he send ouer see to the seid William Stanmere at on tyme v. buttes of samon, and at a nother time on butt of samon, in full contentacion and paisment of the same summe of xx. marcs. And for more playne certainty of the trouthe of the promyse, the seid James hereby praide and requyred the seides Maire and Shirrefs and alle other persounes afore specified to do so myche for hym as to walke with hym to an impotentis mon howse which is called Thomas Marshall of Chestre, which at that tyme of the receyte of the seid samon was servant with the seid William Stanmere. And at his seid request thay so did, and therupon the seid Thomas Marshall was desired by the seid James Dokray to confesse and say in the presences aforespecified the truthe what he knewe thereyn. Whereupon the seid Thomas Dokray declared and said that he was at the receyte of v. buttes of the seid samon in Chestre, and hit afterwarde was send to Shrowebury by the seid William Stanmere, and there solde to the vse and profite of the seid Clement Bagot by the meane of the seid William Stanmere. Whiche declaracion by the seid Thomas made the persenes, he toke upon his charge was true. For which duty the seid James saith that he hath a quytance of the seid Clement, which obligacion after the decesse of the seid William Stanmere by his executours was fonde in his tresorye, and as it is seyde now is in the keypge of one William Wynterbothome of Chestre mason, executour vnto one Margarete late wif vnto the seid William Stanmere, be vertue of which obligacion the seid William Wynterbothom hath openly noyosed and enslamdert in diuers places with lme the seid citee, that afore this tyme he caused to areste the seid James Dokray in the seid cite for the seid summe of xx. marcs comprehendet in the seid obligacion, For which duty the seid William Wynterbothom saith that the seid James entretid with hym and desired hym to respite hym at that season, and he shuld have sufficient surety therfore. Whereupon the seid William Wynterbothom saith and noyseth openly that Robert Norturville of Chestre mercer became his surety for the seid James, that he the seid James shuld well and truly content vnto hym the seid summe of xx. marcs. The seid James heryng of this noyse and solander aswelle made upon hym as upon the seid Robert Norturville by the seid William Wynterbothome in the presence of the seide maire shirrels and alle othere persounes aforesaid rehersed in the Pentice the day and yere afore specified made faith upon the holy euangelist, and toke it upon his charge as he shuld answere afore Jesu at the dredefulle howre of dome, that he neuer desired nor entreted the seid Robert Norturville to be his surety for the seid duty of xx. marcs, nor for no parcelle therof, nor that the seid Robert by his owne frewille nor otherwise became surety therfore. Moreouer that he neuer cunyned with the seid Robert of the same matter nor thought to do. Which othe of the seid James the seid Robert Norturville in the presences aforesaid made faith upon the seid holy Euangelist was gode and true, and that he neuer became surety for the same sum of xx. marcs nor any parcelle thereof to the seid William Wynterbothom at the instance of the seid James nor of no other persoune.

(c.) 2-3 Richard III. "Memorandum quod xxii. die Junii anno regni regis Ricardi tertiū post conquestum Anglie secundo mariona uxorem Ricardi Hoghton seruientis Ricardi Oldone Abbatis monasterii Sancte Werburge Cestrie et Episcopi Sodorensis apud Cestriam et in le Northgatestrete juxta comitum Sancte Werburge et infra libertatem dicte civitatis insultum fecit super Elizabetham Tame seruientem

"Cicilie nuper uxoris Henrici Wermyncham goldsmyth, et dictam Elizabetham adtunc et ibidem super caput pugno dextro percussit, et per crines suas traxit, et in facie scilicet quod sanguis abundanter effudit, vi et armis et contra pacem domini nunc regis. Et super hoc Johannes Savage sen^r, miles pro corpore Domini Regis, maior civitatis predicte, mandavit virtute officii sui Johanni Norres et Hugoni Hulton vicecomitibus dicte civitatis, et unicuique eorum, quod ipsi attacharent dictas Elizabetham et Marionam, et eas deliberarent custodi Oliuieri Hepyay custodi gaole de Northgate, ibidem liberandas et moraturas quousque ipsi sufficienter invenerint securitatem de firma pace domini Regis ferenda alteri et omnibus ligeis Domini Regis. Et dicti vicecomites prout eis ex parte dicti maioris preceptum fuit fecerunt et perimpleverunt, et dictas Elizabetham et Marionam, scilicet xii. die Junii anno supradicto, scilicet die Jovis proximo ante vigiliam Natiuitatis Johannis captas deliberancere Oliuero Hepyay apud le Northgate predictam, &c."

(f.) 3-4 Henry VII. A copy of the last will, drawn in Latin, of William Bentele of Chester, made 3 July 1483, and proved by his widow and executrix 30 April 1484. For his spiritual welfare the testator makes arrangements in the following words, "In primis lego animam meam Deo omnipotenti, beate Marie et omnibus Sanctis, corpusque meum sepeliendum in ecclesia parochiali Omnium Sanctorum in Breadstrete in navi ecclesie coram beatissimo salvatore nostro Jesu Christo crucifixo; Item, do et lego vnam libram cere ad comburendum super altare principale coram sacramento servico durante diuino in festiuis diebus per vnum integrum annum ea condicione quod cum vnus cereus sit combustus alius succedat illuminandus; Item lego alium cerum comburendum coram crucifixo et tres ceries coram Sancto Georgio modo predicto in illuminatione, combustione et successione observando; Item concedo et do vnum torche magno altari comburendum in diuinis misteris, et duo torchess altari beate Marie extra chorum, et vnum torche altari Sancte Trinitatis in eadem ecclesia; Item lego pauperibus in cleemosinam xlii. s. iiii. d.; Item lego fabricie ecclesie mee predicte pro sepultura mea xx. s.; Item volo vt post decessum meum tricesimo die proxime sequente fiat vnum trigintale Gregorianum pro salute anime mee et pro animabus Nicholai patris mei et Alicie uxoris sue, similiter in die Anniversarii mei vnum trigintale Gregorianum."

(g.) 12-13 Henry VII. "Memorandum, that the Wenesday next before the feste of Seynt Michell the Archangell in the xlii. yere of the reign of King Henry the VIIth Sir Hugh Raynford chapeleyn, Gervis de Vuldre, Edward Dalby, and Elizabeth wyf of John Taillour, taillour, come before Thomas Barow maior of the cite of Chestre in the Pentice of the seid cite, and Thomas Smyth oon of the Shirrefs of the cite aforesaid, Richard Legh, John Masey, John Gremesdich and other beyng ther present, and then and ther thay sworne vpon the holy Euangeliste not coacted ne constrained, That thay were presente with John Crosse of Luerpole in the countie of Lancastre gentilman vpon Monday next before the foresaid Wenesday, and herd hyme swere and say that he deliuered to Edmundre More a گردelle that was my ladye Dame Alice sometyme wif of Sir Thomas Dutton knyght, and that the corse therof was rede damaske werke, and the grounde thereof was golde and of a honde brede brode; and also upon Thursday next after William Frodesham of Elton gentilman come before the said maior and shirreff, and he in likewise swere and sayed that he was present when the seid John Crosse swere as is beforesaid; and the foresaid Sir Hugh, William, Gerys, Edward and Elizabeth swere also that the said John Crosse bade thaym swere that this is truthe, and that he wolde discharge before God hise sole for theire at the dredefulle day of Dome."

(h.) 19-20 Henry VII. "It is ordur by the Maistre Maire and hise brethir that no man shall supporte no carders in hise howse, betwix the day of making the ordeunaunce and the Nativite of oure Lorde next cummyng, nother for money, wyne nor ale, vpon the payne to echon of the xxiiii. iiii. s. iiii. d., and to ichon of the citezns iiii. s., and the pleiers to prisone at the Maire is pleasure as often as it maye be prouid.

"Also it is ordent by Maistre Maire and his brethir that enerye Wyne-Taurner and Ale seller and Ale howse shalbe shitt in at ix. of the clogke vpon the payne of euery man doying the contrary, vls. viii. d. Also it is ordur by Maistre Maire and hise brethir

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

"that every man that hath byn maire or shurrieff of "Chestre and also all Inne-keepers aswell, thai that "have no signes as thai that haue signez, shall haue
"hanging at chaire dures a lanterne with a candille
"brennyng in it ill ix. of the Cloke, fro the fest of All
"Seyntes vnto the feet of the Purificacion of our lady
"then next following, vpon the payne of enyere man
"doynge the contrary, iiii.s. iiiii.l."

(k.) 30-31 Henry VIII. The Book of Danid Middleton, gentleman, mayor of the city of Chester, containing a memorandum that Fernando de Ebarra of the city of London, merchant and stranger, and Ralph Manewaryng of the city of Chester, draper, appeared before David Mydleton, mayor of the last-named city, in the Exchequer of the Appentice of the same city, and were bound to the king in the sum of one hundred pounds sterling; the memorandum being followed with this explanation, "The condicion of this recognisance is such that were our said souverain lorde the kyng to thentent that the price of ledder shold nott be enhaunced but rather mynyseid and growth donne for the comen welth of his graces subiectis, hath made generall restrant and geyn commandement no ledder shall be bowthe to be caried out of his realme, &c. And the said Fernando beyng a stranger with one Peter Salsedo ano other stranger very latly comyn into this contrey hath reportyd and openly shewnd vnto the peopple, that onre said souveraign lorde hath geven vnto hym his graces plakerd or lycence to bey grett substance of ledder contrary to the said restrant, and by meane therof hath conyned with the Tanners as wellle within this citie as in dyuerse other places in the contris and sheres abrode for grett substance of ledder, and bargained with theym for the same secretly within there howses out of eny open faire or market, and also for suche lether as is not redy nor sufficiently tanned, All whiche ledder, as it is said, he entendet to shippe and transport att suche havens and places whereas he shold pay litylle or no costome for the same, By reason whereof he entendet nott only to defraude the kynges grace of his lawfull costome and dutes, and to transport and contenne his laudable statues in that by halfe, but also by occasion aforesaid the price of ledder wase and is resyn and enhaunced within this space of vii. or viii. daies above the comyen price that it wase at before by viii.s. in a dyker: Vpon notus wherof att complaynt of they comyn peopple, the said maire send for the said Fernando and demaundyd of hym sight of the licence aforesaid; and he affirmed that he had one; but first he said he wold not show it; and afterward he said the same lycence was at Brystoll, that he cold not then show it.—If the said Fernando from hensforth do not bargin transport nor lode eny leder by themselves no non other within the liberties of the citie aforesaid vnto suche tyme as he hanc shewed to the said Maire or his successors, the kynges graces licence or a letter or other discharge from my Lord Privy Seale in that behaffe, and also be forthcomyng to answer and declare and discharge hymselfe to the kynges grace and his counseile for suche thynges as he lade to his charge concernyng the premises, &c., &c."

(14.) Memoranda Book (A.D. 1639 to 1665) of David Lloyd, clerk of the Pentice of the city of Chester, and successive town clerks of the same city. Containing copies of protested bills, and affidavits of seamen respecting losses at sea, and notes touching other personal matters. Some of the seamen's protests against tempestuous weather are curious specimens of the draughtsman's art. "By this publike instrument of protest," runs one of these statements, "Bee it knowne and manifest vnto all people that on the eighteenth day of January one thousand six hundred and sixtie (stile Anglie) Before me Raphe Dancourte Towne Clerke for the citie of Chester and in the presence of the witnesses after-named personally appeared George Barthwipp Master of the St. George Catch of London, burthen twentie tannes or thereabouts, and did and doth protest, That whereas hee the said master with the said vessell vpon the fourth day of January last past laden with wines, prunes, ringer, and rozen, did sett sail from Burdeux in France, intending with the said vessell and goods (by the blessing of God) to haue sailed to the river of Chester, and there in good safetie and well condicioned to haue delivered all the said goods vnto Richard Bird of the citie of Chester merchant, his factors or assignes, But it pleased God that vpon his voyage with the said vessell and goods from Burdeux aforesaid vnto the said river of Chester,

"there happened great windes tempestuous, and variable winde and weather, Insomuch that the said vessell and goods were in much danger to bee lost or to receiue great prejudice by the sea. Therefore the said Master did and doth protest these presents against the sea for all losses and damages which the said goodes haue or shall sustaine by reason aforesaid. This was thus protested in the citie of Chester in the presence of William Avery the said master's mate and Joshua Bradshaw and Thomas Cage two of the said vessell's company, Witnesses hereunto called and required."

(15.) Minutes of the Trial (1827) of the canse of the King v. George Harrison at the Shrewsbury Lent Assizes, on 29 and 30 March, 1827, before Mr. Baron Vaughan and a Special Jury: counsel for the Crown,—Mr. Campbell, Mr. O. Russell, and Mr. J. Jervis; and counsel for the defence,—Mr. Taunton, Mr. Serjeant Peake, Mr. Cross and Mr. Tyrwhitt. On an Information in the nature of a Quo Warranto filed at the petition of Richard Dutton against the defendant George Harrison, for usurping the office of Mayor of the Corporation of Chester.

Murage Books :—Four Volumes.

(16.) (a.) The Book of receipts and payments of William Thomasson and William Snede, muragers of city of Chester for an entire year (17-18 Edward IV.); with portion of the account of Robert Nostrevile and William Thomasson, muragers for another entire year in the same king's reign. Imperfect, unbound and disarranged.

(b.) Account-Book of successive muragers of the city of Chester from 6 Edward VI. to the end of the reign of Philip and Mary. Unbound and disarranged.

(c.) Account-Book (1618-1801), containing the annual accounts of receipts and disbursements by successive muragers (i.e. custodians and conservators of the City's Walls) of Chester from the 16th year of James I. to the first year of the present century. A notable volume in good condition.—The several entries of payments for "potations in the penthouse" show that the erroneous derivation of Pentice (a corruption of Pendice) from Penthouse was current and approved amongst the people of Chester as early as the time of Charles the First.

(d.) Account Book (1801-1818) of moneys received by successive muragers, and expended by them on cleansing and repairing the City Walls.

(17.) Passage Court Books (Libri Passagiorum), containing records of pleas and proceedings in the Passage Court of the City of Chester. Twenty-four volumes for the following years, 5-6, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 25-26, 26-27, 29-30, 33-34, 34-35, 36-37, 37-38, 39-40, 40-41, 42-43 of Elizabeth; 6-7, 7-8, 10-11, 15-16, 17-18, 19-20, 20-21 James I.; and 22 James I.—1 Charles I.

(18.) The Pentice Chartulary begun (18 Elizabeth) during the mayoralty of Henry Hardware, under circumstances set forth in the following terms in the preface thereof: "Forasmuch as by the sight of the charters, grantes and confirmacions of the citie of Chester heretofore graunted, it appeareth parts thereof to have been somewhat defaced, defyled and the letters worne owte thyngho the often readinge lookinge on and persvall therof, hardlie in some part to be trulle copied owte, and the reste so litle perused and sene and so close kepte as the valydite and contentes therof are scarcely knowne to the magistrates, much lesse to the reste of the citizens; and for that alsoe dyvers of the Records and oulde auncient lawfull constitucions, orders, vsages, customes and presidens were word by word copied out of an old booke called the Blackbooke conteynyng xxx. leaves, and translated oute of Latene and Frenche into Englyshe by the comandemente of the Right Worshippfull Thomas Gee in the second tyme of his mayoraltie being in the xxxii. yeaere of Henrie theight late kinge of Englande, and contened and writen in ano other paper booke then made and deuised, and being in paper not like longe to endure, and dyvers others the recordes, laudable constitucions orders and presidentes of the said citie remainyng in sucho generall and sundrie sceduls, papers and books as overtodeous at every suche tyme as the sighte thereof shalbe required to trauell vpp into the Treasure Howse of the saide citie for such persvall thereof; Therefore the Right Worshippfull Henry Hardware now maior of the citie of Chester aforesaid, in the eighteenth yeaere of the raigne of our soveraigne lady Elizabeth by the grace of God of Englande Fraunce and Irelande Queene defendour of the Faith, &c., beinge in the second tyme of his mayoraltie, forseeinge

"the saide inconvenyences, and mynding the preser"uacyon of the saide charters, grauntes, confirmacions, "records, constitucions, orders and presidentes, and to
"the intente that the same may be manifested and "known as well to the Magistrates of the saide cite
"as also to the reste of the citizens thereof, and readie
"at all tymes to be shewed furthwith as nede shall "require, that he commaunded and appointed this Book
"of Parchements to be boughte for the saide cite by "Richarde Bayaund and William Wall, Treasurers of "the same, whiche coste vii. li. iiii. s. iiii. d., and in this "same booke hath caused to be conteyned and written
"woorde by woorde trulie copied oute all the saide
"charters, grauntes and constitucions and the presi"dentes conteyned in the saide Booke taken oute of "the said Black Booke and dyners others good presi"dentes to shewe and prone what manner of other
"plees, suites, orders, constitucions, customes, vsages and
"privilleges heretofore of oulde tyme haue bene vsed
"and hadd, and the Charters, grauntes, confirmacions,
"records, originall orders and constitucions commyttyd
"in sauf custodie surely laide ypp and kepte in the "treasure howse of the saide citie there to proue this
"booke thereof copied oute to be true; And this Booke
"alwaie to remayne in the Inner Pentice of the saide
"Citie in a certayne Cheste or Cofer vnderlocke, "Wherevnto the Mayor and the Recorder of the same
"citie for the tyme being and others the magistrates
"of the saide city may hane contynuall concourse at "their pleasuries, In whose tyme were of this Booke
"written, besides the Table thereof, the number of lxxii.
"leaves, the writinge whereof coste fine poundes tenne "shillings; and this book containeth foure hundreth
"threscore and twelue leues."

Bound in thick boards, covered with leather, studded with brass points, and provided originally with clasps, which have been torn away and lost, this volume, together with its occasionally careless and inaccurate transcripts of charters described elsewhere in this report, and many other documents of inferior interest, contains the following matters:—

(a.) Copy of a charter (no longer to be found amongst the Chester muniments) of Walter de Lasci, remitting to the citizens of Chester the customary twopence heretofore paid to him by them on every cargo of white corn in his land of Ireland; with liberty to the same citizens of entering and leaving his port of Droghda and all his other ports of Ireland, and of buying there "omnia genera bladi et brasii et farine;" and lading there ships with the same, free of the duty aforesaid. His testibus, domino Ranulpho comite Cestrie consanguineo nostro, Philippo de Orrebi tunc Justiciario Cestrie, Petro clerico domini comitis Cestrie, Gulelmo Talebot, Eustachio de Graulla, Roberto Faget, Petro capellano meo, Ricardo de Fahy camerario meo, Gulelmo Haketi, Henrico Labbe, Ricardo clerico de Kagworth, et multis aliis.

(b.) Copy of a writ of Precept (no longer found amongst the Chester muniments) addressed by Henry the Sixth on 8 November in the thirty-ninth year of his reign, to the mayor of Chester, for the due publication within the same city of the agreement made between the aforesaid king and his cousin Richard duke of York, that settled the crown on the said duke after the said king's death.

(c.) Copy of a writ (no longer found amongst the Chester muniments), dated by Henry the Eighth under his signet at the manor of Richmond, on 29 March in the 14th year of his reign, and addressed to the mayor of the city of West Chester, on information that the said "city standeth open in the daunger of enemyes." Forbidding the mayor to allow any person, by virtue of letters patent heretofore granted by his Highness, to withdraw citizens or other inhabitants from Chester until further notice, as the city requires the presence of all its usual inhabitants "for its safety and defence."

(d.) Copy of a writ, dated 30 May, 31 Henry VIII., and addressed to the sheriffs of Chester, for the sufficient publication of a proclamation, discharging the city of Westchester from being a place of sanctuary, privilege, and union of offenders and malefactors. The considerations for thus, in accordance with powers conferred by the last parliament, determining the sanctuary of malefactors at Chester, being set forth in the following terms:—"And for that nowe it appeareth vnto vs by credible information in that the saide cite of Westchester, which not onely standeth nere the borders of Wales, by means whereof such offenders and malefactors might lightlie for their safeguarde and tucyon passe and goe from the saide cite vnto the partes of Wales, so that Justice shuld not be hadd of

"the saide offenders; But also that the saide cite is a "porto Towne nere the see, and vnto the same city "greate resort of merchauntes estraungers from tyme "to tyme, by means whereof such offenders and "malefactours for theyr tucyon and safeguarde may "by shipp saile from the saide cite of Westchester "vnto the parties of Scotland and Irelande."—"The same proclamation discharged Manchester and Stafford from being places of sanctuary and privilege for malefactors.

(e.) Indentures of an agreement between the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter of Lincoln on the first part; John the Prior and Convent of St. John the Baptist of Lamd, co. Leycester, of the second part; and the Mayor and citizens of Chester of the third part. Whereby in consideration of 300*l.* paid to them by the said bishop, dean, and chapter, the said prior and convent engaged to pay an annuity of ten pounds to the mayor and citizens of Chester, which yearly sum the said mayor and citizens undertook to apply to the payment of a master of a free grammar school at Farnworth in Lancashire. Dated 20 July of 22 Henry VII.

(f.) Escheator's certificate of the finding at an inquest taken at Chester in compliance with a writ of Diem clausit extremum, touching the lands, &c., of which Margaret, formerly the wife of Fulke of Penlruge, knt., cousin and heir of William Trussell of Cumberland, knt., possessed on the day of her death. It is found amongst other things that she was seised in her demesne as of fee on the day of her death of "the manor of Barnardeshall within the liberties of Chester, together "with the bailiwick and issues of the keeping of the "estgate of the citie aforesaid and all thapprinances "with howses and buildings above and beneath the "said gate."—Dated 1 November, 2 Henry IV.

(g.) The return of an inquisition respecting divers assaults committed within the abbey of Chester on Friday next following the feast of St. James the Apostle, and on four following days, in the year 18 Richard II.: The Jury saying that on the said day Baldwin of Radington, knt., John Hert, William Herte, William Lapbam, Griffith Reynald, Roger of Hall, with all their howseholdes, came with force and armes, with swords, bucklers, bowes and arrowes and other armure came to the abbey of Chester, and the dore of the seller called the wyne-seller, the dore of the inner hall, the dore of the chamber of the persones of Asturie, and many other dyners doores of the chambres of thablot of Chester within the abbay aforesaid, by stronge hande and against the peax of our soueraigne lord the kinge, with swordes and formes and ladders wickedlie and malicously they brake, three tunnes of Gascoyne wyne they founde they tooke, and wasted also the howseholde, beddes, and many other thinges ryotously, of the men and seruantes of the same abbott in their chambers being they put oute and caste oute, and many other hurts and grievous damages ther foure dayes they commyttyd.—From the sequel it appears that the rioters seized and imprisoned John of Dokenton and Thomas Banester, glover, and that when John Larmerer, mayor of Chester, came to the deliverance and rescue of the said two prisoners, a fray ensued in which Thomas Pygott, one of the sheriffs of the city, was so maltreated that his life was endangered, and John Hoo, esq., one of the rioters, was slain. Moreover, it was found by the jury that after the Thursday next before the feast of St. Peter ad vincula, the said Baldwin of Radington, knt., "did "ymagine howe he mighte destroye and hurt the com- "mens of Chester, and gathered together by foure days "John of Stanley, knt., and the greatest multitude of "men armed and archerie of the countie of Launcester "to the number of nccc., risinge and rydinge in manner "of warre against the peax of our soueraigne lord the "kinge with basnettes and speares within the countie "of Chester by v. leykes from the citie aforesaid."

(h.) Form of a return of a Recorder to remove a plea from the Pentice.

(j.) Another precedent for a similar return.

(k.) Memoranda of proceedings for determining a controversy between Sir Roger of the High Hill, steward of Chester, of the one part, and the mayor and commonalty of Chester of the other part, touching common of pasturage in the marsh of Saltney.

(l.) Memorandum of the names of four brethren,—to wit, Neele, lord of Hulton, constable of Cheshire, Hodard, lord of Dutton, marshal of the same shire, Edard, lord of Hawarden, steward of the same shire, and Achard, lord of Doneham, chamberlain of the same shire,—who came with William the Conqueror.

(m.) Writ of Henry prince of Wales, to the mayor and sheriffs of the city of Chester, for a proclamation to his military tenants and servants for an instant muster and array. Dated 29 —, 1 Henry IV.

(n.) Memorandum, dated in the year 13 Henry IV., in the form of a tripartite indenture, of the determination by the award of arbitrators on a controversy long had between William Venables of Kinderton and his folk, of the one part, and the citizens of Chester of the other part, respecting questions of property.

(o.) Grant by Edward Prince of Wales and earl of Chester, dated 13 December, 32 Edward III., to the men and tenants (not members of the Merchants Guild of Chester or sworn to the liberties of the said city) of the Prioresse of Chester, of exemption from service on juries, &c. before the mayor and sheriffs of the said city; with divers other immunities and privileges.

(p.) Return of an Inquisition taken by the oaths of twelve men (six of the said jurors being of the city and six of the county of Chester), in the time when Henry de Ferraris was justice of Chester, in order to ascertain whether Hoole Heath is holden of the earl of Chester or not, and whether the citizens of Chester have right of common in the same heath. It is returned that the said heath is so held, and also has been so held of the earl's predecessors time out of mind; and that the citizens of Chester have right of common therein. Moreover it is returned that the bounds of Hoole Heath "begyn from the Rake called Chester-rake nere Flokersbrucke, and soe followinge Flokersbrucke into Wyne-siche, and soe followinge Wisneysiche nere a certayne place where a grange of the persone of the church of Plomondestone sometye beinge, and soe followinge nere a Sat that Robert of Whitmore sometye did breake, and soe followinge nere Hobasshe against Pycondale vnto Salterswaye, whiche is the kynges High Way nere Chester to leade the hoste of our Sone-aigne lorde the king in tyme of warre vnto Showrickford, And so followinge beyond Salterway vnto Saffediche, And soe vnto the towne of Newton to the yate of Robert the son of Sisly of Newton, which sometye was called the Shepeyate, for whiche yate the said Robert gane money to the keper of the Towne of Hoole for the tyme being, And so followinge from the sayde yate to the oulde hodge of Newton vnto Flokersbrucke." Further the certificate gives a long list of persons who, as well as persons unknown, have appropriated themselves portions of the said heath to the hurt of the whole city of Chester.

(q.) Memorandum touching the jurisdictions of the Portmote Court and the Penitence Court, in the following terms: "What plees shalbe sued in the Penitence:—In the Appentice the pleys whiche towche freeholde be non in any wise pleadable, butt in Portemote, nor oughte in the Penitence pleys of Covenante whiche towche launde, rente or suche other, nor pleys whiche towche anyntie or pleys of replevy, &c., suche to be pleaded." No date.

(r.) Writ dated 22 April, 13 Edward, II and addressed by Edward, Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, to the mayor and sheriffs of the city of Chester; for an inquisition as to the customs rightly due and to be taken at each of the four gates of Chester.—Also the certificate (a very curious and entertaining record) of the Inquisition taken on Friday next after the Feast of the Purification, 14 Edward II., in obedience to the aforesaid writ. Containing a full and precise statement of the dues payable at the East Gate, the North Gate, the Bridge Gate, and the Water Gate, this return affords a complete view of the various kinds of marketable articles coming into or passing through Chester in the reign of Edward the Second. It affords also some other notable particulars. The customs taken at the North Gate were retained by the gate-keeper in payment for service rendered by him as keeper of the North Gate prison. "For which prises," the certificate says, after enumerating the octroi dues of the North Gate, "the keper of the gate allways shall kepe the said yate with the prisoners in the prisone of the said erle theie imsoned, Allsoe hee shall kepe the keys of the felons and theeves dampned to be hanged on y^e gibbett; And he shall cry the courtes of our soueraigne lord the Erle within the cittie; And he shall ringe the bell to the portmote, and shall doe judgemente on the pillorie. They say allsoe that the saide keper ought to take of euery prisoner there imprisoned for felony bat vnlie iiiij.d. if he shall tarry there abone one nighte. But of euery one arrested for dett or dettes recovered or for simple trespace they oughte nor be wout to take nothinge.—They say allsoe that the keper of the said Northgate nowe of late haue lifted vpp and taken these prises and customes vnder.

"written about the customes and prises of oulde tyme taken."

(s.) The return of a jury on a presentment of the millers of the Dee mills for exactions and extortionate practices. Notable for evidence respecting the rates of charge to citizens of Chester for the grinding of their corn at the Dee Mills in the time of Rannulph, 4th earl of Chester. No date.

(t.) Records of Pleas at Crown-motes and Portmotes before divers mayors and sheriffs of the city of Chester, temp. Edward I., II., and III.

(u.) The last Will and Testament of Simon Hardinge, citizen and salter of London, bequeathing to the mayor, aldermen and citizens of West Chester, for ever, a rent of thirty-three shillings and fourpence yearly issuing out of Smith's Alley. The will is also remarkable for the large number of small legacies for the purchase of memorial rings.

(v.) Passage of a deed, setting forth the particulars and conditions of a certain benefaction made to the city of Westchester by Sir Thomas White, knt., late lord-mayor, alderman, citizen and merchant-taylor of London. Described in the chartulary as "The Branche for the cittie of Westchester concerninge the denise of Sir Thomas White, knt., deceased."

(w.) Charter, dated 17 June, 9 Elizabeth, of Exemplification of a warrant issued by the said Queen under her privy seal on 21 May of the same year, to the Treasurer, Chancellor, and Barons of the Exchequer, releasing the citizens and inhabitants of Westchester from a certain impost on wines; the said release and discharge being granted in consideration of the heavy losses sustained during the past ten years by the merchants of the said city.

(z.) Certificate, signed by Patrick Mayly "soveraine of Nerve Rosse alias Rospointe, co. Wexford, Ireland," that the citizens and merchants of Westchester are free of all customs in the said town of Nerve Rosse alias Rospointe. Dated 8 September 1587.

(y.) Record of proceedings, 27 June, 42 Elizabeth, at Chester, in the Exchequer of the County Palatine of Chester, within the castle there, in the cause between Rice Williams, gentleman, plaintiff, and Richard Birkenhead, esq., and Peter Starkey, gentleman, defendants, closing with a decree and costs for the plaintiff, who by the said decree of the Rt. Hon. Sir Thomas, knt., Lord Keeper of the Great Seal and Chamberlain of the said County Palatine, was declared to hold the clerkship of the Penitence independently of the Recorder of Chester, and to have been wrongfully ejected from the same office by Richard Birkenhead the said recorder and Peter Starkey.

(z.) An Inventory of articles of plate, headed "A Noate of the Cities Plate taken the twelfte day of April 1602. Anno Regni Regine Elizabethæ, &c., quadragesimo quarto."

(aa.) Tripartite agreement, dated 6 February, 24 Henry VII., between Thomas Smith the elder, alderman of the city of Chester, and overseer of the testament of Roger Smith, late deceased, Sir Henry Bullinge and Sir John Davenport, chaplains, and John Harper of Chester, merchant, executors of the same testament, of the one part; Thomas Hawardyn, mayor, and the aldermen and commonalty of the said city, of the second part; and Margery the prioress and convent of the Nuns of the convent of our Blessed Lady of the same city, of the third part. Whereby the said executors agreed with the said mayor and citizens and the said prioress and convent, "to edifie and bulde at their proper costes vpon the sayde voyde grounde," granted to them by the city for that purpose, "sixe severall mansions or tenements vnder one rove convenient and able for six poore bedemen." Candidates for admission to these alms-houses, who have been of "the twenty-four" and fallen into poverty, or are widows of deceased aldermen, to be preferred before other applicants; and in like manner candidates who have been common councilmen, or are the necessitous widows of deceased common councilmen, to be preferred to vacant rooms before citizens or the widows of citizens, who have never been common councilmen or aldermen. Every bedeman and bedewoman of the foundation is to take an oath "dayly to saie our Ladyes phalter (sic) with de profundis (if they can) or maie be able for sicknes soe to doe) for the soule of the said Roger Smith, and for the good estate of the said mayor, aldermen, and commonalty, and for the soules of their predecessours and successors and of all Christen soules."

(bb.) Indenture whereby the wardens or mastrs and the brethern and sisters of the guild of St. Ursula agreed and contracted with Thomas Hatton, clerk, and the mayor and citizens and their successors of Chester, that the said wardens should annually for ever on a certain day distribute in the chapel of the said guild thirty silver pence to the poor persons being brethren or sisters of the guild or hospital aforesaid, for the good of the souls of the founders and benefactors of the said guild, and also for the souls of all such as died in the faith. Dated 12 April, 32 Henry VIII.

(cc.) Fifty-four indentures of certain grants of lands, rents, &c., made by the mayor and citizens of Chester under their common seal, pursuant to orders of Assembly made by the mayor, aldermen, and common council in the tenth year of Queen Anne.

(19.) Precedent Book for proceedings in the Court of Portmote and in the Sheriffs' Court of the city of Chester: With forms of writs, warrants, and other instruments for the transaction of affairs within the jurisdiction of the municipality of Chester. Imperfect and disarranged.

(20.) Register (17 James I. to 2 Charles I.) of Recognizances, Agreements, and Admissions to the franchise of the city of Chester, entitled "Statuta, Recognizances, Private Orders, and Franchised Persons." Imperfect.

(21.) Register of Sales of Horses in the city of Chester, from 23 May 1655 to 25 January 1723, with names of sellers and buyers, and descriptions of the animals. A record kept for the security of persons who, being resident in parts distant from Chester, or buying horses of strangers to the same city, wished to have evidence of record that they had obtained possession of the animals honestly and for adequate consideration.

(22.) Rental (1686-1687) of the city of Chester, demifolio, entitled and described "A True and Perfect Rental of all the Fee-farms, rents due upon leases for lives or for years or at will, quit-rents, and other rents due and payable yearly to the Mayor and citizens of the citie of Chester. Made at the commandment and by the care and diligence of William Wilson, esq., Mayor of the said citie, Anno Domini MDCLXXXVI. and of Edward Oulton, esq., mayor of the said citie MDCLXXXVII." Six later rentals for the several periods—1703 to 1714, 1714 to 1722, 1722 to 1734, 1734 to 1757, 1757 to 1777, 1777 to 1789.

(23.) Sheriffs' Books. An imperfect series of Sheriffs' Books, from 5-6 Henry V. to 5-6 George IV.; for the following years of the period:—

5-6, 6-7, 7-8 of Henry V.; 1-2 of Henry VI.; 2-3; 3-4, 4-5, 7-8, 9-10, 13-14, 16-17, 17-18 of Edward I.; 2 Richard III.—1 Henry VII.; 2-3, 3-4, 8-9, 9-10, 10, 11, 13-14, 14-15, 18-19, 20-21, 21-22 of Henry VII.; 24 Henry VII.—1 Henry VIII.; 1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 16-17, 17-18, 24-5, 25-26, 27-28, 28-29, 31-32, 32-33, 33-34, 34-35, 35-36, 36-37, 37-38 of Henry VIII.; 2-3, 3-4, 4-5 of Edward VI.; 6 Edward VI.—1 Mary; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4 of Mary; 2 and 3-3 and 4, 3 and 4-4 and 5, 4 and 5-5 and 6 of Philip and Mary; 1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14, 14-15, 15-16, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 25-26, 26-27, 27-28, 28-29, 29-30, 30-31, 32-33, 33-34, 34-35, 35-36, 36-37, 37-38, 38-39, 40-41, 41-42, 42-43, 43-44 of Elizabeth; 44 Elizabeth—1 James I.; 2-3, 3-4, 4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 20-21, 21-22 of James I.; 22 James I.—1 Charles I.; 1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 21-22, 23-24 of Charles I.; A.D. 1649-50, 1650-51, 1651-52, 1652-53, 1653-54, 1655-56, 1657-58, 1658-59 of the Commonwealth Period; 12-13, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17, 17-18, 19-20, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 27-28, 28-29, 29-30, 31-32, 32-33 of Charles II.; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4 of James II.; 2-3, 3-4, 4-5 of William and Mary; 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13 of William III.; 13 William III.—1 Anne; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4, 4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13 of Anne; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14 of George I.; 1-2, 2-3, 3-4, 4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 13-14, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 20-21, 21-22, 22-23, 23-24, 24-25, 25-26, 26-27, 27-28, 28-29, 30-37, 37-38, 38-39, 39-40, 40-41, 41-42 of George III.; 4-5, 5-6 of George IV.

As the sheriffs entered office on the same day as the Mayors of Chester, the year covered by any one of the older of these books began and ended on a Friday next following the feast of St. Dionysius.

To show the nature and value of the information afforded by the more ancient of these yearly volumes, something may be said here of the functions and responsibilities of the sheriffs of Chester in former time. At present their office is little more than a name, its duties being so trivial and purely formal, that the citizens are at a loss for answer when it is asked for what purpose they annually appoint two of their community to be sheriffs. But in olden time, and down to a comparatively recent date, the dignity of the shrievalty was attended with various employments and serious obligations. For centuries, sitting as actual and not merely nominal judges, they dispensed justice in the Pence (or, Pence Court) in civil causes not affecting any interest in real property, and in the trials of misdemeanants and persons charged with petty crime. On many points there is considerable uncertainty respecting the relations of the Pence Court and the Mayors' Court; but though a subordinate tribunal, the court over which the sheriffs presided, afforded relief to a large number of suitors, and punishment to an even larger number of ordinary offenders within the municipal liberties. The sheriffs were also the judges of the Passage Court. For many generations, also, it devolved on the sheriffs to collect fines yearly due to the municipal chest from citizens for the privileges of following their trades or practising their arts within the city's bounds; the tolls and octroi imposts due from merchants entering the city from the interior parts of the country; and the customs levied on merchants coming from the sea, and importing merchandise into the city from Ireland and "other foreign parts." From the yearly accounts of moneys taken in these three ways, one can compute with an approximation to accuracy the annual income, apart from rents, of the commune throughout several successive generations. The same financial lists afford means for detecting variations in the populousness, and yet more precise data for observing and appreciating fluctuations in the commercial prosperity of the city; for whilst the entries under "Custuma mercatorum venicium infra Franchesciam ciuitatis Cestrie versus Hiberniam," or "Nomina mercatorum versus Hiberniam et alias exteras partes," show the exact number of merchants entering the city from the country, and the exact sums taken from them by way of octroi dues on goods either consumed by the citizens or shipped for sale beyond sea, in the particular year to which the account pertains, the entries under the heading of "Custuma Mercatorum extra Hiberniam," or "Nomina Mercatorum extra Hiberniam et alias exteras partes," show the number of merchants entering the harbours of Chester, and also all the various sums paid for duty on goods imported to the city, in the whole year. The continual reference to "Hibernia" in the headings of these accounts shows that, in the times when Chester was the gate from England to Ireland, the great majority of merchants passing through the north-western port were bound to or journeying from Dublin or some other Irish haven. On the other hand, the occasional references of the headings to "other foreign parts" would of themselves show that Chester's foreign trade was not altogether Irish. But on this point and other no less important matters the explorer of the ancient Port-Records is not required to draw inferences from the most meagre particulars. Though they can scarcely be described as abundantly communicative, the lists give in most cases the name of every ship entering the waters of Chester, the name of her master, the name of her country or port, and the names of all her passengers, together with the sums charged for duty on imported goods to each of the voyagers. Sometimes, but not always, in these lists the nature of the imported goods is set forth. Hence it appears that these Port Accounts yield a considerable amount of information respecting the commercial and social intercourse of England and Ireland, in the days when the regular route from the 'realm' to the 'lordship' took the traveller to Dec-idee, and Liverpool was either a mere fishing village or insignificant haven that did not presume to compete with West Chester in maritime affairs.

At the present time many of the Sheriffs' Books are, like the Mayors' Books, so worn and fragmentary that they are but the tattered remains of once comely volumes. Not a few of them have lost the whole or greater part of their Port Lists. But enough of those lists remains to show how the trade of the port alternately rose and fell between the days of Henry the Sixth and the later years of James the First, when the sheriffs of Chester ceased to keep lists of the ships entering their city's port.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.Numbers of Ships entering the Port of Chester in Divers Years from 1-2 Henry VI. to 17-18 James I. :—

| Year of Shrievalty. | No. of Ships. |
|-----------------------------------|------------------|
| 1-2 Henry VI. | 35 |
| 2-3 Edward IV. | 21 |
| 3-4 " " | 18 |
| 4-5 " " | 33 |
| 7-8 " " | 41 |
| 13-14 " " | 31 |
| 16-17 " " | 38 |
| 3 Richard III.—1 Henry VII. | 40 |
| 9-10 Henry VII. | 38 |
| 10-11 " " | 47 |
| 14-15 " " | 40 |
| 18-19 " " | 40 |
| 20-21 " " | 43 |
| 21-22 " " | 42 |
| 2-3 Henry VIII. | 42 |
| 4-5 " " | 26 |
| 5-6 " " | 40 |
| 16-17 " " | 75 |
| 17-18 " " | 44 |
| 24-25 " " | 58 |
| 25-26 " " | 50 |
| 27-28 " " | 64 |
| 28-29 " " | 50 |
| 31-32 " " | 103 |
| 32-33 " " | 86 |
| 33-34 " " | 113 |
| 34-35 " " | 87 |
| 35-36 " " | 153 |
| 36-37 " " | 79 |
| 37-38 " " | 112 |
| 2-3 Edward VI. | 100 |
| 2 & 3-3 & 4 Philip and Mary | 146 |
| 3 & 4-4 & 5 " " | 152 |
| 4 & 5-5 & 6 " " | 128 |
| 5 & 6 Philip and Mary—1 Elizabeth | 117 |
| 2-3 Elizabeth | 125 |
| 4-5 " " | 115 |
| 10-11 " " | 84 |
| 19-20 " " | 82 |
| 20-21 " " | 67 |
| 21-22 " " | 85 |
| 24-25 " " | 70 |
| 25-26 " " | 81 |
| 26-27 " " | 85 |
| 27-28 " " | 89 |
| 29-30 " " | 69 |
| 33-34 " " | 88 |
| 34-35 " " | 71 |
| 35-36 " " | 90 |
| 36-37 " " | 51 |
| 43-44 " " | 47 |
| 44 Elizabeth—1 James I. | 73 |
| 9-10 James I. | 60 |
| 10-11 " " | 67 |
| 11-12 " " | 61 |
| 17-18 " " | 46 |

Together with the aforementioned yearly accounts of moneys received by the Sheriffs, as collectors of fines, town-dues and port-customs, the sheriffs' books contain brief records of pleas and proceedings in the Pendice court, occasional notes of transactions in the Portmote court, and memoranda of other current events affecting the welfare of the city or occupying much of the attention of its inhabitants. For instance, in the Sheriffs' Book for the year 16-17 Edward IV. appears a careful report of an inquisition held in full portmote in the Common Hall of the city, ending with the following verdict by the jurors :—"Quod Brianus Wilkynson nuper de Bradford in comitatu Eborum mercator, die Mercurii proximo post festum apostolorum Simonis et Jude, regni Regis Edwardi quarti post conquestum sexto-decimo, libertatem et franchisesiam civitatis Cestrie intravit, et quatuor pakkas panni lanei dierorum colorum precii lx. li. per et infra libertatem civitatis predicte vsque quandam nanem vocatam Le Trynyte de Dublyn infra eandem libertatem existentem subdole et fraudulenter conduxit, et eandem quatuor Pakkas sub signo transmutato et non ejus signo mercatorio in eandem nanem carcauit vsque terram conduendas. Que quidem nanis postea, scilicet die Jovis proximo post festum Sancti Martini in yeme extunc proximo sequente et per diversas alias vias, extra predictam libertatem vsque mare versus terram Hibernie pro mediis viam velavit absque debita custuma pro predictis quatuor pakkas seu pannis in

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

"eisdem contentis domino Principi seu aliquibus de suis ministris civitatis predicte debita solvenda."

Of the style of the entries in the port-register, the following extracts from the Sheriffs' Book, 2 Richard III.—1 Henry VII., may be taken as an average specimen :—

(a.) Tercio die Nouembris anno regni Regis Ricardi tercii secundo.

Introitus Navis vocate Le Trinite de la Catyva de partibus Hispanie, ejus Johannes Beltram sub Deo est magister. In vino xliii. tonella.

Stephanus de la Catyva, pro introitu . . .

Johannes del May.

Johannes Hiecock.

Ricardus Spencer.

(b.) Secundo die Nouembris anno secundo Ricardi tercii.

Introitus Navis vocate Le Seynte Antonie dela Catina, ejus Johannes de la Cotta est magister sub Deo.

In vino v. tonella.

Johannes Evaynes mercator.

Martyne Surry.

Johannes Martyne.

The lists of the dues paid by merchants passing through Chester out of England to Ireland show that most of them were charged with freights of 'kerseys' and 'frises.'

(24.) Treasurers' Account Books (folio). Six Ledgers for the following periods, 1734 to 1747, 1747 to 1758, 1758 to 1773, 1773 to 1789, 1789 to 1822, 1822 to 1835.—Also an Account Book of successive Treasurers to Commissioners of the Police for the city of Chester.

(c.) Letters in the Great Letter-Book, 2 Vols., folio.

3 March 1541.—Order addressed to Mr. Hennage, master of the King's woods beyond Trent, within the survey of the Augmentation Court. To deliver to the mayor of the City of Chester two hundred trees of his Majesty's woods in Flintshire and Cheshire, to be used in making a new haven at Lightfootpole.—Signed Edward Northe, Thomas Mayle, W. Mildmay. Dated from London.

24 September 1546. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. Announcing that the writers have received the body of Lawrence Howghton, and acknowledging the zeal displayed by the Mayor and his brethren of Chester in apprehending the same prisoner and sending him to the council. Signed by Thomas Wriothesley Cancell. and Ste. Winton. Dated from London.

—February 1547. Letter from Lords of the Council. After our hartly commendacions, Whereas the cite of Chester and the shippis and vesselles belonging to the same be in great decaye by reason of want of a good kaye and haven there for the succour and harborough of shippis; Being humbly supplied vnto that, whereas they of the city entend to make a newe haven at lightfoote poole, about vi. myles distant from Chester, thaduancement wherof will stand them in great charges, We would devyse towards theyr ayde sum kynd of contri-bucion whereby the woork might both the better and sooner com to an ende, We have thought good to signify vnto you that the kynges Majestie by our aduisement and consent ys pleased that you shall give order not onely that for this seven years now next followinge those forty poundes which the Kinges Majestie of blisshed memory King Henry theight conferred to the new erected colledge in Chester to be bestowed in dedes of charite and thamending of the high wayes may be converted and employed towards the making of the said haven at lightfoote poole, But also that ii. trees growing in these his majesties woodes in Flyntshire and Cheshire that be nyest to lightfoote poole may be marked and geven to the same Cite towards thaduancement of the sayd haven. Therewith bothe we requier you to see donn immediately, bycause his Majesties lyberalite being put in vre out of hand may be to them in lien of a more largesse. Whereas the retarding thereof might bappely seme to . . . and take sunnwhat from his Royall munificence. And thus fare you harteley well. From Somerset place.—The signatures and address of this letter are lost.

17 May 1547. Letter from Lords of the Council to the aldermen and sheriffs of the city of Westchester.—Directing the said alderman and sheriffs to elect a new mayor (in the place of their lately deceased mayor), who may hold that office and discharge its functions till Friday next after the feast of St. Denys, when they will be competent to elect a mayor for the cusing year in accordance with the concessions of their charter. It is stated that this exceptional permission to elect an interim mayor is given, because by their charter the men of Chester can elect a mayor only on the afore-mentioned day of Friday after St. Denis's feast.

CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.

14 August 1562.—Warrant and mandate of the Council for the Marches of Wales, addressed to the Mayor of Chester. For the due execution of the sentence against certain wilful and murderous perjurers, who are to be paraded through the principall streets of Chester, from the porter's lodge to the shire, and back to the same lodge through the market place.

14 May 1569. Letter from the Earl of Leycester to Sir Hughe Cholmondeley, knt., Vice President of Wales, Sir John Throckmorton, knt., Justice of Chester, and two others. Requiring the receivers of the letter to repair to Chester, and enquire respecting the causes, extent, and circumstances of the alleged decay of the said city; the Mayor and citizens of Chester being petitioners to the Privy Council for relief, in consideration of their city's distress and trouble.

27 April 1571.—Copy of a Letter addressed to the Earl of Leycester by the Commissioners appointed to enquire respecting the decay and impoverishment of the city of Chester. After alluding to certain articles of particulars, which accompanied the letter, the commissioners say, "Wherby it shall appeare to your honor, "as it was manifested unto vs, that the citizens in tymes "past have bene in great welth and habilitie, and at "this present are in great and pytfull decay, and "without help will assuredly groe to vtter ruyne and "beggery."

20 February, 15 Elizabeth. Writ addressed by her Majesty's Council of the Marches of Wales to the Bishop of Chester, the Mayor of the city of Chester, William Gerrard, esq., and William Glaseor, esq.—Staying the execution of a previous writ which appointed the recipients of the present letters to act as arbitrators in a dispute between William Bridd, Robert Brerewood, Edward Markyn, and Olyver Smyth, of the one part, and Owen Brereton and John Lloyd of Yale, esqs., of the other part; and giving notice that, if it please them to do so, the said William, Robert, Edward, and Olyver may forthwith make their plaint to the Council of the Marches of Wales.—Dated from the Castle of Ludlowe.

21 February 1573. Letter addressed by W. Fitz-wylliam to Mr. Richard Dutton, Mayor of Chester. Certifying that the letter's bearer, Richard Rabone, has been appointed to provide the writer "on thother "partes of the Sea" with provisions requisite for the Queen's Service; and requesting that the said Richard, his barque, and men may not be pressed to any other service.—Dated from Dublin.

23rd August 1574. The examination of John More before Richard Dutton, mayor of Chester, respecting his possession of a certain horse, and other matters.

27 August, 1574. Certificate of the arrangement made some time since for determining a controversy between Strete (parson of Heswall), Anyon, and Browne. Signed by Thomas Stanley, who speaks to the best of his memory, but with uncertainty.—Dated from Alderley.

18 April 1576. Letter from Sir Francis Walsyngham to the Mayor of Chester. To stay proceedings against Francis Edderman, for certain lewd and slanderous speeches uttered by him against her Majesty and divers members of her Privy Council.—Dated from the Court.

13 July 1576. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of West Chester and William Glasier, esq., vice-chamberlain there. Ordering the enlargement of one Frances Edderman, a German, who "hath longe sithens been committed close pri- "soner in the Northgate of that citie of West "Chester for certain lewde speeches supposed to have "been spoken by him." Although the only witness who supported the charges against this foreigner was a person with whom he was at legal variance, it is ordered that Frances Edderman shall be bound to good behaviour before he is discharged.—Dated from the "Courte at St. James."

26 November. Letter from Sir John Dutton to the Mayor of Chester. Entreating that the writer's servant, Robert Broine, may be continued in the office of Sealer of Leather within the city of Chester, from which place interest is being made to remove him.

30 October 1585. Letter from the Mayor and his brethren of the city of Chester to the Earl of Derby. Reporting what steps have been taken by the citizens of Chester to provide an adequate supply of powder and match for her Majesty's service, in accordance with his lordship's letters of the 25th inst.—Dated from Chester.

18 February 1586.—Letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Earl of Derby, lord-lieutenant of cos. Lancaster and Chester, and of the city of Chester. Announcing the writer's prompt execution of the earl's orders, dated 30 of last January, "to make stay of all Shippes, Barques "and other vessels, within or appertaining to the Ryver "of Chester, whose absence maie be above sixe weeks "from England, and alsoe before the last day of this "moneth to make and sende unto your honourable "lordship a perfecte Booke of the number and names "of the said ships, barques and vessels, together with "their burdens, and names of all Maisters and hable "mariners belonging to euery ship, barque, vessell, "porie or creeke within the mowthe of the said "Ryver."

27 May 1588.—Letter from the Bishop of Chester to Mr. Robert Brerewood, Mayor of the city of Chester. Supporting the suit of William Knight for enfranchisement in the city.—Dated from Rocksavege.

11 November 1588.—Letter from the Bishop of Chester to the Mayor of the city of Chester.—I have receyved speciall dyrection from her Majestie to appoynte generall prayers and thankesgevyng to be made in every Church throughout my dyocesse vpon Tuisday, which shalbe the xixth of this Instant November (a day to be celebrated throughout the whole Realme for our delverance from the Spynyardes, and the wonderfull overthrowe of that power which they had prepared against vs, whereof I thoughte good to adverte you, and the rest of your Brethren, to the end that you myghte be all at home and In redynes to celebrate that day accordingly, not only in your harte, but with your bodily presence at the said prayers, In your most comely and decent maner, after the order of your cyty, wysynge that you wolde also appeare yourselfe, and procure your Brethren and other of your well affected cytizens to communi- cate (for there wilbe a general Communion), and further that you wolde cause all shoppes, Tavernes, and Typlyinge houses to bee shutte vp all that day (as they were and wilbe In London), lest throughc any worldly occasion those who are not fully grounded in good heale myghte withdrawe themselves from that most godly actyon. And so not doubtyng but you will have a dutyfull regard of the premisses, with my hartie commendacions, I comyt you to God.—In Manchester this xiith of November 1588.—Your verey lovyng friend, W. Cestren.

18 July 1590.—Letter from Lord Chancellor Hatton to the Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen of Chester.—After my very hartie commendacions, Being given to understand by my servauntes, and by my counsell learned, as also by the viewe of my evidences, that you of the Citie of Chester doe detain from me some parte of the East Gate, being my lawfull inheritance by good matter of Recorde remaynyng with you: I have thoughte good by theise my letters to putt you in mynde thereof. The rather because my very frende Mr. Solicitor is now in the countrie, or will be shortly, vpon whose iudgement I wholly relye for my righte and interest, Praying you that there be no delaye vson yonre parte for the understanding of the tructhe, and that the shortest and best conrse may be therein taken, for the avoyding of suites or anye other dyslike, that by occasion thereof mighte ensue betwene vs, which for my parte I will shunne by all the good meanes I maye, and so not doubting of the lyke readines and desier in you, I bidde you very hartely fare well.—From London.—Your very lovinge friend Ch. Hatton, Cane.

— Submission and prayer for enlargement from prison to David Lloyd, mayor of Chester, and the aldermen of the same city, by John Frances, one of the sheriffs of the same city, and now a prisoner in the Northgate thereof, who after his comittal was guilty of going at large out of prison.—Signed, Jo. Frances.—No date.

31 July 1590.—Letter from William Cotgrave, mayor, and sixty-seven other citizens of Chester, to some honourable person, whose name does not appear on the paper. Setting forth the considerations which have determined the same citizens in common Assembly to refuse to pass under seal a patent sent to them by their "singuler good "Lord Thersle of Derby, for the annuittie of twentie "nobles per annum granted by this corporacion "to one Peter Proby on his being content "to cease his suite "for the clerkshipp of the Pentice."

12 May 1591.—Letter from Walter Jaymes to the Rt. Worshipful Mr. David Lloyd, "her highnes lyvetenant "of the city of Chester." Begging that a certain slipping of yarn, one of "sixtene slippings of hempen "yarn," stolen from the writer's tenant Benet ap Harry,

CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

may be restored to the same Benet by the said mayor, into whose hands it has come.

— 1591. Proclamation of the Mayor of Chester, for the observance and execution of all laws for providing the people with good and wholesome victuals at reasonable prices; the laws against vagrancy and mendicancy; the laws against prohibited games; and for the general maintenance of good order in the same city.

10 March 1592. Warrant, signed by Lord Hunsdon and addressed to Roger Duckington and all constables, &c. For the apprehension of John Tempest, alias Tripplandes, and his safe conduct to the presence of the same Lord Hunsdon at court or elsewhere.—Dated at Somerset House.

23 April 1592.—Letter from the Earl of Derby to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. Requesting the said mayor and aldermen to decide whether Henry Fells, a Chester apprentice, can without an infringement of the ancient orders of the city be made a freeman of the same city, though he has served only five of the seven years of his apprenticeship.—Dated at Latham.

— September 1592.—Warrant of Joachim Newton, warden of the Fleet Prison in London, appointing George and Lenard Dynnis his deputies, for the execution of an order made 12 November 33 Eliz. by the Privy Council in the Court of Star-chamber, for apprehension and commitment to the said prison of Robert Golborne, John Stiles, Richard Massie, Alice Greenwood, and Ralph Barlowe, at the suit of Alexander Cortes, gentleman.

9 January 1593.—Letter from George Mossley to the Mayor of Chester. Complaining of the excessive costs, amounting to xlviii. viii. d., put upon him by the said mayor and the recorder of Chester in an action had against him for so small a matter as a claim of viii. s.—Dated from Podington.

23 January 1593.—Letter from Peter Warburton to Mr. John Fitton, mayor of Chester. Entreating the mayor and citizens of Chester to forbear from requiring the writer to represent them in the parliament to be holden on the 19th of the next month, as he must be giving his attention to urgent private affairs.

22 February 1593.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and other officers of the port of Chester.—After our hartie commendacions. Because her Majestic and wee are troubled with Iryshe suitors which repaire heither ordynarily vpon very frivolous causes, Her Majesties pleasure is you shall suffer no Iryshmen or weomen to be sett on canille at that porte or the members of the same that shall not have pasporte and lycense from the Lord Deputie or two of the Councell of that Realme for their repaire hether. And because it is founde that dyners and seditious persons, some of them purposing mischeuous practyses against his Majestic and the State, and the better to culler their repaire into thys Realme do go first oner into Ireland from the partes beyond the Seas, and so conveighe themselves into this Realme. You shall cause from henceforth all suche persons as shalle repaire hether by Sea, either out of Irelande or any forraigne partes, that shall not be wel knowne vnto you to be merchantes, the factors of merchantes, or that shall not gine good testimonye of their good disposicion, to be straighthe examined and stayed untill wee shalbe advertysed thereof, and that you shall receive further direction for vs concerning them. The like care wee thinke meete to be taken for the stayning of suche persons as shall go aboute to go forthie of the Realme, both for their examinacion and stay, nules they haue Pasport from some of vs of her Majesty's Privy Councell, or be knowne well vnto you.

— March 1593.—Letter from the Earl of Derby to the Mayor of Chester. Written on information of a serious fray in the same city between Owen Salsburie and the writer's son-in-law, John Salsburie, in which the former combatant has been grievously if not mortally wounded. It is ordered that the best surgical aid may be procured for Owen Salsburie, and that in case of his death, an inquest may be had for the cause thereof.—Dated at the court of St. James. Endorsed: "Rec. 1 April 1593."

27 March 1593.—Letter from Lord Hunsdon to Mr. Fytton, Mayor of Chester. Requesting that three trunks attached by the same mayor may be sent by the next carrier to his lordship; and that John Tempest, alias Trepland, who caused the same trunks to be conveyed to Chester, and has been rescued since his apprehension, may on his recapture be committed to prison, there to remain till he give security for his appearance.—Dated at Somerset House.

28 March, 1593. Letter from Lord Treasurer Burghley to the Customers, Comptrollers, and Searchers of the port of Chester. For a return of the wines recently imported to Chester from Burdeaux, Rochelle, Sherante, or Nantes, in order that duty may be paid thereon in accordance with an order from her Majesty's Council for covering the charges of two of her Majesty's ships appointed to guard the return of the Burdeaux fleet.

1 April 1593. Letter from Thomas Ravenscroft to Mr. John Fytton, mayor of Chester. Declaring the writer's readiness to go to the limits of his authority in executing the said mayor's wishes in respect to Mr. John Salsburie, who is understood to be at present the guest of Mr. Trevors of Trevalen, whose house stands partly in Flintshire and partly in Denbighshire.

15 April 1593. Petition from divers inhabitants of the town of Farnworthe to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. For the appointment of Robert Highemughe to be master of the Free Grammar School of Farnworthe.

28 April 1593. Warrant, signed by Rychard Shuttleworth and H. Touneshend, to the Mayor, sheriffs and recorder of Chester. For the commitment to Chester Castle of Margaret Cally, spinster, on a charge of felony.

1 May 1593. Warrant (signed, Rych. Shuttleworth and H. Tounsend, and dated from Harwarden) for staying proceedings against Margaret Cally on an indictment for felony. Addressed to the Mayor, recorder, and sheriffs of Chester.

18 June 1593. Warrant to the Mayor and the Recorder of the city of Chester for the surrender of John Stanfeilde, of the city of Coventry, fuller, now lying in Chester gaol, in order that he may be tried at Warwick for horse-stealing in Warwickshire. Signed, Thomas Leigh.

24 June 1593. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. For provision of an adequate number of vessels for the transport of twelve hundred soldiers, levied in counties adjoining the sea-coast, and under orders to cross the water to Ireland from Chester or Liverpool. The Mayor of Chester is directed to communicate with the Mayor of Liverpool, so that he may ascertain what supply of transports may be had at the last-named port. Dated from Otelands.

6 July 1593. Letter from Gyles Brooke, mayor of Liverpool, to John Fytton, mayor of Chester. Announcing that six vessels have been stayed at Liverpool for the transport to Ireland of one half of the twelve hundred soldiers now ordered to cross from Liverpool or Chester to Dublin. Dated from Liverpool.

7 July 1593. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Earl of Derby. Announcing that "a sturges fish" has been taken and brought that morning before the mayor.

9 July, 1593. Copy of letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Earl of Derby. Respecting the sturgeon recently taken on the English side of the river Dee near Blaen, respecting which fish the writer is at dispute with Richard Trevor of Trevalen, esq., who alleges that it was taken on the Welsh side of the river, and pertains to him as Vice-Admiral and representative of the Lord High Admiral.

16 July 1593. Letter (signed Tho. Venables) to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Touching a letter lately addressed to the writer for the levying of fifteenths and tenths in Cheshire. Dated from Kynderton.

18 July 1593. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Privy Council to the Sheriff of Cheshire. For the collection of a grant to the Queen by Parliament of three entire subsidies and six fifteenths and tenths. Dated from the court at Otelands.

19 July 1593. Letter from the Earl of Derby to the mayor and aldermen of Chester. That satisfaction may be afforded the officers of Mr. Richard Carmarden, patentee for the transportation of Irish yarn, who complain that, to the prejudice of her Majesty's said grant under the broad seal to Richard Carmarden, they are "debarred at Chester of the first vewe and seasure of" "suche yarne as is brought in."

5 August 1593.—Letter from Henry Proctor to the Mayor of Chester. Announcing that her Majesty's Commissioners for causes ecclesiastical within the province of York have taxed a bill of expenses, amounting to iii. li. xiii. s. iii. d., against one Danyell Tayler; and requesting that the said sum may be required of Danyell Tayler "before his enlargement," and be delivered to Mr. Deane of Chester, who has undertaken to forward the same to York.

9 August 1593. Letter from the Earl of Derby to the Mayor of Chester. Recommending that Richard Wright may be reinstated in the position of an inn-keeper of the city of Chester, from which occupation he is very properly debarred for his misconduct in "suffering

"Owen Salusburie to bee conveyed out of his howse.
"notwithstanding your commandment to him to the "contrarie."

20 November 1593. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting that an enclosed dispatch may be forwarded with due care and speed by the ordinary post to the Lord Treasurer at the Court.

9 April 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting that an accompanying packet, directed to the Lord Treasurer, may be forwarded by the ordinary post with all possible speed.—Dated from Dublin.

19 April 1594. Rough draft of a letter from David Lloyd, mayor of Chester, to the Lord Treasurer. Requesting instructions for the further dealing with Moradant, Edmund Daie, Fraunces Easte, the two boys Ody and Warneford, and Edward Scrope, "the guide" of the same two boys; all which persons have been apprehended by the said mayor, and are in his keeping.

21 April 1594. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. For the arrest of two young boys, the one being Richard Ody, son of Thomas Ody, dwelling within a mile of Ely, and the other being John Warneford, son of Elizabeth Warneford, prisoner in the Fleet for recusancy; which two lads are said to have stayed at Chester, and "should have bin conveyed over" into Ireland, and from thence into Spayne. The "warrant further directs that on their apprehension" John Warneford should be conveyed to the Lord Mayor of London; and that Richard Ody be sent to Ely, and be presented to Lord North, in order that "his lordship may arrange fitly for the boy's education."—Dated from Greenwich.

26 April 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Ordering him to forward a dispatch requiring special haste.—Dated from London.

27 April 1594. Letter from Robert Berry, mayor of Lincopole, to David Lloide, mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the writer has, in accordance with a request from the mayor of Chester, arrested a certain person (not named), who appears to give a satisfactory account of his movements, and more particularly of "his suddaine departure from that etie," i.e., of Chester, "without leaue takinge of yonre worshipspe."

29 April 1594.—Warrant, issued by the Mayor of Chester, and addressed to her Majesty's constables of all the places between Chester and the Isle of Ely, for the recovery of a young boy named Richard Ody, son of Thomas Ody, dwelling within a mile of Ely, and for the boy's re-conveyance to the Isle of Ely, and his presentment there before the Lord North. It is stated in the warrant that the boy has stayed with others at Chester, and "should have bene conveyed over into Ire- land, and from thence into Spayne."—Dated from Chester.

29 April 1594. Letter from Lord Burghley to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting that two accompanying letters from the Queen may be sent forthwith to the gentlemen to whom they are directed. Dated from the writer's "howse in the Strand."—From memoranda at "the foot of Lord Burghley's letter, it appears that one of these two letters from the Queen was addressed to the Sheriffs of the county of Chester, and the other "to the Sheriffs and Justices of the Peace of the county of Lancaster."

1 May 1594. Letter (holograph) from Sir W. Waad to the Mayor of Chester. Directing the mayor to restore a bond to Mr. Francys, esq., who has appeared before the Lords of the Councils in compliance with the terms of the said bond.

1 May 1594. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. For the enlargement from prison of one John Mordant, lately apprehended and detained at Chester, it having been certified to the said lords that the said John Mordant is a man of good inclinations and a near kinsman to their very good lord, the Lord Mordant. Dated from Greenwich. In Sir W. Waad's handwriting.

6 May, 1594. Acknowledgment of Ranf Asheton, sheriff of the county of Lancaster, that he has received from John Tailier, servant of the port of Chester, her Majesty's warrant, dated at Greenwich on the 26th of last April, addressed to the sheriff and justices of the peace for the said county, for raising two hundred soldiers in their said county, for service in Ireland.

9 May 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester, requesting that two accompanying packets, carried by Henry Aunsell, may be forwarded by the ordinary post to Lord Treasurer Burghley. Dated from Dublin.

11 May 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester, requesting that an accompanying dispatch, carried by Gille of Helhrie, may be forwarded by the ordinary post to the Lord Treasurer. Dated from Dublin.

18 May 1594. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to some person, whose name does not appear, respecting the violence and extravagance of Mr. John Frances, one of the sheriffs of the city of Chester, who complains of the mayor's "hard dealing with him," and declares his purpose of having the matter heard at the Council table.

19 May 1594. Mandate addressed by Lord Treasurer Burghley to the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester. Ordering the said mayor and aldermen to provide "a convenient warehouse in some fitt place there, "and a beame, ballances and waights," to serve as a custom house "for the due execution and advancement "of hir Majesties service in hir subsidies and customes "within that port." Dated from the Court at Greenwich.

20 May 1594. Letter from William Earl of Derby to Mr. Lloyd, the Mayor of Chester. Asking for information about "certeine persons" who are understood by the earl "to have bene sente vnto you forthe of my Isle of "Manne." Dated from "Lathom my howse."

21 May, 1594. Rough draft of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Earl of Derby. Announcing that the writer has sent to the Lords of the Council all papers that have come to his hands (either from Mr. Randall Stanley, captain of the said earl's Isle of Man, or from other parties) respecting two persons, viz., Richard Browne an Irishman, and Robert Barber a Scot, lately sent out of the Isle of Man, who are described "as sus- picious persons wandringe abroad vagrant." Dated from Chester.

22 May 1594. Letter from Lord Burghley to the Mayor of Chester. Ordering the enlargement from prison "of an Irishman and a Scottishman, and of a "hoie that arrived there in their company;" it being further directed that the Irishman should be returned to Ireland with the first passage, and the Scotchman be provided with a pass wherewith to make his way to Scotland, the boy being permitted, if he will, to return to his own country. Dated from the court.

23 May 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Directing that a packet carried "by "this bearer Gill of Liverpooles," and addressed to the Lord Treasurer may be forwarded speedily by the ordinary post. Dated from Dublin.

24 May 1594. Draft of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Surveyor of her Majesty's lands in the county palatine of Chester. Begging the receiver of the letter to advertise the Lord Treasurer and Lord Chancellor of the demand now made by Sir John Fortescue, knt., chancellor of her Majesty's Exchequer, for forty pounds from the citizens of Chester, as payment for the old Shire Hall, which said hall, instead of being sold, was by her Majesty freely given to the same citizens, on their petition made 1581 to "the Lord High Treas- urer of England to haue the old shere hall bestowed "vpon them to be thens shifted into this citie and here "to be erected, sett vp, and converted into some neces- sary and profitable vses, aswell in repayning the "vpper parte thereof to be a garner to serve for the "storage of her Majesties corne or other provisions, as "in ordering a flesh shambles or vpon Markett to be "made vnderneath, the same garner to serve for the "comon vse and benefyte of the citizens."

28 May 1594. Rough draft of a letter from David Lloyd, mayor of Chester, to Mr. Proby. In answer to Mr. Proby's letter respecting the said mayor's controversy with John Frances, one of the sheriffs of Chester. Dated from Chester.

8 June 1594. The names of the Children now sent to Chester by order of the Lord Deputy and Council, and to remaine there till further order shalbe sent from the Right Honorable the Lords of the Council for them. Bartholomew Wyckam namyng himself to bee their tutor, and taking charge of them, sonne to Clement Wyckam, a merchant of Newcastle vpon Tyne.

Henry Pownder and William Pownder, bretheren and sonnes to Richard Pownder of Watling Streete, London, merchant. They changed their names and called themselves by the name of Radeliff, when they were first stayed.

Thomas Wylford naminge himselfe to bee the sonne of Robert Wylford, some tymes of Lyncolnes Inne, deceased.

Edward Warneford sonne to Olyver Warneford, gent. of Stakes neare Havant in Hampshire.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

John Hill sonne to John Hill of Ayre in Suffolke.

Robert Wall sonne to John Wall, a draper in London about Bow lane.

Edmond Eymyng, borne in a towne called Bashall in Yorkeshire within 4 miles of Whally.

Thomas Williamssonne, borne at Thamworth in Staffordshire.

Henry Kyrekhamme, sonne to Thomas Kyrekhamme of Hardborne in Lancashire, husbandman.

Robert Colton, borne at Wisbitche in Cambridgeshire, sonne to Robert Colton, joyner.

Exd.—Geff Fenton.

Together with this list, a letter addressed by the Privy Council of Ireland (dated from Dublin, 15 June 1594) to the Mayor of Chester, bidding the said mayor to take good care of "the certain yonge striplings of England" vnder the charge of one Bartholomew Wickham, who "had purpose to transport themselues beyond seas to places of Popishe religion," untill the wishes and purpose of the Lords of the Council respecting the same youths and their tutor be made known.

12 June, 1594. Rough draft (in the handwriting of David Lloyd, mayor of Chester) of a letter to some honourable person, whose name does not appear. Announcing the death of Mr. Thomas Hutches, preacher of God's word and reader of the Divinity Lecture in the Cathedral Church of Chester; and recommending one Mr. Harvy, parson of Banbury, as fit successor to the late Mr. Hutches aforesaid.

25 June 1594. Letter from Owen Reze and Thomas Powell to Mr. David Lloyd, Mayor of the city of Chester. Expressing the surprise that the said Mayor should not, on the complaint of the letter's bearer, Thomas Wilkinson, have summoned before him a maidservant who had left his service without authority; it being the custom of the writers within the limits of their authority "when any servant of any forreygne shier unlawfully departeth from there Mr., Mistris, or dame in this county," to commit the deserting servant until he or she has entered into bonds to serve his or her employer to the end of the current term of service. Dated from Boras.

25 June 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Begging the mayor to forward a dispatch by the ordinary post to the Lord Treasurer. Dated from Kilmainehed.

28 June 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting that two packets "with a plott inclosed in lether," carried by William Ratlieff, may be forwarded speedily by the ordinary post to the Lord Treasurer. Dated from Kilmainehed.

30 June 1594. Letter from Thomas Wylbram to the Mayor of Chester. Begging the mayor to examine "one Danyelles wife, whose husband is in the Northgate" of Chester, respecting the particulars of a robbery and murder, which she is said to have spoken of, as having taken place in Lancashire, to one Poulford. Dated on Sunday from Woodhay.

1 July 1594. Letter from Rycharde Shuttleworth, Chief Justice of the Great Sessions of the county of Denbigh, to the mayor and recorder of the city of Chester. Requesting the same mayor and recorder to examine certain witnesses, inhabitants of the said city, touching the sealing and delivery of a certain "specialty" now in controversy before the Justices of the same Great Sessions, between John Williams, plaintiff, and Richard Griffith, defendant. Dated from Denbigh.

1 July 1594. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting the mayor to take order for the safe conveyance to the Council of the "dyverso" younge men sent of Ireland, that should have ben conveyed beyond the seas vnder the charge of one Bartholomew Wyckhay." Dated from Greenwich.

2 July, 1594. Letter from Thomas Wylbram to Mr. David Lloyd, Mayor of Chester. Expressing the writer's wish for the enlargement from prison of "Danyelles" wife," as he prefers no charge against her, though he directed her to be examined with a view to discovering the murderer of the woman in Lancashire. Dated from Woodhay.

4 July 1594. Letter from Griffith Wynne to his loving cousin Mr. David Lloyd, Mayor of the city of Chester. Begging the mayor to send him from Chester a person who is understood to dwell there and to be willing to "accomplish the worke," as the writer may have need of him, it being probable that "some vrgent busines" will fall out to be done for the Quene here the latter end of this weeke, and that yf it should see fall," the writer is "vnprovided of eny to supply the office of an execution."

1120.

4 July 1594. Letter (signed W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting that an accompanying packet may be forwarded by the ordinary post to the Lord Treasurer. Dated from Kilmainehed.

5 July 1594. Letter from William Geuff, esq., Sheriff of the county of Flint, to the Mayor and Sheriffs of the city of Chester. Announcing that in execution of orders from the Justices of Assize of the county of Flint, the said sheriff of the said county will himself or by deputy with an adequate force be "at the Redd" banck one Saltney side on Saturday next by one of "the clock in the after none," there to receive the bodies of one David ap Richard and Grace his wife, with a view to their trial in Flintshire for a felony alleged to have been committed by them in that county.

8 July 1594. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Announcing that in obedience to their lordships' orders, the writer has sent under a competent guard to their lordships "the yonge men, beinge in nmber tenne, sent hither out of Ireland, that should have bene conveyed beyond the seas vnder the charge of Bartholomew Wickham." The guard is commanded by the writer's servant Edward Wright; three of them being on horseback, "and the rest on foot for the sparinge of charges."

21 July 1594. Letter from Lord Buckehurst to the Mayor of Chester. Directing that, before one Alexander Coates be discharged from prison at Chester, he be bound over to appear before the Lord Chief Justice in London, to answer a charge of assault and robbery preferred against him by Captain Barnabie Rytche, who alleges that on the occasion of this violent robbery, which took place a year or more since, he was despoiled by the said Coates of "a fayre cypress hatt band." Dated from the Court.

26 July 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting that an accompanying and especially important dispatch may be forwarded with all expedition by the ordinary post to the Lord Treasurer. Dated from Kilmainehed.

1 August 1594. Letter from Lord Buckhurst to the Mayor of Chester. Calling the mayor's attention to the case of Capt. Barnabie Rytche, who declares that he was hindered in obtaining justice by the said Mayor and his bretheren when he arrested Alexander Coates upon a charge of felony. The mayor is admonished to give satisfaction to Captain Ritchie if the allegations of the latter are true, as in that case an enquiry into the affair would result in discredit to the Captain's adversaries.—Dated from the Court.

August 1594. Letter from the Mayor of Chester to one of the Lords of the Council. Setting forth the particulars of his conduct in respect to Captain Ritche's proceedings against Alexander Coates, when the said Captain at Chester charged the said Coates with robbing him of "a cypress hatt band" some fifteen months before at Cotton in Warwickshire. The mayor's statement goes to show that he acted with strict legality in the matter, and under the instructions of Mr. Serjeant Warburton, the recorder of the city.

11 August 1594. Letter (signed, W. Fytzwylliam) to the Mayor of Chester. Begging the Mayor to forward with all convenient speed by the ordinary post two accompanying packets to the Lord Treasurer, and one accompanying letter to the Clerk of the Ordinance.—Dated from Dublin.

18 March 1596.—Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Smithe, Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the writer has "required Sir Henry Wallop's mer to deliner vnto you your bill for the eccclij. yowe received" of Mr. Beeston, whose confidence is that the same "bill is sent into Ireland to their Master, which he is to voweche vpon his accompt;" and suggesting that "the two cutlers," who have taken great pains in cleansing and keeping soldiers' arms and clothing, should be duly rewarded for their said pains, out of money raised by the sale of "such part of the beare, bisquet, and cheese, as remaineth vsnpent, and is either faultie or will not keepe."—Dated from "my howse in the Strand."

8 April 1596. Paper setting forth the rates of servants', labourers', and hierers' wages in the city of Chester, taxed and appointed by the Right Worshipful Thomas Smith, esq., mayor of Chester.

6 May.—Letter of free passage from the Isle of Man to the port of Chester, given by Captain Randall Stanley, the earl of Derby's captain of the said island, to two gentlemen, having a letter licence to travel from the king of Scots; the said "free passage" being granted on condition that the two bearers thereof show themselves before the Mayor of Chester before they depart from the port of the said city into England. The writer encloses to the Mayor an unopened letter received from the two travellers who allege it to be a letter from the English ambassador in Scotland recommending them to the Lord Scrope.—Dated from Castle Knossben in the Isle of Man.

3 B

12 October 1596. Letter from Thomas Smith to William Aldersey, late Mayor of Chester, and to the recorder and aldermen of the same city. Touching the writer's recent election to the office of Mayor of Chester.

13 October 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and to the officers of her Majesty's customs of the port of the city of Chester. For the provision at the easiest possible rates of a sufficient number of barques, hoyes, and other vessels, for the transportation to Ireland of nine hundred soldiers, taken out of Yorkshire and the counties of Northwales, and appointed to proceed to Dublin via Chester, for service in Ireland; the said nine hundred soldiers being part of a levy of two thousand men for the increase of her Majesty's forces in Ireland.—Dated from the Court at Richmond.

2 December 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. For the disbandment and dismissal to their several and respective counties of the nine hundred soldiers levied in the counties of York and North Wales, and sent to the port of Chester by or about the 8th day of last month of November, for transportation into Ireland and service in that country; the same soldiers having been detained at Chester by contrary wind and weather, and having never been sent over the sea to Ireland.—Dated from the court at Whitehall.

14 November 1596. Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Smith, mayor of the city of Chester, and Mr. Cotes, comptroller of the port there. Accompanying an order from Mr. Beeston, her Majesty's receiver, to his servant, for the delivery to Messrs. Smith and Cotes of the sum of four hundred pounds, for defraying the charges of transporting soldiers into Ireland. "Whereas," writes the Lord Treasurer, "it semeth by your writings, that theare were at that time arrived thence 550 men, percell of the number of 900, appointed to be imbarqued there, of which 200 of the "Yorkshere men were vnarmed, and that as yowe understood Capitaine Simms had vnderaken to arme them, and was comen vp to London to provide armes for that purpose, whome I dowbt not is by this time comen thither therewith; you shall not therefore make anie manner of staie of the men theare as theie shall arrive, and as winde maie serve, but to send them ouer to the Lord deputie and Counsell of Ireland with your letters, with a list of their names and armes, as theie be sorted into Bandes, that his L. maie cause vowe to be taken of them vpon their arrival, and the sooner they can be sent thence, the more will hir Majesties charge be lesned, which by your letter it appeareth will amount to xxx*li*. by the daie or thereabowtes, besides the charge of their transportation and sea-victualinge, amountinge to ccl*li*. ouer and besides from other extraordinary charges."—Dated from "my howse in the Strand."

21 November 1596.—Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Smith, mayor of Chester, and to the Customer and Comptroller of the port there. Announcing that order had been given for the payment of the sum of 400*l*. by the servant of Mr. Beeston, his majesty's receiver in those parts, "towards the answeringe of the charge of the transportation and victuallinge of the soldiers that were to be sent thither and theare transported for Ireland," before his lordship's receipt of the said mayor's application for the sum of cxxiii*li*. xviii*s*. for repayment to one Kitchen, who has advanced so much money for the same service. The Lord Treasurer has given order for the payment of this last-named sum, which is to be accounted for as part of the four hundred pounds already ordered.—Dated from the Court.

30 November 1596.—Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Smith, Mayor of the city of Chester. Touching charges and arrangements for sending soldiers over to Ireland, some of whom are without arms. "And yet," the writer says, "if winde shall serve, yowe shall not forbear to send awaie all, or as manie of the soldiers as yowe can, although they should want their armes, whiche maie be sent after them." The long letter begins thus: "I have receiued youre letter dated the xxviiith daie of this month, by which I perceine that at the time of the writings thereof the most part of those soldiers arrived theare, being in number viii^l, continued still in that towne to hir Majesties great charge, some of them havinge been at "the seas, but putt back by contrarie windes; and "Where it seemeth that of the number of 900 appointed to come thither there was wanting 150, I doe vnderstand that the Erle of Pembroke hath giuen order to haue them to goe to Bristol or Barstaple to be imbarqued at the one of those places, as lienge more convenient for them then Chester doth; and Whereas you write that the 50 sent owt of Merionethshire, and the like number owt of Carnarvonshire, haue neither coates nor armes, it smeth verie strange, especiallie that they haue noe coates, consideringe monie hath been heare deliuered for their coates, as of all other the Welsh counties, after the rate of iii*s*. a coate, to Arthur Messinger, servant to the Erle of Pembroke, to be aunsweared to the cuntries; and wherea yowe also write that the 400 soldiers sent owt of Yorkshire had not at the time of the writings of your letter received their armes, but you were informed that some piece thereof should be brought thither, I praie yowe by your worthe to certifie what armes and weapons shall be wanting for thees 400 more."—Dated from the Court.

18 December 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. Ordering the said Mayor to deliver to the Earl of Kildare and Henry Malby, esq., (each of whom has been lately appointed to the command and charge of 35 horses,) "certeine armour and furniture for light horsemen that was provided by certeine of the clergy who were appointed to sett forth the light horses for the seruice of Ireland," and was left last spring in the city of Chester. The said armour, weapons and furniture are to be divided equally between the said earl and Mr. Malby.—Dated from the court at Whitehall.

27 December 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. "Wee vnderstand by a letter from you dyrected to the Lord Treasurer of England, that the company of Capitaine Dutton havinge byn imbarqued longe sithence at Hollyhead haue byn fower tymes by contrary wyndes put backe agayne, and diuers of his souldyers vpon their retorne are run away with their armor, coates and furnytur, wherevpon you require ouer dyrection what order is to be taken for the dyett and conduct of the souldyers remayning to bringe them into the county whence they were leuyed, wherein wee are to require you the like order may be taken which we dyrected for the rest of the souldyers both for their dyett to haue allowance of viii*d*. by the day for so many dayes as will serue to bringe them from the place where they were sett on land vntill they come to the county where they were leuyed, and tot he lieutenant that shall conduct them * * p. diem, and to see their armour and furniture safely kept with the rest. Concerning the souldyers that are run away wee like well the order you haue taken for their apprehensyon, and do praie you as dyrected from vs to require the deputy lieutenantes of the countyes whence they were leuyed, when any of them shall arryue there, to see them apprehended and commytted, and their names certefied hether vnto vs."—From the Court at Whitehall.

7 April 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Ordering the same mayor to make provision of shipping and victuals for the transportation from Chester to Dublin of the 700 men, who were sent to Chester en route for Ireland last October, and then returned to their several counties, after waiting a month in Chester for favourable wind and weather. It is remarked incidentally that of the force assembled at Chester in October 1596, one company under the charge of Captain Billings was transported into Ireland. Touching the present levy their lordships remark, "Neuertheles yf they shalbe driuen to stay there any time attending opportunity of wynde, Wee hope yow will take order they maie be vycallat at more easy rates than they were the last tyme, whereby the whole wages of the poore souldier was spent in his diett."—Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

9 April 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Ordering the said mayor to make due provision of shipping and victuals for the transportation from Chester to Dublin for 560 soldiers levied in the inland counties, and appointed to be at the port of Chester on the last day of the instant month, over and above the shipping and victuals ordered to be in readiness for 700 other soldiers levied in diuers counties for service in Ireland, and appointed to arrive at Chester on the same day. Payment will be made to the Mayor for his charges in executing these orders either in London, or at Chester "by a seruaut of Sir Henry Walloppe

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

" whose ys sent thether with money." The writers add, " The men vpon the arryvall at that Porte are to be deliuered ouer to Capten Crofte, whose by our direction is appointed to take y^e charge of them in their Transportacioun to y^e said Realme of Ireland." Dated from the court at Whitehall.

21 April 1597. Letter from Olyuer Saynt John, lieutenant for the county of Huntingdon, to the deputy at Chester of Sir Henry Walloppe, knt., Treasurer of Her Majesty's wars in Ireland. Announcing the appointment of the letter's bearer, Millysent Smith, gentleman, to be conductor from Huntingdon to Chester of the twenty-three foot-soldiers levied in the said county of Huntingdon for service in Ireland; and also the appointment of the same Millysent Smith to receive the coat-money and conduct-money due to the same county in respect of the same soldiers.—Dated from Huntingdon.

23 April 1597. Letter from the lieutenant of Bedfordshire to the officers and servants at Chester of Sir Henry Walloppe, knt., Treasurer at the wars for Ireland. Announcing the appointment of Serjeant Thomas Halfe-pennie to conduct from Bedford to Chester the thirty-three foot-soldiers levied in the same county for service in Ireland, and his authorization to receive the coat-money and conduct-money due to the same county in respect of the same soldiers; the coat money being settled by her Majesty's council at the rate of iii.s. per coat, and the conduct-money at the rate of viii.d. per day for each soldier, and iiii.s. per day for the conductor. Dated from Armpthill.

25 April 1597. Letter of appointment and commission, whereby John Manners, esq., and Sir Humphrey Ferrers, knt., deputy-lieutenants of Derbyshire, authorized John Buckton to demand and receive from the servants or deputies for the purpose of Sir Henry Walloppe, knt., Treasurer at the wars, all conduct-money and coat-money due to the said county in respect of the twenty-three soldiers sent out of the same shire to Chester for transportation to and service in Ireland.

25 April 1597. Letter from Robert Burgoyne, Fowlke Grevely, Thomas Lucy and Richard Verney, to the deputy at Chester of Sir Henry Walloppe, knt., Treasurer-at-the-wars in Ireland. Announcing the appointment of Richard Woodward of Butler's Marston, co. Warwick, to be conductor to Chester of the fifty-six soldiers levied in the same county of Warwick for service in Ireland; with power to receive the coat-money and conduct-money due to Warwickshire in respect of the same soldiers. Dated from Warwick.

26 April 1597. Letter from Richard Rupert, Thomas Mulsho, and another, to Captain Francis Crofte and the deputy at Chester of Sir Henry Walloppe, knt., Treasurer-of-the-wars in Ireland. Announcing the appointment of Mr. Richard Neale to conduct from Northampton to Chester the fifty-six soldiers levied in Northamptonshire for service in Ireland: with authority to receive the coat-money and conduct-money due to the same county in respect of the same soldiers. Dated from Northampton.

26 April 1597. Letter from W. Horwoode, high-sheriff, and E. Littlecart, Am. Blounte and Jo. Bowes, commissioners of musters in co. Stafford, to the mayor of Chester. Announcing the appointment of George Brigham to conduct to Chester the thirty-six soldiers levied in Staffordshire for service in Ireland, and authorizing Thomas Harper to receive the coat-money and conduct-money due to the same county in respect of the said soldiers.

26 April 1597. Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Smythe, mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the writer has ordered Mr. Beeston, her Majesty's receiver in the parts of Chester, to pay four or five hundred pounds to the said mayor, towards the charges for transporting troops to Ireland; and that the same writer has further " deliuered nowe into the handes of " Sir Henry Walloppe's seruautes the somme of six " hundred powndes to be in like vse paid to youe for " this service." Dated from the Court.

28 April 1597. Letter from Edward Kinaston and Thomas Leighton to the deputy at Chester of Sir Henry Walloppe, knt., Treasurer-at-wars in Ireland. Announcing the appointment of John Blease, gentleman, to conduct to Chester the fifty-six foot soldiers levied in co. Salop for service in Ireland; with power to receive the coat-money and conduct-money due to the same shire in respect of the same soldiers. Dated from Salop.

1 May 1597. Letter from Rychard Molyneux to Thomas Smythe esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the writer has appointed his man-Edmunde Molyneux, to conduct to the port of Chester the fifty-six soldiers imprest in the county of Lancashire for service in Ireland; and begging that the coat, money and conduct-money due in respect of the same soldiers may be paid with all convenient speed to the same Edmund.

2 May 1597. Letter of attorney given by John Buckton, who styles himself " conductur of Darbie " Shyer " to Captain Croft; whereby the said captain is authorised to receive " all sutch summe and summes " as is dew to me by virtue of sutch commission."

12 May 1597. Letter from T. Burgh to his verie lovinge friende Mr. Smythe, mayor of the city of Westchester. Mr. Maior, the Magistrates of this Towne make complaint unto me that pacquettes are often delivered here from the Deputie and counsell in Ireland to be heuce conveyed to you, their havinge no allowance for the same. They finde them selves also greived that the companie vnder the leadinge of Freckleton arivinge here, lye ceased vpon the poore inhabitantes, and knowe not howe the charge wilbe awnsured. They avouch that in time past the allowances in like cases have bene made by you and your predecessors, and that you received it in grosse, by order from my Lord Treasurer, but as they alleagde theie here nothinge of it now, which by reson of their povertie they seeme not to be hable to beare. In respect whercof I have thoughte good at these requeste to advertise you so much, least without some care be had of them now, as in former times, her Majesties service may be hercafter neglected, and the poore people much discontented. If you have no order from my Lord Treasurer in this behalfe alreadie, you may then doe well to advertise his Lordship of it; and I do for this time comitt you to God. From Beaumaris this xiith of Maye, 1597. Your verie lovinge friende, T. BURGH.

16 May 1597. Letter of George, earl of Huntingdon, to Sir Henry Walloppe, her Majesty's treasurer at the wars, and to the Mayor of Chester. For payment to the letter's bearer or to Mr. Grovenor of certain moneys, amounting in all to xxviii.li. x.s. viii.d. due as conduct and coat money for the fifty-six soldiers, sent from Leicestershire for service in Ireland. Dated from Ashebie-Dalazouche.

19 May 1597. Letter from Mr. W. Grosvenor to Thomas Smythe, esq., Mayor of Chester. Asking urgently for payment of the coat-money and conduct-money due on the fifty-six soldiers sent out of Leicestershire, in accordance with a warrant directed to the same mayor by the earl of Huntingdon. Dated from Belleport.

20 May 1597. Rough draft of a letter (unsigned and barely legible). Touching sums for conduct-money and coat-money of soldiers, which the writer has paid on the receipt of the Earl of Huntingdon's letter.

25 May 1597. Letter from W. Grosvenor to Thomas Smythe, esq., mayor of Westchester. Complaining that the writer, the conductor of the Leicestershire soldiers to the port of Chester, has been paid only xx.li. x.s. iiiii.d., being viii.li. v.s. iiiii.d. less than the sum claimed for him in respect of the same soldiers by the earl of Huntingdon's warrant. Dated from Belleport.

5 June 1597. Letter from the Mayor and aldermen of Bristol to the Mayor and aldermen of West Chester. Begging the mayor and aldermen of West Chester to make stay of any sacks and oils that may be brought for sale to West Chester from Milford; the writers having been advertised by divers Bristol merchants of good credit, " That a certeyne French shippe laden with " sackes and oyles, of the goodes of Mr. John Olyver " and other merchautes of this place, was lately taken " neere Caldey within our chamell by certeyne Eng- " lish Pirates, Whoe (as yt ys to be coniectured) have " murdered or otherwise made away xvi. or xviii. " men that were in the said Frenche shippe, and have " carried the said gooddes into Mylforde-Avon, and from " thence transported the same in other bottomes into " Westo Chester." Signed,—William Yate, mayor; Thomas Aldworth, Francis Knight, John Webbe, and William Ellys, aldermen.

11 June 1597. Draft of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to William Yate, mayor, and to the aldermen of Bristol. Requiring the mayor and aldermen of Bristol to show sufficient cause for the further detention of Richard Vggan, gentleman, (who declares himself to be the son of Sir John Vggan of Bolston, co. Pembroke, knt.) in respect of the freight of sack brought by him to Chester in the 'George Tasker,' and there rented, and also to give bonds for the prosecution of their charges against the same prisoner; and announcing that, in default of such evidence and undertaking, the writer will liberate the same Richard Uggan, and leave him to take his ordinary remedy for false imprisonment and impeachment of credit. Dated from Chester.

17 June 1597. Letter from Walter Stanfast, alderman of Bristol, to the Mayor and aldermen of the city of Chester. Thanking the mayor and aldermen of Chester for their zeal and promptitude in staying nine tuns and one butt of sack, sold in the city of Chester by a certain Richard Uggan, gentleman, who declares that the same sack was brought, by way of merchandise, from a barque of Milford, called the George Tasker; and praying, in behalf of Mr. George Olyver and others, merchants of Bristol, to whom the wine is believed to pertain, that the same sack may be stayed yet longer, and that the same Richard Uggan may be bound to appear before the mayor and aldermen of Chester, or the Judge of the Admiralty, to answer whatever may be laid to his charge for intermeddling with the same sack, which is believed to have been bought of pirates. In support of this belief, the writer says, "We haue made verey dyligente serche and enquirey, as well in her Majesties Custome Howse here as otherwise, but there hath byn noe such barque of Milford at this Porte, nor any such Seckes transported from hence as the said Vggan affirmeth: But we are nowe enformed that there ys a Barque of Ireland taken of late by a pyrate, lyeinge in a shippe of Warre abowt Mylford, which ys vehemently suspected to have taken an other shippe laden with sakes and oyles for the sayd Mr. Olyver and other merchantes of this cty, and the said xix. buttes of Secke were boughte of those Pyrates." Dated from Bristol.

28 June 1597. Letter from Andrew Brereton to the sheriffs of the city of Chester. For the delivery, to the writer's brother and his attendants, of the prisoner Anthony Owen, who has committed divers felonies within some miles of the writer's house. Dated from Boras.

1597. Rough draft of a letter, written by some person whose name does not appear, to some collector of moneys levied or to be levied on writs of Privy Seal. Touching "severall Privy Seales for her Majestie issued out and serued vponn the severall persons whose names are contained in the schedule hereinclosed."

31 August 1597. Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Smith, the Mayor of Chester. Disapproving of the bill of Richard Richardson and Symon Smith, cutlers of Chester, amounting to xlvii. li. viii. s. v. d., for repairing the decayed armour and weapons of 650 soldiers; the ground of the disapproval being that captains and soldiers should themselves be at the charge of repairing and cleansing their own armour. The Lord Treasurer, however, authorises the mayor to pay to the said cutlers the sum of xx. li. (already offered to them by the same mayor), on their giving him an acknowledgment that they accept the same in full payment of the whole demand. Dated from "my howse at Theobalds."

20 October 1598. The acknowledgement and submission of Richard Magbull, yeoman, who expresses humbly his sorrow and penitence "for hauinge highlite offended God and the Queenes Majesty in absenting himselfe from the Church and the excrecyes of religion nowe established within this realme."

14 November, 1601. Certificate of the governor of Knockfargus of the safe arrival at Knockfargus of thirteen horsemen with their horses, under the command of Ensign Atkinson, which horsemen and horses the bearer of the certificate, John Munelly, owner of the barque 'the Elizabeth of Lerpoole,' was pressed to transport and deliver. Signed, Arthur Chichester.

14 August 1604. Letter ordering money to be levied in certain towns and parishes near Chester, for the relief of persons in Chester visited with the pestilence.

27 July 1605. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. For the strict and sufficient execution of laws touching vintners' licenses.

14 November 1605. Letter from Thomas Lawton to the Mayor of Chester. Begging the receiver of the letter "to warne a quarter Sessions vpon Tuesdaye the 26 of November," and to inform the writer when the Court and Crown moots are to be kept.

27 January 1606. Letter from H. Touneshend to the Recorder of Chester. Touching Mr. Lea's neglect to appear before the recorder in obedience to a summons, and setting forth the circumstances accountable for the contempt of which Mr. Lea has been guilty.

9 February 1606. Letter from R. Lewknor to the Mayor and Recorder of Chester. Touching the misdeeds of one John Crophe, "who latelie served the Lady Cholmondeleigh, and is for his lewde behaviour

"and abuses attempted and done towards her Ladyship committed to prison at Chester"; and requesting that, when he has received due punishment for his offences against Lady Cholmondeleigh, the said John Crophe may be still held in custody to answer charges preferred against him by the writer's servant, Edward Hilton.

6 March 1606. Draft of a letter (addressed probably by the mayor and recorder of Chester to Lords of the Council) announcing the arrest of one John Jones alias Mosse, a professed Seminary Priest, who has been apprehended on the information of William Atkinson, gentleman, agent of the High Commissioners of the province of Canterbury for discovering popish recusants. Dated from Chester.

13 March 1606. Letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Rt. Hon. Lord Stannopp. Announcing that the writer has arrested and detains two young men in the said city, "who were determyned to haue gone to Ireland;" their stature and equipment answered to a description set forth in certain notes. The prisoners had upon them money amounting to xlii. li. xix. s. vi. d.

12 May 1606. Letter from Lord Chancellor Ellesmere to the Mayor and Sheriffs of Chester. For the apprehension and safe keeping of Robert Tetherby alias Smith, and Edward Wilson, on suspicion of being guiltily concerned in "a verie heynous burglarie and murder," and believed to be now "lodging in y^e house of one Sutton, at y^e signe of the Redd Lyon "without the easte gate of the citie of Chester." Dated from York House.

17 May 1606. Orders made by Thomas Harpur, gentleman, master of the Hospital at Spittal Boughton, with the consent of the bretheren and sisters of the said hospital.

20 Maye 1606. Letter from R. Lewknor, Chief Justice of Chester, to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. Requesting the said mayor and aldermen to pay to the constable of Chester Castle such money as may be due to him out of the moneys levied on "the whole countrey" for the relief of the poor and infected of the city, and also for the relief of the prisoners in Chester castle. Dated from Ludlow Castle.

22 August 1606. Testimonial of good character and conduct to Thomas Bunnell, a poor scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford. Certifying that during his short residence in the said college the same Thomas Bunnell has behaved to the approval of his academic superiors. Signed by the following fellows of Brasenose:—Geffrey Pereuall, Edward Rillston, Richard Taylor, Thomas Peacocke, James Dalton, Edoard Vernon.

28 October 1606. Letter from George Calvert to Mr. Littler, mayor of Chester. Accompanying a letter which the earl of Salisbury wishes to be conveyed to his niece, the Lady Norreys, "who is now at Knowsley, with her sister the Countesse of Derby." Dated from Whitehall.

17 November 1606. Letter from George Calvert to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a letter which the earl of Salisbury wishes the mayor to convey safely and speedily to Lord Derby at Knowsley. Dated from Whitehall.

19 November 1606. Letter (holograph) from the earl of Salisbury to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting the said mayor to convey an accompanying packet to Sir Richard Cooke, his Majesty's Secretary in Ireland, who "is either already passed by y^e city, or to pass shortly towards Lerpoole, where he purposeth to take shipping for Ireland." Dated from the court.

22 November —. Letter from Henry Birkhouse to the Mayor of Chester. For the further detention of one William Thomas, a prisoner in the mayor's "pryson in the North Gate," on a charge of misdemeanours committed by him.

27 November 1606. Letter to the Mayor of Chester. Announcing that the writer has received from the Postmaster of Lyncerpole a letter for the earl of Salisbury, which is herewith transmitted to the said mayor in order that he may forward it to the said earl, "when next you write vnto him."

2 December 1606. Letter from William earl of Derby to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting the said mayor to allow the "Lord of Harforth his men," a company of players, to have the town-hall of the said city, as a theatre wherein "to vse theire qualitie."

29 February 1607. Writ from Lords of the Council to All Maiors, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, Constables, Headboroughs, Tithingmen, &c. For a due provision of horses, carriages and guards for "a good portion of his Majesty's treasure, appointed to be sent into the realme of Ireland, for payment of his Ma-

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

"jesty's Army and Garrisons in that kingdome, together with sundry provisions both of his Majesty's, and of the Treasurer at warre there, being committed vnto the charge and trust of Henry Reynoldes, esq., and William Turam, one of the seruantes of the said Treasurer, to be conveyed from hence vnto Dublin in that realme." The writers continue, "These shalbe in his Majesties name to will and require you and every of you to whom it may appertain not onely to see them furnished from place to place with so many cartes, waynes and teemes with all other necessaries herewnto belonging as may serue for the speedy drawing and carriage of his Majesty's said Treasure and prouisions aforesaid, by convenient iourneys not exceeding twenty miles by the day, but also with hackneys and able Posthorses for such persons as shalbe sent with the said Treasure and prouisions, and with some conuenient number of sufficient, able and honest persons of the better sort to guard, attend, and watche the said treasure from place to place, and in the Innes by the way from hence to the city and port of Chester, Nesson, Helbry or Luerpoole, or any number of the said ports, and then and there to see them furnished with conuenient shipping for the more safe and speedy transportacion of the said Treasure and prouisions at prices accustomed in his Majesty's like seruice, and also with hackneys and Posthorses at their returre." Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

31 March 1607. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Sheriffs of Chester. For the delivery to the bearer, Aquila Wykes, of the persons of two notorious malefactors, Titherton alias Smith, and Edward Wilson alias Durnford, in order that they may be conveyed to London, there to be tried for a wicked murder and robbery by them committed. It is directed that the prisoners are to be surrendered in chains and bonds, and the money taken from them (amounting to some forty-two pounds) shall be given up to Sir Jerome Bowes, knt., as the robbers obtained the said money by the sale of the goods which they had taken from Sir Jerome. It is further ordered that the geldings, which the culprits had in their possession, should be appraised and given over on reasonable terms to Aquila Wykes for the use of Sir Jerome Bowes, if such delivery can be lawfully and conveniently made. Anyhow it is directed that the geldings be used in conveying the prisoners to London. Dated from the Court.

7 April 1607. Draft of a letter from the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Announcing in what manner and time the writers have executed their lordships' orders for the delivery of Robert Tetherton and Edward Willson, prisoners, to Aquila Wykes, and for the restoration to Sir Jerome Bowes of property taken from him by the same malefactors.

13 April 1607. Letter (holograph) from the earl of Salisbury to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a packet, which the mayor is requested to give to "one Mr. Strowd a seruant of the L. Deputies of Ireland," either at Chester or at Lirepoole, or to forward with care to Ireland, in case Mr Strowd should have gone upon the sea without the dispatch. Dated from Whitehall.

27 April, 1607. Letter from the earl of Salisbury to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a packet of letters, to be sent on to the Lord Deputy of Ireland at the first opportunity. Dated from Whitehall.

4 June, 1607. Letter (holograph) from the earl of Salisbury to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a packet which the mayor is charged to send towards Ireland carefully, "it being a matter which concerns his Majesties service."—Dated from Whitehall.

17 June, 1607. Letter from the earl of Salisbury to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a packet of letters which the mayor is instructed to forward to Ireland.

29 July 1607. Letter from Arthur Chichester to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Directing the mayor to forward via "the Hollyhead," with the utmost promptitude, all dispatches "requiring present expedition"; and to send on less urgent dispatches for Ireland "with the first passengers from Chester." Dated from Dublin.

2 August 1607. Letter from Richard Aldm . . . to the Mayor of the city of Chester. For the arrest of the writer's servant and apprentice, Thomas Washer, etat. 24, who has run away with some hundred pounds of his master's money, and is understood to be making for Ireland via Chester, in company with his elder brother, Richard Washer. In the writer's description of the brothers it is said that Thomas Washer is a "man of a good face," with "lyttle or noe beard," and with "his heare of an Abram couller."—Dated from London.

24 September 1607. Letter from William Angell to the Mayor of Chester. Promising that imported yarn shall be delivered at Chester, instead of Luerpoole, to the advantage of the inhabitants of the former town, as in previous time, provided that the king's customs on the commodity are duly paid, and that the yarn is transported as heretofore to Manchester.

21 September 1607. Letter from R. Lewknor to the Mayor of Chester. For the transference of William Wye, now a prisoner at Chester, to the custody of the sheriff of Flint, in order that the said William may be properly put upon his trial for a burglary committed in Flintshire.—Dated from the Castle of Hawarden.

8 October 1607. List of the persons present at "an asseamble holden in the Common Hall of Plects in Chester," and a brief minute of the proceedings of the same asseamble on the information, given by John Ratclyffe the younger, that Roger Harleston, gentleman, had commenced a suit before the Justices of Chester, against the Mayor and Citizens of Chester, "for and concerning the drawinge in Dee."

16 October 1607. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and officers of the port there. To provide transport, &c., to Dublin for four hundred soldiers levied in different counties for Irish service, and appointed to be at Chester on the 8th of next November. The said soldiers to be provided for at the rate of viii*d*. per day—sixpence a-day for lodging and victuals, and two-pence a-day for their other necessities—during such time as they may be detained by wind and weather at Chester.—Dated from Hampton Court.

17 October 1607. Letter from John Savage to his bretheren, the aldermen of the city of Chester. In reply to their announcement of his election to be mayor of the same city during the forthcoming year. The writer promises to do his best in that office for his fellow-citizens, and hopes that he will continue to enjoy the esteem of the city, which in former time esteemed his father and predecessors. Dated from Rocke Savage.

16 November 1607. Letter from Thomas earl of Dorset to Mr. Savage. Requiring the names of such persons as shall refuse to provide his Majestye with money on promise of repayment; the letter beginning thus, "I perceave by your letter that in as much as Mr Ratlif sometime maior of Chester, who haining made his own accompt and demand, and in some things against all equitie and reason, and therefore required to amend the same, and yet refusing, hath not bene satisfied his own unjust demandes. That this you make a colour why you refuse to leavy so much monie for his Majestie's servis, being by the Lords assured of repaement."

16 November 1607. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester and to the officers of the port there. Ordering that four hundred soldiers (levied in different counties for Irish service, and now for some time awaiting in Chester the arrival of Sir Oliver Lambert, who was appointed to conduct them from Chester to Dublin, but has strangely failed to execute his commission) shall be conducted to Ireland by the same persons who conducted them from their several counties to Chester. Towards the end of the body of the letter it is said that, should he after all arrive in Chester before their departure, Sir Oliver Lambert may conduct the men to Ireland. A postscript, however, adds that should Sir Oliver appear at the eleventh hour to discharge his duty, he is to be attended from Chester to Dublin by the conductors who brought the soldiers from their respective counties to Chester, and is to be assisted by them. In this matter the postscript directs that the aid may be used of Captain Dorington, "a sufficient gentleman in this servis," already at Chester in fulfilment of his engagement with Sir Oliver Lambert. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

25 November 1607. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of West Chester. Directing the said mayor to receive by indented roll of Edmond Nicholson two hundred suits of armour, which he has been appointed to provide for military use in Ireland, and to transport the same to Ireland for delivery to the Lord Deputy. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

The humble petition of James Knowsley, Richard Deywall, Richard Sneade, and Thomas Ashbrooke, servants and serjeant-at-mace to Colonel William Edwards, Mayor of Chester, John Ratcliffe, esq., Recorder, and the rest of the Aldermen and Justices of the same city. For orders confirming their ancient liberty of being the sole givers of "summons in any" and all causes to all or any freemen in this Citty "both in your Worshippes Court and the worshipfull "Sheriffes Court."

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

2 December 1607. Letter, (signed, Arthur Chichester) to Sir John Savage, knt., Mayor of Chester. Disallowing and directing Sir John Savage to disallow the novel and altogether unreasonable demand by the officers of customs at Chester, of custom on "such provisions of lead, iron and other things as" the Master of Ordnance in Ireland "hath occasion to make" in the citty of Chester for the furnishing of his "Majesties stoare, as well here as in other places of this kingdom." Dated from Dublin.

2 December 1607. Letter from Oliver St. John to Sir John Savage, the Mayor of Chester. Complaining that at the port of Chester customs are demanded for lead, iron, and such things as the writer is forced to procure or bring there for the furnishing of his Majesty's stores. Dated from Dublin.

9 December 1607. Letter from Thomas earl of Dorset) to the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester. Combating in strenuous language each of the several arguments with which certain merchants of Chester defend their reluctance or refusal to pay duty on wines brought into the port of Chester.

12 December 1607. Commission from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester, Sir William Brereton, Sir Richard Treour, Sir Henrie Bunburie, knts., Thomas Wilbraham, Henrie Mauwaring, Richard Grouenor, and Richard Brereton of Eccleston, or any four, three, or two of them. For a muster and view of eighty horse-soldiers, with their horses and furniture, appointed to embark at Chester for service in Ireland; twenty of the said horse being for the Lord Deputy, forty for the earl of Clanricarde, and twenty for Sir Oliver Lambert. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

12 December — Warrant from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and to the officers of the port there. To provide shipping and victuals for the transportation from Chester to Dublin of the four-score soldiers, with their horses and furniture, appointed to the Lord Deputy, the Earl of Clanricarde, and Sir Oliver Lambert. It is directed that so long as the same soldiers are detained at Chester, each of them is to be billeted and provided for at the rate of eighteen-pence a-day for himself and horse. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

9 February 1608. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Justices of the Peace of the city of Chester. For the execution in the said city of the orders made and published by his Majesty at the beginning of last March. Dated from Whitehall.

20 April, 1608. The humble petition of John Howe to the Lord Deputy of Ireland for compensation for work done and loss sustained at the command of the postmaster of Chester, who required him to convey a racket to Dublin immediately to his lordship, without waiting to take on board certain Dublin merchants with their wares, and other passengers, who had arranged with the petitioner to go over to Ireland by his ship. Under the petition is a note (signed, Arthur Chichester) that its prayer cannot be granted until the Mayor of Chester has certified that John Howe was pressed in the manner alleged; it being also remarked, "Albeyt "if the letters had required that hast which he seemes "to suppose, they would have had better and more "speedie conveyance by the poast barque from Holly-head."

23 April 1608. Letter from Thomas Bishop of London to Sir John Savadge, Mayor of the city of Chester, Explaining (in answer to a letter signed by the same mayor and others) that if "the commissioners have "proceeded otherwise then happilie they intended" towards Mr. Glasier, the matter must be attributed "to "the ill-advised course that was taken for his defence;" the commissioners being constrained to maintain the authority of their court, when Mr. Glasier, in hard and unfit terms, "exhibited a pretended exemption," which the three principal judges had found insufficient. Dated from Fulham Howse.

27 April 1608. Copy of an order of the Privy Council, appointing the two Lords Chief Justices and the Chief Baron, or any two of them, to make inquiry into the facts of a controversy that has arisen out of a "Commission of Sewers heretofore graunted to survey the "river Dee and the annoyances thereof," and out of a decree of the same commission "for the pulling down " (amongst other things) of the one halfe of a certaine "key or harbour for shippes called the New Key," and for making "a breach of tenne yardes in length to the "bottom of the saide river in the middle of a cawsey "made of stone in the said river Dee." Dated from Whitehall.

6 May 1608. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Chief Justice of England, the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron. Appointing them to make inquiries into the facts of a controversy that has arisen out of a recent decree of a Commission of Sewers appointed to survey the river Dee and the annoyances thereof.

22 May 1608. Letter from Dudley Norton to Sir John Savage, knt., Mayor of the city of Chester. Urging that the Mayor will cause restitution to be made to Sir Randell McDonnell of the goods which he has been required to deposit at Chester as security for answering a claim for twelve pounds (alleged to have been incurred by Sir Randell for the debt of another man), preferred against him by one Darbishere, in order that the said knight may without further delay cross the sea to Ireland on the King's business. Sir Randell is said to have promised to pay the money to any person whom Darbishere may send to Ireland for it, and also the charges of the same messenger, within six weeks of the day on which he may be proved to owe the same. Moreover, the writer undertakes to pay the money, should Sir Randell fail in the aforesaid promise. Dated from the Strand.

22 May 1608. Letter from Thomas Hamner to Sir John Savage, mayor of the city of Chester. For the removal from Hamner to Chester of a poor and impotent woman, a native of the county of the city of Chester, with whose maintenance the rate-payers of Hamner have been for some months, and wish to be no longer burdened.—Dated from Hamner.

15 June 1608. Letter (signed, Arthur Chichester) to the Mayor of Chester. Announcing that in accordance with the same mayor's letters Henry Quine has been sent to prison; and certifying that Thomas Walker of the Naze, merchant, may be liberated from his bond for the appearance at Dublin of the same prisoner.—Dated from Dublin.

17 June 1608. Letter from Lord Salisbury to the Lord Bishop and the Mayor of Chester, and the sheriffs of the county of Chester. Ordering that one Quynn, the servant of Odogherty and now a prisoner at Chester, be transported to Ireland at the least possible cost by "some discrete and trusty owner of a barque, who is "to be charged that he permitt not any to haue "conference with the prisoner untill he be deliuered "vnto the Lord Deputy."

20 June 1608. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Requesting that soldiers levied in Essex and other counties for Irish service may be transported to Ireland with the least possible delay; and giving orders in respect to their allowances and the charges of their entertainment at Chester.—Dated from the court at Greenwich.

21 June. Letter from William Lombe (?) and Richard Verney to Sir John Savadge, knt. Certifying that the writers sent out of Warwickshire fifty able and properly clothed and in every respect sufficient soldiers, under the command of Mr. William Purefy, appointed to conduct them to Westchester; and that the writers also sent money to Mr. Nicholson for the complete arms of the same soldiers.—Dated from Warwick.

5 July 1608. Letter from Thomas Hamner to Sir John Savage, knt., mayor of the city of Chester. Begging the mayor to take order for the poor woman whose case, together with her claim on Chester, has already been submitted by the writer to the same mayor. Dated from Bettisfield.

16 November 1608. Letter from Arthur Chichester to the Mayor of Chester. Ordering that one Richard Hecknoll, late of Dublin and now tarrying at the White Hart, Chester, be sent forthwith to Dublin, or bound over to return to Ireland by the first passage, as the writer has occasion to speak with him on matters touching the king's service.—Dated from the Castle of Dublin.

28 November 1612. Draft of an unsigned letter to the Vicar and the Curate of St. John's in the city of Chester. Begging that the parishioners of the said parish may be moved to make a collection for the relief of a poor woman (the wife of one Thomas Farrington, carrier) who is fallen into a frenzy or lunacy, and has been placed under the charge of the widow Mercer, "who is supposed to haue experience in such diseases."—Dated at Chester.

11 August 1623. Acknowledgment of error and penitence by Hughe Berchley in respect to his action in causing William Coxson to be "served with a coppie

"of an execution whereupon he was ymprisoned."—Made before the Mayor and sheriffs of Chester.

Two Assessment Schedules for moneys to be levied on the inhabitants of St. Trinity Ward and St. Martin's Ward, in the city of Chester, "towards fynishinge of a bridge begun at the redd banke, repairinge of the walls, and for other good uses."—No date. In 17th century handwriting.

4 April 1627. Petition of Thomas Knight and Marie his wife to the Rt. Hon. Roger Downes, esq., Vice-chamberlain of the County Palatine of Chester. Praying for enquiry into the reasons of Mr. Harpur, the Master of the Hospital of Spittle Boughton, for delaying to put the petitioners, on their making a reasonable composition with him, in possession of a cottage in the same hospital, which has descended to them as next of kin to the last occupant thereof, deceased. Also, on the same paper, the certificate of Roger Downes, esq., in favour of the petitioners; and the order of the earl of Derby that Mr. Harpur comply with the directions of the certificate.—Also, the case of Ales Wharton, claimant of a message in the same hospital, as next of kin to Robert Wharton, against the heir of one Robert Thorneton, who was wrongfully put in possession of the same message by the Master, Brethren, and Sisters of the same hospital. At the foot of this paper are the opinions of two counsellors learned in the law, viz., P. Warburton and Robert Brewewood—favourable to Ales Wharton's claim.

15 and 16 July, 1628. Lists of the inhabitants of the several wards of the city of Chester.

12 January 1634. Schedule (vellum) of the Assesmentes made at the City of Chester the xiith day of January 1634 by vs the Maiores, Aldermen, Bayliffes, Burgessess, Sheriffs, Cittizens, and Committee, and by the severall High Shreffes whose names are under-written, upon the seuerall Cittyes, Burroughes, Townes, Places, and Countyes hereafter particularly mentioned, for the prouision of a shipp of 400 tonnes for his Majesties service, by vertue of his Majesties writt issued out of the High Court of Chancery, bearinge date the xxth day of October, anno Regis Caroli nunc Anglie, &c. decimo. The severall assessments being—on Cardiff, co. of Glamorgan, 15*l*.; on the whole county of Glamorgan, 200*l*.; on the county of the borough of Carmarthen, 15*l*.; on the whole county of Carmarthen, 100*l*.; on the city of St. David's, co. Pembroke, 2*l*.; on the whole county of Pembroke, 100*l*.; on the borough of Newport, co. Monmouth, 8*l*.; on the whole county of Monmouth, 170*l*.; on the town of Cardigan, 4*l*.; on the whole county of Cardigan, 54*l*.; on the borough of Denbigh, 10*l*.; on the whole county of Denbigh, 160*l*.; on the borough of Caernarvon, 6*l*.; on the whole county of Caernarvon, 100*l*.; on the town of Flint, 2*l*.; on the whole county of Flint, 85*l*.; on the borough of Bewmarres in Angleze, 10*l*.; on the whole county of Angleze, 10*l*.; on the city of Chester, 100*l*.; on the whole county of Chester, 300*l*.; on the town of Lener-pool, co. Lancaster, 15*l*.; on the town of Lancaster, co. Lancaster, 8*l*.; on the whole county of Lancaster, 475*l*.; on the city of Carlisle, co. Cumberland, 15*l*.; on the whole county of Cumberland, 100*l*.—Summa totalis, 2,204*l*. Thirty-one signatures at the foot of the schedule.

31 January 1635. Letter of attorney and warrant, by Henry Hopkins, esq., warden of the Fleet prison in London. Appointing the writer's servants, Christopher Graues and Hugh Baggotte, to take all needful measures to discover and seize againe one Thomas Wilks, gentleman, a Fleet prisoner, who having obtained permission to go abroad with a keeper, has broken his parole and escaped.

3 February 1633. Copy of a letter from the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Calling attention to the rapid depreciation of the current farthings, and the divers inconveniences to trade, arising from the excessive quantity of farthing tokens brought into the said city, and the larger number of counterfeit farthings put in circulation by pedlers and petty chapmen. Particular mention is made of the case of James Starre of Rawden, co. York, clothier, who has recently vented farthings to the nominal value of ten pounds in Chester, which farthings are believed by the writers to be counterfeit, and are acknowledged by the same James Starre to have been by him obtained for five pounds' worth of goods from one Henry Rodwell of Pickergill, a chapman of Massom, co. York.—Dated from Chester.

28 April 1639. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting the Mayor to provide a place where part of His Majesty's store of gunpowder may be safely kept, and to certify the council respecting his choice of a powder magazine.

31 August 1633. Draft of a letter written by the mayor and aldermen of Chester, in the behalf and with the consent of all the inhabitants of the said city, to Richard archbishop of York. Praying that Mr. Ley, one of the city's preachers, may be continued in his preachiership, as he is in no way hindered in the performance of the duties of that office by the claims of his vicarage near Chester, and his prebendal duties in the cathedral of the same city.—Dated from Chester.

1 October 1639. Apology made by Robert Watson for defamatory words spoken by him against Robert Sproston, mayor of Chester; with the said Robert Watson's petition for pardon and his release from imprisonment for the said offence.

2 October 1640. Bond and obligation of Thomas Cholmley, of the city of Caerlile in Cumberland, gentleman, whereby he is bound in the sum of two thousand pounds to appear before the Privy Council at York on the 9th inst., and to be answerable to the Mayor of Chester for "2 packs more of woollen yarn left in Wigan in the county of Lancaster, which were pretended to be sold unto him" Thomas Cholmley "by certain Scottish covenanters, that is to say by John Cominge and Owen Steele."

9 October 1640. Letter from George Ravenscroft to Robert Harvey, esq., mayor of Chester. Containing the latest political news and gossip of York, from which place the letter is dated. "The Lords Commissioners," says the writer "for his Majesty sent to Rippon to meete with the Scotts doe obserue nothing but delays in them, and therefore 6 of our Lords returned this day and acquainted his Majesty that their coming was only with commission to present their grievances and obseure our objections. . . . Some fonde conceipts which are it seemes spread abroad are come to the kinges eares, and this daye his Majesty pleased to acquaint the house therewith, vizt., That his Majesty should favor the Scotts in his action with a purpose to bringe this nation into subjection and slavery, which his Majesty taking notice of as a thinge which troubled him much to gayne an ill opinion of his people, did in the hearing of all the lords, call God to witnes of his lone and sincerity to this nation, and that he did not harbor any such thoughts of either party. . . . Guilty and obnoxious men doe tremble and wax pale since the report of a parliament. The Scottish Commissioners have bin sent for to Yorke to sit with ours, but they seeme unwilling of the motion, and doe but trifle, and haue noe desire to conclude a peace for all their protestations. They haue imprisoned the Mayor of Newcastle, for not collecting the Composition Money, and feed him with bread and water. The king hath resolved to begone on Thursday the 23 of this instant."

13 October 1640. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. Commending the said mayor and aldermen for imprisoning and seizing the goods of certain Scotchmen, guilty of trading into England in disobedience of his Majesty's proclamation; but ordering the same Scotchmen to be set at liberty and in possession of their goods, as their offence was unintentional, and consequent on the mistake of those who gave them passes.

19 October 1640. The Receipt and acknowledgment of John Cuminge, of Glasgow in Scotland, merchant, and William Stainbancke, of Caerlile in Cumberland, chapman, certifying that restoration has been made to them, by the mayor of the city of Chester, of certain moneys and pieces of cloth, seized from them at Chester on account of their action in trading into England, the king of England's proclamation to the contrary notwithstanding. It is noted that the aforesaid restoration of goods and money was made at the order of the Council of Peers assembled at York.

14 February 1642. Letter from the Commissioners of Arrays in the city and county of Chester. Disclaiming all part in the conduct of certain soldiers who "have plundered and seized upon the horses, cattle, corne, and other goodes of diuers persons" within the said city and county, and promising that the writers will do their best to bring the offenders to strict justice.

3 June 1643. Information of Randall Walker of Chester, feltmaker, given before Nicholas Ince and Randle Holme, aldermen of Chester, that on the evening of the previous day, Richard Dunbar (Mr. Recorder's clerk), came to the deponent's house, and, in conversation with him and one Peeter Snead of the same city, draper, asked what the deponent would say should Mr. Mayor be within the castle in four-and-twenty hours, and a new mayor be chosen in his place? and what if he the speaker should be high constable of the castle before to-morrow night? To which enquiries the deponent answered "that yf he could get into the steeple he would knowle the common bell, and that "if there were neither rope nor clapper he would stricke it."

5 June 1643. Order for all citizens of Chester, not enlisted in Colonel Gamul's regiment, to assemble on the morrow at "the Roodee" at noone, then and there to be enlisted, and put under such commanders as the mayor and governor of the city shall appoint.

9 November 1643. Draft of a proclamation. Forasmuch as it is apparent that the rebelles have made their approaches to this city, with intencion to distress itt, theis are in his majesties name strictly to charge and comand all maner of persons within your townshipp, that they and every of them doe forthwith come into the city of Chester with all their goodes and prounions of corne, cattle, and victuall, and if any shall refuse soe to doe they shall be reputed and proceeded against as adherents to the rebelles, and enemies to his Majestie, and betrayers of their country: of whom you are to take notice, and to certify their names vnto vs speedily. Dated at Chester.

1 December 1643. Rough draft of a proclamation against the pillage lawlessly and criminally practised by his Majesty's soldiers, and against the action "of "divers cuill disposed persons inhabiting within this "city and elsewhere, who have received such plun- "dered goodes and cattle, and buy or otherwise "obtaine the same att vnder values." Also against the practise of divers persons of the city of Chester who buy of the king's poorer and more improvident soldiers, the stockings, shoes, and other apparel delivered to the same soldiers for their proper clothing and equipment.

12 December 1643. Letter from Thomas Baand to Randle Holme, mayor of Chester. A requisition for six horses to be used in the king's service.

—, Proclamation of the Mayor of the city of Chester to all free citizens and inhabitants of the city having arms of any kind, "and not listed in Colonel Gamulls "regiment," to repair no alarm given to the Abbey Court. Also for armed citizens to repair on alarm given to the aldermen of their respective wards, and for citizens and inhabitants not furnished with arms to repair at the alarm to the Pentice. No date.

—, Rough draft of a proclamation that the military commanders and aldermen of Chester have no purpose of destroying the fortified suburbs of Chester, but on the contrary will with their lives preserve them from violence. The proclamation being issued to discredit certain seditious reports arising out of the recent demolition of the unfortified suburb of Hanbridge (at the advice of Sir Abraham Shipman, deputy-governor of the said city), lest it should be occupied by the rebels. No date.

—, Paper setting forth four several orders of the Mayor to the people of Chester at the time of rebellion in the reign of Charles the First. 1. For householders on "any allarme given to have lanternes and lights both "in Roes and sellers," and for women and children to "keep indoors." 2. For citizens on an alarm being given to repair to the High Crosse, and put themselves under the aldermen appointed to command them; the armed citizens bringing their armour with them, and the unarmed citizens coming prepared to "receive "halberds and such other weapons as are stored up "for them in the Pentice." 3. For all inhabitants of Chester, strangers as well as citizens, to assemble promptly on alarm given at the Pentice, and there put themselves under the mayor's orders; it being ordered that all such persons refusing or neglecting to do so shall be banished out of the city as disaffected persons. 4. For all soldiers in Colonel Gamul's regiment on alarm given to repair forthwith to their captains' colours; and for all gentlemen with armed servants to assemble on an alarm in the Abbey Court, with such servants, and there act in accordance with a former proclamation. No date.

—, Rough draft of an order of the Mayor of Chester against the continuance "of the superstitious "and idolatrous observacions of Christmas and other "festivals, vulgarly called Holy daies, for which their is "no warrant in the word of God." No date.

—, Paper headed "Propositions to be considered of," being a set of proposed orders for victualling the city of Chester in anticipation of a siege. One of the propositions running thus, "That warninge be given to all "Inhabitants within the City and suburbs to provide "for their owne famelyes (within eight dayes follow-

"inge), corne, meale, bacon, butter, cheese, and other "necessary prouision for three moneths to come, "otherwise to be comanded to provide themselves "habitacons cleswhere, and also with prouision of "Fewell for the like tyme." No date.

—, Proclamation of the Mayor and the Governor of the city of Chester to all persons, living near the same city and frequenting its market, to bring all their stores of provisions within the walls of the city, and stow them away in their own places or in the common store-rooms. No date.

—, Letter from Thomas Bromley to Mr. Lloyd in Bridge Street, Chester. Desiring Mr. Lloyd for money and his fees to procure the bearer of the letter an exemption, inexpressum, or certificate of a certain "statute "of 10,000l, which was acknowledged by Edwarde "Wynter of Patherish, co. Monmouth, esq., to Richard "Shearborne of Stonilhurst, co. Lancaster, esq., before "William Aldersey the younger, then Mayor of the "citie of Chester, and Edward Witbye, esq., which was "acknowledged on 23 May in the twelth yeare of "King James." No date.

1646. List of the names of the Worshipful Company of Corvisors within the City of Chester.

16 January 1646. Draft of a letter to Colonel Thomas Fell and John Langton, esq. Accompanying a letter addressed to Mr. Recorder Glyn, and declaring the absolute inability of the people of Chester to bear the burden which the country would impose upon them.

16 January 1646. Rough draft of a declaration that the proceeds of the duty of Excise and the new impost in the city and county palatine of Chester shall be expended on the soldiery of the said city and county, and for that purpose be disbursed from time to time by the Sub-commissioners of Excise for the said city and county.

5 June 1646. Official copy of a certificate, by the Commissioners for Sequestrations at Chester, touching the estate of the late Mr. Thomas Bavand, and the letters of administration thereto taken out by Michael Hodgkin in January 1645. Signed, John Whitworth, Ralph Judson, John Whittell, Samuell Buck.

1 December 1646. Warrant to all Mayors, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, Postmasters, and others. To provide Major Richard Samson with horses and guides from Chester to Lonaon, on his return from Dublin, whither he has been on business of the state.

7 December 1646. Copy of the proclamation, made in the several hundreds and constabularies of Cheshire, of the parliamentary ordinance that the proceeds of the Excise and New Impost throughout the County Palatine of Chester shall be applied to the maintenance of the soldiery of the said county.

15 December 1646. Requisition and warrant addressed by the governor of the city of Chester to all mayors, bailiffs, postmasters, &c., &c. To furnish four horses and a guide, for every stage of the road from Chester to Westminster, to John Trevor, esq., a member of the House of Commons, and Colonel Carter, who are repairing with all speed to Westminster.

2 May 1648. Letter from John Ratcliffe to the mayor of Chester. Touching the Dee Mills petition, and other parliamentary matters. Dated from London.

9 May 1648. Letter from John Ratcliffe to Robert Wright, mayor of Chester. Concerning rumours of new arrangements by the parliament for the defence of the kingdom. The writer says, "I doe perceive it is the "bent of some to endeavour to bring all Garrisons "vnder the command of committees joyntly of the "countys and cities, and not to allow of any city "though a county with a garrison to know the sole "power of their own militia."

23 May 1648. Letter from John Ratcliffe to Robert Wright, esq., mayor of Chester. Giving the latest parliamentary news, and recounting the writer's exertions in the matter of the Dee Mills petition from the citizens of Chester. More would have been done in that suit, had not parliament been fully occupied in preventing "a desperate, mischievous, bloody plot ripe for explosion against the parliament, city and a great part of "the kingdom." The writer observes, "The quartring "of soldiery within the city will bee a good argument "for granting your petition."

23 May 1648. Letter from John Whittell to the mayor and aldermen of Chester. Recounting the writer's exertions at Westminster to obtain a satisfactory answer to the petition of the citizens of Chester for "y^e profitts "of y^e Dee-millenes."

30 May 1648. Letter from John Ratcliffe to Robert Wright, mayor of Chester. Reporting the writer's exertions in behalf of Chester; and, in reply to the mayor's expressions of dissatisfaction with the little progress made in the matter of the city's petition, showing why the business cannot be done more expeditiously. "Though," says the writer, "I have no manner of encouragement from your letter to wait upon your business any longer, yet my return to and trust received from y^r poore distressed city shall ingage mee (God willing) to goe through all discouragements in the discharge of what is my duty to it." Dated from London. Endorsed "Lre. from Mr. Recorder, 30 May 1648."

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

1 June 1648. Letter from John Ratcliffe to Robert Wright, mayor of Chester. Reporting progress made in the matter of the Dee Mills petition, and referring to other parliamentary concerns of the people of Chester.

6 June 1648. Letter from John Whittell to the mayor and aldermen of Chester. Respecting the negotiations for a satisfactory arrangement about the Dee mills. Dated from London.

10 June 1648. Letter from Robert Wright, mayor of Chester. Touching the petition and hope of the mayor, sheriffs, and citizens of Chester, that they "may receive trust for the militia of the citie." Also touching a petition for a grant of the Dee Mills.

19 June 1648. Letter from John Ratcliffe to Robert Wright, esq., mayor of Chester. Touching the business of the petition by Chester to parliament. In a postscript the writer says, "I have further inquired of the party y^e told mee of the designe concerning Chester, and he tells mee my Lord Byron did set it on foot, and y^e many in Chester who were formerly active for the king were engaged in it as truest well-wishers to it." Dated from London.

4 July 1648. Letter from W. M. Edwardes and John Ratcliffe to Robert Wright, esq., mayor, and aldermen of Chester. Touching the proposals for the military government of Chester, and a charge which has been preferred against the mayor of "being privy to the plot." The writers continue, "Had ye bin as forward in giving vs notice as Major Daniell the charge against you, we might have fully vindicated you at the time of the charge against ye in the letters to Sir Wm. Brereton; and for the troupe of horse vnder Capt. Corte, yt was not intended to be a charge to the City, but maynteynd at the public charge. Some men gayne by their forwardnes, and you loose by slownes." Dated from London.

— 1648. Letter from the mayor of Chester to John Whittell. Respecting Mr. Whittell's action in behalf of the citizens of Chester, for the success of their petition for the profits of the Dee Mills. Reference is made to a proposal to build new mills, and also to a threatening outbreak of sickness in the town.

9 November 1649. Copy of a letter from William Clearke, John Exton, William Stephens, to Richard Bradshaw, mayor of Chester. Whereby the writers, the judges of the Admiralty, advertise the mayor of the proceedings taken against a certain ship lately seized in Milford Haven.

— The petition of the societie and companie of Paynters, Glasiers, Embroyderers, and Stationers within the citie of Chester to the right Worshipfull John Aldersey, maior of the citie of Chester, sheriffs and common counsaile of the same citie. For the restraint of certain persons (some of whom are not free of the city of Chester, and none of whom have duly served apprenticeship to the trade of embroiders, or become members of the aforesaid company) from practising the art of embroidery in Chester. The petitioners speak of the embroiders of their company as industrious "in drawinge of knottes, flowers and other devyses in proportion vpon lynnens wollens and other stoffs for the vse of seamsters, needlewomen and others." No date.

22 July 1651. Draft of a letter to the Lord President. Declaring that the writers have given the most serious consideration to the Lord President's instructions, but hear of no one guilty of or accessory to the matters set forth in those instructions.

12 August 1651. Letter from President Bradshawe to the Commissioners of the Militia for the City and County of the city of Chester. Accompanying copies of the recent Act of Parliament prohibitory of all correspondence with Charles Stuart; and giving orders for due distribution and publication of the same copies.

2 September. Letter from Speaker Lenthall to the Commissioners for the monthly assessments for the army in the city and county of the city of Chester. Accompanying the Act of Parliament continuing the monthly assessment of 120,000*l.* per month for the maintenance of the army. Dated from Westminster.

1 120.

6 November 1651. Letter from Commissioners for the sale of Church lands to the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Chester. Announcing that a certain fee-farm rent, payable out of the manor and rectory of Presbury, having been lawfully conveyed to Edmond Lewin on the 26th July last, the writers cannot disturb the transaction, but advise the said mayor and aldermen to apply to the Trustees for the Maintenance of Ministers and other pious uses. Dated from Gurney House, London.—Also a letter, dated 8 November 1651, from William Stombridge to the same mayor and aldermen, which gives them the same advice.

8 November 1651. Letter from Edmund Harney to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. Announcing the order made by the Trustees for the maintenance of ministers and other Christian uses, with a view to the regular payment of the allowance for the free-school of Chester and the scholars thereof.

25 January 1652. Order of the Parliamentary Committee to the Mayor and aldermen of the city of Chester. For the surrender and delivery of the charter or charters of the incorporation of the municipality of Chester by the said mayor and aldermen to the said committee on the 8th of next March. Dated from Queen's Court, Westminster.

27 January 1652. Letter from the Parliamentary Commissioners for sick and wounded seamen to the mayor and magistrates of the city of Chester. For the relief of such seamen. Dated from the Navy Office.

— Letter from William Harrison to Charles earl of Derby. Announcing that his lordship's letter to the present writer has been communicated to the Justices and Aldermen of the city, "who unanimously declare their desire to have your lordship chosen 'mayor of this city.'" Though the election is to be made by the populace, the writer is confident that the earl will be elected. No date.

10 June 1652. Letter from Oliver Cromwell (signed: O. Cromwell) to the Commissioners for the monthly assessments for the army in the city of Chester. Accompanying a declaration for the continuance of the assessments at the present rate for six months, and requiring the same to be collected with care and diligence. Dated from Whitehall.

12 August 1652. Order of the Council of State to the Mayor of Chester. To take the bond or recognizance of Sir Maurice Eustace, kn^t, in the sum of 1000*l.* with two sureties, each of them being bound in the same sum, that he (Sir Maurice) will do nothing prejudicial to the commonwealth and government of Ireland, to which country he has received leave to go. Dated from Whitehall.

20 September 1652. Order of the Council of State to the Mayor of Chester. To take the bonds of George Smith and Captain Garret Price, some time prisoners at Chester, in the sum of 1,000*l.* each, that they will do nothing to the prejudice of the commonwealth and government of Ireland, to which country they may repair on giving such security. Dated from Whitehall.

25 October 1652. Order of the Council of State to the Mayor of Chester. For the due publication by beat of drum and sound of trumpet of the recent resolutions of Parliament for the encouragement of such seamen as shall serve on any of the State's ships now being fitted out. Dated from Whitehall.

— Rough draft of a warrant addressed to E. Manson, keeper of the prison of the Northgate. For the imprisonment of Edward Spanner, freeman and citizen of Chester, who has shown himself an obstinate and bitter reviler of the mayor and aldermen of Chester, and a seditious spreader of false news. No date.

3 November 1652. Opinion of Counsellor Richard Haworth, given to William Bennett, esq., Mayor of Chester, on a cause between Thomas Hull, plaintiff, and Henry Hurleston and James Knowsley, defendants. Dated from Manchester.

13 November 1652. Deposition made before William Bennett, Mayor of Chester, by William Grice, of Chester, inheritor. That at the time of his death, in or about March last, John Murphy, of Dublin, merchant, owed the said William Grice 38*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*; and that the same William Grice has since disbursed for the use of John Sergeant, of Dublin, merchant, 5*l.* 1*s.*

15 December 1652. Letter from T. Biscoe to Mr. Bennett, Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that Captain Pooley has been ordered to wait upon the mayor with the keys of the city gates, so that the same mayor may not be deprived of his due homage. Dated from Whitehall.

23 December 1652. Letter from the Commissioners for the Army to the Commissioners for Assessments in the city of Chester. Touching the petition of Mr. James Smith, sub-commissioner for the Excise in co. Chester, who complains that his assessment for the army is excessive.—Also the petition, dated 9 November 1652, of the same James Smith to the Commissioners for the Army.

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

— — — Petition of the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester to Parliament. Against the entire removal of the river Dee, which would prove very prejudicial to mills worked by the water of the same river. Date and most of the signatures torn away. Amongst the remaining signatures are those of Ri. Haworth, Nicholas Ince, and Randle Holme.

13 February 1653. Certificate that the bearer thereof, one Richard Habberthorne, having been duly "her- nissed and whip'd for an idle wandering person or "vagabond," is under order to go within the next ten days to Yelland beside Lancaster, co. Lancaster. Signed by the Mayor and certain of the aldermen of Chester.

3 March 1653. Letter from the Council of State to the Mayor of Chester. For the prompt impressment of seamen to serve on the State's ships. Dated from Whitehall.

1 April 1653. Order of the Council of State, signed Denis Bond, Presid^t, countersigned by Jo. Thurloe, cler. council, and addressed to the Mayor of Chester. For the due publication of accompanying orders of Parliament for a day of Public Thanksgiving. Dated from Whitehall.

8 May 1653. Letter from the Commissioners for the monthly assessment for the army to the Commissioners for the same assessments in the city of Chester. Urging the last-named Commissioner to discharge the official duties with extraordinary zeal and exactness.

13 May 1653. Certificate of Aldermen and Justices of the Peace for the city of Chester, addressed to the "Committee for Indemnity at Haberdashers Hall, "London." Certifying that William Bennett, esq., mayor for the present year of the city of Chester, is a man of a peaceable spirit, whose estate has never been sequestered nor his person imprisoned for delinquency. "No did hee," continue the certifiers, "to our know- ledge subscribe or abett the Treasonable Engagement "of 1647, nor was hee for anything knowne to vs or "that wee ever heard of ordering or assisting to the "late kinge or any other enenyes of the Parliament, "but hath vpon all good occasions manifested his good "affections and been ready to his power to serve the "Parliament."

7 June 1653. Order of the Council of State, signed, Jo. Thurloe, secr. Declining to consent to the petition of Edward Spanne, and William Bennet, esq., the Mayor of Chester; and leaving them to take their due course at law. Dated from Whitehall.

9 June 1653. Letter from the Commissioners for managing and ordering the collections for the distressed Inhabitants of Marlborough to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying the orders of the Council of State for the same collections. Signed—Lawrence Streete, John Price, Thomas Lambe, W. Ashurst, Henry Brandreth, Jo. Greensmyth, Anthony Dowse, Abrah. Babington. Dated from Sadlers' Hall, London.

11 June 1653. Letter from Oliver Cromwell (signed, O. Cromwell) to the Mayor of the city of Chester. For the due publication of accompanying declarations. Dated from the Cock Pit.

19 July 1653. Letter from Thomas Eliott, Member of Jesus Christ and his Commonwealth, to Captain Glyne, captain of Colonel Tomlinson's troop. Begging that the writer's servant, Edward Spanne (who has been imprisoned in Chester "for noe other cause but ad- vancing of Excellencies and Armys designs and "preservation of the Commonwealth, as is well known "to your noble colonel, bee being one of the Irish "Concennell of State when one William Longe, my ser- vant in Sussex, was upon the same occasion brought "before the Concennell of State and examined before "your noble colonel") may be enlarged from prison, under bond to appear before the Council of State, Council of War, or Parliament, or the Mayor of Chester. Dated from the Blackedogge, Newgate Market, London.

26 August 1653. Rough draft of a letter from the Commissioners of the monthly assessments in Chester. Defending their action in assessing the office of excise in the same city; a course that appears to have been protested against by the gentlemen to whom the letter is addressed. Dated at Chester. No address or signatures.

13 September 1653. Letter from the Commissioners for managing Ely House and the Savoy hospitals, to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. Wherein the writers, as commissioners for the relief of distressed soldiers, require the same mayor and aldermen to reconsider and change their decision in respect to John Hicocke, late a soldier in Colonel Duckenfield's regiment, or to give their reason for refusing to admit the same John to the freedom of the city of Chester. Signed—T. Winslowe, Ri. Meress, Samuel Richardson, Rich. Moss.

23 September 1653. Draft of a letter from William Bennett, the mayor, and certain of the aldermen of the city of Chester, to certain "Gentlemen (or what other "stile you thinke fitt)," whose names do not appear. Setting forth the true considerations which determined the writers to refuse the freedom of the city of Chester to one John Hicocke, late of Colonel Duckenfield's regiment, and in former time an apprentice to a tallow chandler of Dublin, who though a freeman of Chester exercised his trade in Ireland only as a freeman of Dublin. The writers deny John Hicocke's assertion that they have been actuated by "malignant principles" in dealing with him.

27 September 1653. Letter from Commissioners of the assessments for the army to the Mayor of Chester. Touching the petition of Mr. James Smith, farmer of the Excise in the city of Chester, and sub-commissioner for the port thereof, who complains that his office has been broken open, his books seized, and his servant thrown into prison by the said mayor, "vnder pretense "of levying an assessment laid vpon him by the asses- "sors of the city." Signed—John Clerke, Edw. Horsman, Edw. Cludd, Ri. Lucy, Rich. Price.

11 October 1653. Letter from Richard Wicksteede and Robert Cooke to the mayor of Chester. Requesting the enlargement from prison of Mr. Edward Eller, collector of excise in the same city, with restoration of his books and accounts. Dated from London.

1 November 1653. Letter from John Whitworth and John Biston to some person whose name does not appear. Setting forth the reasons why the mayor and aldermen of Chester complain bitterly of the oppressive taxation of their city, alleging "that they pay sixe shillings in "the pound, and weere it not that they assess both "personall and reall estates in one and the same waie, "which few places in England doe, it would amounte "to at least 12s. in the pound." The mayor and aldermen pray for some abatement of this inordinate taxation, and represent that it would relieve the city considerably to be joined for purposes of assessment with "the "countye together, as Yorke and Yorkshire is." Dated from Chester.

16 December 1653. Letter from Secretary Thurloe to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Sir,—You will receive herewith a Proclamation for Proclaiming his Highnes Oliver Cromwell Lord Protector of the Common Wealth of England, Scotland and Ireland and y^e Dominions thereto belonging, which by direction of y^e Council you are to cause to bee Proclaimed, within your Jurisdiction; And thus haueing signified to you the pleasure of the Conncell, I rest Your humble servant, Jo. Thurloe. Dated from Whitehall.

22 December 1653. Letter from Secretary Thurloe to the Mayor of Chester. Conveying the order of the Council of State for the due publication of an accompanying "proclamation for continuing Commis- "sions, &c., in order to the execution of publique "Justice." Dated from Whitehall.

20 April 1654. Rough draft of a letter, touching the presence of the plague or some other pestilence at Chester. "Att present," says the writer, "there is "eight houses vissited, but all the families remoued out "in to cabins which are remote from any passage to "the cittie." The infected houses are, with a single exception, near the Bridge, and only eleven deaths have hitherto taken place.

— — — Rough draft of a letter, touching the complaint of James Smith against "the assessment of "vi. li. xiii. s. iiii. d. per mensem laid vpon him as Farmer "of the Excise of this city and county." No date, address, or signature.

— — — Rough draft of letter (probably from the Recorder of the City of Chester) to their Lordships of the Upper Bench. In reference to their lordships' recent writ for the removal of Edward Spanne from Chester prison to their presence. Reference is also made to certain examinations, taken concerning the same Edward Spanne, who is charged with certain offences deserving severe punishment. No date.

2 June 1654. Draft of a letter from the Mayor and aldermen of Chester to the Right Hon. the Lord Lam-

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

bert, major-general. — Right Hon^{ble}, Hearing that there is something certified by the souldiers heare concerning the repayre of some bridges within oure city, least things should be misrepresented vnto you and soe beget a misvnderstandinge of our actinges; we thought it fit to make knowne vnto you that two bridges, which in the late war had been use of for draw-bridges, then made at the Cittie charge, were soe decayed that neither Teames nor cattell could goe ouer them without much danger, and although seuerall tymes formerly repayed yet weare quickly worne out agayne, we therefore thought good to pave them for the more safety, layeing vp such materials as weare vsfull for draw-bridges, and wee acquainted the officer of the Castell heare that, if at any tyme there weare occasion to convert them into drawbridges agayne, (which we hope there will not,) the shold be done in a day or twos tyme at oure owne charge, with which we hoped they had been satisfied.

4 July 1654. Ordinance (printed) of his Highness the Lord Protector, by and with the consent of his council, against horse-races in England and Wales during the next six months: the enemies of the peace and welfare of the Commonwealth being found ready "to take advantage of publique meetings and concourse of people at horse-races and other sports to carry on such their pernicious designs, to the disturbance of the of the publique peace and indangering new troubles."

26 October 1655. Order of the Council for the publication of accompanying printed copies of an Order and Declaration. Dated from Whitehall.

13 November 1655. Letter of the Council of State, signed by the President thereof, to the Mayor of the city of Chester. For due publication of accompanying copies of a Declaration of his Highness the Lord Protector for a public fast on the 6th day of next December.

11 December 1655. Letter from Secretary Thurloe to the Mayor and other magistrates of the city of Chester. For the due publication in the port, and creeks and places of the port, of the same city, of the accompanying printed proclamations of the treaty lately made between the Commonwealth and France. Dated from Whitehall.

13 December 1657. Petition from inhabitants of the Chapelry of Farnworth to the Mayor of Chester. Praying the mayor to refrain for the moment from exercising his unquestionable right of appointing a master to the vacant mastership of the Farnworth free-school, and to appoint a master to be in due course chosen by the petitioners. Dated from Bold.—Also, three other papers relating to a controversy had by the people of Farnworth with respect to same vacancy and proposals for filling it.

23 June 1662. Letter to the Town Clerk of the city of Chester. For levying hearth money in the said city. Dated from Southampton House, and signed, T. Southampton and Ashley.

28 October 1662. Letter from Sir Thomas Player, knt. and bart., to Mr. William Wright, gent., receiver of monthly assessments in the city of Chester. Pressing for immediate payment of arrears of the same assessments. Dated from Guildhall, London.

15 November 1662. Letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Hon. Sir Thomas Player, knt., and baronet, at Guildhall, London. Touching the accounts of Mr. William Wright, the lately deceased receiver of monthly assessments in the city of Chester.

11 February 1663. Warrant addressed to the Mayor and aldermen of the City of Chester. To levy in the same city a monthly assessment of 21*l*. 7*s*. 9½*d*. under the statute for ordering the forces in the several counties. Signed, Richard Grosvenor, Tho. Cholmondeley, and Henry Legh.—Also a duplicate copy of the same warrant.

27 March 1663. Draft of a letter from the Mayor of Chester. Touching an assessment collected and paid in Chester to William Wright, deceased, late receiver of monthly assessments in the same city. Dated from Chester. No address or signature.

31 March 1663. Certificate and requisition signed by George bishop of Chester, and addressed to the Mayor of the same city. For committal to prison for three months, under the provisions of the Act of Uniformity, of Mr. Harrison, late Incumbent of St. Oswald's in Chester, and Mr. Cooke late Incumbent of St. Michael's in Chester, for having presumed to preach in the city of Chester since their deprivation by force of the same statute.

26 November 1663. Letter from * * Breckerton to John Poole, esq., the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a list of the city's trained soldiers, which the writer has signed, and begs may be forwarded to Lord Derby.

7 December 1663. Letter from Charles earl of Derby to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. Declaring the writer's zeal for the good of the city, of whose corporation he is himself a member; and referring to a list which he has signed and now returns. Endorsed with a draft of the grateful letter with which the mayor and aldermen acknowledged the earl's expressions of courtesy.

26 February, 1663. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners of subsidies in the city and the county of the city of Chester. For the fairer assessment and more prompt collection of subsidies. Dated from Whitehall.

14 April 1664. Letter from John Brerewood to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Asking for payment of 42*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*. due from the city to the writer as his father's executor, in respect of the yearly fee of the Recorder of the same city due to his said father for two years and a half or thereabouts, "when hee was onsted" from the recorder's place, "for his loyalty to his Majesty."

19 May 1664. Letter from Richard Levings and William Crompton to John Poole, esq., Mayor of Chester. Reporting what little the writers have done to obtain a new charter for the city of Chester. The writers have retained Mr. King to solicit for the city; had interviews with the Attorney-General, Sir Edward Savage, and Lord Bridgman, and have been instructed to petition the King.

24 May 1664. Letter from Richard Leuning and William Crompton to John Poole, esq., mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the writers have "procured the king's hand for the addition of such matters" to the cities charter as was desired, "and that they fear no obstruction but only official delays in getting the new charter. In a postscript the writers give their address at the Magpie in Fetter Lane, London, and beg that some one in London may be ordered to pay more money to them there, as they "have found the business chargeable, and have just cause to suspect that the money they have will not bear the charge for the future."

17 June 1664. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester. For the careful and strict execution of the "quarentaine orders" of the Council at the port of Chester, it having been made known to their lordships "that there is a generall neglect or connivance in the severall Out-Ports of the kingdome in permitting and suffering persons and goods to land out of ships bound from Holland, Zealand, and other places infected with the Plague, before they have performed their quarentaine," whereby it is feared that the plague, now raging in the United Provinces, may be brought into England.—Dated from Whitehall.

18 February 1666. Proclamation and summons, issued by the King's Commissioners in Chester for raising money by a poll and otherwise towards the maintenance of the present war, to divers underwritten persons, to appear before the same commissioners "at the Inner Pentice in the said City of Chester vpon Munday the fine and twentieth day of this instant February, att nine of the clock."

18 January 1667. Letter from the Duke of Albemarle to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Desiring that henceforth, in accordance with usual practice, when a soldier is guilty of any offence which is neither "felony" or murder, notice be given to his officers before his imprisonment for such offence. The occasion for this instruction is set forth in the following words: "Sir, I am informed by Sir Jeffery Shakerley, Governor of Chester Castle, that after a soldier of that garrison had made his complaint to yow of a citizen for calling him theefe, the soldier (by your allowance) commenced his suite against the citizen for the same, who (notwithstanding) afterwards pursued the soldier into a house, calling him theefe, which soemuch provoked the soldier that the soldier rann him a small cutt vpon the Head, for which fact (I heare) yow have committed the soldier to prison."

13 September 1667. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of Peace for the city and for the county of the city of Chester. For the stricter execution of the laws against the growth of popery. Order is given to the said Justices to use their "utmost endeavours to apprehend all Popish Priests and Jesuites, that endeavour to seduce or pervert his Majesties subjects."—Dated from Whitehall.

23 September 1667. Letter from Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to the Mayor of Chester and the rest of the Commissioners for the Aids in the said city. Pressing for payment of the sum of 518*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*, reported by Nathaniell Booth, esq., receiver of Royal Aids in the county of Chester, to be due from the said city to the Treasury for arrears of appointed contributions to aids.—Dated from Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.

21 October 1667. Letter from Sir William Doyly and Lawrence Squibb to the mayor and aldermen of the city of Chester. Pressing for immediate payment to the Receiver-General of the sum of 237*l.* 13*s.*, due for arrears of taxes.—Dated from London.

24 October 1667. Letter from Mr. Wren to the Mayor of Chester. Begging that an accompanying letter of orders from his Royal Highness may be forwarded to the commander of the Dartmouth frigate, if the frigate be still at Chester.

26 October 1667. Copy of a letter from R. H. (i.e., Richard Harrison, mayor of Chester), to Sir William Doyly and Lawrence Squibb, esq., Commissioners for the royal aids. Announcing that in reply to a letter from the Lords Commissioners the city of Chester has declared that certain arrears of aids do not lie upon it, the said city having in former time paid its full proportion to the said aids.—Dated from Chester.

28 October 1667. Letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Postmaster of Dublin. Accompanying certain enclosed orders from his Royal Highness to Captain Trevanion, commander of the Dartmouth frigate, which is understood to be off the Irish coast; the said orders having been sent to the said mayor by Mr. Wren, his Royal Highness's secretary, for speedy transmission to Captain Trevanion.

28 October 1667. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to — Wren, esq., Secretary to his Royal Highness. Announcing that the orders sent to the writer for transmission to Captain Trevanion of H.M. ship Dartmouth have been forwarded to the postmaster of Dublin. "The said captain," says the writer, "with his lordship, was in this river about the 17 of September last, attending, as I am informed, the Countess of Ossory, and on the 24th September last sett saile out of this river, and arrivd the day following at Dublin, and immediately after the said ship, as I am informed, was ordered from Dublin to Bewmaris to attend the Countess of Desmond, and the Commissioners of the Court of Claymes in Ireland."

— —. Draft of the Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, and inhabitants of the city of Chester to the Knights and burgesses of Parliament.—For an Act to encourage and secure from loss such persons as may reduce the river Dee to its ancient channel. The preamble of the petition states, "That the sea of late years hath wrought its course into rivulets along the Welch shore, to the lessening and choaking y^e the grand river, which now affords not (except att spring tides) water sufficient to bring y^e a vessell of two tunns." It is prayed that the undertakers for the requisite reduction of the Dee may be encouraged and gratified "with such lands as shall be gained from the salt water (now altogether y^essless and y^enp^rofitable), to which his Majesty has most graciously condescended, provided it be managed to the satisfaction of the country."—No date, but made in or about 1667.

31 October 1667. Letter from John Ratcliffe, esq., M.P., to Richard Harrison, esq., Mayor of Chester. Touching the controversy between the city and county of Chester about "the arrears charged upon the city," and the writer's intercourse with Sir William Doyly on the same subject.

4 November 1667. Draft of a letter to Sir Thomas Smith, bart.—Announcing that the writer and his friends in Chester have heard from Mr. Ratcliffe that "the difference between the countie and this citie concerning the taxes is referred to Sir W^m Doyly and Sir George Downing to confer with those that serve for the county and cittie and others of the commissioners that are in the house." A hope is expressed that Sir Thomas will exert all his influence "to free the cittie from an undue and insupportable charge."

4 November 1667. Draft of a letter to John Ratcliffe, esq.—Expressing the gratitude of the city of Chester to Mr. Ratcliffe for his exertions to protect the city from an insupportable burden, "that would much endanger the ruine thereof." It is hoped that Sir Thomas Smith will "afford his best assistance therein."

5 November 1667. A true account of what moneys have bene disbursed for the repaire of Weetefeld Pavement from the first day of May 1667 untill the fift day of November 1667, as followeth by me Gilbert Wilkinson. The sum being 8*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.*, just 1*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.* over the yearly rents which the same Giber Wilkinson, tenant is bound "to disburse for the use of Wheetfield pavement."

CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.

7 November 1667. Letter from Sir Thomas Smith to Richard Harrison, Mayor of the city of Chester. Declaring the writer's zeal for the welfare of the city, and representing that he and Mr. Ratcliffe "put this particular busines in the best way."—Also, draft of a letter, dated from Chester, expressing the gratitude of the mayor and aldermen for the said assurances from Sir Thomas Smith, bart., and member of parliament.

18 November 1667. Letter from John Ratcliffe, esq., M.P., to Richard Harrison, mayor of Chester. Touching a conference between the writer, Sir Thomas Smith, Sir William Doyly, M^r Sprigge and "Sir Fulke Lucy, who is one of the knights for our shire," about "the arrears that are endeavoured to be layed vpon the city." Dated from London.

23 November 1667. Letter from Richard Harrison, mayor of the city of Chester, to John Ratcliffe, esq., M.P. Acknowledging M^r Ratcliffe's "signal demonstration of a singular affection to this place," and declaring the said city's absolute inability to contribute in the future the proportion of taxes heretofore laid upon it.

17 December 1667. Copy of a letter from Richard Harrison, mayor of the city of Chester, to some person whose name does not appear. Asking in most respectful terms whether the person addressed in the letter, of which M^r Sheriff Harvey is appointed to be the bearer, can be present at the usual Christmas Eve celebrations and festivities. "Sir," the letter opens, "it hath bene an ancient custome of this cittie yearly vpon Christmas Eve, that the Justices of the peace, Aldermen and Common Conncell meet att the Maior's house about six of the clock that evening, and then the Maior, Recorder and Justices of the peace in theire skarlett gownes, and the Aldermen and Common Conncell in theire black gownes, attended with lights and torches, and accompanied with diuerse of the gentry and others, goe thence to the common Hall, and being sate there (where usually is a great concourse of people), silence beeing commanded, the customary tenants of the city are then called to doe theire services, who by persons for them appear in armes to watch and guard the cittie for that night; then the Recorder makes a speech to that auditory, thereby declaring the occasion of that meeting, the venerable antiquities of the cittie, and other laudable customes thereof, which speech being ended, the keyes of the cittie gates are deliuered y^e to the Mayor, and by him deliuered to such of the watchmen as he is pleased to entrust therewith; then the Maior, Recorder, Justices of the peace, Aldermen and Common Conncell, with the gentry and many others, depart with theire light-torches to theire seuerall habitations, and the watchmen to theire guards." Dated from Chester.

4 January —. Counsel's opinion (signed, W. J. Williams) respecting the powers of the Conventicles Act and the Act against Quakers. Dated from Grey's Inn.

— — The humble Petition of the City of Chester to the Commissioners of the Treasury. Against the injustice done to the said city by the present division of taxation for the king's uses between the city and county of Chester: the city being required to pay as much as a tenth part of the entire sum assessed upon the county and city. No date.

20 January 1667–8. Letter from the Commissioners of the Navy to the Mayor of Chester. For a return of all seamen, their relations, or other persons in the city of Chester, holding tickets for payment of service rendered to his Majesty at sea during the late wars; in order that arrangements may be made for paying the same tickets with the smallest possible expence and inconvenience to their holders. Dated from the Navy Office, London; and signed, Anglesey, C. Brouncker, W. Penn, Tho. Middleton, and S. Pepys.

23 June —. Letter from G. Talbot, Master of his Majesty's Jewel-House, to the Mayor of West Chester. Touching the writer's proposal to drain the lands bordering on the Dee between Chester and the sea, which proposal was made long since to Sir Thomas Haumer in parliament; and reflecting contemptuously on the meanness and unreasonableness of the gentry of the county of Flint, who have been reported to the writer by Sir Geoffry Shackerly to demand that they may retain "all the land that now beareth grasse," and to offer nothing of their at present worthless soil to the undertakers who at an outlay of some 15,000*l.* would recover it from the sea and make it valuable. The writer requests that letters may be addressed to him at the Porter's Lodge, Whitehall.

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

CORPORATION OF CHESTER.

28 September 1668. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriffs of the city of Chester. Ordering that henceforth no person be admitted into any office within the said city, until he has taken the oath and made the declaration required by the law; this injunction being issued because their lordships hear from several parts of the kingdom that "divers persons formerly displaced by the Commissioners authorized for regulating Corporations," endeavour to be re-admitted to their several offices without taking the required oath and making the required declaration. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

— — Letter from John Ratcliffe to Thomas Cowper, alderman of the city of Chester. Giving an account of yesterday's proceedings before the Lords of the Treasury, when the controversy between the City and the County of Chester was stated by counsel to their Lordships, who taking the part of the City "ordered letters to be sent to the Commissioners of the County and City to hasten an agreement between vs."

10 October 1668. Letter from the Earl of Derby to Richard Harrison, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Referring to a report that the mayor of the said city must reside in it constantly during the year of his mayoralty; and announcing that the writer's affairs would render it impossible for him to hold the mayor's office under such a condition.

28 November 1668. Copy of a letter from Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to the Commissioners for Assessments, co. Chester. Giving instructions for levying money. Dated from Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

15 March 1669. Letter from John Ratcliffe, M.P., to Robert Morrey, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Touching the writer's interviews with Sir Thomas Smith, Sir John Duncomb, Mr Cholmly and others about the said city's difference with the county. Dated from London.

9 August 1669. Letter from Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to the Mayor of Chester and the rest of the Commissioners for assessments in the said city. Announcing that their lordships have appointed Monday 21 September next for hearing the matter in difference between the city and the county of Chester. Dated from the Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

9 October 1669. Copy of a letter from the Commissioners for assessments in the city of Chester to Sir Peter Leicester, bart. Praying that the place appointed for the meeting of the County and City commissioners for assessment may be in Chester, as the writers cannot ride. The same request has been made to Sir Peter Pindar, Sir Geoffrey Shakerley, Sir Thomas Mainwaring and Sir Phillip Egerton.

11 October 1669. Letter from Sir Thomas Mainwaring to the Commissioners for Assessments in the city of Chester. Announcing an appointment for a meeting of the Commissioners for Assessments of the City and of the County at Mistress Seaman's house, near the church at Middlewick. Dated from Baddeley.

16 October 1669. Letter from William Streete to the Mayor of Chester. Speaking of the matter of taxes in dispute between the city and the county of Chester; and of the appointment of a place for the meeting of the commissioners of Assessments of same city and county, which will be most convenient to Sir Thomas Mainwaring and Sir Peter Leicester, "who have bene the cheefe instruments in occasioning the trouble of both city and countie." Dated from London.

16 October 1669. Letter from John Ratcliffe, M.P., to the Mayor of Chester. Touching a proposal for accommodating the difference between the city of Chester and the county.

28 October 1669. Letter from John Ratcliffe, esq., M.P., to Robert Morrey, esq., Mayor of Chester. Touching a project to procure an Act of Parliament "for the banking in of the River Dee."

— — Draft of a letter from the Mayor and aldermen of Chester to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, Treasury Chambers, Whitehall. Begging that certain arrears of aids, not justly due from the city of Chester, may not be laid upon it. No date.

11 November 1669. Letter from W. Streete to Robert Murley, esq., mayor of Chester. Touching the Lord Dallamer's action for ending a "difference notwithstanding Sir Philips vnreasonableness."

12 November 1669. Letter from John Ratcliffe, M.P., to Robert Morrey, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Touching the difference between the county and the city of Chester. Dated from London; of the same period.

4 December 1669. Letter from Sir Thomas Smith to some person whose name does not appear. Announcing the resolution of the Commissioners of the Treasury, ordering Cheshire to pay 770 odd pounds, and the city of Chester to pay 400l. of "the old arrears of Chester and the county." The writer observes, "How the city will be pleased with this I cannot tell. My friends of the countrey are highly displeased at it."

2 February 1670. Letter from W. Williams, esq., Recorder of Chester, to Thomas Wilcocke, esq., mayor of the same city. Touching the desire of Sir Edward and Lord Gerard to serve the city, and their hope to accomplish their purpose "if they may but attend his Majesty opportunely in the Treasury Chamber." Dated from Greys Inn.

15 March 1670. Copy of a letter, addressed to Mr. Richard Whitworth at the Lord Gerrard Brandon's lodgings in Whitehall. Entreating Mr. Whitworth, in fulfilment of a promise made by him, to induce Lord Gerrard to "procure a defalcation of 575 li. or 600 li. out of the subsidy now granted to bee raised in Chester," which "will answer the 575 li. that wee are in arrears for the Royal Aid and Further Supply in the Exchequer." Dated from Chester. No signature. It is added in a postscript that it will be well to remind his lordship "of the late king of blessed memory haneing all the Citye stock and all the plate and legacies that we are forced to maintaine att this daye."

15 March 1670. Letter addressed to Lord Gerrard, baron of Brandon. Expressing the gratitude of the citizens of Chester for his lordship's efforts to do them a service; although circumstances rendered those endeavours futile. The writers have been "assured the addressee had a gracious acceptance with his Majesty." Dated from Chester. No signatures.

19 April 1670. Letter from Sir Thomas Smith, bart., M.P., to some person whose name does not appear. Announcing that the Commissioners of the Exchequer have issued letters, ordering 700l. of the arrears to be levied on the city, and the residue of the same arrears on the county of Chester; whereas it had been determined that the city should pay only "three hundred and odd pounds."

28 June 1670. Letter from John Ratcliffe, esq., M.P., to Roger Whitby, esq., his Majesty's Knt. Harbinger, at his lodgings in Scotland Yard, Whitehall. Respecting a letter from the Lords of the Treasury to the Commissioners for assessments in the city of Chester, requiring the said city to pay a proportion of the arrears in dispute between the same city of Chester and the county of Chester, greatly exceeding the amount which their Lordships had determined to exact from the city.

8 August 1670. Letter from Robert Morrey, mayor of the city of Chester, to William Williams, esq., Recorder of the same city. Asking for advice and instructions how to proceed with the Quakers in Chester, who persist in holding their Sabbath meetings, "notwithstanding the many convictions some of them are under upon the late Act against Conventicles." Richard Smith, "the ring-leader of that sect," has been committed to prison for refusing to take the oath of allegiance. Dated from Chester.

10 August 1670. Letter from William Williams, recorder of Chester, to Robert Morrey, esq., mayor of the same city. Advising the mayor to proceed against the contumacious Quakers of Chester under the last Act against Conventicles. Dated from Conway.

28 November 1670. Letter from Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to the Clerk of the Peace for the city and county of Chester. The receiver of Hearth-money in the said county having been ordered to transmit "his views" to the said Clerk of the Peace in the middle of the present month, order is given to get them passed at the next general quarter sessions. Dated from Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

22 December. Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and other magistrates of the city of Chester. For the stricter collection of hearth-money, and the correction of abuses in granting certificates of exemption from the same tax in the said city. Dated from the court at Whitehall.

24 January 1671. Letter from William Williams, recorder of Chester, to Thomas Wilcocke, esq., mayor of the said city. Touching the matter of arrears of taxes in dispute before the Lords of the Treasury between the city and the county of Chester. Dated from Grey's Inn.

4 February, 1670. Letter from Sir Edward Massie to Thomas Wilcocke, esq., mayor of the city of Chester. Declaring the readiness of the writer and Lord Gerrard to serve the citizens of Chester, in procuring them an abatement of taxation. "We have good hope," says Sir Edward, "that Monday next his Majesty will vizeit the Treasury Chamber, when my Lord Jerrard and myselfe intende to waite closely vpon him with a petition that his commands may be established, and to see it done; otherwise the Commissioners of the Treasury may (as they doe sometimes) forget his Majesty's commands, when it is in shortening the Treasury." Dated from Westminster.

5 March 1671. Letter from Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to the Commissioners for assessments in the city. For the speedy collection in the said city of the sum of 628*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.* due from it in respect of the Royal Aid and Additional Supply. Dated from Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

23 May 1671. Letter from Mr. Receiver Booth to William Wilson, mayor of the city of Chester. Acknowledging that Mr. Booth wrote a letter to Mr. Alderman Streete, to induce him to make a friendly arrangement with late sub-farmers of the excise of the city of Chester; but ridiculing the rumour that the same letter was shown to the king and council, and that it provoked from his Majesty a strong expression of displeasure. Dated from London.

10 January, 1671 $\frac{1}{2}$. Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor, aldermen, and justices of the peace of the city of Chester. For a perfect return of all the seamen of the port of Chester, and all other persons within the said mayor's precincts and jurisdiction, fit to serve as seamen. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

17 June 1671. Letter from Lords of the Treasury to the Commissioners for subsidies in the city of Chester. For the exact collection of subsidies, and care that rateable property, whether real or personal, is rated at its real worth. Dated from Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

29 March 1672. Letter from Lords of the Council. "For a perfect list or callender of the names, time and causes of commitment of all such persons called 'Quakers as are remaining in prison within the city and county of Chester;' his Majesty having been moved to extend his mercy to Quakers.

18 May 1672. Letter from W. Williams to the mayor of Chester. Notifying that Mr. Hall has been ordered to receive and acknowledge money sent from Chester in payment of arrears of taxes due from that city. Dated from Grey's Inn, London.

— July 1672. Letter from Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to the mayor of the city of Chester, and the rest of the Commissioners for the Royal Aid and Additional Supply of the said city. Pressing for payment from the city of 628*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.*, arrears of the royal aid and additional supply due from the said city. Attention is called to a recent decision of the Court of Exchequer, on "the case of a farre greater standing out in the county of Suffolke," adjudging "that the power of the commissioners is in force so long as any part of the assessment remaines unanswered to the king." Also a list of defaulters in the city of Chester to the same royal aid and additional supply. Dated from Treasury Chambers, Whitehall.

8 May 1673. Letter from Lord Arlington to the mayor of Chester. In answer to the mayor's letter respecting one Price, a soldier, who has deserted from Lord Craven's regiment in company with James Wynn. The mayor is directed to contrive some fit punishment for the deserter, and to "put him on board some ship that may compell him to the service he is fled from."

18 February 1674. Copy of the concession of the freedom of the city of Chester to Robert Taylor, weaver, and Francis Barton, woolcomber. Signed by the mayor, and thirty-four chief citizens of Chester. "Whereas a manufacture is intended to be set up in this city for the employing of the poore, for which end many well-minded persons in the city, for promoting of the said worke, haue bene instrumentall to their great charge to bring two eminent persons from Norwich who are experienced to carry on the said worke, to wit, Robert Taylor, weaver, and Francis Barton, woolcomber, which said persons, before their remoue thence to this city desire to haue an assurance of their being made denizens or freemen of this towne; Wee therefore for their encouragements doe giue our consents thereto, &c. &c."

20 February 1674. Letter from John Bishop of Chester to the mayor of the same city. Enjoining the mayor to aid those chief citizens of Chester who are endeavouring to procure an Act of Parliament for securing a competent maintenance to the ministers of their churches. The present time appears to the writer very favourable to such a proposal for an Act of Parliament. Dated from London.

29 October 1674. Letter from W. Williams to the mayor of Chester. Announcing that at the writer's instance the Attorney-General, to do away with all reasonable grounds for complaints at Chester touching the matter under consideration, has "stayed all proceedings for a fortnight against the inhabitants of Chester and Wrexham, and hath promised to stay all further proceedings against all such who are poore, though they have stamped farthings or halfe pence since the Act of Indemnity," and yet further has promised to relinquish proceedings against such of those persons, mentioned in a particular warrant, as join in making a required affidavit.

5 February, 1674 $\frac{1}{2}$. Letter of Lords of the Council. Giving directions for encouraging and quickening the convictions of Popish recusants in the city and county of Chester. Dated from the Court at Whitehall.

19 November 1677. Certificate signed by the earl of Derby that Charles Davenport of Bickerstaffe, co. Lancaster, esq., is employed on the earl's urgent affairs in cos. Lancaster and Chester, and is therefore free from arrest during the sessions and adjournments of the present parliament: liberty of parliament being by the ancient privileges of the kingdom accorded to the servants of peers of the realm.

19 October 1678. Letter from William Williams, recorder of Chester, to William Harvey, esq., mayor of the same city. Announcing that the writer has shown certain examinations sent to him by the said mayor to the Attorney General, who is of opinion that Mr. Harvey "should examine Mr. Matthew Ellis for the discovery of the Priests and Jesuits mentioned by him in his discourse at John Bridge's house." The writer observes, "The sudden death of Sir Edmund Bury Godfrey, an active Justice of Peace in the county of Middlesex in the examination of persons about the late Plot against his Majesty, attended with many unhappy circumstances, must oblige all good subjects to search very strictly into matters of this nature." Dated from Grey's Inn.

9 November 1678. Letter from Mr. Secretary Williamson to the Mayor of Chester. Declaring his Majesty's approval of the zeal and circumspection which determined the mayor to arrest and detain certain persons passing towards Ireland without passports, but certifying that the same persons—viz., Captain Plunkett, Thomas Dungan, Ensign O'Conner, Michael de la Hoyd, and Captain Talbot—have permission to retire to their own country, "being Irishmen and dismissed from his Majesty's service." The writer has been directed to enclose a list of other persons having leave to go into Ireland, "his Majesty having likewise now lately caused to be dismissed out of his service a considerable number more of that country, with leave and direction to them to returne to their owne country." Dated from Whitehall.

9 November 1678. Letter from William Williams, Recorder of Chester, to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the writer has shown certain commissions and papers, sent him by the said mayor, to Mr. Secretary Williamson, who has directed the commissions to be returned. Dated from Grey's Inn.

19 November, 1678. Letter from William Williams, recorder of Chester, to William Harvey, esq., mayor of the same city. Announcing that certain letters and commissions, sent to the writer by the said mayor, have been delivered to Mr. Secretary Williamson, who says that the Council will make a communication to the mayor respecting "the commissions and arms seised at Chester." The writer observes, "These commissions have been the subject matter of much of the Debate of the House yesterday, and this day we have ordered an Address to be presented to his Majesty to recall all Commissions to Popish officers; and Mr. Secretary Williamson was committed to the Tower by the House of Commons for countersigning such commissions and warrants, contrary to the late Act for taking the oaths and receiving the sacrament." Dated from Grey's Inn.

21 November 1678. Sworn depositions of Sir William Talbot, bart., Captain Mark Talbot, and Captain Patrick Sarsfield, made in the city of Chester, before William Harvey, mayor, and William Streete, alderman, two Justices of the Peace of the same city: (1.) Sir William Talbot deposes that he arrived in London from Dublin on 1 August last, lodged there first at the King's Armes in the Strand, and then at the Squerrill in Duke Street, in a linen-draper's house; that he left London a fortnight and arrived at Chester a week since, en route for Dublin; that he intended to visit Sir James Poole, but did not do so; that he did not carry out his purpose of going with Captain Mark Talbot to visit the Earl of Derby, though provided with a pass to do so, with a view to getting the said Earl's order for the restoration of the rapier and arms, taken from him at Chester on account of his being a Roman Catholic; that instead of going to Lord Derby he paid a visit to the Lord Mollineux in Lancashire, and went thence to Liverpool, where he heard there was a vessel sailing for Ireland.—(2.) Captain Mark Talbot deposes that he arrived at Chester on the fifth inst., dined at the Red Lion, and then took horse and guide for the house of Lord Mollineux in Lancashire, and to his relation, Sir Neil; and that on hearing several persons were seized on suspicion at Chester, he offered himself as a prisoner to the Earl of Derby. On being subsequently taken into custody in Chester, and disarmed on account of his being a Roman Catholic, he applied in vain for help to the Earl of Derby. Further, the deponent says that he came from France with many other officers in May last, and received a commission (dated by his Majesty and subscribed by Mr. Secretary Williamson on 9 February last) to be a Captain of Foot in Colonel Dungan's regiment, and that during his stay in London he received pay from Mr. Trant.—(3.) Captain Patrick Sarsfield deposes that he came from France to London in May, June, or July last, lodged thirty weeks at the house of the king's saddler at Charing Cross, received pay during that time from Mr. Trant, and three or four weeks ago received a commission to a captaincy of foot in Colonel Dungan's regiment, dated 9 February last, which commission was delivered to him by Lieut.-Col. Dempsey or Mr. Trant, "they being then together at the Crowne and Scepter "Tauerne in Pick-a-dilly."

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

23 November 1678. Letter from William Williams, recorder of Chester, to William Harvey, esq., mayor of the same city. For a complete and accurate return of all Popish priests, Jesuits, recusants, and suspected Papists in Chester, in compliance with an order of the House of Commons; and also for a list of the same persons in the county of Chester, the writer having been appointed in this matter to look after the county as well as the county of the city of Chester.

23 November 1678. Copy of a letter from William Harvey, Mayor of Chester, and three others, to the Lords of the Council. Certifying that in obedience to their lordships' orders of the 29th of last September, the writers apprehended at Chester several Roman Catholics making for Ireland without passes, and bearing commissions, dated 5 February last, which on examination they "acknowledged to have received about three weeks ago from the hands of Colonel MacCartee "and Lieutenant-Colonel Dempsey"; which commissions were by the recorder of Chester delivered to Mr. Secretary Williamson, who subsequently returned them with a letter, a copy of which is enclosed. Dated from Chester.

7 December 1678. Letter from Mr. Secretary H. Coventry to the Mayor of Chester. Ordering the Mayor to send up under safe guard one Mr. Burek, an Irishman, to the Privy Council for examination. The said Burek having been employed, as he states, in the king's secret service by the writer, his examinations by the Mayor and his brethren of Chester are not to be made public, as their publication might "prejudice the king's "service hereafter."

11 December 1678. Copy of a letter from William Harvey, mayor of Chester, to Mr. Secretary Coventry. Announcing that in compliance with orders from Mr. Secretary Coventry the said Mayor has sent Mr. Burke in safe guard up to the Privy Council for examination. Dated from Chester.

29 December 1678. Copy of a letter of requisition from Sir George Charnock, serjeant-at-arms attending the House of Lords, addressed to the Mayor of Chester. For a guard of twenty well-appointed and well-armed horsemen, to aid Sir George in executing an order of the Lords of Parliament.—Also, copy of a letter, dated 31 December 1678, from the same person to the same person, certifying that the same order is in full force, and is not affected by yesterday's prorogation of parliament to the 4th of next February.—Also, copy of the order of the House of Lords, dated 27 December 1678, directing Sir George Charnock, knt., serjeant-at-arms to the same house, to attach and bring to the bar thereof Dominick Kelley, charged with having murdered Sir Edmund Bury Godfrey.—Also, the original of the letter, dated 31 December, 1679, the copy of which is noticed above.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

20 January 1679. Copy of letter from the Commissioners of the Treasury to the Commissioners for Assessments in Cheshire. Announcing that Mr. Ralph Hollingshead, the late Receiver General in Cheshire of the parliamentary supply of 619,388*l.* 11*s.* 9*d.* for disbanding the army and for other uses, has been superseded in that office.

26 February 1679. Copy of the Order of Council (signed, Phi. Lloyd), requiring the Mayors or other chief magistrates at the ports of England and Wales to examine all persons going beyond seas by virtue of passes from the Privy Council, and to compel them to swear that they are the persons described in the same passes. The particular object of the order being to prevent the escape of persons "having a hand in the "late horrible plott and other criminalis."

10 April 1679. Letter from T. Grosvenor, M.P., to the Mayor of Chester. Acknowledging a letter; and speaking of his parliamentary duties. "This day," he says, "I have had a hard bout about the bringing in of "Irish Cattle. We sat vntill 4 o'clock in the afternoon: I thought I should be pulled in peices of my "countreymen and the rest of my acquaintance for "deviding the house against them, for the good of the "city. . . . There is no particular newes but what is "in the votes, the which you have in the Coffy Houses "with you." Dated from London.

1 February 1680. Letter from W. Williams, recorder of Chester, to John Anderson, esq., Mayor, and to the aldermen and sheriffs of the same city. Touching arrangements for the election of burgesses of parliament at Chester on the 14th inst.—Dated from Grey's Inn.

17 May 1680. Letter from the Earl of Derby to William Wilme, esq., Mayor of Chester. Requesting that he may be duly certified, for the information of the Privy Council, how perfectly the directions of the statute made in his Majesty's 13th year for governing and regulating corporations are carried out in the city of Chester.

25 June 1680. Letter from W. Williams, recorder of Chester, to the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of the same city.—Expressing the writer's satisfaction at the desire of the fellow-citizens of Chester that he should represent them in parliament.

14 December 1680. Letter from W. Williams, recorder of Chester, to John Anderton, Mayor of the same city. For an accurate return of the Papists in Chester.—Dated from Grey's Inn.

13 May 1683. Copy of the Petition of Anthony Lord Viscount Falkland to the King. For a grant of "all "land, soile, grannell, and stone, from the highest water "mark to the lowest ebb of the sea, within your king- "dom of England and dominion of Wales (except the "River of Thames), with all the benefit and advantages "that may thereby be made within the high-water mark "and the lowest ebb of the sea," at a rent of 100*l.* per annum.—With copy of the resolution of the Lords of Treasury, referring the petition to the consideration of the master and governors of the Trinity House.

13 May 1685. Letter from James Arderne to Sir Peter Pyndar, bart.—Touching certain matters of controversy between the city of Chester and the dean as to the franchises and liberties of the Abbey Court, which the writer thinks it would be well to refer to the arbitration of the judges of Chester.—Dated from the Deanery.

16 May 1685. Letter from Edward Lutwyche to Sir Peter Pyndar. Against the Dean of Chester's contention that, the Abbey Court being extra-parochial, the keepers of almshouses therein are exempt from the interference and control of parish constables and churchwardens.—Dated from the Temple.

14 June 1683. Letter from the Master and Governors of the Trinity House to the Lords of the Treasury. Announcing that they have sent copies of Lord Viscount Falkland's petition for a grant of the soil, &c. between high-water mark and lowest ebb of sea to all the principal corporations bordering on the coast.—Dated from the Trinity House.

23 June 1683. Copy of a letter from the Mayor and Justices of the Peace of Chester, to the Master and Governors of the Trinity House.—Reporting strongly against the petition of Anthony Lord Viscount Falkland to the king for a grant, at an annual rent of 100*l.* of all the land, soil, &c. of England and Wales between high and low-water mark, the river Thames excepted. It is represented that such a concession would invade the property and privileges of the city of Chester, affect private estates on either side the Dee in a way which would be fruitful of costly litigation, and be in divers ways injurious to navigation.—Dated from Chester.

29 November 1688. Paper of special orders (signed, Peter Shakerley) for guarding the city during the ensuing night. "And in case of alarm," runs one order, "of the approach of an enemy, that they all repair to that part of the walls where the enemy offers to assault."

1 May 1689. Certificate, signed by Henry earl of Clarendon, that the bearer of the same, Charles Leslie, clk., being the writer's chaplain and servant, is exempt from arrest and attachment during this present time of parliament.

30 July 1689. Warrant (signed, Schonberg) addressed to the Mayor of Chester. For the prompt impressment of thirty wagons, with sufficient horses and drivers, for carrying the baggage and equipage of infantry regiments marching to their appointed place of embarkation for Ireland.

15 January 1693. Certificate, addressed by undersigned ministers and parishioners of St. Bridget to the Mayor, Recorder, and Justices of the Peace of the city of Chester. Showing that the cost of rebuilding St. Bridget's church will greatly exceed the sum of seventeen hundred pounds, at which the costs of the work were roughly estimated at the Quarter Sessions; whereupon license of letters patent was granted for a collection in fourteen counties towards the charges of the work.

25 January 1693. Letter from Robert Comberbach to Colonel Roger Whitley, mayor of Chester. Describing the jaunty and off-hand manner in which Sir John Fleet, formerly lord mayor of London, refused to take any trouble in the case of "little Jacky Vanoue," a destitute lad thrown upon Chester (where he had no claim to a settlement) through the action of "a pass" wrongfully granted by Sir John Fleet during his mayoralty.—In a postscript the writer says, "Sir Wm. Dolben, 24 justice" of the King's Bench, dyed suddenly this morning "when he had just put on his robes, and was about to go to Court. He was a judge of great integrity."

2 June 1693. Letter from Sir Richard Levinge to Mr. Comberbach, Clerk of the Pentice of Chester.—Respecting doubts and enquiries that have been raised respecting the sufficiency of the writer's title to the place he holds amongst the aldermen of Chester.—Dated from Dublin.

21 December 1695. Letter from the Mayor and Aldermen of Derby to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing the intention of the Corporation of Derby to apply to parliament, in the next session thereof, for power to make the river Derwent in Derbyshire navigable; and entreating the Corporation of the city of Chester to support the application by means of their parliamentary representatives.

8 January 1696. Letter from Robert Sparrow, mayor of King's Lynn, Norfolk, to the Mayor of Chester. For the parliamentary influence of the representatives of the city of Chester in the House of Commons in behalf of a bill to improve the port of King's Lynn. Dated from King's Lynn.—Also, the reply of the Mayor of Chester.

31 December 1696. Letter from F. Gell to Peter Bennett, esq., Mayor of Chester. Referring to the writer's project for improving the navigation of the River Dee.

8 February 1697. Letter (signed, Peter Shakerley and T. Cowper) to Henry Allen, esq., Mayor of Chester. Setting forth the arrangements for repaying the citizens of Chester their charges for maintaining for twenty months "the company of Invalides," i.e. invalid soldiers.—Dated from Westminster.

10 January 1698. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. Announcing that leave has been given by the House of Commons to bring in a bill to make the River Dee navigable.

19 January 1698. Letter from Peter Shakerley to Henry Bennett, esq., Mayor, and to the aldermen of the city of Chester. Announcing that the House of Commons has rejected the two petitions against the writer: the one petition being made by Mr. Gell, and the other being from inhabitants of the city of Chester. The writer says "The ill designs of Mr. Gell and the Noe 'Just Caus hee and those few of your city had to 'Petition against me did see fully appear to the whole 'House, that those who spoke in the matter (and in particular, Sir Joseph Jekell, the Chief Justice of 'Chester) did declare vpon what appeared'd to the House 'that I had acted for your city according to my Duty, 'and as did become an honest gentleman to do." He speaks further of Mr. Gell's "noe good intentions to 'make your river navigable." Dated from Westminster.

26 February, 1697. Copy of the Information of John Welsh, of the parish of Great St. Bartholomew, London, blacksmith, taken upon oath before Sir Selahiel Lovell, knt., recorder of the city of London, against one William Cooke, a clockmaker, charged with counterfeiting gold and silver money.—Also, the certificate of Christopher Ellis, clerk to the Warden of the Mint, that he saw the above-written information on 14 April, 1698.—Also, the following certificate in the handwriting of Sir Isaac Newton, "Vera copia collat. cum originali (Apr. 14 1698) per—Js. Newton, custod. camb."

16 April 1698. Letter from Mr. (afterward Sir) Isaac Newton, Warden of the Mint in the Tower of London, to the Mayor of Chester. For the temporary imprisonment at Chester of William Cook, about to be sent over from Dublin to England, to be tried in London for counterfeiting coin of the realm. Dated "at my 'house neare St. James's Church in Jermyn Street, 'Westminster."

21 June, 1698. Letter from Mr. Secretary James Vernon to the Mayor of Chester. For the temporary imprisonment in the gaol of Chester of Edward Ivy alias Jones, John Jennings and Edward Brady, who are about to be sent over from Ireland to England, on a charge of counterfeiting the coin of the realm. Dated from Whitehall.

5 July 1698. Letter from Henry May to Mr. Allen, Mayor of the city of Chester. Notifying that the bearer has been appointed to deliver to Mr. Allen the persons of Edward Jones alias Ivy, John Jennings, and Edward Brady, apprehended in Dublin and now sent over to England to be tried for counterfeiting the coin of the realm. Dated from Dublin Castle.

12 July 1698. Letter from Thomas Molyneux to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Begging the mayor to receive the reward due to the person who apprehended Crowdsen, the counterfeiter of money, and to pay the same to Mr. Nicolls, the moneyer of the Mint, if he be in Chester, or otherwise to transmit it to the writer's house in Cornhill.

12 July 1698. Letter from Mr. Secretary James Vernon to the Mayor of Chester. Respecting three prisoners: Edward Ivy alias Jones, John Jennings, and Edward Brady, lately brought over from Ireland to Chester, who are to be sent up to London, "together" with the four parcells which were transmitted to you "with them." Dated from Whitehall.

12 July 1698. Certificate of Sir Robert Geffery, knt., Justice of the Peace, that Ferdinando Crowdsen, charged with counterfeiting the coin, who escaped from Chester Gaol on the 14th of last February, was taken on the 7th inst. by Thomas Whittaker, servant to Thomas Molyneux, esq., comptroller of his Majesty's mint, and is now lying in the gaol of Newgate in London, that that the same Thomas Whittaker is entitled to the reward of 5*l.* offered for the recapture of the escaped prisoner by the sheriffs of Chester.—Also, on the same paper, the certificate of Sir Isaac Newton, warden of his Majesty's mint, that he was present during the examination of Ferdinando Crowdsen before Sir Robert Jeffery, and confirms that magistrate's certificate.—Also on the same paper, the confirmatory certificate of Thomas Molyneux esq., comptroller of the mint.

21 November 1698. Letter from the Mayor (Thomas Goodwin) and the aldermen of Derby, to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. For the parliamentary influence of the Corporation of Chester in behalf of an application about to be made to parliament for powers to make the river Derwent navigable.

24 January, 1698. Letter from John Williams to Henry Bennett, esq., Mayor of Chester. Touching the pardon of Lieutenant Read, lately on his trial for manslaughter. Dated from Glaswed.

20 April 1699. Letter (signed Grosvenor and Shakerley) to the Mayor (Henry Bennett esq.), aldermen and sheriffs of the city of Chester. Touching the differences between the citizens of Chester, and the Flintshire gentlemen, in relation to the sands on the Flintshire side of the Dee; which differences have frustrated the writers' endeavours to bring in a bill this session of Parliament for improving the navigation of the River Dee. Dated from Westminster.

1 June 1699. Letter from Sir J. Mainwaring to Henry Bennett, esq., Mayor of Chester. Touching payment of the remainder of his Majesty's bounty towards the building of the City Hall. Dated from Peover.

1 October 1699. Letter (signed, Peter Shakerley) to Henry Bennett, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing that the Lords of the Treasury have ordered payment of 300*l.*, part of the old debt of 733*l.*

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

11s. 5d., due to the citizens of Chester "for quartering "the Invalids," and that the writer will diligently press for payment of the remainder of the debt. Dated from Gwerselt.

14 October 1699. Letter from the Mayor and aldermen of London to William Bennett, esq., mayor of the city of Chester. Asking for the use of one of the Books of Records of the City of Chester, to exhibit an entry of the same book in the Court of Exchequer in London, in the cause pending between the cheese-mongers of London and the Corporation of Liverpool. Dated from Liverpool.

23 November 1699. Letter from Mr (afterward Sir) Isaac Newton, Warden of his Majesty's Mint, to William Bennett, esq., mayor of Chester. Giving directions for the prosecution at the next Chester Assizes of Mr Horton, who has been concerned with coining tools, and is suspected of counterfeiting coin of the realm. The warden of the Mint has been in communication with Mr Secretary Vernon and Sir Joseph Jekyll, Chief Justice of Chester, respecting this matter. Dated from the Mint Office in the Tower of London.

28 November 1699. Letter (signed, Peter Shakerley) to William Bennett, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Touching the bill for improving the navigation of the river Dee, and giving the latest parliamentary news. Dated from Westminster.

4 November 1699. Letter from Mr. Secretary James Vernon to the Mayor of Chester. Recognizing the prudent trouble taken by the mayor "to detect and prevent "a very suspicious design that seems to have been "carried on by Horton and Roberts," respecting which design the writer has been in communication with the Warden of the Mint.—Dated from Whitehall.

30 November 1699. Rough draft of the certificate of Henry Bennett, esq., Mayor of Chester, and other Justices of the Peace of the same city, respecting the voluntary depositions of three sergeants of the Company of Invalids in garrison in the said city, as to the riotous misbehaviour of some of the same invalids in dispute with Captain Tweddall about their pay.

— Draft (much worn and defaced) of an Act for making the River Dee navigable to the city of Chester.

13 February 1700. Letter (signed, Peter Shakerley) to Richard Oulton, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Touching the case of Mr. Sheppard, of the Honourable East India Company, charged in the House of Commons "for bribing several burroughs to elect "members to serve in this parliament," which charge Mr. Sheppard is to answer at the bar of the House next Tuesday three weeks. Dated from Westminster.

17 February 1700. Letter from the Mayor (Nic. Mannoch) and aldermen of Rye to the Mayor and other chief magistrates of the city of Chester. Asking for the exercise of the parliamentary influence of the city of Chester in behalf of a petition to parliament for the improvement of the harbour of Rye. Dated from Rye.

6 March 1700. Letter (signed, P. Shakerley) to Richard Oulton, esq., mayor of the city of Chester. Giving the latest parliamentary news, and referring particularly to the writer's support of a petition to parliament for the improvement of the harbour of Rye. Dated from Westminster.

24 September 1700. Letter (signed, P. Shakerley) to William Bennett, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing the writer's receipt from his London agent of a bill upon Alderman Allen for 220*l.* 1*9s.*, in full payment of the residue of the debt for quartering invalid soldiers.

13 January 1701. Letter from Sir Henry Bunbury and Peter Shakerley, esq., to the Mayor (Thomas Hand, esq.) Aldermen and citizens of Chester. Expressing the writers' gratification at having been elected to represent the city of Chester in parliament.

30 October 1702. Proclamation of the Earl of Derby (signed, Derby, Mayor) as Mayor of the city of Chester. For cleansing the streets of Chester and relieving them of extreme foulness. "And," runs the proclamation, "for the better discovery of such offenders the Rt. "Hon^{ble} the Mayor and the Worpth the Justices of the "peace of this City will from tyme to tyme, as often "as occasion shall require, walk personally through "the several streets and lanes in this city, and take "notice where the same are foul and dirty."

25 March 1703. Letter from the Lord Treasurer Godolphin to the Commissioners of Subsidies in the city of Chester. For the efficient collection of subsidies.

2 January 1704. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the City of Chester. For the vigorous execution of the powers accorded by the Act for raising Recruits for the Land-Forces and Marines, in order that her Majesty may in the spring follow up the glorious advantages with which it pleased God to bless her arms in the last campaign.

18 January 1704. Letter from Lords of the Council to Hugh Lord Cholmondeley, Lord Lieutenant of Cheshire and North Wales. For the execution of the laws against Papists and persons suspected of being papists. Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

21 January 1704. Warrant (signed, Cholmondeley) addressed to the Mayor of Chester, and the rest of the Deputy-Lieutenants of the city and county of the same. For prompt and vigorous execution of laws against Papists and suspected Papists. Dated from London.

31 March 1704. Letter (signed, J. Sandys), addressed to the Mayor of Chester. Announcing that by orders from his Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral, dated the 13th inst., the writer has been appointed "convoy between this place and Plymouth," and that he will continue at his present station only ten or at the utmost fifteen days; and requiring timely notice to be given to ships. Dated from Hecfor in Highlake.

3 April 1704. Warrant under her Majesty's sign manual, addressed to Sir Joseph Jekyll, kn., Chief Justice of the County Palatine of Chester, and to the Mayor and Recorder of the City of Chester. For the insertion of the names of Henry Grange and John Williams (convicted of burglary, committed under extenuating circumstances, at her Majesty's court of Crownmote in the city of Chester), in the next General Pardon that shall come out for the Western Circuit, for the crime aforesaid. Given at the Court of St. James's.

23 October 1704. Warrant, bearing the signature of H.R.H. Prince George of Denmark, Lord High Admiral of England, addressed to the Mayor of Chester. To administer oaths and test required by Act of Parliament to Nicholas Holmes, whose warrant to be gunner of her Majesty's ship the Speedwell is enclosed.

24 October 1704. Letter from J. Burchett to the Mayor of Chester. Enclosing a copy of the oaths and test to be administered to Nicholas Holmes, appointed to be gunner of the Speedwell, together with the Lord High Admiral's warrant for the administration of the same. Dated from the Admiralty Office.

25 February 1705. Recommendation of William Newton, clock-maker (found guilty at the Chester court of Crownmote or gaol-delivery of stealing the watches of his employer, John Wrench), to her Majesty's clemency and compassion. The recommendation is signed by Richard Puleston, mayor, and Richard Comberback, recorder of the city of Chester, and is addressed to the Rt. Hon. Robert Harley, esq., her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State at Whitehall. Dated from Chester.

29 November 1705. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and other chief magistrates of the city of Chester. For the energetic and effectual impressment of recruits for her Majesty's land forces and marines. Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

18 January 1706. Copy of a letter from the Mayor and other magistrates of Chester to Peter Shakerley, esq. Touching a bill under the consideration of Parliament for "appointing nightly watches."—Also, an accompanying abstract of the said bill.

18 March 1706. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of the city of Chester. Announcing that Mr. Lownds, Secretary of the Treasury, promises to bring in to-morrow a bill that shall not be "repugnant "to any Article of the Union." Dated from Westminster.

25 March 1706. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and other chief magistrates of the city of Chester. For the prompt and effectual exercise of powers accorded by an Act of Parliament, a copy of which is enclosed, for impressing seamen for her Majesty's Fleet. Dated from the Council Chamber at Kensington.

8 April 1706. Warrant, under her Majesty's sign manual, addressed to the Justices of Assize and Gaol Delivery for the Oxford Circuit, and to the Mayor and Recorder of the city of Chester. For the insertion of the name of William Newton (recently convicted of felony and sentenced to death at Chester) in the next General Pardon that shall come out for the Oxford Circuit, on condition that the said William Newton shall enter and serve in the Queen's fleet. Dated from the Court at Kensington.

26 April 1706. Letter from J. Burchett to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Enclosing, at the order of his Royal Highness, a letter to the captain of the

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

Valenr, who is thereby directed "to bring under his "convoy from Chester all such ships and vessels as "are bound his way and ready to sayle with him." Dated from the Admiralty Office.

11 May 1706. Letter (signed, J. Dawson) to the Mayor of Chester. Announcing that the Lords Justices of Ireland ordered the Charlotte yacht to Chester, to bring over one Coloby and one Clerke, now prisoners at Chester, to take their trial in Ireland for robbing her Majesty's Treasury. Dated from Dublin Castle.—Also another letter to the same effect, dated from Dublin Castle on 9 May 1706, by the same writer to the same mayor.

24 December 1706. Letter from the Speaker of the House of Commons to the Mayor or Sheriffs of the city of Chester. Requiring the attendance of the parliamentary representatives of Chester in the House of Commons on 14 January next, "The House of Commons "intending to proceed further with all severity against "all such of their members as shall then neglect their "attendance. Dated from the House of Commons.—Also, at the foot of the letter, a copy of the Mayor's reply that one of the members for Chester, Mr. Shakerley, is now attending the House, and that the other of the city's two members, Sir Henry Bunbury, is preparing to do so with all due speed.

25 January 1707. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and other chief magistrates of the city of Chester. For the impressment of recruits for her Majesty's land forces and marines. Particular attention is called to her Majesty's orders that, for the greater encouragement of parish officers to do their duty in this particular, a sum of twenty shillings shall be paid to them for every person whom they shall bring before a magistrate and cause to be impressed, and that a bounty of four pounds be paid to every volunteer for three years' service in her Majesty's forces. Dated from the Council Chamber at Kensington.

27 February 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Reporting the progress made in Parliament with the Union Bill, and calling attention to the effect of some of its provisions on questions of customs. Dated from Westminster.

15 February 1707. Letter from Nicholas Jennings to the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester. Offering to make the river Dee navigable up to the walls of the city of Chester for vessels drawing no more than nine feet of water, at any except unusually low "neip "tydes;" and promising that the cost of the work will not exceed six thousand pounds. Dated from London, where an answer is to be addressed to the writer "at "M^r Kathari e Tomlyna in Tippins Rents near y^e Sun "Tavern in Upper Shadwell."—On the back of the letter appears a copy of the answer made to Mr. Nicholas Jennings, whose proposal is declined, as the river is already navigable up to the city at all spring tides by vessels drawing nine feet of water.

18 February, 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Repeating the writer's previous announcement that, unless prevented by parliamentary action, merchants will after the 1st of next May be importing French wine into England "coast- "ways from Scotland." "Nay," continues the writer, "I am further told that Tobacco may also then com "from Scotland to England by Coast Cocknet, and it is "said (but how true I know not) that some marchants "in England have this see much in their view that "they intend to shipp off and export tobacco from "England to Scotland, draw back the duty in England, "and it in Scotland before the 1st of May, pay the "Scotch duty there, which (as I am told) is but a "third part of the duty upon it vpon importation in "England, and after the Union commences to bring it "back to that part of the United Kingdom now called "England by Coast Cocknet." Dated from Westminster.

20 February, 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Repeating his opinion (which has been confirmed by lawyers, merchants, and Custom-house agents) "that French wines, tobacco, "East India goods, &c., imported into Scotland before "the 1st of May next (at which time the Union commences) may after that time by natives of Scotland "and by Coast Cocknetts com in any part of Great "Britain now called England." Dated from Westminster.—Also, two other letters (dated from Westminster on 22nd and 25th of February) from the same writer to the same persons on the same subject.

4 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Touching the Act of Union and its fiscal consequences. Dated from Westminster.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

6 March, 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Announcing that the Act of Union has this day "passed y^e Royall ascent" (sic). The writer says, "I am told there are severall French "privateers to the Norwards of your channell, viz., "towards Killcorby, Dumfrize, Glasgow, &c. Sir "Henry Bunbury (who presents you his service) tells "mee that Mr. Sheppard of London has contracted for "vast quantites of French wines in Holland (where, in "one of my former letters from good authority I told "you the Dutch had lay'd vp such stores that their "cellars would scarce hold them)."

8 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Referring to the provisions made by certain London merchants to take advantage of certain fiscal defects of the Act of Union; and passing on a rumour that those defects will be remedied by a short Act of Parliament, to which the ministers "at "this court" are already asking for Scotch concurrence. Dated from Westminster.

11 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Referring to the writer's recent announcement that the English ministers were moving the Scotch Parliament to pass a short Act respecting goods imported in that country before, and sent coastways into England after the Union. "But yesterday," the writer adds, "I was informed of another invention, "viz., to lay an embargo vpon all ships till the 1st of "May, and it was soe talked that (because the doing "of it would be a most barbarous vsage of the English "marchants) it should be moved in our House for an "Address to the Queen to doe it. Wee expected it "accordingly to have had it moved this day, but it was "not done; and one told mee the Court had it vnder "consideration whether to doe it or not, but that they "were attempting to gett the Act I have mentioned "before to be passed in Scotland, and to drop in here "for confirmation at the end of the Session." Dated from Westminster.

15 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Announcing that on the petition of several London merchants ("who had not prepared themselves in time to get a slice of the shoulder "of mutton from Scotland") Mr. Lounds, the secretary of the Treasury, is at the eleventh hour about to bring in a bill to obviate the particular frauds on the customs, which the writer has so repeatedly declared would, in the absence of particular legislation for the case, result from the Act of Union. Dated from Westminster.

18 March 1707. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and other magistrates of the city of Chester. For the administration to persons suspected of disaffection to her Majesty and her government, and residing within the said mayor's jurisdiction, of an oath prescribed by an Act of the present session of Parliament "for the better security of her Majesty's Person and "Government." Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

20 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Accompanying an abstract of the bill brought in this day by Mr. Lounds, secretary of the Treasury. "By what I can learn," says the writer, "the Court managers intend it shall haue a retrospect "to the 2nd of February last which will be very "unjust if it is soe; for at that rate a merchant of "England who honestly and without any intention of "fraud sould his goods to Scotland since 2nd February "last at price current (importation duty to England "still standing charged on him), shall not be allowed "his Debentures on that exportation." Dated from Westminster.

25 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Announcing that the writer has expressed in the House of Commons a strong opinion of the unreasonableness of some of the provisions of the bill brought in by Mr. Lounds, secretary of the Treasury; and taking at the same time occasion to express his belief that no one of his constituents "was concerned "in exporting goods to Scotland, and drawing back "the duty with intention to bring them back to England after the 1st of May." Dated from Westminster.

27 March 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Reporting the progress made with Mr. Lounds's bill; and speaking more particularly of Lord Cuninghby's clause for a drawback on salt. Also, taking occasion "to explain som doubts in relation "to the importing wine from Ireland into England, "brought from Portugal or Spain into that kingdom,

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

"of the growth and product of those kingdoms." Dated from Westminster.

4 April 1707. Letter from five, being a quorum, of the Commissioners for the Iniskilling Brief, to the Mayor and aldermen of the city of Chester. Urging the said mayor and aldermen to stir their fellow citizens to contribute liberally to advantage of the Iniskilling people. Dated from the Bishop's Lobby adjoining to the House of Lords. Signed: Tho. Cantuar, Mountjoy, Michael Cole, Ar. Cole. Tho. Johnson.

8 April 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Giving further particulars respecting the proposed bill for preventing frauds on her Majesty's customs by importing goods into Scotland before, and then bringing them into England after the 1st of next May. Dated from Westminster.

9 April 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Accompanying an enclosed copy of a clause which Mr. Secretary Harley proposed and made part of the bill for preventing frauds on her Majesty's customs; which clause the writer opposed strongly though vainly, as favouring Scotch at the expense of English traders. Dated from Westminster.

12 April 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Touching a rumour that "the Lords will not pass any bill which shall prohibit or lay a duty on wines coming from Scotland after 1st of May." Dated from Westminster.

19 April 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Giving the division of the House of Commons (Ayes 53, Noes 24) in favour of "the clause in the Bill relating to goods and merchandize from Scotland after the 1st of May." Dated from Westminster.

22 April 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Touching the adjournment of the House of Lords, who are about to consult the judges as to the effect of the Act of Union on the matters of customs which the writer has so repeatedly submitted to the consideration of the Chester merchants. Dated from Westminster.

24 April 1707. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Merchants of Chester. Describing the ineffectual course taken by the House of Lords in the matter of the bill to protect her Majesty's customs from fraudulent importations of merchandise into England by way of Scotland; and at the close of the epistle announcing that the session has ended without any legislation for that purpose. "Soc," says the writer, "nothing was done by the Lords yesterday, and just now the guns haue fired, and wee here are expecting the Black rodd with the Queen's commands to attend her in the House of Peers and to put an end to this Sessions. Which is now done. Inclosed is her Majesty's speech, which I stayed to gett copyed by the fauour of Mr. Jodrell our Clerk of Parliament, and am this hour putting foot in stirrup for my house that is in Cheshire, where I must goe before I can wait on you at Chester." Dated from the House of Commons.

20 January 1708. Letter from Nicholas Jennings to James Mainwaring, esq., mayor of the city of Chester. Expressing the writer's astonishment that the mayor and the other magistrates should determine to retire from their agreement with him for the improvement of the navigation of the river Dee.

16 February 1708. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and the other Commissioners there for recruiting her Majesty's forces. For the impressment of recruits to serve in Her Majesty's Land Forces and Marines. Dated from the Council Chamber at Whitehall.

13 November 1708. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Mayor and other citizens of Chester. Gentlemen, "This cums to acquaint you that I came hither last night to attend your service in Parliament, which I shall doe with diligence and fidelity. And because the Votes of our House doe not (nor can) intimate the desines of bills there depending (the Titles of Bills mentioned in the votes sometimes differing from what is contayned in the bodys of the bills), I intend with the votes to send you Abstracts or Breviates of all Publick Bills which relate to trade or commerce, directed to the mayor of your city, and I doubt but that hee will see place them with the votes that you may all of you have free access to them. But then my humble opinion is that you should depute one of each of your Companys skilled in your severall trades to peruse them and report the particulars to his respective Company, and that the Company should then write to your representative in parliament (by that deputy, the next post) their pleasures thereupon.

"This is the best method I can think of for your information and service, who am, gentlemen, Your most faithful friend and servant, Peter Shakerley."

29 June 1709. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. For the efficient relief and best disposal of the distressed German Protestants living within the said mayor's jurisdiction. Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

8 October 1709. Letter from William Godfrey, mayor of Southampton, to the Mayor of the city of West Chester. Begging the mayor of Chester to ascertain from one Darwell, a citizen of Chester, whether he will make due compensation to the sufferers in Southampton from his son's roguery, or would prefer that the same son, Richard Darwell, formerly journeyman to a periwig-maker at Southampton, should be apprehended and tried at the last named town on charges of larceny and horse-stealing. Dated from Southampton.

21 January 1710. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and other Commissioners for recruiting her Majesty's land forces and marines. Urging the said commissioners to renew their endeavours to provide her Majesty's forces with recruits; their lordships letters of the 18th ult. to the same end having failed of satisfactory result. Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

25 March, 1710. Letter from Peter Shakerley to William Allen, esq., Mayor of the city of Chester. Accompanying a copy of "the Leverpool bill" as it received the royal assent. The mayor is instructed that the trade of Chester would be sensibly benefitted by a total remission of the town dues on exports and imports. Dated from Westminster.

20 August 1710. Warrant under the Queen's sign-mannal, addressed to her Majesty's Justices of Assize and Gaol Delivery for the Oxford Circuit, and to the Mayor and Recorder for the city of Chester. For inserting in the next General Pardon for the Oxford Circuit, one Richard Bavand, convicted at the last city of Chester sessions of felony in robbing the dwelling-house of James Whitfield, ironmonger of the last-named city. Dated from the Court at Kensington.

18 December 1710. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and the other Commissioners there for recruiting her Majesty's forces. For a vigorous and fruitful exercise of the powers reposed in the said commissioners for providing her Majesty's Land Forces and Marines with an adequate supply of recruits.

7 December 1711. Letter from the Mayor and Aldermen of Liverpool to the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Chester. Touching the proposal for a light-house on the Skerrys near Hollyhead; and enclosing the writers' reply to the Surveyor General's letter respecting the same proposal. Dated from Liverpool.

19 December 1711. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and the other Commissioners there for recruiting her Majesty's land forces and marines. For the prompt and vigorous exercise of the powers entrusted to them for levying recruits for the Queen's forces. Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

4 April 1712. Letter from Peter Shakerley to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Announcing the arrival in London of "Mr. St. Johns the Lord Bullingbrook's brother, and the British secretary at Utrecht," with intelligence of a General Peace. "For this news," says the writer, "the guns were (by express orders from the Court) fired at the Tower; and in the churches the Bells, in the streets the Bonfires, and in the windows the illuminations proclaimed the joy of the people." Dated from Westminster.

31 May 1712. Letter from the Surveyor General to John Minshall, esq., Mayor of the City of Chester. Warning the City of Chester to do nothing to the infringement of her Majesty's rights or to the hurt of her interests by their operations for the enclosure of Saltney Marsh and Houghton Green, both of which are Crown lands. Dated from London.

23 June 1713. Letter from Sir Henry Banbury to the Mayor and citizens of Chester. Asking them to re-elect the writer, as their representative in parliament. Dated from Dublin.

30 July, 1714. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. For the vigorous execution of the laws against Papists and Nonjurors being dangerous to her Majesty's government. Dated from the Council Chamber at Kensington.

20 July 1715. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of the city of Chester. For a zealous and vigorous execution of laws against Papists and suspected Papists; his Majesty having received certain advices " from abroad, that the Pretender is preparing to invade " this kingdom, encouraged thereto by the riotous and " tumultuous proceedings set on foot and carried on at " home by a restless party in his favour." Dated from the Council Chamber at St. James's.

8 March 1716. Copy of a letter from Peter Shakerley to Sir Thomas Aston, bart., at his lodgings in Thilt Street over against the the Morrock near So-ho, London. Congratulating Sir Thomas on the contemptuous rejection by the House of Commons of one Johnson's petition for leave to bring in a " River Weaver bill." Having described the manner of this rejection, the writer says in conclusion, " And thus we have thrown this Kite out " of our house, with the like good fortune as you threw " out the Kite last year at the Quarter Sessions at " Northwich." Together with the same copy of his letter to Sir Thomas Aston, is Mr. Peter Shakerley's letter to Roger Comberbach, esq., recorder of Chester in which letter it is asserted that the distasteful Bill for making the river Weaver navigable was introduced to the House of Commons " by an Alderman of Liverpool " who hath not one foot of land either in our county " or our city, and whose design in it (obvious to every " body) was only to promote his trade of exporting " Rock-salt to Ireland, and to ruin the brine-pits in " our county." Dated from Westminster.

(d.) Additional Letters and Notes.

1550. Muster Roll of an Irish Regiment serving in Ireland. Also a paymaster's bill for the same regiment, headed, " The Irish Men's full pay here ending the " xx^s of May and so discharged from hence, whose " nombre and monethes pay appereth in third cedule."

1580. Petitions and Letters. A packet of correspondence, petitions and documents, containing a file of papers relating to certain slanderous words spoken in Chester by one Francis Edderman, a surgeon, against her Majesty the Queen. This packet contains the following matters:—

(a.) Copy of a letter (the original of which is preserved in the Letter Book, vol. I.) from Sir Francis Walsingham to the Mayor of Chester, dated 18 April 1576; ordering that proceedings against Francis Edderman for slanderous and lewd words against her Majesty be stayed at Chester till the magistrates of that city receive further instructions from the Privy Council.

(b.) Copy of a letter, dated 29 November 1578, from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. Acknowledging their lordships' receipt of the said mayor's letters, with examinations and answers, touching lewd words spoken by Henry Houghton and Andrew Tailor; and ordering that the former be held in custody to answer for his speech, and that Francis Edderman, to whom Andrew Tailor assigns the original utterance of the wicked speeches, be strictly examined respecting the same words.

(c.) Copy of a letter, dated 13 July 1576, from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of West Chester, ordering the enlargement of Francis Edderman from prison, to which he was committed long since, on the evidence of a single witness, who was his private enemy, for slanderous words alleged to have been uttered by him against the Queen.

(d.) Examination taken, by the Mayor and Magistrates of Chester on 11 December, 18 Elizabeth, of Francis Edderman, late of the same city, surgeon. " Examined " what speeche or talk he hath heretofore used or " spoken to any person or in any place that the Queenes " Majestie hath had children, he saith he never spake " any suche worde, neither ever hath vttered or used any " such speeche; but, saith he, this examinant three " yeres paste or therabouts was in this citie accused by " one Mathew Smyth his mortall enemy, who sought the " examinant's blond for the supposed speaking of such " like, which this examinant never uttered."

(e.) Set of fourteen interrogatories to be propounded to the same Francis Edderman at his examination concerning the same slanderous words.

(f.) Examination of Francis Edderman, surgeon, taken 14 March, 18 Elizabeth, before Henry Hardware, mayor, and the magistrates of Chester, respecting slanderous words said to have been spoken by him against the Queen.

(g.) Declaration of Mathew Smith to William Gerrard, esq., on 14 March, 18 Elizabeth, as to certain slanderous speeches made to him the said Mathew Smith against the Queen by Francis Edderman. The declaration alleges that at a private interview between the declarer and Francis Edderman, the said Francis averred, " The Erie of Leycester is soe greate with the " Queene, that he may doe what he will, and my Lorde " of Leycester saye the worde it is don, and it is reason." Further, it is declared, " For, said the said Francis, " my Lorde of Leycester hath had two children by " the Queene. Eyc, quod this examinant, that is euer a " lye, for I never heard thereof. Well, well, said the " said Francis, they saye so; Mary, I tell you this in " secret as to a frende, and bury it heere, for ells it is " but your yea and my nay." The deposition continues, that in his grief at the vile words the deponent communicated them in confidence to his friend Alexander Harrison, a surgeon, who enjoined him to report the wicked speeches without delay to William Gerrard, esq.

(h.) Examination, taken before William Gerrard, esq., on 14 March, 18 Elizabeth, of Alexander Harrison, chirurgeon, and the Queen's sworn servant, who testifies that Matthew Smith reported to him in the alleged manner the words said to have been spoken by Edderman, and he, the present examinant, urged the said Mathew to communicate the matter at once to William Gerrard, esq.

(i.) Another examination of Francis Edderman, taken on 15 March, touching the same matter.

(k.) Copy of a letter, dated 22 April 1576, from the Mayor of Chester to Sir Francis Walsingham, Secretary of State, in reply to the Secretary's order for staying proceedings against Francis Edderman.

—, 1580. Roll of Letters and Bills, labelled: " 1580. Soldiers' Notes and Letters about them." The majority of the papers of this roll have no relation to soldiers or military affairs, and were not dated in 1580. Together with writings of no interest, the file holds:—

(a.) Papers relating to the appointment of Thomas Lymall to order the victualling of soldiers passing through Chester, and the transport of victuals to Ireland, in the place of Bevan Beverley, sent to Dublin to order the victualling service there.

(b.) Copy of a letter (dated 18 Feb. 1580) from the Mayor of Chester to Lords of the Council. Touching the misadventures of two ships laden with provisions of food for troops in Dublin.

(c.) Copy of a letter (dated 3 January 1581) from the Mayor of Chester to Lord —. Touching certain indecent speeches uttered publicly during sermon-time against the preacher by Mr. Aston, son-in-law of Mr. Edward Stanley of Ewlow, co. Flint, who was for the same speeches committed by the mayor and his brethren to prison. Also, touching the commitment to prison of Mistress Stanley of Ewlow, who demanded the enlargement of her son-in-law, Mr. Aston, in an unseemly manner, and afterwards refused to give security for her appearance before " your lordship" (to whom the letter is addressed) and the other Commissioners for causes ecclesiastical. It does not appear to whom the letter was addressed, but it is clear that Mrs. Stanley stood in some near relation to his lordship, who had " greate care of " the well doing of the said Mistress Stanley and all " her children."

(d.) Copy of a letter (dated 4 January 1581) from two or more of the magistrates of the city of Chester to Lord —. In reference to Mr. Aston's unseemly speeches on St. Stephen's day against Mr. Christopher Goodman, the preacher, and the subsequent violence and misbehaviour of Mr. Aston's mother-in-law, Mrs. Stanley, of Ewlow, who " is kine unto our good lord " the Erie of Derby."

(e.) Copy of a letter (dated 14 February 1581) from the mayor of Chester to Lord —. Announcing the apologies and submission made by Mistress Stanley of Ewlow to the writer, and also to Mr. Christopher Goodman. Also touching the same lady's readiness to conform in matters of religion, " both in going to the " church, hearing of devine service and sermon, and in " communicating according as a good Christian ought " to doe."

(f.) Copy of a letter (dated 28 June 1578) from the Earl of Leicester to the Mayor and other Justices of the Peace of Chester. Ordering that at least so much provision may be made for the prisoners in Chester gaol as will save them from starvation. " So," writes the earl, " have I thought good to move you to assemble " yourselves together and to take some good order that " the same prisoners maye be releved at the leste wise " as farr forth as by the lawes you are bounden to " releve them. It is very pyttfull to here of that " prisoners are dede by famyne since the last Assizes, " and those that be lyveinge are very many and very " feble in like perill of death; which I praye you to " have in good consideration."

(g.) Copy of the Order and Proclamation, dated 28 June 1578, of Robert Earl of Leicester, and Chamberlain of the County Palatine of Chester. Ordering that three of the four annual Quarter Sessions for the said county be held at Chester, unless pestilence or other urgent necessity should require them to be held at Nantwich or Northwich, and the fourth of annual Quarter Sessions to be held either at Northwich or Knottersford.—Also, other papers, dated in the same year 1578, respecting the same appointment for the holding of Sessions.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

(h.) Copy of a letter (dated 1 January 1579) from the Mayor of Chester to Lord ——. Announcing that a letter, posted by his lordship for Ireland, has been forwarded thither under the charge of Robert Ratclif, postmaster for Dublin.

(i.) Copy of the acknowledgment (dated 2 November 1580) by the Mayor of Chester of his receipt from William Glaseor, of the same city, esq., of the sum of 500*l.*, to be expended on the coat-money, conduct money and transport of soldiers appointed for service in Ireland; the said 500*l.* having been received by the same William Glaseor as part of a sum of 1,500*l.* appointed for the same service “by the bandes of William Burton” and Richard Wingfield, servants to Sir Henry Wallop, knight, tresorour at warre within the realme of “Ireland.”

(k.) Copy of a letter (dated 24 December 1580) from the Mayor of Chester to Lords of the Council. Accompanying copies of the examinations taken by Sir Edmonde Trafford, knt., sheriff of co. Lancaster, touching the disorder of twenty-four soldiers levied in the said county for service in Ireland.

(l.) Copy of a letter (dated 6 April 1581) from the Mayor of Chester to Lords of the Council. Respecting one Henry Houghton, a disfranchised citizen of Chester, who is described in strong terms as a cheat and drunkard, and an incorrigible disturber of the Queen's peace.

(m.) Deposition of Edmond Devenishe, of Dublin, merchant (signed by him on 14 August 1581), that he was making the passage in the Margaret of Helbry from Dublin to Holyhead, when the said vessel was attacked, boarded, and plundered by pirates in the bay of Holyhead.

(n.) Copy of a letter (dated 7 February 1580) from the Mayor of Chester to Lords of the Council. A precise account of the money received and expended for provision of victuals for troops in Ireland; and also of the quantities of divers provision shipped for the soldiers from Chester to Dublin. The account of disbursements runs thus:—

Wheate after x.s. le Chester b₃, for 800
b₂ = iiii*l.*
Manlte after iiii.s. viii*l.* the Chester bushell—400 b₂ = iiii*l.* xiii*l.* vi.s. iiii*l.* } v^c.xx*l.*
Cheeses after ii*l.* le pound, for mⁱ mⁱ
mⁱ cth wgt. = xxvi*l.* xiii.s. iiii*l.*

9 January 1583. Letter from the Earl of Derby to the Mayor of Chester. Touching the privileges of the Mayor and citizens of Chester on the river Dee, and suggesting that the mayor should appoint some discreet person to urge the city's case before the Council. The writer declares his friendliness towards the city, and insists that he has “but faithfullie discharged the trust” which hath bene imposed on him touching the “Admiraltie.” Dated from Wregran.

16 February, 1593. Letter from W. Fitzwylliam to the Mayor of Chester. Directing the mayor to forward to the Lord Treasurer with all expedition by the ordinary post, two accompanying packets and a roll of parchment, to be delivered to the Mayor by Thomas Knip of Leverpoole. Dated from the Castle of Dublin.

29 March 1594. Letter from W. Fitzwylliam to the Mayor of Chester. Directing the mayor to forward an accompanying dispatch to the Lord Treasurer by the ordinary post. Dated from Dublin.

2 April 1594. A collection of Papers, being the examinations John Warneford, Richard Ody and Edward Cowper, respecting their birth and education, and the circumstances of their journey to Chester.

29 April, 37 Elizabeth. Acknowledgment by John Warneford, son of Mistress Elizabeth, that he has received the “tenne French crownes and three double” pistolettes,” heretofore taken from him and placed in the custody of M^r David Lloid, mayor of Chester, and also his horse, saddle, and bridle for which moneys and chattels the said John Warneford gives an acquittance to the said mayor.—Also a similar acknowledgement and acquittance (of the same date) by Richard Ody, son of Thomas Ody, in respect to ten French crowns and three pistoletts, rated in value at vii*l.* viiis.

1596. File of paper Muster-rolls (much frayed and defaced) of soldiers levied for Irish service, and conducted to Chester from one or another of the following counties: Cambridge, Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, Huntingdon, Lincoln, Oxon, Nottingham, Leicester, Gloucester, Somerset, Brecknock, Anglesea, Carmarthen, Carnarvon, Cardigan, Montgomery, Pembroke, Merioneth, Radnor. Some of the lists of this file are so worn or otherwise injured, that it is uncertain to which counties they relate.

28 January 1597. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lord Treasurer of England. For the correction and redress of grievances endured at the hands of the customers of Chester by Ales Massey, widow of William Massey, late of the said city, alderman, who on offering to pay duties on certain Gascoyn wines pertaining to her as her said late husband's widow and administratrix, was by the same receivers of customs denied the consideration and allowance to which she was entitled as the widow of a free citizen of Chester.

10 March 1597. Letter dated from London, and signed “Geo. Beuerley,” to Mr. Thomas Fletcher, mayor of the city of Chester. Touching the urgent need for a supply of bread-corn to her Majesty's garrison at Carrickfergus, and enjoining the said mayor to carry out with “all secresie” as well as the “greatest expedition” the Lord Treasurer's orders for the relief of the garrison. “The quantitie,” says the writer, “required by my lord” is not great, yet it is good you give out you are to provide and shippe no more but 80 quarters. If the “scarsitie of this kynde of graine be so greate as I hoope in God it is not, then rather then faile you” muste require for her Majesties service, such as hane “stoore or any porcion of that kynde, to deliuer everie” man a parcell to make vp this proporcion. Consider “the gentlemen dwelling near the cittie, that are come to lye within the cittie. For they are like to sell you” wheate. And take care they sett on an extraordinarie “number of thrashers, because the expedition of this” thing is much looked after. Also it maye please you to be presentlie provided of a Good Bark to lye in “readines, wheré they maye make sayle with the firste” wyndes, and not to staie for spring-tydes. If I should “appointe any of my servauntts to attende you in this” matter, yt wolde make to greate a shewe, and therefore I do forebare.” At the end of the long note the writer says, “I will vse the beste meaus I can to” supplye the Poorte of Chester with some rie from “hence or from other partes, if I may know it will” “please the cuntrye.”

7 June 1598. Letter from Richard Gardener to the Mayor of Chester, marked on the cover “Haste, Haste, Poste Haste.” An urgent request that any despatches for the Irish government lying in the said mayor's hands, or resting at Liverpool, may be no longer detained for fair winds, but may be sent forthwith by the bearer Nicholas Pyne to Holyhead, or be conveyed thither by any special messenger sent with them from court. At Holyhead, “there shalbe a boate ready attending to bringe them” over by tyding and other paynes of rowing, although “the wyndes shoulde confynye contrarye.” Dated from Dublin.

15 July 1598. Rough draft of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Announcing the departure with a fair wind of six hundred soldiers for Ireland under the command of Captain Rugby. And further announcing that three hundred Welsh soldiers, appointed for Irish service, remain in Chester awaiting the arrival of the hundred soldiers ordered from Carnarvon to join them at the said city; Captain Skipwith, the appointed conductor of the entire Welsh contingent, deeming himself to have no authority to cross the water with only three hundred, when he was instructed to take four hundred soldiers to Ireland.

23 July 1598. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. Directing the said mayor to take up shipping at Chester and Liverpool, and make all needfull arrangements for transporting six hundred soldiers from these ports to Longhelfe in Ireland.

29 July 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to Lord Burchley, the Lord High Treasurer of England. Touching a force of one thousand soldiers appointed to be sent from England and Wales over to Ireland; six hundred men of which force have already crossed the water, whilst the remaining four hundred of them (under the command of Captain Skipwith), that is to say, the four hundred levied in the Welsh counties, are detained at Chester by contrary winds to her Majesty's great cost. Had not Captain Skipwith insisted on waiting for the hundred soldiers from the county of Carnarvon, three hundred of the

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

Welsh force might have gone to Ireland with the English soldiers. The Lord Treasurer is entreated to give orders for defraying the heavy charges of dieting and transporting so considerable a body of men.

8 August 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Respecting arrangements and proposals for the transportation of a thousand foot soldiers from Chester to Dublin. The writer begs for prompt repayment of the sum of v^l.xiii. li. xiii.s. x.d. which he has laid out on the diet of the same soldiers on land. As for the expense of transporting the soldiers, who are to be sent to Loughfoyle, the writer says that some ship-owners demand 5s. for the carriage of every man, whilst others only ask iii.s. and some only iii.s. per man. He is of opinion that the lowest sum is a sufficient fare. Dated from Chester.

9 August 1598. Official copy of the instructions given by Lords of the Council to James Ware, gent., sent down to the portes of Chester and Liuepool to provide and set the shipping of c^h horse and v^l foote that are appointed to be imbarqued at that porte. Commencing with a statement that "there are the number of 600 soldiers leyed in sondry counties of the realme, and also 100 horses proydyd by Sir Samuell Bagnall, knt., colonnell of those forces that are sent at this present vnto Loughfoyle in the realme of Ireland, which horse and foote are appointed to be imbarqued at the porte of Chester or Leverpoole, Holbrie, and New key."—Also, rough draft of a letter, dated 6 September 1598 (probably from the mayor of Chester to the mayor of Liverpool), touching the entertainment and transport of a portion of the same force.

10 August 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Cecyll, knt., her Majesty's Principal Secretary. Giving particulars of the writer's action for the execution of the orders of the Lords of the Privy Council for the entertainment at Chester of certain troops, and for their transportation to Ireland. The writer begs for a speedy remittance of money, as he has taken up much of his neighbours' money by way of loan to do her Majesty's bidding in this matter.

20 August 1598. Letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Mayor of Liverpool. Giving the last-named mayor assurance of the sufficiency of Mr. Ware's instructions in the matter of the 100 horse and six hundred foot-soldiers ordered to Ireland, and requiring him to make stay of shipping in the port of Liverpool for the transportation of some of the force to Loughfoyle.

25 August 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Giving particulars of the writer's care for the speedy transmission to Dublin, via Holyhead, of their said lordships' dispatches to the Lords Justices of Ireland, and to the Lord Lieutenant General of Her Majesty's forces in Ireland, in obedience to their lordships' letter, dated on the 21st and received by the writer on the 24th instant. The writer adds, "I doe alsoe further signifye vnto your Honours that the 600 footemen soldiers by your Honours directed hither to be transported to Loughfoyle are already hither come together with 30 of the 100 horse likewise hither appointed, whom I purpose with all onvenient speed to hasten hence, hauinge in good redynes both shipping, victuals and all other necessities proydyd."

27 August 1598. Letter from Sir Robert Cecyll, her Majesty's Principal Secretary, to the Mayor of Chester and Mr. James Ware. Ordering that certain foot companies now at Chester, and in readiness to cross the sea to Ireland, be sent thither by the first fair wind, together with those of Sir Samuel Baghenall's fifty horse soldiers who have come to the said port, without waiting for the arrival of all the cavalry, as their presence on the other side the water is urgently required "by the late accydent in Ireland." The writer adds, "And for oates, a hundred quarters wilbe sufficient, the horse being nowe not to be sent to Loughfoyle, but to some other places where their waitees may with better commoditie be supplied." Dated from the Court.

8 September 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to Lords of the Council. Respecting arrangements for entertaining at Chester and transporting from Chester to Dublin the "25 horses and 200 fote allowed to Sir Richard Bingham, knt., for her Majesties service into Ireland." Also touching the mayor's care in forwarding via Holyhead certain of their said Lordships' dispatches to the Lords of the Council in Ireland.

11 September 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lords of the Council, in reply to two letters (dated respectively on 24 July and 10 August ast) from the same Lords. Touching the arrangements and charges for victualling and transporting from Chester to Ireland "600 foot men and 100 horses with their severall ryders." The writer concludes, "The whole sum of money by me in this sum disbursed amounteth to the somme of ix^l. xv. xix.li.s. x.d., whiche I moste humble beseeche your Lordships may be paid unto the said Styles, a man of sufficiency for receipt thereof. For which purpose only he is sent vpp by me to attend you."

20 September 1598. Letter from Thomas Bulkley, Mayor of Bewarris, to the Mayor of Chester. Accompanying a packet of despatches "putte on land on this coast," and "from constable to constable brought to this towne," for transmission to Lords of the Council. The mayor of Chester is entreated to move their said lordships to remunerate the writer and the constables of divers parishes for their pains in forwarding to their lordships these and other letters from Ireland.

25 September 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to Lords of the Council. Announcing the arrival in Chester of Sir Richard Bingham with his thirty horse-soldiers, and asking what order is to be taken for allowances in respect to the same cavalry; Sir Richard alleging that he should for his horses receive the same allowances as Sir Samuell Bagnall had for his horses. Dated from Chester.

7 October 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Rt. Worshipful Sir William Brereton, knt., and—Maynwaring, esq., or either of them. Accompanying a letter from the Lords of the Council to the said Mayor, "together with a copie of one other letter sent (by their said lordships) vnto the erle of Essex, and of a copie of a certificate touching a muteny in Toceter by the 300 souldiers leyed in London and marching hitherwards for Ireland."

12 October 1598. Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Chester to the Lords of the Council. Announcing that "the horse and 200 footemen appointed vnder the charge of Sir Richard Bingham, knt., have taken passage for Ireland, and have hadd a merry wynde." The writer continues, "The 800 footemen appointed vnder Capt^e Frances Stafford, together with himself, are here aryved, and their shipping and victuals * * * and and them selves all readyly furnished, and the wynde likely to serve, are in passage downe to the water-side."

—1598. A Bill of the Particular Somes of money disbursed by Thomas Fletcher, maior of the citie of Chester, aswell for the dyet by land and by sea of 1,000 fotemen souldiers latelie thither appointed, as also for their transportation over to Dublin within the realme of Ireland, and other charges incident to the said service, by vertue of letters from the Lords of Her Majesties moste Honorable Priuey Counsaile of the xviiith of June last past, 1598, to the said maior addressed. The total charges for the diet of the soldiers by land being cccxxxiii.li. iii.s. iii.d.; and for their diet, &c. at sea, being cxxxviii.li. ix.s. vi.d.

1600-1605. File of warrants and certificates from commanding officers in Ireland, for the safe passage to their homes in England of sick soldiers returning from Ireland on account of their unfitness for military service; with lists of the names of the invalid soldiers. Some of the warrants being signed by Sir Henry Docwra, knt., governor of her Majesty's forces residing at Loughfoyle; and one of them by Sir Arthur Chichester, knt., governor of the town and garrison of Knockfargus, both the Clandiboyes, with all the territories thereunto belonging in the province of Ulster.

43 Elizabeth. File of Muster-Rolls of soldiers levied for service in Ireland, in one or another of the following English counties,—Bucks., Northampton, Stafford, Bedford, Surrey, Hertford, Salop, Derby, Flint, Warwick, and the county Palatine of Chester. Each roll being in the form of an indenture between deputy-lieutenants of a county, of the one part, and of the person appointed to conduct the soldiers levied in the same county to the port of Chester, of the other part.

10 May 1602. A true Muster Booke of the 1,500 souldiers appointed to be at the citie of Chester by the xxth day of May 1602.

31 January 1609. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. For the prevention of the sale and manufacture of starch, which article is too generally made and sold in defiance of his Majesty's politic proclamation against a manufacture, greatly and scandalously wasteful of corn that should be used for human food.

25 February 1609. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester and the officers of the port

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

there.—Begging that all facilities for crossing to Ireland may be afforded to all persons licensed to travel thither by William Cockin, sheriff and alderman of London, and Governor of the Plantation of Ulster, or by his deputy William Towrson, or by the Chief Agent for the plantation of Ulster, John Rowley, “the citie of London” having undertaken a plantation in the Province of “Ulster.”—Dated from Whitehall.

24 October 1609. Letter from Hugh Gwynn and Robert Owen, aldermen of Ruthin, to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. Announcing that, the plague being understood to be in Chester, no inhabitants of that town will be allowed to enter Ruthin for the purpose of attending the fair about to be held there, unless they bring with them certificates (signed by the magistrates of Chester), “that they and their places of dwelling are free of any suspicion of the same sickness.”

12 January 1610. Letter from the Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral, to the Mayor of Chester.—Requesting the said mayor to furnish “with victuals for three months for the number of threescore men,” his Majesty’s ship “the Lyon’s Whelpe,” that has entered the port of Chester in urgent need of supplies. The mayor is assured that “for the same within five daies sight of your bills of exchequer and your accounts avouched by yourselfe, the Captain, Purser or other officers of your port, current payment shall be made” by Sir Thomas Bludder, victualler for his Majesty’s “Navy.”

7 July 1610. Letter from Sir Arthur Chichester to the Mayor of Chester. Requesting the mayor of Chester to furnish his Majesty’s ship, the Lyon’s Whelpe, commanded by Captaine Owen Wynne, with victuals for threescore men for two or three months, in order that the said captain may go with his ship and crew in search and pursuit of a pirate “who hath lately robbed manie, both Englishes and Scottische passengers that traded to Log-foile.” Dated from Myriam, near Dublin.

10 July 1610. Letter from William Leicester, mayor of Chester and Edward Gamull, to Thomas Gamull, recorder, and Hugh Glasceur, Burgess of parliament for the same city. Begging the said recorder and member of parliament to take measures that “the parties that hath the licence for yarne out of Ireland” may cease to exact five shillings “per packe of all yarne” brought to the port of Chester over and above the rate of duty charged upon Irish yarn imported at “Lerpole.”

31 July 1610. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. Announcing that their lordships have directed the Lord Deputy of Ireland to send to the said mayor “Coward and Barret, two notable pirates” lately taken in Ireland, “whom the same mayor is instructed to receive and hold in custody,” “that such further order may be taken concerning them as shalbe fitt.” Dated from Whitehall.

15 August 1610. Letter from Sir Thomas Bludder to Mr. William Leicester, mayor of Chester. Accompanying an order for payment in full of a demand for 199l. 14s. 3d., for the victualling of his Majesty’s ship “The Lyon’s Whelpe,” for sixty men and three months of eighty-four days; which charge, however, is shown to be excessive by 52l. 14s. 8d. over the usual and regular allowances, and also to be inaccurate in several other particulars.

18 August 1610. Letter from Mr. Jo. Bingley to the Mayor, recorder, and aldermen of the city of Chester. Expressing the writer’s desire to serve the citizens of Chester as their Burgess in parliament, in lieu of their late member, the worthy Mr. Glasceur, whose death is an event of recent occurrence. In support of his petition the writer refers to his past expressions of affection for Chester, and also to the nearness of his “habitation” and residence to the parliament.—Dated from St. Steevens in Westminster.

13 October 1610. Letter from Edward Pennaddock to the Mayor of Chester. Certifying that one Thomas Dade of Bennerton, who is detained at Chester on suspicion of felony, is the son of the writer’s well-reputed neighbour Thomas Dade, who has been wont to place confidence in and to live affectionately with his said son. From the letter it appears that having had a quarrel with his wife, the younger Dade in ill humour suddenly mounted one of his father’s horses and rode away from home, taking with him certain moneys and trifling articles belonging to his father then absent from home. The writer is of opinion that everything found on the younger Dade, not belonging to him, was the property of his father, who has no purpose to charge the young man with a felony. The young man has surely taken “an idle voyage or journey,” but is no criminal.

1612. The humble petition of Jasper Gillam, Keeper of the Pentice, to Mr. John Ratcliffe, mayor, Thomas

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

Gamull, esq., recorder, and the aldermen and common-councillors of Chester. For an augmentation of stipend, in consideration of the petitioner’s recent loss of a small sum hitherto allowed to him for “keeping the conduit,” and in consideration of expenses he has borne in setting forth the Pentice banquets. “That where” runs the preamble of the petition, “this Petitioner and his predecessors, according to the auncient and awdable custome of the said citie, have vsually from tyme to tyme vpon Saboth and Festival dayes prouided certayne small quantites of wyne, fruite, and other viandes of the season for a small repaste after dyner, tendinge aswell to drawe a brotherlie meetinge and to contynue a perpetuall love betwene your honours Worships, as alsoe to grace the congregation afterwards with your reverend presence in hearing of God’s most sacred worde; That the Petitioner haueing diuers tymes made greater provision then the Company being small and stinted to a small rate have defrayed, hath sustayned some loss thereby.” The petitioner urges further that he “is besydes at some charges in keepinge the said Pentice vpon the said festiuals with flowers and rushes.”

1612. The humble petition of John Blanchard to Mr. John Ratcliffe, mayor, and to the aldermen, sheriffs and common council of Chester, that he may be admitted to the freedom of the city. In support of his prayer the petitioner urges that “never haueing bene brought vpp in any manual trade, he cannot nor will not be in any wise prejudiciall either to the whole corporacion or to any fraternitie therein.”

14 March 1612. Letter from the Earl of Clanricard to the Mayor of the city of Chester. Begging that a watch, stolen from his lordship on the occasion of his last journey into Ireland in Mr. Dowson’s house at Chester, and now in the Mayor’s custody, may be delivered to Mr. Fraunceis the postmaster there.—Also, on the same sheet of paper, the acknowledgment of John Fraunceis, postmaster of Chester, that he has taken possession of the watch in accordance with the earl’s direction.

15 June 1612. Letter from Gerard Massye to Mr. John Ratcliffe, mayor of Chester. Respecting the clearness of the evidence that one Thomas Almond, apprehended in Chester on suspicion of felony, “hath stolen the peece of plate called a beaker from Susan Greene of Wyggan.” Dated from Wygan.

17 June 1612. Letter from H. Tonnesend to the Mayor of Chester. Setting forth how urgently the writer is entreated by the Lord Mayor of London to acquit William Hodges of certain costs which he has been ordered to pay the said Mayor of Chester. The writer “will not alter that he hath done,” but will assent to any allowance which the Mayor of Chester may make to William Hodges. Dated from Ludlow Castle.

1611. Letter from the Earl of Salisbury to the Mayor of Chester. For the impetrate transmission vid Holyhead to Dublin of an accompanying dispatch to the Lord Deputy of Ireland.

22 January 1611. Acknowledgment by Thomas Mallory that he has borrowed of the Mayor and his bretheren of Chester six several books, the names of which are given by the scholar. Signed, Thos. Mallory.

25 January, 1611. Letter from Sir Thomas Bludder to Mr. Ratcliffe, mayor of Chester. Respecting an account of moneys for provisions furnished by the said mayor for his Majesty’s service, to divers important items of which bill for victuals the writer makes exceptions.

26 April 1611. Letter from the Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral, to the Mayor of Westchester. Requiring the Mayor to call before him a tailor of Chester, named Richard Hiecocke, who with two of his men has obtained unlawful possession of certain valuable goods that were shipt from Chester to James Duffe, merchant of Dublin, in a vessel which was driven by violent weather on the Isle of Man, where the said goods came into Richard Hiecocke’s hands.

2 October 1611. Letter from Sir Arthur Chichester to the Mayor of Chester. Enclosing a letter by the same writer to the Lord Admiral in behalf of “one Gabriel Bunnage, who was founde heere in a pirates ship, but no matter to be layd to his charge that I could heare of.” Dated from the Castle of Dublin.

23 October 1611. Mr. Mayor of Chester. I thank you for your care in conveying my letters to my Neice of Derby. I have receaued the last, and I pray retorne this to her. And so I commit you to God. Your loving friend R. Salisbury. Whitehall.

1 November 1611. Letter from the Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral, to Mr. John Ratcliffe, mayor of Chester. Acknowledging the receipt of two letters from the said mayor respecting Gabriel Bunadge, and also a letter by the Lord Deputy of Ireland respecting the same prisoner, whose enlargement from prison is hereby ordered, the writer understanding "there is nothing to be objected against him."

— Orders of John Ratclyffe mayor, and his brethren the aldermen of Chester, for the more orderly devout observance of Sunday in Chester, where the sabbath "is manie times much abused and profaned by keepinge open of shoppes, sellinge of wares and victuals, bringinge in and caryinge of burdens through the streetes on horses and otherwise, and hauntinge of tavernes and alehouses."

30 January — Letter from Richard Fruer to the Mayor of Chester. Since his departure from Chester the writer has received information that a quantity of pepper, far greater than the quantity delivered to him by Mr. Drinkwater, came from Carnarvon, and was furtively delivered to a carrier of Chester. The mayor is prayed to examine Mr. Drinkwater about the matter.

— Letter from Sir Arthur Chichester to the Mayor of West Chester. Requiring the mayor to receive the body of Gabriel Bunadge (?), lately apprehended on suspicion of piracy, and to keep him prisoner till further notice. This letter is barely legible, and the date is obliterated.

19 February 1613. Letter from Richard Forster, mayor of Dublin, to the Mayor of Chester. Inquiring what truth there may be in the report that Chester is stricken with the pestilence; the writer's object being to ascertain what precautions he ought to take for the preservation of the people of his own city from the perils of intercourse with voyagers from the English Port.

20 February 1613. Letter from John Bingley to the Mayor and aldermen of Chester. Offering to serve as one of the burgesses of parliament for the representation of the citizens of Chester, and declaring the writer's cordial and disinterested love of the city he would fain serve in that capacity.

12 September 1613. Letter from Sir John Savage to the Mayor of Chester. Begging the said mayor to interest himself "in the behalfe of this berer John Brereton, who is desirous to become a townesman in Chester and to keepe an Inn there." Dated from Rocksavage.

13 September 1613. Letter from Sir Thomas Smyth to Mr. Robert Whitbeck, mayor of the city of Chester. In behalf of the letter's bearer, John Brereton, "whoe is desirous to become a citizen in Chester and to keepe an Inn there," and who is commended to the mayor's kindly consideration. Dated from Hatherton.

10 December 1613. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chester. For the strict and due observance in the said city of the newly published rules and orders for keeping Lent. Dated from Whitehall.

(c.) Rolls and Files.

(1.) Amerciaments and Estreats of the following years of our Lord.—1477, 1500 to 1538, 1550 to 1553, 1555, 1556, 1560, 1567, 1571, 1586, 1591, 1594, 1598, 1599, 1601, 1602, 1603, 1609, 1610, 1611, 1615, 1616, 1617, 1629, 1635.

(2.) Assembly Orders (rolled or filed) of the following years of our Lord.—1409-1534, 1557-69, 1570-76, 1592-3, 1597, 1602, 1609, 1611, 1615, 1616-18, 1620-1, 1626-7, 1628-9, 1631-2, 1632-3, 1635-6, 1637-8, 1639-40, 1640-2, 1643-4, 1645-6, 1646-7, 1647-8, 1648-9, 1651-3, 1654-5, 1656-7, 1657-60, 1662, 1663-6, 1666-75, 1682, 1684-5, 1688-90, 1697-1703, 1703-8, 1708-15, 1715-23, 1723-33, 1733-40, 1740-54, 1754-64, 1765-75, 1775-90, 1790-99, 1799-1805, 1805-1811, 1811-18, 1820-33, 1833-5, 1840-48.

(3.) Bakers' Presentments of 2 Elizabeth.

(4.) Declarations, of the years of our Lord, 1558 to 1661.

(5.) Depositions and Examinations, of the years of our Lord.—1553, 1567, 1591 and 1592, 1611 to 1612, 1620 and 1621.

(6.) Enrolments of Deeds, of the years of our Lord.—1334, 1358, 1388, 1393 to 1402, 1406, 1428, 1444, 1447, 1449, 1456, 1470, 1483, 1562 to 1583, 1603 to 1623.

(7.) Fines, in files labelled with the following notes of the years in which they were levied.—1527 to 1538, 1550 to 1553, 1556 and 1557, 1563 to 1565, 1564 to 1569, 1571 to 1608, 1594 to 1608, 1615 to 1618, 1614 to 1632, 1632 to 1638, 1638 to 1647, 1649 to 1655, 1651 to 1653, 1655 and 1656, 1660 to 1666, 1665 and 1666, 1667 to 1670, 1671 to 1675, 1676 to 1679, 1680 to 1684, 1683 to 1688, 1688 to 1694, 1694 to 1707, 1707 to 1715, 1715 to 1724, 1724 to 1733, 1732 to 1742, 1742 to 1752, 1746 to 1751, 1753 to 1764, 1762 and 1763, 1764 to 1770, 1778 to 1797, 1798 to 1805, 1806 to 1812. From these numbers the reader may infer that considerable confusion has crept into the arrangement of these documents.

(8.) Freemen's Rolls for years of our Lord, 1538 to 1805. A complete series with the exception of the roll for the years 1611 to 1634, which is missing. For records of earlier admissions to the municipal franchise, reference should be made to the older Mayors' Books.

(9.) Inquisitions. Verdicts and certificates of post-mortem and other inquisitions, filed or made into rolls or packets. On parchment, for the following years of our Lord.—1432, 1434, 1521, 1540, 1560, 1561 to 1571, 1562, 1563, 1566, 1568, 1576, 1579, 1580, 1582, 1585, 1587, 1588, 1589, 1590, 1591, 1593, 1595, 1598, 1600, 1601, 1602, 1603, 1611, 1613, 1617, 1624, 1625 to 1630, 1668 to 1687, 1795. On paper, for the years,—1550 to 1600, 1700 to 1730, 1730 to 1750, 1750 to 1770, 1770 to 1789, 1780 to 1800, 1800 to 1830.

(10.) Mayor's Court. Files for the following years:—1547 to 1558, 1559 to 65, 1568 to 73, 1573 and 4, 1576-7, 1578-9, 1590-1, 1594-5, 1595-6, 1597-8, 1598-9, 1600-1, 1602-3, 1603-4, 1604-5, 1606-7, 1607-8, 1608-10, 1610-11, 1611-12, 1612-13, 1614-15, 1615-16, 1616-17, 1619-20, 1622-3, 1623-4, 1624-5, 1627-8, 1628-9, 1629-30, 1630-31, 1633-4, 1634-5, 1635-6, 1636-7, 1637-8, 1642-3, 1647-8, 1648-9, 1649-50, 1650-1, 1651-2, 1652-3, 1653-4, 1655-6, 1658-9, 1660-1, 1661-2, 1662-3, 1663-4, 1666-7, 1667-8, 1668-9, 1669-70, 1679-1, 1672-3, 1673-4, 1674-5, 1676-77, 1677-8, 1678-9, 1680-1, 1682-3, 1684-5, 1685-6, 1686-7, 1687-8, 1688-9, 1689-90, 1690-1, 1691-2, 1695-6, 1696-7, 1697-8, 1698-9, 1699-1700, 1700-1, 1701-2, 1703-4, 1704-5, 1706-7; and downwards without break to 1835-6, with the exception of 1715-16, 1762-3, 1803-4, 1817-18, 1829-30, for which last-named years no files appear.

(11.) Passage Court Rolls of the following years of our Lord.—1337, 1377, 1395, 1422, 1423, 1436, 1446, 1477, 1480, 1481, 1482, 1484, 1488, 1493, 1499, 1500, 1506, 1511, 1512, 1513, 1514, 1516, 1517, 1518, 1523, 1524, 1525, 1526, 1530, 1534, 1535, 1536, 1543, 1544, 1545, 1546, 1547, 1548, 1549, 1550, 1551, 1552, 1557, 1561, 1562, 1563, 1564, 1566, 1567, 1570, 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, 1575, 1576, 1577, 1578, 1580, 1581, 1583, 1584, 1585, 1586, 1587, 1588, 1589, 1592, 1593, 1594, 1595, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1602, 1603, 1604, 1605, 1607, 1608, 1609, 1610, 1611, 1612, 1614, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1622, 1627, 1631, 1632, 1649, 1656, 1657, 1669, 1670, 1711.

(12.) Pentice Court Rolls, of the following years of our Lord.—1282, 1286, 1287, 1288, 1292, 1297, 1306 to 1308, 1317, 1320, 1322, 1323, 1325, 1326, 1327, 1328, 1329, 1330, 1331, 1333, 1334, 1335, 1336, 1337, 1338, 1339, 1340, 1341, 1342, 1348, 1351, 1357, 1359, 1360, 1361, 1362, 1364, 1366, 1368, 1370, 1375, 1377, 1378, 1379, 1380, 1381, 1383, 1386, 1387, 1388, 1390, 1394, 1395, 1396, 1397, 1398, 1399, 1400, 1401, 1403, 1406, 1408, 1410, 1413, 1416, 1417, 1418, 1420, 1422, 1423, 1425, 1426, 1427, 1428, 1430, 1431, 1432, 1433, 1434, 1435, 1436, 1437, 1438, 1439, 1442, 1443, 1444, 1445, 1446, 1448, 1449, 1450, 1451, 1452, 1453, 1454, 1455, 1456, 1457, 1458, 1459, 1460, 1461, 1462, 1477 to 1480, 1483, 1485, 1486, 1490, 1492, 1493, 1494, 1496, 1497, 1501, 1502, 1503, 1504, 1505, 1506, 1510, 1516, 1517, 1520, 1532, 1535, 1536, 1543, 1545, 1546, 1547, 1552, 1553, 1558, 1560, 1561, 1565, 1566, 1567, 1568, 1569, 1570, 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, 1575, 1576, 1577, 1578, 1579, 1580, 1581, 1582, 1583, 1584, 1585, 1586, 1587, 1588, 1589, 1590, 1593, 1596, 1597, 1601, 1603, 1604, 1608, 1609, 1610, 1611, 1612, 1620, 1621, 1653, 1664, 1671, 1678, 1680, 1727, 1740, 1744, 1748, 1772, 1773, 1799 to 1823, 1826 to 1836, 1836 to 1846.

(13.) Petitions and Letters in files, of the following years.—1567, 1573, 1576 to 1580, 1580, 1581, 1582, 1583, 1584, 1586, 1589, 1590, 1590 to 1593, 1596, 1598, 1615 to 1620, 1687.

(14.) Plate Indentures. Forty indentures (the earliest dated 5 William and Mary, and the latest dated 6 George IV) executed by successive mayors of Chester for the restitution of municipal plate on the expiration of their respective mayoralities.

(15.) Portmote and Crownmote Court Rolls, of the following years of our Lord.—1277, 1279, 1281, 1297, 1298, 1299, 1304, 1306, 1309, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1321, 1325, 1326, 1327, 1328, 1330, 1331, 1334, 1335, 1340, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345, 1347, 1348, 1349, 1351, 1352, 1359, 1360, 1361, 1362, 1363, 1377, 1379, 1380, 1381, 1382, 1383, 1385, 1391, 1393, 1395, 1396, 1397, 1399, 1400, 1405, 1408, 1412, 1413, 1415, 1416, 1420, 1422, 1423, 1426, 1430, 1432, 1444, 1447, 1449, 1450, 1467, 1483, 1493, 1497, 1502, 1503, 1507, 1516, 1543,

CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.CORPORATION
OF
CHESTER.

1544, 1546, 1559, 1560, 1561, 1562, 1563, 1568, 1571, 1572, 1576, 1578, 1579, 1580, 1581, 1583, 1584, 1586, 1589, 1590, 1591, 1592, 1593, 1594, 1595, 1596, 1601, 1602, 1603, 1604, 1606, 1608, 1609, 1610, 1612, 1615, 1619, 1623, 1629, 1630, 1631, 1636, 1638, 1639, 1640, 1641, 1642, 1645, 1646, 1650, 1660, 1667, 1672, 1675, 1677, 1683, 1684, 1685, 1692, 1695, 1703, 1711, 1714, 1717, 1719, 1739, 1741, 1750.

(16.) Recoveries, of the following years of our Lord:—1547 to 1553, 1589 to 1591, 1626 to 1632, 1666, 1684 to 1714, 1713 to 1735, 1735 to 1764, 1738 to 1747, 1762 to 1798, 1798 to 1823, 1823 to 1833. Considerable confusion has crept into the arrangement of these records, but the label attached to each file accurately represents its contents.

(17.) Register of the Estates of Roman Catholics, made in 1 George I., in pursuance of an Act of Parliament of the same year.

(18.) Sacrament Certificates, of the years of our Lord, 1672 to 1678, 1700 to 1715, 1715 to 1730, 1730 to 1745, 1745 to 1763, 1769 to 1785.

(19.) Sessions Files, of the following years of our Lord:—1347, 1393, 1432, 1504, 1524, 1531, 1533, 1534, 1536, 1537, 1539, 1540, 1541, 1545, 1546, 1552, 1554, 1555, 1556, 1560, 1561, 1564, 1565, 1567, 1568, 1571, 1573, 1574, 1575, 1576, 1577, 1578, 1582, 1583, 1584, 1585, 1589, 1590, 1590, 1591, 1593, 1594, 1595, 1596, 1597, 1598, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1602, 1603, 1605, 1606, 1607, 1608, 1609, 1610, 1611, 1612, 1614, 1615, 1616, 1617, 1618, 1619, 1622, 1623, 1624, 1629, 1631, 1637, 1640, 1641, 1642, 1646, 1655, 1657, 1668, 1672, 1673, 1674, 1675, 1681, 1684, 1686, 1688, 1689, 1693, 1695, 1700, 1704, 1707, 1714, 1718, 1712 to 1727, 1727 to 1732, 1732 to 1736, 1740 to 1745, 1745 to 1749, 1750 to 1755, 1755 to 1764, 1763 to 1769, 1769 to 1775, 1775 to 1780, 1781 to 1788, 1788 to 1799 and downwards to 1831.

(20.) Sheriff's Files of the following years of our Lord:—156, 1567, 1568, 1570, 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, 1581, 1582, 1583, 1584, 1585, 1586, 1587, 1588, 1592, 1593, 1594, 1595, 1596, 1597, 1598, 1599, 1601, 1604, 1605, 1606, 1607, 1608, 1609, 1610, 1611, 1612, 1613, 1614, 1615, 1616, 1617, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1621, 1622, 1623, 1624, 1625, 1627, 1628, 1629, 1630, 1631, 1632, 1633, 1635, 1636, 1637, 1638, 1639, 1640, 1641, 1642, 1643, 1646, 1647, 1651, 1652, 1653, 1654, 1655, 1658, 1660, 1661, 1662, 1663, 1664, 1665, 1670, 1671, 1672, 1673, 1674, 1675, 1676, 1677, 1678, 1679, 1680, 1681, 1682, 1683, 1684, 1685, 1687, 1688, 1689, 1690, 1692, 1693, 1694, 1695, 1696, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1701, 1703, 1707, 1708, 1709, 1710, 1711, 1712, 1713, 1714, 1715, 1716, 1717, 1718, 1719, 1720, 1721, 1722, and downwards to the year 1804-5, excepting the years 1730-1, 1742-3, 1753-4, 1778-9, for which last-named years no rolls appear.

(21.) Sheriff's Court Files, for the following years of our Lord:—1566-7, 1567-8, 1569-70, 1571-2, 1573-4, 1581-2, 1583-4, 1585-6, 1586-7, 1587-8, 1592-3, 1594-5, 1595-6, 1596-7, 1597-8, 1601-2, 1604-5, 1605-6, 1607-8, 1608-9, 1609-10, 1610-11, 1611-12, 1612-13, 1613-14, 1614-15, 1615-16, 1616-17, 1618-19, 1620-1, 1621-2, 1622-3, 1623-4, 1624-5, 1627-8, 1628-9, 1629-30, 1630-1, 1635-6, 1636-7, 1637-8, 1638-9, 1640-1, 1641-2, 1642-3, 1646-7, 1651-2, 1652-3, 1653-4, 1654-5, 1658-60, 1660-1, 1661-2, 1662-3, 1663-4, 1665-6, 1670-1, 1671-2, 1672-3, 1673-4, 1674-5, 1675-6, 1676-7, 1678-9, 1679-80, 1680-1, 1682-3, 1684-5, 1687-8, 1688-9, 1689-90, 1690-1, 1692-3, 1693-4, 1694-5, 1696-7, 1697-8, 1698-9, 1700-1, 1703-4, 1707-8, 1708-8, 1709-10, and downwards without a break to 1805-8 excepting the years 1724-5, 1730-1, and 1778-9, for which last-named years, no files appear.

(22.) Soldiers' Notes of the following years of our Lord:—1550, 1573, 1577, 1580, 1586, 1587, 1596, 1597, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1602.

(23.) Treasurers' Accounts of the following years of our Lord:—1547, 1548, 1556, 1557, 1564, 1569, 1571, 1572, 1575, 1577, 1584, 1588, 1589, 1590, 1591, 1592, 1603, 1609, 1610, 1613, 1614, 1615, 1616, 1617, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1622, 1623, 1625, 1626, 1627, 1638, 1639, 1640, 1641, 1642, 1643, 1644, 1655, 1662, 1663, 1664, 1668, 1669, 1670, 1671, 1672, 1688, 1689, 1698, 1699.

Of the large number of ancient and modern deeds, relating to grants and leases made by the Mayor and citizens of Chester to private persons, or by private individuals to the Mayor and citizens, I give no particular account, as they afford no matters deserving the consideration of Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical Manuscripts. For the same reason I forbear to speak in detail of the numerous will leases and other legal instruments, touching properties that some years since were taken from the custody of the Corporation and confided to the local Charity Trustees. I should be working yet further beyond the limits of my proper field of duty, were I to lengthen this report by setting forth the contents of several parcels of old leases and other indentures, drawn in the sixteenth and two following centuries, that have no connection with properties at any time held by the Corporation and were probably placed in the first instance amongst the municipal records by former Town Clerks, who used the civic muniment-room for the custody of the writings of their private clients. For the entertainment of persons especially interested in Chester and its neighbourhood, I may, however, insert the following abstract of a document which I placed in a parcel marked "Curious Deeds," when, after finishing my work for the Historical MSS. Commission, I calendared and arranged the entire body of Corporation Deeds at the request of the Town Council, and at the cost of the Citizens of Chester.

24 December 1757. Curious and notable Trust Deed, in the form of an Indenture between Richard Richardson, esq., mayor, and the citizens of Chester, of the one part, and Sir Richard Grosvenor of Eaton, co. Chester, baronet, Thomas Cholmondeley of Vale Royal in the same county, esquire, and Trafford Barnston of the city of Chester, esquire, of the other part. Whereby the said mayor and citizens granted and conveyed to the said Sir Richard Grosvenor, bart., Thomas Cholmondeley, esq., and Trafford Barnston, esq., the tract of land on the west side of Chester, (lying) between the walls of the city and the river Dee, and commonly called the Roozee or Rood Eye; and another parcel of land lying on the west of the same city between the walls thereof and the copp or bank of the river Dee, and "leading to certain erections and buildings called the "Wharf or Crane and also those fields, closes and "parcels of land of them the said mayor and citizens "lying and being in Guilden Sutton within the county "of Chester, and now in the holding of one — Burroughs, widow, her under-tenants or assigns;" and a piece of meadow at Christleton near Stanford Bridge, co. Chester; and the shambles commonly called the Flesh Shambles in Northgate Street; and the Customary Tolls of the Nearer Bridge Gate and the East gate of Chester; and all the shops of the said Mayor and citizens under the Inner Pentice; and the chief fee-farms or other yearly rents, amounting to 15*l.* per annum, and issuing yearly to the said mayor and citizens out of the lands of Philip Egerton of Oulton, co. Chester, Edward Griffith and Elizabeth Price; and divers other fee-farm rents; to be had and held by the said Sir Richard Grosvenor, bart., Thomas Cholmondeley, esq., and Trafford Barnston, esq., the executors and administrators and assigns for a full term of five hundred years, Upon the following Trusts,—viz., (1) On Trust, To permit the said mayor and citizens to hold and enjoy the premises and collect the rents, &c. for their own uses so long as they "shall from time to time well "and truly pay or cause to be paid unto the several "and respective persons who shall from time to time "become entitled thereunto all and singular the "several and respective annuities or clear yearly sums "of money mentioned and expressed to be due and "payable for and in respect of every principal sum of "money set down and subscribed by each respective "person in the said subscribed or annexed schedule;" (2) On Further Trust, To enter on the said premises and to distraint upon them, and to deal with the distresses levied upon them, "in like manner and form as a distress for rent service may be sold," for the full satisfaction of any annuitant named in the said schedule, whose annuity has not been paid in accordance with the obligations of the mayor and citizens in that respect; (3) On Further Trust, To enter on the premises and take the rents of the same, and apply them to the satisfaction of any annuitant or annuitants, payment of whose annuity or annuities due to them from the same mayor and citizens may be in arrear; (4) On Further Trust, To raise money by sale or mortgage of part or the whole of the premises for any part or the whole of the said term, for the satisfaction of the claims of unpaid annuitants. Provision being made for a re-assignment by the trustees to the corporation of the remainder of the lease of such of the premises as should remain in the hands of the trustees after due performance of the trusts, on the extinction of the interests of annuitants by death or otherwise.

The annexed schedule (a printed document) shows that the obligations, for the fulfilment of which this Trust Deed was a security, arose out of an arrangement, of the nature of a tontine, whereby the Corporation of Chester in the year 1757, in order to raise 6,000*l.*, engaged to make annual payments in survivorship to each of a company of annuitants, being either persons who had bought annuities by a payment of 50*l.* for each annuity, or persons appointed to receive annuities by persons who had bought the same for 50*l.* each. By the original project the Mayor and citizens in their corporate character proposed to pay an annuity of 3*l.* to each of 120 persons so qualified by purchase or appointment, until the number of the same annuitants should be reduced by death to 80; and then to pay an annuity of 3*l.* 10*s.* to each of the eighty survivors until death should reduce them to 60; and then to pay an annuity of 4*l.* 10*s.* to each of the sixty survivors until death should reduce them to 40; and then to pay an annuity of 7*l.* to each of the forty survivors until death should reduce them to 20; and then to pay an annuity of 10*l.* to each of twenty survivors till death should reduce them to 10; and then to pay an annuity of 17*l.* 10*s.* to each of the ten survivors till death should reduce them to 8; and then to pay an annuity of 22*l.* 10*s.* to each of the eight survivors till death should reduce them to 6; and then to pay an annuity of 27*l.* 10*s.* to each of the six survivors till death should reduce them to 4; and then to pay an annuity of 50*l.* to each of the four survivors till death should reduce them to 2; and then to pay an annuity of 100*l.* to each of the two survivors till death should reduce them to one; and then to pay during his or her life an annuity at 200*l.* to the last survivor. It was provided by the articles of agreement that a person paying only a single sum of 50*l.* could acquire thereby only one annuity on his or her own life, but that a subscriber of two or more sums of 50*l.* might appoint as many annuitants (irrespective of their ages), as the number of his or her shares, and also that he or she might cumulate on any single nominee annuities to the number of his shares of the entire subscription of 6,000*l.*

The schedule exhibits a complete list of the annuitants a large proportion of whom were infants or very young children at the date of the bonds executed for their benefit. Persons interested in the social history of Chester during the later half of the last century will derive entertainment from this schedule, and the deed to which it is annexed.

(f.) MSS. in the Possession of certain of the Companies of the City of Chester.

To the foregoing account of the Records of the City of Chester may be appended some notes touching the charters and books belonging to nine of the twenty-three Chester Companies, that were brought for my inspection to the Town Hall by the principal officers of the (1) Cordwainers', (2) Bakers', (3) Weavers', (4) Innholders, Victuallers, and Cooks', (5) Joiners, Carvers, and Turners', (6) Beerbrewers', (7) Tanners', (8) Barber-Surgeons, and Wax-and-Tallow Chandlers', (9) Clothworkers' companies.

(1.) Charters of the Company of Cordwainers.

(a.) 6 May, 44 Edward III. Letters Patent by Edward the Black Prince.

Edwardus illustris Regis Anglie filius, Princeps Aquitanie et Wallie, Dux Cornubie et Comes Cestrie, Omnibus ballivis, ministris et fidelibus suis ad quos presentes littere pervenerint salutem: Licet ante hec tempora existit testatum quod non fuit ad commodum et utilitatem communis comitatus nostri Cestrie et civitatis nostre ibidem quod alutarii et sutores eiusdem civitatis exercerent et tenerent officia alutarie, sutorie et tannarie corcorum simul et semel, set quod hoc tenderet in prejudicium utriusque communis, super quo per auctoritatem consilii nostri concessimus tannatoribus civitatis predictae quod nullus alutariorum et sutorum in eadem civitate nec per se nec per alium nec aliquis alius nisi eidem officio tannarie infra dictam civitatem et nulli alteri officio ibidem intendere voluerit, de cetero se intromitteret in officio tannarie supradicto, Reddendo inde nobis annuatim ad scaccarium nostrum Cestrie sex solidos et octo denarios ad festum Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste pro toto anno, Postea tamen in presencia Johannis de la Pole, locum tenentis Justiciarii nostri Cestrie, et Magistri Johannis de Brunham camerarii nostri ibidem, plenissime et unanimiter extitit per communitem predictam testatum et notificatum propter dampnum quod contigit medio tempore toti populo comitatus nostri predicti, quod magis proficuum est et expediens toti populo nostre communis predictae quod alutarii et sutores dicte civitatis exercerent et habeant utrumque officium alutarie, sutorie et tannarie simul et semel in eadem civitate: Nos consideracionem habentes ad melioracionem subditorum nostrorum dicti comitatus per auctoritatem magni consilii nostri tunc existentis apud Cestriam, et ex assensu et consensu tannatorum predictorum, per finem viginti librarum vnde nobis soluent viginti marcas per quatuor annos proximo sequentes ad festa Sancti Michaelis et Pasche per equales porciones, et predictis tannatoribus decem marcas infra primum annum ad eadem festa de eodem fine viginti librarum in recompensacionem ejusdam finis viginti marcarum quem dicti tannatores nobis prius soluerunt pro officio tannarie supradicto, concessimus alutariis et sutoribus predictis non obstante carta nostra predictis tannatoribus inde confecta, quod ipsi et successores sui alutarii et sutores gaudere et exercere valeant simul et semel officium alutarie, sutorie et tannarie cum omnibus liberis consuetudinibus suis in eadem civitate prout antiquitus facere consueverunt, Reddendo inde nobis annuatim ad scaccarium nostrum predictum sex solidos et octo denarios ad dictum festum natiuitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste pro toto anno; et volumus quod tannatores quieti sint de predicto annuali redditu sex solidorum et octo denariorum unde prius onerati fuerint ut predictum est: Promiso tamen quod hujus tannarie debito modo fiat per supervisum ministrorum ad hoc deputandorum per maiorem et communitem civitatis predictae. Et ibi vobis mandamus quod predictos alutarios et sutores officii predicti uti et gaudere permittatis in forma supradicta sine impedimento vel calumpnia nostrorum vel heredum aut successorum nostrorum iusticiariorum, escacorum sen aliorum ballivorum vel ministrorum nostrorum quorumcunque. In cuius rei testimonium has litteras nostras fieri fecimus patentes sigillo scaccarii nostri Cestrie signatas. Datum apud Cestriam, sexto die Maii anno regni domini Edwardi regis patris nostri quadragesimo quarto.

Endorsed, Irrotulatum in pleno comitatu Cestrie die Martis proximo post festum Sancti Michaelis, anno regni regis Edwardi tercii de conquestu quadragesimo sexto.

Tempore Thome de Fitton iusticiarii Cestrie, ad instanciam Johannis de Ludbury.

(b.) 24 October, 3 Edward VI. Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation of the charter of Henry IV., dated at Chester on the 14th of May in the eleventh year of his reign, to the Skinners and Shoemakers of the said city, confirmin the said artificers in their sole and ancient monopoly and right of exercise of their art in Chester, and forbidding all persons, whether freemen of the said city or foreigners, to presume to exercise or busy themselves in the arts of the "alutarii et sutores" within the bounds and liberties of the city, until they have been admitted "in gildam et fraternitatem eorundem alutariorum et sutorum," and obtained the license of the said gild to practice the said arts. Dated at Westminster.

(c.) 2 May, 3 James I. Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Confirmation by James the First of the foregoing Charter of Insuperimus and Confirmation by Edward the Sixth of Henry the Fourth's Charter to the Skinners and Shoemakers of Chester.

(2.) Charter of the Company of Bakers.

5 July, 6 Edward VI. Letters Patent under the Great Seal by Edward the Sixth, of Insuperimus and Confirmation of a certain charter, dated at Chester, 18 December, 11 Henry VII., whereby Arthur Prince of Wales, eldest son of the last-named king, confirmed the bakers of Chester in their ancient monopoly and privileges, and re-constituted their company. Dated at Westminster.—This charter has been greatly injured by fire and moth and mould, and is also in a filthy state.

(3.) Charter of the Company of Weavers.

10 June, 25 Elizabeth. Municipal Charter on vellum (with the Common Seal of the Mayor and Citizens of Chester attached to the skin) of the Orders of Assembly, heard and read in Common Assembly of the citizens of Chester during the mayoralty of William Styles. For the recognition of the brotherhood of the weavers of Chester, as one of the ancient companies of Chester, and for its incorporation, constitution, and establishment (in accordance with the ancient privileges of the same weavers) amongst the companies of the city.—Also a duplicate (not a counterpart) of the same municipal charter, to which the Seal of the Corporation of the Mayor and citizens was also formerly attached.

(4.) Charters of the Company of Innholders, Victuallers and Cooks.

(a.) 10 June, 25 Elizabeth. Municipal Charter, sealed with the Common Seal of the Corporation of the Mayor and Citizens of Chester. Exhibiting the Orders of Assembly, read and made in the Common Assembly of the said citizens during the mayoralty of William Styles, for the recognition of the brotherhood of the Inholders, Victuallers and Cooks of Chester, as one of the ancient companies of the city, and for its re-establishment amongst such companies, and also for its re-constitution in accordance with the long existing rights and privileges of the fraternity.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

(b.) 26 January, 34 Elizabeth. Letters Patent of Insuperimus and Exemplification of a certain petition by the Inholders, Victuallers and Cooks of Chester, to Henry Earl of Derby, Chamberlain of the County Palatine of Chester, for the enrolment and entry of record before his Honour of the afore-described Municipal Charter for the incorporation and establishment of their company. With Insuperimus of the same Earl's warrant for the enrolment prayed for; and also with Insuperimus and Confirmation of the said Municipal Charter under the Common Seal of the Mayor and Citizens of Chester.—Dated at Chester.

(c.) 29 March, 9 Anne. Precept under the Seal of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer at Chester, to Charles Gerrard, defendant in a certain suit in the said court, in which the Inholders, Victuallers and Cooks of Chester were plaintiffs. For his submission to the decree of the said court in the said suit, restraining him from further infringement of the privileges of the said Company of Inholders, Victuallers and Cooks, and ordering him to pay three pounds to the said plaintiffs for their costs in the suit.

(5.) Book of the Company of Joiners, Carvers, and Turners.

1576-1756. Register of Orders, Proceedings and Disbursements of the Company of Joiners, Carvers and Turners of the city of Chester. Of no great interest; but containing some curious matters illustrative of the government and policy of Trades' Unions in Elizabethan England.

(6.) Book and Charter of the Company of Beer-brewers.

(a.) 1606-1641. A Booke for the Companie of Beere-brewers, begun on the xvith day of March 1606, et anno regni Regis Caroli Anglie, &c., quarto.—A ledger of accounts, orders, certificates of admissions, and miscellaneous memoranda of the Brewers' Company.

(b.) 16 September, 10 Charles I.—Charter of Charles the First, for the incorporation of the beer-brewers of Chester in a company, with a Master and two Wardens, under the name and title of "The Master, two Wardens, and Community of the Mystery or Art of the Brewers of Chester." The charter appoints Thomas Eaton, of Chester, brewer, to be the first Master, and William Streete and Ralph Drinkwater, of the same city, brewers, to be the first Wardens of the new Society, which is endowed with a monopoly and invested with the government of the trade in beer in Chester. It is ordained "quod nemo in dicta civitate vel suburbis sive libertatibus ejusdem, nisi sit de societate predicta, brasabit ad vendendum cervisiam sine breem." Dated at Canbury.

(7.) Books of the Company of Tanners.

(a.) 1591-1697. Register of disbursements, proceedings, and members of the company.—Of no considerable interest.

(b.) 1661-1623. Similar register of the disbursements and proceedings of the company.

(c.) 1697-1809. Another register of the same kind and company.

(d.) 1737-1877. Register of admissions to the company, with lists of members and brief notes of proceedings.

(8.) Book of the Company of Barber-Surgeons, Wax-Chandlers, and Tallow-Chandlers.

1606-1698. A book of accounts, rules, and memoranda, described on one of the opening leaves as "The Register 'Booke of the Society and Company of Barber-Surgeons and Waxe and Tallow Channlers of the City of Chester. Whiche booke was bought in the yeare of oure Lorde God 1606, then Aldermen of the same companye," Nicholas Hallowed and John Ley; William Handcocke and Richard Shonne, stewards of the same; also then Mayor of this city, John Littler, draper; Thomas Harrye and Robert Bleese, sheriffs, 1605." Setting forth the oaths and rules of the company, with accounts of its disbursements and proceedings during ninety-two years, this volume contains matters that deserve the consideration of writers of the social history of Chester in the seventeenth century.

(9.) Book of the Company of Clothworkers, 1737-1877. A record of the proceedings of the guild. Interesting only to its members.

CORPORATION OF
CHESTER.

These last-mentioned volumes and charters have, of course, been restored to the officers of the companies to which they belong, and are no longer in the custody of the Town Council of Chester.

Having in the discharge of my duty to Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical MSS. examined and made notes of the writings described in this report, I put the whole collection of archives in order for the Corporation, and saw them deposited in the commodious and suitably furnished Muniment Room of the Chester Town Hall.

JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

THE MANUSCRIPTS BELONGING TO THE CORPORATION OF THE BOROUGH OF LEICESTER.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

Fortunate in the possession of records, that will endure comparison with the muniments of any provincial borough in Great Britain, Leicester has in these later years been especially fortunate in the possession of two citizens—Mr. Thompson, the author of the well-known history of the borough, and Mr. Kelly, F.S.A., the author of "Leicester in the Olden Time"—who, possessing the scholarship to appreciate the municipal writings at their proper worth, had also the historical enthusiasm to labour for their preservation.

Some five and thirty years since, when they were in early manhood, these gentlemen found the Leicester archives in a state of extreme confusion, and in danger of serious injury from the dilapidation of the room in which they were stored. The condition of affairs demanded prompt action, and to their credit it can be recorded that the chiefs of the municipality were not reluctant to afford the requisite facilities and encouragement to the two young men of letters, who volunteered to reduce the multifarious writings into order, if the mayor and aldermen would provide for the needful repair and better furniture of the muniment room.

Having received authority to do their pleasure with the mass of literary material, the two comrades in historical service separated the books from the unbound manuscripts, classified the public and private charters, purged the rolls of moth and mould, and devoted their leisure during several successive years to the labour of arranging several thousands of writs, letters, and loose papers in chronological sequence. Of course a large proportion of the writings that came under their notice were of no historic value; but it was no part of their enterprise or of their commission to separate the things of worth from the things that were worthless. Still less was it a part of their undertaking to destroy any of the valueless material. Their object was to preserve the perishable and precious memorials of past times; and in order that they might do the work completely, they determined to preserve everything, and to deal with every scrap of manuscript as though it were of importance. Having seen to the restoration of ancient volumes, cleansed the guild-rolls and classified the charters, they placed the large accumulation of accounts, letters, memoranda, and miscellaneous papers in regular series, and bound them into two separate sets of volumes, viz., the thirty-eight folio volumes of Chamberlain's Accounts, and the twenty-four volumes of Hall Papers.

The notable documents of this comprehensive body of heterogeneous MSS. are so numerous and various that I will make no attempt to convey adequate ideas of their diversity and moment in a few introductory sentences. To obtain only a general view of so great an accumulation of historic records and literary curiosities, the student must examine the entries of the two ensuing catalogues which exhibit many particulars of the charters, rolls, and other unbound writings, and a still larger number of particulars taken from the MSS. books and the folios of bound documents. With respect to the antiquity of the older writings, it is for the present enough to observe that the series of Royal Charters opens with two grants dated in the first year of the reign of King John; and that the series of documents touching the ancient earls of Leicester comprises a charter of the twelfth century, granted by Robert Bossu, son of the Conqueror's famous comrade, Robert de Bellomont, several charters sealed by Simon de Montfort, and an especially valuable charter of ordinances for the reformation of the laws and processes of the court of Portemantote of Leicester, made by Simon de Montfort's immediate successor in the earldom of Leicester, Edmund Crouchback, the younger son of Henry the Third, and the first of Leicester's Plantagenet earls.

But though Mr. Thompson and Mr. Kelly have earned for themselves an enduring place amongst the worthies of their ancient borough by needful and long continued exertions for the preservation of its archives, it may not be imagined that they were the first to introduce them to the notice of students. Long before the rain penetrated the roof of the muniment room of the old Town Hall, a few curious investigators had entered the darksome and narrow closet for purposes of study, and had extracted from the unarranged mass of documents many matters for the enrichment of printed literature. Though he was not so fortunate as to draw its most valuable documents into the light, and died without knowing how near his hands had often been to writings which he would have deemed priceless treasures, John Nichols, the patient antiquary and learned author of "The History and Antiquities of Leicestershire," expended much time and labour in deciphering the archives of the municipal muniment room. From the same closet also the scholarly and persevering Mr. Carte extracted most of the materials for his hitherto unpublished history of Leicester, which MSS. at the time of my visit to Leicester was in the possession of the Messrs. Spencer, the booksellers and publishers of that town. And, though he was chiefly indebted for his extracts from old documents to Mr. Carte's zeal and research, the worthy but unlearned Mr. Throsby may also have been an occasional student in the same receptacle of ancient writings.

But neither Mr. Carte nor Mr. Throsby, nor Mr. John Nichols, ever put eye on the brightest treasures of the collection. The same may be said of Mr. Thompson, who had never seen the Borough Chartulary ("the Vellum Book") when he published his history of Leicester, and who dying shortly after the publication of that work passed from the world without having mastered the contents of the curious and very instructive charter touching the Inquisitions (temp. Henry III.) for the origin of Bridge-silver and Pontage, and without having read a single line of the Great Charter of Leicester, sealed A.D. 1277, by Edmund Crouchback.

Indeed this last-named record escaped detection till my official visit to Leicester. That it may have been in the hands of some of the successive searchers of the Leicester muniments is probable. Indeed I am disposed to think that it must have passed through the fingers of two or three competent antiquaries, who may have omitted to render it due attention, because its size and outward aspect induced them to put it aside as a document of no moment or considerable antiquity after the first glance at its external characteristics. Anyhow, the indented charter, which from its magnitude (very unusual in documents of the thirteenth century) and its outward appearance might be pushed away hastily by a remiss or wearied searcher as nothing of greater interest than an Elizabethan lease to farm for a short term of years, had not been read for centuries, when it was discovered by me and my cordial coadjutor Mr. Kelly, F.S.A.

For such a discovery we were the less prepared, because successive historians had induced us to believe that Edward the First's younger brother had never displayed an active, or at least any exceptional, concern in the government and welfare of the people committed to his authority, together with the dignity of Simon de Montfort's earldom. That the execution of this remarkable charter should have passed from human knowledge is all the more surprising, because a copy of the document in French and a translation of the same instrument into English of the fifteenth century have been preserved for many ages in the Leicester Chartulary, noticed in my second catalogue. The discovery of so notable a document, in a collection possessing three separate copies of the missing writing, whose disappearance has occasioned error in successive historians, is a cogent demonstration and an encouraging example of the good that results from the inspection of old muniments, and may even result from the re-inspection of collections of MSS. that are presumed to have been thoroughly examined and sifted by recent searchers.

I. Charters, Letters Patent, Rolls, and other Unbound Writings.

(1.) 12th century.—Charter of Robert (Bossu), 2nd Earl of Leicester, to the burgesses of Leicester.—

Robertus comes Leicestrie Radalpho vicecomiti et omnibus baronibus et hominibus suis Francigenis et Anglicis salutem:—Sciatis quod ego et uolo et concedo quod burgenses mei de Leicestria teneant omnes consuetudines suas bene et in pace et honorifice et quiete in Gilda et in omnibus aliis consuetudinibus sicut eas unquam melius et quietius et honorificentius de patre meo tenuerunt, Testibus, Ernulfo de Bosco, Gaufrido Abbate, Radulfo minori, Johanne de Ici, Matheo de uilers, Baldewyn de Charn, Radulfo Multon, Anfredo filio Alfredi, Rogero de Cranfort, Roberto capellano.

(2.) 26 December, 1 John.—Charter to the burgesses of Leicester.—Johannes Dei gratia Rex Anglie, &c., &c.:—Sciatis nos concessisse et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse Burgensibus ville Leicestrie quod libere et sine omni impedimento eant et redeant et negotientur per totam terram nostram cum omnibus rebus et Marchandisiis suis, Saluis nobis et aliis debitis et justis consuetudinibus: Testibus, Willemo Mareschallo Comite de Pembroc, Willemo Comite Sarum, Willemo de Humet constabulario Normannie, Willemo de Rupibus, Warino filio Geroldi, Thoma Basset. Datum per manus S. Wellensis Archidiaconi, et Johannis de Gray apud Burxvi. die Decembris anno regni nostri Primo.

(3.) 26 December, 1 John.—Grant to the burgesses of Leicester, that all purchases and sales of lands of the town Leicestre which have been or shall be made in the Portmannote of the same town shall remain stable and firm: the Latin terms of the concession being "Sciatis nos concessisse et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse Burgensibus ville Leicestrie quod omnes emptiones et vendiciones terrarum Leicestrie que facte sunt et que fient rationabiliter in Portmannote eiusdem ville stabiles et firme permanent."—Witnessed by the same persons who witnessed the preceding charter on the same day, this grant was also made at Bures:—"apud Bur."

(4.) Guild rolls of years in the successive reigns of Richard I., John, Henry III., Edward I., Edward II., Edward III., and Richard II. Many of the rolls of this series having been lost, whilst others have decayed from long exposure to damp, so as to be quite illegible. The series, however, is sufficiently comprehensive and complete to afford a general view of the state of the Merchants' Guild of Leicester for nearly two centuries, and to yield a mass of data for estimating the fluctuations of population and commercial prosperity of the borough during the same period.

This important collection of documents, relating to a single institution, opens with four separate portions of a large and mutilated roll, that was commenced at some date anterior to the oldest piece, and was continued to some date subsequent to the least ancient fragment.

(a.) Largest and oldest piece, endorsed (in Elizabethan handwriting), "This roll is of Kinge John's tymes:—gild," composed of eleven membranes: With needle marks of the original stitching visible at the top the oldest membrane showing that they are part of a roll begun in earlier time. Respecting the date of this oldest membrane there is no uncertainty, as the record opens with these words in very small handwriting—"Isti intraverunt in Gildam mercatoriam die Sancti Dionisii proximo post adventum comitis in Angliam post deliberationem suam de captivitate sua in Francia, scilicet."—The earl thus alluded to was Robert Blanchmains. After the heading above transcribed comes a list of names, beginning thus:—

Nicolaus tinctor, iis. viiij.

Aco filius Simonis de Petra iis. viiij.

Ricardus Launnesse, xiiiij.

Thomas Blouts de * iis.

Galfridus de Nicol'.

Wilke Waterman iis. viij. ob.

Robertus de Burch xxd.

Johannes filius Ascelin' xxviij.

Johannes filius Estephani xij.

Andreas frater Willemi fratris Assewi.

Robertus Halleknaue iis. iiiij.

The third membrane is headed with these words, "Isti sunt qui intrauerunt Gildam Mercatoriam die Martis primo post ascensionem domini anno primo post coronacionem Domini Regis Johannis."

In the middle of the sixth membrane the line of names is broken by the following entry, as a heading to another lot of names, "Isti sunt qui intraverunt in Gildam Mercatoriam die sabbati * anno ii post interdictum." On the next (seventh membrane) appears the following memorandum, "Isti intrauerunt in Gildam Mercatoriam anno tercio post generale interdictum Anglie," followed by such names and notes as—

Willemus Hodiernus, quietus de introitu.

Robertus le Tailleur de Wimunde Weid ix sol.

Martinus filius Rogeri, quietus de introitu.

The ninth membrane exhibits the following memorandum, "Isti intrauerunt Gildam die Jouis post hokeday anno quo Cinita Damiete capta fuit a Christianis."

"Isti intrauerunt Gildam die Jouis ante Annunciacionem Beate Marie tempore Simonis Curleuach et Johannis Warin Aldermannorum, anno proximo post mortem Willelmi Pepin Abbatis Leicestre, et debent debita subscripta."

"Isti intrauerunt in Gildam die Ueneris post proximum hokedai in primo anno tempore Johannis
Warini et Simonis Curleuache aldermannorum."

The eleventh membrane exhibiting at its close, within twelines of its end, these words, "Isti intrauerunt Gildam Mercatoriam die Jouis festo Sancti Mathei primo post obitum Ranulfi comitis cestræ."

The needle marks at the bottom of this eleventh membrane show that the roll, of which it is a part, was continued to a later date.

(b.) Another piece of the same roll, made up of three membranes, the earliest of them beginning with the words, "Isti intrauerunt Gildam Mercatoriam die Sancti
"xxii." Stitcher's needle marks at the top of the earliest and the bottom of latest of the three membranes.

(c.) A third piece of the same ancient Gild Roll, a single skin, exhibiting no entry that enables one to state its date precisely.—It is, however, likely that this solitary strip of vellum is one of the several membranes that in former time occupied the interval between the largest portion of the roll and the membrane dated 22 Henry, the son of John.

(d.) Fourth and latest portion (discovered during the inspection of the muniments) of the same roll, covering the period 17 Henry III. to 2 Edward I., consisting of four membranes stitched in a way indicating that the membranes of the entire roll were originally put together like the leaves of a book, and were tacked in their present fashion, one to the foot of another, by a subsequent worker with the needle.

These portions of the Great Guild Roll are followed by a number of small yearly rolls of the years:—3, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 12, 13, 17, 18, 19, 27, 28, 30, 31, 33, 34, 35
Edward I.; 1, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 12, 20 Edward II.; 6, 7, 9, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 25, 26, 29, 30, 31, 36, 38, 40, 41, 42, 44, 45 Edward III.; 1, 2, 3, 4, Richard II.;
also, two undated rolls

Also a Roll (1 Richard I.) of names taken at a view of the Swines' Market held at the Merchants' Guild, headed "Leyc.: Noia pt. vis' del Swynesmarket tent' ap'd anla Gilde die Lune px' post fn Sc Lucie A° regni Reg' Rici post conquestum primo. Also a Roll exhibiting a complete list of the persons enrolled in the Merchants' Guild in the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III., entitled "Memorandum de nominibus qui intrave-runt Gylدام Mercatoriam tempore Regis Edwardi
"fili Regis Edwardi, Et etiam tempore Regis Edwardi
"tercii."—Also another roll of Members of the Merchants' Guild for the time of Edward the Third.

(5.) 13th Century.—Richard Basset's Charter to St.
John's Hospital, Leicester. Ricardus Basset omnibus amicis suis et hominibus Fraucigenis et Anglicis pres-entibus quam futuris, salutem. Sciatz me concessisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Domino et Beate Marie et Sancto Johanni et fratribus Domus Hospitalis Sancti Johannis Leicestre ibi domino seruientibus pro salute anime mee et heredum meorum et antecessorum meorum donationem illam quam Galfridus Blundell de Cossebi dedit et concessit deo et Sancto Johanni et predictis fratribus concessu et assensu heredum suorum et concessu et assensu et con-firmacione Domini sui Hugonis Danuers et heredum suorum et corpore suo quam se ibi deo reddidit et fraternitatem simul cum predictis fratribus recepit, scilicet vnam virgatam terre in Cossebi de feodo meo cum omnibus pertinenciis suis infra villam et extra tenendam in pur-am et perpetuam elemosinam quantum ad me et heredes meos pertinet. Preterea confirmari eis omnes tenuras et possessiones de feodo meo quas rationabiliter possidunt sicut carte eorum testantur, salvo foresti seruicio. Hiis testibus, Willelmo Ridel fratre meo, Willelmo sacerdote de Sancto Michael, Alexandro capellano de Sancto Michael, Willelmo filio Oswi, Alexandro clerico, Willelmo clerico, Willelmo fratre Auger, Ful-cone fratre Anulde, Gerasio clerico de Sancto Petro.

(6.) A.D. 1233.—Deed of gift and conveyance executed by John, the son of Walter the wheelwright, conveying to William De Seyntlo, for his homage and service, a yearly rent of twenty pence and a capon to be had of William Brunman and his heirs, and the homage and service of the same William and his heirs, and all the profits of a piece of land in the north suburb of Leicester.

(7.) A.D. 1223 to 1721.—List of the names of the Aldermen and Mayors of the Borough of Leicester since the year of our Lord in the 7th year of King Henry the Third. Ending with the year 1721.

(8.) A.D. 1233.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by William Loveman, conveying to William de St. Lo (de Sancto Lawdo) burgess of Leicestre and his heirs and assigns, a yearly rental of twelve pence and one capon payable by Griffin, son of William of Warlee and his heirs, together with the homage of the same Griffin and his heirs, in respect of certain lands in the parish of St. Martin of Leicestre: the grantee and his heirs being bound to pay the grantor and his heirs, in lieu of all secular services, a yearly rent of "vnum par albarum
"cirotheorum de precio nuius oboli." Witnessed by Simon Curleuache, then alderman of Leicestre, and others.

(9.) A.D. 1428.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by Alice, formerly the wife of Iuon, in favour of Peter the son of Roger, mayor of Leicestre, and the burgesses and commune of Leicestre, in respect to all claim or title which she can have in the name of dowry or otherwise in a certain capital messuage formerly pertaining to her husband. Witnessed by Richard de Haueringes, steward of Leicestre, and others, named and unnamed.

(10.) A.D. 1248.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by William the son of Stephen, the son of Iuon, conveying to Peter the son of Roger, mayor of Leycestre, and the burgesses and commune of Leicestre, a certain capital messuage formerly belonging to his father in Leicestre, and their successors for ever, at a yearly rent to the grantor and his heirs of sixteen pence and two capons. Witnessed by Richard de Hau-eringes, steward of Leicestre, and others.

(11.) Henry III.—Simon De Montfort's Charter for the remission of Bridge-silver and Gable-pence to the burgesses of Leicestre:—Omnibus Christi fidelibus hoc scriptum visuris uel auditoris, Dominus Symon de Monte forti comes Leicestrie senescallus Anglie, salutem in Domino. Nonerit ueritas vestra nos remissis et quiet' clamasse imperpetuum pro nobis et heredibus nostris omnes illos denarios qui aliquo modo nomine pontagii ad pontes nostros Leicestrie exigi et capi solebant, qui vocabantur Briggessiluir, Et insimul omnes illos denarios qui in villa nostra Leicestrie exigi et et capi solebant qui vocabantur gouilpenis. Ita quod nec nos nec heredes nostri nec aliquis nomine nostro decetero de burgensibus nostris Leicestrie uel eorum heredibus sen successoribus uel ab aliquibus aliis de quocunque loco faciunt nomine predictorum denarium qui vocabantur Briggessiluir et Gouilpenis aliquid capere uel exigere valeamus, nec quod dicti Burgenses uel heredes sui siue successores aliquid de aliquibus nomine Briggessiluir aut Gouilpens aliquo modo capere possint uel exigere, Et pro hac remissione et quieta clamacione nostra, Maior et burgenses nostri de communitate Leicestrie dederunt et quiet' clamauerunt de se et heredibus suis in perpetuum nobis et heredibus nostris uel assignatis nostris, quinquaginta sex solidos et octo denarios annui redditus percipiendos in villa nostra et in campis Leicestrie, scilicet de quatuor virgatis terre in Campo Australi Leicestrie quas habuimus de Andrea Loterel, quadraginta solidos quos Symon de la Saunce aliquando solebat percipere annuatim de predicta terra, Et in villa nostra Leicestrie et in subarbiis ejusdem ville sex-decim solidos et octo denarios, scilicet in parochia Sancti Nicolai de quadam terra que fuit Roberti fratris Baldwinii de Scharneford juxta terram que fuit Galfridi de Honecot', viginti denarios, Et de terra que fuit Hugonis de Stocton juxta terram que fuit Walteri Longi, quatuor decim denarios, Et de quadam terra jacente intra terram que fuit predicti Walteri Longi et terram que fuit Roberti le Omvers viginti denarios, Et in parochia Sancti Martini de terra que fuit Griffini Le Fol duodecim denarios et unum chaponem, Et de quadam terra jacente intra terram que fuit Radulphi Albold ex vtraque parte duos solidos et sex denarios et duas gallinas, Et in suburbio orientali de terra que fuit
Gamil Le Watirman nouem denarios et tres gallinas.
Et de terra que fuit Ricardi La Broth nouem denarios et quatuor gallinas, Et de terra que fuit Roberti mercatoris decem denarios et obolum et tres gallinas, Et de terra Helyue de Burbach quatuor denarios et obolum et vnam gallinam, Et de terra que fuit Yuois de Streton quatuor denarios et obolum et vnam gallinam, Et de terra Radulphi Cloucler sex denarios, Et de terra Petri de Petling duodecim denarios et quatuor gallinas, Et de terra Ricardi Cayran tres denarios et duas gallinas, Et de terra Willelmi de Barkeby tres denarios, Et in suburbio Boreali in parochia Omnium Sanctorum de quadam terra jacente intra terram que fuit Walteri rotarii et terram Johannis filii ejusdem Walteri viginti denarios et vnum chaponem cum homagiis, seruiciis, releuiis, et cum omnibus exitibus et libertatibus de pre-dicto redditu peruenientibus, Et ut hec omnia predicta firmitatis perpetue robur obtineant, nos et maior et burgenses nostri Leycestrie presentem cartam in modum chyrographi conficimus, et nos hanc partem ejusdem carte appositione sigilli nostri corroboravimus. His testibus, Domino Ernaldo de Bosco, Domino Radulpho Basseth, Domino Ricardo de Hauering, Domino Thoma de Estleya, Domino Willelmo Burdeth, Domino Roberto de Foleulle, Domino Radulpho camerario, Domino Roberto Motum, Henrico Mallore et aliis.

(12.) 37 Henry III.—Schedule of a rate levied in the town of Leycestre for the Redemption of Pontage and Gablepence.

(13.) 37 Henry the Third.—A Record (on vellum, measuring 8½ inches by 7½ inches) of two several Inquisitions for the origins of Bridge-Silver and Pontage at Leicester.

Inquisicio facta per juratos subscriptos, scilicet, Willelmum de Sancto Lando, Willardum de Lincolnia, Willelmum Baudewin, Alexandrum de bouere, Jacobum Motum, Willelmum Gamel, Willelmum Hode, Petrum Palmar', Nicholaum le Burgeis, Robertum Druer, Willelmum Loueman, Willelmum Balles, Henricum filium Ricardi, Radulfum Fode, Willelmum le Chapman, et Thomam Geram de denariis qui vocabantur Gouelpennis et de Pontagio, qualiter et qua de causa primo dati erant et capti. Qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod tempore Roberti de Medland tunc comitis Leycestrie contigit quod duo nepotes, scilicet, Nicholaus filius Acon' et Galfridus filius Nicholai de Leycestria quoddam vadiauerunt duellum pro quadam terra vnde placitum ortum fuit inter eos, et pugnaverunt ab hora prima usque ad horam nonam et amplius et ita debellantes adinuicem unus eorum fugauit alterum usque ad quadam paruum foueam, et sicut stetit supra paruum foueam et in eam deberet cecidisse, dixit ei nepos ejus, Conserva te de fouea ne cadas in eam, et statim factus fuit tantus clamor et tantus tumultus a circumstantibus et circumsecutibus, quod dominus comes audivit eorum clamorem usque in castellum et quesivit tunc a quibusdam qualis fuit ille clamor, et responsum fuit ei quod duo nepotes pro quadam terra debellauerunt, et unus eorum alterum fugauit usque ad quadam paruum foueam, et sicut stetit supra foueam et in eam deberet cecidisse, alter ipsum munivit. Burgenses vero tunc moti pietate ita conueniunt cum domino comite quod darent ei tres denarios per annum de quolibet domo cujus gablus situs esset versus altam stratum tali condicione quod eis concederet quod per xiiii. juratos qui erant in Leycestria antiquo tempore statuti ex eo tempore omnia placita ipsis contingencia essent discussa et determinata, et hoc a domino comite fuit eis concessum, et taliter prius levati erant denarii qui vocabantur gouelpennis. Post mortem vero ipsius domini comitis successit Robertus filius eius et heres qui pro salute anime patris sui predictos denarios qui vocabantur gouelpennis penitus remisit et per cartam suam imperpetuum quiet' clamavit. Predicta vero carta cum pluribus aliis scriptis et cartis tradita fuit in custodiam ejusdem burgensis et clerici qui Lambert appellabatur, in quem malefactoris insurrexerint de nocte qua pro divite tenebatur, et domos ejus incenderunt, unicum supradicta carta et multis aliis scriptis. Elapso autem multo tempore fuit quidam clericus in eadem villa Leycestrie nomine Hugo Manditt qui per multum tempus post mortem predicti Roberti comitis Leycestrie, qui cartam quiete clamacionis confecerat, preposituram Leycestrie habuit ad firmam, et dictos denarios qui vocabantur gouelpennis vi sua et voluntate propria collegit et extorsit, omnes vero contradicentes distringendo, dicens eis quod warentiam sibi monstrassent de quieta clamacione, quam quidem quietam clamacionem bene scivnt esse combustam, et taliter sunt soluti vsque in hodiernum diem. Hoc autem inquisicio facta fuit presentibus Rogero de Ekden tunc ballivo, Petro filio Rogeri tunc majore Leycestrie, Radulfo Oliuer, Ricardo de Campeden', et pluribus aliis die Lune proximo post festum Sancti Gregorii, anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis xxxvii. Inquisicio facta per eosdem juratos coram eisdem Rogero et Petro et aliis de Pontagio Leycestrie, qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod tempore ejusdem domini comitis foresta erat tam grandis spissa et ampla, quod nix posset aliquis transire per semitas illius foreste propter multitudinem mortui bosci et ramorum vento prostratorum, et per assensum et voluntatem domini comitis et consilii sui concessum fuit volentibus querere mortuum boscum, habere sex carrectas pro uno denario, et summam equi per septimanam pro obolo, et summam hominis per septimanam pro quadrante, et illi denarii primo ad exitum bosci colligebantur, postea vero extra villam Leycestrie propinquius versus boscum, tandem eciam illi denarii ad pontes ville Leycestrie colligebantur, ubi primus custos quidam fuit qui nocatus erat Penkrich, cui dominus comes ad petitionem suam postea concessit quandam aream juxta pontem, ad edificandum ut ibi consuetudinem illam colligere posset competencis. Ille vero Penkrich dictos denarios per multum tempus postea collegit tam de viride bosco et vendicione quam prius facere solebat de mortuo bosco, et sic in posterum in consuetudinem transbabeatur. Et ut veritas hujus inquisitionis plus pateat et evidencius appareat, bene potest percipi eo quod nulli extranei cuiuscunque fuerint provincie boscum vel mcremium cariantes sua fuerint de foresta de Arderne, siue de foresta de Kanik, vel de foresta de Modewode, vel quicunque fuerint exceptis illis de foresta Leycestrie nullum pontagium solvunt nec unquam solvere solebant.

Though the magnitude of this curious record is only 8½ inches by 7½ inches, it contains just seven hundred words, minutely written in contracted Latin, to the following effect:—

An inquisition made by the underwritten jurors, that is to say, William of St. Lo, Willard of Lincoln, William Baudewin, Alexander "de bouere," James Motum, William Gamel, William Hode, Peter the Palmer, Nicholas the burgess, Robert Druer, William Loveman, William Balles, Henry the son of Richard, Ralph Fode, William the chapman, and Thomas Geram, concerning the pence which were called Gouelpence and concerning Pontage, how and from what cause they were first given and taken. Who say upon their oath that, in the time of Robert de Medland, then earl of Leycestre, it happened that two kinsmen, to wit, Nicholas the son of Acres, and Geoffrey the son of Nicholas of Leycestre, waged a certain duel for certain land respecting which a suit had arisen between them; and they fought from the first hour even to the ninth hour and longer, and so fighting one with another the one of them drove the other back even to a certain little pit, and as he stood over the little pit and ought to have fallen into it, his kinsman said to him "Save thyself from that pit lest thou falllest into it;" and immediately there was made a great clamor, and so great a tumult by those standing and sitting around, that the lord earl heard their clamor even to the castle, and then sought from certain persons what that clamor was; and it was answered to him that two kinsmen fought for certain land, and one of them drove the other back even to a certain small pit, and as he stood over the pit and ought to have fallen into it, the other warned him. The burgesses truly then being moved by piety agreed in such manner with the lord earl that they would give him three pence per annum for each house, whose gable was placed towards the High Street, on condition that he would grant to them that all lawsuits affecting them should be discussed and determined by the twenty-four sworn men who were appointed in ancient time in Leycestre; and this was granted to them by the lord earl, and thus were first raised the pence which are called gouelpennis. But after the death of the same lord earl succeeded Robert, his son and heir, who for the safety of his father's soul altogether remitted and by his charter quit-claimed for ever the aforesaid pence which are called gouelpence. But the aforesaid charter, together with many other writings and charters, was given into the keeping of a certain burgess and clerk, who was called Lambert, against whom malefactors arose by night because he was taken for a rich man, and they burnt his house together with the aforesaid charter and many other writings. Moreover, much time having elapsed, there was a certain clerk in the same town of Leycestre, named Hugh Manditt, who throughout much time, after the death of the aforesaid earl of Leycestre, who had made the charter of quit-claim, had the bailiwick of Leycestre to farm, and by his own force and will collected and extorted the said pence which are called gouelpence, by distraining all who gainsaid him, averring to them that they should have shown to him warranty of the quit-claim, which quit-claim forsooth he knew well to have been burnt, and so they were paid even to this day. This inquisition, moreover, was made in the presence of Roger of Ekden then bailiff, Peter the son of Roger then mayor of Leycestre, Ralph Oliver, Richard of Campeden, and many others, on Monday next after the Feast of St. Gregory, in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of King Henry the son of King John. An inquisition made by the same sworn men before the same Roger and Peter and others, concerning the Pontage of Leycestre, who say upon their oath that in the time of the same lord earl, the forest of Leycestre was so great, thick, and ample, that scarce any one could pass through the paths of that forest on account of the multitude of dead wood and branches strewn by the wind; and by the assent and will of the lord earl and his council, it was granted to those wishing to seek for dead wood, to have six cartloads for one penny, and the burden of a horse by the week for a half-penny and the burden of a man by the week for a farthing; and those moneys were first collected at the exit of the wood, but afterwards outside the town of Leycestre nearer towards the wood. At length also those moneys were collected at the bridges of the town of Leycestre; where the first keeper was a certain person who was called Penkrich, to whom at his petition the lord Carl granted a certain open space near the bridge, to build upon it, that he might be the better able to collect that custom. And that Penkrich indeed through much subsequent time collected the said money as well for green wood and the sale of it, as he had been wont to do for dead wood, and so it was transferred to posterity for a custom. And that the truth of this inquisition may be the more manifest and evidently apparent, it can readily be seen by this that no foreigners of whatever province they be, carrying wood or timber, whether they be of the forest of Ardenne, or of the forest of Kanik, or of the forest of Medwode, or whosoever they shall be, those of the forest of Leycestre excepted, pay pontage or were ever accustomed to pay it.

Whilst the form and substance of this remarkable document show that it relates to two earlier writings, and may be described as a memorandum and summary of the returns of two several inquisitions, its handwriting countenances the opinion that the charter was penned half a century later than the inquests to which it refers. It is not often that an explorer of archives comes upon a single manuscript that affords so large an amount of information touching the social history of England in the eleventh and two following centuries. Giving the inquirer a striking picture of the old borough town with its one main street bordered by gabled houses, it yields a notable case of trial by battle in the eleventh century, attended with a popular protest against the legal method that was introduced into this country by the Norman conquerors, and that having survived to the sixteenth century in civil proceedings was not completely removed from the provisions of our criminal law till the closing term of George the Third's reign. It moreover affords us an interesting view of a matter touching the origin and growth of customs in Leicester forest under the Norman earls, preserves the story of a lawless outbreak accompanied with a memorable destruction of local records, and restores to the familiar term "pontagium" a particular signification that has been lost for several centuries.

(14.) 39 Henry III.—Charter for substituting the Law of Inheritance by Primogeniture in Leicester in place of the Law of Inheritance by Borough English:—Omnibus Christi fidelibus dominus Symon de Monte Forti comes Leycestrie senescallus Anglie salutem:— Nouerit universitas nostra nos pro salute anime nostre Alienore uxoris nostre puerorum antecessorum et successorum nostrorum, ad instantiam et supplicationem burgensium nulle nostre Leycestrie propter communem utilitatem et melioracionem status eiusdem uille que propter defectum heredium et debilitatem eorum jam multo tempore fere ad occasum declinavit et ruinam, communi assensu et voluntate omnium burgensium predictae nulle nostre Leycestrie concessisse et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse quod omnes filii primogeniti de legitimo matrimonio in prenominata uilla nostra Leycestrie et ejus suburbio post mortem patrum eorum hereditatem paternam et habitationem pacifice quiete et sine omni contradictione decetere habeant et optineant et sint eis heredes decetere legitimi. Ita quod filii ultimo geniti in dicta uilla Leycestrie qui ante concessionem et confectionem hujus carte nostre patribus uel antecessoribus eorum tanquam heredes in hereditate successerunt toto tempore vite sue pacifice quiete et sine omni contradictione hereditatem et habitationem habeant et possideant et quod filii eorum primogeniti secundum concessionem prenominatam in hereditatem decetere succedant. Hiis testibus, dominis Rogero de Quency comite Wyntonie, Radulpho Basset, Willelmo Basset, Ricardo de Hauering, Thoma de Estlegha, knights, Bartholomeo le Jesne, Ricardo Morin, Andrea de la Breche, Alexandro clerico, et aliis. Datum apud Westmonasterium die Veneris proximo post festum Sancti Luce evangeliste anno regis Henrici filii regis Johannis tricesimo nono.—Also, a duplicate of the same Charter.

(15.) 24 January, 40 Henry III.—Charter for substituting the Law of Inheritance by Primogeniture in Leicester in place of the Law of Inheritance by Borough English. Henricus Dei gratia rex, &c., &c. Sciatis nos ad diligenter instantiam et crebram supplicationem communis burgensium de Leicestria propter utilitatem communem et melioracionem laudabilem status ejusdem uille que per defectum heredium et etatem tenebram eorumden multis retro temporibus ad occasum nergebat et ruinam manifestam, assensu communi et voluntate vna cum dilecti et fidelis nostri Simonis de Monte forti comitis Leicestrie et burgensium predictorum statuasse concessisse et hac carta nostra confirmasse pro nobis et heredibus nostris quod omnes filii primogeniti de legitimo matrimonio in villa Leicestrie et ejus suburbio procreati defunctis patribus succedant et hereditatem paternam et eorum habitationes pacifice et quiete post mortem patrum optineant et ad heredes legitimi decetere licite possideant imperpetuum. Ita quod filii ultimo geniti in dictis uilla et suburbano tempore confectionis hujus carte superstitibus existentes et paternam possessionem optinentes possessiones et hereditates paternas sine contradictione qualibet habeant et retineant et eorum filii primogeniti post eos secundum predictam concessionem nostram in ipsorum hereditatem decetere succedant ut predictum est imperpetuum. Si vero ipsi de se ipsis heredes non habuerint tunc prosequiores heredes eorum eis ratione primogeniture hereditarie succedant prout alibi in regno nostro observatum est et optentum. Hiis testibus: Guidone de Lezinam fratre nostro, Johanne filio Galfridi, Johanne de Grey, Willelmo Bardulf, Willelmo de Gray, Alano Le Zach, Nicholao de Sancto Mauro, Willelmo de Arden, Willelmo Gernum, et aliis. Datum per manum nostram apud Windesoram vicesimo quarto die Januarii anno regni nostri quadragesimo. Endorsed, "Carta quod hereditas sit ad communem legem."

(16.) 30 May, 41 Henry III.—Letters Patent granting to the burgesses of Leicester for seven years exemption from royal 'prise' for all their goods throughout the kingdom:—Henricus Dei gratia, &c. Sciatis nos ad instantiam dilecti et fidelis nostri Simonis de Monte Forti comitis Leycestrie concessisse pro nobis et heredibus nostris burgensibus suis Leycestrie quod a festo Sancti Johannis Baptiste anno regni nostri quadragesimo primo usque ad finem septem annorum proxime sequentium quieti sint de omnimodo prisae nostre de pannis et omnibus aliis rebus et mercandis suis in singulis nudinis et mercatis per totum regnum et potestatem nostram. Ita quod nullus ab eis aliquid capiat de pannis aut aliquibus rebus uel mercandis suis contra voluntatem eorum nisi eis inde incontinentiter taliter satisfaciatur quod dicti burgenses inde fuerint contenti. Et ideo vobis mandamus quod predictos burgenses contra hanc concessionem nostram non vexetis aut ab aliis vexari permittatis. In cuius rei testimonium has litteras nostras eis fieri fecimus patentes. Teste me ipso apud Westmonasterium tricesimo die Maii anno regni nostri quadragesimo primo.

(17.) 26 September, 45 Henry III.—Privy Seal warrant, addressed to the mayor and bailiffs of the town of Leicester, to convey to London with a strong guard Johan de Suwer and Piers Laniet, hostages of Beauvoys, and to deliver them to Richard Lescrop, treasurer, with all possible speed.—Given at Windesore.

(18.) 22 April, 53 Henry III.—Letters Patent for the burgesses of Leicester, touching distraint and arrest for debt:—Henricus Dei gracia rex Anglie dominus Hibernie et dux Aquitanie omnibus ad quos presentes littere pervenerint salutem. Sciatis quod ad instantiam Edmundi filii nostri karissimi concessimus maori et burgensibus ipsis filii nostri de Leicestria pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quod ipsi vel eorum bona quocumque locorum in potestate nostra inuenta non arrestentur pro aliquo debito de quo fidejussores aut debitores principales non existerint; nisi forte ipsi debitores de eorum sint communia et potestate, habentes unde de debitis suis in toto vel in parte satisfacere possunt, et ipsi maior et burgenses in justicia deferunt et de hoc rationabiliter constare poterit. Et probemus super forisfacturam nostram ne quis eos contra hanc libertatem et concessionem nostram in aliquo iniuste molestare vel inquietare presumat. In cuius rei testimonium has litteras nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste me ipso apud Windesoram xxii die Aprilis anno regni nostri quinquagesimo tercio.

(19.) A.D. 1261.—Charter of gift and conveyance by Felicia de Benewick to her daughter Aueline. Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego Felicia de Benewik filia Rogeri de Sallowe relicta Alexandri de Benewik in mea libera vnditate et ligia potestate concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Aueline filie mee et heredibus suis nel suis assignatis totum jus meum et clamium quod ego nunquam habui nel habere debui in vno messuagio jacente in parochia Omnium Sanctorum Leycestrie extra portam Borialem, inter terram que fuit Willelmi persun et terram que fuit Gregorii Makepays fratris mei, et in omnibus aliis terris et redditibus et tenementis que Walterus de Camera accept in liberum maritagium cum Matilda sorore mea, habendum et tenendum dicte Anele et hereditibus suis uel suis assignatis libere quiete plenarie hereditarie imperpetuum sine aliqua condicione mei nel heredum meorum. Et ut hec mea concessio et confirmacio imperpetuum rata sit et stabilis hanc cartam signavi sigillo meo. Hiis testibus, Henrico de Rodington tunc maiore Leycestre, Ricardo de Campden tunc proposito, Alexandro debonere, Nicholao le Burgeys, Roberto de Petling, Willelmo Sixeantwendi, Willelmo de Nouo Castello, Roberto de Lutheteburg, Ricardo de Schelton, Symone Sixeantwenti, Andrea de Wateber, Waltero clerico et aliis. Datum die Lune proxime post festum translaconis martyris Sancti Thome, anno Domini m^o.cc^o.lx^o. primo.

(20.) A.D. 1264.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by John Page and Cecily his wife; conveying to Cecily, the daughter of Alexander le Deboner and her heirs and assigns for ever, a certain piece of land formerly belonging to Peter, the son of Walter, and lying in the Fullers' Street of Leycestre, at a yearly rent of threepence to the grantors and their heirs. Witnessed by Henry de Doddington, then mayor of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(21.) A.D. 1266.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Roger and Lucy his wife, daughter of William the smith; conveying (in consideration of his homage and service and ten shillings of silver) a certain piece of land, without the north gate of Leycestre in the Fullers' Street, to William Pille and his heirs and assigns for ever a yearly rent of threepence "et vnum florem Rose" being reserved to the grantors and their heirs. Witnessed by Henry Rodington, then mayor of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(22.) A.D. 1272.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Nicholas le Burgeys; conveying to the grantor's daughter Rose, and her heirs and assigns for ever, a certain piece of land beyond the north gate of Leycestre in the Fuller's Street together with a certain annual rent of twelvepence and two hens and one cock to be had out of a certain piece of land formerly belonging to Geoffrey of Eytyn; to have and hold of the grantor and his heirs and assigns at a yearly rental of three silver pence.

(23.) A.D. 1272.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by John de Foleuile; conveying to Reginald, the son of Geoffrey de Gaddesbro, and Cecily his wife, for their homage and service, a toft in the town of Gaddesbro, and six rods of arable land in the field of the same town, to have and to hold to the said Reginald and Cecily and their heirs and assigns not being religious men or Jews (niris religiosis et Judeis exceptis), and also with the exception of Henry the chaplain of Reverly and his brothers; a yearly rent of four shillings being reserved to the grantor and his heirs.

(24.)—Henry III.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by John, the son of Richard the palmer, in favour of Roger de Hetene and his heirs, in respect to homage and service due from the said Roger and his heirs, and also a yearly rent of one penny to be had from certain tenements which the said Roger bought of the same John.

(25.)—Henry III.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by William Ordris, the son of Stephen the son of Iuon; conveying to Peter, the son of Roger, mayor of Leycestre, and the burgesses and commune of Leycestre and their successors, a certain capital messuage formerly pertaining to the grantor's father in Leycestre, the same being opposite the grave-yard of St. Nicholas, at a certain corner between the land formerly belonging to Richard le Parmenter and the land of Henry Schaune. Witnessed by Richard de Haveringes, then steward of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(26.)—Henry III.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Sanson Valethons of Derwib; conveying to William de Sancto Laudo, burgess of Leycestre, and his heirs and assigns, a certain yearly rent of four shillings and sixpence to be had of certain lands in the parish of St. Nicholas of Leycestre for ever; the said grantee and his heirs and assigns being bound to pay the said grantor and his heirs for ever a yearly rent of "vnum par albarum cirothecarum de precio vnius oboli et vnam fleccham." Witnessed by Simon Curlewache, then alderman of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(27.)—Henry III.—Deed executed by Robert de la Santer, in consideration of thirty-three marks paid to him; conveying to the mayor and burgesses of Leycestre forty solidates of annual rent, hitherto received out of four virgates of land in the south suburb of Leycestre, which the Lord Symon de Montefort bought of the Lord Andrew Loterel.

(28.)—Henry III.—Deed of gift and quitclaim by Silverun, daughter of Robert the Vilein, to Ralph Swepstone and his heirs. Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego Silverun filia Roberti le vilein que fui quondam uxor Henri aurifabri in ligia potestate mea, et libera nuditate mea concessi et quieti clamavi Radulpho de Swepstone et hereditibus suis uel cui assignare voluerit de me et hereditibus meis imperpetuum totum ius et clamum quod habui nel habere potui in tota terra que mihi descendit jure hereditario de Roberto le Vilen fratre meo, que jacet inter terram Alicie filie Silverun, et terram Galfridile conig', et sex denarios redditus et duos capones cum homagis et relevis percipiendos de terra dicte Alicie filie Silverun, habendum et tenendum dicto Radulpho et hereditibus suis uel cui assignare voluerit libere et quiete plenarie et hereditarie, reddendo inde annuatim Roberto de Wykewauc quatuor denarios et quatuor capones, scilicet ad purificationem beate Marie tres obolos, ad Pentecostam tres obolos, ad festum Sancti Michaelis unum denarium, ad Natale Domini quatuor capones; et Roberto filio Ricardi de Lyecestria sex denarios, scilicet ad purificationem beate Marie ii. denarios, ad Pentecostam ii. denarios, ad festum Sancti Michaelis ii. denarios. Pro hac concessione et quieta clamacione dedit mihi predictus Radulphus quadraginta solidos, et dim. quatr. frumenti. Et ut hec mea concessio et quieta clamacio rata sit et stabilis imperpetuum huic scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hiis testibus, Willelmo de Sancto Lando et Petro filio Rogeri tunc maioribus Leycestre, Willardo de Lincolnia, Roberto de Stocton tunc propositis, Henrico Costryn, Laurencio Silverun, Ricard de Blaby, Simone Dayrel, Rogero aurifabro, Radulfo Page, Roberto Griffin et multis aliis.

(29.) Charter of gift and conveyance by John the son of Walter the Wheelwright to William de Seyntlo:—Sciant presentes et futuri, quod ego Johannes filius Walteri Rotarii dedi et concessi et presenti carta mea confirmavi Willelmo de Seyntlo pro homagio et servicio suo redditum viginti denariorum et unum caponem per annum percipiend' scilicet de Willelmo Brunnan et hereditibus suis et homagium et servicium ejusdem Willelmi et heredum suorum cum omnibus exitibus et relevis in de pervenientibus scilicet de quadam terra in suburbio Leycestrie extra portam Aquilonis que jacet inter terram meam et terram que fuit Walteri, patris mei, habendum et tenendum sibi et hereditibus suis de me et hereditibus meis libere quiete et hereditarie, reddendo inde annuatim mihi et hereditibus meis pro omnibus serviciis vnam fleccam ad Natale Domini. Pro hac autem donacione et confirmacione mea mihi prenominationis Willelmus vndecim solidos sterlingorum dedit. Ego vero Johannes et heredes mei memoratum redditum et homagium et servicium cum relevis et aliis exitibus prefato Willelmo et hereditibus suis contra omnes gentes warrantabimus. Hiis testibus, Briano forestario, Johanne Fridayleyn, Simone Turk, Dickun Le Poer, Herberto Le Ruf, Laurencio clerico et pluribus aliis.

(30.) 1 Edward I.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Elena, the daughter of Nicholas de Kent of Leycestre; conveying to Ralph de Dutton of Leycestre and his heirs and assigns half acre of land with its appurtenances in the Field of Knynton over the Blakewellefollonges (in campo de Knynton super le Blakewellefollonges) for ever. Witnessed by John Espin of Knynton and others.

(31.) A.D. 1272.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by Alicia, the widow of Roger of Ketene, in favour of Geoffrey the baker and his heirs for ever, in respect to all claim or title which she may have by right of dowry or otherwise in a certain piece of land outside the north gate of Leycestre in the Fullers' Street.

(32.) A.D. 1272.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Geoffrey de Ketene, conveying to Geoffrey the baker, and Alice his wife and their heirs and assigns, a certain piece of land outside the north gate of Leycestre in the Fullers' Street, for ever; a yearly rent being reserved to the grantor, his heirs and assigns, of "vnam fleccham." Witnessed by John Leffe, then mayor of Leycestre, and others.

(33.) A.D. 1275.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by John de Durham, to Matilda, the widow of Robert de Someredeby, and her heirs and assigns for ever, in respect to a certain annual rent of "vnam fleccham," hitherto rendered to the said John de Durham, out of a piece of land which he sold to the said Robert and Matilda.

(34.) A.D. 1275.—Power of attorney, executed by Geoffrey de Ketene; authorising Geoffrey le Bakete and William Arstyn and their heirs to distrain, when there shall be necessity to do so, on a certain piece of land outside the north gate of Leycestre. Witnessed by William Leffe, then mayor and others named and unnamed.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

(35.) A.D. 1277. — On an unusually large indented skin the long lost Charter of Edmund (Crouchback) earl of Leicester (brother of Edward the First); reforming the laws and processes of the Leicester portmannemote, and confirming all the ancient franchises of the burgh, not affected by the charter.

Pur ceo ke les delays de la curt de portemmannemot de Leycestre vnt este tropz lungs et acuns vsages a mins a cels ke lor dreit dussent suire, sire Edmund frere nostre seigneur Le Rey seigneur de la ville auant dite par son conseil et par assent del meyre e de jures e de tote la comune de mesme la vile ad ordene e purueu les amon-zemenz de sus escrits.

En primes pur ceo ke quant vn homme se fu plaint de vn altre de dette ou de trespas, demi an ou vn an enter passa souent auant ke il poeit mener sun adversaire a respuns, partie par fieble destresce de baillifs, e par ceo ke eus muscerent lor choses en chaumbres ou ailors ke hum ne lor poeit destreindre, e ainsi par ceo ke eus passerent sanz amercement de lor defautes. En amendement de ceste chose est purueu quant vn homme se plaint de vn altre reseant en la vile en sa absence de dette ou de chatels a tort prises ou detenez seit celi de ki il se est plaint comuns par tesmoigne de deux veysins de estre a la prochein curt a respandre. E si a cele curt ne vegne seit fet vne simple destresce de li dekil se atache par pleggis de estre a lautre curt e si il trusse pleggis e ne vegne pas ou si il ne voile pleggis troner seit comande a destreindre de estre a la terre curt par la grant destresce par quance hom trone del soen dedenz mesun ou dehors issi ke il face muscer enclore ses biens en chaumbre ou ailor, le baillif par vene de les veisuns se face entre par tut a li destreindre de kataunt kil se justise, e sil ad troue pleggis de venir, soient les pleggis en la merci par ceo ke els ne le auient mie a lor jour, si eus ne puissent mustrer resnable enchesun pur quei eus ne le auerent mie. En mesme la manere seit fet en plai de trespas quant a destresces mes ke tut deprimis seit mis par pleggis. Puis quant le defendant ad fet defautes issi kil vent par la grant destresce ke seit issue sur li seit en la merci sil ne puisse ses defautes sauuer par dire ke il fu hors de vile e ren ne saneit del plai, ou ke il fu desturbe par altre achesun resnable e ceo voile auerier. A ceo si le defendant eit pleggis trone ou meinporns de estre a la curt a certain jor e ne li puisse estre eyent les plegges ou les meinporns sil voient a lor for fersal pur ly en lu de assoyne cum auant fu vse, e le eyent puis auant a vn altre jor. — A ceo quel oure ke les parties vengent primes ensemble en curt le defendant sil vent die haelawe e par taunt passe a cele jornee cum auant fu vse, issi ke mes par haelawe dire en vn que-rele ne seit delay grante for vse fiez. E quant il anera dit haelawe trusse plegges ou mette son estal en pleggage si il seit estale de venir a la prochein curt siwant cum fu auant vse. E si dunt ne vegne seit destreint par la grant destresce cum auant est dit des kil vegne. E quant il vent seit en la merci si il ne puisse ses defautes sauuer. E pur ceo ke auent aucune fiez ke vn homme se plaint de vn altre de grant quantite de dette ou de gref trespas e celi de ki se est plaint ne seit mie asez justisable par teres ne tenemenz ne par altre chose ke il ad en la vile a vse fiez vent e meine chatels en la vile e est par ceus chatels destreint a si iustiser e face deliuerer ses chatels par plegges ou meinporns a venir e a estre a dreiture puis lest ses plegges ou ses meinporns en cure e se sustret e li e ses biens ke nule destresce sur li ne put estre trone. E pur ceo ke les plegges en tel kas soleyent fere lor pes ver le baillif de vn sis deners ou de dazze de ceo ke eus ne le auoyent mie si cum els le plainrent ou meinprirent e par taunt passerent quit, e le plaintif perdi issi sa dette ou ses amendes ke auer dunt; sur ceo est purueu en tel cas, si distresce seit deliuerer par pleggage ou meinprise de acun, si celi ki est repleni ou meinpris ne vegne a se justiser cum fere deit soient ses pleggis ou ses meinporns destreint a auer le auant, si eus le puissent auer, e seynt en la merci pur ceo ke eus ne le auient mie, si eus ne se puissent par resnable enchesun sauuer, e dunt a meins eyent la chose auant ke par lor pleuine ou lor meinprise fu deliuerer ou la value. — E pur ceo ke vsage est en la vile ke vn home ki tegne del cunte en chef si il seit emplede, il memes ou son seigneur de ki il tent en chef purrant venir e demander curt de li, aint soient ke puis la partie en la suite fut longement trauaile e la curt ausi, dunt a deprimis vint il v sun seigneur e demanda sa curt e le auent, e en cele curt derichef fist tut nuuels delais; sur ceo est ore purueu ke cely ki voile curt demander vegne a la demande dedenz la terre curt de la parole atache, e

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

auant ke la parole seyt que-rele ou respundu. E si ceo nun perde sa curt de cele que-rele. E puis quant auera sa curt face pleine dreiture. E si il ne le face vegue le plaintif arere a la chene curt e pruisse par dons leus bumes en ar quei cele curt li est faili de dreiture. E seit le seigneur garni a venir a ce oyir si volt, e son aduersaire ausi. E si la defaute de la curt seit proue voyent auant en la principal en la chene curt cum ad este vse auant. — E pur ceo ke vse fu auant ces oures quant les parties deueient pleder e le plaintif aneit dit sa que-rele, si le defendant taunt tost cum la parole ly fut issue de la buche ne deist Thwerthunay il fut teun cum non defendu e ceo apelerent Swareles. Ne ne li fut suiffert de enparler ne de conseil demander ne nul hume ki suist les vsages pur li parler, dunt muz enfurent perdaunt ke ne saucient les usages: sur ceo est ore purueu ke quant les parties aperent c deueient pleder le plaintif die pleyement sa que-rele sanz chalenge v hoket par li meimis sil sache ou par altre ke seit auoc si memes ne sache, issi ke par obliance de tens ne par autre circumstance chalenge la que-rele ne seit abatue. Mes si le defendant demande declaracion de tens ou de altre chose ke necessaire seit a la pleinte pur meuz estre acerte a respandre seit la declaracion fece mesme lur sanz chalenge. Puis quant le plaintif auera que-rele, le defendant eit resnable espace a respandre kilne seit surpris. E sil se voile conseller e enparler le face par cunge e renege e die ceo ke il quide ke il quide ke (sic) li puisse valer tut sanz chalenge ne hoket par li meimes ou par altre ke seit auoc sil memis ne sache. E sil quide ke son primer respuns ne suffise mie die altre chose ou il se voile a trenk tenir e jugement prendre. E si par auenture quant le plaintif auera que-rele le defendant ne puisse dedire ceo ke il anera dit ver ly, ou ne voile respandre puis kil serra amoneste par le baillif, si il ne die resnable enchesun pur quei respandre ne deit, seit cum non defendu e cum Swareles cum fu auant vse. E pur ceo ke auant fu vse ke le defendant ne poeit a la pleinte le plaintif autre chose respandre for tut grantur ou tut dire Thwerthunay. E quant il auent dit le nay deueit estre a sa ley seit sisme meyn dunt son aduersaire ou home pur li elireient gente que ne irrieit od li pur fauor de lautre partie ou pur haine de li. E si il ne poeit sa ley fere od cele gent nomez serreit ataint de tote la parole fust ele verrais ou fause. Par ceo est purueu primes en plaie de dette si le defendant li dedie e le demandant eit proue de sa dette par escrit taile ou par rive voiz seit rescu a la proue fere issi ke si il neit for taile ou rive voiz, Jurge il primes e puis ses tesmoines ke il meine, e seynt examine de oye e de vene les tesmoines si eus furent a la dette prendre ou a la taile fere, ou si eus furent la ou la dette ou la taile fu grante, e solum ceo ke eus prout recouere sa dette ou perde. E seynt les tesmoines lele gens ne mie suspecens customers ne lowiz a faus sermenz aler. E si il nome tesmoines e eus pur fauor ou par atie se sustrent de la verite dire, soient destreint par le baillif a venir e dire lor verite, e ausi cum est auant dit seynt examine, ou si les parties par assentement se voient mettre en enqueste de veisins ke senent la verite de ceste chose, soit lenqueste prise. E si le plaintif ne eit for sa simple roix seit le defendant a sa ley par tauntz cum la curt agardera de bone gent e leaus ne mie lowyz ne customers a faus sermenz aler. E sil face sa ley al jor ke done li est, passe quit. E si il defaile seit cum ataint de la parole. En mesme la manere en plai de trespas si le defendant die Thwerthunay seit a sa ley e en mesme la manere la face. E ke nul desormes seit destreint a sa ley fere par gent nomez cum fut auant vse. E si le defendant en plai de trespas se voile mettre en enqueste de son fet, seit lenqueste prise par gent couenables hors pris ses unsurs. E si jor del enqueste seit done e le defendant ne vegne seit destreint de estre a lautre curt. E si a cele curt ne vegne seit lenqueste pris par sa defaute jugement rendue execution fete. E pur ceo ke fons sunt barez en la vile, batteries, horsokene e sunt banz a ceo fere pur ceo ke eus ne vnt ren par vnt estre justises. Si les trespas seynt encontre la pes, soient justises par lor cors a ester a dreit. E si eus ne se amendent e seynt customers a tels ultrages fere soient fet voyder la vile. E pur ceo ke aturnez ne soleyent estre pris fors en curt e en presence des parties e ce pur le plaintif sulement dunt mals de gent enperdiert lor altres besoignes ou lor paroles, est purueu ke lunc partie ou lautre ke voile puisse aturnez fere a ceo ausi bien en absence de son adversaire cum en sa presence. E ke la torneseit rescu en son lit a faire taunt cum il meismes freit fors sal a la lei fere; ceo est asauer en paroles ke par aturnez puissent estre plede, e ce denant deus jures ke latrone puissent temoiner si mester seit. E pur ceo ke vse fu ke le plaintif purreit fere trouis defautes e ja le meiz aler auant en sa que-rele; purueu est ke si le pleintif ne siwe mie sa querele al jors ke done li sunt, seit en la merci e ses plegges de siwe si il les oit e son adversaire a mesme le jor passe saunz jor par sa defeaute.—E pur ceo ke vn vsage fu en la vile, ke si vn hme se pleinsist de vn alre taunt cum sa pleinte fust pendaunte, son adversaire de nule pleinte dunt il se pleintist de li serreit oy, dunt auint sount, ke si un hme eust batu vn alre si celi ki le tort auent fet peust cure auant al baillif e pleindre sey e celi ki tut le damage eust rescu venist apres e se pleinsist, ja ne serreit oy pur la pleinte lautre; sur ceo est puruen ke chescun en sa pleinte vers alre seit oy e chescun estoise a dreit vers alre si cum dreit veit auer. E mes par cel vsage ke fu apele Holsake home seit delae de son dreit siure.—E pur ceo ke les marchaunz furent sount as grant feires de la terre fu vse ke taunt cum le grant feires sistent nul plai ne fust tenuz nent plus de ceus ke furent ameson ke de ceus ke furent a feyres, est ore puruen ke les curz seient tenues e dreiture seit fete de ceus ke ameson sunt, e ceus ki a feyres sunt seit assoinez par les feires, ceo est asauer par ceus feires, dunt assoine solient estre auant ces orres, si issi ne seit ke ceus ke als feires sunt auant lor aler la cient fet atornez ke lor dreit puissent siure ou defendre.—E pur ceo ke hom soloit destreindre veysin par veysin a auer le auant, est ore puruen ke nul ne seit destreint pur alre si il ne fust son plegge ou son meinprior ou alre rescu seit pur quel il deue estre destreint pur li. Comandne est ausi ke le meyre e tuz les jurez ke en vile sunt si eus ne eyent resnable destu:ber seient al plez e a dreiture fere e jugement rendre, e si hom seit americe seit le americiement taxe mesme le jor ou lendemain, e ceo par jurez solum ces chateus e son trespas e ne mie a volute de baillif. Ne nul jure ne baillif ke dreiture doit fere ou jugement rendre seit meinteior de parole ne cuntour, si ceo ne soit pur sei mesmes ov ses aliez. E dunk ne fece il mie al jugement. E pur ceo ke acune fiez suraindreit bogones en la vile dont la gent ne furent ren garniz dunt lor count a prompter argent pain e vin e alre chose, ens alerent e aprompterent de acune gent ceo ke mester lor fu, e puis malement le rendirent a volute e a damage de creantors. Pur ceo est ordine e puruen si ren desormes seit aprompte al oes de la vile tauntost tayle en seit fete al creantour e seit la dette aquide denz les quarante jors procheinz siuauz. E si ceo nun, vegne celi kila dette est due al primer portemanne: mot apres les quarante jors e demande sa dette. E si la dette ne li seit paye apres cele demande denz les vt jors siuauz, voist il al baillif del chastel, ke a la maistrance celi tauntost li face leuer sa dette de la commune ensemment ou les damages ke il auera e pur la deteneue, si eus ne puissent resnable enchesun mustrer pur quel la dette eit este taunt arere. Puruen est ensemment pur tailleges de les vnt est malement retenez e cuncocle e les poueres tuz jours payerent, e les greimors furent manees, ke si aurent ke taylage pur commune bosoigne de la vile conuegne estre fet seit cel taylage fet par les plus leans de la vile e ke meuz sachent les eses de gent par lor serment solum la quantite de la chose ke couent estre leue, e solum les eses chescun ke tayle serra. E cel taylage pleinement par le meyre e ceus ke il comanderunt seit leue taunt cum purra auant ke nul autre seit asis. E si ren remayne vltre, seit mis en la commune burse ensele de dens seaus de dous prudishumes de la commune.—E chescun an seit acunte rendue des tailleges assis auer ceo ke est leue e ceo ke est arere e ou la chose est dependue. E cel acunte seit rendue par le meyre e cuillurs a la commune ou a ceus ke eus mettront en lor liu.—E si eus se sustreunt del acunte rendre, seient justise a ceo fere par la baillif del chastel.—Puruen est ausi ke si rente ou seruise de terre ou de tenement seit du seigneur de la vile ou a acun autre, e son fel seit forcos par mur ou par haye ou par mesun ke le baillif ou le seigneur ne puisse entrer a son fel destreindre pur son seruise ke arere est, bien list al baillif ou al seigneur fere sei entre, e mur ou pareie percer, si le tenant ne li face entre e par tut destreindre des kil eit son seruise. Mes ceo seit primes mustre en la curt de la vile e asent demande. E puis le facient seurement, si eus quident dreit auer solum ceo ke de aunciente ad este vse.—Les autres franchises de la vile auant dite e les vsages resnables cum auantvnt este vse remeineient estables. E ke tutes les choses auant dites seient estables a remenaunt, le auant dit sire Edmund a cest escrit ad mis son seel, ensemment od le seel de la commune de la vile auant dite.

(36.) A.D. 1278.—Deed executed by Emma, widow of Nicholas le Burgeis; conveying to the said Emma's daughter Rose, her heirs and assigns for ever, a certain garden in the north suburb of Leycestre, formerly belonging to the grantor's father, Symon Turk; a yearly rent being reserved to the said Emma and her heirs of "vnum par altharum cyrocarum." Witnessed by William le Engleys, then mayor of Leycestre, and several others named and unnamed.

(37.) A.D. 1282.—Deed executed by Richard, the son of Matilda Scheyle, chaplain; conveying to Thomas Gunfrey of Leycestre, and his heirs and assigns for ever (in consideration of sixty shillings of silver paid by the said Thomas), a certain half acre of arable land with appurtenances lying in the south field of Leycestre; a yearly rent of "vnum florem Rose" being reserved to the grantor and his heirs.

(38.) A.D. 1285.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Robert, the son of Alan the wheelwright; conveying to Robert Gerin, and his heirs for ever, a certain piece of land without the north gate, in the highway leading to north bridge, of Leycestre; at a yearly rent to the grantor and his heirs for ever of "vnum florem Rose," and to the abbot and convent of Leycestre, and their successors for ever, of two shillings and sixpence and two hens and a cock;—reddendo iude per annum mihi et heredibus meis vnum florem Rose ad festum Natiuitatis Sancti Johannis baptiste ac etiam reddendo inde per annum pro me et heredibus meis domino Abbati Leycestrie et conuentui et eorum successoribus duos solidos et sex denarios et duas gallinas et vnum gallum.

(39.) A.D. 1286.—Deed of release and quitclaim executed by Helyas, the son of Walter of Leycestre, in favour of Ralph Michillone, in respect of a yearly rent of two cocks, heretofore to be taken of the capital messuage formerly belonging to William de Velnhroft, in the east suburb of Leycestre, in the street called Humbirston-gate.

(40.) A.D. 1287.—Deed executed by Alexander Persun; conveying to William le Fleming, and his heirs and assigns (in consideration of eight silver shillings paid to the grantor), a certain piece of land in the parish of All Saints, Leycestre; an annual rent of "vnum florem Rose" being reserved to the said Alexander and his heirs. Witnessed by Thomas Gunfrey, then mayor of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(41.) A.D. 1287.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by Robert, son of Alan the wheelwright, in favour of Ralph, the son of Richard le Harrewright and his heirs, in respect of a certain piece of land in the north suburb of Leicester, from which a yearly rent of twenty-four pence and two capons is payable to the Earl of Leycestre. Witnessed by Thomas Gunfrey, then mayor of Leycestre, and by others named and unnamed.

(42.) A.D. 1288.—Deed of gift and conveyance executed by Emma, the widow of Nicholas le Burgeis; conveying to the said Emma's daughter Rose and John, the son of the said Rose, and the heirs of the said John, a capital messuage with appurtenances, formerly belonging to the grantor's father Simon Turk, in the north suburb of Leycestre, in the highway leading to the North Bridge, and also an annual rent of two shillings and sevenpence and two hens and a cock, to be had out of the land of William of the New Castle, for ever, the yearly rent of "vnum florem Rose" being reserved to the grantor; it being stipulated in the deed that in consideration of the aforesaid gift the said Rose and her heirs shall provide the grantor with food, clothing, and all necessities during her life, and that the same Rose, her heirs or their executors shall at the grantor's death give her at their own charges appropriate interment. Witnessed by Thomas Gunfrey, mayor of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(43.) 21 Edward I.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by Alan the son of Nicholas le Burgeis of Leycestre, in favour of William le Flemmyng of Leycestre and William de Rodyngton, and their heirs and assigns for ever, in respect to a certain yearly rent of two shillings, three hens and one cock, hitherto had of a certain piece of land in the Fullers' Road, outside the gate of Leycestre. Witnessed by Thomas Gunfrey, mayor of Leycestre, and others.

(44.) A.D. 1296.—Deed executed by James de Lede, merchant, and Elena his wife; conveying to Lord Walter de Rading, clerk, and his heirs and assigns for ever, "totam illam domum cum suis pertinenciis quam habuimus in villa Leycestrie, illam videlicet que aliquando fuit Henrici Costayn, et est inter venellam que ducit versus Saterdaymarket ex parte boriali et domum Johannis de Knichtecote que aliquando fuit Martini le coureiser ex parte australi, et extendit se in longitudine ab alto vico dicte ville vsque ad murum clausi Fratrum Minorum ibidem;" in consideration of twenty pounds sterling paid to the said James by the said Walter. Witnessed by Lord Robert Burdet, knt., John de Holt, steward of the honour of Leycestre, Peter Omfray, mayor of Leicester, and others named and unnamed.

(45.) A.D. 1299.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by Henry, son of Ralph the baker of Leycestre; conveying to Amice de Rochele, her heirs and assigns, a certain piece of land with its buildings and appurtenances in the east suburb of Leycestre, in the street called Humbristongate. Witnessed by William the Palmer, mayor of Leycestre, and Thomas Gumfrey and Peter Gumfrey, bailiffs of the same town, and others named and unnamed.

(46.) Edward I., II., III.—Placita Coronæ Rolls of the years 25 to 35 Edward I., 1 to 8 and 12 to 20 Edward II., and 1 Edward III.

(47.) 5 May, 2 Edward II.—Warrant (French) of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster and Leycestre and steward of England, to the auditors of the accounts of Thomas the Chamberlain and William the Palmer; to pay the same Thomas and William for provisions supplied to the earl's household xixl. vis. rd. ob. q., charging the same to Henri de Leycestre, the earl's clerk. Given, under the seal of the said earl and the seal of the said Henri, at the Castle of Kent de Souch.

(48.) II Edward II.—Deed of release and quitclaim, executed by Henry the son of John de Grescote of Leycestre, in favour of Richard de Swepestone of Leycestre and Alice his wife and their heirs for ever, in respect to all the said John's claim and title in a piece of land outside the northgate of Leycestre. Witnessed by John Marewe, mayor of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed.

(49.) 1 Edward III.—Portion of an injured roll of Coroners' Inquisitions held in the county of Leicester during the above-given year and eight former years.

(50.) 3 Edward III.—Copy of the record of the claims preferred by Henry, Earl of Lancaster, to powers and privileges in Lilleburn, Esthaddon, Hemelden, Dodefurd, and Weedon, in the Honor of Leycestre, in answer to the lord the king, on a plea of quo warranto before Geoffrey Le Scrope and other justices itinerant at Northampton. Headed, "Placita de quo warranto coram Galfrido le Scrope et sociis suis Justiciariis domini Regis itinerantibus apud Northampton die Lune proximo post festum Omnium Sanctorum anno regni Regis Edwardi terti a conquestu tercio;" and beginning, "Henricus Comes Lancasterie, &c., &c. clamat habere in Lilleburn, Esthaddon, Hemelden, Dodefurd, et Weedon cum omnibus membris suis que sunt de feodo predicti comitis de honore Leycestrie retinuum omnium brevium, plicita de retito natio, &c., &c." Also, Letters Patent of Insuperimus of the same record in Chancery, dated 16 November, 3 Richard III.

(51.) 4 Edward III.—Roll of three skins setting forth the answer of the citizens of Derby to a plea of quo warranto before William de Herle and his associates, the king's Justices Itinerant, at Derby Headed, "Placita de quo Warranto coram Will'o de Herle et sociis suis Justiciariis Regis itinerantibus apud Derby die Lune proximo post festum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli anno regni Regis Edwardi Tercii quarto," the record begins, "Burgenses ville Derbie cum fuerunt ad respondendum domino Regi de Placito quo Warranto clamant habere omnes libertates subscriptas."

(52.) 5 Edward III.—Copy on paper of the Letters Patent of the aforesaid year, granting to Richard Reynold for life the office of "towne clerk" of the town of Leicester. Also, on paper, a list of the successive High Stewards of the town of Leicester, temp. Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary and Elizabeth.

(53.) Easter Sunday, 18 Edward III.—Grant (French) by Henry, Earl of Lancaster and Leycestre, Steward of England, to the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the town of Leycestre, of a piece of land in the same town, "sur lewe de doore," adjoining to the messuage held by William Sharp, "sur mesure lowe," in recompense for another place granted to the Freres Prechers of Leycestre, near the place, "ou la com'naltee soleient avoir leur eysements." Witnessed by Mons. Robt. de Hungerford, Mons. Osman Trussel, and others. Given at the Castle of Leycestre. Greatly worn and mutilated.

(54.) 20 Edward III.—Indenture made between John de Northburgh, master of the Hospital of St. John of Leycestre, and the brothers of the same hospital, of the one part, and John Haward, Geoffrey de Kent, and Reginald Wayhons, of Leycestre, of the other part; whereby the said John, Geoffrey, and Reginald, grant and convey a messuage and twelve cottages, with their appurtenances, in the east suburb of Leycestre, (which they the said John, Geoffrey, and Reginald had of the gift and feoffment of Peter Selcer of Leycester), to the said master and brothers for ever, who, in consideration of the said grant, bind themselves and their successors for ever to maintain for ever a chaplain to celebrate daily (unless especially exempted by sickness or any other reasonable cause) mass for the souls of the said Peter Selcer and Alice his wife, and of all their sons and daughters, and of all who have died in the faith; the said chaplain to be presented by the said master and his successors in full court of Portmanmote of Leicester before the mayor and corporation of Leycestre, and there on his own oath to undertake so to celebrate mass all his life, and his successors after him to be in like manner presented and bound in the court of Portmanmote. Witnessed by the mayor of Leycestre and others.

(55.) 8 May, 2 Edward III.—Letters Patent of Pardon and acquittance to the men of the town of Leycestre, in respect to the six armed men which they were bound to provide for the king's guard and security on the occasion of his next passage to parts beyond the sea; the said pardon and acquittance being granted in consideration of twenty pounds paid by the men of Leycestre at the receipt of the king's Exchequer for the expenses of the said six men. Given at Westminster.

(56.) 15 October, 22 Edward III.—Copy (examined and attested by Peter Probyn, 15 Nov. 1604) of the certificate and return of the jury at the inquisition held at Bolyngbroke after the death of Alesia de Lacy, countess of Lincoln.

(57.) 25 September, 23 Edward III.—Letters Patent of grant to Henry (of Gresmont) Duke of Lancaster, that all his men and tenants be quit of pannage, lastage, cartage, and other dues throughout the kingdom, and that he have all forfeitures within his lordships and lands, together with other privileges, in accordance with the terms and tenor of previous Letters Patent of concessions, dated to the duke's father by the king, which the present duke has restored to the chancery, in order that they may be cancelled. Dated at Westminster.

(58.) Monday, the Feast of Maugdeleyne, 27 Edward III.—Charter (in French) of grant by Henry Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leycestre, and Steward of England, to the inhabitants of the town of Leycestre; liberating them and their descendants for ever from the custom of Huestermoll, so that the said tax may never again be raised in the said town. Dated at Leycestre.

(59.) 5 May, 31 Edward III.—Letters patent of pardon and remission to each and all of the Commons of England in the present Parliament assembled at Westminster, in respect of all escapes of prisoners (escapes of convicted clerks from the prisons of their bishops alone excepted) and chattels of felons and fugitives, and also all other amerciaments whatsoever of every county, hundred, and wapentake, &c. from Monday following Easter week last past to the completion of these present letters: the said pardon and remission being made at the supplication of the said commons, and in consideration of a certain fifteenth voted by them for the king's business. Given at Westminster.

(60.) 2 July, 34 Edward III.—Letters patent of the grant, at the instance of Henry, Duke of Lancaster and Earl of Leycestre, to the said duke and his heirs, of licence to hold a yearly fair at Leycestre and its suburbs, lasting seven days, viz., the three days before the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, and the day of the said feast, and the three days next following it; instead of the licence which the same duke and his ancestors from time before the memory of man have enjoyed to hold a yearly fair at Leycestre on the feast of the Discovery of the Cross and lasting for fifteen days afterwards. Given at Westminster.

(61.) Feast of the Assumption of the Virgin, 34 Edward III.—Grant by Henry Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Leycestre, Derby and Lincoln, and Steward of England, to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leycestre, of all authority and governance touching the arrangements for the yearly Michaelmas fair, a charter for holding which at Leycestre on seven following days of each year has been granted by the king to the said duke and his heirs, in place of another ancient fair heretofore held at the same town.

(62.) 6 May, 35 Edward III.—Indenture of an agreement between Henry, Duke of Lancaster and Earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leycestre of the one part, and the mayor and corporation of the town of Leycestre of the other part; whereby, in consideration of a remission of their obligation to pay the said duke ten thousand mares, and of an acquittance from tolls and other burdens, the said mayor and corporation grant and convey to the said duke all their manor of Wrangell, with its appurtenances in Holond, co. Lincoln. Dated at the Castle of Leycestre.

(63.) 6 March. 35 Edward III.—Indenture (French) between Henry Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, &c., &c., on the one part, and the mayor and corporation of Leycestre on the other part; being the indenture of the grant and conveyance of the manor of Wrangel by the said duke to the said mayor and corporation for ever, in consideration of the sum of ten thousand marks of silver to be paid to the said duke, his heirs or executors, at the next feast of Saint Michael. Dated at the Castle of Leycestre.

(64.) 6 March. 35 Edward III.—Warrant of attorney by Henry, Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leicester, to Simon Simeon, the said duke's steward, in the county of Lincoln, and Robert Elkyngton, deputy-steward of the same county, and Robert de Ernesby, the said duke's steward of Leycestre; authorizing the same Simon, Robert, and Robert to make livery of seisin of the manor of Wrangel, with all its liberties and appurtenances in Holond, in the county of Lincoln, to the mayor and corporation of Leycestre. Dated at the duke's castle of Leycestre.

(65.) 6 March, 35 Edward III.—Power of attorney under the common seal of the town of Leycestre, appointing John Parsymour, Roger de Knyghtcote and Roger de Belgrave of Leycestre, attorneys for the mayor and corporation of the said town, to take livery of seisin of the manor of Wrangel in Holond, co. Lincoln, according to the tenor of a certain grant made to them by Henry, Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leycestre.—Also the certificate, dated 14 of the same month and year, that John Lambe and Richard Sandysone have given livery of seisin of the said manor to the above-named attorneys, appointed for the purpose by the mayor and commonalty of Leycestre.

(66.) 9 March, 35 Edward III.—Acknowledgment (in French) by the Mayor and commune of Leycestre of their obligation to pay ten thousand marks to Henry, Duke of Lancaster. Dated at Leycestre, and sealed with the common seal of the mayor and commonalty.

(67.) 11 March, 35 Edward III.—Henry, Duke of Lancaster, &c., &c., to the tenants of his manor of Wrangel. Writ (French) of attornment on the grant and conveyance of the same manor by the said duke to the Mayor and corporation of the town of Leycestre.—Dated at the Castle of Leycestre.—Also, duplicate of the same writ.

(68.) 23 March next after Palm Sunday, 35 Edward III.—Indenture between Henry, Duke of Lancaster, &c., &c. of the one part, and the mayor and corporation of Leycestre of the other part; whereby the mayor, corporation, and inhabitants of Leycestre acquire immunity from toll, stallage, pikage, and tronage, at the grant of the said duke.—Also duplicate of the same writing.

(69.) 36 Edward III.—Charter (French) of concessions and confirmations of statutes, granted by Edward the Third in the Parliament held at Westminster, at the quintains of St. Michael, in the thirty-sixth year of his reign, closely written on three large membranes, with the great seal appended thereto.

(70.) 18 January 1364.—Indenture between John of Gaunt and his wife Blanche of the one part, and Robert de la Mar, John de Charnel, and John Newmarch, knts., of the other part, touching the Honor of Bolingbroke.—Ceste indenture facite entre lui noble home Monsr. Johan due de Lancastre et Blanche sa femme fille et heir Henri nadgaais due de Lancastre d'une p'te, et Robt. de la Mar chivalier, Johan de Charnelle clerc, et Johan Newmarche d'autre p'te, Testmoigne que les avanditz Robt. Johan et Johan ouint gr'ntee bailliez et lessez et p' ceste presente chartre confermez as ditz noble due et Blanche sa femme les chastell, manoir, et honor de Bolingbroke, et manoir de Sutton en Holland, et toutz les autres manoirs, terres, tenementz, rents, services, reversions, fees, audeuses offices, bailliez et possessions queconques, ou toutes manoirs franchises p'fiz commodites et toutz autres app'tances queux ils auoint joyntement du doum et graunt le dit Henri nadgaais due de Lancastre en le cointree de Nicole, a avoir et tenir as ditz noble due et Blanche sa femme et a les heires de leur corpz engendrez de n're seign' le Roi et aut's seign'ages des fees p' les franc'es dues et costumes rendantz annuellement as auanditz Robt., John, et John et a leur heires a toutz jours mille marcs a paier a los festes de Passier et de Saint Michael poueles pore'ons sur certains condic'ons continuez en vne autre indenture restante cestes facite entre les parties auanditz, s' quelles condic'ons la seisine est liure et la rente de mill' marz reserve. Et sil aueigne que la dite rente de mill' marz soit a deriere une des termes auanditz, que bien live a les auanditz, Robt., Johan, et Johan et a leur heires en le chastell, manoir, terres, et tenementz susditz et la distresse retenir tanque gree leur soit fait de la rente de mill' marz auanditz, et des les arranges en-coruz diell'. Et sil aueigne que les auanditz noble due et Blanche denoient saunz heir de leur deux corpz engendrez quodones auanditz chastell, manoirs, terres, et tenementz ou toutz leurs app'tances avant nomez remeignent a les droitz heires laundit Henri nadgaais due de Lancastre a tenir de n're seign' le Roi et des aut's chiefe seigneurs des fees a toutes jours, et rendent a les auanditz, Robt., Johan, et Johan, et a leur heires mill' marz, come devant est dit en la terme et condicions auant nomez. En testmoignance de quelle chose les auanditz noble due et Blanche, et Robt., Johan, et Johan, a cestes indentures entrechangeablement ont mys leur sealk, y ceuz tesmoignes, Symon euesqz de Ely chancellor n're S' le roi, Humfrei de Bohon comite de Hereford, Richard conte d'Arondell, Syre William de Wykeham Eircadeacon de Lincoln, Mons. Henry Greene Justice del Bank n're s' le roi, Mons. William de Skipwith Cheife Baron desleschequer et aut's. Don a Westm. le xxviii. jour de Januar, lan de grace mille trente sextant' quart, et due regne n're dit s' Roi Edward tierz puis le conqueste trent noessime. Et a greindre seurtee de la dite annuytee de mill' marz paier et p' fom'er les ditz noble due et Blanche ont mys les ditz Robt., Johan et Johan, en pleine et paisible saisine et paier a eux trois deniers en p'sence Mons. Henry de Percy le fuitz Mons' Henry de Grey et Mons' Godefroy Foljambe et aut's le jours et lan susditz.

(71.) 1366 (circa). Bill of particulars amounting in all to the sum of xxxiii. li. xiii. s. for labour and materials spent on building the old town hall of Leycestre "circa" edificacionem communis aulae." On paper, much defaced and worn.

(72.) 39 Edward the Third. Letter (in French) from the Mayor and aldermen of London, to the Mayor, bailiff and good people of Leicester, certifying that John Lyrepol, citizen of London (from whom the mayor and the people of Leycestre have taken a mazer on groundless suspicion of his character) is a loyal and good citizen. . . . As honorables homes et . . . t'ch's amys meire baillifs et bones gentz de la ville de Leycestre, les Meire et Audermans de la citee de Loundres salut et tresch're amities. A la demonstrance William Baillif n're . . . entenduz q' vous arestoiz p' vn Thomas Wyngere vn de vos comburgeis vne mazer pris xii. s. vi. d. de John Pyrepol vn poure marchand p' voie de suspicion entendantz et surmettenz q' le dit John est desloial hom'e et de male fame. Nous vous tesmoignons et p' cestez nos l'es vous c'tifions q' plusieurs bones gentz de la dite citee dignes de foi viendrent deuant nous et en leur foi et p' leur serementz nous c'tifieront q' le dit John est loial hom'e et de bone fame et q' le dit John achata le dit mazer de dit William a Loundres et paya a lui les xii. s. vi. d. auanditz affinct(?) le dit mazer p' vos arestnez est le bien et chatiel et loial marchandise du dit John et a nul autre. P'qoi vous prions especialement et requerrons q' au dit John ou a son co'em attorne cestes nos l'es portainet velleit le ditz mazer deliuerer p' amo' de nous en man'e come vous voldriez que nous feissions as voz gentz sils vissent affaire deuant nous en cas semblable ou en grandre. N're Seign' vous eyetz tous jo's en sa garde. Escrit a Loundres le xvi. jo' de Maij lan du reigne n're seign' le roi Edward tiercz puis le conqueste trente neofise.

(73.) Feast of the Assumption of the Virgin, 49 Edward III.—Indenture (French) of lease between John of Gaunt, King of Castille and Leon and Duke of Lancaster of the one part, and the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the town of Leycestre of the other part; whereby the said duke granted, and the mayor and burgesses acquired a lease for ten years of the bailiwick of the said town and its suburbs, at an annual rent of "quatre vintz liures." Given at Leycestre.

(74.) Writ of John (of Gaunt), son of the King of England, Duke of Lancaster and Earl of Richmond, Derby, Lincoln, and Leycestre and steward of England, and Blanche his wife, daughter and heir of Henry late Duke of Lancaster; confirming the mayor and commonalty of Leycestre in their possession of the manor of Wrangel and its appurtenances, co. Lincoln, granted to them by Henry late Duke of Lancaster aforesaid, and assuring them and their heirs enjoyment of the same, notwithstanding a certain fine levied by and between the said Henry late Duke of Lancaster of the one part, and Richard, Earl of Arundell, and John of Tynewell, late bishop of Lincoln, and Robert de la Mar and others on the aforesaid manor.

(75.) 1 Richard II.—Writ from Ricardus Dei gracia Rex, &c., &c., to the aldermen, bailiffs, and good men of the towns of Leycestre and Stamford; requiring the said towns to furnish between them this side of the first day of March next a barge duly fitted with forty or fifty oars for service in the military expedition which the king is about to make for the defence of the realm. The barge is described by the words "Unam parvam bargeam competentem vocatam balyngere cum remis inter quinquaginta et quadraginta."

(76.) 27 May, 2 Richard II.—Copy of the Letters Patent of the commission to Thomas de Erdyngton, John Burdet, James Velers, knuts, and Richard Assheby to levy a certain subsidy of the lords and magnates and corporations of the county of Leicester, and to employ as sub-collectors for that purpose Robert Burgays of Melton, William Danct, John Wolf of Frollesworth, Ralph Harleman, Richard Symond of Chedyingworth, William of Shepeve, William Baars of Bredon, and Richard Dekon of Budon. Dated at Westminster xxvii May die secundo Regis Ricardi.—On the back of the parchment, the form of oath to be administered to the commissioners and assessors: and the names of the assessors and collectors of the subsidy for the town of Leicester.

(77.) 8 February, 2 Richard II.—Letters Patent of Insuperimus of the charter granted by king John at Bures on 26 Dec. in the first year of his reign, to the burgesses of Leicester, in the following terms, "Johannes Dei gracia, &c., &c. Sciatis nos concessisse et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse burgensibus ville Leicesterie quod omnes empnciones et vendiciones terrarum ville Leicesterie que facte sunt et que fient rationabiliter in Portman-mota ejusdem ville stabiles et firme permanent; together with ratification and confirmation of the same charter.—Dated at Westminster.

(78.) 2-3 Richard II.—Comptus Rogeri Sporiour, camerarii Leicesterie.

(79.) 2 and 3 Richard II.—Roll (of sixteen skins) of records of proceedings in the court of Portmanmote in the years 2 and 3 Richard II.

(80.) 3 Richard II.—Latin Memorandum endorsed "Certen Ordynances made the tyme of Henry Clipston Mayor of Leicester, anno Regis Ricardi secundi tercio."

In Dei nomine, Amen. Die Veneris proximo post festum Sancti Dionisii Martiris, anno regni Regis Ricardi secundi post conquestum tercio, Henrico de Clipston tunc maiore ville Leicesterie, Johanne Norman et Ricardo Martyn tunc ballivis ibidem. In aula glilde dicte ville, quedam ordinacio per dictum maiorem et juratores cum unanimo consensu et assensu totius communitatis ville predictae facta fuit in perpetuum observanda sub forma que subsequetur. In primis ordinatum fuit quod maior ville predictae quicunque fuerit nemini erit in aliquo computabilis in futurum. Et quod maior quicunque fuerit recipere annuatim a communitate ville predictae decem libras argenti solidorum per manus camerariorum ejusdem ville ad tres anni terminos, videlicet ad festa Sancti Michaelis Archangeli. Purificationis beate Marie virginis et Pentecoste per equales porciones sub condicione subscripta—videlicet xl solidos pro suo communio, et si non tenuerit communium nichil recipere de illis xl solidis. Item xl solidos pro vadiis sui clientis, et si nullum habuerit clientem nichil recipere de illis xl solidis. Item viginti solidos pro vadiis sui clerici, qui quidem clericus, etiam attendet camerariis qui pro tempore fuerint. Et si non habuerit clericum nichil recipere de hiis xx solidis. Residuum vero dictarum decem librarum recipere maior annuatim pro reliquis suis sumptibus et expensis ad terminos prenotatos.—Item ordinatum fuit quod si aliqui sumptus facti fuerint erga dominum Regem dominum ville Leicesterie, aut erga quemcunque alium dominum vel dominam seu erga quemcunque alium hominem nomine dicte ville, tunc iidem sumptus ordinabuntur per maiorem qui tunc fuerit et maiorem numerum juratorum et per viginti quatuor communes nominatos vel per totam communitatem. Item ordinatum fuit quod duo camerarii quicunque fuerint annuatim reparabant, sustentabant et emendabant portas muros fossas pontes pavimentes domos, alia et singula que pertinent aut pertinebant ad communitatem ville predictae per visum maioris qui pro tempore fuerit ex sumptibus totius communitatis.—Item ordinatum fuit quod camerarii annuatim omnes redditus necnon omnia alia et singula que pertinent aut pertinebant ad communitatem ville predictae et ad gildam mercatorum. Et iidem camerarii inde reddent rationabilem computum et fidelem et quilibet pro suo tempore in fine anni cujuslibet coram magistro qui tunc fuerit, et certis auditoribus a juratis et communitate ville predictae nominaliter electis et ad hoc specialiter deputatis.—Item, ordinatum fuit quod camerarii qui fuerint annuatim recipere xl solidos argenti a communitate ville predictae ad tres anni terminos superius nominatos per equales porciones, qui quidem xl solidos ejusdem camerariis in suo computo allocabunt. Ordinatum sunt hec et statuta per dictum maiorem et juratos cum unanimo consensu et assensu totius communitatis ville predictae prout superius scribuntur et recitantur anno die et loco superscriptis.

(81.) 7 Richard II.—Deed of conveyance executed by Roger de Firby and Agnes his wife, whereby they grant and convey to William de Cheseldene, Peter de Stoghton, clerks, and their heirs and assigns for ever, a messuage and five shops in the market-place of the town of Leicester, "sicut in foro ebdomodali inter tenementum quondam Gilberti le Aneuger ex parte una et tenementum quondam Johannis Sabyn ex parte altera, et que nuper fuerunt A'licie le Goldsmyth de Leicester."

(82.) 30 September, 16 Richard II.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by William Mercer and William Spencer, of the town of Leicester, conveying to the mayor and corporation of the said town for ever eight messuages, fifteen cottages, two shops, one toft and other lands and rents in Leicester and its suburbs, Whoston, and Great Glen. A document, likely to be of service to an antiquary dealing with a topography of those places.

(83.) 16 Richard II.—Deed of grant and conveyance, for ever, by Thomas Thornton, Master of the hospital of St. Leonard of Leicester, to Henry Sadderby and Richard Barowe, of Leicester, of a piece of land trenched round and called "Le Pyngulle," lying beyond the north gate of the said town, near the water called Sore.

(84.) 15 August, 16 Richard II.—Letters of license granted by John of Gannt, son of the King of England, Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leicester, Steward of England, to William Humberston and John Cook, to give and assign a messuage, four shops, and six cottages, with their appurtenances, held of the said duke within the town of Leicester by fealty, to the lords Roger Baker of Wylngby, John Couper of Fletton, Richard Kirkevoode, and William Dekin of Beby, chaplains, to be held by them and their successors in the church of St. Martin of Leicester, together with license to the same Roger, John, Richard, and William to receive the said messuage, shops, and cottages to themselves and their successors, the statute of mortmain notwithstanding; the consideration of the said grant being twenty pounds to be paid by Henry of Beby and Roger Braunston, burgess of Leicester, of the duke's free gift to the Abbot and Convent of Crisall. Dated under the duke's seal at the abbey of Crisall xv. Augusti, 16 Richard II.

(85.) 14 September, 16 Richard II.—Of special grace, and in consideration of twenty pounds paid by the mayor and corporation of the town of Leicester to the king, Letters of license, the statute of mortmain notwithstanding, to William Mercer and William Spencer, to give and assign to the said mayor and corporation eight messuages, fifteen cottages, two shops, one toft, six virgates and nine acres of arable land, six acres and one rood of meadow, and twenty-five solidates, nine denarates, and one obolate of rent and the rent of one cock and two hens, with their appurtenances in Leicester, Whoston, and Great Glen, not held of the king, to be held of the said mayor and corporation and their successors, for the repair and amendment of the six bridges within the town of Leicester aforesaid, and for supporting other burdens arising within the same town, according to the ordering hereafter to be made of the said William and William, for ever; and also to give and assign to the same mayor and corporation two messuages and one rood of arable land with their appurtenances in the town of Leicester, also not held of the king, which Margaret, the once wife of Roger Reby, holds for her life, and which after the death of the said Margaret should revert to the aforesaid William and William and their heirs; together with two cottages and their appurtenances in the same town of Leicester, also not held of the king, which John Weston holds for his life, and which after the death of the aforesaid John ought to revert to the said William and William, to be held to the said mayor and corporation, and their successors, together with the aforesaid eight messuages, fifteen cottages, &c., &c., &c. for the reparation and amendment of the said six bridges, and for supporting the aforesaid burdens, according to the aforesaid ordering of the said William and William. Given at Nottingham.

(86.) 2 August, 16 Richard II.—Deed of gift and conveyance, executed by John Cook of Leicester, conveying to William Mercer and William Spencer an annual rent of eight shillings, to be received of a teneement late the property of Robert Appulby, the marshal outside the west gate of Leycestre, for ever. Witnessed by Geoffry Clerc, then mayor of Leycestre, and others named and unnamed (87.) 16 Richard II.—Indented parchment of a final agreement made in the Court of Portmannote, between John Trumbrygge, complainant, and John Babrane of Rothley, and Juliana his wife, deforciant, touching two shops and their appurtenances in the town of Leycester.

(88.) 16 Richard II.—Deed executed by Nicholas Glouner, late of Leycestre, and now of London, and Elizabeth his wife, conveying to Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Milne of Leycestre, and the lawful heirs of her body, a certain messuage with its appurtenances, situated at the corner over against the "portam fratrum predicatorum" "Leycestre iuter vicum qui dicitur Le Frerelane ex parte boriali et terram Johannis Pitburgh ex parte australl," with remainders over to divers persons in case of failures of issue.—Also a deed, of the same date, executed by the same Nicholas and Elizabeth, conveying a certain messuage, with its appurtenances in Leycestre, to Richard, the son of Isabella, formerly widow of Thomas Milne, of Leycestre, and the lawful heirs of his body, with several remainders over in case of failures of issue.

(89.) 19 Richard II.—Copy of a record of proceedings in an action brought in the Court (at Loughttburgh) of the steward and marshal of the king's household, by John Hedon against Peter Cook, for committing a violent assault on the said plaintiff, the assault having been perpetrated, according to the terms of the plaint, "apud Leycestre infra virgam," i.e., at Leycestre within the verge of the court, then resident at Notyngnam. The defendant having demurred to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that Leycestre, being more than twelve "leuce" from Notyngnam, was not within the verge of the court, the question of distance was referred to a jury, viz., Roger Pontrell, John Russell of Sootes, William Jordan of Burton, Thomas Warde of Wymondeswold, John Reynold, William Reynold and John Stevenson of Montsorell, Thomas Hutte of Loughttburgh, William Barbaque of Thorp, William Okone of Stanford, and John Aleu of Leyke, who found "quod villa de Leycestria distat a villa de Notyngnam quacunque via data per xv leucas et sit extra virgam." Whereupon John Hedon was non-suited.

(90.) 20 February, 21 Richard II.—Letters Patent, with the great seal attached, acknowledging the king's receipt of a hundred pounds sterling lent to him by the mayor and good men of the town of Leycestre, and promising the repayment of the said loan at the quintains of St. Michael next to come. Given at Westminster.

(91.) 12 May, 1 Henry IV.—Letters Patent of confirmation, granted with the assent of Parliament, confirming in all particulars a charter granted by Richard the Second to John of Gaunt, Duke of Aquitaine and Lancaster, for his perfect enjoyment of all powers and privileges pertaining to his lands and possessions.

(92.) 24 May, 4 Henry IV.—Grant to the men and tenants of the honor of Leycestre of freedom from toll, pontage, picage, murage, panage, stallage, passage, lastage, and cartage for their goods and chattels throughout the kingdom, in accordance with custom older than the memory of man. Given at Leycestre.

(93.) 23 February, 5 Henry IV.—Indenture (French) made between the said king of the one part, and the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of Leycestre of the other part, whereby the king granted a lease to farm for twenty years of his bailiwick of the town and suburbs of Leicester, with all rights and emoluments pertaining thereto, to the said mayor, burgesses, and commonalty, at an annual rent of, "quatre vintz et dys liars de 'bonne monee,' to be paid in equal portions at the feasts of the Purification of the Virgin, Pentecost, and St. Michael.

(94.) 6 Henry IV.—Copy of the records of proceedings at Westminster when Ralph del West and Richard Vertsaue, bailiffs of the town of Notyngnam, appeared to answer the Lord King, and show cause why they had taken toll at Notyngnam to the amount of forty pounds on goods and chattels pertaining to certain of the king's tenants of his honor of Leycester.

(95.) 6 September, 7 Henry IV.—Pardon (in French) to the mayor, burgesses and commonalty of the town of Leicester, farmers of the same town, in respect to the fifteen pounds sterling due to the king from the said mayor, burgesses, and commonalty, for their said farm.

The seal of the Duchy of Lancaster attached to the document.

(96.) 1 February, 2 Henry V.—Letters Patent of pardon under the great seal to the mayor and corporation and citizens of Leycestre, in respect of all escapes of felons, chattels of felons and fugitives, chattels of outlaws and felons de se, &c., &c., transgressions of vert and venery, selling of wood within and without the king's forest, and other things whatsoever done before the eighth day of December last past. Dated at Westminster.

(97.) 26 November, 2 Henry VI.—Indenture (French) made between the very noble lady dame Katherine, Queen of England, daughter of Charles, King of France, mother of the King of England, &c., &c. of the one part, and the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the town of Leycestre of the other part: whereby the said queen granted to the said mayor, burgesses, and commonalty a lease for ten years, from the feast of Michaelmas last past, of her bailiwick of the said town of Leycestre and its suburbs, with the profits and emoluments thereof, at an annual rent of eighty livres, to be paid in equal portions at the feasts of the Purification of the Virgin, Pentecost, and St. Michael. Given at Westminster. Endorsed "Queene Katherine's Lease of the Bayliwycks in Henry the VIth. tyme."

(98.) 1 June, 3 Henry VI.—Letters (French) of free-passage and immunity from all demands for toll, pannage, passage, lastage, &c., &c., for Robert Braunston, sadler, who as a Burgess of the town of Leicester is exempt from such dues throughout the kingdom. Given by the mayor and corporation of the town Leicester, under their common seal.

(99.) 15 August, 3 Henry VI.—Letters (French) of free-passage, under the common seal and in the name of the mayor and corporation of the town of Leicester, for the protection of John Northfolk, butcher, from arrest, distraint, or trouble in respect to toll and other dues from which he is free as a Burgess of Leicester; the inhabitants of which town have been free from toll throughout the kingdom from time immemorial.

(100.) 16 June, 1428.—Copy (on paper) of an indenture between the dean and chapter of the Collegiate Church of St. Mary of Leicester, and John Smallwell, clerk, of the one part, and Richard Dannett, of Brunkingthorpe, Roger Hyche of Leicester baker, John Thurkeston and John Mylnes, of Lutterworth, of the other part; for the settlement of a controversy respecting a right of way from John Dannett's manor of Brunkingthorpe, through the town of Leicester to the king's way called Rodyk, and thence beyond the meadow of the said dean and chapter called Mawremeadow to the mill called Mawremyne.

(101.) 18 August, 9 Henry V.—Passport and letters (French) of protection, under the common seal of the town of Leicester, issued on the authority of Thomas Clerk, mayor, and the commonalty of the said town. The freedom of the inhabitants of Leicester from toll, &c. throughout the realm having been stated in the preamble of the document, all persons are enjoined to forbear from claiming toll, &c. &c., of the bearer, Nicholas Cook, fisher, who is passing to and fro with his merchandise on his lawful business.

(102.) 22 May, 13 Henry VI.—Licence to the mayor and corporation of the town of Leicester (for the sustentation of the said town and mayoralty), to acquire and hold to themselves lands or rent to the annual value of forty marcs, the statute of mortmain notwithstanding. Given at Westminster.

(103.) 11 August, 30 Henry VI.—General pardon to the mayor and corporation of the town of Leicester, of all offences whatsoever committed before the seventh day of April last past.

(104.) 21 August, 13 Henry VI.—Letters (French) of free-passage and protection from all claims for toll, pannage, lastage, &c., &c. for Robert Botcher, the bearer thereof, who as a Burgess of the town of Leicester is exempt from such dues throughout the whole realm. Given by the mayor and commonalty of Leicester, under the common seal of the said town.

(105.) 20 July, 15 Henry VI.—General pardon (granted at the special request of the commons of England in the last Parliament, and with the assent of the Lords spiritual and temporal present in the same Parliament) to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leicester, for all offences perpetrated by them before the second day of September in the tenth year of the king's reign. Given at Westminster.

(106.) 20 May, 27 Henry VI.—Margarete by the Grace of God Quene of England and of France and Lady of Ireland, &c.—Be it knawen to alle men to whom this present writyng shalle come that where as a certeyn commission of my fuldoutfull Lord was directed to certeyn persons to enquier as well of geving of lyuere as of other diuers articles as in the seyd commission plainly appereth by force of which commission before the commissioners of the seyd commission it was presented by William Newby and other of our tenants of Leicester lawfully empowelled to enquire of the articles contained in the same commission, that certeyn persones in Leycestre had taken clothyng of diuerse persones ayentis the forme of the statute that is to wete that some of hem had taken clothyng of the Viscount Beaumont and some of Sir Edward Grey Lord Ferrers of Growby and some of hem had taken clothyng of other diuers persones by cause of which presentment diuerses persones some of the household of the seyd Lord Ferrers and some of the clothyng of the said lord with other welle wilners to the said lord as yet not to be knawen by supportacion and fauour and for plesance to the said lord as we ben enformed by cause of the said presentement betyn and sore woundetyn the said William Newby and manestes to bete other of our tenants of Leycestre in semblable maner and sithyn that tyme diuerse persones longyng to the said Lord Ferrers at diuerse tymes hane mannest to bete diuerse; tenants and inhabitantes in our town of Leycestre. Also we ben enformed that the said lord his seruantes and his wellewilling at diuers tymes hane hunted and down grete hurt and harme to our game in our lordshipe of Leycestre as welle in our chaces as in our parkes there. We considering the pease and the welle of our tenants and of our chaces and parkes in our lordship of Leycestre and the grete hurt and harme of the said William Newby our tenant ordeyne deme and awarde that the said Lord Ferrers for hym and for those that betyn the said William Newby paye to the said William Newby a c. mares of good money of Englund that is to wete xl. mares the third day of Juny next to come after the date of this our present awarde and xxli. the third day of Juny then next following, and xxli. the third day of Juny then next syying in amendement and satisfaccion for the betyng and woundyng of the said William Newby. And that the said Lord Ferrers be goode lorde to the said William Newby and to all other tenants in our lordship of Leycestre, and that the said lord shall not geve any clothyng or lyuerey to any persone dwelling within our said lordship. Ne that the said lord mayntene ne support any persone dwelling within our said lordship in any forme agaynes the rule of our towne of Leycestre or agaynes the rule of any other place of our said lordship of Leycestre and also that the said lord his seruantez and tenants; and all other that be toward hym kepe the peas ayenst all the tenants and inhabitantes of our said lordship, and ayenst Thomas Faruham. And also we awarde that the said lord delenyre to Lowys Fitz Lowys an obligacioun by the which the said Lowys was bounde vnto the said lord in xxli. for to eschewe the bodely hurt which was likly to hane fallen to on William Pecek a tenant to vs of our lordship of Stebbing by the said lord or his seruantz and for none other cause as we credely enformed. In witness of which thyng to this our present awarde we have made to putte our sealls. Yeven the xx day of May the yere of the reigne of my most douted lord kyng Henry the Sext xxvii.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

(107.) 1454.—Brief of indulgence and relaxation of penance granted to Nicholas Clay and his wife by brother Richard, minister of the Housse of St. Robert at Knaresburgh, of the order of the Sacred Trinity, for the redemption of captives imprisoned for the faith of Jesus Christ by the pagans.

(108.) Feast of St. Peter ad vincula, 36 Henry VI.—Lease by Margaret, Queen of England, to John Grene, draper, mayor of Leycestre, and to the corporation of the same town, of a piece of land at the end of the West Bridge of the said town for ninety-nine years, at an annual rent of one penny. Dated at the said Queen's court at the castle of Leycestre, before Robert Staunton, deputy of John Beaumont, steward of the said queen's honor of Leycestre.

(109.) 4 September, 37 Henry VI.—Indenture between Thomas Grene, mayor of the town of Leycestre, and the corporation thereof on the one part, and John Sherman of Leycestre of the other part, of a lease by the said mayor and corporation of a certain chamber of the West Gate of the said town, and a piece of land adjoining the said gate, to the said John Sherman, for ninety-nine years, at an annual rent of three shillings and one penny. Dated at Leycestre.

(110.) A.D. 1460.—Rental of the Corpus Christi Guild in the town of Leicester. Also, rentals of the same guild for the years 1495, 1505, 1519, 1525, 1532, 1533, 1535, and 1542. Also, accounts, the dates of which are no longer discernible, of the same guild for two other years.

(111.) 22 September, 39 Henry VI.—Indenture of a lease from Wyllian Wygston, mayor, and the corporation of the town of Leycestre, for forty years, of "a wyndow set on the west end of the Est Gate of "Leycestre, cometyng on length v fote and a half, "and on brede iii fote," at a yearly rent of iiiii d. sterling.

(112.) Trinity Term, Henry VI.—Copy of the record of the proceedings of the aforesaid date (Roll ccxix), before William Babynghon and his associates, justices de banco, when John Chircke of Leycestre, co. Leycestre, marchant, was called upon to answer Ralph Hambrunston, John Byngham, and John Wymondeswold of Leycestre, on a plea that he detained from them two obligatory writings.

(113.)—24 August, 4 Edward IV.—Letters Patent of concessions to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leycestre, for the appointment of persons to act as justices of the peace within the said borough; and for the annual election of two comburgesses to fill the office of coroner in the same place, as well as for other matters. Given at Wodestoke.

(114.) 20 December, 7 Edward IV.—Copy, of the date aforesaid, of the record of the proceedings in Trinity Term, 6 Edward IV. (Roll exiii), when Ralph del West and Richard Versauf, bailiffs of the town of Notyngham were attached to answer the lord king concerning a plea why, since the said lord king is lord of the honor of Leycestre, and all his men and tenants of the aforesaid honor ought to be quit, and from time beyond the memory of man have been quit of toll throughout the whole realm, they have unduly and maliciously taken for toll the sum of forty pounds of divers goods and things pertaining the said lord king and his tenants of the honor aforesaid coming to the said town of Notyngham, &c.

(115.) 2 April, 13 Edward IV.—Letters Patent of licence to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leycestre, empowering them to hold at Leicester and its suburbs an annual fair, lasting seven days, viz., three days before the feast of the Apostles Philip and James, and the day of the said feast, and three days next following. Given at Westminster. The witnesses of the grant being the Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Bath and Wells chancellor of England, the bishop of Lincoln keeper of the Privy Seal, George Duke of Clarence, Richard Duke of Gloucester, Henry Earl of Essex, the Treasurer of England, John Earl of Wiltshire, chief-butler of England, Thomas Stanley of Stanley, knt., steward of the king's household, and William Hastings de Hastings, chamberlain of the king's household.

(116.) 22 September, 2 Henry VII.—Grant and conveyance by John Gaddesby, of the town of Leycestre, saddler, of all his lands, tenements, and possessions in the town of Leycestre, and in the town and fields of Ipstoke, co. Leycestre, for ever, to John Kelyng, clerk, Thomas Kybell, serjeant-at-law, Christopher Neel, John Butteley, clerk, Thomas Swayne, of Leycestre, draper, Thomas Dayre, mercer, of the same place, Thomas Glynn, chaplain, and Robert Schepa. Dated at Leycester.

(117.) 27 January, 9 Henry VII.—General pardon to Lawrence Dawson of the town of Leycestre, variously described as "cordynr," "shomakar," and "yoman." Given at Westminster.

(118.) 4 March, 20 Henry VII.—The said king's Letters Patent of Inspecimus and Confirmation of Edward the Fourth's charter to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester.

(119.) 9 July, 1 Henry VIII.—Letter Patent of general pardon for Milo Lambert, mayor of Leycestre, and the burgesses of the same town. Given at Westminster. Remarkable, even amongst documents of its diffuse kind, for amplitude and verbosity, this grant covers two large membranes with close writing.

(120.) 20 March, 13 Henry VIII.—Precept addressed, by the advice of the council of the duchy of Lancaster, to the mayor and his bretheren of the town of Leycestre for the due observance and execution of the laws against taking and wearing liveries and cognizances.

(121.) 18 April, 14 Henry.—Privy Seal writ, promising repayment to the persons named in an annexed schedule of the several sums of money advanced by way of loan to the king, for the defence his realm and the maintenance of his wars against France and Scotland, amounting in the whole to 60*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.* The schedule gives the names of all the inhabitants of Leycester, "berng "of the value of vi*l.* or x*s.* landes under the sunn of "xxli. within the said town of Leycester that have "advanced to the kinge's grace after ii*s.* at y*er* li. by "wey of lone."

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

(122.) 9 May, 14 Henry VIII.—Writ, sealed with the Great Seal, and addressed to the mayor and bailiffs of Leicester, requiring them "furtherwith and ymmedially vpon the receipt of this our lettres not only to put alle and singular those persons and goodis aswell of Frenchemen, Britons, and alle other the Frenche kinges's subgettes under arrest and sure custody in whose handes or possession the saide goodis shalbe founde." Nothing in the writ to show what "the said goodis" were.

(123.) 1525, 1526.—The accounts of John Cappe and Thomas Cotton, junior, stewards of the guild of Corpus Christi in Leicester, from the feast of St. Michell, in the yere of our Lord M^cxcv. unto the sayd feast of Seynt Mychell, in the yere of our Lord God M^cxcvi.—Also fragment of another account (much defaced and injured) of the same period.

(124.) 15 May, 30 Henry VIII.—Writ addressed to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, embodying the king's recent proclamation against resistance of his Majesty's officers, whilst attaching the persons or goods of his Majesty's subjects for the due execution of justice, and for the better information of the people respecting the penalties of such resistance, in cases where murder is done as well as in cases where no loss of life is caused by such resistance.

(125.) 20 March, 31 Henry VIII.—Letters Patent of licence to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, for ever, to hold a yearly fair at the said town and in its suburbs, lasting for five days, viz., the two days before the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, and the day of the said feast, and the two days after it, and also to hold another yearly fair lasting five days, viz., the two days before the feast of the Conception of the Blessed Virgin, and the day of the same feast, and the two days next following it. Given at Walden.

(126.) 16 November, 32 Henry VIII.—Proclamation (on paper) of Henry the Eighth prohibiting (under penalty of forfeiture of thrice the sum imported and imprisonment during the king's pleasure) the importation from Ireland into England, and also prohibiting the payment within the realm of England, Wales, Berrokye, Calice or the marches thereof, of "coyne of money as well of grottes as pens of twopence to be current only within his said lond of Ireland beryng the prynte of the harpe on oon syde thereof, which coyne dyuers and sondre persons haue lately transported and brought out of the said lond, and vttered the same "from within this his realme of England." Dated at Westminster.

(127.) 14 May, 34 Henry VIII.—Letters of Insuperimus and exemplification, under the seal of the duchy of Lancaster, of an order made in Trinity term, 32 Henry VIII., in the chamber of the same duchy at Westminster, that all tenants and inhabitants of the said duchy shall enjoy freedom of toll throughout the kingdom; the said order being made on the complaint of William Catcher and other tenants and inhabitants of Endeufeld, parcel of the said duchy, against one William Holond, toll-gatherer of London, for distraining certain sacks of malt of the said complainants and for taking "two crownes of gold "from theym for gage of the said toll." Dated at Westminster.

(128.) 15 March, Henry VIII.—Copy (on paper) of the king's writ to the sheriff and justices of the peace, co. Leicester, for the levying and collection of a subsidy voted to the sovereign by Parliament for prosecuting the war against his ancient adversary the King of Scotland.

(129.) 17 July, Henry VIII.—Precept under the king's signet and sign-manual, addressed to the mayor and other officers of the town of Leicester, enjoining them to suffer no inhabitant of Leicester to be withdrawn from the same town or retained to any man, to the end that all the able men of the same town may be ready on notice to render the king due military service under the command of Lord Hastings, steward of the same town. Date of year omitted.

(130.) 18 May, Henry VIII.—Letter under the sign manual and signet of Henry the Eighth, addressed to the mayor and his brethren of the town and borough of Leicester, on the eve of the king's "journey into the parties "of beyond the see." For the maintenance of strict order, vigilant care for the nightly watchings, prevention of riots, and apprehension of rogues and valiant beggars in the borough, during the king's absence. Date of the year, and also the name of "the "partes beyond the see" omitted. Given at the manor of Greenwich.

(131.) 28 November, 1 Edward VI.—Letters Patent declaring the men and tenants of the honor of Leicester free from toll, pontage, picage, murage, pannaage, stallage, passage, lastage, and cartage for their goods and chattels throughout the land, in accordance with custom older than the memory of man. Dated at Westminster.

(132.) 5 March, 3 Edward VI.—Indenture made between the Marquis of Northampton of the one part, and Henry Sackeverell of Ratclyff upon Sore, co. Nottingham, esquire, of the other part, for the settlement of controversies touching right and title to a green lying in the fields of Kegworth, co. Leicester, called Kegworth or Ratclyff Green, and also touching right and title in a Holme lying in the same fields of Kegworth.

(133.) 28 October, 1 Mary.—Precept, under the seal of the duchy of Lancaster, addressed to mayor and brethren and the recorder of the town of Leicester, against the unlawful taking of liveries and cognizances; and enjoining the same officers to "suffre no inhabitante within "our sayd towne of what degre or condycion soever "he be to be reneyed by clothe cognisances othe or "otherwise contrary to the laws."

(134.) 26 November, 1 Elizabeth.—The said queen's Letters Patent of insuperimus of King John's charter to the burgesses of Leicester, confirming them in their right to go to and fro and do their business without let or hindrance throughout the kingdom; also of insuperimus of Edward the Third's charter for the Michaelmas Fair; also of insuperimus of Richard the Second's charter confirming King John's charter for the validity of sales and purchases of lands of the town of Leicester in the court of Portmannote; also of insuperimus of Edward the Fourth's charter to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester for a yearly fair lasting seven days before, on and after the feast of Saints Philip and James; and also of insuperimus of Henry the Seventh's charter of insuperimus and confirmation of Edward the Fourth's charter to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester for the election of coroners, and for the enlargement of the powers and privileges of the corporation; with confirmation of all the said charters, and farther concessions to the same corporation.

(135.) 14 December, 1 Elizabeth.—The said queen's Letters Patent of insuperimus of her sister Queen Mary's Letters Patent of insuperimus, of their father, Henry the Eighth's Letter Patent (dated at Walden on 20 March, in the 31st year of his reign) to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leicester, granting them licence to have an annual fair lasting for five days, viz., two days before the feast of the Nativity of St. John, the day of that feast and the two following days, and another yearly fair lasting for five days, viz., the two days before the feast of the Conception of the Blessed Virgin, the day of the feast, and the two following days; and also of Edward the Sixth's Letters Patent of insuperimus and confirmation of the charter of King John to the burgesses of Leicester, dated at Bures, 26 December, in the first year of his reign; and also of insuperimus of Edward the Third's charter for the annual Michaelmas fair, at Leicester instead of the ancient fair at that place on the day of the feast of the Discovery of the Holy Cross, and fifteen days following; also of insuperimus of Richard the Second's Letters Patent confirming King John's charter touching the validity of sales and purchases of land in the court of Portmannote; and also of insuperimus of Edward the Fourth's charter for an annual fair at Leicester, lasting seventeen days, viz., the three days next before the feast of Saints Philip and James, the day of the feast and the three following days; and also of insuperimus of Henry the Seventh's Letters Patent of insuperimus of Edward the Fourth's charter to the mayor and burgesses touching the election of recorders, and granting them together with other privileges jurisdiction over divers matters with power of punishing divers offences; with confirmation of all the above-mentioned charters.

(136.) 24 April, 15 Elizabeth.—Commission of array and musters for the town of Leicester, addressed to George Purpyne, knt., Adrian Stokes, esq., John Heyricke, mayor of the said town, and William Manbye, Thomas Sanford, Richard Darye, John Patam, and James Clarke, burgesses of the said town.

(137.) 1 December, 15 Elizabeth.—Copy of the patent of the grant, during pleasure, of the office of receiver of the honor of Leicester, parcel of the duchy of Lancaster, and the office of "steward" of the town of Leicester, otherwise called the office of "clerk," otherwise called the office of "the town clerk" of the said borough.

(138.) 19 May, 16 Elizabeth.—Letters Patent of insuperimus and exemplification under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, of a certain decree of the court of the said duchy, made 18 May 1574, declaring the mayor, burgesses, and citizens of Leicester exempt from toll

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

throughout the kingdom: the said order being made after inquisition into the circumstances of the complaint of John Stanford and others of Leicester, against William Glassoppe, Thomas Nix, and William Dodson of the town of Nottingham, co. Nottingham, for distraining certain of the complainants' beasts for toll.

(139.) 18 November, 20 Elizabeth.—Indenture of agreement made between the mayor, burgesses, and corporation of the town of Leicester of the one part, and William Pelsant, B.D. of Leicester of the other part: securing to the said William Pelsant, from the said corporation an annual stipend of 20*l.*, so long as he may choose to officiate as "Preacher of Goddes moste holie word" in the said town. Also, attached to the afore-described indenture, another indenture between the same parties, certifying that the said William Pelsant, notwithstanding his said annual stipend of twenty pounds, has liberty and authority to sollicit and collect contributions for the increase of his income from the other inhabitants of Leicester not being of the body of the 24 or the Common Council of 48.

(140.) 31 May, 19 Elizabeth.—Commission of array and musters for the town of Leycestre, addressed to Henry Lord Crumwell, the mayor of Leycestre for the time being, George Hastings, kn^t., George Purpyn, knight, Adrian Stokes, esq., and William Manbye, and Thomas Sandford, burgesses of Leycestre.

(141.) 18 April, 22 Elizabeth.—Commission of array and musters for the town of Leycestre, addressed to Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, president of the Northern Council, the mayor of Leycestre for the time being, Francis Hastings, esq., George Purpyn, kn^t., Thomas Skeffington, esq., and John Erick, John Stanford, and John Middleton, burgesses of Leycestre.

(142.) 12 January 1586.—Accompt (book) of the chargis and payments of Richard Archer in the company of Mr. Thomas Clarke to London and Yorke for the inhabitantes of the town of Leicester in renewing the charter for the fee farme of dyvers landes vnto the 26th April 1587.

(143.) 23 June, 30 Elizabeth.—Indenture made between the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leicester of the one part, and Thomas Sacheverill, B.C.L., of the same town of the other part: securing an annual stipend of 30*l.* to the said Thomas Sacheverill, so long as he shall continue to be preacher of God's most holy word in Leycestre.

(144.) 17 February, 31 Elizabeth.—The said queen's Letters Patent of reincorporation of the borough of Leicester; together with grant to the corporation thereof (consisting of a mayor, twenty-four aldermen, and forty-eight burgesses) of divers lands, tenements, rents, &c., &c., set forth minutely in the lengthy document, at an annual rent of 137*l.* 13*s.* 7*d.*

(145.) 16 June, 33 Elizabeth.—Copy of the deed whereby Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, surrendered to her majesty the office of steward or town-clerk of Leycestre.

(146.) 34 Elizabeth.—Records (paper) of proceedings in the Court of Portnamote, of the town of Leycestre.

(147.) 1591–1592.—A rental of the yeares revenue of the landes, tenementes, and other hereditamentes belonging to St. Marie's Colege in Leicester, payable at th' Annunciacionn of our ladie and St. Mychell the Archangell. Together with an accompt of particulars of expenditure. Small paper book in leather wrapper.

(148.) February, 1592.—A rental and account of receipts and expenses (on ten leaves of foolscap paper), touching the lands held in and near Leicester by the corporation thereof, the first sheet beginning with this entry, "Fyrste the Queene's Maiesties gulte of landes " and tenements fee-farme to the mayor and burgesses " of the towne of Leicester (the greatest parte thereof " being canted rent) ys of the yerely rent of cxxxvi*li.* xiii*s.* vii*d.*

(149.) 20 June, 1594.—Letters of Insuperimus and exemption, under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, of an order made in the Chamber of the said duchy on 15 June, 1594, requiring the undertenants of certain lands (pertaining to the same duchy and leased by her Majesty the Queen to the mayor and burgesses of the city of Leycestre) to pay their appointed rents for the same lands to the said mayor and burgesses, although it may be stipulated in their several leases that such rents are to be paid to a particular receiver of the Duchy of Lancaster. Dated at Westminster.

(150.) 13 October, 1597.—Copy of the last will and testament of Simon Mudd, of Longborowe, co. Leycestre, yeoman, who was a benefactor of the school and poor of that parish.

(151.) 30 August, 40 Elizabeth.—Bond of William Okes, of the town of Leicester, glover, in the sum of 80*l.*, for the repayment (should he fail to procure a charter from the queen for the said borough) of the sum of 40*l.* advanced to the said William by the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, towards his charges and expenses in endeavouring to procure the same charter. Also a letter (dated 9 November, 1598) from William Okes to the mayor of Leicester, announcing his progress in the business of the charter, and praying Mr. Mayor to write "either to Mr. William Herriock or to Mr. " Parkyns to signify vnto them that the threescore " poundes behinde shall be paid within some convenient " tyme after the booke is fully effected."

(152.) 28 November, 40 Elizabeth.—Letters Patent under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, of the grant during pleasure to the mayor of the town of Leycestre for the time being of the office of steward of the aforesaid town of Leycestre "alias dictum officium clerici vocati " the towne clerke," with all the emoluments and perquisites thereof: to have and hold the same offices fully as Edward late Lord Loughborowe, or Henry Earl of Huntingdon, or Edward Hastings, kn^t., held the same.

(153.) 1 June, 41 Elizabeth.—Charter of reincorporation to the mayor, bailiffs and burgesses of Leicester; with confirmation and enlargement of privileges and powers.

(154.) 12 February, 42 Elizabeth.—Letters Patent (with seal of the Duchy of Lancaster attached thereto) of insuperimus and exemption of the order and decree made by Mr. Baron Clerke and other her Majesty's commissioners of the court of the Duchy of Lancaster on Wednesday 30 January 1599, whereby it was declared that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester, and all other persons, as well freemen of the said town as strangers and foreigners, should henceforth be free of all manner of tolles, stallage, picage, tronage, and through tolls within the said town of Leicester and its suburbs and toll markets, "according to the purport " and effect of their graunts shewed in court under the "seale of Henry Duke of Lancaster and lord of the "said town of Leicester." Dated at Westminster.

(155.) 1601.—The Humble Petition of the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of Leicester, to the Rt. Worshipful Edward Coke, esquire, his Maiesties Attorney-General. Praying (for the preservation of the liberties of the town, so necessary for enabling the burgesses thereof to support her Majesty's revenue as heretofore) that an information may be exhibited in the Star-Chamber against certain artisans and dealers, not freemen of the said borough, but residents in the neighbourhood thereof, who persist in selling their merchandize in the town, without the mayor's licence, and in defiance of her Majesty's charter to the town.—Also, a copy of the Attorney-General's information in the Court of Star Chamber against the said violators of the liberties and privileges of the town.—Also, a list of the offenders. Together with some unimparted certificates and memoranda touching the same matter.

(156.) Elizabeth.—Draft of a bill prepared for her Majesty's signature, granting an annuity of twenty pounds, of the issues of her lands in the county of Leicester, to the mayor, burgesses of the town: one half of the said annuity to be applied to the maintenance of a schoolmaster, and the other half to the maintenance of a theological lecturer in the said town.—Unsigned.

(157.) 26 April, 1604.—List of writings delyvered to Mr. Pilkington, to haue with hym to London, aboute the Towne's causes.

(158.) 12 April 1605.—Letter from Richard Ward in London to the Mayor of Leicester, touching his master's exertions to procure a patent.

(159.) 2 James I.—List on paper of the "Several " Patentes of the Towne Clarkeshippe, otherwise of "late called the stewardshippe of the said towne, dis- "tinct by severall patentes fees and allowances from "the stewardshippe of the honor of Leicester." The list covering the period from 5 Edward IV. to 2 James I.

(160.) 15 October 1605.—Schedule of writings given to Mr. Robert Heyricke on his departure for London on business of the borough of Leycestre.

(161.) 12 November 1605.—Copy, of the aforementioned date, of the return of the jurors on the inquest post-mortem held at Lancaster, on 8 April, 35 Edward III., after the death of Henry, Duke of Lancaster, lately deceased.

(162.) 25 June, 3 James I.—Letters Patent under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster: confirming the mayor, corporation, and inhabitants of Leicester, as parcel, of the Duchy of Lancaster, in their exemption from toll, pannage, passage, &c., throughout the kingdom. Given at Westminster.

(163.) Michaelmas, 3 James I.—Draft of the humble petition of the mayor, bayliffs, and burgesses of Leices-tre to the Rt. Hon. Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, praying his lordship that petitioners' patent may pass the great seal, or that his lordship will appoint any early day for hearing them.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

(164.) 15 February, 6 James I.—Indenture of agreement, touching appointments to the office of steward or town clerk of Leicester, between John Freeman of the Middle Temple, London, gentleman, and John Blount, of the borough of Leicester, acting on behalf of the said borough of the one part, and John Blount of the borough of Leicester acting on the part of Henry, Earl of Huntingdon of the other part. Whereby the "maior, bayliffs" and burgesses of the said towne and borough of Leicester "engaged and bound themselves" "within one" "moneth after that the kinge's maiestie that nowe is hath" "by his highnes letters patentes under the great seal of" "England and his duchie seale of Lancaster graunted" "vnto the said maior, bayliffs, and burgesses of the said" "towne, &c., &c.," the appointment of the bayliff of the said towne, &c., &c. to grant by sealed deed to Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, and the heirs male of his body, the nomination and election at every second turn of the person to fill the said office of bailiff.

(165.) 30 March, 1607.—Letter from Thomas, Earl of Dorset, to mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester; touching the controversy between John Okes, gentleman, plaintiff, and the said mayor and burgesses defendants, and requiring the said mayor and burgesses "to be" "present at Dorset House the fiftenth day of June next" "coming, and to haue there with you all such charters," "grauntes, evidences, and writings as anie waie concerne" "either your pretended freedome, or title to the manor" "of Wrangle."

(166.) 17 April, 7 James.—Charter granted by James the First to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester, viz., to the mayor, the twenty-four aldermen, and the company of the forty-eight; giving them, together with other powers, full authority to make reasonable statutes and ordinances for the better preservation, government, and leasing of all lands heretofore granted to them and by them possessed.

(167.) 4 June, 1607.—Letter from certain of the burgesses and inhabitants of the town of Leicester to the Earl of Dorset, Lord High Treasurer of England. Pray for an early hearing and settlement of the controversy between them and one Okes, touching the pretension of the said Okes to take toll and stallage of the inhabitants of Leicester in the fairs and markets of the said town.—Also, a summary of the facts on which the same William Okes rests his title so to levy toll and stallage.

(168.) 20 December, 7 James I.—Indenture of agreement between the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester with Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, touching the appointment of the said earl's nominee, at every second turn to the office of steward and keeper of the goal of the said borough.

(169.) 12 March, 15 James I.—The said king's charter to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester for a staple of wool and wool-skins to be kept and held in the said town.

(170.) 19 June, 16 James I.—Letters Patent of inquisition, under the seal of the duchy of Lancaster, of a certain commission made and returned into the chamber of the duchy of Lancaster, dated 19 March of 13 James I. addressed to Walter Hastings, Esq., Sir Henry Hastings, Sir William Turpin, Sir Wolstan Dixie, and John Chippingdale, Esq., and authorising them to hold an inquisition touching the rents and issues of the lands pertaining to the hospital of Newarke near Leicester, recently incorporated by the King and in his hands; and also of the certificate of the said commissioners. Given at Westminster.

(171.) 22 February, 1619.—Letters Patent of inquisition of a decree of the Chamber of the Duchy of Lancaster, dated 11 February 1619, declaring all burgesses and inhabitants of the town of Leicester free from toll for themselves, their cattle, and merchandise throughout the kingdom.

(172.) 4 March, 1621.—Commission for life to Robert Wright of Castle Donnington, co. Leicester, to be bailiff of the borough of Leicester, and keeper of the goal of the same borough; the said Robert being appointed by Henry, Earl of Leicester, in accordance with an indenture of agreement between the said earl of the one part, and the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester on the other part.—Also, attached to the said document, two commissions the one signed by Theophilus, Earl of Huntingdon, grandson of the aforesaid Earl Henry and a minor, and the other by his mother Lucy, Countess of Huntingdon, and both of them dated 6 October 1657, appointing William Maior of Leicester, gentleman, to the said office.

(173.) 26 June, 20 James I.—Letters of License of James the First to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the town of Leicester, granting them the power of acquiring and holding (the statute of mortmain notwithstanding) manors, messuages, lands, &c., &c., not held of the Crown in chief, nor held by any kind of military service, to the yearly value of two hundred pounds; together with license to alienate the same.

(174.) Petition of the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leycester to the right honourable William, Earl of Southampton, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, that he will move the king to grant letters patent, confirming the petitioners and other inhabitants of Leycester in their ancient monopoly of selling by retail within the same borough, and strictly forbidding all other persons, foreigners of the borough, to sell their merchandise by retail within its boundaries, the days of fairs only excepted.

(175.) 5 November, 6 Charles I.—Writ under the Privy Seal to Lord Keeper Coventry; for making under the Great Seal a new charter of incorporation for the borough of Leicester, with a more precise statement of the limits of the borough, and a fuller exhibition of the powers and privileges of the corporation.

(176.) 9 August, 1641.—Warrant signed by the mayor and bailiffs of the town of Leycester, for the collection of sums of money set forth in an annexed schedule, from persons named in the same schedule: towards the provision of money for the disbandment of the armies and settling the peace of the two kingdomes of England and Scotland.

(177.) Charles I.—Fair draft of an unexecuted charter for the reincorporation of the borough of Leicester, with more precise definition of the limits of the borough, as well as a fuller exhibition of the privileges and powers of the corporation.—Undated and unsealed.

(178.) 28 September 1650.—The humble petition (to the Rt. Hon. the Committee for Indemnity) of Richard Lee, Master of the Hospital of William Wigston in Leicester, John Baker one of the sub-commissioners for sequestration for the county of Leicester, and Obadiah Bird, Thomas Parsons, and Francis Parsons, agents to the commissioners for sequestrations in the said county.

(179.) 19 May 1657.—Letters Patent by Oliver, Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, to all inhabitants of the borough and town of Leicester, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, continuing to them and reaffirming their exemption throughout the whole country, from pannage, pontage, passage, lackage, stallage, and other customs.—Given at Westminster under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster.

(180.) 19 October 1657.—Copy of the proclamation of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester, that they have appointed William Maior to be bailiff of the town and keeper of the gaol of the borough of Leicester, at the nomination of the present Earl of Huntingdon, in accordance with the terms of the late king James's charter, and the terms of an agreement between the corporation of Leicester and Henry late Earl of Huntingdon.

(181.) 1657, 1658, 1659.—Packet of papers touching the transactions of the trustees of William Wigston's Hospital in Leicester in those years: and more particularly touching the suit in Chancery between the chaplains and poor of the Hospital of William Wigston in the Borough of Leicester plaintiffs, and Lucy Dannett, widow, and John Daintree, defendants.

(182.) February 1661.—File of papers relating to the petitions to the House of Commons of divers mercers and drapers of Warwickshire and Leicestershire, who represent that, as vendors of remnants of pieces of cloth, they are unfairly and vexatiously dealt with by the ulnagers, who insist that such portions of pieces should exhibit the seals set on entire pieces of cloth by ulnagers.

(183.) 20 January, 16 Charles II.—The said king's charter to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Leicester, confirming them in all their possessions, privileges and jurisdictions.

(184.) Hilary Term, 16 & 17 Charles II.—Copy of the record of proceedings of the aforesaid date at Westminster before Orlando Bridgeman, knt. and bart., and his associates, the king's justices, when Thomas Woodland, late of the Newarke of Leicester was attached to answer Bartholomew King touching the ejectment of the said Bartholomew from five acres of meadow in the parish of St. Martin.

(185.) 3 February, 17 Charles II.—Letters of Inquisition and exemplification of the record enrolled in the 16th year of the said king in the Court of Exchequer at Westminster, of the proceedings in the case of Richard Paling, Robert Harteshorne, William Thomson, and Thomas Cartwright, inhabitants of the Bishop's Fee in Leicester, and Phillip Abney, inhabitant within the limits of the said borough, on being ordered to attend the Attorney-General, and show cause why the aforesaid inhabitants should not be taxed and assessed in all taxes, &c. &c. by themselves, divided from the county of Leicestershire, and that the commissioners of the county might not intermeddle with them.

(186.) 29 November, 1665.—Copy of the order of the Privy Council (made on a petition of the mayor, bailiffs and burgesses of the town of Leicester), that Edward Billers, William Warburton and William Orton forthwith submit to the election of their fellow-citizens, calling them to vacant places in the Common Council, and that they take the oath directed by the late Act of Parliament for regulating corporations.—Also a paper of memoranda touching the case of the said Billers, Warburton, and Orton, in refusing to serve on the Common Council.—Also copy of the Order of the Privy Council (dated 26 February 1665,) committing the said Billers, Warburton, and Orton to the custody of Ralph Rutter, one of the messengers of his Majesty's Chamber in Ordinary, until such time as they and every of them respectively shall give bonds with sufficient sureties to submit to their said election, and take the required oaths.

(187.) 30 November 1665.—Circular of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, touching exemptions from the payment of hearth-money. Dated from Oxford.—With other papers respecting such exemptions and claims to exemption, attached to the said epistle.

(188.) 10 December 36 Charles II.—Charles the Second's charter of reincorporation, with copious concessions of powers and privileges to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the free borough of Leicester, co. Leicester.

(189.) 21 October 1714.—Collegium Novi Operis Leicestrie in comitatu Leicestrie. Schedule of the yearly debentures from the College of the New Work to the mayor and corporation of Leicester. On a single sheet. Signed.

(190.) 1 October 1714.—Collegium Novi Operis Leicestrie in comitatu Leicestrie. Schedule of the yearly debentures from the Newark College to the mayor and corporation of Leicester; with the auditor's (Tho. Turnor's) certificate of examination. Similar schedule for the following year, examined 22 October 1715.

(191.) 20 August 1723.—Commission, signed 'Huntingdon,' appointing Leonard Piddocks of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, gentleman, to be bailiff of the town of Leicester, and keeper of the gaol of the said borough, for life. The preamble of the commission being, "Whereas the right of nomination and appointing of a Bailiff of the Burrough and Town of Leicester and Keeper of the gaol there is alternately in the Mayor and the Burgesses of the said burrough and the said Earle of Huntingdon, and whereas the said offices or places are now become vacant by the death of Thomas Palmer, gentleman, who was last nominated and elected thereto by the said Mayor and Burgesses."

(192.) 2 January 1729.—Commission, signed by Theophilus, Earl of Huntingdon, to Norrice Craddock of the borough of Leicester, gentleman, to be steward of the borough and town of Leicester.

(193.)—Mayor's accounts (Rolls) for the following years,—4-5, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 10-11, 11-12, 14-15, 15-16, 16-17, 17-18, 18-19, 21-2 Edward II.; 1-2, 5-6, 6-7, 7-8, 8-9, 9-10, 10-11, 11-12, 12-13, 14-15, 15-16, 17-18, 18-19, 19-20, 21-2, 25-6, 27-8, 28-9, 32-3, 33-4, 35-6, 36-7, 39-40, 46-7, 50 Edward III.; and 1-2, 2-3, 3-4 Richard II.

(194.) Tallage Rolls of the years 43, 44, and 54 Henry III.; 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 16, 17, 20, 21, 28, 31, 34 Edward I.; 2, 13 Edward II.; 4, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 21, 22, 27, 28, 30, 49 Edward III.; and 4 Henry VII.—Also four packets of assessment lists, notes and memoranda touching subsidies levied in the year 1641.

(195.) Files of certificates of taking the sacrament for divers years subsequent to 1673.

(196.)—Disorderly collection of Rent-rolls and other Rentals of all lands, tenements, rents, &c. &c. in the possession of the borough of Leicester for the following years,—1376-7, 1378-9, 1379-80, 1393-4, 1452-3, 1544-5, 1582-3, 1596-7, 1598-9, 1599-1600, 1600-1, 1601-2, 1602-3, 1604-5, 1605-6, 1606-7, 1607-8, 1611-12, 1614-15, 1616-17, 1617-18, 1620-1, 1622-3, 1625-6, 1626-7, 1627-8, 1628-9, 1630-1, 1632-3, 1634-5, 1635-6, 1638-9, 1640-1, 1642-3, 1649-50, 1650-1, 1651-2, 1654-5, 1655-6, 1656-7, 1657-8, 1660-1, 1664-5, 1665-6, 1666-7, 1667-8, 1668-9, 1669-70, 1670-1, 1672-3, 1680-1, 1687-8, 1693-4, 1709-10, 1710-11, 1712-13, 1713-14, 1714-15, 1716-17.—With six undated rentals of the seventeenth century.

(197.) Subsidy Rolls A.D. 1520, 1586, 1589, 1590, 1591, 1593, 1594, 1598, 1599, 1600, 1602, 1603, 1604, 1641, 1648.—Also a packet of Subsidy Accounts of the Borough of Leicester, A.D. 1641, 1642, 1643, 1644.

(198.)—Chamberlaines' Accounts (Rolls), made up from Michaelmas to Michaelmas in the following years,—A.D. 1524-5, 1528-9, 1530-1, 1531-2, 1533-4, 1537-8, 1541-2, 1542-3, 1547-8, 1548-9, 1549-50, 1550-1, 1551-2, 1552-3, 1553-4, 1555-6, 1556-7, 1557-8, 1558-9, 1560-1, 1561-2, 1562-3, 1563-4, 1564-5, 1566-7, 1567-8, 1568-9, 1569-70, 1570-1, 1571-2, 1573-4, 1574-5, 1575-6, 1576-7, 1577-8, 1578-9, 1579-80, 1580-1, 1581-2, 1582-3, 1584-5, 1585-6, 1586-7, 1587-8, 1589-90, 1590-1, 1591-2, 1594-5, 1595-6, 1596-7, 1598-9, 1599-1600, 1600-1, 1601-2, 1603-4, 1634-5.

(199.)—Muster Rolls and Accounts relating to Musters for the years of our Lord 1577, 1578, 1580, 1588, 1599, 1601, 1608, 1612.—Also an Elizabethan Muster Roll, the date of which has been lost.—Also, copy of the Order of the Privy Council (dated at Greenwich, 27 April 1578), for the continuance of musters.

(200.)—Draft of the Petition (to the Rt. Hon. the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal of England) of the chaplains and poore of the Hospitall of William Wigston, in the town of Leicester. No date.

(201.)—Rentale reddituum domini de Grey in Leicestria in manibus heredum Johannis de Wyghly quondam Matilde Costeyn heredis Henrici Costeyn.

(202.)—Sessions Rolls (many of them imperfect) A.D. 1609, 1617, 1618, 1626, 1639, 1662, 1669, 1671, 1681, 1682, 1685, 1686, 1687, 1689, 1690, 1692, 1694, 1695, 1696, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1701, 1702, 1703, 1704, 1705, 1706, 1708, 1709, 1710, 1711, 1712, 1713, 1714, 1715, 1716, 1717, 1719, 1745, 1746, 1747, 1748, 1749, 1751, 1752, 1753, 1754, 1755, 1756, 1757, 1758, 1759, 1760, 1761, 1762, 1763, 1764, 1765, 1766, 1767, 1768, 1769, 1770, 1771, 1772, 1773, 1774, 1775, 1776, 1777, 1778, 1780, 1781, 1782, 1783, 1784, 1785, 1786, 1787, 1789, 1790, 1791, 1792, 1793, 1794, 1795, 1797, 1799.

II.—Books and Folios of Bound MSS.

(1.) 1 Edward I. to 12 Edward II.—Collection of the statutes of Parliament from 1 Edward I. to 12 Edward II. Edward the First's charter (dated at Westminster on 18 March in the twenty-eighth year of his reign) of inseximus and confirmation of his father's great charter "De Libertatibus Anglie," being put at the beginning of the volume, which is in perfect preservation, and kept in its original boards, that have been recently recovered with brown leather, lettered and stamped with the arms of the borough.

(2.) 1 Edward III. to 8 Henry VI.—Collection of the statutes of Parliament from the first year of Edward the Third to the eighth year of Henry the Sixth inclusive. In perfect condition; bound in the original boards, that have recently been recovered with brown leather, stamped with lettering and the name of the town of Leicester in gold.

(3.) 13th and 14th centuries.—Collection of miscellaneous manuscripts (repaired and restored in the year 1851), comprising the following compositions that may be assigned to the period between the close of the 13th and the close of 14th centuries.

(a.) Brief exposition of the first verses of the Psalter, Imperfect at the commencement. Beginning with Psalm 88.

(b.) Miscellaneous notes; extracts from authors and memoranda, touching points of divinity, grammar, and ethics.

(c.) Sermo de Deo et Peccatoribus, taken from St. Basil, and interspersed with sentences in English.

(d.) Sompnarius Danielis; a treatise on Dreams, beginning "Hic incipit Sompnarius Danielis prophete quem composuit in Babilonia in diebus Nabogordnesor regis."

(e.) Another collection of miscellaneous notes and pieces in verse and prose.

(f.) List of Latin words used in the service of the Church, with their English equivalents, headed with the words "Omnia ista verba pertinent prisbytero scire."

(g.) Collection of curious verses in English and Latin, with miscellaneous notes.

(h.) Vocabulary of numerals; exhibiting the Roman symbols for numbers from one to a thousand; the Latin name of each numeral being placed under it as,

I. II. III.

unus, duo, tres.

(i.) Some Legendary Narratives; such as 'The Archer and the Nightingale,' and 'The Hermit tempted by the Devil.'

(k.) Exposition of words used in the offices of the Church.

(l.) Similar exposition of difficult words in the offices for saints' days throughout the year.

(m.) Similar exposition of the words in the offices for Lord's days.

(n.) Exposition of words used in the Epistles and Gospels.

(o.) Theological Discourse (in handwriting of the 13th century) beginning "Templum dei sanctum quod 'estis vos.' Touching the qualities especially appropriate to priests, 'quorum corpora sunt templum 'spiritus sancti.'"

(p.) Tract (in the same handwriting), beginning "Sepius rogatus a condiscipulis quasdam questionculas enodare importunitati illorum non fuit facilis negando."

(q.) Treatise (in handwriting of the 14th century), on the nature and forms of various legal instruments, with illustrative and exemplary forms. Probably compiled at the close of Edward the Third's time; one of the 'instruments' being dated 45 Edward III.

(r.) Seven leaves, exhibiting lists of Latin verbs with their English equivalents. Part of a grammatical treatise, in handwriting of the 14th century.

(4.) 14th century.—The famous Codex Leicesterensis; a manuscript copy of the New Testament, partly on paper and partly on vellum, attributed to the fourteenth century. Horne's "Introduction to the Critical 'Knowledge of the Scriptures,' v. ii, p. 116, affords some particulars respecting this MS., which is also fully and most exactly described in the prefatory essay of the Reverend Henry Scrivener's "Exact Transcript of the Codex Augiensis."

(5.) 14th century.—Copy (Latin) of the Bible, made in the fourteenth century by a transcriber named W. Stanlay, alias Walne, who noted the last leaf of his transcript thus, "IV. Stanlay alio nomine Walne 'scripsit.' Small folio: vellum. Some of the pages barbarously mutilated by a former custodian of the book. There is a tradition in Leicester that this volume was used in devotional exercises by Charles the First.

(6.) Borough Chartulary; size, small folio; bound in its original boards, recently covered with leather; labelled on the back "Borough Charters, Laws of 'Portmanmote, &c.," and lettered on one of the sides "Burgus Leicesterie," the inscription being surmounted by the arms of the borough. Comprising forty-eight vellum leaves, that exhibit the following matters:—

(a.) 4 January, 20 Edward IV.—Copy of a deed executed by William Ryngolde of Leycestre, and conveying a croft in the parish of St. Margaret, Leycester called Normandy, to Thomas Kebeelle. Thomas Touchby, and John Penny, candlemaker of Leycester, their heirs and assigns for ever.

(b.) 26 January, 20 Edward IV. Copy of the indenture of agreement made before John Wyggeston, mayor and others of Leicester, by John Eryk and his wife Johan, daughter of the late Richard Yates of Leycestre of the one part, and Thomas Tynulle and Agenes his wife, also daughter of the said Richard of the second part, and John Broune of London mercer, master of Annie Yates the third daughter of the aforesaid Richard, of the third part; for the divisions in three equal shares between the said three sisters of the "lynelod" of houses, &c. formerly pertaining to their father in Leycester.

(c.) 10 March, 1 Richard III.—Record of the finding of John Roberdes, mayor, and John Fresley, John Wyllymot, Robert Croft, Thomas Philip, burgesses of the town of Leicester, that a certain elm-tree belonged to Thomas Palet, burgess of Leicester and stood on his land; the same decision being given, after due inquisition made at the request of the said Thomas Palet, for the settlement of a controversy between him and William Mole of Leycester shoemaker.

(d.) 21 June, 4 Henry VII.—Finding and adjudication of the arbitrators, John May, mercer, Thomas Whitecove, John Croock, and John Pakyngton, of Leycestre (appointed at the instance of George, Earl of Shrewsbury and Edward, Lord of Hastings), for the settlement of a variance between Thomas Swyke of Leycestre, draper, and William Betson the son of Robert Betson of Aston, co. Derby; the record of the finding of the said arbitrators being made at the desire of the said Robert Betson and William Betson, and at the order of Thomas Davyat, mayor of Leycester "who caused his clerk for to make "this entry with the copy of a bill upon the other syde "sent unto the said Thomas:" where the same bill or note is entered.

(e.) 15 June, 1 Richard III.—Copy of a deed, executed by John Burdet of Leycestre, esquire, conveying all his lands and tenements in the town and suburbs of Leycestre for the term of his (the said John's) life to George Roland and Agnes his wife; and also conveying to the same George and Agnes and their heirs and assigns for ever all the chattels and personal estate of the said John Burdet.

(f.) 2 March, 4 Henry VII.—Memorandum of a lease to farm, for the lives of the grantors in survivorship, by George Holand, of Leycestre, esquire, and Agnes his wife of all their land and tenements, &c. &c., in Reresby and Feldys, co. Leycester, to their son Thomas Holand, at an annual rent of iii li. sterling.

(g.) 29 October, 10 Henry VII.—Copy of deed executed by Robert Danet, esquire, conveying two messuages in the High Street of the town of Leycester to Thomas Chapman, clerk, and William Bailly, clerk, of Leycestre. their heirs and assigns for ever.

(h.) 29 October, 10 Henry VII.—Copy of bond, whereby Robert Danet, late of London, esquire, acknowledges himself and his heirs bound to William Bailly, of Leycester in the sum of xx li. to be paid at the next Feast of the Nativity.

(j.) 1 November, 10 Henry VII.—Copy of deed of release and quitclaim executed by Gerard Danet, esquire, in favour of Thomas Chapman, clerk, and William Bailly of Leicester, in respect to two messuages in the High Street of the said town.

(k.) 9 January, 10 Henry VII.—Copy of the bond whereby Gerard Danet of Brounekyngesthorpe, co. Leicester, acknowledged himself, his heirs and assigns bound to William Bailly of Leycester, in five marcs, to be paid at the next Feast of the Purification of the Virgin Mary; the condition of the said obligation being underwritten.

(l.) 14 March, 7 Henry VII.—Copy of a deed, executed by Walter Diotson, clerk and canon of the collegiate church of the New Work of Leicester, and conveying all the lands, tenements, and rents, &c. &c. of the said Walter, in the towns and fields of Leicester, Belgrane, Kyrkeby Malory, and Hynkeley, co. Leicester, and in Cranesley, co. Northampton, to Masters John Edmondes and John Froste, clerks, Thomas Jakes and William Smyth, gentlemen, their heirs and assigns for ever.

(m.) 2 March, 21 Henry VII. — Memorandum of the sale and delivery, in the presence of Richard Reynolds, mayor of the town of Leicester, of two masers and six spoons (precisely described) by Sir Thomas Derby, inhabitant of St. Mary's Leicester, and sometime keeper of King Henry's "tombe at Wyndeshore," to Hewe Annesley of Kiddington, co. Nottingham, for xxxiii. iii li. of which sum the said Sir Thomas hereby acknowledges his receipt.

(n.) 1374-1384.—Barely legible record of proceedings against William Martyn, webster, and James Frenche, webster, who were found guilty of offences against the rules of their craft, and placed in the pillory, during the mayoralty of William Ferroux, who was mayor of Leicester in the years 1374 and 1384.

(o.) Form of oath (French) administered to brethren on their admission to the guild of the town of Leycester, headed, "Le serment de ceux q'entrunt la Gylde." Of the thirteenth century.

(p.) Form of oath (French) administered to the jurates of the town of Leycester on their admission to office, "Le serment de Jurre;—Of the 13th century.

(q.) Concise summary of laws touching bakers, brewers, vintners, butchers, forestallers, and regrators, with rules and ordinances for assizes of bread, wine, beer, and weight and measures, the several matters of the collection being given under the following headings in red letters,—Assisa panis, assisa vini, assisa ceruisie, de tolneto capiendo, de carnificibus, de ponderibus et mensuris, de forestallis et regratoriis. Of the thirteenth century.

(r.) Copy of Robert, Earl of Leicester's charter, confirming the burgesses of Leicester in their privileges, and more especially in their right "to hold their merchautes guild as they ener best held in tyme of my "father;" the grant being in the form of a writ addressed to the earl's under sheriff, justices and ministers of Leicester "French and English." No date.

(s.) 19 Richard II.—Copy of the record (given elsewhere at greater length in this report from a separate document) of the proceedings in the court of the steward and marshal of the king's household at Lughtteburgh, in the case of John Hedon v. Peter Cook for assault and battery at Leycestre, being by the complainant's statement within the verge of the court at Notyngham; together with the verdict of the jury that the town of Leycestre was beyond the verge of the court when there resident at Notyngham. Headed in red letter "Placita aule hospicii domini Regis apud Lughtteburgh coram seneschallo et marescallo hospicii in die mercurii proximo post Festum. Purificationis beate Marie Anno regni regis Ricardi II. post conquestum decimo nono."

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

(f.) A.D. 1277.—Copy of the Great Charter of Edmund, Earl of Leycester, brother of King Edward the First, for the amendment of the laws of portmannote: the ordinances being divided into sections headed with red letter. The emblems and illuminations of this copy of a concession that was for centuries the Great Charter of the people of Leicester, show that it was intended to be the great feature of this chartulary; whilst the orthographical variations from the spelling of the original document countenance the opinion that the book was made a hundred or a hundred and fifty years after the execution of the charter in the time of Edward the First. This copy is of further value, because it concludes with a statement of the year in which Edmund Crouchback granted the charter; whereas to the indented charter already transcribed there is no date of day or year.

(u.) Abstract and summary of the statutes against forestalling and regrating, headed in red letter, "Statutum de forestall'."

(z.) 18 September 1281.—Copy of the record of the final covenant and agreement made before Sir Walter de Helyon, and Sir John de Metingham, justices of the king and others, by the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leycestre, the men of "Sir Edmonn freere nre seignor le Roie," of the one part, and the people of the bishop of Lincoln, described as "la gente de Euesque de Nichole de hors la porte de Est de memes la vile" of the other part; whereby the people residing on the bishop's fee acquired a right to be enrolled in the town-gild, and in return for this concession of municipal rights consented to pay their just proportions towards presents for the king, lords of Leycestre, and notable persons on their visits to the said town.

(z.) 9 May 3. Edward II.—Precept to the sheriff of Leicester and Warwick. Whereas the king's grandfather, formerly King Henry of England, granted by charter to his son, Edmund, Earl of Leycestre, and his heirs the full enjoyment of all liberties and privileges pertaining to the said earldom, and the king's father, Edward, confirmed the same charter:—Precept to the aforesaid sheriff that the King's cousin, Henry, Earl of Leycester, son and heir of the aforesaid Edmund, may enjoy all the liberties and privileges of the same earldom in accordance with the terms of the charter aforesaid. Given at Eltham.

(z.) 44 Henry III.—Ordinances and provisions made by the guild of Leicester for regulating the trade in wool, and the intercourse of members of the guild with merchants not belonging to the brotherhood. It is enacted that no member of the guild shall act as broker for the sale of merchandise pertaining to a merchant not enrolled in the guild, or shall go about the country instructing and aiding merchants not of the guild to buy merchandise to the detriment of the guild. Any member of the guild not observing the ordinances must change his guild: and it is further ordered that any inhabitant of Leycester, not enrolled in the guild, shall be prohibited from entering Leycester for a year and a day, on being proved guilty of travelling about the country and aiding merchants not of the guild to buy merchandise to the injury of the guild.

(y.) Passage from 1st chapter of St. John's Gospel, beginning with the words "In principio erat verbum et verbum erat apud deum et deus erat verbum," and ending with the words "Et vidimus gloriam ejus, gloriam quam unigeniti a patre, plenum gratie et veritatis."

(10.) 21 Edward I.—Memorandum in the following words, "Consideratum fuit in aula gilde die veneris proximo ante festum Sancti Petri in cathedra per Thomam Gounfrey tunc maiorem Leicestrie, Laurencium le Scllerium, Robertum de Wyllghby, Ricardum sub muro, Willelmum Bandewene, Robertum de Dalby, Henricum de Louseby, Johannem de Burton, Johannem Martyn, Thomam le Rider, Walterum de Welham, Willelmum le Palmer, Willelmum le Engleys, Johannem de Knytekote, Willelmum de Thongeston, Radnolphum de Honekote, Ricardum Geryn, Radnolphum de Hodynges, Willelmum de Bracina, et Johannem Gagge, juratores ejusdem, quod quivis heros post

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

"decessum patris sui natus in villa Leycestrie habeat omnes libertates quas pater suus habuit tam suburbio quam infra villam sine aliqua redemptione et quod ipse habeat vasa predicta scilicet melius plumbum in fornace meliorem ollam eam meliorem pelinum cum lanatore meliorem majorem cocleare argentum cum mensam meliorem cum meliore mappa. Et si pater suus indebitatus fuit versus aliquem et bona sua non sufficiant, preter bona predicta, illa predicta bona vendantur donec debita sua penes omnes plenarie fuerint soluta. Ita consideracio fuit facta die veneris predicto anno regni regis Edwardi filii Regis Henrici vicesimo primo."

(z.) 12 January, 51 Henry III.—Charter of Henry III., granting to his son Edmund, Earl of Leycester, the full enjoyment of his lands and fees with all their liberties and customs.

(aa.) Charter of Robert, Earl of Leycester, granting to the free burgesses of the town of Leycester the pasturage of Kowheye without the south gate, with free ingress and egress through the said earl's demesne to the same burgesses, to and from the same pasturage for ever.

(bb.) 28 Henry III.—Charter of confirmation by Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leycester, to the burgesses of Leycester, confirming the same burgesses in their right and title to the pasture called Kowheye, lying in the south fields of Leycester, and first granted to the said burgesses by the said earl's predecessor Robert, earl of Leycester.

(cc.) Charter of Petronilla, Countess of Leycester, confirming the grant made by Gunfrid the chaplain to Petronilla, daughter of Richard, son of Roger of Leicester, and to the sons which the aforesaid Gunfrid had begat of her, and to their heirs; that is to say, the gift of all the lands and houses formerly belonged to the said Gunfrid outside the south gate of Leycester. Witnessed by Richard, abbot of Leycester, Thomas Estirlyeg, Ralph de Mortuals, and others. No date.—Also the charter of Robert, Earl of Leycester, the son of Petronilla the countess, confirming the aforesaid grant made by Gunfrid the chaplain to Petronilla, the daughter of Richard, the son of Roger of Leycester, and to the sons that he had of her, and their heirs. No date.—Also the charter of Seyerus de Quinci, steward of the Lord King, confirming the aforesaid gift of Gunfrid the chaplain to Petronilla, daughter of Richard, son of Roger of Leycester, and his sons by her, and their heirs. No date.

(dd.) 26 Henry III.—Ordinances (French) made at Leycester on Wednesday next before the Nativity of the Virgin by the council of the seignior on the one part and the mayor and the good people of the town on the other part. Headed "Les ordeinentz fetes a Leycester" "le jodi prochain avant la Nativite de nostre dame" "lan xvi. par le conseil del Seignour d'une parte et le Meir et le beno gentz de la vile d'autre part." For the more equitable assessment and levying of tallages.

(ee.) 7 November, 18 Henry III.—Charter of confirmation to John, Earl of Chester and Huntingdon, confirming the said earl in all the liberties enjoyed by his predecessors as earls of Huntingdon; and also confirming all the same earl's tenants of the honor of Huntingdon in their possessions and liberties in the said honor.

(ff.) Collection of words and phrases used in the legal definitions of liberties and privileges; with the heading "Exemplificationes verborum Anglicorum."

(gg.) Table for calculating the price of wool by the stone or sack, from the known price per pound. Headed "De vendicione lane quando petra venditur per pondus" "in se continens xiiii; libras." No date.

(hh.) Extract from Domesday Book relating to Leycester.

(jj.) 11 Henry IV.—Four records of public submission made in the common hall by four several offenders against the mayor and corporation, and also of the pardon accorded to them after their humble confession of error and their submission to the mayor. The following transcript being an example of the entries, "Johannes Couper venit in comunem aulam Leycestrie die veneris in festo Traslacionis Sancti Benedicti, abbas, anno Regni Regis Henrici quarti post conquestum vndecimo. Et pro transgressionibus facta maiori et communitati quam quidem transgressionem idem Johannes ibidem cognovit, videlicet se ergo predictum maiorem inique gubernasse et pro ea transgressionem iuramentum sumum profecit. Et postmodum dictus Johannes pro eadem transgressionem se in gratiam dicti maiorie humiliter submisit. Et predictus maior ad instantiam parium suorum ac ad requisicionem et supplicationem communitatis ville predictie ibidem congregate graciosius perdonavit." It is noteworthy that the name of the culprit has been carefully erased from the first of these four records; and that the record of pardon has been removed by erasure from the last entry, whilst the record of the submission of the culprit (one Richard Exsytur) is preserved.

(kkk.) 14 Henry IV.—Record of an ordinance for the government of members of the guild of Leycestre made "die veneris post festum Sancti Dionisii, anno regni, regis Henrici quarti."

(ll.) 27 Henry VI.—Record of the humble submission and confession of Thomas Tiell in the Common Hall: as also of the pardon granted to him by the mayor.

(mmm.) Eight records (made in the eight consecutive years 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32 of Henry VI.) of moneys paid in curia nundinarum ville Leycestrie to one Thomas Dalton, senr. and Alicia his wife.

(nn.) 34 Henry VI.—Record of a resolution of the mayor and common council that all actions brought unjustly in the king's courts by Richard Hotoft, bailiff of Leycester, against the mayor and certain of his brethren and others, be regarded as the affair of the entire community of the town, and that the cost and charges of defending such actions brought by the said Richard out of malice and spite against the particular individuals be borne by the entire town.

(ooo.) 2 December, Henry VI.—Copy of a deed executed by John Billesden of Coventre, son and heir of John Billesden of Leycestre, conveying two gardens in the last-named town to William Gyde and William Exham of Leycestre, their heirs and assigns for ever.

(ppp.) 3 June, 30 Henry VI.—Copy of the receipt of John Wulston of Wolaston for xxli. paid to him by the dean and chapter of the New College of St. Mary of Leycestre.

(qqq.) 20 November, 15 Henry VI.—Copy of a deed executed by William Nicoll of Braunstone and Thomas Halforth of Leycester; conveying certain lands, tenements, &c., to John Reynold and Richard Pette, and their heirs and assigns for ever.

(rrr.) 12 November, 38 Henry VI.—Copy of deed of release and quitclaim executed in favour of Richard Pelle, of the King's Household, by John Reynolde, of Leycester, in respect of certain lands and tenements in the town and fields of Leycestre.

(ss.) 26 April, 4 Edward IV.—Copy of a deed executed by Elizabeth, late wife of Adam Racy, of Leycester, glover, deceased; conveying a certain tenement with appurtenances in the High Street of the town of Leycester, to William Goold of Leycester, sherman, and Emma his wife, and their heirs and assigns for ever.

(tt.) 11 Henry VI.—Record of the release and quitclaim executed in the court of Portmanmote, in favour of Thomas Grene, and Emma his wife, and their heirs, by Isabella Odeby, wife of John Odeby of Leycester, gentleman, in respect to a certain message in the Applegate, in the parish of St. Michael, in Leycestre.

(uu.) 33 Henry VI.—Record of the release and quitclaim made in the court of Portmanmote, in favour of John Reynoldes, of Leycestre, his heirs and assigns, by Johanna Hether, late the wife of Robert Kesteyven, and now the wife of John Hether of Derby, in respect to a certain piece of meadow in Brunkynghesthorp.

(vv.) 19 April, 8 Richard II.—Copy of a deed executed by John Norman, jurate of Leycester, conveying a message in the same town to Lord Robert of Swyngton, knt., William of Chuselden, Simon Bache, Robert Grethchede, and Robert Boney, clerks, their heirs and assigns for ever.

(ww.) 26 December, 1 John.—Copy of King John's charter, dated at Bures, granting that all purchases and sales of the lands of the town of Leycester made reasonably in the Portmanmote shall be valid.

(xx.) Copy of the charter of Robert, Earl of Leycester, confirming the burgesses of Leycestre in their right to have a merchants' guild, together with all customs enjoyed by them in the time of the earl's ancestors. No date.

(yyy.) Copy of the charter of Robert, Earl of Leycester, granting to the burgesses of the town of Leycestre, licence to go at their pleasure in the earl's woods, and take wood therefrom "pro lignis et claustris et ceteris necessariis." No date.—Also copy of another charter to the same effect, addressed by the same earl to all his foresters and servants of the forests of Leycestre. No date.

(zz.) Copy of a charter of Robert, Earl of Mellent, confirming the merchants of Leycestre in their right to and enjoyment of their guild, together with all customs enjoyed by them in time of King William and King William his son, and now in the time of King Henry. No date.

(aaa.) Henry I.—Charter of King Henry I., remitting to the men of Robert, Earl of Leycestre, at Oxenfort, the customs which they used to pay in the time of Robert, Earl of Melleur. No date.

(bbb.) Copy of a charter of Robert, Earl of Leycester, granting to the burgesses of Leycester, immunity from all matters and customs pertaining to hundred and heriot, and confirming them in the enjoyment of their Merchants' Guild. No date.

(ccc.) Charter of Robert earl of Leycester, son of Petronilla, Countess of Leycester, granting (for the safety of his soul, and the souls of his ancestors and successors) to the burgesses of Leycestre release and quitclaim for ever, in respect to those pence which he used yearly to take of them for mowing his corn crops at Leycestre, and also those other pence which used to be taken of them in respect of waggons carrying grain from Leycestre to any other mill but the earl's mills (et in simul illos denarios qui capi solebant de carectis portanti- bus bladum de Leycestra ad alium molendinum quam ad molendina mea de Leycestra). No date.

(ddd.) Charter of Simon de Monteforte. Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego Simon de Monteforti dominus Leycestrie filii comitis Simouis de Monteforti remisit et omnino quietos relaxavi de me et heridibus meis in perpetuum omnes illos denarios qui capi solebant annuatim de hominibus Leycestrie pro messura segetum de dominico Leycestrie et omnes insinul denarios qui capi solebant de singulis peccoribus et aucris in defenso Leycestrie pro escapura (?). Ita tamen quod aneria illa nel pecora non teneantur in defenso illo de uarda facta uel de consuetudine; et omnes insinul denarios qui capi solebant de carectis et uecturis portanti bus bladum hominim de Leycestra ad alia molendina quam ad molendina mea de Leycestra. Salua tamen mihi et heridibus meis cultura domini. Tamen ad molendina mea de Leycestra invenire possunt multuram sine impedimento et dilacione. Pro hac autem relaxatione et quieta clamacione dederunt mihi predicti homines de Leycestra quindecim marcas argenti. Et ne ego Simon nel heredes mei aliquid juris uel clamei de cetero in predictis denariis pro predictis consuetudinibus et demandis versus predictos homines de Leycestra, uel heredes suos clamare possimus, Presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui, hiis testibus, domino Stephano de Segraue, domino Thoma de Neuille, domino Gilberto de Segraue, domino Nicholao de Lestice, domino Will-elmo de Sancto Edmundo.—No date.

(eee.) Copy of the charter of Simon de Montefort, Earl of Leycester, remitting to the men of the said town all claims for bridge silver and gonnill pennies.

(fff.) 5 May, 31 Edward III.—Copy of the charter of pardon to the commons of England of all escapes of prisoners, &c., &c.; already noticed in this catalogue at greater length.

(ggg.) 34 Edward IV.—Copy of the charter of Henry, Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Leycester, &c., &c., granting to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leycester, all authority and governance over arrangements in pursuance of the king's charter for the new fair in place of another ancient fair. A charter elsewhere noticed in this catalogue.

(hhh.) Memorandum of measures and weights to be used in assizes of bread.—No date.

(iii.) 1 Richard II.—Memorandum of unimportant transactions at the court of Portmanmote on Monday next following the Feast of St. Martin.

(kkk.) A.D. 1474-6.—List of 18 burgesses "tempore Johannis Roberdes," and another list of twelve burgesses of Leycester "tempore Petri Wynwoode."

(lll.) 21 Richard II.—Memorandum that John Caymbrige has made submission in the Court of Portmanmote for his offence against the mayor and corporation of Leycester; and acknowledged himself bounden to said mayor and community in the sum of a hundred shillings.

(mmm.) 15 Edward IV.—A list of the names of thirty-six burgesses "tempore Walteri Holbech, a. r. r. Edwardi quarti p. conq. quinto decimo."

(nnn.) 3 Richard II.—Copy of Henry de Clipston's ordinances for regulation of the mayor's allowances, and the duties and payment of chamberlains of the town of Leycestre. Headed in red letter "Hee constituciones facite sunt per Henricum de Clipstone tunc maiorem ville Leycestre, et per totam communiatem predictę ville, anno Regni regis Ricardi Secundi post conquestum tercio." Noticed elsewhere in this catalogue.

(ooo.) Two lists of burgesses names, temporibus Roberti Rawlet and John Wygston.

(ppp.) 25 October, 5 Edward IV.—Ordinance made at a common hall during the mayoralty of Roger Wygston, prohibiting all persons not "fraunchest," that is to say, men not "entred into the marchautes gild." from entering the guild hall, or (as it is also called) the mayors hall, during the meeting of a common hall.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

(ggg.) Two list of burgesses names, temporibus Ricardi Gyllot and Roger Wygton.

(rrrr.) 4 August, 6 Richard II.—Deed (French) of release and quitclaim, executed in favour of Robert de Swillington by William Ferrers, burgess of Leicester, in respect to all actions of trespass, account, and covenant, heretofore had by the said William against the said Robert.

(sss.) 7 January, 2 Richard II.—Deed (French) of release and quitclaim executed in favour of Robert de Swillington by Thomas Quenyngburgh de Wymondeswold, in respect to certain lands and tenements formerly belonging to Roger de Preston in the town of Hykelving, co. Nottingham.—Also, copy of a similar French deed executed on the same day by Thomas, son of John de Wymondeswold, in favour of the aforesaid Robert, and in respect to the same lands.

(ttt.) 6 September, 4 Richard II.—Memorandum of the declaration of release and quitclaim, made in the favour of Robert de Swillington, knt., and his heirs, by Nicholas de Verdon, son and heir of Lord John de Verdon of Draycote Super . . . knt., in respect to one half of the manor of Istoke, co. Leicester, formerly pertaining to the said John de Verdon.

(uuu.) 4 Henry VI.—Copy of the deed executed by Isabella Brewster of Stonton Wyvill, widow, conveying lands and tenements in Shanton and Godwyk to Christiana, the grantor's daughter, wife of Richard Cockes of Shankton, for the use of the said Christiana and heirs of her body begotten: with remainder, in case the said Christiana and her issue should fail, to the grantor's other daughter Alicia, wife of William Aleyne and her heirs.

(vvv.) 2 May, 30 Henry VI.—Copy of the deed executed by Richard Brewster of Stonton Wyvill, granting and conveying his lands and tenements, &c., &c., in the towns and fields of Shankton and Hardewik to Christiana Cockys of Shankton and the heirs of her body begotten, with remainder, in case she should die without issue, to the grantor's heirs.

(www.)—2 Edward IV.—Copy of a deed executed by William Cockys, of Shankton, conveying a certain toft to William Peke, John Peke the senior, John Emonde, John Franke of Tyrllington, and several other persons, their heirs and assigns for ever.

(xxx.)—26 February, 1 Richard III.—Copy of a deed of mortgage, executed by William Hygom and John Wyllymot (feoffees of Elizabeth wife of John Blakenalle of Leicester, and Elizabeth Blakenalle), of a certain half of a messuage in the "swyne market" of Leicester, to Sir Waultier Diotson, chanon of the Newark of Leicester.

(yyy.)—21 October, 2 Richard III.—Copy of a deed executed by Margaret Furneys, daughter of Ralph Furneys of Leicester, conveying two cottages in Galowtrete in the eastern suburb of Leicester to John Reynolds of Belgraue, his heirs and assigns, for ever.

(zzz.)—16 Henry VII.—The final concord and agreement made in the court of Portmanmote of Leicester, between John Whatton of Leicester plaintiff, and John Pekerell and Agnes his wife, defendants, respecting two messuages and their appurtenances in the aforesaid town.

(aaaa.)—Henry VI.—Translation, made about the time of Henry VI., of the Great Charter (in French) of Edmund, Earl of Leicester, brother of Edward the First:—For that that the delays of the Court of Portmanmote of Leicester have been fully long, and some vsages lessened to them that they right ought not sue, Syr Edmund, brothere of oure Lord the Kyng, Lord of the town aforesaid, by his counseyle and by the assent of the Mayre and of the juriez and of all the comens of the same town, hath ordeyned and purveyed our amedementes vndre wreten. First for that that whan a man maketh his pleint of an othre of det or of trespas the half yere or oon yere hole passed often afore that he myght bring his adversarie to answer to the partie by feble distres of the baillieffes, And by that that theyd their godcs in chambres or othere places ther a man myght not distreyn them. And also for that that they passed without amercement of there defaultes. In amercement of this thing, It is purceied, whan a man pleyneth him of an othere rescaunt in the town in his absence of det or of ceteale with wrong taken or with holden be he of whom is pleyned somound by vitnes of two neighbours to be at the next court to answer. And if that court he cometh not, be made a symple distres vntille he be attached by plegges to be at an othere court; And if he finde plegges and comme not, or if he wille not find plegges he be commaunded to be distreyned to be at the III^{de} court by the grete distres by what somme evyr a uan findeth of his within his house or without. So that if he make to hyde or inclose in chambre or in othere places the baillief by the sight of the neighbours him make entre thurgh out alle to distrein him of that, for as much that he him justifieth. And if he hath founden plegges to come, be his plegges amercied for that that they come not at the day, if they may not showe resonable enchesoun for the whiche they come not. In the same maner be it made in ple of trespas as to distresses, but that all at the first be put by plegges. Afterwarde whanne the defendant hath made defaultes, so that he come by grete distres that that issue vpon him be in amercy, If he maye not his defaultes save, to sey that he was out of the town and knewe not of the pleinte, or that he was distourbet by an othere cause resonable, and that he will aurre to that if the defendant have founden plegges or mainpourns to be at the court at a certain day, and they may not be have thoes plegges or thoes mainpourns, If they wolde at the day come forsaile for him in the stede of assoyne as afore it was used, And ther have they afterward afre at anothre day. To that at whiche oure that the parties comen first to gedre in court the defendant if he wold sey 'have lawe,' and by that passe at that journey as afore it was used, so that bot by 'have lawe' to sey in oone quarelle be no delay granted bot oome tyme. And whanne he hath sayde 'have lawe' find be plegges, or to put his estalle in plegage. And if he be ruled to comme at the next court saying as was used afore, And if than he come not he be distreyned by the grete distresse as it is sayde afore till he come, and whanne he cometh be he amercied, If he may not his defaultes save. And for that that it happeneth othere while that a manne pleyneth him of ane othere of a grete quantite of det or of a grevous trespas, and he of whomme is pleyned is not iustifiable enowe by landes nor tenementes nor by othere things that he hath in the town, At oon tyme sellet and bringeth catelz into the town and is by thoes catelz distreyned for to justifie him and to make delynere his catelz by plegges or mainpourns to come, And to be at Right aftyr he hath there his plegges or his mainpourns in court. And if he withdrawe and eloyne his godcs that no distres may be founde vpon him, and for that that thoez plegges in that cas were wont to make their peas ayenist the baillief of oon vid., or of xiid. of that that they there had not as they there pleynone or mainprisoine. And by that that they shall passe quyte and the plaintiff lose so his dette or his amends that he oughte to have. Upon that it is purveyed in that cas, If the distres be delynered by plegge or mainpourn of eny, If he that is replevyed or mainprised nor come not to be justified as oughte to do, be his bouroughe or his mainpourns distrayned to have him forth off if they him myght have, and be they amercied for that that they have him not, If they may not by resonable excuse save, and then at the leste have the things afore that by theyr pleynyng or theyr mainprise was deluyered or the value. And for that that the vsage ys in the town that a man that holdeth of the Erle in chief may come to aske court of him, It appeueth often that aftyr that that the partie in his suete was long travelled and the court also. First at the begynnyng he hadde used his court and demaunde his court, And there he had in that court fro this tyme forward made alle newe delays. Upon that it is nowre purveyed that he that wolde court aske come and there aske within the iii^{de} court of the parole attached, and afore that that the parole be quareled or answerd, and thus not lose his court of that quarelle, And afterward whanne he shalle have his court make full pleyne right, And if he do not comme the pleyn tyf ayen at the chief court and take by xii. men lawfull in what this court to him is sayled right, And be the Lord warned to come to here that if he wolle, and his aduersaries also, And if the default of court be proved go forth in the principalle in the chief court as it hath been used afore. And for that it was used afore thies tymes whan thies parties oughte to plegge, and the plaintiff hadde said his quarelle if the defendant as oftene as the parole was oute of his mouthe he oweth not Thwertney, he was holden as not defendant, and that shulde appere Swareles, and he was not suffred to enparle, nor to aske counseille nor no man that knewe thoes vsage to speke for him, wherof many therof were loste that knewe not thoes vsagez. Upon that it is nowre purveyed that whan thoes parties appere and owene to plegge the pleyn tyf sey pleiment his quarelle without chalenge or hoket by himself, If he knowe or by ane othere, If he be avowed if him selfe ne knowe so than by forgetting of tyme nor by othere circumstance challenge the quarelle he not abated, but If the defendaunt aske declaracioun of the tyme or of othere thinges that necessarye is at the plaintiff, For much better to be acerteined to answer be the declaracioun made the same ovr without challenge. Afterward when the plaintiff shalle have quarelle the defendaunt have reasonable space to answer that he be not surprised, and If he wolle counsele and emparle do it by leve and comme agein and sey that he troweth that may availle him without challenge or hoket by him self or by ane othere that is avowed, If him self knowe not, and if he trowe that his first answer swiffeth not sey othere thinge, or If he wille to trowth holde and jugement to take, and if peraventure when the plaintiff shal quarelle the defendaunt may not with say that that he hath said agensim him or he wolle not answer, after that he shal be monysed by the baillief If he sey not Reasonable excuse, for the which he oweth not to answer he be as not defendaunt and as Swareles as was afor vsed. And for that afore It was used that the defendaunt to the pleint of the pleintyf othere thing to answer but all for to graunt or alle to sey Thwertney, and whenne he hath said may he oweth to be at his lawe himself vi. handes than his aduersarie or a man for him shalle chese folke that shalle not go with him for favour of the othere partie or for hatredon of him, and if he may not his lawe make with such folkes named shalbe atteint of alle the plee were it true or fals. For that is purveyed first in plee of dett, If the defendaunt withsey and the demandant hath prove of his det by writing taile or by two voyces he be receyved to prove hit to do so that If he haue not bnt a taile or by two voyces rise he vp first and afterwards his witness that he bringes, and be then examined of the hering, and of the sighte thos wites if they were at the taking of the dette or at the making of the taile, or if they were ther where the det or the taile was graunted, And after that that they proven for to reconere his det or to lese. And be thiez wites lauffulle peaple and not suspect custumers nor hired fals othes to go, And if he name wites and they for fauour or by hat withdrawe them the trowth to sey be they distreynd by the baillief to comme and sey ther the trowth, And also as is afor said be they examined, or If the parties by assentement wolde put them in the enqueste takene of neigbours that knowne the trowth of this thing be thenquest taken, And if the pleintyf haue not but his simple voice, be the defendaunt at his Lawe by as many as the court wolle awarde of gode peaple and lawfull not hyred, nor custumers to fals othes to go, And if he do his Lawe at the day that is gefen him passe he quyte. And if he faile be atteint of the ple. In the same maner in ple of trespas If the Defendaunt say Thwertnoutey to be at Lawe, and in the same maner there doo, And that no man from hensforde be distreynd to do his lawe by folkes named as was afor vsed, And if the defendat in ple of trespas wolle put him in thenquest of his dede be thenquest take folkes convenables out taken his Nusurs, And If day of thenquest be gefen, and the defendaunt comme not he be distreynd to be at an othere court, And If at that courte be cometh not be thenquest taken by default and jugement gefen and execucioun doone. And for that that folkes made baus in the toun bateries homesokennes and made batterz, and were bold to do that for that they had nought wherby they myght be justified of thiez trespases waren ayen the peace be they justified by theyr bodies to be at right, And if they amend not, and be custumers to do such outragez be they avoided from the toun. And for that that attourneys were not wonte to be taken bot in courte in presence of the parties, And that for the pleintyf only when noone of the people shuld lose theyr othere nedes and theyr pleges, Hit is purveyed that the oone partie or tothere that wolle may make attorney, and this aswelle in the absence of his aduersary as in his presence, And that the attorney be receyved in his stede to do asmuch as him self shulde do, but onely to the Lawe to do, that is to sey in pleges that by attorney may be pleted, And that afore ii. juriez that the attorney may witness if neede be. And for that that it was used that the plaintiff myght make iii. defawtes, and there at the last goo forth in his plee, Hit is purveyed that If the plaintiff say not his plee at the dayez that be geven him be he amerced and his pleges to say If he had pleges, and his aduersary at the same day pas without day by his default. And for that that oone vsage was in the toun that If a man playned him of an other as much as his pleynt was hanging his aduersary of no pleynt wherof he hym playned of him shulde be herd, Wherof it happened often that a man had beton an othere If he that had the wrong done myght comme afore the baillief, and pleineth him, And he that all the damage had receyved cam afor and pleynd him ther he shulde not haue hering for the pleynt of the othere. Upon that it is purveyed that every man in his pleint ayenist othere be herd, And every man to stande at right ayenist othere as righte wolle haue, and thof by that vsage that was called "holsak" a manne to be delayed of his right to sue. And for that that those merchautes were often at grete fayre of the land hit was used that assoon as the grete fayrez were vp no plee was holden no more of theym that were at home than of theym that were at the fayres. Hit is now purveyed that the courtes be holden and rightwisnes be doon of theym of theym that beene at home, and thay that at fayrez beene be essayned by the fayrez, that is for to sey, by thoez fayrez. Wherof a soyne was wonte to be afore thees oures. If so be not as they that at fayrez beene afore theyr going ther haue made attorney that theyre righte may say or defend. And for that that a man was wont to distreyne neigbour for neigbour to haue him forth, It is now purveyed that no man be distreynd for othere, If he wer not his plegge or his mainpennour or othere reason befor the which he oweth to be distreynd for hym. It is commaunded also that the Mayor and all his Juriez that in toun be, if they haue not reasonable letting, he at the ples, And to do right and to gef judgement, And if a man be amerced be the americiament taxed the same day or the mornen, and that by juriez after theyr godes and his trespas, and not at the wille of the baillief, nor no jurate nor baillief that right oweth to do or judgement to gef be a maintainer of the plee nor toller, If that be not for him self or his aliez, and than syt not he at the judgement. And for that that othere whiles comen nedys in the toun wherof the people wer not warned, thanne they behoved to lende money, brede, and wyne, and othere thinges, they went and borrowed of summe men that that was theyr nedes, and afre they eyvll quytet theyr agayn at theyr wille and to the harmes of the creamsour, For that It is ordeyned and purveyed If any thing from hensforthe wardes be borrowed to the vse of the tounne, assoon a taile therof be made to the lenner, and he haue his dett aquited within xl dayes next sueing, and If that he have not comme he to whom the det is due at the first portemamote afre those xl dayes and aske his dett, And if the det be not paid to him after that asking within viii. dayes suying wolle be go to the baillief of the castelle that at his shewing he assoone to him make leyve his det of the commyn to gadre with the dommagez that he hath had, For the which holding if they may no reasonable excusacioun shewe for the which the det hath been so longe be hinde. It is purveyed also for tallagez of thoez menay hath been welle withholden and conceyled, and thoes pore allwey paid and the grete were fauoured that If it happened that tallages for commyn nedes of the toun behoven to be made that tayllages be made by the most lauffulle of the tounne, and that best knowne thoes eses of the people by theyr othere afre the quantite of thing that behoveth to be leved, and after the cases of every man that taylage shal bere. And that tallage fully by the mayr and themme that hee shalle commaund be leved as much as may be afore that none othere be set, and ifeny remayne over, beit put in the commyn purseneseled of ii. seales of two of the worthiest men of the commen, and every eyre make to yelde accompte of tallagez set or assized to haue that that is leved, And that that is behind and where the thinges been dispended. And that accompte be gefen by the mayr and the collectours of the common or by theym that that put in theyr stede. And if they with draw to gef accompte be they justified to do that by the baillief of the castelle. It is purveyed also that if rent or service of land or of tenement be due vnto the lord or to eny othere, and his fee to him be foreclosed by walle or by hegge or by hous that the baillief or the lord may not entre to his Fee to distreyne for his service that is behind, Be it lauffulle to the baillief or to the lord to make his entre, and throughout to distreyne tille he haue his service and wall or pales to perce, If the tenant make him not entre, but that be first shewed in the court of the tounne and a suyt asked, and afterward they maken othe if they that ought right to haue afore that that of old tyme hath been used. Those othere franchises of the toun aforesaid and thoes vsages resonablez as afor haue been used remayne stable, and that alle thoes thinges aforesaid been establis, To the remennant the aforesaid Sir Edmund to this writing hath put his sealle, also with the sealle of the commen of the tounne of Leycestre aforesaid. Date, &c., &c.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

It should be observed that in this extended transcript of the translation of Earl Edmund's charter I have substituted the modern literal combination "th" for the obsolete letter þ used in the original document. In all other particulars, apart from such variations as are implied by the term and needful for the work of "extension," the translator's spelling has been adhered to closely.

The student familiar with such literary growths has no difficulty in discerning the origin and gradual expansion and subsequent disarrangement of this notable volume, which is alluded to in the records and by the annalists of Leicester as "the vellum book." Produced towards the close of the fourteenth or in an early period of the fifteenth century by a scribe who wished to make a worthy copy of Edmund Crouchback's charter, and to associate with it the more important charters and records of the borough, this chartulary was enlarged at a later time to receive transcripts of more recent archives. In later time, when its leaves had been misarranged and restitched by an unscholarly workman, its fly-leaves, fair pages, and unoccupied spaces were slowly covered with the copies of indentures and comparatively trivial memoranda that contribute greatly to the disfigurement and apparent disorderliness of the repository. The recovery of this chartulary, after a considerable period of obscurity respecting its places of custody, is all the more important as, in addition to its comparatively modern French transcript and English rendering of Earl Edmund's charter, it affords evidence of divers matters that were unknown to Mr. Nicholls the historian of Leicestershire, Mr. Thompson the historian of Leicester, and the many learned antiquaries who have from time to time made the Leicester MSS. their especial study.

(7.) 15th century.—Volume of Homilies for the several Saint's days and Sundays of the year. Small folio, vellum.

(8.) 1587, 1588, 1589, 1590. The Easter Book of St. Martin's Leicester. An account book of the Easter offerings of the inhabitants of the said parish during the said years.

(9.) 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries. The Old Lockt Book. Large folio (lettered on the back 'Records I'), long known to the citizens of Leicester as "The Old Lockt Book," being so called from a lock no longer attached to its mutilated covers; in which private agreements of individuals, and other personal documents such as wills of notable testators, used to be entered, as well as records of fines levied in the Court of Portmanmote and other matters of almost public moment. Opening with copies of the oaths administered to the mayor and the subordinate officers of the corporation of Leicester, this volume contains in its earlier leaves the records of a few transactions, temp. Edward IV., and Richard III., and certain copies of royal grants described elsewhere in this catalogue. Commemorating on p. 20 incidents of the 5th year of Henry VIII., the record is continued with occasional breaks and irregularities to 5 William and Mary. From a comparison of the private deeds of the Leicester maniment room with the contents of this volume, it appears that it was long the custom of the municipal authorities to preserve in the Old Lockt Book all indentures and other documents committed to them for safe custody.

(10.) 1477–1553.—Hall Book of Orders made in the Common Halls of the Borough of Leicester from the year 1477 to the year 1553. Containing also a large number of memoranda and copies of documents. At the end of the volume a carefully executed index to its contents by Mr. Kelly, F.S.A., author of 'Leicester in Olden Time.'

(11.) 1553–1586. Hall Book of Orders made in Common Hall of the Town of Leicester from the year 1553 to the year 1586. In which one comes upon the following entries:—

(a.) 4 January, 12 Elizabeth.—Memorandum that at the same Common Haule it was made and ordeyned by the above-named James Clarke, maior, and his brethren called the xxiii and the whole compaignye of the xlviii then and there assembled, for and in the name of the whole whole bodye of the Corporacion of the Towne of Leicester, One Acte. That every common vicieler inhabiting within in the Liberties of the same towne shall sett forth an outward sygne, as in and by the same Acte more playnely and at large it doth and may appere; which act is registered into the towne booke of Actes at the said Common Haule.

(b.) 9 April, 17 Elizabeth.—Further att the same Common Hall it was for dyuers causes thought good and mete for the service of the Prince to have at the charges of the Towne certain poste horses kepte, where-vpon there was appointed foure to be kepte, which, thes persons underwritten have vnderaken to kepe, and to serve from tyme to tyme so oft as nedes shalle requier, for and dureinge the space of one whelle yeare nexte after the date hereof, viz., Mr. Roberto Eyricke, one; Frances Norris, chamberlayne, twoe; Thomas Tyars, one. For the which theyre is allowed vnte them of the towne for euerie horse thurte-thre shillinges and foure pence, that is to saye for foure horses viii. xiii. iiid. Provdyd always that if theye the said Robert Eyricke, Francis Norrys, and Thomas Tyars doe not kepe good and able horses for that purpose and to be readie vpon one half howtes warnynge to forfitt, lose, and paye for euerie tyme to the Chamber of the Towne of Leycester the somme of fyve shillinges. For the payement of the said xxii. nobles it is further agreed vpon, in the manner and forme followinge, That is to saye, the Mayor and euerie of his bretherene called the xxiii. to paye iis. a peece, And euerie of the xlviii. xiiid. a peece, And the Resydue that shalbe then lackinge to be levied of the commonallie and inhabitan-tes of the said towne and the liberties thereof.

(c.) 25 June, 18 Elizabeth.—Item for that it is supposed of the Queen's Maiesties comynge to Leicester this sommer and presentlye; it is agreed for a stocke of moneye as was agreed at a Common Hawle holden the 29 of Aprill in Anno xvii. Elizabeth Regine, in the tyme of the mayoraltye of Mr. Hallam, viz. the xxiii. fortye shillinges a peece; and the xlviii. xxx.; the said seuerall sommes to be paid to the handes of the Chamberlaynes to the vse of the Towne, before the viiith of Julye next vpon payne of doblinge the somme demanded and not paide.

(d.) 16 November, 24 Elizabeth.—Item, it is agreed that from henceforth there shall not bee anye fees or rewardes given by the Chamber of this towne, nor anye of the xxiii. nor xlviii. to be charged with anye payementes for and towards anye bearewardes, beabrayntinges, players, playes, enterludes, or games, or anye of theym, except the Quene's Maiesties or the Lordes of the Counsaile, nor that anye players bee suffred to play att the Town Hall (except before except), and then butt onely before the mayor and his brethern, vpon payne of xis. to be lost by the mayor that shall suffre or doe to the contrarye, to be levied by his successor vpon payne of vii. s. if he make default therein.

(e.) 13 January, 26 Elizabeth.—Item, it is ordered that the xxiii. and xlviii. shall yerely amongst them geve some yerely poreioun or sallerye to Mr. Johnson, preacher, towards his better mayntenance together with other inhabitants in the towne.

(f.) A.D. 1585.—Nota, that the Earle of Leicester cam to the Towne of Leicester of Thursdays the xviiith daie of June anno supradicto, and then laye at therle of Huntingdon's house, at whiche tyme his sister the Countys of Huntingdon did receyve him there. At this his comynge to Leicester from the bathes oute of Derbyshier, he cam into Leicester by the abbye, vpp the Abbye-gute, the North Gate, and Hie Streete to the hie Crosse, where (ageynst the schoole howse) the Mayor, his bretherene, and the eight and fortye mett his honor, but in skarlett. The present given to hym was a hogges-head of claret wyne, which cost iiiij. xs. and two vyer fatte oxen which cost xx^{li} markes. Also his honor gave twentie nobles to be distributed amongst the pore people in Leicester. The which was distributed accordinglye. The nombre of the said pore was then viiith xviith persons, and it came to 1*l*. ob. a peece, young and olde, and viiid. over in euery warde, and was distributed by Mr. Mayor, Mr. Sparkes, and Mr. Johnson, porachers, and others of the aldermen.

(2.) Hall Book (specially designated 'The Booke of Actes') of Orders made in Common Halls of the town of Leicester in years prior and up to 1581, containing the following notable matters:—

(a.) Account of moneys, headed "Money gotherd for the setting forth of xi. horsemen with Sir Richard Manners as meime horse harness and money vnto Scotland with the same the next day of August, in the second yere of the reigne of oure soueraigne lord kyng Edward the Sext; and in the second tyme of mayoraltye of Randall Wood then being mayor.

(b.) 14 November, 3 Edward VI.—Copy of a letter from Francis, Earl of Huntingdon, to the Mayor and his brethern of Leicester. My Ryght hartly commendacions, thes be to aduertise you that I am commaundyd by the kynges magistie and hys most honorable counsell to seme in the parties beyond the sees wythe such a number as to me by theym ys appoyntyd to be ther generall-captaine in the holle journey, of which nombre I am assygnyd to hane of myne owne furnytur ece, able men (they to be leuyed by vertu of the kynges maiesties High Commysseyon vnder hys brode seale of my frendes, favorers, and tenautes and seruautes, and for that I haue at alle tymes rekened you to be my very frendes as heretofore I haue approuyd the same. Therefore nowe I hartely requyre you to furnyshe vnto me to serue in this jurney suche and as manye able men, Whereof as many of them to be good archers and gunners welle furnysshyd with armour, wapons, money, and horses to serue them to the see syde as ye may conveniently make; and ther horses shalbe sent home to you agayne. and that I may be assueryd to haue them there at London with me within x. days, for my tyme ys but xiii. days to tarrye there, before I take my leaue of the kynge's majestie and hys honorable counsell to accomplysse hys grace's plesure and commandement, &c. &c.

(c.) 20 February, 4 Edward VI. — An account of money gathered for the servt. of Beaumont Leye, at tow tymes.

(d.) 20 April, 5 Edward VI. — Grant of John Corbet, gentleman, made before the Rt. Hon. Henry lord marquis of Dorset, touching the rates at which the "mylche kye" of the poor and rich people of Leycestre may run on his land.

(e.) 8 January, 1555. — Copy of a letter from Lord Chancellor Stephen, bishop of Winchester, to the mayor and his brethren of Leycestre. For the prompter paymente of the ancient dues and the stricter observance of the ancient rules of their said towne.

(f.) 6 September, 1 Edward VI. — An account of money gathered for the fyndyng of foure post horses in the tyme of the mayoraltye of Mr. Robert Newcome.

(g.) 21 September, 14 Henry VII. — An order forbidding members to absent themselves from the Court of Portmanmote under a penalty of iiiid. for each offence in that respect without adequate excuse.

(h.) 22 November, 15 Henry VII. — An Act for compelling the mayor to call courts at due time at Whitsuntide and Christmas.

(i.) At same hall. — An Act for "makyng clen the "Market Place."

At same date. — An Act "for the breakyng of the "pavemente."

(k.) 23 Henry VII. — Order that "no man, woman, ne servant lay out no mucke or fylthe at ther dores, nother stockes, stones, ne tymbre, no clay, ne none othere maner of thynges to the annoyaunce of the "kynges people."

(l.) 24 November, 19 Henry VII. — An Acte for pynnyng of cattell in the castelle.

(m.) 13 Henry VIII. — Order "that no maner of man nor woman shalle receve no maner of corne that comyth one the markyt day to the markyt to be solde into ther housys to be set vpp tyll the same corne haue byn fyrst in the Markyt Place, and ther set downe to be sold, and further, that no man, woman, or servant after the markyt be done receve any maner of corne into ther housys to be sett vntyll another markyt day."

(n.) At the same hall. — Order for the removal of horses from the market place during the time of corn-market.

(o.) 3 Henry VII. — Act for regulating suits in the Court of Portmanmote.

(p.) At the same hall. — Order agaynst playing of unlawful games.

(q.) At the same court. — Order for the due driving of cattle in the public ways, so that they may not stray from their driver.

(r.) At the same date. — Order for regulating butchers.

(s.) At the same hall. — Order "that all maner of fysshers and vycutlers that bryngth fysh or othere vycutle to this towne to sell, that they selle the same vycutle hymself with hys owne handes and no othere man in theyr names except Mr. Mayer gyve lycense."

(t.) At the same hall. — The following Act for regulating the carriage of "bourne," i.e., water. "That no waterman nor bourne man shoulde carry no bourne to no manner of comon brwre nor other persons vpon any Sunday, neyther before none nor after without a reasonable cause in tyme of necessity, and than lycense askyd of Mr. Mayer for the tyme beyng, or the alderman of the quarter where they dwellythe, or elles of the alderman of the quarter wherat the brwer or othere dwellythe."

(u.) At the same hall. — An Acte for brwers, "ordering that all brwers that brwythe to selle shalle make good alle and holsume for manis bodye, neyther rowred nor toppie but that yt be cleyne brwyed according to the statute, and that sett accordyng to thassys that Mr. Mayer shall gyve, and to make good holsume, smalle drynk for the pore peopple after ob. a gallon."

(v.) At the same hall. — An Acte for typlers. Also that no typler within this towne or subbarbes of the same selle no alle with vnseallyd mesnres, neither within the house nor without, neither with cuppes nor gooderdes, but with suche mesnres as may be lawfully sealyd accordyng to the statute, and that they do kepe the assyse that at altymes shalbe appoynted by Mr. Mayer and the justices, vpon peyn of forlyet to the chamber of the towne iiis. iiiid., and further to be punnyssed accordyng to the statute.

(w.) 3 Henry VII. — An Acte for fraes.

(x.) At the same hall. — An Acte ordering "that no baker within this towne take vpon hym to carrye anye manner of bred into the cuntrey, but that fyrst they and euery of them shalle bryng ther soyd bred on horsebake to the mayor for the tyme beyng or to the wardyns of that occupacioun, and ther to be weyyd, and to se whether yt be able bred and holsume for men's body accordyng to the statute."

(y.) At the same hall. — An Acte for chandlers.

(z.) 12 November, 1 Mary. — An Acte for nyght walkers: ordering "that from hence forth alle nyghte walkers and othere idelle and cerylle disposyd persons to the plesure of God and worshippe of the towne might be restreynd from the liberties."

(aa.) At the same hall. — Further enactment for keeping the town quiet at night: ordering that no inhabitant of the town (nyght watchmen alone excepted) go abroad in the street "aftre ix. of the clocke at nyght and efter the curfure bell."

(bb.) At the same hall. — An Acte for carrynge of woode.

(cc.) At the same hall. — An Acte for refusyng of the meraltie.

(dd.) 2 Henry VIII. — An Acte for punysshment in the hall and augmentyng of the serjauntes fee.

(ee.) 21 Henry VIII. — An Acte for refusyng to be one of the Mayrs brethren.

(ff.) 6 Henry VII. — An Acte for refusyng of the chamberlaynshyppe.

(gg.) 19 March, 37 Henry VIII. — An Acte for comyng to the Common Halle; requiring inhabitants of Leycester to come at the constable's notice to the town hall, to attend the mayor on his movements to meet the king outside the town, or otherwise aid him in maintaining the honour and dignity of the town.

(hh.) 19 May, 7 Edward VI. — An Acte for cattale in the cowe-hey.

(ij.) 20 November, 1 Edward VI. — An Acte for cuttyng of bowys: Forbidding the inhabitants of Leycester under stated penalties to cut oaken, hawthorn, or other boughs without permission from the owners of the trees.

(kk.) 22 July, 2 Mary. — An Acte for the fee of the Mayor's serjaunt.

(ll.) 8 March, 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. — An Acte for the weryng of Skarlet, ordering "that from henceforth alle and euery person that shalbe elect and chosyn to execute the offyce of the marlyte within the said towne of Leycester at euery principalle feast, and othere tymes accustomed, shalle werc for the honor of the kyng and queene's maiesties, and theyr successors, and for the worshippe of the said towne skarlet as of amcient tyme yt hath ben accustomed."

(mm.) 21 November, 4 Elizabeth. — An Acte forbidding butchers to sell in Leycester or the subbarbs thereof "any maner of fleshe on the Some dayes after vii. of the clocke in the mornyng vntyle suche tyme as alle manner of deuyne seruyce be done in the parish "churches."

(nn.) At the same hall. — An order forbidding millers to carry corn, meal, or malt to or from their mills on Sundays.

(oo.) 1 May, 1 Elizabeth. — The Boke of Orders for the Orphanes Goodes. Being a collection of orders regulating the action of executors, and providing for the interests of children under the wills of their deceased parents.

(pp.) 10 November, 6 Elizabeth. — Bill of the sums levied of the xxiii. aldermen and xlvi. common councilmen for the second and last moiety of a fifteenth and tenth.

(qq.) 19. November 6 Elizabeth. — An Acte agaynstie typylng and drynkyn in common alehowses and typylng howses.

(ss.) 22 November, 9 Elizabeth. — An Acte agaynstie waystynge of the Towne Stocke. For the restraint of profenessen in dealing with the town stock which has been greatly "dekeyd by reason of geinge, carynge, and bestowinge of greate gyftes asvelle into the cuntrey, as in the towne to noble men and women, and also to othere that haue sundrye tymes resorted to the said towne of Leycester, and also at the banketes of vonyson, of gyftes and rewardes given to the players, musiciens, iesters, noblemennes berewardes, and such

"lyke charges, and ys lyke daylye more and more to dekey, except refoarmacion be spedely had."

(tt.) At the same hall.—Order that "the lecture vpon Wednesdaye and Frydaye in enery weeke shalle begyn at seven of the clocke in the forenone and ende at eighte of the clocke in the same forenone, accordynge to a decree made by the advyce and consent of the Right Honorable Henry, Earle of Huntingdon, in the tyme of the meraltie of Mr. Thomas Powler.

(uu.) 21 February, 9 Elizabeth.—An Acte "appoyntynge an order for the standyng of the buchers in the Market Place."

(vv.) At the same hall.—An Act that no forreiners shalle dwelle in anye tenement within the towne of Leicester before they be first examined.

(ww.) 1 April, 8 Elizabeth.—Account of the sums levied in the several wards of Leicester, and also of the mayor, his twenty-four brethren and the forty-eight for a subsidy.

(xx.) 11 July, 9 Elizabeth.—An Acte for the confirmacion of the ordinall of tanners within the town of Leicester.

(yy.) 1 November 1567.—Account of moneys levied in the several wards of Leicester, and of the 24 and 48, for the payment of the first moiety of a fifteenth and a tenth.

(zz.) 12 March, 10 Elizabeth.—An Act for the universall reliefe of the poore and impotent people inhabiting within the towne of Leicester, ower and aboue the collection within the same towne by vertue of the Queene's Maiesties statutes.

(aaa.) 1 April 1568.—Bill of the sums of money levied of the twenty-four aldermen, the forty-eight common-councilmen, and in the several wards of Leicester for the payment of a second moiety of a subsidy.

(bbb.) 11 August, 10 Elizabeth.—An Acte concernyng the general lotterye.

(ccc.) 1 November 1568.—Bill of the sums of money levied of the twenty-four aldermen, the forty-eight common councillors, and in the several wards of Leicester, for the payment of the second moiety of one fifteenth and a tenth.

(ddd.) 4 March, 11 Elizabeth.—An Acte for the keepynge of fower post houses.

(eee.) At the same hall.—An Acte for the keepynge of Whetson Court.

(fff.) At the same hall.—An Acte for the augmentynge of the stocke of the towne of Leicester.

(ggg.) At the same hall.—An Act ordering "that euerye common vcteler that nowe inhabiteth, or that then shall or will inhabite, within the liberties of the towne of Leicester aforesaid, shall set furth an outward "sygne or token of his so vctelyng."

(hhh.) 18 February, 12 Elizabeth.—An Acte for the Panynge of the common strettes within the liberties of the towne of Leicester.

(iii.) 18 April, 12 Elizabeth.—An Acte for the Kepyng of sixe post horses.

(kkk.) At the same hall.—An Act confirming dyuer and sundrie previous acts of the Common Hall.

(lll.) 28 February, 14 Elizabeth.—Order for the pay ment of ten pounds for "a salte of sylvor gylte."

(mm.) At the same hall.—An Act (agreed to at the special request of Henrie, Earle of Huntingdon) for lending one hundred marks to Thomas Bradgate, clothier, for seven years, to enable him the better "to sett vpp clothynge within the towne of Leicester, whereby the poore "inhabiting there shall not only be sett on worke, "but thereby to bee kepte from idleness."

(nn.) 17 April, 14 Elizabeth.—Act restraining the mayor and his officers from lending the town hall.

(ooo.) At the same hall.—An Acte for Orphanntes Goodes. For the protection of orphans from dishonest or remiss executors.

(ppp.) List of the lenders of money towards the fund of one hundred marks advanced to Thomas Bradgate for setting the poor at work on clothing. Also a list of those of the xxiv. and the xlviii. who, having so lent money, have received half their money again.

(qqq.) 8 May, 15 Elizabeth.—Act touchinge the exchange of land between the town and the corporation.

(rrr.) 7 April, 15 Elizabeth.—Copy of the indenture of agreement between her Majesty of the one part, and the Mayor and Burgesses of Leicester of the other part, for the erection in Leicester of "one substantialle scoole" house meet and fit for childarne to be taught in."

(rrr.) 21 September, 15 Elizabeth.—An Acte for the election of chamberlaynes.

(sss.) 20 Elizabeth.—Order sett downe touchinge the water cowers or passage of water in Dead Lane.

(ttt.) 3 February, 21 Elizabeth.—Memorandum that certain writings have been deposited in the Town Chamber by James Wightman of Burbadge, co. Leicester, yeoman.

(uuu.) 2 March, 23 Elizabeth.—Deposicions on the behalf of Francis Arden of Parkhall, co. Warwick, gentleman, taken of certain persons before George Tatam, mayor; and William Noryce and John Middleton, justices of the peace, of the town of Leicester; touching a lease for a term of years of certain messuages of Parkhurst, co. Warwick, made by the said Francis Arden to Francis Throckmerton, esq.—Also a copy of the "Interrogatories to be mystnyred to witnessers produced on the part and behalf of Frances Arden, gent., against "Francis Throckmerton, esquire.

(13.) 1586-1707.—Hall Book; being a Book of Orders made in the Common Hall of the town of Leicester from the year 1586 to the year 1707.

Of the very few interesting entries of this volume, the following may be given as an example:—"Vpon the twelfth daie of August 1636, Loudonics, Prince Palgrave of the Rhyne, did dyne at the Angell in Leicester, cominge from our Royall King Charles, who was then at Tutbury, to goe to Honelby, where the Queene then laye, and the Mayor, Recorder and most of the fower-and-twentie went thither and presented vnto him a banquet presently after the meate was taken from his table, which cost xxiii li. and something more, and three gallons of Canarye sacke, three gallons of claret, and three gallons of white wine which was very kindeley accepted of by the Prince, and Mr. Mayor and his brethren most courteouslye used by him."

(14.) 1708-1715.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls and at meetings of Commissioners.

(15.) 1723-1735.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls of the borough of Leicester.

(16.) 1735-1747.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls.

(17.) 1747-1763.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls.

(18.) 1707-1764.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls: containing the loyal address of the mayor, recorder, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough to George the Second on the defeat of the Pretender, whose supporters are described as having "endeavoured to "exchange liberty for slavery, religion for superstition."

(19.) 1764-1784.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls.

(20.) 1784-1806.—Hall Book of Orders made in Common Halls.

(21.) 1632.—Folio rental of the rents of all lauds, tenements, &c. &c. pertaining to the mayor and corporation of the borough of Leicester.

(22.) Series of volumes of Chamberlain's Accounts, beginning with accounts of the year 1587-8, and closing with accounts of the year 1738-9, of the nature of which accounts a conception may be formed from the following specimens:—

First Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1587 to 1594.

(1.) Items in the account of payments for the year 1587 to 1588.

Item, Christopher Alysander, behynd, for certen playes and a beare baitinge, vid.

Item, given to the awdytour and receyvoor at Martles' at the castle of Leicester, one pottell of clarett wyne, and a quartre of sacke, and a quartre of suger, iis. xd.

Item, given to George Warde, hearward, more than was gathered, iiiiis.

Item, the xxviith of December, given to the Earle of Huntingdon iiii. gallons of Gaskyne wine, one pottell of sacke, and iiiiil. of suger, xixs. iiiiil.

Item, the xxvth of January, given to the Earle of Essycke's playars more than was gathered, xs.

Item, given the viiith of February to a soldyar, a travelcar, being a sergeant of a band, vs.

Item, given to a messenger that brought proclamacions towchinge the alteration of weightes, iiii. iiiiil.

Item, at the assises in Lent, given to the judges a gallon of clarett wyne and a pounce of suger, iiii. iiiiil.

Item, the third of August, given a pur syvaunt that brought the bookes for the seconde fyftene, and the second paymentes of the subsidy, iiii. iiiiil.

Item, given to the Earle of Darbye, three gallons of clarett wyne and iiiiil. of suger, xxiis.

Item, given to Sir George Hastings playars more than was gathered, iiiiis.

Item, paid to the judges of the assyzes, at the two generall gaole delyueries whiche they claim as there fee, xxs.

Item, allowed to Mistress Mayris, towards the charges of a dynner at the fyrst musters, and of Mr. Cave and dyners others. xs.

Item, for a cartt abowte the towne ii. dayes to carte hores and bawdes, xiii.

(II.) Accounts for the year 1589 to 1590:—

Item, geven to the byddle than for cartinge them abowte the towne the said 2 dayes, vii.

Item, pd. to the paymente for payntinge of papers to be sett oner there headdes, vii.

Item, the xviiith of Februmarye, geven in rewarde to the Earle of Sussexe players whoe were not suffred to playe, xs.

Item, the xviiith of Aprill, paid for a gallon of wyne and a half, and two poundes of suger, a pounce of allmondes, a dosen of cakes, and a disse of apples, geven to the Lady Turpy by Mystrys Mayrrys, xs. vii.

Item, the xxth of Maye, payed to others moe of her Majesties players, more then was gathered, xs. vii.

Item, geven to Mr. Skevington, the High Sheriffe, and dyvers other gentlemen with him, at a greute beere-baitinge then had, a gallon of wyne, a pounce of suger, and ten shillings in golde, xiii. iii.

Second Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1594 to 1599 and 1604-5.

(I.) Items of accounts of payments in the years 1597-1598.

Imprimis, paid for a brode arrowe geven to the auditours at the castle, for the rent of the Butt Close, iii.

Item, the ixth of Januarye, geven to the Queene's Majesties players, more than was gathered, xiii. vii.

Item, the xiith daye of Januarye, payde for the charges in eatinge of renyson which was geven by Sir John Graye, xlviii. x.

Item, the xvth of August, paid for a fat mutton geven to the judges att the assizes in Somer, xs.

(II.) Items of payments in the year 1598-1599.

Item, given to the Erle of Pembrucke, his playars, in reward, xiii. iii.

Item, geven to the Earle of Darbye, his playars, which did not play at the towne hall, xs.

Item, att New Yeare's Tyde, geven to the Earle of Huntingdon for a new yeare's gifte in goulde, vii.

Item, paid for a purse then geven to his lordshippe with the saide golde, vs.

Item, paide for wyne and suger geven to the Lord Crumwell at his gowinge into Ireland the second of Aprill, viii. iii.

Item, the xxind of June, geven to the Lord Darsies players, who did not playe, xs.

Item, the same daye, geven to one Mr. Graye, preacher, who made a sermon at St. Maytyns, a pottell of wyne, xvi.

Item, the xxth of August, geven to the Earle of Huntingdon, at the Angell in Leyester, xli.

(III.) Account of payments for the year 1604-5.

Item, the viiith daye of October, geven to Sir Harye Bonamont, knt., at his marriage, at the Abbye of Leicest. iii. quartes of sacke and iii. quartes of claret, vs.

Item, the xxii. of October, payd for one gallon of claret, one gallon of white, and one pound of suger, given to the Constable of Scotland, the Earle of Errall, and the Earle of Leicest., att their going up to the court, vii.

Item, the xiiith of October, given to the Lord Shandoy's players, who did not playe, xs.

Item, geven then to the same playars in wyne and suger, xxi.

Item, the xxiiith of October, paid for one pottell of muscadyn, one pottell of sacke, and one pottell of white wyne, given to the Vice-Chauncellor of Scotland, at his going to the courte, vs. iii.

Item, the fyrst day of November, given to a messenger that brought proclamacions for the proclayming of the Kinge's Majestie kyng of Greate Bryton, Fraunce, and Ireland, iis. iii.

Item, the xvith of November, paid for one gallon of claret, and one gallon of sacke, and the pottells sent to the Lorde Graye's to Bradgate, at whiche tyme the towne and the justices were in speeche about a howsse of correction.

Item, the xvth of Marche, paid for one pottle of sacke, one gallon of claret, and one gallon of white, one gallon of muscadyn, and iii. of sugar, to be given to the Lady Arbella, at her being at the Angell at Leicest. xix. vii.

Item, the xxixth of Aprill, paid for a gallon of claret, a gallon of sacke, and one pinte of claret, and one pounce of suger, given to the Countis of Shrewsburye and her followers, xix. vii.

Item, the iiith of June, paid for six fat wethers, given to the newe Earle of Huntingdon at the funeral of the old erls, vii.

Third Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1601-1605.

Items of the account of payments in the year 1602-3.

Item, the xxith of Marche, paid for wyne and suger and banquetinge stuffe given to Sir John Graye and other gentlemen, at the Angell in Leicest., comyng poste from the courte, vi.

Item, the xxiiith of Marche, paid for a pottell of sacke to the justices and maior's bretherne at the openyng of the Councell's letters, iis.

Item, paid for wyne and suger given to certen Scottische gentlemen, at the Angell in Leicest., viz., Sir John Hume, knight, Sir Wm. Hume, knight, and Sir Richard Preston, knight, iis. iii.

Item, of Saturday, the xxvith of Marche, paid for one gallon and one quarte of sacke, ii. gallons of claret, and iii. li. of suger, given to the sheriffe and justices of peace and gentlemen of this countie of Leicest., Mr. Mayor and his brotherne then dynyng with them at the sheriffe's howsse, after the proclaymyng of the dissolution of the Queene's Majestie, and the proclaymyng of James the Sixt, kinge of Scottes, king of England, France, and Ireland, xvs. iii.

Item, the xxiiith day of June, given to the Ladye Elizabeth's Grace (doughter of the kinge's majestie), at her then beinge att Leycester, att Mr. Pilkington's howsse, ii. gallons of claret wyne, ii. gallons of white wyne, one gallon and one quart of Rensyshe wyne, and one suger lofe of ix li. and ten ounces, xxxiis. ix.

Item, the xxiiith daye of June, given to the Queene at her then cominge to Leicest. from Ashebye out of Scotland, a silver standinge cuppe with a kover, all gilte, wayng xxxix oz. at vis. x. the oz., which comes to xiii li. vis. iii.

Item, to the yonge prince, the kinge's son, an other standinge silver cuppe with a kover, all gilte, wayng xxix oz. and half an ounce, att vis. viii. the ounce, which comes to xli. xvi.

Item, at the Queene's beinge at Leycester, given to the Kinge's Majestie's officers, attending upon the Queen's Majestie, the Priuce, and Princes, which they claymed for their fees, as followeth, viz., to the gentleman vs. her, xli.; to the groome of the chamber, xs.; to the yeoman vs. her, xs.; to the yeoman of the stirrope, xs.; to the litterman, xs.; to the cotechman, xs.; to the footemen, xs.; to the porter, xs.; to the herbyngers, xs.; to the trumpeters, xli. xs.

Item, given to the Earle of Worcester's playours, xs.

Item, given to the Lorde Admyrall's playours the xviiith of August, xs.

Item, paid for ix. laton pottes, one thicke table borde, vsd at the queene's majestie being and lyeinge in the towne, at Sir William Skipwith's howsse, iiii.

Fourth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1606-1610.

Including accounts (with curious particulars) of expences for visiting plague-stricken persons, and staying the spread of the pestilence; and a notable bill of charges for suppressing by military force "the unruly" people about the leyng open of inclosed groundes."

Fifth volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1611-1615.

Selected items of the account of payments in the year 1612-1613.

Item, the xxvith day of October, given to the queen's playours, xli.

Item, the xiiith daye of October, paid for the charge of Mr. Francis Harvey, now our recorder, when he came to receive his othe, xs.

Item, given to a messenger that brought proclamacyons against the wayrning of pockitt daggers, and against transporting of corn and grayne out of England, vs.

Item, given to Mr. John Pilkington, vnder sheyrisse for the countie of Leicest., for his fee to persue our charters, with allowance thereof vnder his hande, because he shall not ympanell any parson or parsons dwelling in Leicest. or the suburbs thereof, to appeyre at the castell, iis. iii.

Item, paide to Robert Parker for whippinge of a roaguishe boy; iij.

Item, paid to the kinge's maiestie for aide to marrye the ladie Elizabeth, his highnes' daughter, as the lawes of this realm require, oute of all the landes and tenementes of the maior, bayliffes, and burgesses of Leicester, bothe fee simple and fee farm, vi li.

Item, given to a poor man that went aboute with the prisoners in the towne for vi weeks and three dayes to geither almes, vis. vii d.

Item, paid to Richarde Dalbye for whippinge of a roaguishe boye, iiii d.

Sixth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1616 to 1620.

Seventh Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1612 to 1625.

Containing the account of charges for the festivities in Leicester attending the accession and coronation of Charles the First.

Eighth Volume of Chamberlains' Account for the years 1626 to 1630.

Ninth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1631 to 1635.

Tenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1635 to 1640. Containing these Selected items of the account of payments in the years 1635-6.

Item, paid for a banquet and wine the 24th of August for the entertainment of the Prince Palsgrave of Rhine, to Mr. Putehen for banquetting stuff, as appeareth by his bill, xviii li. xviii. viii d.

Item, to Thomas Henshave for banquetting stuffe at the same tyme, as appeareth by his bill, vii li. iis.

Item, payd at the same tyme for three gallons of Canary sacke, iiii. gallons of claret, and 3 gallons of white wine.

Item, given the 22nd November to a companye of players, iii. xiiis.

Item, given the 22th of April to a company of players, called the Kinge's Revellers, i li.

Item, given the 12th of Julye, to a companye of players ii li.

Item, given to the kinge's trumpettes, iii. xs.

Item, given to the Palsgrave's groom, xs.

Eleventh Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1640 to 1644. Containing these Selected items of the account of payments in the year 1640-41.

Item, given to Mr. Barrow, preacher of God's Word, one quart of sack, is. iiii d.

Item, given to Doctor Clarke at his comeinge to visite the schoole, i. pottle of sack, i. pottle of claret, half a pound of sugar and biskettes, vs.

Item, given to Mr. Hinde, preacher of God's Word, i. quart of sacke and i quart of clarett, iis.

Item, given to Mr. Gibbes, preacher of God's Word, i. quart of sacke, is. iiii d.

Item, given to Mr. Angell, preacher of God's Word, i. quart of sacke, is.

Item, given to Mr. Wilde, preacher of God's Word, i. quart of sack, is. iiii d.

Item, given to Mr. Willowes, preacher of God's Word, i. quart of sacke and i quart of clarett, iis.

Item, to Mr. Chillingsworth, Master of the Hospitall by Mr. Maior's appointment, i. quart of sack, and i. quart claret., iis.

Twelfth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1645 to 1650. Containing these:—

(I) Selected items of the account of payments in the year 1646-47.

Item, paid for 2 gallons of Canaire and 2 gallons of burnt claret, given to Major Generall Skippon, ii. is. iiii d.

Item, paid for a pottle of sack, and a pottle of clarett and suger, given to Colonel Hewson, vs. viii d.

Item, paid for a gallon of sack, given to 2 ministers that preached when the Kinge laye in towne, as he went to Henneby, vis.

Item, paid for wine and suger, gyven to the Right Hon. the Earle of Pembroke and the commissioners, when they went to his Majestie att Newe Castle, iii. ixs. vi d.

Item, paid for a bankett, given to his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax and to his lady, vii. xvii. vi d.

Item, paid for 10 bottles of white wine, one gallon of clarett, twoe gallons of Canarie, and for 14 bottles to putt the wyne in, and for a sugar loafe, given to Right Honourable the Countesse of Devon, iiii. vi d.

(II.) Selected items of the account of payments in 1647 to 1648.

Item, paid for wyne, bisket, and other banketing, when Mr. Maior and divers aldermen went to visit Sir A-thur Haselrigge at his going into the north, iiii. viii d.

Item, paid for wyne, biskets, suger, beare, and tobacco, when Mr. Maior and the aldermen went to visit Lord Generall Cromwell, att his goeing into the North, ii li. vis. iiii d.

Thirteenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1650 to 1655.

(I.) Selected items of accounts of payments in the year 1650-51.

Item, paid to the sergeantes and drummers when proclamacion was published against the Scotese Kinge, vs.

Item, paid for beare given to the Generall's army, when they marched to Worcester, and to the brewers men, and for dishes, &c., iiii li. iiii. xii d.

Item, paid John Turvile for exchanging the old silner spoones, and for sixe newe spoones and for engraving them, iiii li. ix d.

Item, taxes paid for the army, xviii li. xii. vi d.

Item, paid Bartholl' Hunt for two horses to Warwick, and three horses to Coventry, for the States buisnesses when the Generall past hy, ii li. iiii. iiii d.

Item, paid at severall times for wyne sent for to Hall and Gainsborowe for Collonel Fairfax and divers officers and strangers, iii. xiiis. vi d.

Item, paid for a quart of sack to drinke with Colonel Hacker, when he came from Worcester fight, is. viii d.

Item, paid for 2 gallons of clarett, 2 gallons of white, two gallons of sacke, three pound of suger, and a bankett presented to the Lord Generall Cromwell when he went to Worcester, iiii li. xiiis. ii d.

Item, paid for 3 ounces of tobacco and pipes to the Hall when Collonel Fairfax and Collonel Hacker was there, iiii. vi d. ob.

Item, paid for severall ministers dinners and for wine, beare, and tobacco, upon June 18, being a daye of thanksgivinge, and when Mr. Maior and aldermen dymed with them, and for ministers charges which preached then, ii. xixs. ii d.

Item, paid when Mr. Maior, Collonel Fairfax, and divers aldermen went to dnye with the ministers, September 28, ii. xviiis. viii d.

(II.) Selected items of payments in the year 1651-52.

Item, paid for a dinner for Captain Pratt, Mr. Moore, Mr. Hicklyn, and Mr. Cole, when wee went to delivier the petition to the parliament against depopulacion, 6s. 6 d.

Item, paid for fine frames for the States armes, £2 10 0.

Item, paid Robert Bradshawe for blazing the States Armes att the towne Hall, and for scowring the chimney peece and pictures in the town parlour and hall, £4 0 0.

Item, paid William Newton for 14 gentlemen's dinners, and for wyne, strong beare, and tobacco att a dinner there vpon the day of thanksgivinge for the great victorie att Worcester, £4 14 4.

Item paid William Newton for 14 gentlemen's dinners and fower others, and for wyne, strong beare, and tobacco att a dinner vpon the daye of thanksgiving, for the regaininge of Leicester, £3 12 10.

(III.) Selected item of the account of payments in the year 1653-54.

Item, paid to the severall sextons of the severall parishes for ringing on the day the Lord Protector was proclaimed, 13s. 4 d.

Fourteenth Volume of the Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1655 to 1660.

Containing the particulars of the charges attending the change of government and the restoration of monarchy : some of the entries relating to payments for the entertainment of General Monk.

Fifteenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1660 to 1665.

Sixteenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1665 to 1670.

Seventeenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1670 to 1675.

Eighteenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1675 to 1680.

Nineteenth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1685 to 1690.

Twentieth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1690 to 1695.

- Twentieth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1695 to 1700.*
- Twenty-first Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1700 to 1705.*
- Twenty-second Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1705 to 1710.*
- Twenty-third Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1710 to 1715.*
- Twenty-fourth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1715 to 1720.*
- Twenty-fifth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1720 to 1725.*
- Twenty-sixth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1725 to 1730.*
- Twenty-seventh Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1730 to 1735.*
- Twenty-eighth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1735 to 1740.*
- Twenty-ninth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1740 to 1745.*
- Thirtieth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1745 to 1750.*
- Thirty-first Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1750 to 1755.*
- Thirty-second Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1755 to 1760.*
- Thirty-third Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1760 to 1765.*
- Thirty-fourth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1765 to 1770.*
- Thirty-fifth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1770 to 1775.*
- Thirty-sixth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1775 to 1780.*

Mislaid and missing, and therefore not inspected.

Thirty-seventh Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts for the years 1780 to 1785.

Thirty-eighth Volume of Chamberlains' Accounts.

Being a collection of accounts pertaining to the years 1689-90, 1709-10, 1724-25, and 1735-39, and accidentally omitted from the volumes covering those years.

(23.) Hall papers of the borough of Leicester, in twenty-four volumes. From the year 1583 to the year 1710. The chronological arrangement of the volumes being occasionally defective, and a few of the documents being older than the earlier date of the first volume.

The heterogeneous writings of this division of the Leicester archives were arranged and put in their present form some thirty years since, when Mr. Kelly, F.S.A. and his coadjutor Mr. Thompson (the historian of Leicester), first turned their attention to archaeology, and obtained permission from the rulers of their borough to rescue the town records from disorder, and to preserve them from the injury and partial destruction with which they were threatened by the insecurity and decay of the muniment room of the old Town Hall.

As these gentlemen very properly determined to preserve every scrap of literary material to be found in the ancient depository of writings, this collection of documents, relating in some way or other to business performed in the Town Hall, either at common halls, or meetings of the aldermen, or sessions of the borough magistrates, or municipal entertainments and ceremonies, contains a large amount of uninteresting and absolutely worthless memoranda. No small proportion of the papers consists of sheets exhibiting the names of persons present at common halls in successive generations, with no minutes or notes of any kind respecting the business transacted at the assemblies. A larger and more entertaining ingredient of the collection consists of the miscellaneous correspondence of successive mayors, aldermen, and others on matters of municipal economy. Another ingredient of the miscellaneous accumulation is a large number of depositions of witnesses in judicial inquiries touching trivial and perfectly unhistoric matters. The inspector of the volumes comes also on vagrancy and bastardy orders, certificates of character for menial servants and other obscure people, indentures of apprentices, petitions from indigent persons for relief from the municipal purse or for admission to municipal hospitals, applications for grants or renewals of leases, and hundreds upon hundreds of warrants for the apprehension of persons accused of petty crimes or misdemeanours. But though a considerable part of these papers may be called literary refuse, and a large proportion of the not quite worthless documents has no claim to the consideration of students of Historical Manuscripts, the searcher of the volumes comes here and there on matters of interest and once in a while on a record of moment and value.

First Volume of Hall Papers.

Containing—

(I.) Christmas, 1574.—List of the names of the poore that had relief geven of the moneye that cam from Oxford, and was bestowed at Xmas, 1574, of the gifte of Henry Smythe, of Oxon.

(II.) 30 September 1583.—Memorandum of proceedings at a council called by the Mayor of Leicester, on the receipt of a requisition from the Privy Council, for two demolitions and four light horsemen. Also, the high sheriff's requisition for the same soldiers.

(III.) 5 May 1584.—List of the names of such of the xxiv. as have consented to the answere of my Lord Huntingdon, for the lending of cli. to a clothier.

(IV.) 22 June 1584.—Minute of proceedings at a common hall held in respect to the charges of the town, at the Earl of Leicester's comynge thether, which was on Thursdays, the xviiith of June, in thafternone, and was gone on Fridaye followynge by fyve of the clock in the mornynge.

(V.) 4 August 1584.—Presentments and findings before Richard Jackson, steward, and Henry Mole and John Draycott, wardens of "the conveyors," upon their "serche for defective wares."

(VI.) 15 May 1584.—Letter from Thomas Clarke, mayor of Leicester, to Sir Francis Walsingham, principal secretary to Her Majesty. Written at the instance of the Earl of Huntingdon, and touching a seizure of books contrary to the Book of Common Prayer, made at the house of one Grene, a carrier, of Leicester, who brought the said unlawful books from London.—Also, the depositions of the said Grene and other persons, touching the circumstances under which he came into possession of the said books.

(VII.) 2 June 1584.—Letter from Thomas Clarke, mayor of Leicester, to the Earl of Huntingdon, respecting an arrangement for setting the poor of Leicester "to worke on spyunnyng."—Also, two other letters touching a proposal to entrust "Blase Villers, gent., a "merchant of the staple, and one of our compagne," with "a cli. of the comon charge of our towne, whoe "therwith will sett the poor to worke on spyunnyng."

(VIII.) 14 January, 25 Elizabeth.—Memorandum relating to the Earl of Worcester's players. "William, "Earle of Worcester, hath by his writinge, dated "14 Januarye A^o 25 Eliz., licensed his servantes, viz., "Robt. Browne, James Tunstall, Edward Allen, Wm. "Harryson, Tho. Cooke, Ryc. Johnes, Edward Browne, "Ryc. Andrewes, to playe and goe abrode, vsinge them- "selves orderly, &c., &c. These are therefore to require "alle suche her highnes officers to whom these presents "shall com quietly and friendly within your severall "presinctes and corporacionis to permyt and suffre "them to passe with your furtherance, vsinge and de- "meanynge themselves honestly, and to geve them the "rather for my sake suche intertayment as other noble- "men's players have. In wytnes, &c."

| | |
|---------------------|---------------------|
| "Mr. Mayor, | Mr. Morton, |
| "Mr. John Heyrycke, | Mr. Robt. Heyrycke, |
| "Mr. Noryce, | Mr. Ellys, |
| "Mr. Ja. Clark, | Mr. Newcom. |
| "Mr. George Tatam, | |

"Memorandum, that Mr. Mayor did geve the aforesaid "playours an angelle towards theyre dynner, and wild "them not to playe at this present, being Frydaye the "vith of Marche, for that the tyme was not convenient. "The foresaid playours met Mr. Mayor in the strete "nere Mr. Necombe's house, after the angelle was geven "abowte a ii. bowers, who then craved lycence agayne "to playe at thre, and he told them they shold not; then "they went away and sed they wold play, whether he "wold or not, and in dyspote of hym, with dyners other "evyl and contumptions wordes; Wines, Mr. Newcom. "Mr. Wyean, and William Derycke. More, these men. "contrarye to Mr. Mayor's commaundement, went with "their drummer and trumppytes thorowe the towne in "contempt of Mr. Mayour, neither wold come at his "commaundment by his officers vse worship. "Wm. Pateson, my Lord Harbarde's man, } these ii. "Tho. Powlter, my Lord of Worcester's man, } were. "they which did so muche abuse Mr. Mayor in the "aforesyd wordes."

Nota.—These seyd playours have submitted themselves, and are sorye for there wordes past, and craved pardon, desyering his worship not to wryte to there master agayne them, and so vpon there submyssion they are licensed to play this instant at thre p.m., and also they have promysed that vpon the stage in the begynnyng of there play to shoe vnto the herers that they are lycensed to playe by Mr. Mayor, and with his good will, and that they are sorye for the wordes past.

(IX.) 3 March 1583.—Memorandum touching another company of itinerant players:—

Tuesdaie, the third daie of Marche 1583.—Certen players whoc said they were the seruantes of the Quene's Maiestie's Master of the Revelles, who required licence to playe, and for authorytey showed forth an indenture of lycence from one Mr. Edmonde Tylneye, esquier, Master of her Majestie's Revelles, of the one parte, and George Hayselle, of Wisbeche, in the Isle of Elye, in the com. of Cambridge, gentleman, on the other part. The which indenture is dated the viith daie of Februaire in the xxvth yere of her Maiestie's raigne, &c.

In which indenture there ys one artycle that alle justices, maiiores, sheriffes, baylyffes, and constables, and alle other her officers, ministers, and subjectes whatsoever to be aydinge and assistinge vnto the said Edmunde Tihye, his deputies and assignes, attendinge and havinge due regard vnto suche parsons as shall disorderlye intrude themselves into anye the doings and accions beforemencioned, not beinge reformed, qualified, and bound to the orders prescribed by the sayd Edmund Tylneye. These shalbe therefore not onlye to signifie and geve notice vnto alle and every her sayd justices, &c., that none of these owne authoryte to intrude themselves, and presume to shew forth anye suche playes, enterludes, tragedies, comedies, or shewes in anye places within this realme without the orderlye allowance hereof, under the hand of the sayd Edmund.

Nota.—No playe is to be played but such as is allowed by the sayd Edmund, and his hand at the latter end of the same booke they doe playe.

The forsaid Haysell is nowe the chefe playour.

(X.) 6 Marche. 1583.—Memorandum of a curious charge against the last-mentioned company of itinerant players:—

Friday, the 6 of Marche.—Certen players cam before Mr. Mayor at the Hall, there beinge present Mr. John Tatam, Mr. George Tatam, Mr. Morton, and Mr. Worship, who sayd they were the Earle of Worcester's men, who seyd the forsaid playours were not lawfullye authorysed, and that they had taken from them their commission. But it is vntreue, for they forgot there box of indenture and licence, and so these men gat yt, and they say the sayd Haysell was not here hymselfe, and they sent theyre to Grantom, to the sayd Haysell, who dwelleth there.

(XI.) 28 February 1584.—Copy of a circular letter (dated from her Majesty's court, and signed Ro. Leicester, Fr. Knollys, Jamys Croft), addressed to justices of the peace, mayors, and others. Enjoining the said officers to comtendance and aid Rodericke Powell, her Majesty's purueyer of ale and beer, for the due execution of his commission to make adequate provision of the said drinks for her Majesty's use during her intended "progress unto Yorke."—Also, in connection with this injunction, a list, dated 10 March 1584, of "the names of the brewers in Leicester, and what they can serve weaklye."—Also a paper of "instructions and articles to be delivered vpp to the mayors and others of her Majesty's officers of the townes of Leicester, Nottingham, and Northampton."—And also a letter of notification (dated 7 May 1585, and signed Gregory Lovell, cofferer, and James Woodford), to the mayor of Leicester, that casks may be released and provisions stayed, as her Majesty has relinquished her purpose of making a progress northwards.

(XII.) 16 October 1584.—Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Leicester and others. For a muster of horses and horsemen.

(XIII.) 24 October 1584.—Copy of a letter expressing regret that the writers cannot support Mr. Johnson's candidature to be one of the burgesses of Leicester in the next parliament. Signatures and address not given.—Also, copy of a letter (31 October 1584), addressed by Robert Herrick, mayor, and others, of Leicester, to Sir Ralph Sadler, Chancellor of Her Majesty's Duchy of Lancaster, regretting the writers' inability to refer to Sir Ralph their nomination of burgesses of parliament, as they have already made choice of their recorder and one of their townsmen; but expressing their readiness to do Sir Ralph's pleasure in respect to one seat, should the Recorder decline to serve.

(XIV.) 31 October 1584.—Copy of a letter from Robert Herrick, mayor of Leicester, to the Earl of Huntingdon, President of the Council of the North. Thanking the earl for his benevolence towards the preacher, schoolmaster, and poor of Leicester.

(XV.) 15 November 1584.—Letter from Sir Ralph Sadler, Chancellor of Duchy of Lancaster, to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Thanking the said mayor and aldermen for their permission that the writer may nominate one of their burgesses of parliament, and announcing his nomination of "Mr. Henry Skipwith, esquier, one of the gentlemen and esquiers to the Queen's Majesty."—Also, the reply (16 November 1584) of the mayor and aldermen declaring their satisfaction with the nomination of Mr. Skipwith.

(XVI.) 6 November 1584.—Precept of the High Sheriff of the county of Leicester to the mayor of the town of Leicester, for the election of two burgesses to serve in Parliament.

(XVII.) Draft of a petition from the mayor and burgesses of Leicester to Queen Elizabeth, for the relief of their decaying and impoverished borough, in accordance with terms of certain articles, attached to the prayer but not preserved. It is alleged in this petition that the inhabitants of the borough suffer greatly from the action of the inhabitants of neighboring towns and parishes, who "not beinge apprentices, nor privileged, nor free within the sayde boronghe doe repayre vnto the same, and there on market dayes and other tymes do vse and exercise their trades and occupations to the great hindrance of the artisans and men of trades inhabiting with the sayde burrough."—

(XVIII.) 15 October.—Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham, to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester; asking them to contribute to a fund for the establishment and maintenance of a free school in Kingstowpon-Thames (of which town the writer is the steward), in accordance with Her Majesty's motion and desire to that effect.—Also the circular letter (printed broadside) dated 4 August 1585, and signed John Cantuar, Charles Howard, to the same end.

(XIX.) 12 April 1586.—Copy of a petition addressed by undersigned mayor, aldermen, and others, of Leicester, to the Earl of Huntingdon, "President of her Majestie's counselle established in the North partes;" for the appointment of "the Godlye preacher Mr. Travers, a man, as we are credibly informed, of singular goodness and approved learning," to be preacher at Leicester in the place of Mr. Johnson, deceased, since the death of which learned and godly man the petitioners have "been destitute of the blessed benefytt of a resident preacher faithfully to divide unto us the bread of oure salvation."

(XX.) 23 June 1586.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. In behalf of one Brotherton, a young tailor, whom the writer seven years since caused to be apprenticed to one Higham, a London tailor dwelling without Temple Bar, and whom he has retained to serve him. The young tailor has been arrested on some matter at Leicester; and as he is the son of a gentleman of the ancient house of Heyhall in Lancashire, who has long been one of the writer's servants, the earl is reluctant to think ill of him, and would fain do him good.

(XXI.) 8 August 1586.—Letter dated at Okeham from Francis Harrington to Mr. Clarke, the Mayor of Leicester. Respecting John Wattes, arrested at Leicester on suspicion of divers felonies.—Also a letter (16 August 1586) from Sir James Harrington, to the same mayor, respecting the same John Wattes, a butcher, suspected of sheep-stealing in Rutland.

(XXII.) 19 September 1586.—Copy of letter from Lords of the Council (signed, T. Bromley, canceller, W. Burghley, Warwyck, C. Howarde, J. Hunsdon, Jamys Crofte) to William Turpin, esq., sheriff of co. Leicester. For the instruction of "Henry Skipwith and Frauncys Cave, esquiers, too and for the principals of the cities and borrow townes," as to the persons who should be returned at the approaching elections of burgesses for the parliament appointed to meet on 15 October next following.—Also, two brief letters (dated 4 October and 12 October 1586, from Bagworth Parke), from Roger Bromly to the mayor of Leicester, respecting the election of burgesses for Leicester.

(XXIII.)—Examination and deposition of Charles Dubigoun respecting Edward Sawford's speech about Merlin and his prophecies. No date.

(XXIV.) 21 October, 28 Elizabeth.—Examination and deposition, before James Ellys, mayor of Leicester and others, of Reynolde Fawsytt, touching the traitorous speech of Harry Butterfylde, servant of Ales Davye, widow of the same town and inn-holder, in commendation of Babington, whom the said Butterfylde called an honest gentleman.—Also, the testimony to the same effect of William Westoes of Leicester, woollen draper.

—Also, the examination and statements of Henry Butterfield of Leicester respecting his knowledge of Babington. "The said examynate being demanded how he knewe "one Babington, sayth he knewe hym for he was a "ghest at his mistris house, and cam thither iii. or iiij. " tymes a yeaere, goinge to and froe London, bnt he "was not there synce Easter."—Also, the deposition of one Robert Carre, chamberlain of the Angel Inn in Leicester, concerning his discovery "in the new "parlor agaynste the wall there a letter directed to "Henry Butterfeilde with these wordes to his frende "Henry Butterfeilde at the Angell in Leicester."

(XXV.) February 1585.—Orders of the Council (dated at Greenwich) to be put in excecucion by the justices of peace in the severall countyes of this realme for the restraint of eatinge and killinge of fleshe in the tyme of Lent and daies prohibited.—Also letter (dated at Greenwich, in February 1586) of Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace, co. Leicester, for the due observance of the same orders.—Also, a collection of Inn-holders' recognizances to comply with the orders for abstaining from flesh in Lent and on prohibited daies.

(XXVI.) 30 July, 29 Elizabeth.—Copy of the commission under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster to Francis Hastings, Edward Stanhope, esqs., surveyors of the said duchy beyond Trent, William Agard, esq., and others, to view certain tenements in the town and borough of Leicester, sometime belonging to the late dissolved colleges, hospitals, guilds, and chantries within the same town, with a view to their needful repair.—Also, the certificate (dated 3 October, 29 Elizabeth) of the same commissioners, as to the condition and requirements of the said houses.—Also, a paper of Reasons for moving the Queen to grant certain decayed houses of the Duchy of Lancaster to the burgesses of Leicester.

(XXVII.) 10 March 1589.—Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Reflecting warmly on the niggardliness of Leicester to its preacher, Mr. Thomas Sacheverill, a man of great honesty and parts, on whom Sir Francis bestowed the vice-mastership of Wiggston's hospital; and enjoining the mayor and aldermen to take measures for proper remuneration of Mr. Sacheverill, even as the previous preacher, one Pelsant, was remunerated.

(XXVIII.) October 1589.—Letter from Francis Hastings to the mayor of Leicester. Praying for the immediate prepayment to the writer of the hundred pounds that will be due to him from the town of Leicester "at or "about Hallowtide come twelfe month."

(XXIX.) 8 February, 32 Elizabeth.—The names of suche persons beinge straungers, as were this last night founde within this towne of Leyecester by the aldermen of euery ward.

(XXX.) 27 May, 32 Elizabeth.—Recognizance, in the amount of twenty pounds, of Henry Willoughbye of Lamley co. Nottingham, gentleman, to appear at the next assizes at Nottingham, or before Henry Talbot, esq., justice of the peace for co. Nottingham, whenever he may be called upon to do so before the next Nottingham assizes.

(XXXI.) 14 April 1590.—Orders by the Earl of Huntingdon for the settlement of disputes between Richard Archer of the one part, and the mayor and burgesses of Leicester of the other part, touching the said Archer's title to a lease of lands and houses, and remuneration for service to the said town and other matters.—Also, the petition of the said Richard Archer to the Earl of Huntingdon, respecting the same matters.—Also, a letter (25 June 1590) from the same earl to the mayor and others of Leicester, respecting their alleged denial to carry out the above orders, although they have consented to them.—Also the reply (dated 28 May, 33 Elizabeth, and signed, Ri. Parkyns) of the mayor, &c., to the said letter.

Second Volume of Hall Papers. Containing

(I.) 22 February 1591.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor, recorder, and aldermen of Leicester. About "a note of recetit of coles" for the benefit of Leicester, and about the relief of the poor of the same town. Dated from Nottingham.

(II.) 12 March 1591.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester. Recommending Mr. Humfrey Purifre for the office of recorder of Leicester in the place of Mr. Parkins, who is about to retire from that office.

(III.) 16 October 1591.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. For the better payment of the preacher of the town, who has not hitherto met with fit treatment in respect to his stipend.

(IV.) 20 March 1592.—Letter from Lords of the Council to Mr. Justice Beaumont, John Stamforde, mayor of Leicester, and to the Recorder of the same town. Enjoining them to call to account the trustees of the fee-farm of certain lands in Leicester, bestowed by Her Majesty on the corporation of the same town, to use the same for the support of "a preacher and a clothier," and for the maintenance of the town.

(V.) 2 June 1592.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. For the payment of 70*l.* of "the cole money" to one Thomas Elkington of Langar co. Nottingham; the same to be used "to the "benefit of the poor of Leicester by setting them a- "worke about clothing."

(VI.) 28 July 1592.—Requisition (addressed by Thomas Cates to the Mayor of Leicester) for three duly furnished foot-soldiers towards the contingent of fifty soldiers to be raised in Leicester co. for Her Majesty's service.

(VII.) 8 January 1592.—Letter from Sir T. Henegage to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester. Requesting them in consideration of and respect for the writer's office in the Duchy of Lancaster, to authorize him to choose two burgesses to represent them in parliament; the town to be free from all charge in respect to their representatives so chosen.

(VIII.) 22 January 1592.—Writ of Thomas Cave, esq., sheriff of co. Leicester, to the mayor of the town of Leicester. For the election of two burgesses to represent the said borough in the parliament to be holden at Westminster on the 19th of February next.

(IX.) 20 September 1593.—Order (addressed to John Stamforde, mayor of Leicester, by George Hastings, Edward Hastings, Henry Turville, and Humfrey Purefoy, from Bosworth) for the taking of due precautions that the plague, which has broken out in Leicester, may not extend to the country round about.—Also, warrant from the same magistrates to the head constable of the Hundred of East Groscoate, to levy money for the relief of the plague-stricken inhabitants of the town.

(X.) 6 October 1593.—Copy of a pass given, during the time of plague at Leicester, to Alice Styton, wife of John Styton, petty chapman, and collector of benevolences for a poor-house at Waltham Cross; authorizing the said Alice and her husband to pass about the country, as, though inhabitants of Leicester, they do not come from the pest-stricken parts thereof.—Together with several other papers or portions of papers relating to measures for checking the plague.

(XI.) 22 October 1595.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to Sir George Hastings, knt., and Tho. Cave, esq. For a proper allowance and consideration to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester in respect to the sum of 20*l.*, delivered by them to Sir George Villeurs to be used for forty soldiers sent from Leicester to the camp at Tilbury; if the said Sir George Villeurs cannot be induced to refund the money, which he has never spent for the soldiers.

(XII.) 27 August 1597.—Copy of a letter from the Lords of the Council to the Sheriff of Leicester co. for the election of knights and burgesses for the parliament to be holden in Westminster on the 24th of October next.

(XIII.) 9 February 1596.—Memorandum that, by the appointment of the Earl of Huntingdon, the mayor and burgesses of Leicester have lent to Thomas Moseley of Leicester the sum of ten pounds, wherewith "to sett and "keepe poore children in Leicester on worke in knitting "of Jersey stockings."

(XIV.) 7 November 1597.—A meeting of the mayor's brethren, touching a gift to be given to the Earle of Huntingdon, who with his lady doth come to Lester this night, and doth goe to lye at London, and to his household. Hit is agreed to geve vnto the said erle and his ladye vi. gallons of wyne, viz., iiiij. gallons of claret, and ii. gallons of sack, and a sugar lof of vi lb. or there aboutes.

(XV.) 27 August 1597.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff of co. Leicester. For the election of suitable knights and burgesses for the parliament appointed to meet on 24 October next. "Yet" say the writers, "in the choice of burgesses for burrough "townes wee doubt (except better regard be had herein "than comonly hath bene) therwille manie vnmeeet "men, and vnaquainted with the state of the burroughs "named therto."

(XVI.) 28 July.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and others. Recommending to them Thomas Cla. k.c. and Margaret his wife, as competent persons to receive a loan of money for setting the poor to work.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

(XVII.) 12 September 1598.—Letter (signed George Huntingdon) to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Touching the employment of the poor of the town.

(XVIII.) 8 October 1598.—Examination and deposition of Johanne Cradocke the wyfe of Roberte Cradocke of Leicester, cutler, respecting the words spoken by Mistris Clarke, the wife of Mr. Thomas Clarke, nowe mayor of Leicester, viz., "The queene hath no neede of my rent, "the queene should have a rope," in reply to the witness's assertion that she knew whether she should pay rent for her house to the said Mrs. Clarke or to Her Majesty.

(XIX.) 16 January 1598.—Deposition of Rychard Hiekes, prisoner in the gaol of Leicester, that he was instructed by his gaoler, Saunderson, and persuaded by him, "to wryte vnto Sir Edward Hastings, knight, concerning treason towching Mistris Meyvys and "Mr. Morton, and the cause whie Saunderson wuld this "examine to wryte to Sir Edward was because Sir "Edward and the said Mr. Morton were not friends."

(XX.) 16 January, 41 Elizabeth.—Recognition, in the amount of 40*l.*, of Henrie Syddowe, butcher, licensed to sell meat in Leicester during Lent to persons specially privileged to eat the same during the said season.—Also other recognizances of the same kind.

(XXI.) 3 February 1598.—Order of the court of the Duchy of Lancaster that William Beckett ("being an inhabitant within the towne of Leicester" and confessing that "he oweth sute vnto her Majesty's common "bakehouses in the town at Leicester") henceforth "bake his said bread at her Majesty's said common "ovens," and that he "henceforth forbear to bake any "spiced bread or cakes, but such only and so much as "the mayor and aldermen of the said towne of Leicester "for the time being shall give him licence to do."—Also a letter (dated 8 April 1599) from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester, requesting him to licence the same William Beckett and his wife to make, sell, and utter his "spiced cakes and bread whereat "the bakers have seemed to take exceptions"

(XXII.) 10 October, 41 Elizabeth.—Deposition of Christopher Becket of Leicester, shoemaker, touching the treasonable words spoken by Mistris Clarke, wife of Mr. Thomas Clarke of the Blue Boar in Leicester, to Mrs. Cradock.—Together with other depositions touching the same matter.

(XXIII.) 7 January 1599.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Respecting a prayer for the relief of the poor within the hospital called "the Spittle" near Leicester.

(XXIV.) 31 October 1599.—Letter from officers of the Duchy of Lancaster to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Setting forth the differences between the bakers of Leicester and William Beckett, weaver, of the same town, about the baking of spiced bread and cakes and other small things of the like nature; and begging that Beckett may be licensed "to bake stutche "things in his owne house as divers others in that "towne have done," instead of at the common bakehouse. The recent fall in the price of provisions being a reason, in the writers' opinion, why such licence may be accorded to William Beckett.

(XXV.) 11 February 1599.—Letter of requisition and warrant from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. For the selection, equipment, and despatch to London of six soldiers, the contingent to be furnished by the borough towards the hundred men ordered to be raised in Leicestershire for service in Ireland. Dated from Asheby Delazouch.

XXVI. (10 September 1600.)—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Entreating that the inhabitants of Loughborough may be allowed to use the market of Leicester as heretofore.

Third Volume of Hall Papers. Containing

(I.) 19 December 1600.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Requiring of the said town one carefully chosen and superior soldier towards a small force to be levied in the co. of Leicester for the Queen's service.

(II.) 16 April 1601.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Calling attention to "the injuries offered in your towne of Leicester to "Mrs. Catly, her Majesty's tenant of the shambles and "draperie there, by suffering drapers to sett vp staules "and standings in your faieres and marketts, whereby "her Majesty's house erected for the purpose (being vnfurnysshed) will soone be ruined." Dated from Donnington.

(III.) 14 June 1601.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching an outrage of unusual magnitude and gravity, recently done in Leicester, and requiring the mayor to make further inquiries about the same, as well as to "withholde the "custodie of those already commytted to goale" by the mayor. Dated from Donnington Parke.

(IV.) 13 July 1601.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Asking for information as to proceedings at the recent sessions "on the ryot latolio "committed in your towne," and requesting the usual contingent of trained soldiers to be sent to the muster at Asheby Delazouch, in order that they may be drilled before the writer. Dated from Donnington Parke.

(V.) 9 July 1601.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. For the apprehension and safe keeping of Richard Yates and one Raynescroft, stealers of her Majesty's deer.

(VI.) 12 July 1601.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the justices and treasurers for the collections for maimed soldiers co. Leicester. For their immediate consideration of the case of Thomas Yates, a poor mariner, claiming relief. Dated from Greenwich.

(VII.) 24 September, 43 Elizabeth.—Precept addressed by Roger Smythe, sheriff of co. Leicester, to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester, for the election of burgesses to represent the burgh in the parliament summoned to meet at Westminster on 27th October next coming.

(VIII.) 20 October 1601.—Letter from the Mayor and certain of burgesses of Leicester to the Earl of Huntingdon. "Right Honourable, &c., May it please your good "lordship to be certified that upon Tuesday morning "laste, being assembled for the choyce of burgesses, "Mr. George Belgrave presented himself amongst vs "in a blew coat with a bull head, affirming and protesting he was your lordship's servant, and that Sir "Henrie Harington verie late the night before had "obteyned that favour of your honour in his behalfe, "and much benomed his former vnderwiltful cariage "towards your lordship with a remorsive remembrance "of many most honourable favours received from your "lordship and your house towards his ancestors, him, "and his, and recommending his former sute to be "one of our burgesses. Being demanded whether he "had auye letter from your lordship, he answered that "this pointynge of his coat and cognizance he hoped "was a sufficient testimonie of your Lordship's favour "towards him, and of his submission towards your "honour, and farther that it was so late before Sir "Henrie could procure your lordship's said favour as "that you could not well write. For the truth of the "premises he offered his corporall oath. Whereupon "wee, thinking all this to be true, made choyce of him "with Mr. William Heyricke to be our burgesses. And "now this evening wee are credibly certified that your "lordship hath given him no suche entertainment. "And thus by his saide lowde and most dishonest dealinginge beinge muche abused, we thought it oure dewties "forthwith to signifye the same vnto your lordship, "humbly craving your lordships most honorable favor "for some reformation of this vile practize. And thus "with remembrance of oure dewties wee humbly take "our leaves. From Leicester the xxth of October 1601.

(IX.) 30 September 1601.—Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon, to the Mayor of Leicester. Expressing the writer's wish that Mr. Brouneley and Mr. Heyricke should be elected burgesses for the borough, and his desire that no countenance or support may be afforded by the town to Mr. Belgrave's candidature which is termed a "proud and saucy enterprise." Dated from Donnington Parke.

(X.) 15 October 1601.—Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. To the same effect as the next preceding epistle. Dated from Donnington Parke.

(XI.) 26 October 1601.—Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon, to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Denouncing Mr. Belgrave's trick and imposition as "the "treacherous dealinge of a shamefull bad person;" and urging that a certain Thomas Adcock, now a prisoner in the hands of the said mayor and his brethren, may be allowed bail, the writer having weighty charges to prefer against him. Dated from Donnington Parke.

(XII.) 31 October 1601.—Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Urging the mayor to retain Adcock in custody despite Mr. Sheffington's representations, and all threats of an action for illegal imprisonment.

(XIII.) 15 March 1601.—Letter from William Rowes, mayor of Leicester to the Earl of Huntingdon, Lord Lieutenant of co. Leicester. In behalf of the keeper of the gaol of Leicester against whom the earl is greatly incensed on account of the escape of Adecock from the said prison.

(XIV.) 30 May 1602.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Touching the necessities of the poor and maimed mariner, Thomas Yates, and the controversy between the borough and the county of Leicester as to their respective obligations to relieve him.

(XV.) 3 August, 1602.—Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon, Lord Lieutenant of co. Leicester, to the mayor and his brethren of the town of Leicester. A requisition for two foot-soldiers. Dated from Donington Park.

(XVI.) 8 November 1605.—Letter from Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For the vigilant observation and prompt arrest of all strangers travelling through the country who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves. The writer is "harterly sorry that those of Loughborough suffered a "troope of gallants to passe."

(XVII.) 7 November 1605.—Letter from Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, to the Mayor of Leicester. Illegible in places; and at the bottom of the sheet, a line or two removed by decay of paper.—"After my hartie commendacions I have received from Lord Harryngton a trow reporte of theise present attemptes, wishing you "according to your best discretion to take order as may be fitt.

"The trow coppie of his Lordship's letter with his other advertisementes I send you word for word.

"Right Honourable,—These traytors that are rysen say it is to mainteine the Catholike cause. The persouns of qualite be Roberte Winter, Roberte Aston, late traytor for coynynge, and his eldest son; two of the Littletons, Robert Catsbie, two of the Wryghtes in Lincolnshire, the Grauntes of Norbrooke and other of the Winters, and one Rockwood a Yorkshire man, and a knight whose name we cannot yet learne. The whole number 60th horses, whereof great horse 30th. They are naked, only daggers and gunnes: they flocke on softly and are gone to * * * and so towards Winters howse. This appeareth by examinacioun of some of their followers that are taken, and are in the Gaole. After them are come from Ashebie the Lady Catsbies howse two wayne load with trunks and furniture for horses, which are taken at Radford, and shall be brought to me to-morrow. The High Shreive and Sir John Ferrers are gone after them, and I remayne here to kepe a force in readinesse for defence of our towne to be in readinesse. We have sent to the counsaile to acquaint them with so much as then we did knowe. We guesse they will go towards Wales, where they hope far better then here.

"Received from Mr. Coombe of Warwicke the vith of November about nyn of the clocke at night.

"The reporte of Mr. James Digbie and Symon Digbie, gentlemen, that being present at a great meeting of huntinge at Dunkirke the vith of November 1605, Sir Euerard Digbie going to the rookshack vsed these wordes to the forsaide parties, 'There are great matters discoursed at London. I know there is an intencion to cut all the catholikes throates. For my own parte I will shifte for myself, and I hear the Lord of * * * berland is committed to the Tower * * * * George Prince of Dunchurch saith that he heard one speak out of a casement in the Toure and said, 'I doubt we are all betrayed.'—Mr. Roberte Catsbie, Sir Euerard Digbie, Mr. Ambrose Rockwood, 2 of the Littletons, Mr. Roberte Aston, Mr. Morginne, Mr. Wryghte, Mr. Wynter, Mr. Praisoun.

"My good lord, these much in haste I haue wrytten because I would not stay your messenger. As any other thing happens, I will advertise you of it; and thus craving pardon for this breefe and vnmannerly wryting, I take my leave. From Coventree, the 7th day of November 1605.

"Thus have you a trow notice of that I canne learn. The rest I refer vnto your best direccion according to the * * * you beare, and so in haste I bid you farewell. Ashebie, 7th of November 1605. Your very loving friend, H. Huntingdon."—Also, three notes touching the apprehension and examination at Leicester of James Johnson, servant of Mr. Robert Turrett of Kettlehye co. Lincoln, who was suspected of being privy to the Gunpowder Plot, because he was employed to carry a letter from one John Turpyn to Mr. John Wright of Lapworth.

(XVIII.) 20 January 1603.—Letter from Sir John Fortescu, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Begging them to chouse as their burgesse to represent them in parliament the writer's son-in-law, Sir John Poultney, "who will not "be chargeable vnto the town but beare his owne "expenses."

(XIX.) 8 December 1603.—Letter from Henry, Earl of Huntingdon, to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Urging them to elect Mr. Christopher Cheney to the office of recorder of the borough.

(XX.) Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon, to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching Sir John Fortescue's solicitation that his son-in-law, Sir John Poultney, may be elected to be recorder of Leicester.

(XXI.) 28 February 1603.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Circular letter requiring all vintners not especially licensed by Sir Walter Raleigh to cease from drawing and vending wines.

(XXII.) 18 April 1604.—Letter from Lord Haryngton to the Mayor of Leicester. Supporting Dr. Chippingdale's suit for a renewal of his lease of a certain holding in Leicester.

(XXIII.) 9 August, 1604. Letter from Sir John Crane to the Mayor of Leicester. Requiring the said mayor to provide a house with twelve beds, and other suitable accommodation for the "duke Charles the kinges "majistie's second son," who in company "with my "Lord of Fyvie, Lord President of the Sessions in "Skotland," intends to visit Leicester for one night.

(XXIV.) 6 June 1604.—Letter from Sir Julius Caesar to the mayor of Leicester. Supporting Mr. Chippindale's afore-mentioned suit for a renewal of his lease.

(XXV.) Letter from Thomas Ward to the Mayor of Leicester. Giving particulars of his interviews (in respect to the petition for a new charter for Leicester) with Sir Julius Caesar and Mr. Grymes.

(XXVI.) 22 July 1604.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Leicester. For the apprehension of one Hollis, who has committed a great robbery of plate and money, and is understood to have sold the plate to an innkeeper in Leicester.—Also the deposition of Ralphe Chetle, of Leicester, innkeeper, setting forth the circumstances under which he purchased certain articles of plate of Charrells Hollis.

(XXVII.) 20 September 1604.—Letter from George, Earl of Huntingdon, to the Mayor of Leicester. Begging that order may be taken for the correction of one Hedley and his wife, who persist in slandering one of the writer's tenants.

(XXVIII.) 29 November 1604. Letter from the Viscount Cranbourne to the mayor and his brethren of the town of Leicester. Requesting them to renew Mr. Dr. Chippingdale's lease of Newark Grange, co. Leicester.

(XXIX.) 20 November 1604.—Letter under the signet and sign-manual of James the First to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Expressing his royal wish that they may see fit to renew Mr. Chippingdale's lease of Newark Grange on the ground that Mr. Chippingdale has distinguished himself by the diligence and painful travel with which he discharges the duties of a justice of the peace.

(XXX.) 4 February 1605.—Deposition of Adam Bonus, of Litchfield, touching the murder of Mrs. Clarke. —Other depositions or memoranda touching this strange murder (perpetrated on 3 February 1605) to be found under the following dates—4, 6, 17, 20 February: 1, 13, 15, 22, 25 March 1605; 25 March 1606.—Also documents relating to the estate and will of the murdered woman's former husband, Thomas Clarke, registered on pp. 88, 89 of the Leicester "Lockt Book;" and an entry in the chamberlain's accounts for the year 1607-8 respecting the settlement of Mrs. Clarke's estate.—Papers touching her alleged treasonable speeches in 1598 have been noticed.

Fourth Volume of the Hall Papers.

(I.) 20 December 1606.—Letter from the Earl of Dorset and Sir John Fortescue to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester. Appointing a day for the hearing of the case between the corporation and John Okes touching the tolls of Leicester, which has been referred to the writer.

(II.) 10 June 1607.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Respecting the disorderly removal of "the gibbitt which the writer "commanded to be sett vp in Leicester," and which, to the earl's surprise and also to his contemptuous disbelief of the statement, is said to have been pulled down by "children."

(III.) 4 October 1607.—Letter from certain undersigned inhabitants of Lutterworth to the Mayor of Leicester. For a stricter observance of laws and orders for staying the ravages of the plague now raging at Leicester.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

(IV.) 23 March 1607.—Letter from the Earl of Dorset to the mayor and burgesses of the town of Leicester. Announcing his decision in favour of John Okes in respect to his right to take toll and stallage of the markets and fairs of Leicester, and enjoining the said mayor and burgesses henceforth to aid the John Okes in collecting those dues.

(V.) 10 September 1608.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. For a muster and general view of the men of Leicester co., untrained as well as trained.

(VI.) 28 September 1608.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Agreeing to the proposal of the corporation to pay the writer 30*l.* for his services in procuring the new charter for the borough. —Also two other notes (dated 5 and 7 October) from the same writer to the same correspondents on local matters of small moment.

(VII.) 11 August.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester. Protesting in warm and insolently overbearing terms against the action of the corporation in some matter not clearly set forth in the letter. The mayor and burgesses are required to say immediately "whether they will perform that which 'Mr. Serjeant Nicholles under his hand and others 'under their hands have covenanted for them.'"

(VIII.) 1609.—A memorandum of the manner how the mayor of Leicester went to the castle of Leicester to take his oath, the Mondae after Martlemas Daie, according to their oath in that behalfe, viz.:—

First, the maior and the two companies meete that morninge before nyne of the clock at their towne hall, and from thence goe towards the castle to take the said oath, attended with their town clark, macebearer, and four serjeants-at-mace in manner following, vidz., the town clark bearing their charter, with the macebearer next befor the maior, and before the said 4 serjeants with their lesser maces, all carryenge vpp their maces vntill they come to the castle gate, where the said 4 serjeants hold downe their maces, and come behinde both the companies. And the said towne clark and macebearer proesede, goinge before the mayor as aforesaid into the castle to the place where the steward of the honor of Leicester or his deputy shalbe to give the saide oath vnto the maior, according to the said charter. And after the oath soe taken they all retorne in like manner. And this bearing of the mace before the maior into the castle is not done out of auye intent to clayme or challenge anye jurisdiction or libertie within the castle or anye of the liberties thereof, But onely to declare and manvfest that he cometh to take that oath, as the mayor of the borough of Leicester.

(IX.) 2 October, 7 James I.—Minute of proceedings at a hall meeting to levy money and take order for the relief of the "vized people," i.e., people stricken with the plague, of Leicester.—Also other memoranda and minutes touching the same visitation.

(X.) 12 December 1609.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Accompanying certain papers to be amended, and touching the agreement that the earl and his heirs male of his body should appoint at every second turn to the office of steward and gaoler.

(XI.) 3 May 1610.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester. For the election of Mr. Henry Rich to be a Burgess of Leicester in the place of Sir William Skipwith, deceased, of whose death the writer speaks regretfully.

(XII.) 26 July 1610.—Certificate of character and ability for Mr. Potle, M.B., who visits Leicester to minister to the people stricken with the plague there, and brings with him the prescriptions of a council of the most learned physicians of Oxford. Dated from Oxford. Signed, Leon Hutton, deputat vicecan, Oxon, and John Spenser, President of Corpus Christi Colledge.

(XIII.) 23 July 1610.—Letter from John Browne, rector of Loughborough, to the mayor of Leicester. Touching the plague at Leicester and the order for staying intercourse between that town and Loughborough.

(XIV.) 24 August 1610.—Letter from Henry Shipward to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching the plague at Leicester, and requiring all intercommunication to cease for a time between the said borough and the writer's town of Melton Mowbray.

Fifth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 10 November, 1610.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the maior and alderman of Leicester. Respecting the prevalence of the plague at Leicester and the needful measures for staying it.

(II.) 17 April 1611.—Warrant (signed W. Hastings, J. Chippingdale), to the constables of several towns of Leicestershire, to levy a rate for the relief of the people stricken by plague in the borough of Leicester, where the pestilence has been raging "for one whole yeare last past."

(III.) 23 May 1611.—Two leaves of the rough draft of a bill of petition addressed to Sir Thomas Parry, knt., Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, to which reference is made to "Thomas Shakespeare, of Lutterworthe, 'gentleman,'" as holding certain writings.—Also an undated letter, signed by the same Thomas Shakespeare and others of Lutterworthe, touching the sickness and death in their fields of John Yorke of Leicester, who came together with two or three women to Lutterworthe last Saturday with the pestilence in him.

(IV.) Certificate respecting the archbishop of Macedonia who has received the Earl of Nottingham's licence to beg under the circumstances there set forth: "Whereas 'that grave man, the bearer hereof, Joseph, &c., beinge 'seated in the auncient citie of Phillippos, nowe called 'Seris as Arche Biesshoppe for the wholl kingdome and 'province of Macedonia, was by reason of the persecution of the Turkes and Jewes who verie eagerly prosecuted him for the payement of an auncient tribute 'of thirtie thousand crownes, for which he was pledge 'for Mathias, late patriarche of Constantinople as by 'sundrye certificates by him shewed to the kinge's 'majestie appereth, and is nowe lycensed by Charles, 'Earle of Nottingham, Lord Highe Admirall of Englaunde, to travell through the kinge's domynions to 'aske the charitable devotion of all Christians to 'deeme him selfe from the Turkish slaverye, as by the 'same lycense more att lardge appereth. Nottingham.' Signature not in the Earl of Nottingham's writing.

(V.) 17 June 1612.—Copy of a letter from the Mayor of Leicester. Certifying that the said town is free from contagious sickness, and that the King may visit it safely during his progress.

(VI.)—July 1612.—Itinerary of the kinge's majestie's progress from Theobalds to St. Albans, Ashby, Bever, Newsted, Nottingham, Leicester, Woodstock, and other places. At the foot of the paper the Earl of Suffolk's signature—T. Sufolke.

(VII.) 9 August 1612.—Letter from Olyuer Saynt John to the Mayor of Leicester. Respecting Edward Duffield, a cheat and cosiner, now in custody at Leicester for misdemeanour towards an alderman of that town.

Sixth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 15 December and 18 January 1615.—Two letters from Gerard Malynes to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching the utterance and circulation of the king's "white 'farthing tokens." Dated from "the office in London 'in Bishopsgate, neare to the sign of the Black Bull."

(II.) 27 May, 14 James I.—Depositions of Anne Noone and Thomas Noone of Leicester, respecting words spoken by one John Owen to the grave discredit of Rowland Corbitt of Mantou in the co. of Rutland, gentleman, of whom the said John Owen is alleged to have remarked, "I pray God that he was not a consentor to the prince's 'death."

(III.) 10 June 1616.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. For the detention of the same John Owen in prison till further order can be taken towards Mr. Corbet, of whom the writer hears a good report.

(IV.)—1610.—List of fees due to his Majestie's officers in his Highnesse's progresse to Leicester, and appointed for the corporation to paie; amounting in all to £18 13 8.

(V.) List of days on which the aldermen of Leicester are appointed to wear scarlet.

(VI.) 31 May 1617.—Letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Mayor of Leicester. In behalf of a reclaimed and destitute recusant, Frances Stanley, widow, who is recommended for a place in either of the hospitals at Leicester.

(VII.) 9 February, 15 James.—Copy of a letter (circular) under the king's sign-manual and signet to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For the aid of the mayor and citizens of Lincoln in the work of rendering navigable the Foss Dyke betwixt the Trent and that city.

(VIII.) 2 May 1618.—Letter from the Governors of the Virginia Company to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Soliciting the said mayor and aldermen to countenance and encourage a lottery about to be opened in Leicester for the furtherance of the endeavour of the said company to plant and thoroughly settle Virginia. —Also, 12 June 1618, an account of the drawings at the same lottery.

(IX.) 19 June 1620.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Directing them to call a meeting of all the gentlemen of the said town, and other inhabitants thereof, reported to be worth forty pounds or more, at the Common Hall on Friday 4 July, at 8 o'clock, a.m.; in order that measures may be taken to raise free and voluntary contributions for the protection of his Majesty's son-in-law and her highness the Lady Elizabeth against their enemies.

(X.) Divers papers relating to charges of sorcery and satanic misbehaviour preferred against Gilbert Smyth of Swythland, minister, by Christopher Monck and Elizabeth his wife; including the complaint (dated 26 July 1620) of the said Gilbert Smyth, respecting the slanderous persecution of his said defamers.

Seventh Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 10 December 1620.—Precept of Sir Alexander Cave, knt., high sheriff of co. Leicester, to the mayor of Leicester, for the election of burgesses to represent the said burgh in the next Parliament.

(II.) 3 September 1620.—Warrant, addressed to the mayors, bailiffs, &c., co. Oxon, for the arrest of a young man (whose name is no longer legible on the writ) "with verie little haire on his face, in blacke and stuffe breeches, and freese jerkin, with long skerte, and a blacke hatt and blue stockins, who hath felonyonslie taken awaye from Robt. Piggott, seruaunt to Sir Arthurr Chichester, his Majestie's treasurer of Ireland, a packet of letters directed to the kinge's Majestie, and others of his Majestie's Privie Councell, together with a cloake, bagge, and many other thinges of the said Roberte Piggottes."

(III.) 31 December 1622.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For the suppression of needless ale-houses, so that there may be no prodigal consumption of barley, which in the present time of scarcity is the bread-corn of the poorer folk.

(IV.) 8 July 1625.—Letter (signed J. Hastings) to the mayor of Leicester. Touching a petition from "Plimouth," which casts undeserved aspersions on Lord Hastings, the writer's brother, and on the said mayor.

(V.) 31 August 1625.—Letter from John bishop of Lincoln to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For the stricter collection of subsidies, especially from the commonalty whose contributions to such burdens bear no proper proportion to those of the clergy and the nobility.

Eighth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 7 January 1625.—Precept of Sir Thomas Harroppe, knt., sheriff of co. Leicester, to the mayor, sheriff and burgesses of the burgh of Leicester. For the election of burgesses to represent the said town in parliament.

(II.) 30 November 1627.—Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For the arrest of soldiers deserting from their colours.

(III.) 15 December 1627.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and magistrates of Leicester. Enjoining the said mayor and justices of the peace to aid Sir Miles Fleetwood, knt., in the work of disafforesting the forest of Leicester; and to take especial care for the prompt suppression of riots.

(IV.) 6 February 1625.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Announcing that by order of the Privy Council that no victualler of the town of Leicester is to charge more than sixpence for a meal served to a soldier during the approaching musters.

(V.) Draft of a petition from the mayor and burgesses of the borough of Leicester to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham. Against the proposal to disafforest the forest of Leicester, a project that threatens the said borough with impoverishment if not with utter overthrow.

(VI.) 31 March 1629.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners of Subsidies in the borough of Leicester. For the more careful and efficient collection of such subsidies. Dated from Whitehall.

Ninth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 13 November 1630.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, of the borough of Leicester. Rejecting in the haughtiest terms a proposal made to the writer in the name of the said corporation by Messrs. Fawsitt, Coates, and Abney; and directing the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses to reconsider the matter under discussion.

(II.) 31 January 1630.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and his brethren of the burgh of Leicester. For the prompt execution of the requirements of a commission, the terms of which will shortly be made known to them.

(III.) 30 July 1632.—Letter from Lord Keeper Coventry to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester. Touching their claim to present to the vicarage of the parish of St. Mary, in the said town.

(IV.) 30 April 1632.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. For the appointment in Leicester of "honest and fitt persons to vent and sell tobacco," so that the tobacco trade may cease to be a cause of disorder, inconveniences and abuses. Dated from Whitehall.

(V.) 1 August 1633.—Letter from Lords of the Council to the mayor and his brethren of the burgh of Leicester. For the stricter regulation of the retail trade in tobacco in the said burrough. Dated from Whitehall.

(VI.) 18 July 1634.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor, and his brethren, and other inhabitants of Leicester and its neighbourhood. For the speedy and sufficient repair of streets, bridges, and highways against the coming of the king and queen, who intend to arrive at Leicester on the ninth of August in their summer progress, and to rest there two nights.—Also an itinerary of the same royal progress.—Also, minutes of meetings of the mayor and his brethren for the despatch of business relating to the entertainment of their highnesses.

(VII.) 19 June 1634.—Letter of the Recorder of Leicester to the Mayor of the same burrough. Touching arrangements for the assizes; the writer have been requested to certify the Common Hall whether "the cyrcuyt would end before the kinge's cominge to Leicester."

(VIII.) 16 July 1634.—Memorandum of resolutions in the Common Hall for presenting the king and queen with "two bonles of pure golde of the value of exlxi, or thereabouts of equal value as neere as may be with the kinge's and queene's maiesties pictures on them;" and for other matters relating to the royal visit.

Tenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 12 August 1635.—Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff of co. Leicester. Accompanying and explaining a writ for levying ship-money.

(II.) Rough draft of letter, begging that Mr. Secretary Cooke may be informed that 200*l.* of ship-money has been levied in Leicester: the writer remarking "this somme of 200*l.* be a heaive burden from this poore corporation, yet the same is ready."

(III.) 2 October 1637.—Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff of co. Leicester. Respecting ship-money.

(IV.) 9 November 1638.—Copy of another letter of the same nature and purpose from the Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff of Leicester.

(V.) 20 January 1639.—Letter from the Countess of Devonshire to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester. Recommending Mr. Thomas Coke, son of Mr. Secretary Coke, for the office of burress of parliament for the borough.

(VI.) 20 January 1639.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of Leicester. Touching the election of burgesses to represent the borough in the next parliament, and begging that the nomination may be deferred till the writer can come into the country.

(VII.) 8 February 1639.—Letter from the same to the same. Supporting the candidature of Mr. Every, the writer's acquaintance and neighbour, who aspires to represent Leicester in the next parliament.

(VIII.) 30 August 1640.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and aldermen of the borough of Leicester. Stating the route to be taken by soldiers "imprest out of the western partes of this kingdome for this northern expedition," after leaving Leicester.

Eleventh Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 3 September, 16 Charles I.—Copy of the commission of array, addressed to Henry Earl of Huntingdon and Ferdinando Lord Hastings, for cos. Leicester and Rutland, issued on the entrance made by certain rebels of Scotland into the kingdom of England.

(II.) 28 September 1640.—Letter from Lord Hastings to the mayor and his brethren of the borough of Leicester. Requiring their aid for the due execution of the writer's commission of array.

(III.) 17 November 1640.—Letter from the Countess of Devonshire to the mayor and his brethren of the borough of Leicester Expressing the writer's satisfaction at the election of Mr. Coke to be one of the burgesses of parliament for the said borough. Dated from Leicester Abbey.—Also a letter of earlier date (30 October, 1640) from the same writer to the same persons, on the same subject.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

(IV.) 18 February ——. Memorandum, signed C. Deuonshire, whereby Christian, Countess of Deuonshire terminated certain controversies between her and the corporation of the borough Leicester, touching her jurisdiction within the manor of the Bishop's Fee near Leicester, by assenting to the claims and pretensions of the corporation.

(V.) 5 May 1642.—Warrant addressed by Henry, Earl of Stamford, Lord Lieutenant of co. Leicester, to the Mayor of the borough of Leicester. For a muster of the trained soldiers of the borough.

(VI.) 5 August 1642.—Copy of a precept, addressed under the King's sign-manual to mayors, sheriffs, &c. requiring them to help the bearer of the writ to convey arms, powder, shot, and other ammunition to such places in Warwickshire as he may state.

(VII.) 18 August 1642.—Memorandum of proceedings at a Common Hall held in anticipation of the immediate coming to the town of Leicester of the king and the prince; it being "agreed that 50*li.* in gold shalbe presented to the Prince by Mr. Maior in the behalf of the Corporacion at his Majestie's coming to the towne this present daye."

(VIII.) 21 August 1642.—Memorandum of proceedings at a Common Hall, it being "agreed that a letter shalbe sent vnto his Majestie to certifie his Highnesse that the Magazin of the towne is soe small that yt doeth not amount to soe much as his Majestie requireth, thereby humbly desiringe that that store of powder, match, and shott which the towne hath may be kept here for the defence of his Royall person."

(IX.) 20 September 1642.—Memorandum of proceedings at a meeting of the mayor and aldermen of Leicester, for raising 500*li.* to be lent on loan to his Majesty, vpon a letter sent by Prince Rupert to the said corporation.

(X.) 6 September 1642.—Letter from Prince Rupert to the Mayor of Leicester. For an immediate loan from "the city of Leicester" of 2,000*li.* to the king, who is "now somewhat necessitated by the vast expence he hath bene this long time enforced too, for the safeguard of his Royall person against the rebellious insurrections of the true malignant party (whose are now too well knowne, and their irreligious intentions too plainly discovered by all his loving and obedient subjects)." The Prince's requisition for so large a sum as two thousand pounds is strengthened by this Postscript. "If any disaffected persons with you shall refuse themselves, or perswade you to neglect this command, I shall to-morrow appeare before your towne in such a posture with horse, foot, and cannon, as shall make you knowe 'tis more safe to obey than resist his Majestie's commands." Dated from Quineborough.

(XI.) 8 September, 1642.—Holograph letter from Charles the First to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester.

Charles R. Trusty and welbelovied Wee greete you well. Wee haue seene a warrant vnder our nephew Rupert's hand, dated y^e 6th of this month, requiring from you and other your inhabitants of o^r towne of Leicester y^e loane of 2,000*li.*, which, as Wee doe utterly disavowe and dislike, as being written without our privy and consent. Soe Wee doe hereby absolutely free and discharge you & that our Towne from yielding; any obedience to y^e same, and by our own lres to o^r said nephew Wee have written to him presently to revoke y^e same, as being an Act very displeasing to Vs; Wee indeede gave him direccions to disarme such persons there as appeared to be disaffected to o^r person and government, or y^e peace of this o^r kingdom, and should haue taken it well from any of o^r subjects that would voluntarily assist vs with y^e loane of armes or money. But it is soe farre from our hart or intencion by menaces to compell any to it, as Wee abhorre y^e thought of it, & of this truth our Accions shall beare testimony. Given at o^r Court att * * Nottingham.

(XII.) 9 September 1642.—Holograph receipt by Prince Rupert. Receyved by me Prince Rupert, Prince Palatine of the Rhine, and Generall of all his Majesty's Cavallerye in this present expedition, the full summe of five hundred pouds for his Majestie's use, of the mayor, bayliffes, and burgesses of the borough of Leicester to be repayed agayne by his Majestie. I saye receyved Five hundred pounds.—Rupert.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

(XIII.) 17 December 1644.—Letter (circular) addressed to the committee in the town of Leicester, for the assessment of relief to the British army in Ireland, by "Gray of Wark, Speaker of the House of Peers, and" "Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons."—Accompanying printed copies of an ordinance of the Parliament.

(XIV.) 1 June 1645.—Warrant under the sign-manual of Charles the First, addressed to the mayor, aldermen, and corporation of Leicester. For the immediate levy of 2,000*li.* from the inhabitants of the said town for the king's service. Dated from the Court at Leicester.

(XV.)—Copy of the petition of the mayor and aldermen of Leicester on the behalfe of the poor inhabitants therein and the places adjacent within the fortifications thereof: To the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament. For the reliefe of the many poor people, whose habitations were pulled down, or whose interests were otherwise injured grievously, in order that the works for defending Leicester might be carried. No date.—Also, divers petitions from poor inhabitants of Leicester to the mayor and aldermen for compensation of injuries sustained by them for the military defence of Leicester.

(XVI.) 4 February 1646.—Letter from General Fairfax to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester borough. Sirs, vpon the takinge of this towne of Leicester from the enemy diuers horses were seized vpon belonging to the inhabitants, and amongst the rest one was taken from Thomas Rogers, which being branded with the State's marke, before he could procure the same to bee restored, The Commissioners, that were appointed for the redelivery of horses not apprized to the State, gave the said Rogers another horse (in lieu of his owne) whiche he accordingly sould. I desire that you and the rest of the magistrates of the towne whom it maye concerne will take care that the said Rogers maye not be troubled for that horse, which was disposed of by the said Commissioners unto him. I remayn your assured friend, T. Fairfax.

Twelfth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 28 August 1649.—Passport signed by General Sir T. Fairfax for six soldiers, late under the command of Colonel Hammond, who are returning to their appointed stations in the Bosshupprick of Durham, after being cured of their wounds in St. Thomas's Hospital.

(II.) 6 June 1649.—Copy of order of the Parliament respecting Maces. Ordered by the Commons assembled in Parliament that the Mace made by Thomas Maunday of London, goldsmith, bee deliviered into the charge of the Sergeant at Armes, attending the Parliament, and that the said Mace be carried before the speaker, and that all other great Maces to bee used in this Common Wealth bee made according to the same forme and patterne, and that the said Thomas Maundy haue the making thereof and none other.—Henry Scobell, Clerc. Parl.

(III.) 29 July 1650.—Letter from the above mentioned Thomas Maundy to John Turvill. Announcing that the writer has made a good mace for the borough of Leicester; and giving particulars as to its weight, price, &c. &c.

Thirteenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 30 May 1653.—To the Mayor of Leicester.—Honoured Sir, I having received an order from his Excellencie the Lord Generall Cromwell to publish a Proclamation with sound of trumpet or beat of drumme in the townes of Leicester, Mountsorrell, Loughborough, and Derby, concerning the death of John Tavior, late a servant to Richard Bakewell, carrier of Derby, my humble desire therefore is that you will be pleased to afford my deputy, the bearer hereof, the assistance of your officers for the publication thereof as aforesaid, and that you will be pleased likewise to grant my said deputy a certificate under your hand to signify to the Court Marshall of the Army sitting at Whitehall, in London, that it hath been proclaimed in the towne of Leicester, and in so doing you will very much oblige. Your very affectionate friend and servant. Dated from Whitehall.—Roger Allsopp, Marshall General.

(II.) Defaced and barely legible portion of a petition from the well affected inhabitants of Leicester to the Parliament of England. Respecting injuries sustained by inhabitants of the borough during the siege. Date lost.

(III.) Petition of Bartholomew Moor, foot-postman between Leicester and London, to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For pardon in "despect to certain failures in duty, and for the restoration of his salary." The petitioner describes himself as having for five years "performed the hard and toylsome service of" foot-post from Leicester to London, and from thence to Leicester againe, every weeke, being more then "was ever yet done by any other man in England." (IV.) 1 June. 1654.—Copy of the writ (countersigned Lenthall) of the Lord Protector to the High Sheriff of the county of Leicester. For the elections of knights and burgesses of parliament.

Fourteenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) Draft of the humble petition of the poorer sort of the commonalty in the counties—to the Parliament of England. For the relief of agricultural distresses and the promotion of tillage. No date.

(II.) 25 September 1656.—Letter from the President of the Council to the Mayor of Leicester. Accompanying printed copies of the proclamation by the Lord Protector and the Parliament for a general fast.

(III.) 23 September 1656.—Letter from William Stanley in London to the Mayor of Leicester. Giving the latest news of the parliament, where divers good measures are being enacted by the two hundred members to "the good likeinge of my Lord Protector."

(IV.) 10 September 1657.—Letter from the President of the Council to the Mayor of Leicester. Accompanying copies of the order of his highness and the council for a general fast and humiliation.—Also, similar letters, with orders for General Fasting, dated from Whitehall, 21 October 1656; 3 February 1656; 18 December, 1658.

(V.) Copy of the humble petition of divers inhabitants of the county of Leicester, to the Rt. Hon. the Parliament. Touching the manifold evils and great oppressions of the writers' and other neighbourhoods. No date.

(VI.) 28 September 1658.—Copy of the Lord Protector's Order (printed broadside) for a day of public fasting and humiliation.—Also, similar broadside dated 16 December, 1658.

(VII.) Copy of the humble address of the mayor, recorder, aldermen, gentry, and commonalty of the borough of Leicester to his Highness Richard, the Lord Protector.

(VIII.) Paper of general considerations concerning the Aulnegers's Office in Leicester.—Also, paper of exceptions taken to the deputation of Francys Rosse and others for being deputy aulnegers in Leicester. No date.

(IX.) 22 June 1658.—Letter from William Maior and Richard Ludlam to the mayor. Setting forth the particulars of the writers' conduct in declining to assist Abraham Wood and Francis Rosse, who declare themselves to deputy aulnegers of the Lord Fleetwood.—Also an accompanying letter for Sir Arthur Hesilrige and the Lord Fleetwood, exhibiting the truth of the same matter which is likely to be misrepresented.

(X.) 23 July 1659.—Letter from the Council of State to the Mayor of Leicester. Accompanying the Act for householders to give an account of lodgers, horses, arms, and ammunition.

(XI.) 11 October 1659.—Letter from the Council of State to the Mayor of Leicester. Accompanying the printed copies of the Declaration of Parliament for a day of Thanksgiving.—Also a printed copy of the Declaration.

(XII.) 10 January 1659.—Requisition, addressed to the Mayor of Leicester, for horses to carry sick soldiers.—Sir, Wee haneing many men sicke and lame, I desire you wolde be pleased to provide sixe horses with pannels or saddelles to carry them vnto our next quarters, because we are unwilling to lene them beside vs; and we desire that you wolde be plesed to acquainte your cunstable that our souldyers are to pay ther quarters; that soe he may let the inhabitants know; and if ther be any complaint, I shall take care to see it satisfied. Dated this 10th of January 1659.—Nicholas Andrewes.

(XIII.) -- Rough draft of an unsigned and undated letter, addressed to "Major Ringo or the Commander-in-Chief of Colonel Morley's Regiment." Representing that the people of Leicester have been so heavily taxed for the entertainment of soldiers as to be no longer able to afford any further service of the kind without extreme inconvenience and utter impoverishment. No date.

(XIV.) 19 January 1659.—Rough draft of a letter from the mayor of Leicester to some unnamed military officer of high command. Calling the said officer's attention to a charge of theft preferred against two of his soldiers, and begging him to direct his subordinate officers to punish the delinquents.—It is probable that the officer so addressed was General Monk.

(XV.) 18 January 1659.—Rough draft of a letter (unsigned, but obviously prepared for the signature of the Mayor of Leicester), addressed to his Excellency General Moncke. Right Honble. Hauinge lately received intelligence that your Excellency is now vpon your march with your army this way, I haue (by thadvise of my brethren) taken vpon mee the boldnesse to acquaint you with the present condicion of the Inhabitants of this place, which, notwithstanding their constant affection to the Parliament and Commonwealth, hane of late suffered and still doe suffer very much by free quarter, whereby all sorte of provision both for horse and man are exhausted, and wee of this place made incapable to accomodate an army soe greate and of so high a morrit as that which now marcheth vnder your Excellency's command. Sir, this I conceave myselfe, both in duty to your Excellency, and faithfulness to the trust reposed in mee, obliged to acquaint you with and to haue the same to your grane consideration, assuring you that there is no place in the nation both more respect for your Excellency and the army than this burrough. I remayne, Sir, your Excellency's most humble servant.

(XVI.) 19 January 1659.—Letter from General Monck to the Mayor of Leicester. Sir,—I received yours of the 18th inst., and as to the marching of the parliament's forces under my command they will march two or three roades, and soe I shall not quarter many vpon you, and those that I quarter shall bee noe burthen to you, being they shall pay for what they haue. I thank you for your kind expressions, and I doubt nott butt the forces will carry themselves soe as you shall haue noe ground to complaine in the least, which is all at present from Your very loving frend and servant, George Monck.

(XVII.) 23 January 1659.—Certificate that the Mayor of Leicester provided the "Irish Brigade" with a half a barrel of powder, when they met and attended the Lord General Moncke.

(XVIII.) 24 January 1659.—Certificate (signed Wm. Shelley, Lieutenant) that eighty of Lt.-Colonel Bonnell's company have been quartered at Leicester for seven days at four pence per diem each.

(XIX.) 25 January 1659.—Certificate (signed T. Tomline) that sixty soldiers of Colonel John Clerk's company have been quartered in Leicester for nine days at the rate of four pence a day for each soldier; payment not having been made for their entertainment to the inhabitants of Leicester "by reason y^e souldiers wante there pay."

(XX.) 25 January 1659.—Similar certificate touching the entertainment in Leicester for nine days of seventy soldiers of Colonel Benjamin Woodward's company; satisfaction not having been given in that respect to the inhabitants of the borough "by reason y^e souldiers "wanted there pay."

(XXI.)—Rough draft (undated) of a letter from the mayor and aldermen of Leicester to Sir Arthur Hesilrige; in which the writers disclaim all participation in "a certaine" paper purporting a petition or address which was presented on 30 January last past by George Faunt, esq., "sheriff of the county of Leicester, and others to "General Moncke at St. Alban's;" the truth being that, though invited to join with the gentlemen of the county in that address, the said mayor and aldermen refused to do so.

(XXII.) 22 March 1659.—Letter from the Council of State to the Mayor of Leicester. Accompanying copies of the printed order of Parliament for a day of public fasting and humiliation.

(XXIII.) 3 May 1660.—Letter from John Armston in London to the mayor of Leicester. Giving the latest news touching the conduct of the parliament and the arrangements for Charles the Second's restoration.

(XXIV.) 8 May 1660.—Letter from the Mayor of Leicester to Thomas Armston, esq., at the Grasshopper in Cheapside, near Soap Lane. Acknowledging "the goodness" sent from London to the writer and his brethren by the said Mr. Armston, who is entreated to exert himself in behalf of an Act of Parliament for setting Wigston's Hospital in Leicester.

(XXV.) 10 May 1660.—Letter from John Gray, esq., M.P. for Leicester, to the Mayor of Leicester, respecting the proclamation of King Charles the Second, dated from London.—Also copy (printed broadside) of the same proclamation by the parliament, dated Tuesday, 8 May 1660.

(XXVI.) 12 May 1660.—Memorandum of the proceedings of the mayor and aldermen of Leicester for the King's proclamation in the said borough.

(XXVII.) 14 May 1660.—Letter from the mayor of Leicester to John Grey, esq., M.P. for Leicester. Announcing how the king has been proclaimed in Leicester.

(XXVIII.) 17 May 1660.—Letter from John Graye, esq., M.P. for the borough of Leicester to the mayor of the same borough. Expressing satisfaction at the enthusiasm with which his Majesty was proclaimed at Leicester, and referring to the preparations in town for the king's return.

CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.CORPORATION OF
LEICESTER.

(XXIX.) 18 June, 1660.—Another letter from the same writer to the same correspondent. Containing political news.

(XXX.) 21 June 1660.—Another letter from the same writer to the same correspondent. Accompanying "six proclamations to be read in every church of the "borough" of Leicester.

(XXXI.) 5 July 1660.—Letter (circular) from General Monk to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. For the due administration of the oaths of supremacy and allegiance to the soldiers of his Majesty's army.

(XXXII.) 10 August 1660.—Warrant (signed Robert Hildyard, and dated from Blaby) to the constables of the borough of Leicester. To provide quarters in Leicester for five companies of Lord Bellases regiment of foot.

Fifteenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.)—Letter from the mayor and aldermen of Leicester to the Rt. Hon. Henry Lord Loughborough at his lodgings near the King's Gate, in Holborn. Expressing gratitude for his lordship's patronage of the writers' poor borough, "in not only graceing our messengers "with your presence to the kinge's most excellent Ma- "jestie, but alsoe in procuring his Majestie's gracious "acceptance of that small present."

(II.)—Letter from Henry Lord Loughborough to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing that the writer has appointed Mr. Walter Rading to administer an oath to the said mayor, and declaring in singularly courteous terms the writer's wish to be of service to the borough of Leicester. The oath being the mayor's oath to respect the privileges and "preheminences" of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the said borough.

(III.) 23 November 1660.—John Turvill's bill of £43 3s. 0d. for making four silver maces, and for making the great mace a-new, and adorning it with the globe and cross and the king's arms.

(IV.) 17 January 1660.—Letter from Henry Lord Loughborough to the Mayor of Leicester. Recognizing the zeal which the said mayor and his brethren have displayed in joining "with the noblemen and gentre of "the county to prevent or suppress the rysings of some "mised people who, being not sensible of their present "happyness under the government of soe good and "gracious a king, seeke the disturbance of that blessed "peace God has in his great mercy granted this "nation."

(V.) 24 January 1660.—Letter from the Mayor of Leicester to Henry Lord Loughborough. Touching the measures zealously taken by the writer and his brethren to suppress sedition and fanaticism. "There hath," says the writer, "heretofore bene many meetings of "the Phanatiques here in this towne (that come from "severall townes in this county) at some houses of "their party. Some of the cheife of them wee secured "vpon the first rumour of the late troubles, but since "his Majestie's late proclamation concerning them wee "cannot find they have had any meetings here although "wee have made strickt search for them." The writer adds, "Wee have some fewe here in prison for refusing "the oath of allegiance, but they are very inconsider- "able persons."

(VI.) 24 January 1660.—Letter from Henry Lord Loughborough to the Mayor of Leicester. Acknowledg- the mayor's letter of the 21st inst. in flattering terms, and supporting the petition of Mr. Davys, of Mount Sorrell, to be allowed "to keep the Saturday market."

(VII.) 25 February 1660.—Letter from Henry Lord Loughborough to the Mayor of Leicester. Requesting that the writer may nominate one of the burgesses to represent the said borough in the parliament about to be called.

(VIII.)—Letter from the Mayor of Leicester to Henry Lord Loughborough. Expressing the writer's wish to do his lordship's pleasure in the matter of the election, but at the same intimating that his lordship would do well to nominate no perfect stranger to the borough.

(IX.) Letter (signed F. Seymour) to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Recommending Henry Nevill, of Holt, esquire, as a fit person to represent the said borough in parliament.

(X.) 20 December 1661.—Holograph letter from the Duke of Albemarle to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester. Commending to their regard one Matthew Fisher, formerly a soldier in Sir John Claverie's regiment, who designs to keep a victuall-house in Leicester. "I desire you," says the writer, "in regard hee "was faithfull to mee to permit him to live amongst "you."

(XI.) 25 February 1662.—Letter from Henry Lord Loughborough to the mayor and his brethren of Leicester. Requiring them to make the best possible provision for soldiers, belonging to the said borough, maimed and disabled in the service of the late king of blessed memory.

(XII.) 17 October 1663.—Requisition (signed, Henry Nevill, George Fawat, Richard Orton) addressed to the mayor of the borough of Leicester, for forty soldiers of the borough to appear to their colours under Sir George Villiers, bart., at the Black Lyon, in the Bishop's Fee.

(XIII.) 6 April 1665.—Writ under the king's signi- manual, confirming the election of John Huckle, gentle- man, to be common clerk of the borough of Leicester.

(XIV.) 7 July, 1665.—Memorandum of the appoint- ment, with wages of eight pence a-day each, of Christo- pher Morrice, John Tirlington, John Loseby, and Robert Silvie to be watchmen in the neighbourhood of Leicester to prevent persons (travelling out of London, where the plague is raging) from entering Leicester until the mayor and aldermen of the last-named borough have "approved" of them.—Also memorandum of an order (dated 28 July 1665) of the Common Hall that "the carriers of this "towne goe noe more to London; and that, if they doe, "they provide themselves of lodgings and places to "ayre their goods distaunt from the towne for such "time as they shall be required."

(XV.) 17 August 1665.—Paper of precise and care- fully drawn orders of the Common Hall of Leicester, for guarding the said borough from the misfortune of being infected with the plague by travellers coming from London.

Sixteenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 16 March 1665.—Three several engagements of William Warborton, Edward Billers, and William Orton to pay to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester, a fine set on each of them by the said mayor and alder- men at the order of the king in council: Warborton and Billers to pay 100 marks each, and William Orton twenty marks.—Also a certificate dated 27 March 1666, showing that the said fines were levied for refusal to serve in the common council of Leicester.—Also petitions by the said Warborton, Billers, and Orton, together with other papers relating to their said refusal.

(II.) Several testimonials to the scholarship and other merits of Mr. Nathaniell Bull, M.A., late second master of St. Paul's School in London, who is a candi- date for the mastership of the Leicester Grammar School, one of the said testimonials being signed by the Bishop of Rochester and "Richard Busby, master of "Westminster School."

(III.) 23 October 1667.—Letter from the Earl of Ailesbury, High Steward of the Castle and Honour of Leicester, to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing the writer's appointment of Mr. Walter Rudings to admi- nister the customary oath to the mayor at the castle.— Also the certificate, dated 18 November 1667, of the due administration of the oath.

(IV.) 28 September 1668.—Copy of circular- letter from Lords of the Council, addressed to the High Sheriff of Leicester. Ordering that no person, on any grounds or consideration whatever, be allowed to take any office whatever in any corporation without first taking the oaths prescribed by the law.

(V.) 16 June 1670.—Letter from the Earl of Rut- land to the mayor, aldermen, and councilmen of the borough of Leicester. Recommending the writer's son-in-law, Lord Amesley, for a burges to represent the said borough in parliament.

Seventeenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 20 May, 1671.—Letter from the Treasury to the Commissioners for Subsidies in Leicestershire. Con- senting to a proposal for the appointment of certain persons as assistant commissioners, to whom a commis- sion will forthwith be addressed. Dated from the Treasury Chambers in Whitehall, and signed—Ashley and T. Duncombe.

(II.) 15 September 1671.—Acknowledgment of a loan of the famous Leicester Codex Leicesterensis lent to Richard Duckworth, of Brasen Nose College, Oxford.— Received then by the hands of Robert Consins, accord- ing to the order of Mr. Maior and his brethren in counsell, a large Greek Testament, being an ancient manuscript belonging to the Library of Leicester, which I am to restore with all possible safety, without four months after ye date hereof, and I doe hereby oblige my selfe to doe soe, upon any forfeiture which they may assign. I saye received as above by mee, Ric. Duckworth.—Mem. It wants all ye Gospell by St. Mathew, and part of St. Mark at ye beginning, and part of ye Revelation at ye end. . . .

This receipt is dated at the begiuning and also at the end; the second time with a date just one hundred years wrong, viz., Sept. 1571.

(II.) 6 October 1672.—Memorandum of John Bunyan's exhibition to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester of his licence to preach as "a congregational parson."—John Bunnyon's licence beares date the ninth day of May, 1672, to teach as a congregational p'son being of that p'swasion in the house of Josias Roughed in the towne of Bedford, or in any other place, room, or house licensed by his Matie. Memorad, the said Bunnyon showed his licence to Mr. Mayor; Mr. Avering, Mr. Freeman, and Mr. Browne, being then p'sent the vith day of October 1672, being Sunday.

(IV.) 28 December 1671.—Letter from the Treasury (signed Ashley, Duncombe) to the commissioners for subsidies in Leicestershire.

(V.) 31 January 1671.—Curious memorandum of John Dillingham's donation for the establishment of a riding and fencing school in Leicester:—John Dillingham about the last of January 7½ gives to the mayor and aldermen of Leicester one hundred eighty five pounds per annum (upon which is 500*l.* mortgage) which is to be taken of; and the remainder to be disposed of for erecting an academy in Leicester, for the teaching young gentlemen to ryde the Great Horse, fence, vault, and other exercises, and none to be admitted there but noble persons sommes or heires to 500*l.* per annum.

This is to be completed in tenn yeares; if not, then the Earle of Rutland, the Earle of Stamford, the Earle Ailesbury, the Earle of Lindsey, the Lord Viscount Camdin, Lord Mountague of Boughton, Lord Roose, and Lord Sherrard are to see it don in one yeare only; and in case thay faile, then Mr. William Perpoint of Nottingham to see it don in one yeare after, or else the estate to return to the heirs of the said John Dillingham.

(VI.) 17 September 1672.—Letters of safeguard and protection (signed, Arlington) for William Allcoate, who is employed on his Majesty's service, and has undertaken to give the Government important information respecting a design on the part of many substantial persons to break the king's peace.

(VII.) 8 March 1672.—Letters from Sir John Pretymann and Sir William Hartopp in London to the Mayor of Leicester. Respecting the king's speech of that date to the House of Commons. Together with a brief report, in Sir W. Hartopp's hand writing, of the address.—Also letters (dated 25 January, 13 Feb., 17 Feb. 1673) from the same writers, giving political news—of no moment to inquirers at the present time.

Eighteenth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) Letters of political intelligence from Sir William Hartopp in London to the Mayor of Leicester, dated 12 November 1675, 21 February, 2 March, 3 March, 6 March, 1676.

(II.) Similar newsletters from Sir John Graye to the Mayor of Leicester. Dated from London 6 March, 24 March, 27 March, 7, 12 April, 24 December, 1677.

(III.) 20 November 1679.—Letter from Mr. Nathan Wright of London to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing that Sir Robert Harding, the recorder of Leicester, died "this morning at his chamber in Gray's Inn;" and expressing the writer's desire to succeed Sir Robert in the said office of recorder.

(IV.) 1 May 1680.—Letter from the same Mr. (afterwards Sir) Nathan Wright to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching business of the borough.

(V.) 24 March 1679.—Copy of a letter from the Lords of the Council to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester. For the strict enforcement of the law requiring oaths and declarations from holders of offices of trust.

Nineteenth Volume of Hall Papers of the Borough of Leicester for the years 1680 to 1685.

(I.) Toll Books of Leicester Fair for the years 1680 and 1681.

(II.) Warrants of diverse dates (signed, Rutland) for masters of trained men.

(III.) 30 January 1682.—Counsel's opinion (signed, J. Holt), as to the legality of certain acts done by constables under authority of the Statute against Convenciles.

(IV.) 19 February 1683.—Writ under the king's sign, manual. Approving and confirming the election of John Major of Gray's Inn, esq., to be Steward of the Court of Record of the borough of Leicester.

(V.) 4 October 1684.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing that the king will return from Newmarket to London on the 11th inst., when the said mayor should be in town "with your surrender of the old charter."

(VI.) 2 October 1684.—Another letter from the same earl to the same mayor. Announcing the king's satisfaction with the resolution of the corporation of Leicester that in surrendering their charter they were performing a voluntary act.

(VII.) 4 November 1684.—Letter from Sir Nathan Wright to the Mayor of Leicester. Beginning, "On Sunday morning last I delivered the surrender to his Majesty, which was gratically received, and alsoe tho "Petition for a new Charter."

(VIII.) 2 December 1684.—Letter from the same writer to the same mayor. Respecting the new charter for the borough of Leicester, and beginning, "Mr. Mayor, Wee have now settled all things in the New Charter, and in it is a general confirmation of all former liberties and powers, and none of the antient privileges are in the least impaired by it."

(IX.) 13 December 1684.—Letter from William Browne to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching the new charter for the borough, and beginning, "These are "only to acquaint you that at last I have gott the "Charter sealed."

(X.) 3 February 1684.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing the sudden seizure and serious illness of the king; but reporting on the authority of the physicians that the danger is past and the royal patient on a fair way for recovery. It is recommended that all malicious spreaders of false news about the king's state should be forth put in prison. Dated from London.

(XI.) Letter to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing the king's death, and begging the mayor to keep all things quiet. Signed, H. Beaumont. No date.

(XII.) 19 February 1684.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing the King's gratification with the address from the corporation of Leicester; and also conveying his Majesty's thanks to the mayor for his exertions to preserve peace and order in his borough, where one Norris has been speaking words of a dangerous nature.

(XIII.) 4 February, 1685.—Letter from the Earl of Rutland to the Mayor of Leicester. Giving intelligence of Charles the Second's illness, and enjoining the mayor to take care within his corporation to prevent disorders.—Also, other brief and unimportant notes from various writers touching the king's illness and death. Dated from Belvoir.

(XIV.) 7 March 1684.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. In behalf of Mr. Babington, who is a candidate to represent the borough of Leicester in parliament. Dated from Gerard Street.

(XV.) 4 and 5 March 1685.—Letters from the Earl of Rutland to the Mayor of Leicester. In behalf of Sir Henry Beaumont and Mr. Babington, candidates to represent the borough of Leicester in parliament.

(XVI.) 2 May 1685.—Letter from the Earl of Huntingdon to the Mayor of Leicester. Touching the case of Norris, awaiting his trial in Leicester gaol for speaking seditious words; and also touching the writer's personal interest in the honor and borough of Leicester.

(XVII.) 23 October 1685.—Letter from Sir Henry Beaumont, M.P., to the Mayor of Leicester. Announcing the election of Sir John Trevor to be Speaker of the House of Commons. "This day," the writer continues, "the rabble were very disorderly upon the Pilloring of Oates. They are apprehending them. There is likewise some taken in Scotland who give intelligence that the rebels are with 3 ships upon that coast. The king was pleased to tell us that he donots trust the intercepting them; having sent his men of war after them. All this Town, which is more populous now than ever, are transported with joy at the good correspondence between the King and Parliament." Dated from the writer's lodgings at the "3 Sugar-loaves, King's Street, Westminster."

Twentieth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) The petition of John Ogden to the mayor, aldermen, and common council of the borough of Leicester, sheweth, "That this last winter your petitioner was by "Mr. Major ordered to looke after the gaurd of the Town "Hall, and to see their coales weighed out nightly, to "fetch candles and straw for prisoners to lye in, and

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

CORPORATION OF LEICESTER.

"imployed to summon teames for their Majesties carriages, and to carry out warrants for providing horses to carry soldiers, which took v^p most of your petitioner's time, and much hindered your petitioner in getting something toward the maintenance of your petitioner's family:—Your Petitioner therefore humbly beseecheth your Worshipps to consider his low condition, and graunt your petitioner for his paines and trouble and allowance as to your worshippes shall seem meete, &c., &c."

Twenty-first Volume of Hall Papers.

Containing a considerable proportion of papers not pertaining to the years given on the cover of the folio. The papers belonging to those years are of no historical value, but of the papers written before the dates so described may be noticed:—

(I.) 18 June 1603.—Letter from Thomas Conway, Gentleman Usher to the Mayor of the borough of Leicester. Notifying that her Majesty holds to her purpose of coming to Leicester on Thursday next, the certificate "touching the cleernes of that town" being satisfactory to Lord Shrewsbury. "Wherefore," says the writer, "I am to put you in minde that you endeavour to provide all things concerning lodgings for her Majestie's trayne within your towne."

(II.) 15 June 1603.—Letter from Gilbert Shrewsbury to the Mayor of Leicester. For further and more precise information touching the sanitary condition of Leicester, it having been bruited abroad that the mayor's late neighbour, Mr. Rowes, "died of some infectious disease." In a postscript the writer adds, "The Queene with the Prynce will be here at Worksop vpon Fryday next, and intendeth to stay here vntill Munday (but she is not yet resolved of her journeyes from hence, but I here that this nyght or tomorrow she will resolve therof) and then will send them away befor hir." Dated from Worksop.

(III.) 24 June, 1 James I.—Memorandum of proceedings at a meeting headed, "Sonday the xixth daye of June, &c. A meetinge in the afternoone of Mr. Mayor and the aldermen about provizion and orderinge of the Towne ageynt the comyng of the Queene's Majestie and the yonge Prince, who are expected to be at Leicester vpon Thursday next, in their journey, goyng to the court to the Kinge's Majestie."

(IV.) 18 June 1603.—Letter from William Skipwith to the Mayor of Leicester:—My Mayor, The Queene wilbe at your towne vpon Thursdaye. Shee means to lye at my house. My Lord of Shrewsbury desyers you to take order that Sir Henry Beaumont's house in Newark maye be made redde for him and his companye, and that you will laye in some drynke for him there. Mrs. Roe (I thinke) hath the keyes. I praye you speake to her, that the lodgings may be dressed and furnished as well as may be; for it is Sir Henry Beaumont's pleasure that every thing there shoulde be at my Lordes commandement. Good Mr. Mayor, be carefull that this may be performed, for my lord doth trust to you and your brotheren herein. And thus with my hartie commendaciouns, in haste I take my leaue.—P.S. You must also take order there may be some manchet baked for him. Dated from Worksop.

Twenty-fourth Volume of Hall Papers.

(I.) 3 November 1690.—Precept addressed by the Earl of Rutland to the Mayor Leicester. Requiring the said mayor to issue his warrant to two fit and proper persons to levy a rate in the borough towards the support of the militia of the county.—Also, similar precept dated 6 October 1691.

(II.) 6 November 1690.—Warrant addressed by the same Lord Lieutenant to the Mayor of Leicester. For a muster of the trained men of the borough.

Also a Packet of Hall Papers pertaining to the years 1612, 1613, and 1614, not bound in the volume covering those years. Including:

(I.) 15 December 1612.—Certificate, signed by the mayor and certain of the aldermen of Leicester, that Joane Croftes, widow, of Leicester, and sister to one Homphrey Corbett, late of Steake Newington, co. Middlesex, gentleman, is still living at Leicester.

(II.) 11 November 1612.—Copy of the certificate (for terminating the controversies between the Leicester bakers and Thomas Wright, baker, of the same town), signed by the mayor of Leicester and certain of his brotheren, and addressed to Sir Augustine Nicolls, Kut., sergeant-at-law, that both the said town bakers and also the said Thomas Wright should be allowed "to bake sixpenny householdes loves keeping true" assise beidge (as it is) for the better reliefe and easo

"of the poorer sort of people both of the town and country."

(III.) 27 June 1614.—Itinerary of the king's progress from Theobalds to Royston, Aishbie, Burley, Nottingham, Leicester, Helmslye, Woodstocke, &c., signed,—T. Suffolke.

(IV.) 8 August 1614.—Copy of a writ addressed to the Mayor, bailiff, and constables of the borough of Leicester, for the appointment of fit persons "to rate, cesse, and taxe the prices of all kind of corne, graine, victuals, and other things for the expenses" of the king's late progress.

(V.) 20 June 1614.—Warrant (signed T. Suffolke), addressed to Rice Roberts and Jeffrey Keene, ushers of his majesty's chamber. For taking views and order for the king's progress.

27 June 1614.—Copy of the certificate, signed by the mayor of Leicester, and addressed to Thomas Earl of Suffolke, that the said borough is free from contagious sickness, and may be safely visited by the king.

17 August 1614.—Memorandum touching the king's progress. Thursdaie the xviii daye of Auguste 1614, our most gracious sou'aigne lorde the king cam in his progress this night to Leicester to the Earle of Huntingdon, his honor's house; and there laie.—Mr. Maior and his bretherene and the xlviii attended the kinge att the said Earle's howse and there receyed his highnes, where Mr. Jo Wyncall made a speech in Laten vnto his Majistie att the said Courte gates, where the king sett in his coche harde the same very pleasinglie, and his highnes did verie muche comende the same speeche, and gave Mr. Wyncall his hand to kisse, and from the courte gates Mr. Maior carried the mace before the kinge vpe into the presence chamber.

In conclusion, whilst thanking the mayor and aldermen of Leicester for the facilities they afforded for the perfect inspection of their records, I may congratulate them on the excellence of their arrangements for the future preservation of the writings in the new Town Hall to which the MSS. have been recently removed.

JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

CORRESPONDENCE AND MSS. OF CHARLES O'CONOR OF BELANAGARE, CO. ROSCOMMON.—THE O'CONOR DON, D.L., CLONALIS, CO. ROSCOMMON.

C. O'CONOR, Esq.

Of the men of letters resident in Ireland in the last century, the one whose career combined the largest amount of interest in relation to historical and political literature was Charles O'Conor, of Belanagare, in the county of Roscommon. Under great obstacles, he initiated and promoted movements for the establishment of religious toleration and equality in Great Britain and Ireland. Through the labours of himself and his grandson, Charles O'Conor, D.D., the world of learning was made acquainted with the ancient linguistic monuments of Ireland, and enabled to appreciate their importance as materials for elucidating the early history of portions of Western Europe. Hitherto there has not been published any authentic account of either of these remarkable men of letters; hence those who have referred to them, or to their works, have frequently fallen into the error of confounding the productions of Charles O'Conor, of Belanagare, with those of his grandson and namesake, the erudite editor of "Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Veteres," and "Bibliotheca Manuscripta Stewensii."

The family of which Charles O'Conor, of Belanagare, was the head, had been in early times chief rulers in Connacht; and with one of its members,—Roderic O'Conor,—the line terminated of the native Irish monarchs, in the twelfth century. After the Anglo-Norman settlement, the O'Conors, with varying success, maintained a semi-regal sway in the western province. In the district styled "the country of O'Conor Don," now Roscommon, they erected the large castle of Ballintober, with other strong fortresses, and founded and endowed various religious establishments.

In the reign of Elizabeth, Hugh O'Conor Don, chief of his clan, entered into a compact with her representative, by which he covenanted to surrender his right of levying local exactions in consideration of receiving from the Crown of England a patent, securing to him and his heirs all the lands and castles which he held by inheritance. He attended the Parliament convened at Dublin by the Viceroy, Sir John Perrot, received knighthood, and subsequently fought for Elizabeth in her wars against Hugh O'Neill and the Ulster chiefs. An original patent, under the great seal of James I., granting the castle and lands of Ballintober, with other possessions in Roscommon, to Sir Hugh O'Connor Don in 1618, is extant in the present collection.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

Sir Hugh O'Connor Don, on his death in 1632, left four sons, Calvagh, Hugh, Charles, and Brian, the first of whom succeeded him at Ballintober. Hugh O'Connor was elected to represent Roscommon in the Assembly of the Irish Confederation, established in 1642.*

Charles, the third son of Sir Hugh, inherited from his father the castle and lands of Belanagare, in the county of Roscommon. He was nominated to the Parliament of James I., at Dublin, and died in 1634, leaving two sons, Owen and Charles. On the Cromwellian confiscation, Owen O'Connor served in Flanders as an officer to the Duke of Gloucester, and after the Restoration he succeeded in regaining a portion of the O'Connor lands. Adhering to the cause of James II., he was appointed Governor of Athlone, and, at his own expense, raised three troops of soldiery. In command of them he was dispatched to England to oppose the Prince of Orange, but having been taken prisoner, he died in durance at Chester Castle, in 1690.

As Owen O'Connor left no male issue, his property should have devolved to his brother Charles; but an attempt was made to absorb it by law in the general land forfeitures which the Williamite government decreed against the Irish adherents of James II. Charles O'Connor, on his death, left a child, named Donchad or Denis, whose legal rights were taken charge of by Terence MacDonagh, an eminent Jacobite lawyer, who had represented Sligo in the Parliament of James II., and whose brother, Major Owen MacDonagh, had served abroad with Major Owen O'Connor.

Through the exertions of Terence MacDonagh, a portion of the estate in Roscommon was secured for Denis O'Connor, who married that lawyer's niece, daughter of Captain Tiarnan O'Rourke, a distinguished Jacobite officer, killed at the battle of Luzzara in 1702.

The subject of the present notice, Charles O'Connor, son of Denis O'Connor, was born in an obscure cottage at Kilmastrany, in the county of Sligo, on the 1st of January 1710. The Penal Laws at that time, and long after, deprived Irish Roman Catholics of education at home, and prohibited them from going abroad to receive instruction. The first rudiments of knowledge were taught to O'Connor, mainly in Latin and Irish, by refugee clergymen. Subsequently, his chief instructor was his maternal uncle, Thaddeus Francis O'Rourke, Roman Catholic bishop of Killala, who had been chaplain and private secretary to Eugene of Savoy. That Prince, when taking leave of O'Rourke, on his appointment to the Irish bishopric in 1701, presented him with a gold cross and ring set in diamonds, introduced him to the Emperor Leopold, who recommended him warmly to Queen Anne, in private letters, and gave him a commendatory passport, with his autograph, under the great seal of the Empire. O'Rourke was thus enabled to obtain audience of, and letters from, the Queen to some of the more important personages in Ireland. On his arrival in his diocese, however, he was watched as a Jacobite spy. Hence he found it necessary to assume another name, to hide in bogs, and finally to secrete himself among his relatives in the house of Belanagare, from which he dated his letters to his clergy, "ex loco nostri refugii,"—"from our place of refuge." Bishop O'Rourke subsequently, to avoid arrest, retired for a time from Belanagare, and eventually died of a complication of disorders contracted by sleeping sometimes in the open air and sometimes in miserable hovels among bogs and morasses.

Another of the early vernacular instructors of Charles O'Connor was Torlogh O'Carolan, the Irish poet and musician. From him O'Connor acquired proficiency in harp-music, and became familiar with the bardic legendary literature then preserved orally in the Irish language. He was however debarred from all public educational advantages, being, as a Catholic, excluded by the "Popery laws" from the University, Trinity College, Dublin, from the professions, as well as from every office in the state, and even from the exercise of the ordinary rights of citizenship in his native country.

By marriage, O'Connor acquired a considerable fortune, which, in these times, could not be legally secured to a Roman Catholic, under the Penal Laws. He appears in his early years to have turned his attention to the study of historical documents in the Irish language. Bishop O'Rourke had brought back to Ireland from the Continent an original autograph volume of the "Annals" compiled in the seventeenth century by the "Four Masters," and presented to him by Colonel O'Gara, the descendant of Fergal O'Gara, under whose patronage the work had been originally undertaken. O'Connor's friend, Counsellor Terence MacDonagh, had also preserved some of the manuscripts of the learned Irish compiler, Roderic O'Flaherty, author of the "Ogygia," in Latin, printed in 1685, whom he had assisted and encouraged in his labours.

The first literary undertaking projected by Charles O'Connor appears to have been a work styled "Ogygian Tales," founded on old Irish chronicles and historical poems. He arranged that any emoluments derivable from this publication should go to relieve the distresses of his neighbour, Robert Digby, of Roscommon, in whom much interest was taken by O'Connor's friend, the Rev. Thomas Contarine, a benevolent Protestant clergyman of the diocese of Elphin. The project was, however, ultimately abandoned, in consequence of misunderstandings between Digby and his relative, Henry Brooke, author of "Gustavus Vasa," "The Earl of Essex," and other tragedies and poems. Brooke, having been entrusted with the manuscript of the "Ogygian Tales," to negotiate with publishers in Dublin, issued proposals to bring out the entire as his own under the title of "A History of Ireland;" steps were however taken which prevented his attempt to appropriate the work of O'Connor.

Contarine was the uncle and early benefactor of Oliver Goldsmith, who was said to have described him as "the Preacher" in the "Deserted Village":

"Remote from towns he ran his godly race
Nor e'er had chang'd, nor wish'd to change his place;
Unskilful he to fawn, or seek for power,
By doctrines fashion'd to the varying hour;
Far other aims his heart had learn'd to prize,
More skill'd to raise the wretched than to rise.
His house was known to all the vagrant train,
He hid their wand'rings, but relieved their pain."

O'Connor's grandson mentioned that Major MacDermot, of Emla, in the county of Roscommon, was the "broken" or disbanded soldier of the same poem:

"The broken soldier, kindly bade to stay,
Sat by his fire, and talk'd the night away,
Wept o'er his wounds or tales of sorrow done,
Shoulder'd his crutch, and show'd how fields were won."

Charles O'Connor's first published productions, so far as can now be ascertained, appeared in 1749. They were small pieces entitled "A Counter Appeal to the People of Ireland," and a letter signed "Rusticus," in reply to the "Farmer's Letters," by Henry Brooke. The "Counter Appeal," issued without any printer's name, and dated from Londonderry, September 30th, 1749, was a defence of the Dublin patriot, Charles Lucas, against a pseudonymous attack upon him by Sir Richard Cox, in a pamphlet styled "An Appeal to the People of Ireland." O'Connor's tract contained the following passages:—

"In any country, where liberty is not thoroughly extinguished, where the faintest ray of virtue and freedom remains, heats and heart-burnings will naturally become the consequences of a long suspension of natural rights. Slaves indeed will bear anything; they will certainly crouch to any indignity, any insult, any scourge of government: Renouncing reason, and the uses of reason, they become as docile as any other beasts of burthen.—Forgetful of the past, passive for the present, unthoughtful of the future; they live and dye like their brethren of the field, without repining, without concern, without a thought, hardly, of any object about them, or beyond them.—It is far otherwise with rational beings, who have their hopes and fears, their reason, and judgments, alarming or disarming them; people who know the uses and feel the abuses of Government; who can bear greatly and worthily, until they can bear no longer; they sooner or later will throw up banks against the torrent of political violence; they will prescribe just bounds to boundless authority, or be crushed (as it oft happens) beneath the weight of it.—We are arrived at a 'period of time,' countrymen, the most critical, the most important, and 'the most interesting that hath happened since the 'glorious Revolution.' We thank God, and your own virtues, you have shown a spirit adequate to the importance of it, a spirit little expected; an active, an honest, and rational spirit, worthy of men and freemen, has diffused itself through the whole nation; what carries about it all the characteristics of honour and virtue, without riot or tumult; arising from no contention for places or employments, from no suspected, or suspectable principles, from no corruption in the people, no selfish ends in their leaders, and consequently no way problematical, no way liable to objections which are often

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

* Notices of the chiefs of this family between 1641 and 1652 will be found in "A Contemporary History of Affairs in Ireland, 1641-1652," London: B. Quaritch, 1875-80.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

justly made in the case of popular demagogues, who may impose and generally have, in all ages, infused their own ambition for patriotism, and gullied these nations out of those rights they were brought in to restore.—Who then, countrymen, has raised this spirit among you? who revived you from that lethargy in which you appeared so long and so deadly absorbed? Who called forth your latent virtue?—a private freeman, a citizen of Dublin, countrymen: an ornament to his country and to human nature; one who, though confined to a low station, argues your cause (the cause of mankind), with those in the highest: intimidated by no power, molested by no abuse, disarmed by no ingratitude, he at this minute stands foremost against all the combined powers of authority, of calumny and rage.—Unaided by what the world calls learning, he has informed your mute body-politic: By a precision which nature only can bestow, and a great heart-vent, he taught what sort of language you are to speak, while he imposed a sullen silence on those who by their stations and talents were deemed to have equally had great powers, till debarred by fears, and those honest reasonings upon them, which no human oratory can withstand. This extraordinary man, so little regarded at first, became in the course of time, the object of all men's attention; of the friends as well as enemies, of liberty. The stern menaces of the latter, roused the former; the best men, and finest pens in the kingdom flew to his, and your assistance: finally the whole nation fell in with the free citizens of Dublin; and at this day, countrymen, the eyes of three kingdoms are upon you, after many struggles for liberty in a neighbouring kingdom, they cannot, without shame and envy, see her standard erected in this."

The author characterised Cox as "an abandoned scribbler, shedding poison against his country," "a crazy wretch," promulgating slavish doctrines "that all the wealth of Ireland belonged to England," "that England was justified in taking all the honey and leaving nothing but the wax to the industrious Irish." He further denounced Cox as "a Siberian," "a scurrilous slave," who declared that the present race in Ireland "had all the liberty that they wanted."

O'Connor's application to Irish history studies was indicated by a portion of this production, giving what he styled a short sketch, addressed to his readers, of the early history of their country. He assured them that, for nearly five centuries after the reception of Christianity, "Ireland made such a figure in Europe as no other nation before or since could boast. It became the throne of liberty, the emporium of literature, and the sanctuary of Christianity." "These accounts," he added, "I have extracted with some pains from ancient and modern authors of great authority; and what I advanced concerning our ancient constitution I have taken chiefly from Cuan O'Lochan, who administered the affairs of Ireland upon the death of Malachy II. (the last monarch of the Colmanian race) in the year 1022.—The fragments we have left of that author are very worthy the perusal of the publick."

O'Connor's father, Denis, died in 1750 at an advanced age. Some years previously he had contemplated emigration with his children, under the conviction that, through the enforcement of the Penal Laws, all vestiges of the old Irish families would before long be obliterated. His grandson tells us that, at this period, some writers attributed the poverty of Ireland "to anything but the very simple source it arose from—the terrible Acts of Parliament which made the properties, the tenements, and the improvements by Roman Catholics 'discovered,' 'able,' and made them the property of the 'discoverer,' if a Protestant. Could it," he added, "be expected that Roman Catholics would be guilty of the crime and the folly of improving, under circumstances which made improvement criminal under Act of Parliament; and they were numerically debarred from those branches of trade and industry that could render them comfortable and happy."

In 1751, O'Connor published "Seasonable Thoughts relating to our Civil and Ecclesiastical Constitution." In this he laboured to demonstrate that principles leading to the subversion of civil liberty and the constitution were unjustly ascribed to the Irish Roman Catholics. "All mankind," he wrote "love liberty, and prefer it to every other human good—if any such can exist where liberty does not." He advocated an Act to qualify Roman Catholics to purchase and improve Irish waste lands, of which several hundred thousand acres were then utterly useless to the proprietors. On this subject he observes:—

"Most of our Popish hands at present are chiefly employed in wasting and impoverishing the lands they

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

