THE Records of the Burgh of Glasgow are wanting prior to 19th January 1573-4, and the portion of the Burgess Roll now printed comprises the admission of Burgesses from that date until the end of the year 1750. Unfortunately the Record is not continuous; several of the volumes have long since disappeared, and the blanks occasioned by their loss have been noted where they occur throughout the following pages. With the exception of two fragments, one dating from 16th October 1613 to 23rd February 1615, and the other from 31st October 1693 to 9th October 1694, no separate Register exists of the admission of Burgesses and Guild Brethren until 1st January 1777.

From the earliest times the regulation of the admission of Burgesses was in the hands of the community, and as representing the community, the power lay with the Town Council. When the Record begins, Burgesses were received and sworn in presence of the Magistrates and Council, and their entries are engrossed in the Minute Books of the town. This procedure continued for some thirty-five years, but by an act of council dated 7th October 1609<sup>1</sup> the right was transferred to the Dean of Guild and his Council, and thereafter the admissions are recorded in the Act Books of that Court.<sup>2</sup>

In the Register there are several distinct classes of Burgesses, who, though all nominally admitted to the freedom of the burgh, had different privileges conferred upon them. Up to the year 1605 the Burgess Freemen of Glasgow were all simple Burgesses and no more, whether belonging to the Merchant class or to the Crafts. The mutual controversies and civil discords which for long had existed between the merchants on the one hand and the craftsmen on the other, became so serious that arbitration was resorted to, and in the year mentioned an arrangement was reached, embodied in the famous document known as the Letter of Guildry. Up to this time there was no Guildry in Glasgow, but by this Letter a Dean of Guild and his Council was established and provision made for the institution of the brotherhood. Every resident burgess was to enter Guild Brother on payment of 13s. 4d. to the hospital of his calling, merchants or crafts as the case might be.<sup>1</sup> A Guild Brother's son or son-in-law was to pay 20s. at his entry and 5s. to his hospital, subject to this qualification, that he must be worth in lands, heritage and moveable gear 500 merks if a merchant and half as much if a craftsman, while the respectability of the guildry was maintained by the exclusion of "all kynd of infamous and deboischit men of evill lyf and conversatioun." A Freeman who did not make his choice and remained outside the Guildry continued a simple Burgess, possessing only such rights as did not encroach upon the trading privileges belonging to the other Burgesses and Guild Brethren—those of (1) the Merchant rank and (2) the Craft rank. These two classes formed by far the most numerous body of the citizens and possessed the fullest freedom of trading. The merchants could not infringe upon the rights of the crafts, while the crafts in turn were strictly confined to the exercise of their own particular trade or calling. Another class of Burgesses is that generally termed Honorary Burgesses, persons admitted gratis by favour of the Town Council, either by reason of their own eminence or through the influence of their friends. These comprise a goodly proportion of the entrants and further reference to them will be made later.

Entry monies, or fines as they were then called, were exacted from the entrants at each stage of their qualification. The amount varied from time to time, but generally the figure was considerably beyond the means of the common people. The money thus acquired formed an important source of income to the burgh, and, as regulated by an Act of Parliament of 1503, went to swell the funds of the Common Good. In the early days of its history, when the revenue of the town was small and its financial resources limited, instances are numerous of burgess fines being diverted from the burgh exchequer and assigned to other parties for varied reasons, not infrequently in compensation for loss sustained. Such favours did not always originate with the Council, but sometimes were obtained by direct petitions or supplications. One of these, dated 5th November 1586, is still in existence and runs in the following terms:—

My lord proueast, baillies and worthie counsale of this gud toun :
Unto your lordschippis humelie menis, I Sampson . . . in this gud toun, that quhair I haiff bein ane workman in this gud toun thir mony yeris bygane . . . and treulie efter my strenthe, witt and jugement, and is descendit fra thame quha hes bene of my . . . servandis in the saming ;
and was myndit to haiff wrocht to the wttermaist in this gud toun . . .
it hes pleased God to wissie me with seiknes, quhairby I am sair handlet, praisit be God, and by . . . under seiknes I haiff alreddie spendit all my lordschippis, for Goddis cause, to consider my pur estate at this present, and that ye wald of . . . bestowe upon me ane burges fynes that thairby

I may be helpit quhill ather that God call upon . . . to him, or ellis that he wald restoir me to my helthe agane gif it be his gud plesure. And your [ansuer] for Goddis cause I beseik.

Quinto Novembris, 1586.—The balleis and counsell grantis to the complener [ane burges fynes] and to find him furth himself.<sup>1</sup>

At the end of the sixteenth century and early in the seventeenth the Magistrates and officials of the burgh had the right of nominating a certain number of burgesses, receiving in return the entry monies as a reward for services rendered. In 1599, probably in order to evade the frequent application for free admission to burgess-ship, the Town Council set the admission dues to the highest bidder at public roup, for the period of three years, reserving four nominations to the provost, two to each of the three bailies and one each to the clerk and master of work. On the expiry of the term the experiment does not appear to have been repeated, and, whether by enactment or not is unknown (the records for the period being lost), the practice of nomination ceased. After an interval of about a century and a half, it was revived at Michaelmas 1744, when four burgesses were named by the provost and two each by the three bailies, the Dean of Guild and the Deacon Convener.

Over and above the ordinary dues paid by the entrants, special levies were sometimes raised on occasions of national or local emergency. In 1649, to provide funds for a new magazine and armour for the town, an additional £4 was paid by those admitted Burgess only, and £10 by those entering Burgess and Guild Brother.<sup>1</sup> In 1653, after the disastrous fire to which reference has been made at page 137, a further contribution of £5 was imposed on all entrants, to be employed in the purchase of leather buckets for use in case of fire.<sup>2</sup> The former exaction was removed three years after it was imposed, but bucket money is still collected, although utilised in a different way.

It was within the power of the Magistrates and Council to deprive burgesses of their freedom, and such a course was frequently adopted, especially when the delinquent trespassed against the law or acted in defiance of the rules of good citizenship. One burgess was deprived in 1647 for returning to the town after having "come furthe of places suspect of the infectioun" (page 108). In 1651 two had their freedom cried down "for their oppin miscarriage to the proveist";<sup>3</sup> upwards of thirty were similarly dealt with in 1655 for having remained furth of the town for a year and a day;<sup>4</sup> and in 1712, because of his activity "in the late unaccountable mobbs and rabble, inciting and stirring up others" and refusing to go home when commanded by the magistrates, another burgess was not only deprived of his freedom, but also banished from the town.<sup>5</sup> Similar instances could be multiplied, but the foregoing are sufficient to show how carefully the civic fathers watched over and how zealously they guarded the honour and dignity of burghership.

The last class of Burgesses to be referred to are the Honorary Burgesses,—those who were received as Burgesses or as Burgesses and Guild Brethren without payment of the ordinary admission dues. The practice of bestowing the freedom of the burgh upon distinguished strangers is of no modern origin. It dates as far back as the records go. The honour conferred no special privileges upon the recipients. They had no say in the affairs of the town nor did any benefits descend to their children. On the other hand, there were a large number of gratis burgesses whose status was different, in so far that they possessed all the rights and privileges as if they had entered in the ordinary way, and were bound in consequence to discharge the duties devolving upon them as loyal citizens. As a general rule, these burgesses were admitted by reason of services rendered, and in every case their admission followed upon an act of council passed expressly in their favour.

The Roll of Burgesses entering by hereditary right or by purchase was kept with praiseworthy accuracy, but the same cannot be said of the strangers who received the honorary freedom of the burgh. It does not appear to have been considered worth while to engross their names, although from 1705 to 1730 some attempt was made in this direction. During that period a separate portion of the Minute Books was reserved for those granted "Gratis Tickets," and the number of persons so honoured range from 259 in 1716 to 11 in 1729. It is obvious, however, that the clerk found the task of enumeration too irksome, and after 17th January 1730 no further record has been kept. "It looks as though in the good old times councils presented the freedom of their burghs to distinguished visitors, less for the honour of building up their Roll of Fame, than as an occasion affording agreeable opportunities for conviviality, speech making and drinking of healths." Burgess tickets granted to ordinary entrants were written on small pieces of parchment, but those presented to persons of distinction were more or less ornate in character. To meet the demand for such tickets, the Town Council from time to time contracted for a supply. In 1745, John Dunlop, painter, undertook to provide as many as might be required for the space of five years at the modest rates of two shillings for the best sort, one shilling for the second sort and eightpence for the third sort.<sup>1</sup> Many of these illuminated tickets are in private hands and elsewhere, and while they bear to have been "extracted out of the Gild Books of this City," the statement is inaccurate, for, as mentioned above, not only are the lists preserved imperfect, but none exists after 1730. As the city advanced in wealth and prosperity the number of these presentations would correspondingly increase, but an act of council dated 20th May 1778 finally put an end to their wholesale and indiscriminate issue.<sup>2</sup>

The spelling of the MS. Record has not been strictly adhered to. In the majority of cases the surnames have been modernized, and trades and occupations described in present day language. Merchands have become merchants; coupers, coopers; tayleours, tailors, etc., but the original orthography has been retained in the longer extracts.

Biographical data concerning many of the entrants might possibly have added additional interest to the Register, but tempting as the subject was, considerations of space rendered such notes impracticable.

The thanks of the Society are due to the Corporation of the City of Glasgow and to the Court of the Lord Dean of Guild for permission to copy the entries from the Records in their possession. The Editor would desire to add his personal thanks to Sir John Lindsay, Town Clerk, and to William Guy, Esq., Clerk to the Dean of Guild Court, for the many kindnesses received at their hands.

<sup>1</sup> In consequence of the insurrection of the popish earls of Huntly, Crawford and Erroll, and the order of King James VI. 7 April 1589, for an armed muster of the lieges, Glasgow was called upon to supply a contingent of men for the royal service. The number of men originally demanded of the town was 60, but as that number could not be raised without "grit hart" to the community, it was finally arranged to provide 40 hagbutters with their commanders, and a tax of £500 was appointed to be raised for their equipment. On their return and in respect of the services of the two commanders, William Stewart and Thomas Pettigrew, it was ordained that they should be "gratefeit according to the provost and baillies' discretion," the reward ultimately taking the form of "thrie burges fynes of thair awin findyng out, besydis thair ordinar wage and daylie allowance sett down to thame."

<sup>1</sup> Possibly the individual admitted 30 Sept. 1629.<sup>2</sup> Rev. Traves Ho., p. 233.<sup>3</sup> On 21 October 1648 the town council, recognising the necessity in which the town stood of the services of a qualified surgeon, and of the "large commendation" given to Arthur Temple as one of that profession, ordained the Dean of Guild and his brethren to receive Temple as a burghess and guild brother, "in hope of his good service." Their endeavours to bring him to Glasgow at this time were unsuccessful. But he was again approached, and the act above mentioned narrates that "he hes vndertakine to doe the part of ane chirurgeon to the haill poore of this burgh for fyve yeirs to come without any payment." From the town he received a yearly salary of 100 merks, besides being relieved of all public burdens, taxes, etc. Whether he found his practice too exacting does not appear, but having removed from Glasgow and "remained furth for a year and a day," he was deprived of his freedom by act of council 18 August 1655. Temple settled as a surgeon in Edinburgh, which city he represented in the Scottish Parliament of 1669, and was owner of the estate of Ravelrig.<sup>4</sup> Having removed from Glasgow, he was deprived of his freedom by act of council 18 Aug. 1655.

<sup>1</sup> On 26 May 1662 the provost, bailies and council ordained that all persons who had entered either Burgess or Burgess and Guild Brother during the Commonwealth should be readmitted without further payment on taking the oath of fidelity to King Charles II. At the same time the clerk received instructions to "caus insert all theis that enters not in a book by it alone," but if such a volume ever existed, it has long since disappeared. On the last page of vol. v. of the Act Books of the Dean of Guild, the names of such individuals who were readmitted conform to the Act of Council are recorded, but they are only four in number.—See Glas. Rec., vol. ii., p. 487; View of the Merchants' House (1866), p. 131.

<sup>1</sup> Writing to the Earl of Lauderdale, from Edinburgh on 27 Sept. 1670, Tweeddale says, "My last was from Glasgow upon fryday befor noun. After dinner I was inwitted by the magistrats to ther tounhoos to be mead burges, and had I belive the treat (which) was provided for the Duk of Lenox when he was to goe west and could gett no furder then falkirk."—(Lauderdale Papers, vol. ii., p. 204.) What detained Lennox is not stated, but the Earl's supposition seems to receive confirmation from the entry in the accounts of the treasurer of the burgh of Glasgow,—“Item, to Thomas Moncuir for silver boxes he made to burges tikitis quhen the duk should have come west, £32:14:6.”—(Glas. Rec., vol. iii., p. 494.)

NOTES.

(1.) On 3 October 1681, on the occasion of his visit to Glasgow, James, Duke of Albany and York, afterwards King James VII., was admitted a burgess of the city. A sum of £4001:12s. (Scots) was spent in the entertainment of the Duke and his suite, including £1580 "for silver and gold boxes given to his royall highnes with his burges ticket, and to his servants with their tickits at their admissions."—(Glas. Rec., vol. iii., p. 303.) The Glasgow Records furnish no names of the servants then admitted, but the information is partially supplied from the Records of Dumbarton, to which place the Duke and his attendants went the following day to receive the similar compliment from that ancient burgh. They were:—

Warden, Colonel Robert, comptroller of his Royal Highness.
 Grinthill, Colonel John, master of the Robes.
 Linglie, Major Hendrie, groom of the bedchamber.
 Kirk, Captain Philip, servant to his Royal Highness.
 Turner, Charles, also his servant.
 Drummy, [—], page of honour.
 Sparrow, John, clerk of the kitchen,
 "and armoris, waiters and yeomen."

(2.) On 15 Sept. 1687, ane most reverend Father in God, John [Paterson], Archbishop of Glasgow, was made B. and G.B. gratis (original ticket). His admission is referred to in the Glasgow Records (vol. iii., p. 406), when the sum of £27 sterling was paid "for ane gold box given to his grace my lord archbishop of Glasgow with his burges ticket."

With the exception of a volume embracing the period from 31 October 1693 to 9 October 1694, the records are wanting after this date until 26 October 1699.<sup>1</sup>

Such a hiatus is much to be regretted, but the loss is to a certain extent modified by the existence of an index from which the particulars that follow are supplied. This index was compiled about the year 1757 by one Henry Aitkens, a merchant, who on 13 October 1757 was admitted a burgess and guild brother of the city, by act of the town council, in consideration of his having brought "forward a regular register of their burgesses and gild brothers down from the year 1688."—(Glas Rec., vol. vi., p. 507.)

From 1681 to 1688 there is therefore a complete gap. The index only contains the names of those who entered in the usual way for the purpose of carrying on the commerce and trade of the burgh; no notice whatever has been taken of honorary burgesses, and the information supplied is of the most meagre description. Whenever possible additional particulars have been furnished, in many cases from the Town Council Records, and in a few instances from the original tickets.

By these two acts, the Dean of Guild was authorised to admit as Burgesses and Guild Brethren 61 individuals, of whom no fewer than 41 were resident in the neighbouring Royal Burgh of Rutherglen. No explanation for the inclusion of so many Rutherglen citizens is afforded in either of the acts, but the fact is significant that on 28 May following, a member to represent the Glasgow District of Burghs in the British Parliament fell to be elected, and Rutherglen was the returning burgh.

<sup>1</sup> The Parliament of Great Britain having voted the sum of £10,000 sterling as compensation to the city for the loss sustained through the visit of Prince Charles and his men at the close of the year 1745, these two gentlemen were appointed by the magistrates their attorneys in London to collect the money. In consideration of "their great care and attention to the affair and their friendship and good offices to the city," it was agreed to admit them Burgesses and Guild Brethren "as a perpetual testimony of the sense of the Corporation for the good services done by them to the Community." The burgess tickets enclosed in silver boxes "with the touns arms chased on the top" were presented to them in London. — (Glas. Rec., vol. vi., pp. 301, 314, 321.)
