P R E F A C E .

THE present issue of the DIRECTORY OF SCOTLAND is the second one produced jointly by Slater's Directory, Limited, and Kelly's Directories, Limited, in accordance with a working arrangement between these Companies. Several alterations and additions were made in the Edition for 1896 with the idea of adding to the usefulness of the Book, and these have been continued.

To the General Introduction to Scotland particulars and tables have again been added, illustrating the resources of the Country.

Under each County the several Parishes, Towns and the principal Villages have been arranged in strict Alphabetical order, for facility of reference, preceded by some particulars of the industries of the Counties, with the names of the Magistrates, the Members of the County Councils, the County Officers, &c.

Separate sections are devoted to the Cities of Glasgow and Edinburgh, with a "Street Directory" in each case.

A complete Index to Places is prefixed to the Book, and a further feature is a list of "Principal Seats," with the Names of their Occupiers and references to the pages on which they are to be found.

The large Map of Scotland has been corrected for this Edition.

SCOTLAND.

THIS most northerly of the great divisions of the British Isles lies north of England, with an inclination to the west, which throws the western coast, taking the direction from south to north, considerably west of the line of the coast of Cumberland, and in the same proportion the line of the south and centre portion of the eastern coast recedes to the west of the line of the coast of Northumberland (though north of Aberdeen, about Peterhead, the coast trends eastward, only to recede again north of the Moray Firth), thus the Mull of Cantyre, the southern portion of Argyllshire, is in the longitude ($5^{\circ} 50'$) of Belfast, the district of Ardnachan, in that of Portrush, in the north of Ireland, and the Hebrides lie still further west, while on the east coast, Edinburgh and Leith are in the longitude of Sillioth, on the west coast of Cumberland, and Dundee in that of Carlisle. The kingdom lies between the longitude of 2° to $1^{\circ} 50'$ and $7^{\circ} 30'$ west of Greenwich and between $54^{\circ} 35'$ and 61° north latitude; this includes the Orkney and Shetland Isles, and gives a length, from north to south, of 470 miles, of which the mainland takes 295 miles, while the breadth varies from 105 miles, on a line taken east to west from Grangemouth to the western side of Colonsay, to 225 miles from Peterhead to the west of Uist (or 385 miles if the outlying Isles of St. Kilda are included); the total acreage being 19,466,509, or 30,416 square miles.

The coast line is extremely varied, and resembles that of Ireland, in having its western coast indented with long inlets, with the addition of a long breakwater of islands, 140 miles in length, off the north-western coast, with the large islands of Skye, Mull, Jura and Islay closer in to the mainland. These islands, and a large portion of the coast which lies behind them, are exposed to the Atlantic, though the great current which, after its division into two by Ireland, has such an influence on the banks and estuaries of the Irish Channel, only glances against the south-western point of Cantyre and Port Patrick, Wigtownshire, and after sending a portion of its force into the Firth of Clyde, and a minor current into the Solway, passes down channel. The total length of coast line (not including the islands, nor any except the largest estuaries), is about 1,100 miles, but measured in and out of all the estuaries and lochs, it is rather more than double that distance. The land border from Berwick to the head of Solway Firth is only 90 miles; the centre part of this is formed by the Cheviot Hills and the eastern by the Tweed, and going north from the mouth of this river, the east coast trends north-west in a tolerably even line, only broken by St. Abb's Head, and the small harbour of Dunbar. At Tantallon, near North Berwick, it turns direct west, being here broken by the Firth of Forth, subsequently turning north-west at Fife Ness to the Firth of Tay, resuming its northerly direction at Buddon Ness, the north-east horn of St. Andrews Bay, and runs up with a slight trend eastwards past Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen to Peterhead. About 10 miles north of this, near Fraserburgh, the coast has a direct westerly course for nearly 80 miles into the Moray Firth, then north-east to Tarbet Ness, which forms the southern point of Dornoch Firth; after clearing which the coast takes another bend to the north-east as far as Wick, thence due north to Duncansby Head, the Land's End of Scotland. From here the coasts of Caithness and Sutherland extend due east to west, turning abruptly south at Cape Wrath, and from this point to the Mull of Cantyre is a broken and rocky coast line, indented with numerous sea lochs and studded with long promontories; it trends south-west to the southern point of Loch Cairnabun, thence easterly into Loch Broom; again to the west past Lochs Groinard and Ewe; south past Lochs Gair and Torridon to Loch Carron, south of which the Isle of Skye indents into Loch Alsh; the coast from here is broken by Lochs Hourne, Nevis, Morar, Na Nuag and Moidart, and then projects some 15 miles in the promontory of Ardmurehan, succeeded by Loch Sunart and the Sound of Mull, which takes the coast 20 miles easterly to Loch Linnhe, the southern end of the Caledonian canal, thence it proceeds south and consists of the broken coast of Argyllshire as far as the Mull of Cantyre, which ends the rocky portion of the coast, and forms the western horn of entrance to the Firth of Clyde, round which the coast line passes the large Lochs Fyne and Long, returning down the coast of Ayrshire, passing the peculiar shores of Wigtown, which are indented in its northern side by Loch Ryan and south by Luce Bay, to which, round Burrowhead, succeeds Wigtown Bay, and the coast runs thence in a north-easterly course along the north shore of the Solway Firth.

Inland, the best known divisions are the Highlands and the Lowlands, marked out not only by their configuration and hills, but also by the differences apparent in their inhabitants, in their language, and even in their cattle; these divisions may be indicated by a line starting from the Mull of Cantyre, along the eastern side of the islands of Arran and Bute, and along the east of Loch Lomond, thence north by east to Inverness, crossing the Moray Firth, and ending at Duncansby Head; the west and north-west of this line is the Highland country, embracing, it is estimated, about 18,000 square miles of the mainland, or with the islands 21,000; here are the highest mountains, and the largest inland lochs; the most prominent amongst the former being Ben Nevis 4,400 feet above the sea level, Cairngorm 4,083, Ben Lawers 3,980, Ben More 3,850, Ben Cruachan 3,700 and Ben Lomond 3,200. The Lowland district stretches eastward and south; the loftiest peaks in the district being Broadlaw 2,750, Hart Fell 2,650 and Criffell 1,860.

The principal rivers, beginning from the south, are the Tweed, debouching at Berwick, the Esk, the Aunai and the Nith, falling into the Solway Firth. The Clyde, rising in the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire and flowing westward to its own Firth. The Forth, rising in the Perthshire hills and flowing south-east to the German Ocean. The Tay, having its source in the same watershed, but debouching east by north between the counties of Fife and Forfar. The Dee and the Don, the one flowing east and the other south-east, but both debouching by Aberdeen, and the Spey, rising in Inverness-shire and falling into the North Sea in the north-east of Morayshire. From here, round the north and west coasts to Firth of Clyde, the rivers are comparatively small, the water, in nearly all cases, forming a succession of lochs on its way to the North Sea or Atlantic.

The sea lochs have been already named in the coast line, and those inland are very numerous; a few of the largest are on the western and centre portions, Loch Lomond (which covers about 20,000 acres), Lochs Awe, Katrine, Tay, Rannoch, Arkaig, Lochy, Laggan, Ness, Fannich, Maree, Shin and Stonine, while on the east, Loch Leven is the only prominent sheet of water. The Western Isles also contain a few large lakes. All these provide good fishing grounds, and the sea lochs and coasts abound in fish.

HISTORY.—The earliest record that can be trusted is that relating to the Roman invasion, which took place A.D. 79, at which time an army under Agricola crossed the Solway Firth and by the next year had established themselves on the north bank of the Clyde, shortly afterwards (A.D. 81) erecting the wall of Antonine, from Bowling to Grangemouth, between the Firths of Clyde and Forth, taking that natural division line of the country as their northern boundary. At this time the country generally was known as Caledonia, though it would appear that the Caledonians proper held the extreme north, and the Picts the more southerly portion, except in the south-west, where a British tribe had planted themselves; the Romans remained until 410, and on their departure, the Britons and Picts contended for the sovereignty. Meanwhile, a Celtic tribe from the north-east of Ireland, took possession of Cantyre and pushing into Lorn and Strath Clyde, imposed their yoke on the inhabitants of the western districts, and forming a kingdom known as the Dalriadic, attempted, with varying success, the conquest of the Picts, and as they, coming from Scotia (as Ireland was then called), got the name of Scots, may be said to have originated the name of Scotland. Ultimately, in 843, the Dalriadic and Pictish thrones were united under Kenneth, grandson of Achaius. Meanwhile, on the eastern side, the kingdom of Northumbria, a foundation of the Norsemen under Ida, was pushed forward to the Lothians on the banks of the Forth, and in 617 extended from the Humber to the Forth and in 654 included Strathclyde, but in 685 the Picts defeated Egrid, King of Northumbria, at Dunnichen, though it was not until 966 that Kenneth III. got the Lothians ceded to him, the final annexation taking place in 1058, under Malcolm III. "first king of Scotia" (surnamed Cenmore). Between 881 and 1057 a constant war was waged with the Danes, upon whom no less than eight defeats were inflicted by Scottish sovereigns, the principal being Danes Dyke 881, Forteviot 908, Luncarty 961 and Mortlach 1010. In 1066, Edgar Atheling, the Saxon claimant to the English throne, with his two sisters and many Saxon and some Norman nobles, sought refuge in Scotland; the king received them well and settled them in various parts of the kingdom, marrying two years later Edgar's sister, Margaret. He was killed 1093 at the siege of Abwick and was succeeded (after four years usurpation by Donald Bane) by his son Edgar, whose sister married Henry I. of England. After him came Alexander I. 1107 and David I. "The Saint," 1124. William the Lion, so-called from his cognisance, a red lion rampant, which afterwards became the shield of Scotland, who came to the throne 1165, was taken prisoner at Alnwick 1174, and only released by Richard I. in 1189; he was succeeded by Alexander II. who inflicted the great defeat upon Haco, King of Norway, at Largs in 1263. Alexander III. was killed by a fall at Kinghorn, 1286 (in the time of Thomas the Rhymer); his young daughter, Margaret, dying 1290, left the crown open to various competitors, and gave Edward I. of England an excuse to step in and decide between the claims of John Baliol and Robert Bruce, and first opened up the claim to the English suzerainty; John Baliol, proving the most pliant, was placed on the throne, only to be deposed, and during this time William Wallace made a gallant attempt to retrieve the fortunes of his country, and defeated Cressingham at Stirling (1297), was himself defeated at Falkirk (1298), and being captured (1305) was executed. Robert Bruce, grandson of the first competitor, was crowned 1306, but not until 1314 did he prove successful, and then he won his great battle of Bannockburn; but in 1324, Edward II. ravaged the South and East of Scotland; and in 1329 Bruce died, and was succeeded by his son David II. a minor, and in 1334, John Baliol's son Edward, under the auspices of Edward III. made an attempt on the throne; David being taken prisoner in 1346 (at Nevilles Cross), was released in 1359 on his marriage with Joanna, sister to Edward III. and died 1371; the next year John of Gaunt sought refuge in Scotland, and in 1385, Richard II. burnt Edinburgh. Robert II. (1371) was the first of the Stuarts and a grandson to Robert Bruce, and in his reign (1388), Douglas won the battle of Otterburn, to which followed a long truce, during which Robert III. became king, and in 1405, his son James was captured by the English and only released in 1424, when he became James I. and was assassinated (1437) at Perth. James II. then six years old, succeeded and was killed at the siege of Roxburgh in 1460; he assassinated the Douglas in Stirling Castle during a dispute; James III. succeeded him, and James IV. 1503, married Margaret of England, and in 1513 perished at Flodden. James V. long a minor under the control of Angus, married, 1537, Magdalene, daughter of Francis I. of France; and in 1538, Mary of Guise, mother of Mary Queen of Scots, and this brings us to better known times; Mary, as a minor, was brought up in France, and Arran was Regent in 1545. Hertford, an English noble, afterwards Duke of Somerset, burnt Edinburgh and many border places; in 1554, Mary of Guise became Regent; 1558, Mary (the younger), married Francis, Dauphin of France, and in 1561 Mary came to Scotland a widow, married Darnley, 1565; Bothwell in 1567, fled to England the same year, and was sacrificed to Elizabeth's jealousy 1587. James VI. had been made king in 1567, and in 1603 succeeded Elizabeth on the English throne and removed to London, revisiting Scotland only once afterwards (1617). After James VI.'s death, his son Charles succeeded him as Charles I. of England and Scotland; he visited Edinburgh in 1633, and was crowned in the Chapel Royal of Holyrood, and in 1641 he again came to his northern capital to win over, if he could, the Covenanting Lords, and five years later he threw himself into the arms of the Scottish army, only to be surrendered by them to the English Parliament, when the latter settled the arrears of pay due to the Scots. Charles II. came in 1650, on the invitation of the Scottish Parliament, and while he was there Cromwell invaded the kingdom and gained over General Leslie the victory of Dunbar, but could not venture to attack the Scottish forces stationed with King Charles about Stirling. In the succeeding year Charles was crowned King of Scotland at Scone Palace, and in August of the same year he marched from Stirling to Worcester. The army stationed in Scotland, under Monck, was mainly instrumental in the Restoration, and previous to his accession to the throne, James, Duke of York (afterwards James VII. of Scotland and II. of England) resided sometime in Edinburgh, but on his abdication William III. espoused the cause of the Presbyterians, and the reign of his successor, Anne, was marked by the passing of the Act of Union, and henceforth, if we except the two attempts, 1715 and 1745, made by the Stuarts to regain their hereditary dominions, Scottish history as a distinct kingdom ceased.

During these periods from the Norman invasion, the border land lying along the Tweed and the Cheviot Hills had been the scene of constant forays carried out by the English border chieftains, to which those on the Scotch side promptly retaliated, and though there were on both sides nobles called "Wardens of the Marches," commissioned by their sovereigns to maintain order, the reiving still went on and was varied occasionally by a regular invasion from one side or the other, such as of Lords Sussex and Hunsdon in 1570; later on the only purely Scottish events were Mar's rising in 1715 and the gallant attempt of Prince Charles Edward in 1745 to recover the possessions of his ancestors. But in 1707 an event was consummated which ended the independence of Scotland as a kingdom, for the Articles of Union, which, after much show of opposition, had been (1706) approved by a majority of thirty-three in the Scottish House of Parliament, consisting of about 240 members, came into effect; and from that time Scottish constituencies were represented in the Imperial Parliament, originally by 45 members but now by 72, and the Scotch Peerage by sixteen members elected each Parliament to sit in the House of Lords.

The Scottish Parliament, abolished at the time of the Union, was constituted on a slightly different form to the present Imperial Parliament. It consisted from early times of one House only, composed of Ecclesiastical Barons (Bishops and mired Abbots), the Higher Temporal Barons, the Lesser Barons and Burghers. These two last classes were often represented by delegates, and the towns more often by their provosts; there existed also a peculiar committee with functions somewhat analogous to those of an English grand jury (but applying to bills for consideration of the House and not indictments), who, under the style of "Lords of Articles," were appointed each session, and who examined all proposed bills and rejected any that they considered it was inadvisable to lay before the House; these Lords, originally named by the Crown, were latterly elected by the Separate Estates, and in 1560 consisted of ten Spiritual Lords, ten Greater Barons, six Lesser Barons and ten Provosts of Cities. The Scottish Order of Knighthood, that of "The Thistle," first founded in 819 by King Achaius, was revived in 1540 by James and again in 1687 by James VII. and still remains one of the "Orders" of the United Kingdom.

ECCLIASTICAL.—The early settlers, Picts or Caledonians, were heathens, and it was the missionary labours of the Irish Priest Columba (A.D. 630) and a reflux of Christian teachers and Prelates from Northumbria, together with the visit of a Welsh bishop, that Scotland owed her conversion to Christianity; for some time there were two sects of the church working in the kingdom, the monks from the North of England holding to a more modern form of Romanism than the ancient Celtic fathers; however, all finally settled to one orthodox usage, but the supremacy over the western portion claimed by the Archbishops of York was rejected, and the Church of Scotland was governed by its own archbishops, but the Civil dissensions in Queen Mary's reign favoured the Reformers, and in 1580 Episcopacy ceased, and in 1592 Presbyterianism was established by law, and was followed by the destruction of abbeys &c. In 1625 Charles I. tried to revive Episcopacy, but was met in 1638 by the National Covenant, the adherents to which in 1679 murdered Archbishop Sharpe, and were persecuted for some years, but as the Episcopal Church could not in conscience support William III. he gave his support to the Presbyterians, and in July, 1689, Prelacy was abolished by Act of Parliament, and since that the Presbyterian Church has been the Established Church of Scotland, and though it was somewhat shaken in 1843 by the great disruption, on the question of patronage and State veto and the foundation of the Free kirk, it still holds its own as the State church; there is, however, an Episcopal hierarchy and one of the Roman church and several powerful sects of dissenters.

ANTIQUITIES AND RUINS.—Overrun as it has been by so many varied races, Scotland contains a large number, not only of ancient warlike remains, but also many ecclesiastical ruins, the destruction of these latter being in many cases due to changes in the national religion : amongst the warlike ruins we find the vitrified forts, built it is supposed of mud and wattle and hardened by the application of fire ; of this class is Menmuir, in Forfarshire ; to this or a slightly later age belong the old circular towers or broughs as in Burra, Orkney Islands, and the so-called Dun forts, built of boulder stones without cement, while later came the Roman camps and their celebrated wall of Antonine from the Forth to the Clyde, with its ditch and inner road (which latter was long used by trains of packhorses) ; next are the older castles founded from the 11th century up to the 14th or 15th, and now nearly all ruins, as Dunstaffnage, Cardross, Castle Campbell, Loch Leven, Caer Laverock, Cawdor, Inverlochy, Fast Bothwell &c. the ruined palaces of Falkland and Linlithgow, the three royal castles, maintained under the Articles of Union, viz., Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbarton, and the many fortified houses, some still habitable, and the border Peel towers. Among the ecclesiastical remains are the standing stones or Druidical temples of Stennis and of Callanish, the great Runic crosses of Iona and others scattered through the land, the old Cathedral of Iona, the grand Border Abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose, Dryburgh and Kelso, and the eastern ones of Brechin and Elgin and the perfect specimens of cathedrals still in use at Glasgow and Kirkwall, while the chapel of Holyrood and the older tower of that palace may be ranked with antique buildings. There are two round towers, similar to those found in Ireland, still standing at Abernethy and Brechin.

HIGHLAND CLANS.—The clans were the pastoral tribes of a hilly district, each tribe obeying a chief who represented the original headman, and was directly descended from him, and a very similar state of government exists at the present day amongst the hill tribes of Afghanistan ; each clan had its distinct district and was distinguished by its tartan or plaid and its badges ; they seldom united themselves with any of the adjoining clans, and then only to oppose a common enemy, and when thus collected in strong bodies their action was most effective, though marred to some extent by their custom of returning home after each successful action to deposit their plunder and see to their own settlements. The chief in each clan was paramount, presided over it in peace and led it in war, and next to him stood the dunniewassels, or gentlemen of the clan, who were generally the only fully armed members (with targe, pistols and claymore, to which was afterwards added the Spanish musket), and the poorer members of the clan, with often only a claymore or a Lochaber axe, formed a second or supporting line. Their form of government was patriarchal and all shared in the spoil, while the chief held the power of life and death ; the king's warrant did not run in these wild districts, and their love of fighting led to constant forays of one clan against another ; however, by the time James VI. came to the throne they had been in a measure subdued, and the risings of 1715 and 1745 finally broke up their power and they now only exist by the community of name and family, though the chief in many cases can still trace his descent. Some of the clans were deported to Canada, and Pitt's wise measure of making regiments from other leading clans was the means of pacifying them and giving them a congenial employment.

The Highland district contains the largest civil parishes, Glenshiel being 573,320 acres, Lochbroom 261,020 acres and Gairloch 200,646, all in Ross-shire, which possesses three other parishes over 100,000 acres each, while Sutherland has seven parishes over that figure, Caithness one, Inverness nine (and one of 267,071), Perthshire one, 196,683 acres and Argyll five of over 100,000 acres each, while Ayrshire shows one of 585 acres, Edinburghshire one of 349, Wigtownshire one of 55 and Linlithgow one of 11 acres ; from 5,000 to 12,000 acres being a very common size for a lowland parish.

The agricultural holdings are many of them small, and in the islands and some North Highland parishes the crofters, or small farmers, chiefly those of Argyll and Inverness, have suffered from an accumulation of arrears and by rents beyond the capacity of their farms. A commission appointed under Acts of 1886 and 1887 has in nine years it has been in operation fixed about 15,000 fair rents, and by the establishment of new piers and harbours and lighthouses, subsidising lines of steamers and helping the extension of railways, has afforded the fishermen and crofters facilities for getting their produce to market. The Commission on Deer Forests reported in March, 1883, that about 1,700,000 acres might possibly be found suitable for crofter occupation, but of this only about 400,000 acres were in the vicinity of the districts affected by the crofter question.

SOIL AND AGRICULTURE.—The face of the country is very variable, the north centre and the western coast down to

Cantyre and Arran being mostly of a sterile and heathy nature, and suitable only for the sustenance of sheep, mountain cattle and deer, while the eastern portion (especially the flat land between the mountain ranges and the sea) affords a most suitable ground for corn and other crops, and fine grazing ground, not only for sheep, but for the better class of cattle and horses. South, again, of the Firths of Forth and Clyde, the land shows a belt of minerals, extending from Ayrshire in a north-easterly direction into Fifeshire, some good arable land down the course of the southern streams, a less prolific eastern coast line than that further north, and a rough moorland along the border north of the Cheviots and along their slopes. The mean annual temperature has been estimated at about 44 to 47 degrees, varying with local peculiarities of height above the sea level &c. ; the arable land does not range higher than 800 feet above this level. The acreage of corn crops and pasturage is very nearly equal (about 1,300,000 acres), but half of the first-named crop is in the eastern district, one-third in the south, only one-tenth in the north, and about one-twelfth in the bare western division ; the same proportion occurs in the root crop, and to some extent in that of the green crops, though in this last the south holds a place nearly level with the east division, which has one half of the crop, but on a comparison of pasture land it is found that the south has over half the total acreage, the east only a fourth, and the west and north one-ninth and one-eleventh respectively. Heath (or mountain) land, which counts for one half of the total acreage, shows, as may be expected, a preponderance in north and west, the latter accounting for one-third, and the former showing five-eighths, the east only one-sixth, while the south, owing to its extensive moorlands and border hills, accounts for four-eighths. The woods only cover one-twentieth of the total area, and are distributed chiefly in the eastern and western districts.

The distribution of sheep and cattle does not quite follow that of the heath and pasture, the north carrying a small proportion of both, the west one-fourth of the total in sheep, but only one-ninth in cattle, while the east, with only one-fifth of sheep, feeds nearly half of the total of cattle, and the south, with a very heavy preponderance (three-sevenths) of sheep, has fewer cattle than the eastern divisions. See tables.

ANIMALS &c.—The most notable breeds of cattle are the Galloway short horns, the Kyloe small black cattle from lower Argyll and Bute, and the Highland breed of small short-legged cattle with shaggy hides and straight horns. The sheep in the same districts are also of a small, sturdy black-faced breed and very active, while on the southern border is a larger species, indigenous to the Cheviot Hills, and on the east coast a breed belonging to the Grampians district. The horses show the same characteristics ; the Shetland pony, only seven or eight hands in height, active and sturdy, is now much sought after, while in the south-west is the breed of Galloways, somewhat resembling the Welsh pony, but rather higher, and the original mount of the "Border Pricker" in his English forays ; and in the valley of the Clyde and Ayrshire are found the celebrated Clydesdale horses. The east coast, about Fife and Forfar, likewise furnishes a good breed of roadsters, and this side of the country furnishes the largest supply of horses generally. The tall, shaggy Scotch deer-hound is well-known, and terriers show some fine breeds, while the Scotch collie is a finer bred dog than the southern sheep dog. The deer, which constitute a leading feature in the Highlands, where they have some 2,000,000 acres for their use, are the red deer, found in few other districts in these islands, and the roe deer, and Hamilton park has one of the three herds of the wild cattle extant in Great Britain. One of the attractions of Scotland lies in the abundance of salmon and trout, both found in the majority of its rivers and lochs. Amongst birds is the grouse and the scarce capercaillie, the gamets of the Bass Rock and some few other island rocks.

RAILWAYS AND CANALS.—The railway system of the country originated with the means of communication with England, from which country two main lines enter Scotland, one (the Caledonian) at Greta, close to the head of the Solway Firth, whence it proceeds north to Carlstairs, and, dividing, goes east to Edinburgh and west to Glasgow, with numerous cross branches, including one to Ayr, one to Peebles, another through Paisley to Greenock and Wemyss Bay, and one between Edinburgh and Glasgow, and carrying its main line via Stirling and Perth on to Aberdeen, and a branch westward to Oban. The other line from England (the North British) enters at Berwick-upon-Tweed, at the eastern extremity of the border, runs round the coast by Dunbar, and by another branch, via St. Boswells Junction, through Melrose and Galashiels, to Dalkeith and Edinburgh, and thence across the Forth Bridge to Perth and through Fifeshire ; also from Edinburgh via Falkirk to Glasgow, Airdrie, Hamilton, and Dumbarton. From Polmont Junction tion on the main line is a branch to Stirling and Aberfoyle. From Perth starts the Highland railway, running up north to Inverness, Dingwall (from whence a branch runs to Stromie Ferry and Lochalsh), Tain, Thurso and Wick. From Inverness is a branch through Nairn and Elgin to Keith and Buckle. The Great North of Scotland occupies the ground north-west of Aberdeen to Banff, Elgin, Frazerburgh, Peterhead, and Port Errol, and up the valley of the Dee to Ballater, the station for Balmoral. The West Highland (the most recent of the lines) runs from Helensburgh, west of Loch Lomond to Tyndrum, Loch Rannoch and Fort William. The Glasgow and South Western Railway, leaving Greta, runs via Dumfries (where a line branches to Castle Douglas, Kirkcubright, and Newtown Stewart), Thornhill, Cumnock and Kilmarnock to Glasgow, and has branches to Paisley, Greenock, Ardrossan and Ayr. The Portpatrick and Wigtonshire Joint railway starts from Castle Douglas, and with a terminus at Portpatrick, having branches at Newton Stewart for Wnithorn, and one from Dunragit to Girvan.

CANALS.—The principal are the Caledonian Canal, along the Glen Albion, from Fort William to Inverness; the Crinan, across the upper part of Cantyre, both of these being used for steam traffic; the Forth and Clyde Canal, from Bowling, on the Clyde, to Grangemouth on the Forth, following very much the line of the Roman wall, and the Union Canal, which, leaving the Forth and Clyde at Larbert, connects it with Edinburgh, and the Monkland Canal, which leaving Port Dundas, the Glasgow terminus of the Forth and Clyde, extends to Airdrie, Gartsherrie &c.

The total quantity of fish of all kinds, except shell-fish, landed in 1898 was: on East Coast, 4,520,070 cwts.; in Orkney and Shetland, 937,065 cwts.; and on West Coast, 1,100,633 cwts.; or a grand total of 6,557,768 cwts. valued at £1,879,866.

Export of herrings to the Continent in 1898 was 1,432,542 barrels; quantity of herrings cured in 1898 was 1,805,347 barrels; the number of barrels of herrings branded with the official Crown Brand was in 1898 631,589.

MINERALS RAISED.

The principal are coal, shale, iron ore and fire clay, the quantities produced in 1898 and values being as follows:—Coal, 30,237,295 tons; value, £9,207,199. Oilshale, 2,133,403 tons; value, £533,352. Iron ore, 824,219 tons; value, £347,010. Fire clay, 801,702 tons; value, £125,286. Igneous rocks other than granite, 747,177 tons; value, £133,206. Granite, 440,513 tons; value, £206,993. Limestone, 610,211 tons; value, £113,397. Sandstone, 1,697,689 tons; value, £460,271. The total value of all minerals raised in 1898 was £33,061,399.

MANUFACTURES.

The leading staples are iron, jute, linen, woollen goods and spirits, with some sugar refineries. The total value of imports for 1898 was £34,000,038, and of exports £24,546,373, of which the value of produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom was £23,643,143.

SHIPPING.

Vessels entered inwards with cargoes at the several ports of Scotland in 1898 were—Steamers, 4,293; tonnage, 3,457,429. Sailing vessels, 1,861; tonnage, 556,164. Total, 6,154 vessels, of an aggregate tonnage of 4,013,593. Clearances for the same period—Steamers, 6,744; tonnage, 5,107,189. Sailing vessels, 2,449; tonnage, 536,959. Total, 9,193 vessels, of an aggregate tonnage of 5,644,148.

THE ROYAL COMPANY OF ARCHERS OF SCOTLAND.

(The Queen's Body Guard for Scotland.)

This Corps was embodied by an Act of the Scottish Privy Council, 1677, under the name of the "King's Company of Archers," with the right to name their own officers, and enjoy all rights and privileges by the presentation of a pair (3) of barbed arrows yearly. Their Captain-General received from George IV. (1822) a Gold Stick, with precedence next to the Gold Stick of England, and William IV. added two Silver Sticks, and a Pair of Colours. They number about 160, and wear a state uniform of green and gold.

ABERDEENSHIRE.

THIS important county is situated in the north-east part of Scotland, and is bounded on the north and east by the North Sea; on the south by the counties of Kincardine, Forfar and Perth, the Grampian Hills separating it from the two latter, and on the West by Inverness-shire and Banffshire. In form it approaches to that of an oval, the length of which, from north-east to south-west, is about eighty-five miles, and its extreme breadth about forty, and comprises 1,970 square miles. The coast line, which is indented by numerous bays and creeks, is about 60 miles in length. The county ranks as sixth in size and fourth in population. In 1881 it contained a population of 267,990, and in 1891, 281,332 (males, 133,861, females, 147,471), showing an increase in the ten years of 13,342. Inhabited houses in 1891 were 56,683.

The total acreage (land and water) of the county is 1,268,705 acres, of which in 1898, 99,827 were under green crops, and 215,588 under corn crops; the principal crops being hay 31,079 acres; turnips 89,854; potatoes 7,073; oats 181,546; barley 29,353; beans 463; the permanent pasturage 32,102 acres; mountains and heath used for grazing 175,322; woods 100,990; plantations (planted 1881 to 1895), 986 acres; of live stock in the same year there were in the county 23,333 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 7,419 unbroke horses; 45,898 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; 137,404 other cattle; 70,607 ewes kept for breeding; 152,883 other sheep; 1,638 sows kept for breeding; 9,779 other pigs, and there is plenty of game and deer.

Climate and Natural Features:—Towards the sea the land is fertile and comparatively level; but a great proportion of the county lies amidst the wilderness of the central Highlands. Turnips succeed better in this county than in any other in Scotland. The climate is cold, yet it is less liable to extreme low temperatures than other districts lying further south and inland.

The county is divided into five districts, viz:—Mar, Garioch, Strathgogie, Fromartine and Buchan. Mar lies in the south-west and south portion of the county along the river Dee and south of the Don; Garioch north of the Don and west of Kintore; Strathgogie is on the north-west of Garioch and its southern point touching the north boundary of Mar; Fromartine lies to the east of Garioch and south of the Ythan; Buchan occupying the north-east portion of the county north of the Ythan and east of the Devenon and upper part of Strathgogie. The appearance of the upper part of the district of Mar is wild, rugged and mountainous. Towards the east and north-east the surface becomes more level, but is in many places moorish and barren; but the woods, mostly fir, are extensive, producing fine timber. The rivers Don and Dee have both their sources in this quarter. Balmoral, the Highland residence of Her Majesty the Queen, and Abergele, the seat of His R. H. the Prince of Wales, are in this district. From the top of Craighendoch there is, perhaps, one of the most grand and picturesque views in Scotland. At the termination of a deep glen in Strathdee is the pass of Ballater, which forms the eastern entrance into the Grampian mountains. The district of Buchan is not so hilly, lying mostly on the east and north coast, but being almost destitute of wood its appearance is bleak and naked; from the quantities, however, of large timber found in many mosses, no doubt can exist of its having once been well wooded. Anciently this extensive domain was the property of the Earls of Buchan, on whose attainder, in 1320, King Robert Bruce divided the land among his adherents. Subsequently the title was revived in the Erskins family, but without a restoration of the lands, and the present earl has no property in this quarter. The districts of Strathgogie, Garioch, and Fromartine are generally well cultivated.

Inhabitants.—There is a characteristic difference to be observed in the natives of Aberdeenshire from those of any other county in Scotland. They are in general regarded as an active, vigorous and enterprising race; and when they emigrate they seldom fail to succeed. The dialect of the inhabitants, too, is peculiar from those of the South of Scotland; and to a stranger's ear appears to be attended with a slow pronunciation and broad accent. On the sea coasts they have a distinct difference of physiognomical appearance from other inhabitants of this county and attest by this, as well as by their speech, that they are descended from a race of people which originally came from the northern regions of Europe, and fixed themselves in this part of Scotland.

Rivers, Mountains &c.—The principal rivers of Aberdeenshire are the Dee, the Don, the Ythan, the Ugie, and the Deveron. These rivers are of great value, from the immense quantity and fineness of the salmon they produce; but are too rapid to admit of navigation to any great extent. The river Ythan deserves particular mention on account of the pearl fishery, formerly carried on in it with great success. On the Don are the ruins of Kildrumny Castle, an ancient seat of the Earls of Mar. The Dee runs through the vale of Strathdee, surrounded by lofty mountains. At the top of the vale of Braemar, a short way above Mar Lodge, is the noted waterfall called the Linn of Dee. In the valley of Glenmuick there is likewise another picturesque cascade, and a little below, on the southern banks of the Dee, most romantically situated, are Pannaich Wells, much frequented in summer. On the sea shore are several remarkable caves, curious pectorations in the rocks, and echoes which reverberate sounds with wonderful distinctness. On the coast, to the south of Peterhead, is a remarkable natural feature, called the Bullers of Buchan. It is a large oval cavity, in depth about one hundred feet, formed by the steep rocks. A natural arch opens into the sea at the eastern end, into which boats are sometimes drawn and dashed to pieces. The mountains of greatest altitude and importance in Aberdeenshire are—Ben Macdui, 4,296 feet; Braeriach, 4,248; Cairntoul, 4,241; Cairngorm, 4,000; Ben-a-Bourd, 3,924; Ben Avon, 3,843; Lochnagar, 3,786; Morven, 2,954; Buck of Cabrach, 2,368; Tap o' Noth, 1,852; and Benachie, 1,696. There are no lochs of any size in this county.

Railways.—Lines in this county belong to the Great North of Scotland system, and radiate from Aberdeen city, the southern branch running west-by-south along the Deeside to Banchory, Aboyne and Ballater next the main line, north-west to Huntly, Keith and Elgin, throwing off a branch at Dyce Junction direct north to Fraserburgh, with a line from it at Maud Junction east to Peterhead, another branch from Kintore westerly to Alford; one at Inverurie north-by-east to Old Meldrum, and one at Inveramsay north-by-west to Turriff and Banff. A branch was opened in 1897 from Ellom, on the Aberdeen and Fraserburgh section, to Boddam.

Commerce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—The making of linen and sail-cloth has been successfully introduced in several parts, the other branches being the manufacture of flax, cotton & woollens, paper and envelope making, tanning, distilling, and the curing of fish and provisions. Shipbuilding, both wood and iron, is carried on at Aberdeen, Peterhead, and Fraserburgh. The sea coast abounds in fish of great variety and richness, and the river and sea fishing, together, form a great source of wealth to the inhabitants. The herring fishery is prosecuted on a very extensive scale at Peterhead and Fraserburgh, the harbours of these places during the fishing season being crowded with boats, which has the effect of considerably augmenting the population; of recent years the herring fishery has also been largely pursued at Aberdeen. The fishery industry employs at the three principal ports of Aberdeen, Peterhead and Fraserburgh, of 1st, 2nd and 3rd class boats, 700, equal 17,693 tons; 781, equal 3,531 tons and 23, equal 47 tons. The number of men and boys employed, resident within the limits of the ports, were:—Aberdeen, 1,999; Fraserburgh, 1,950; Peterhead, 982. The number of steam and sailing vessels registered as belonging to the port of Aberdeen, Dec. 31, 1898, was 201, of 96,882 tonnage. Peterhead is also engaged in whale and seal fishing, the former being carried on in summer off the north-east of Greenland and in Davis Straits. Granite—green, blue, and red—is a valuable and extensive production of this county, and presents an article of considerable traffic, many thousand tons being conveyed to London and other distant parts, for pavio and building purposes, and for monuments, tombs, statues &c.; it is chiefly found in the neighbourhoods of Aberdeen, Peterhead, New Pittligo, and Monymusk. During the year 1897, 306,273 tons were raised; in the same period, 27,041 tons of gravel and sand and 9,712 tons of sandstone were obtained. Slate is also quarried from the Fouldland Hills, Lusch. Other minerals are found in different parts of Aberdeenshire, and are eminently worthy of notice. In the parish of Old Machar was discovered a valuable mine of manganese; Leslie produces amianthus, made by the peasants into snuff boxes and ornaments; plumbago has been found on the banks of the Deveron; and near Peterhead, onyx pebbles are to be met with. The largest rock crystal ever found in Scotland was discovered upon the estate of Invercauld in this county; its size was nearly that of a child's body at the age of four years. On the same estate have also been obtained amethysts and aquamarines, equal in colour and hardness to those so eagerly sought after in the East. Topazes of great value, provincially called Cairngorm stones, are also to be met with in Aberdeenshire. Talc, mica, asbestos, and amianthus, commonly called mountain cork, and mountain leather, are found in several of the hills. At Craig, in the district of Strathgogie, there is a fine flaxen asbestos, both green and white. A great proportion of the landholders reside on their estates, and planting, the introduction of superior breeds of cattle, and better modes of agriculture, have for some time engaged attention.

Divisions, Representation &c.—This county contains eighty-three parishes and three royal burghs—Aberdeen, Kintore, and Inverurie. The contributory boroughs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in Parliament) belonging to this county are Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead. The city of Aberdeen returns two members to Parliament and the county also sends two members, one respectively for the East and Western divisions. The parliamentary constituency of the Eastern Division of the county for 1898 numbered 12,142, that of the Western Division being 10,431. The valuation of the county was, in 1897-8, £1,664,197.

ABERDEEN,

AND THE PARISH OF OLD MACHAR, WITH CULTS, TARRY AND WOODSIDE.

ABERDEEN, the capital of the county to which it gives name, is the chief seaport in the north of Scotland, and the fourth Scottish town in population, industry and wealth. It is 117 miles N.E. from Edinburgh and 542 from London; and by means of its rail communication it possesses easy access to any part of the United Kingdom. Regular communication is maintained with London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Newcastle, Hull, Glasgow, the Moray Firth, and the Orkneys and the Shetlands, by steam packets, a species of conveyance which has done more to lay open the north-east shore of Scotland to improvements from the south than any other means. In addition to the above, there exists the means of rapid transit by the Caledonian railway and other lines to all parts south of Aberdeen; and access is given to the north by the Great North of Scotland and the Highland railways, to Wick and Thurso, and the Dingwall and Skye railway to Strone Ferry, in Ross-shire. The Deeside line to Banchory was opened in 1853, and is now extended to Ballater, coaches running in connection with the trains past the Royal residences of Abergeldie and Balmoral to Braemar. Of other conveyances the Directory furnishes full information. Aberdeen is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been known to the Romans by the name of "Devanah." It is probably among the earliest of the burghs in Scotland found entitled to any royal marks of distinction. As far back as 1153 it seems to have been known to the Normans, and in Macpherson's treatise on commerce it is observed that in the year 1179, Estyn, one of the joint kings of that country, landed and pillaged the town in the course of a piratical cruise along the British coast. In early times Aberdeen was frequently visited by royalty; and it appears that King William, surnamed the Lion, had an occasional residence here, situated at the lower side of the town, and near the east end of the Green. This edifice was afterwards bestowed on the monks of the Holy Trinity, who were about that time introduced into Scotland. The first charter obtained by Aberdeen is supposed to have been granted about 1179, by William the Lion; it was dated at Perth, and is still extant. It confirmed to the burgesses the power of enjoying their trade of merchandise as freely, quietly, fully and honourably as their ancestors did in the time of David, his grandfather. This King afterwards granted two other charters: both of these, which were dated at Aberdeen, are still in a good state of preservation, and have the great seal of Scotland, in green wax, appended to each. The city received many subsequent royal charters, including the great charter of Charles I. dated at Ostlands, in 1638, by which all previous charters are confirmed. This charter was subsequently ratified by Parliament. The burgh records are the oldest of any Scottish burgh; they begin in 1398, and are complete to the present time, with only a short break from 1413 to 1433.

The burgh constitution of Aberdeen has undergone various alterations since its first establishment. The original magistracy consisted of an alderman, four bailies and a common council, chosen by the Merchant Guild; subsequently this arrangement gave way before the gradual and perfect introduction of a self-selecting system. The council now consists of a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a master of shore works, a master of kirk and bridge works, a master of mortification, a master of Guild Brethren Hospital and nineteen councillors. By the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1871," the whole powers and authorities of the former Commissioners of Police were transferred to the Town Council, and the business of the Police department is managed by separate committees. By the same Act the undertaking of the former Gas Light Company was also transferred to the Town Council. The boundaries of the municipality were largely extended in 1883 and legislative sanction given to a large scheme of civic improvements, including the formation of an access to the Rosemount suburb. In 1891 a further "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act" was passed, by which the boundaries were greatly enlarged, the adjoining burghs of Woodside and Old Aberdeen, and the fishing village of Torry on the other side of the Dee being now included within the municipal area. The circuit court of justiciary for the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine is held in Aberdeen. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday; and the small debt court on Thursday, during the legal sessions. The city returns two members to Parliament, one for the Northern and the other for the Southern Division. The parliamentary constituency for 1898 was—Northern Division, 9,786; Southern Division, 10,891. Aberdeen confers the title of earl on a branch of the noble family of Gordon, which was distinguished for its active loyalty to the crown in the 17th century.

The city was burned by Edward III. in 1336, but it was soon rebuilt and extended, and called New Aberdeen. In 1497 a block-house was built at the harbour mouth, as a protection against the English. During the religious struggles in the 17th century between the Royalists and Covenanters, the city was plundered by both parties. In 1715 Earl Marischal proclaimed the Pretender at Aberdeen, and in 1745 the Duke of Cumberland resided a short time in the city. Her present Majesty Queen Victoria has visited Aberdeen on more than one occasion.

The city, pleasantly seated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea, is an elegant and well-built town, and has been called "The Granite City," on account of its native light-grey granite being the material chiefly employed in building; the streets, which are spacious and uniform, are also paved with granite, well-lighted with gas, and the city is plentifully supplied with water from the Dee at Invercarnie, 21 miles above the city, to which it is conveyed by gravitation, the higher parts being served from the pumping station at Cults; the present supply is 6,250,000 gallons daily, and the total cost has been £303,610; both the gas and water supply are under the control of the corporation.

Union street, running to the west, is particularly handsome, and about the middle of this fine street a granite bridge, designed by Telford, of one arch of 150 feet span, is thrown across a ravine through which runs a brook called the Deoburo, now arched over. Besides Union street there are three other fine streets, namely, King street, Market street and George street, and for some time past the city has been extending in every direction, particularly to the west and north-west. An arched promenade with granite balustrade, facing the Terrace Gardens, was constructed in Union Terrace. The Joint Railway station (for the Great North of Scotland, Caledonian and Deeside railways), is a large building in Guild street, with a segmental arched iron and glass roof; and was designed by Mr. Smith, the city architect. In Castle street stands a granite statue of George, 5th and last Duke of Gordon G.C.B. d. 28 May, 1836. At the corner of Union terrace, near Union Street bridge, is a bronze statue of H.R.H. Prince Consort, by Marochetti, placed on a pedestal of polished Peterhead granite. Further along Union terrace, and in an angle formed by its junction with the Rosemount viaduct, stands a colossal statue of Wallace, in bronze, by W. G. Stevenson A.R.S.A.; this is 16 feet in height, and was erected by means of a bequest of £3,000, left by Mr. John Steel, of Leamburgh, and unveiled on the 29th of June, 1883, by the Marquess of Lorne. A bronze statue of Major-Gen. Charles G. Gordon C.B. killed at Khartoum, 26 Jan. 1885, executed by the late T. Stuart Burnett A.R.S.A. and cast in Sir John Steel's foundry, Edinburgh, stands in the square in Schoolhill, in front of Robert Gordon's College; this monument, which was subscribed for principally by members of the clan Gordon, stands 9 feet 6 inches in height, and is placed on a granite pedestal 9 feet high; it was unveiled by the Marquess of Huntly, as head of the clan, on the 16th June, 1888. A fine bronze statue of H.M. the Queen, on a Peterhead and Aberdeen granite pedestal, by Mr. C. B. Birch A.R.A. stands in Union street, immediately opposite Market street, on the site of a former marble statue, executed by the late Alexander Brodie, of Aberdeen, and now in the Town House, where is also a marble statue of Provost James Baikie, by Sir John Steel, and a bust of John Phillip, the painter, an Aberdonian, by his friend and fellow townsman, the late William Brodie R.S.A. A fine bronze statue of Robert Burns, executed by H. Bainsmith, London, stands in the centre of Union terrace.

The Municipal and Conyly Buildings and Court House, in Castle street and Union street, form a magnificent structure, comprising all the offices required for municipal purposes, as well as a noble hall and Court House. The Council Chamber has a fine oak roof adorned with the armorial bearings of eminent Aberdonians; on the walls are portraits of the late Prince Consort, by John Phillip, and of various ex-Provosts, by Pickersgill R.A. and Sir George Reid P.R.S.A. besides other works of art; above the mantel piece in the Committee room is a mirror in a panel of carved oak with the arms of the town above, which stood in the old Council Chamber. The Town Clerk's room, as also that of his assistants, contain a number of old city trophies; here is also an ancient coat of mail, said to have been worn by Robert Davidson, Provost of the city, at the battle of Harlaw, 24 July, 1411, and the axe of the machine known as "The Maiden," used towards the close of the 16th century for the decapitation of criminals. The Court House has a lofty entrance hall, with a groined freestone roof. The great hall is frequently used for fashionable assemblies, art exhibitions and the like. On the walls are portraits of Queen Victoria, Queen Anne, the Premier Earl of Aberdeen, and George, last Duke of Gordon. At its east end is a hall for the meetings of the County Council. The Court-room has a small gallery, and will seat 360. A passage to the right leads to the corridor of the eastward entrance to the building, immediately under the old foolbooth tower, built during the first quarter of the 17th century. The Town Council purchased the old Prison in Lodge walk, immediately adjoining the present buildings, on a site of which Police offices (including Court and Barrack accommodation) were erected from the plans of Mr. John Rust, city architect, at a cost of £15,000. The Advocates' Hall, in Broad street, is connected with the Court House Buildings. The Society of Advocates (as the local legal practitioners are called) was elected into a corporate body in 1774, and had their privileges confirmed in more ample terms in 1799 and in 1862. A library, principally on law subjects, was established in 1786; it contains over 30,000 volumes. The number of members belonging to this institution is about 120.

The offices of the Aberdeen Parish Council, at 20 Union terrace, erected at a cost, including fittings, of £9,000, are of grey granite, in the style of the Italian Renaissance.

The Free Press Building, in Union street, is a structure of grey granite in the Renaissance style, from designs by Messrs. Billis and Wilson, of Aberdeen. The Commercial Bank, also in Union street, is a building of granite in the Domestic Gothic style, from designs by Mr. Sydney Mitchell, architect, of Edinburgh. The Post Office, at the foot of Market street, erected in 1876 in place of the preceding office, built in 1846, is of white Kemnay granite, in the Renaissance style, from the designs of Mr. R. Matheson, architect, and consists of a basement, partly underground, and two storeys above the street level.

The Music Hall Buildings, Union street, the property of the Aberdeen Music Hall Company Limited, formerly the County Buildings, have a portico of six columns of the Ionic order, thirty feet in height; it includes a ball room, and rooms known as the Square Room and Round Room, which are generally used for meetings and lectures. The Music Hall, opened 14th September, 1859, is furnished with an admirable organ, and will seat about 3,000 people.

The Corn Exchange, in Hadden street, erected in 1854, at a cost of about £1,000, is the property of a joint-stock company, and chiefly used as a public news room; it is furnished with the leading newspapers and magazines of the kingdom. The Masonic Hall, in Exchange street, was erected in 1871-2, from designs by Mr. James Mathews, architect, at a cost of £2,500, the foundation stone being laid on the 27th of Sept. 1871; the building, excepting three shops on the ground floor, is used exclusively by the Masonic Lodges in Aberdeen (of which there are ten), and embraces a hall 50 feet by 32 feet, and 20 feet high with a gallery at one end. The Market Cross, near the eastern extremity of Castle street, is of hexagonal form, with a pillar rising from the centre; in a cornice around the upper part of the structure are twelve compartments containing figures, cut in relief; ten of these are portraits of Scottish monarchs, the last of the series being James VII. in whose reign (1689) the edifice was completed; this cross stood originally at the west end of the square in the centre of a raised pavement called the Plainstanes, but was removed in 1842 to its present position. The Market House, known as the New Market, stands in Market street, was erected by a joint-stock company, and opened in 1842, but having been destroyed by fire in 1882, was rebuilt as at present: it contains two floors and has a continuous gallery all round and several refrigerating chambers. In the west end of the market is a fountain of polished Peterhead granite. The Theatre, in Guild street, has seats for 1,670 persons. St. Katharine's Hall, Shiprow, will seat 800 persons, and contains other rooms, a refreshment bar and dining, chess and billiard rooms. The Barracks, on Castle hill, are fitted up for 240 men, but are capable of containing double this number, and there are other barracks in King street, for 600 men. Aberdeen is the depot of the Gordon Highlanders Regimental district (No. 75), to which the local militia and volunteers are attached; there is an excellent hospital for the depot on an adjoining eminence.

The port of Aberdeen is admirably adapted for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of the trade with America; it was opened to the East India trade and appointed a port for warehousing tobacco in 1839. The limits of the port were defined and legal quays appointed in 1850. Early in the 17th century a number of ships of small tonnage belonged to the port, and a considerable import and export trade was carried on with various parts of the continent, as well as coast trading. The shipping appears to have considerably decayed during the civil wars and visitations of the plague, and no revival took place for many years. In 1656 there were only 9 vessels of the aggregate tonnage of 440. In 1692 all the shipping was two galliots of 30 tons each. In 1788 the number of ships registered was 169, and the aggregate tonnage, 11,820; in 1872, 236 vessels; tonnage, 101,188; in 1881, 900; tonnage, 103,471. The total number of vessels entered and cleared for British ports in the year 1881 was 3,020; tonnage, 705,860. In 1898 the foreign trade inwards was 357 ships of 147,899 tons, of which 280, 112,817 tons, were steamers; outwards, 135 ships of 45,867 tons, including 82 of 24,548 tons, steamers. In the coasting trade there were 3,030 ships, inwards of 788,570 tons and outwards, 3,214 of 883,395 tons. The vessels registered under the Merchant Shipping Act were 201, 96,682 tonnage. The fame of the "clipper bow" so justly due to the ship builders here, especially to the late Mr. William Hall, who successfully established his claim to the invention, has spread the fame of Aberdeen ship building to all quarters of the world. In 1898 there were launched 22 vessels with a gross tonnage of 1,459; about the usual number of vessels was on hand. The number of fishing boats registered in 1898 as employed was 434, of which 71 were steamers under the "Merchant Shippers' Act," requiring 1,592 men and boys to work them. The harbour revenue for the year 1894 was £74,531, of which £5,024 was derived from the salmon fishings; in 1898, £66,958, of which £4,828 was derived from the salmon fishings; in 1895 the schedule of rates was revised and considerably reduced. The salmon fishings on the Dee and Don are, as they have for a long time been, an important branch of industry. The customs receipts for the year 1898 amounted to £78,246; value of imports, £907,596; value of exports £133,416. Since the year 1810, when the principal improvement in the harbour commenced, there have been expended upon it vast sums. A pier was constructed to the north of the harbour entrance (formed by the river Dee joining the sea), and now extends 2,500 feet seaward. A wet dock of 29 acres, and with 6,000 feet of quays, was completed in 1848, and called the "Victoria Dock," in honour of Her Majesty's visit to the city in that year. The diversion of the river and the south breakwater were later undertakings. The first turf removed for the diversion of the river was cut by Lord Provost Leslie, on the 22nd of December, 1869. The new course is about a mile in length, and forms a large arc of a circle, from the suspension bridge to about opposite Marshal street, and from that point to Torry, where it joins the harbour entrance. The bottom of the new channel is 170 feet wide. The breakwater, the entire length of which is 1,050 feet, is carried out to a depth of water of 50 feet at high tide. Two quays have since been constructed, named respectively after two provosts—Mr. George Jamieson and Mr. James Mathews; and a spacious graving dock was opened in June, 1885, in what was the old bed of the river Dee, now known as the Albert basin; the total length of the dock being 524 feet, and it is 48 feet wide at the floor, the width gradually widening till it reaches 74 feet at the cope; the depth on the sill is 20 feet; this dock is furnished with hydraulic machinery, and its total cost was about £50,000. Within the past few years Aberdeen has become a great centre for trawling. At present close on 100 steam vessels prosecute the industry from the port. The trawling vessels discharge their cargoes in the Albert basin, where extensive quay space has been provided, and an excellently appointed fish market erected, at a cost of several thousand pounds. Another feature in the trade of the port is the importation of foreign cattle, for which the Harbour Commissioners have provided lairage accommodation and sale ring. The harbour office, on Regent quay, which is surmounted by a clock tower, was erected about 1885, from a design by Messrs. Mathews and Mackenzie, architects, of Aberdeen.

Aberdeen has been the seat of manufactures from a very early period. We find Provost Alexander Jaffray, with his co-adjutors, establishing a woollen manufactory in 1636, in the correction wynd, under a patent of Charles I. for the manufacture of "broad cloth, kerseys, serges and other coarse cloths." The manufacture of these and of stockings had been cultivated so successfully and extensively for some time, that Sir Patrick Drummond, conservator of Holland, remarked that "Scotland was more obliged to the town of Aberdeen for returns of money on its export trade than all other towns in Scotland." Messrs. Alexander Hadden and Sons have three establishments—in the Green, at Garlogie Mills and at Gordon's Mills; their chief products are carpets, tweeds, bosiers, worsted and woollen yarns. In addition to the material manufactured on the premises, they give employment to a number of women over the country by giving out worsted to be knitted into hose. Messrs. J. & J. Crombie Limited, of Grandholm Mills, are also large manufacturers. The manufacture of wineys seems to have originated with the late firm of Messrs. John Barker and Sons, of Gordon's Mills; it is now successfully carried on by many firms in Aberdeen. The demand still continues to expand, the quality of the Aberdeen fabrica being found very superior. Jute spinning is also carried on by a limited liability company. The only cotton spinning establishment now in Aberdeen is that of Banne Mill, belonging to Messrs. Robinson, Crum and Co. Limited. The manufacture of combs was introduced about the year 1830, by Messrs. Stewart and Rowell, and has been conducted on a very extensive scale since that period, first by the original firm, and latterly by Messrs. S. R. Stewart and Co. but now carried on by the Aberdeen Comb Works Co. Limited. Among other firms engaged in the manufacture of preserved provisions are Messrs. John Moir and Son Limited; Marshall and Co. of Torry; C. and E. Morin, Rosemont and W. Bruce, Links street; all manner of fish, flesh, soups, vegetables, fruits &c. are preserved in tin cases of all sizes, and every variety of preparation. Messrs. Mitchell and Mull Limited, biscuit manufacturers to the Queen, have an extensive factory here. The extensive paper works at Stoneywood, carried on by Messrs. Alex. Pirie and Sons Limited, were established nearly 125 years ago, and they are the largest manufacturers in Scotland. Messrs. C. Davidson and Sons Limited manufacture very extensively wrapping and packing papers of all kinds; they have also a patent for making paper bags, and they print and lithograph wrappers and paper bags and also produce roofing and foundation felt. There is also a large paper mill at Culter, belonging to a limited liability company, and The Donside Paper Co. Limited, at Woodside. There are several large horticultural builders in Aberdeen; among the most prominent may be mentioned Messrs. J. Garvie and Sons; D. Macandrew and Co. and McRobbie and Milne; the former have erected hot-houses for Her Majesty at Balmoral, and are also largely engaged in the manufacturing of joinery and cabinet work. The chemical works at Sandilands, near the Links, cover several acres of ground, and were begun by Messrs. John Miller and Co. in 1848, for the purpose of working up the Gas Company's liquid products into naphtha, creosote oil, asphalt, sulphate of ammonia, &c. But several branches have been added since, the most important of which are the manufacture of artificial manures, sulphuric acid, &c. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in Aberdeen by the successors of John Begg, of the famed Loch-nagar Distillery, and the Dailnaine-Talisker Distilleries Limited.

The granite trade may be said to be indigenous to Aberdeen. The greater part of the county, and portions of the adjoining districts, are composed of igneous rock of all varieties, the quarrying of which commenced about 250 years ago, but made little progress till the year 1741, when a disastrous fire occurring in Aberdeen, destroyed a large number of the wooden houses of which the town was chiefly composed. An act of the magistrates and council was then passed ordaining the outside walls of dwelling houses to be built of stone or brick. About 1764 the streets of London began to be paved with Aberdeen granite; but it was not till 1795 that larger blocks were required, and machinery began to be applied. Rubislaw Quarries then supplied stones for the Government docks; and Dancing Cairn, which began to be wrought about this time, applied granite for the Union Bridge and the new street extension of the city. Subsequently the demand has considerably increased, as granite is used extensively in the construction of bridges, docks and other public works. The dockyards of Portsmouth and Sheerness, the docks of many ports along the east coast, including those of Newcastle, Hull and Leith, as well as London Bridge, were all formed of Aberdeen granite, and the piers of the Forth Bridge were also made of granite from the quarries belonging to Mr. John Pyfe. There are over 20 quarries in operation in the district, yielding granite of various colour and quality. The quantity of stone quarried annually is very large: one quarry alone, Rubislaw, yielding about 50,000 tons of saleable material. A considerable export trade is carried on. Swedish and other foreign granites are beginning to be largely imported for the purpose of being polished here. The trade is estimated to be increasing at the rate of about 500 tons annually. The total output of granite in the county during the year 1897 was 306,273 tons, valued at £147,832. The facilities afforded by the railways in lessening the expense of carriage from the various quarries have tended to increase the demand. Granite polishing has now acquired large dimensions here; about 50 years ago the late Mr. Macdonald was the first to apply machinery to the cutting and polishing of granite. The firm of Messrs. Alexander Macdonald and Co. Limited had the honour to supply the enormous granite sarcophagus, 30 tons in weight, now containing the remains of H.R.H. the Prince Consort, in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore, Windsor, besides a smaller one for her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. The same firm also manufactured the massive granite sarcophagus in which the remains of Napoleon III. are entombed, and which was presented to the Empress Eugenie by Her Majesty the Queen, and a similar tomb also by Messrs. Macdonald and Co. was made to the order of the Empress Eugenie for the remains of the late Prince Imperial. Numerous other firms also do a considerable business. From 10,000 to 12,000 tons of granite are used annually for polishing purposes at the various works in Aberdeen, consisting not only of the native local rock, but also of granites from the West of Scotland, from Ireland, and from various parts of Germany and Sweden. The demand for polished granite increases every year, and orders for architectural, general and monumental purposes are sent from all parts of the world to the Granite City.

There are three joint stock companies for the manufacture and sale of agricultural materials—the Commercial, the Lime, and the Northern Agricultural—each of them having steam mills for pulverising bones and carrying on the manufacture of oilcake, linseed oil, rape oil &c. Messrs. Ben Reid and Co. have a large establishment for the manufacture of agricultural implements and Messrs. William Reid and Leys carry on an extensive business in the manufacture of agricultural implements at Killybrewster. There are also brick and tile manufacturing companies, several soap and candle manufactories, coach building works, and many other large establishments; iron and metal works further employ a large number of skilled workmen, and there are engineering establishments and foundries and other works connected with shipping, sail and rope works, and boiler factories. Apart from the import of foreign timber, a large business is done in home grown wood from the upper districts of Aberdeenshire. Deeside fir has been a staple article in Aberdeen from time immemorial.

The principal hotels include the Imperial, adjacent to the railway station; the Palace, also adjoining the railway station and centrally and conveniently situated, and commanding a fine view of Union street; the Grand, adjoining Union bridge and the railway station; the Douglas, in Market street, and Forsyth's, in Union street, which is a temperance hotel. There are besides many excellent inns.

The earliest banking company formed in Aberdeen was started in 1752. In 1766 the "Aberdeen Banking Company" was originated, and long enjoyed almost a monopoly of the banking business of the north, but about 1849 was merged in the "Union Bank of Scotland." Besides representatives of most of the Edinburgh and Glasgow banks, there are in Aberdeen two thriving native banks—the Town and County Bank Limited, in St. Nicholas' street, established in 1825, having 62 branches, and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, in King street, established in 1836, with 67 branches; both have been incorporated by Act of Parliament. The Aberdeen Savings Bank was established in 1815, and its funds now exceed £1,000,000. Aberdeen is the head station of two prosperous insurance companies, namely, the Northern, established in 1836, and the Scottish Employers' Liability and General Assurance Co. Limited. The Northern Assurance Company, with an annual revenue of more than £1,000,000, has offices, erected in 1835 at a cost of £20,000, in Union street, built entirely of light grey granite in the Italian Renaissance style, from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, of Aberdeen. The head offices of the Scottish Live Stock Co. Limited; the Northern Plate Glass Co. Limited and the City Accident and General Insurance Co. Limited, are also in this city.

There are seven incorporated trades:—1, the Hammermen, incorporated September, 1519; 2, the Bakers, recognised as a company as early as the year 1398; 3, the Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause on the 5th of August, 1527; 4, the Tailors, who were recognised in a corporate capacity about the year 1511; 5, the Shoemakers, acknowledged as a corporate body in the years 1484 and 1520; 6, the Weavers, the deacons of this corporation were approved by the council and sworn into office in the year 1449; and 7, the Fleshers or Butchers; these originally dealt in fish as well as flesh, but were prohibited in the year 1518 from practising more trades than one; they received a seal of cause in 1534. The several incorporations hold their meetings in Trinity Hall, in Union street, at the southeast corner of Union bridge, a building of rather florid architecture, erected in 1846-7, from designs by the late Mr. John Smith, architect. The affairs of each corporation are under the direction of a deacon and box-master, who are chosen annually, a convener, master of hospital, and convener court governing the joint affairs of the seven corporations. The Rev. Dr. Wm. Guild, one of the towns ministers, and afterwards principal of King's College, founded in 1632 a Trade's Hospital for the benefit of indigent brethren, assigning to the incorporation for that purpose the monastery and other property that formerly belonged to the monks of the Holy Trinity. Among the several clubs existing in this city the "Royal Northern Club," founded in 1854, has now (1899) 260 members; there is also the "University Club;" the Royal Northern, which is the county club of the district, has been enlarged. The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in April, 1884. The Public Library, removed in 1892 to a new building on the Rosemount Viaduct, erected at a cost of about £12,000, was opened July 32th, 1892; the reading room is supplied with a large and varied stock of newspapers and magazines; the lending department has about 27,000 volumes, and in 1898 circulated over 203,000 volumes. The Reference Department contains over 32,000 volumes, the use of which in the library is free to all persons over 16 years of age. The Museum and Art Gallery, in Schoolhill, is a building of granite, in the Italian Renaissance style, from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, architects, as was also the adjoining Art School, erected at a cost of £5,000, by the late Councillor John Gray, and gifted by him to the town. Both buildings are united by a noble archway. A nucleus for the Art Gallery has been formed by the bequest of a magnificent collection by the late Mr. Alexander Macdonald, of Kepplestone. Two daily morning newspapers, two daily evening, three weekly, two weekly satirical papers, and a bi-weekly advertiser are issued from the Aberdeen press—the titles and particulars of which are given elsewhere. The first almanac ever printed in Scotland was published in Aberdeen, in 1623, by Edward Raban, the year after setting up the first printing press in the North. It was entitled "A New Prognostication for the Year of our Lord God, 1623, being the third after Leape Year, serving most fitly for the Kingdom of Scotland, and all the partes of North Britain &c." The almanac seems for a long time to have been looked upon as a property of the Aberdeen printers, for a successor of Raban, named John Forbes, issued one entitled "A New Prognosticator calculated for North Britain." He sold fifty thousand copies annually, and the price of each was only a pawk, or the third part of a penny sterling. His success induced the publication of pirated editions at Edinburgh, which were suppressed by the Court of Session, and for many years the town enjoyed a complete monopoly in the sale of almanacs.

Prominent among the ecclesiastical edifices of the city are the East and West churches. These form one building, and occupy the site of the ancient parish church of St. Nicholas, built at various dates between the 11th and 13th centuries. The present West church occupies the site of the old nave, and was erected in 1755, from a design by the architect, James Gibbs, a native of Aberdeen; it is Roman in style, with nave and aisles divided by massive square piers and semi-circular arches, and has a finely proportioned interior, containing sittings for about 1,450. There are several monuments, particularly one in marble to Mrs. Allardyce, of Dunottar, by Bacon. The large west window has been filled in with stained glass. The old East church, which it was deemed necessary to take down in 1835, was built in 1447, partly on the site of the chancel, and formed the choir of the church; the east end was semi-octagonal, and under it was St. Mary's chapel, which still remains. The present East church was erected in 1836, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, in the Decorated style, and is of finely dressed granite; the old transept, known as Drum's and Collison's aisles, was at the same time opened up southwards, and formed into a vestibule for the East and West churches; over this transept at its intersection with the churches, there was a short tower, with a wooden steeple, which on the 9th October, 1874, was destroyed by fire, along with the interior of the East church and Drum's and Collison's aisles. The East church has since been restored, and contains sittings for about 1,350 people. A new tower with spire of granite, rising to the height of 195 feet, has also been erected, from a design by Mr. W. Smith, architect, of Aberdeen, and contains 38 bells, hung at a cost of about £4,000. The Old Norman arches and piers under the tower were taken down and rebuilt in their original form with the old stones. St. Clement's, or Footdee, church has a tower 45 feet high, containing a clock presented by the magistrates. Greyfriars, or College church, which stands on the east of Broad street, near Marischal College, and said to have been erected by Bishop Dunbar for the Grey Friars about the beginning of the 16th century, is now the only church in the town where the Roman Catholic worship was performed previous to the Reformation. The South church, in Belmont street, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a square tower, and will seat 1,450 persons. The North church, in King street, is an edifice of granite, in the Classic style, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, architect, and affords about 1,550 sittings.

Old Machar Church, otherwise St. Machar cathedral, is at the northern extremity of Old Aberdeen, for which see back of this page.

St. Paul's chapel, in Loch street, was erected in 1722, for such Episcopalians as refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the Scotch bishops, but this building was superseded in 1865 by the present church, which seats 750 persons. The other English Episcopalian chapel is St. James's, in Union place, a small but striking building in red Corrennie granite, erected in 1888, and affording 380 sittings. The Scotch Episcopalian chapel of St. Andrew, in King street, built in 1813, is an edifice in the Gothic style, consisting of nave, aisle and a chancel, with lofty octagonal turrets at the angles; near the entrance is a statue of the late Bishop Skinner, by Flaxman. The chancel was added in 1880, from a design by the late Mr. G. E. Street R.A.; and in 1885 an elegant credos was placed in the church, to the memory of the late Right Rev. Thos. G. Suther, bishop of Aberdeen, 1857-83, and for many years incumbent of this chapel, which has 1,150 sittings. The church of St. John the Evangelist, in St. John's place, also for Scotch Episcopalians, has a small tower at the south end, and will seat 265 persons. Another Scotch Episcopalian chapel is St. Mary's, Carden place, built in 1862, and seating 350 persons. St. Margaret's Episcopalian church, Gallowgate, erected in 1870, was consecrated in 1879, and a chapel added at the west end in 1889; there are 500 sittings. The Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Mary of the Assumption, in Huntly street, erected at a cost of about £20,000, and opened Dec. 1860, is an edifice of granite, in the Early Pointed style, from designs by Mr. Alexander Ellis, architect, and consists of sanctuary, nave, aisles, north and south porches and a tower with spire, reaching to a height of 200 feet, and containing 9 bells, hung at a cost of £1,300, the largest weighing 35 cwt. On each side of the sanctuary are vestries; and in advance of the high altar are two side altars. The whole of the windows are filled with fine painted glass, and the west window, 30 feet high by 15 in width, has tracery and sculptured figures in the centre. On the north side is the priests' house, and on the south a convent, the schools running backwards from the convent along the wall of the south aisle—all having access by a doorway to the church—which seats 1,500 persons. In connection with the church is a school, in Constitution street, erected in 1832, and two others, built in 1881. In addition to these places of worship, there are others belonging to various denominations.

The Grammar School, at the west end of the town, built in 1863, at a cost of about £15,000, is in the Scottish Baronial style, from plans by the late Mr. James Matthews, architect, of Aberdeen, and contains a large hall, 80 feet by 40 feet, 22 classrooms, chemical and physical laboratories and scientific theatres. The school is of very ancient origin, the first recorded date being as far back as 1262. There are nearly 30 bursaries in connection with the school for the education of poor scholars, and in 1634 Dr. Patrick Dunn left a bequest for the better payment of the masters. Many eminent men have received their education here, among whom may be mentioned Lord Byron, 1797; Sir James M'Grigor, 1784; David Wedderburn, 1602; Thomas Reid, private secretary to James VI.; Dr. James Dunn; Dr. James Melvin; Sir Robert Hamilton; Sir George Strahan; Sir James Reid M.D.; Sir William McGregor and Admiral Sir A. Farquhar.

The Free Church College, at the top of Union street, erected in 1850, at a cost of £2,000, is a building in the Elizabethan style; the staff consists of a principal, four professors in theology and lecturers in natural science and Evangelist theology. In its hall the Aberdeen Presbytery and Synod of the Free Church hold their stated meetings. There is now a good library and a museum, both of which owe much to the liberality of the late Mr. Thomson, of Banchoy, near Aberdeen. The college also possesses some valuable paintings by Sir George Reid and John Philip.

Robert Gordon's College, Schoolhill, standing on land anciently possessed by the Dominican Friars, and having an extensive piece of ground in front tastefully laid out, is a building erected in 1739 after a design by Gibbs, at an expense of £3,300; the remaining part of the centre and the wings were completed in 1832, in the Classic style, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, at a cost of about £13,000, and the more ancient part has been altered to correspond, a colonnade now traversing the building from the old house to the projecting fronts at the ends of the wings; the fabric now consists of a centre or main building and two wings; the original structure, three storeys in height, occupying the greater part of the centre, and having a small spire rising from it: the hall, on the second floor, is 30 feet by 20 feet wide and 12 feet high. The sum originally bequeathed was £10,000; this was invested in land, and at the present time the annual revenue is about £4,000. The object of the charity was to maintain and educate the sons and grandsons of decayed burgesses, but by a Provisional Order, obtained in 1881, the original bequest of the founder, Robert Gordon, was set aside, the hospital system abandoned, and the institution converted into day and evening schools, the application of its benefits being also widely extended.

Aberdeen Royal Infirmary has, since its foundation in 1739, undergone great extensions and improvements, though still occupying the original site on Woodmanhill—the very centre of the city. The Hospital has long enjoyed a high reputation from the eminence of its professional staff, including several of the professors connected with the University, while some 350 students are in attendance. The new buildings, completed about 1897, in commemoration of the Queen's Jubilee of 1887, at a cost of £30,000, stand on a site containing about 2½ acres, and surrounded by open streets. The old Infirmary, now remodelled internally as the administrative block, faces the south; the new surgical ward block, for 140 patients, stretches along the west side, its large circular theatre projecting boldly beyond the main line. A tower-like building on the north contains the pathological theatre and the laundry, with an open drying ground on the top storey, under the roof. The east side is occupied by the new medical west block, built in 1895 for 92 additional patients. To the west of the administrative block is the boiler house block and the electric light building. The entire cost was about £75,000. Aberdeen Lunatic Asylum was founded in 1800, but since that time important additions have been made to the institution. The register of patients now (1899) stands at 365 males and 465 females, while the grounds extend to over 124 acres. In connection with the main institution is Elmhill House, for the treatment of members of the better classes able to pay special rates of board, and a Branch Asylum, with a farm of 283 acres, is in full working order at Daviot, 21 miles from Aberdeen. The Asylum for the Blind, in Huntly street, opened in 1843, is supported partly by revenue from endowments and partly by legacies and public subscriptions. Work is provided for blind persons of both sexes belonging to the city of Aberdeen and the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine. The chief industries carried on are twine spinning and basket and mattress making; from 50 to 60 blind persons are thus employed. In addition, blind children and young persons are kept in the institution, and receive education in ordinary subjects and in industrial training. The board of management, as re-constituted under the authority of the Endowment Commission, consists of persons elected by the subscribers, or nominated either by benefactors to the institution, or by certain public bodies in Aberdeen or the above mentioned counties. The institution for the education of the Deaf and Dumb, in Belmont street, and now under Government inspection, is principally supported by voluntary contributions; the average number of pupils of both sexes is 30. The Boys' and Girls' Hospital in King street, now merged into the Aberdeen Educational Trust, was instituted in 1852; its objects are the maintenance and education of poor children of the parish of St. Nicholas. The Medical Society's Hall, King street, built in 1818, at a cost of £2,000, has a handsome front, with a portico of four Ionic columns, and contains a library and museum, and a large hall for the meetings of the society. In the hall are some portraits, including an original painting of Harvey, by Vandyke, and two by James Giles R.A.

The weekly markets are held on Wednesday and Friday, and the fairs on Friday before and after the 26th of May, Friday before and after 22nd November; wool markets, Thursday and Friday of first and second week in July; timber, the last Wednesday in August.

The population of Aberdeen, according to the returns for 1881, amounted to 105,054. The inhabited houses at the same date were 20,341. In 1891 the population numbered 124,943, the number of inhabited houses having increased to 24,431. The city parish was extended to the municipal-area, May 16th, 1895, under provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," taking over the whole of St. Nicholas and portions of the parishes of Old Machar, Nigg and Peterculter. Acreage of city parish (as extended), 6,554; gross rateable value, 1898-99, £718,803; population to middle of 1899 estimated at 145,000.

Cults is a pleasant suburb of Aberdeen, formerly in the parish of Peterculter, but now in Aberdeen city parish, on the north bank of the Dee, on the road to Ballater, distant from Aberdeen 4 miles south-west, with a station on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. In the vicinity are many handsome villas and cottages, chiefly the residences of those engaged in business in Aberdeen. In 1897 a park was presented to Cults by David Allan esq. to commemorate the Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

Torry, a fishing village, taken from the parish of Nigg (Kincardineshire), is included within the limits of the city parish of Aberdeen.

OLD ABERDEEN & OLD MACHAR.

OLD ABERDEEN stands about a mile to the north of the city, on an eminence on the south bank of the river Don, formerly in the parish of Old Machar, but under provisions made in the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," now forms part of Aberdeen city parish. Formerly this town was the seat of the Bishopric of Aberdeen, but it now derives its importance from King's College (amalgamated with the University of Aberdeen) and the Cathedral. The charter was renewed by George I. when the power was conferred of electing its own magistrates, but by the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1891," it was merged into the burgh of Aberdeen. The principal curiosity in the neighbourhood is the old bridge, which crosses the river Don by one pointed arch; Mr. Kennedy, in his "Annals of Aberdeen," states it to have been erected in the time of Robert Bruce, by Bishop Cheyne. The see of Aberdeen appears to have been first established in 1015, at Mortlich, in Banffshire, by King Malcolm II. but was translated to Aberdeen by Nectanus, the 4th bishop, in the reign of David I. A new church was built in the 12th century, but this was superseded between 1281 and 1382, under the direction of King Robert Bruce, by a more imposing structure, in part erected by Bishop Kynymound, who succeeded to the episcopate in 1356, but of this only the western piers of the central tower now remain; the choir has wholly disappeared, having been pillaged in 1560, and dismantled about 1650 by the Cromwellian troops, who used its materials in building fortifications, and the central tower fell in 1688, destroying the transepts, of which only portions of the north and south walls are now extant. The existing cathedral, dedicated to St. Machar, commonly known as "Old Machar church," thus consists only of the nave of seven bays, with its aisles, western towers and south porch, and was chiefly the work of Bishop Lichton (1424-40): the whole, with the exception of the spires, being constructed of red granite; the nave piers are cylindrical and carry pointed arches, above which is a clerestory, with small round-headed windows: the original deal roof, erected by Bishop Lindsay, in 1444, was taken off and renewed in 1866; the flat panelled ceiling below, the work of Bishop Dunbar, in 1520, is adorned with the shields of kings, nobles and ecclesiastics, and the cornice beneath it bears the names in black letter of Scottish sovereigns and bishops: the east end of the nave, now built up, is in part enclosed, and contains the organ and pulpit; the west end has a double-arched recessed entrance, and over it six tall and narrow lights with rounded heads: the square western towers are military rather than ecclesiastical in style, and have double angle buttresses, and bold machicolated battlements, from within which rises a low square stage with dwarf pinnacles, carrying the octagonal spires; these are of grey sandstone, and are relieved by two embattled handings and numerous dormers; several of the windows are stained, and there are some interesting tombs, including, in the nave, one to Archdeacon Barbour, c. 1400, and another to Bishop Scougal, 1685; in the ruined transepts are the tombs of Bishops Lichton, Dunbar and Stewart; the interior of the fabric was repaired in 1722, and in 1866 was renovated on a report by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott, and since this, the present east window has been erected.

Woodside, formerly a police burgh, was also in the parish of Old Machar, but by the above mentioned Acts also merged into the city parish and into the burgh of Aberdeen, is distant from Aberdeen 2 miles, and has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway.

The old parish of Old Machar possessed an acreage of 12,143; in 1871 its population was 42,477, and in 1881 it had increased to 56,002, in 1891 to 71,579. Acreage of parish (as altered May 16th, 1895), 7,313; rateable value, £14,416; population in 1891, 143,200.

The parish of Old Machar, as it remains without the portion between the Dee and the Don, which has been included in the Aberdeen city parish, is now wholly on the north side of the Don. The land rises in a gentle slope from the sea, and is beautifully diversified by undulating grounds. The windings of the Don—the manufactories and the woods on its banks, interspersed with many private residences, together with the numerous admirable prospects of the sea—impart a pleasing variety to the general appearance of the parish. Great improvements in agriculture, at a very considerable expense, have been effected, which have been the means of materially enhancing the value of the land, and beautifying the neighbourhood of Aberdeen.

THE UNIVERSITY OF ABERDEEN.

This consists of two colleges, united by Act of Parliament in 1860, viz:—King's College in Old Aberdeen, and Marischal College in Broad street. The former was first instituted in the year 1494, by William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen, under the authority of a Bull of Pope Alexander VI. and the original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the College. The students wear a scarlet cloth gown, but do not reside within the college buildings, which form a quadrangular court, originally erected in 1500, and have been almost totally reconstructed of late years, spacious class rooms being erected, along with a large library, in which is a very valuable collection of books, and a memorial window to the late Dr. J. Melvin. The old chapel, restored internally at a cost of about £3,000, possesses an antique screen of woodwork, and the tomb of Bishop Elphinstone, which stands in the middle of the chapel near the east end. There are memorial windows to Principal Campbell and Professors Macpherson, Mearns and W. Robertson Smith; the large west window was filled with stained glass by Mr. John Webster, lato M.P. for the city. At the north-west is a lofty square tower, strengthened by buttresses, and from the parapet spring crocketed arches meeting at the top, and forming an open crown upon which rises a stone lantern, surmounted by another crown of stonework, with a globe and cross; the tower formerly contained a peal of 13 bells. The Senatus room is ornamented with portraits of Bishops Elphinstone, Dunbar and others. Marischal College, in Broad street, which prior to 1860 exercised separate University rights, was founded and endowed by George Keith, Earl Marischal of Scotland, in 1593, by a charter ratified by Act of Parliament. The college buildings stand on the site of a Franciscan convent, and were rebuilt in 1836-41, at a cost of over £21,000, from designs by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, architect. During recent years a very important scheme of extension has been carried out, involving an expenditure of over £120,000; the additions comprising a fully equipped laboratory and class room, and other rooms for most of the departments in medicine and science. By the munificence of the late Charles Mitchell esq. LL.D. Newcastle-on-Tyne, who generously gave over £20,000 for the purpose, this extension also includes a large Graduation Hall, adorned with stained windows, a Students' Union, and the heightening of the great tower of the buildings inaugurated Oct. 1895.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Skene street west.

The Grammar School of Aberdeen is one of the eleven Schools in Scotland scheduled in the Education Act of 1872 as Public Secondary Schools. Its management was thus vested in the School Board of the Burgh. The date of foundation is unknown, but the School has existed for more than 600 years, since, in the Register of the Abbey of Arbroath (date 1262), one Thomas de Bennum is designated "Rector Scholarum de Aberdene." The succession of rectors since 1479 is known. Before 1872 the Grammar School, in Schoolhill, was under the management of the Town Council, who erected the present building, opened 23rd October, 1863, & in 1882 additional Class-rooms were built for the Lower School. In 1894-5 the Hall & Class-rooms were refloored & remodelled & fitted with new desks seats; the Chemical Laboratory was enlarged & refitted & a class-room converted into a Science Theatre, with Physical Laboratory attached. In 1897 two large rooms were appropriated for Physical Sciences

A BERDEENSHIRE.

NEW ABERDOUR is a parish, 8 miles north-west from Strichen station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, 9 miles west of Fraserburgh, and 16 east of Banff, stretches along the Moray Firth for about 10 miles, the shores here being bold and precipitous, with only three places where boats can effect a landing, and the rocks have been worn by the sea into innumerable caves, one of which is 90 feet long and 22 broad. It is in Buchan poor continuation and Fraserburgh small debt court. Upon a precipice overhanging the sea are the ruins of the ancient castle of Dundargue, a place of great strength and importance in feudal times, and noted for sustaining a long siege in 1336, when Henry de Beaumont, the English Earl of Buchan, was obliged to capitulate to Andrew Murray, Regent of Scotland, during the captivity of King Robert Bruce in England. The Established church, built in 1818, is a plain stone structure, remodelled internally in 1885, and has sittings for 800 persons. There is also a Free church in the village. Alexander Dingwall Fordyce esq. of Brucklay Castle, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 15,508 acres; valuation 1897-8, £8,413. Population of New Aberdour in 1881, 642; and in 1891, 620; and of the whole parish, 1881, 2,124, and 1891, 2,019; ecclesiastical parish, 1,821.

Pennan is a small fishing village in the parish of and about three miles west from New Aberdour. Population in 1891, 157.

Auchmedden is a hamlet joining Pennan. Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office, T. M. O., Express Delivery, Parcel Post, Savings Bank, Annuity & Insurance Office; William Thompson Chalmers, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. ABOYNE, or Charlestown of Aboyne, is a small village and parish in the district of Mar, with a station on the Dec Side railway, 30 miles west-south-west from Aberdeen, 4 west from Kincardine, and 11 north-east from Ballater, on the north bank of the Dee, and in the county and small debt court district of Aberdeen. The parish is united to that of Glentana, and is watered by the river Dee and likewise by the Tana and the Allachy, which during heavy rains become impetuous streams. The Dee here is crossed by a suspension bridge, erected by the County Road Trustees in 1871, but originally built at the sole expense of the Marquess of Huntly in 1830, whose seat, Aboyne Castle, ornaments this locality; in the grounds of the castle is a remarkable stone, shaped like a coffin, with a cross cut upon it. The forest of Glentana is extensive and contains some large timber. Woodend, the seat of Sir William Cunliffe Brooks bart. F.S.A. is situated in the district of Glentana. The principal landowners are Sir William Cunliffe Brooks bart. and the Marquess of Huntly J.C., LL.D. Loch Caenor is about 4 miles from Aboyne and contains some small islands, on one of which there is said to have been a castle built by Malcolm Canmore; in the loch various antiquities have been found, including an old axe, oaken boats, cut out of the solid tree, and a bronze pot. There is a good library and reading room in the village. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in Jan. March, May, August, Sept. and Dec. second Wed. in April, last Wed. in June, the Friday after Aiky fair in July, first Tues. and Wed. in October (old style), and second Wed. in Nov. The parish, which has an area of 25,265 acres (rateable value £12,833), in 1891 contained a population of 1,463.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order, T. M. O., Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. AUCHINDOIR, a parish with which Kern has been incorporated, is about 7 miles long and 6 broad, distant from Huntly 13 miles, and from Gartly, the nearest railway station, 8 miles, in the Huntly small debt court district. A bluish coloured fibrous asbestos is found in great quantities in the fissures of the rocks. The parish also abounds with freestone. The only river of note is the Bogie. Cleva, the residence of Hugh Gordon Lumsden esq. D.I., J.P., is in this parish. Cattle markets are held from Dec. to April, on the first Monday in each month, and fairs on the second Tuesday in May, the second Friday in June, and the third Tuesday in August. Area, 15,310 acres; rateable value, £5,462; population of the parish in 1891, 1,374.

Lumsden is a considerable village in the parish of Auchindoir, and named after its proprietor, about 4 miles south from Rhyynie, and contains a Union Free Church and a public school.

BALLATER is an agreeable and quiet village and police burgh, in the parish of Glenmuick, pleasantly situated upon the river Dee, having a terminal station on the Dee Side line of the Great North of Scotland railway, 42 miles west-south-west from Aberdeen, 11 west-south-west from Aboyne, and 18 east from Braemar, and in the Aberdeen small debt district. It is much resorted to in the summer by tourists, on account of the scenery around, which combines both the picturesque and the grand. The neighbourhood is often honoured by the presence of royalty—Balmoral Castle being 9 miles distant and Abergeldie Castle 6 miles. Near here are the ruins of Knock Castle, and on Loch Canor, also in this neighbourhood, is a small island with the ruins of another castle, said to have been once a hunting seat of Malcolm Canmore: the lake is beautiful and romantic in its features, and skirted with birch, hazel and other woods. The village of Ballater is small, but regularly formed—the Established church standing near to its centre, and the Free church upon the outskirts. Many houses have been erected expressly for visitors, and at the Loverscauld Arms Hotel, every convenience is afforded. Military barracks, for 70 men, were erected here in 1870. Fairs are held at Ballater on the second Tuesday in February, the second Tuesday in May, and the second Monday and Tuesday in Sept. (O.S.), and on the Saturday previous to the 22nd November (N.S.). Population in 1881, 759, and in 1891, 981; rateable value, burghal, £6,024.

BIRSE, the most southern parish of Aberdeenshire, extending to Forfarshire, lies on the south bank of the river Dee, one mile from Aboyne railway station and about 24 miles south-west from Aberdeen and forms nearly a square of ten miles. There are three districts in the parish, inclosed by the same number of ridges of hills, which take a south-westerly direction towards the Grampians from the river Dee; in the valleys formed by these ridges flow two streams—the Feuch and the Chattie. The proportion of uncultivated land is very considerable.
 The road from Dundee to Inverness passes through this parish, which is in the Aberdeen small debt court district. Large upright stones, cairns and other monuments of antiquity are frequently met with, as is limestone in abundance. William Edward Nicol esq. J.P., D.L. of Ballogie, and Dr.
 Robert Farquharson M.P., D.L., J.P., M.D.
 of Finzean House, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 31,218; rateable value, £7,957. Population in 1881, 1,091 and in 1891, 1,094.
 Post Office, William Carnie, sub-postmaster.

BODDAM is a village and considerable fishing station and quoad sacra parish, formed in 1880 from Cruden and Peterhead, on the east coast, about 4 miles south of Peterhead, and is the terminus of the Cruden Bay branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, opened in July, 1897, and is in the Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The harbour here was extended some years since by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost somewhat exceeding £2,000, and an Act of Parliament was passed in 1845 constituting Boddam a port or harbour. The fishery here is prosecuted with great diligence; the present proprietor is Archibald Hay Tennent esq. of St. Germain's, Haddington. The Established church, built in 1855, is a plain stone building and has sittings for 600 persons. There is also a Free church and a Wesleyan chapel in the parish. The Public Hall, the property of a limited liability company, is a plain stone building, erected in 1878, and has 500 sittings. The population in 1881 was 1,117 and in 1891, 2,103, of which 1,864 are from Peterhead

CASTLETOWN, see CRATHIE.

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH is an extensive parish lying in the centre of the county, 20 miles north-west from Aberdeen, 18 south-east from Huntly and 5 north-west from Inverurie, with a station at Pitcape, in this parish, which is 13 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 in breadth, the river Don dividing it on the south from Kennay.
The castle of Balquhain, now in ruins, in this parish, is famed for an echo. There is also a very angular sculptured stone called "the Maiden Stone." The parish church is situated in the small village of its name, and at the southern extremity of the parish is the church of Blairdaff, which is now a quoad sacra parish. The other places of worship are a Free church, near Pitcape, and a Roman Catholic church at Peteroear.
In this district, in 1411, was fought the battle of Harlaw, between Alexander (Stewart), designate Earl of Mar, and Donald, Lord of the Isles, when the latter was defeated. Buchanan relates that the number of nobility who fell in this obstinately-contested action was greater than had fallen in any foreign engagement for many years before. Area, 13,059 acres;
rateable value, £14,256; population in 1881,
1,923 and in 1891, 1,690.

Pitcape is a small village in the parish of Chapel of Garioch, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Pitcape
Castle is the seat of Col. Henry Lumsden
D.L., J.P. Near it is the house of Logie Elphinstone, the seat of Lady Grant.

Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Pitcaple (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed Pitcaple R.S.O. Aberdeenshire); Thomas Knight, sub-postmaster. Deliveries, 6.55 & 10.15 a.m. & 6.45 p.m.; dispatches, 9.45 a.m. & 4.10 & 8.50 p.m. Telegraph office at Railway station

CLUNY parish is in the district of Kincardine-O'Neil and small debt court district of Aberdeen, about 2½ miles from Tillyfourie station, on the Kintore and Alford section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 18 miles west from Aberdeen and 8 south-south-west from Inverurie. In length it is about 10 miles, and in breadth from 2 to 3 miles. Four-fifths of the parish is under cultivation. There are three druidical remains and several cairns in this district, besides two large castles—Castle Fraser, said to have been erected in the beginning of the 15th century, and Cluny Castle, the chief part of which is modern. The extensive red granite quarries of Mr. John Fyfe are in this parish. There are ruins of a large castle at Tillycain. Acreage, 9,741; rateable value, £7,398; population in 1881, 1,298, and in 1891, 1,217.

COULL is a parish in the district of Cromar, the kirk being about 30 miles west from Aberdeen and 4 north from Aboyna railway station, lying at the head of Strath-cromar, and separated from the Dee on the south by Aboyna, in the Aberdeen small debt court district. The trustees of the Hon. James Ochoncar Forbes are the principal landowners. It is a finely sheltered tract of land, triangular in shape, and generally fertile, the hill portions being, however, bleak and pastoral. The ruins of the very old castle of Coull are distinguishable, but of its ancient possessors little is known. Acreage, 9,044; rateable value, £3,888; population in 1881, 733, and in 1891, 746.

CRATHIE,

BRAEMAR, BALMORAL AND CASTLETOWN.

CRATHIE, or Crathy, is an extensive mountainous parish, in the heart of Mar, among the Grampian mountains, incorporating for civil purposes the quad sacra parish of Braemar; jointly they comprise a territory 40 miles in length and 20 in breadth, the former place being 8 miles west-south-west and the latter 18 west from Ballater, the nearest railway station for both; the joint parishes are in the Aberdeen small debt court district. This district is supposed to be more elevated above the level of the sea, and farther distant from the coast in every direction, than any other parochial section in Scotland. On some of the mountains snow may be found all the year round; Ben-Macdui, 4,300 feet in height, and Lochnagar, 3,800 feet in height, are among the stupendous eminences in this quarter. Nearly the whole of this district was once covered with wood, and was called the Forest of Mar, which, with the forests of the Duke of Athole, in Perthshire, and the Duke of Gordon, in Badenoch and Glenaven, constituted the principal part of the great Caledonian forest. In Braemar a considerable portion still remains, and is well stocked with deer.

Balmoral Castle, the highland residence of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and Abergeildie Castle, leased by H.M. the Queen from H. M. Gordon esq. are in this parish, as is also Lochmuich, one of the shooting boxes of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Many seats of the nobility and gentry embellish this interesting locality. The parish church, which occupies a site 920 feet above sea level, was erected on the site of the old church and opened June 18, 1895; it is of white granite, from designs by A. Marshall MacKenzie A.R.S.A. and cruciform in shape, with a square tower rising from the intersection, and containing 4 bells: a window in the north transept has been filled with stained glass to commemorate the 60th year of the Queen's reign; the south transept is appropriated to Her Majesty and the Royal household, who have enriched the church by various gifts. The principal landowners are H.M. the Queen, the Duke of Fife K.T., P.C., Alexander Haldane Farquharson esq. of Invercauld, and Hugh Mackay Gordon esq. J.P., V.D. of Abergeildie. Area, 182,257 acres; rateable value, £22,857; population in 1881, 1,566 and in 1891, 1,534.

Lochnagar, so famed for its whisky distillery, is likewise in Crathie parish. The principal lakes are Loch Callate and Loch Brodach, which contain trout, salmon and eels. The great military road from Blairgowrie to Fort George passes the whole extent. On this line is the village of Braemar, or Castletown, near which are the ruins of an ancient castle, said to have been a hunting seat of King Malcolm Canmore. The village is divided by the river Cluny—the one side of the water, called Auchendryne, belonging to the Duke of Fife, and the other to Alexander Haldane Farquharson esq. At a short distance from Braemar is the castle of Braemar, now leased to H.H. Prince Alexis Dolgorouki; it was once garrisoned by King William, and burnt in the contest which took place between the Royal forces and the Earl of Mar; in 1749 it was rebuilt, and till within the last few years was occupied by Government troops, to prevent the smuggling which was so frequent in this district. This part contains inexhaustible quarries of limestone and fine slate. Braemar, with a population of about 835 persons, possesses two first-class hotels, and is much resorted to in summer by tourists; near here is Mar Lodge, the seat of the Duke of Fife, unfortunately destroyed by fire June 14, 1895, but a new mansion has since been erected.

CRIMOND is a parish 3 miles from Lon-may station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 8 north-west from Peter-head and 8 south-east from Fraserburgh, upon the coast of Buchan, with a front to the German Ocean of about three miles in breadth, but declining to a point, at the distance of rather more than five miles: it is in Buchan poor combination and Peter-head small debt court. On Rattray Head, a very dangerous promontory, a lighthouse was established in 1895. Near the east end of the lake Strathbeg is a small hill, called the Castle Hill, where Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had a castle. In the 18th century there was communication between the loch of Strathbeg and the sea, and a harbour at the east end, now filled up by the drifting of sand. On this harbour formerly stood the burgh of Rattray, near the site of which is a ruin of a small chapel, said to have been erected by the Earl of Buchan, about the year 1200. The parish church, built in 1812, is in the Scottish Gothic style; it was remodelled in 1895 and a clock provided: there is a memorial window to the Rev. Dr. Irvine and the Rev. Alexander Boyd, former ministers, and on the west wall is a brass containing the names of all the ministers since the Reformation; there are 404 sittings. The ruins of the old church stand in the churchyard, to the north of the present church. Lady Carnegie of Crimondmogate is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 5,891 acres; the assessable value is £5,547; the population was in 1881, 832, and in 1891, 808.

Post Office, Miss Christina Gordon, subpostmistress. Deliveries, 12.35 p.m. from Peterhead & 12.55 p.m. from Lonmay;
dispatches, 2.20 p.m. via Lonmay & 2.45 p.m. via Peterhead. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The CRUDEN parish, about 9 miles south-south-west from Peterhead, lies on the east of Buchan district, extending from 8 to 9 miles along the east coast and about 7 inland, and is in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The parish comprises the villages of Port Erroll, Hatton, Auchries, Longhaven and Birness, and has three railway stations, named Hatton-Cruden Bay and Longhaven, on a branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, from Ellon to Boddam, opened in July, 1897. The soil is various, a large proportion being a deep rich clay, while the remainder is light and gravelly, with some mosses. Slains Castle, the seat of the Earl of Erroll, a large edifice on a precipice overhanging the sea, and the celebrated "Bullers of Buchan," are in this parish. The latter is a large rocky cavern, open to the sky, into which the sea rushes through a natural archway. The rocks are about 100 feet in height, both to the interior of "The Pot" and also on the sea front. Area, 18,236 acres; valuation, 1897-98, £18,493; population of the parish in 1881, 3,444, and in 1891, 3,595.

Port Erroll is a large village on Cruden Bay, and the Great North of Scotland Railway Company, at this popular resort for visitors, have erected an hotel close to the shore and connected the place with Cruden

Bay station by an electric tramway: adjoining the hotel is a golf course of 18 holes, extending over 3 miles, and up to the present date (1899) a sum of about £50,000
has been expended on these developments.

NEW DEER parish lies almost in the centre of Buchan district, and extends 14 miles from north to south, and about 7 in breadth, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village, which is well built, is about 30 miles north from Aberdeen, 2 miles west from Maud Junction station and 4 south-west from Brucklay station, both on the Great North of Scotland railway and in this civil parish, 12 east from Turriff, 16 south-west from Fraserburgh and about 16 west of Peterhead. The parish church, built in 1835, is a plain edifice of stone with a tower containing a clock; the organ cost about £600; the silver communion service was presented by Lord James Reid, chief of the judges of King's Bench at Montreal, in Lower Canada, and a native of this village; he died in 1848, aged 79, and there is a memorial in the church, which affords sittings for 1,100 persons. About 2 miles from the church stands an old castle, called "Federate," which appears to have been a place of considerable strength. There are a few Druidical remains and several tumuli, some of which have been opened and found to contain urns, enclosed in stone coffins. A market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the third Tuesday in January, Tuesday after the 12th of April, Thursday before 28th of May, Tuesday after 19th of June, second Tuesday in August, Tuesday after 19th of October and Thursday before 28th of November. The chief landowners are the Earl of Aberdeen G.C.M.G., P.C. of Haddo House; A. Dingwall Fordyce esq. D.L. of Brucklay; J. Dean Leslie esq. of Nethermuir, and John H. Bridges, of Federate. Acreage, 32,150; rateable value, £22,914; population of the entire parish in 1851, 4,875, and in 1891, 3,585, and in the civil parish, 4,434.

Brucklay is a village in the parish of New Deer, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Brucklay Castle, built in 1540 and now the seat of Alexander Dingwall Fordyce esq. D.L. is about 2 miles from the village, and occupies a romantic situation in the midst of delightful scenery; the lawns are tastefully laid out, and the park is encircled by the waters of the Ugie.

OLD DEER parish is 10 miles in length,
by a mean breadth of between 5 and 6,
and it lies in the district of Buchan,

Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village is 1 mile west from Mintlaw railway station, 10 1/2 west from Peterhead and 30 north from Aberdeen by the Mintlaw road. A branch of the river Ugie intersects the parish about its centre, whilst another branch enters it for a short course on the north;
upon these streams are several mills. The parish church, built in 1796, on the site of the old Celtic church, built at the end of the 6th century, is a plain edifice of stone with a western tower; the church was entirely renovated in 1833, and further alterations were made in 1898 at a cost of £900: there are sittings for 1,000 persons.
The abbey of Deer, which stands about a mile from the village, was built in the beginning of the 13th century, by William Comyn, Earl of Buchan; it is mostly in ruins, but there is still enough remaining to show what it originally was. There were at one time no less than twelve Druidical circles here, of which four, tolerably entire, are yet remaining, that at Billie being the most conspicuous. On Aiky Brae, Edward Bruce defeated the army of the Comyns, upon which the earl fled to England and the whole surrounding country was laid waste by the army of Bruce. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. George Arthur Ferguson J.P. of Pitfour; William Ferguson esq. of Kinmuody and Major-Gen. Francis Shirley Russell C.M.G., M.P.
of Aden, in this parish. The pleasure grounds and woods of Pitfour, the seat of Colonel George A. Ferguson D.L., J.P. are picturesque. Near the village of Old Deer is a cemetery, opened in 1875. The Old Deer Educational Trust produces £65 yearly. A fair is held at Aiky Brae on the first Wednesday after the 19th of July, and at Old Deer on the first Wednesday after the 19th of December. The area is 27,368 acres; valuation 1897-8, £28,539. The population of the whole parish in 1881 was 5,104, and in 1891, 3,881 in the ecclesiastical and 4,694 in the civil parish.

ECHT, a parish with stations on the Great North of Scotland railway, 12 miles west of Aberdeen, is about 5 miles in length and the same in breadth. It is a hilly district, but having a large proportion of the land under cultivation. In this parish is Dunecht House, once the property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, but now belonging to Alexander Charles Pirie esq. The Observatory, established here in 1872, together with the library, were presented by Lord Crawford to the Crown, and transferred to the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh. The remains of a Pictish camp, much prized by antiquarians, are upon the summit of a hill adjacent to Dunecht. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, with the following exceptions—the second Monday in May, the day before Michaelmas fair, in October and the second Tuesday in November. The parish has an area of 11,948 acres; value, £7,111; and in 1891 contained a population of 1,207.

ELLON, police burgh and also a parish, which extends about 9 miles in length from north to south and 5 in breadth, in Buchan poor combination and the small debt district of Aberdeen. The surface is uneven, and there are some rising grounds, the heights of which are considerable. Ellon, which is a police burgh, has a station on the Great North of Scotland line, which now runs through to Boddam: it is 16 miles north from Aberdeen, and has a bridge over the river Ythan, which is navigable for large boats within half a mile of the village; a trade in coal and corn is carried on. Here are branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited, and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. Many new houses have been erected and building is still progressing. Visitors find excellent accommodation at Reid's (late Lamont's) hotel, and also at Lamont's Station hotel, adjoining the railway station. The trout fishing on the Ythan has long been celebrated. Ellon Castle, the residence of Arthur John Lewis Gordon esq. C.M.G., D.L., J.P. the present landowner, erected about 1850, stands just outside the village, close to the ruins of an old castle built early in the 16th century. Eslemont is the residence of Henry Wolrige-Gordon esq. D.L., J.P. The Established church a few years ago underwent several improvements, which included the erection of a new organ and the putting in of four additional windows, at a cost of about £500. The fine Episcopal church of St. Mary on the Rock was erected in 1875 from designs by the late Mr. G. E. Street R.A. of London. The market, formerly held on the first and third Mondays in each month, is now held every Monday by the Central Auction Mart and the Ythanside Farmers' Auction Mart, also on Tuesday after the 11th of May and on the Wednesday after the 12th of November. Acreage, 22,259; rateable value, burghal, £4,560; landward, £22,985; population of the parish in 1881, 3,598 and in 1891, 3,212.

FINTRAY parish, about 10 1/2 miles northwest from Aberdeen, is 5 miles in length by from 3 to 4 in breadth, on the banks of the Don, where the land is fertile and susceptible of profitable cultivation, but other parts are hilly. It is in the Aberdeen poor combination and small debt court district of Aberdeen. An abbey formerly existed in this parish. The Rev. J. Leslie, a late minister, possessed a stone inscribed with the date 1386, supposed to have formed a fraction of the building, and a silver cup, dated 1633, which tradition records to have been manufactured from the silver of the image of St. Meldun, the tutelary saint of the parish. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line at Kinaldie, about 1 mile from the village of Hatton. Fintray House, the property of Lord Sempill, is now occupied by Lord Playfair. Acreage, 7,319; valuation, £7,224; population in 1881, 1,032, and in 1891, 999.

FORGUE is a parish in the Huntly small debt court district, 10 miles in length and its greatest breadth about 8; it is 7 miles north-east of Huntly, the nearest railway station, and 9 1/2 west of Turriff, and it is intersected by two rivulets—the Frend-draught and the Forgue. The soil in the lower parts produces good crops, but towards the south the ground is mostly covered with heath. On several of the estates much has been done in planting and improving the wastes. The celebrated Glendronach distillery is situated in this parish. There are Established, Free and Episcopal churches, the latter, consecrated in 1858, is dedicated to St. Margaret. The public hall was presented to the parish by the late Walter Scott, of Glendronach. The principal landowners are Col. Frederick De la Mere Morison, of Frendraught; Robert

Skirving esq. of Cobairdy; William M'Hardy esq. of Drumblair; Miss Lillias Thain, of Auchaber, and Thomas Gilzean Rose-Innes esq. of Netherdale. The area is 17,354 acres; rateable value, £13,050; the population in 1881 was 2,422, and in 1891, 2,239, of which 1,258 are attached to the parish church.

FOVERAN parish, which is in Buchan poor combination, extends 7 miles in length from east to west, and about 2 in breadth. It is 10 miles north from Aberdeen and a south-east from Ellon station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Its general appearance is level, but the ground rises up a gradual ascent from the sea, though not to any considerable height. The soil varies from sand to a rich loam and strong clay, the whole of which is arable. The Ythan, navigable for about three miles, forms the boundary on the north. At the mouth of the river is the small village of NEWBURGH, in which a considerable trade is carried on in grain, lime, bones and guano. It is in the Aberdeen poor combination and small debt court district. In this parish are the ruins of several ancient castles and chapels. Area, 10,537 acres, the rateable value, £12,555; population of the parish in 1881, 2,042, and in 1891, 1,945.

FRASERBURGH.

FRASERBURGH is a flourishing seaport town on the north-east coast, a burgh of barony and regality, but now a Police burgh under the Act 1892, in a parish of the same name and Buchan peer combination, the terminus of a branch (opened May 1st, 1865) of the Great North of Scotland railway, 151 miles north-east of Edinburgh, 42 north of Aberdeen, 22 east of Banff (26 by the new road), and 18 north-west of Peterhead, and is situated on the south side of Kinnaird Head, a bold promontory, surmounted by a lighthouse, built upon the site of an ancient castle, occupied by the Frasers, barons Saltoun. The parish occupies the north-eastern angle of land in this part of the county, and extends about 3½ miles each way. At one time the name of the parish was Philorth, and the possessions of Lord Saltoun here retain this appellation, Philorth Castle being the residence of Lord Saltoun. The original name of the burgh was Faithlie, and in 1546 it was declared a free part and burgh of barony by royal charter, in favour of Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth. By precept of sasine granted by King James VI. in 1592, the name was altered to Part de Fraser, and by a crown charter dated April 4th, 1601, the same monarch caused it to be a burgh of regality and the name changed to Fraserburgh, from the name of the proprietor or superior, Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth, to whom and his heirs these charters gave the superiority of the burgh, which for some time was governed by a town council, but in 1872 the burgh adopted the "Police and Improvement Act (Scotland), 1862;" the control is now, however, by commissioners under the "Police Act, 1892." The town is neatly built, forming a square, and well supplied with water, and the streets, which are tolerably spacious, are lighted with gas by a company. Near the centre is the Town House and a modern cross. A sheriff's small debt court is held monthly.

There is an excellent harbour, much improved during recent years, under a Provisional Order of 1873 and a harbour act obtained in 1878. The harbour (the annual revenue from which is £12,000 to £15,000) is managed by the Provost, five persons elected by the feuars, two by the shipowners, two by the police commissioners, three by the harbour ratepayers and one by the feuars managers. A breakwater (commenced in 1875, and upon which £72,000 has been expended), extending about 860 feet into the bay in a southerly direction, has been completed. A further sum of £70,000 has been expended in deepening the south and the north harbours, widening the piers and other additions to existing works, and a scheme of further deepening Balaclava harbour and adding a new south breakwater, at a cost of £80,000, was completed in 1898. Besides affording a berthage to a large number of ships and boats at low water as well as at high water, these breakwaters shelter an area of 18 acres, where from 800 to 1,000 fishing boats can be comparatively safe at all states of the tide. The berthage has also been greatly enlarged, and now extends to about 9,500 feet, where fishing boats can safely lie and discharge fish, and of which 6,425 feet is available for shipping. During spring tides vessels drawing from 16 to 18 feet enter the harbour, and during neap tides the depth is from 13 to 15 feet. The herring fishery, which has been established here for upwards of half a century, has been on a largely developed within recent years that Fraserburgh may now be considered as the foremost station in Scotland. The number of boats registered under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, as belonging to the port, Dec. 31, 1893, was 585, employing 2,992 men and boys. The annual value of herrings exported reaches from £400,000 to £500,000. A fish market, 200 feet in length, was built in 1899, for the development of the white fish and trawling industries. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port with cargoes and in ballast in 1898 was 270 British of 32,118 tons, and 127 foreign of 31,077 tons; the number cleared was, British 261, with 30,885 tons, and foreign 127 and 30,959 tonnage. The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, was 15 of 741 tons. In the general coasting trade 308 vessels entered of 39,495 tons; cleared, 259, 29,936 tons. A trade is done in timber, imported from Norway and Sweden, the other chief imports being coals, salt, white fish &c. while the principal exports are herrings, grain, empty barrels, fish manure and oil, potatoes &c. The railway company having purchased a large portion of land in 1899 adjoining the harbour, are now erecting a much enlarged goods and passenger station. Thomas Walker's Hospital, within the burgh, was erected at a cost of £3,000, on a site given by Lord Saltoun. It is supported by the Burgh Commissioners, and has an endowment of £1,000 from the Helen Watson Memorial Fund, under which poor people are admitted free of charge. Dalrymple Hall and Café, erected at a cost of about £4,500, is due to the late Captain John Dalrymple, who presented the site, along with a sum of £1,700, for its erection; in addition to the café and dining rooms, it has a news room, library, museum, school of art, recreation room and baths, together with a public hall capable of holding 1,100 people, and the necessary ante-rooms.

The parish church, in the centre of the town, built in 1802, is a plain edifice of stone, with a clock tower at the west end; the organ was erected at a cost of £400; the interior was entirely renovated and extensive structural alterations made in 1899, at a cost of £2,000; there are sittings for 1,050 persons. The hereditary burying ground of the Fraser family is within the church inclosure. The west parish church, built in 1876, is a plain stone building with tower and spire, containing a bell presented by Mr. William Whitelaw; there are 180 sittings. The Free church, erected in 1880, at a cost of £6,500, is of granite. The West Free church is in Mid street. St. Peter's Episcopal church (Bishop Jolly Memorial), in Charlotte street, consists of chancel, nave and aisles, and was consecrated on August 31, 1892; there are sittings for 500 persons. The Catholic church and Presbytery in Commerce street, erected in 1895, are of granite; the church has 300 sittings. The Public School, erected at a cost of £7,000, were opened on the 12th September, 1892, by Lord Saltoun; at the north end is a tower containing a clock and a bell; a large addition was made in 1891 at an expense of £1,300. Fraserburgh Academy, built at a cost of £2,500, and endowed by James Park esq. was opened in 1870, and in 1894 transferred to a governing body elected partly by the School Board and partly by the Burgh Commissioners. The Academy is presently the Secondary School for Fraserburgh. There is also a school belonging to the Episcopalians, and an endowed school instituted in 1863, by Miss Strachen, of Cortes, in memory of her brother, James Strachen esq. M.D. Inspector-General of Army Hospitals, Madras; this is managed by a body of trustees composed of the members of the Kirk Session and Lord Saltoun's commissioner. The "Bruce Bequest" of over £40,000, left by James Bruce, of Inverchomery and Longside, is under the control of trustees; the income, amounting to £1,240 yearly, is distributed to the poor of all the parishes comprising the Presbytery of Deer. There are three first-class hotels here—the Royal Hotel, the Saltoun Arms Hotel and the Station Hotel, in either of which will be found every convenience. The market, chiefly for corn and cattle, is held on Tuesday. Area, 8,367 acres; rateable value, burghal, £37,815; landward, £7,880; population of the burgh in 1881, 6,583, and of the whole parish, 7,596; in 1891 the burgh numbered 7,466, and the parish 8,352, of which 3,601 are attached to West Fraserburgh.

BROADSEA, a fishing village, is within the burgh and has a school under the management of the Kirk Session. A fishermen's hall was also erected in the village in 1887 by public subscription.

Techniumery, a detached portion of Fraserburgh parish, has been transferred to Strichen.

FYVIE,

WOODHEAD AND ROTHENORMAN.

FYVIE, in Buchan poor combination and Turriff small debt court, is an inland parish on the high road from Aberdeen to Banff, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 8 miles north-north-west from Old Meldrum, 9 south-south-west of Turriff, and 25 north-north-west from Aberdeen, on both sides of the river Ythan, which, between Fyvie and Methlick, flows through a romantic wooded gorge called the Braes of Gight, on which stand the ruins of an old castle, which, with the estate of Gight, belonged to the ancestors of Lord Byron, and is now the property of the Earl of Aberdeen. Fyvie Castle was given by the king to Henry Preston as a reward for the capture of Ralph Percy in the battle of Otterburn. The Prestons, the Meldrums, the Setons and the Gordons have in turn held the estate, and is now the seat of A. J.
 Forbes-Leith esq.; it stands in a delightful situation, is of Gothic architecture, and has been repaired and greatly improved.
 The scenery around is highly pleasing, and a loch intersects the grounds. Near the church, on the banks of the river, is a cross, marking the site of a priory, founded along with the parish church, in honour of the Virgin Mary, by Fergus, Earl of Buchan, in 1173, and was given to the abbey of Abroath. The chief landowners are the Earl of Aberdeen G.C.M.G., P.C., A. J. Forbes-Leith esq., Mrs. Crawford-Leslie of Rothie, the trustees of Charles Hugh Lindsay Henderson Chalmers of Monkshill, Thomas Gilzean Rose Innes esq.
 of Netherdale and the trustees of William Leslie esq. of Warhill. A cottage hospital was founded and endowed in 1879 by Colonel and Mrs. Casmo Gordon, of Fyvie.
 There are Established and Free churches,
 two Episcopal churches, respectively situated at Woodhead and Melkiefolla, and one mission church in connection with the Establishment. The parish church, standing on the site of the old church which existed at the Reformation, was built in 1808, and is a plain stone building with a belfry containing 2 bells, one of which bears the date 1600, and the inscription,

"Soli Deo Gloria:" there are two stained windows: the memorials include one with a pre-Reformation inscription, and a Gothic cross to Tiffies Annie, the heroine of the old ballad of Andrew Lammie; the church affords 1,200 sittings. The church hall, given to the parish by Captain and Mrs.
 Gordon in 1854, contains two valuable oil paintings and a marble bust of the donor, and will hold 400 persons; it is used for Sunday school, parish library, lectures and entertainments of various kinds. Cattle markets are held at the railway station on the third Thursday in every month, and fairs on the third Thursday in February and July. Rateable value, £25,202; area, 29,586 acres; population of the parish in 1881, 3,313, and in 1891, 3,050, and in the civil parish, 4,049.

ROTHENORMAN is a small village in this parish, about 3 1/2 miles south-west therefrom, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Cattle markets and auction sales are held here on alternate Saturdays.

Woodhead is a small village 2 1/2 miles from Fyvie station.

GLENGAIRN, see GLENMUICK.

GLENMUICK is a large parish in the district of Mar, formed by the union of the parishes of Glenmuick, Tullich and Glengairn, which are in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. It lies about 40 miles west of Aberdeen, is about 18 miles in length and 15 in breadth, intersected by the Dee, and several of its tributary streams. The kirk is 2 miles south from Ballater and 4 south-west from Cambus O'May stations on the Great North of Scotland railway. The soil is shallow, producing good grain; the hills are of considerable elevation, and many of them covered with wood to their very summits. Specimens of lead ore have been found near the castle of Glengairn, and limestone is everywhere abundant. The principal landowners are Her Majesty the Queen, Alexander H. Farquharson, esq. of Invercauld, Sir Allan R. Mackenzie, bart. of Brackley esq. Sir William Canliffe Brooks bart. F.S.A. and J. C. Barclay Harvey esq. Acreage, 87,341; rateable value, £20,182; population of the whole parish in 1881, 2,100, and in 1891, 2,299; ecclesiastical parish of Glenmuick and Tullich, 1,600.

In the village of Tullich are the remains of an old kirk, the walls of which inclose the burial place of the Farquharsons of Whitehouse. The view from this spot looking towards the west presents a series of hills rising one above another, with the lofty Lochnagar towering over all. The mineral wells and baths at Pannanich are within about 2 miles of Ballater, on the banks of the Dee. The waters are serviceable in cases of scrofula and dyspepsia, and in all complaints where the blood is either deficient in quantity or vitiated; they have also proved beneficial in cases of stone and gravel. There is a good hotel adjacent to the wells.

Letters received through Ballater: R.S.O. Sub-Post Office, Bridge of Gairn; William Harvey, sub-postmaster. Letters through Ballater R.S.O. Aberdeenshire. Delivery, 10.15 a.m.; dispatch, 5.50 p.m.; sunday delivery (to callers), 1.30 to 2 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Kinloch Rannoch, 11 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

HUNTLY.

HUNTLY, a burgh of barony and the seat of presbytery, is a pleasing modern town, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 123 miles north of Edinburgh, 66 east of Inverness, 40 north-west of Aberdeen, 21 south-west of Banff and 18 south-east of Pochabers. The parish is about 10 miles in length and 4 in breadth, and was formed by the annexation of the parishes of Dumbellan and Kinnaird. The town is well lighted with gas by a company, and occupies a dry and salubrious situation, on a point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogie with the Deveron, the stream of each being crossed by a bridge; of late years it has become a fashionable summer resort, and the healthiness of the climate is not excelled by any other in the north of Scotland. There are four principal streets crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square for the market place, in which stands the Huntly-Brander Public Library, erected in 1885; this fine building is in the Perpendicular Gothic style of the 16th century, and was presented by William Brander esq. of London, as part of a gift of £8,500 for educational purposes. The library consists of about 7,000 volumes of useful literature. Stewart's Hall, in Gordon street, burnt down in 1886 and rebuilt in 1887, is an imposing structure, surmounted with a tower containing a clock; the large hall, used for public meetings, will seat 650 persons. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. who is superior, appoints a baron bailie. Justice of peace courts are held as occasions require, in the above-mentioned hall, and a sheriff's small debt court quarterly, the jurisdiction of the latter extending over twelve parishes. A monument of granite and stone, standing in the square, was erected in 1862 to Charles Gordon Lennox, 5th Duke of Richmond and Gordon, d. 21 Oct. 1860, by the tenantry of Huntly. There is also a drinking fountain of granite, erected in 1882 to James Robertson, banker, of Huntly, d. Feb. 1877.

There are, besides the Parish and Free churches, several other places of worship. Several public and charitable educational establishments are well sustained, and conducted with ability. The Gordon schools, opened in 1841, were founded by the late Duchess in 1839, and are near to the Lodge, formerly her residence. The premises were enlarged in 1888 for 1,000 children. Under a new scheme propounded by the Educational Endowment Commissioners of Scotland, provision is made for Brander Foundations and scholars educated from the funds of the Gordon Trust. Adjoining is a building erected at a cost of about £3,000, as a school for secondary education. A home for the aged and destitute of both sexes, founded and endowed by the late Alexander Scott esq. of Craibstone House, was enlarged in 1899 at a cost of £5,000, and endowed with about £70,000, left by the late Mr. Morrison, of Bognie. The Cottage Hospital, erected by subscription in 1887-8 as a memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee, contains sixteen beds and a fever ward, and is maintained by five surrounding parishes. Agriculture has achieved great success in this parish. The acreage of arable land is very considerable, and some of the eminences are clothed with fine plantations. Mungo's Hill, in the district of Kinnaird, has the appearance of a volcano, and on the summit there is an opening, which is generally filled with water, though in dry seasons peat is obtained from it, strongly impregnated with sulphur; and pieces of lava have, it is said, been found round it. Limestone, some of which approaches to the nature of marble and takes a very high polish, is also obtained in the parish. The principal hotels are the Gordon Arms and the Strathbeggie Hotel, where tourists and visitors will find every accommodation. The town was once famed for the weaving of fine linen, but since the beginning of this century this branch of industry has gradually decreased. There are three woollen factories, a hosiery factory and an extensive agricultural implement factory, which gives employment to a number of hands. There is an auction mart, in which sales are conducted every Wednesday. Feeding markets for hiring servants are held on the Thursday before the 25th of May, the second Thursday in July and the Thursday before the 28th November. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon INVERALLOCHY is a quadra parish formed from the parish of Rathen about the year 1877, in Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court, 2½ miles from Rathen railway station, near the sea coast. The chief landowner is Mrs. Fraser, of Castle Fraser. The parish church, built about 1840 and remodelled in 1880, is a plain stone building with spire on north end and has sittings for 500 persons. The population in 1891 was 1,463.

Cairnbulg is a small fishing village in the parish, on the north coast of the county, and is only divided from the village of Inveralloch by a small stream.

INVERNETIE and INVERURIE, see PETERHEAD.

INVERURIE is a town, likewise a royal burgh, and parish, lying at the termination of the peninsula between the river Ury on the north and the Don on the south, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 16 miles north-west of Aberdeen, 24 south-west of Huntly and 5 west-by-south of Old Meldrum, pleasantly situated on the neck of land formed by the confinement of the streams before mentioned. Tradition reports that Inverurie was erected into a royal burgh by King Robert Bruce on the occasion of a signal victory obtained by him in the neighbourhood over Comyn, Earl of Buchan, the King of England's general in Scotland. The oldest charter is a novodamus by Queen Mary, the preamble of which states that Inverurie had been a royal burgh from time immemorial, but that the charter of its erection had been lost during the civil wars. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and three councillors, and under the Reform Act of 1832 is included in the parliamentary division of the Elgin Burghs, returning one member. The town is well lighted with gas, and supplied with good water brought from the lands of Keith Hall. The Great North of Scotland Railway Co. is now (1899) erecting extensive engineering works here, at a cost of about £45,000, and a new passenger station is also in course of construction at the northern end of the town. A bridge was erected in 1791 over the Don, at an expense of £2,000, and subsequently another was carried over the Ury. Inverurie confers the title of baron on the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. who has a fine mansion, Keith Hall, a little to the east of the town. The Town Hall, erected in 1862, at a cost of nearly £3,000, is a structure of light grey granite, with a tower containing a clock placed in 1789: the building comprises a public hall, market hall, council chamber, committee room, public library and museum. The Drill Hall and Armoury, erected in 1896, at a cost of £1,500, is a building of stone, with a residence for the drill instructor. The Public Fountain, in the Market place, was erected in 1873, at a cost of £200, as a memorial to John Amnand, provost from 1870 to 1879. The Town and County, the North of Scotland and the Union Banking Companies have each a branch establishment here, and there is also a Savings Bank. Garioch District Hospital for Infectious Diseases, erected in 1898, at a cost of about £3,000, is a building of stone, with 25 beds. Inverurie has become a favourite resort during the summer months, the Don and the Ury affording ample sport to the angler. There is a first-class hotel here, the "Kintore Arms." The Bass of Inverurie, a conical mount, 50 or 60 feet high, overhangs the isolated churchyard near it, and it appears to have been the site of the chief castle of the Earls (or rather lords) of Garioch, as early as about the year 1200: the field in which it stands is still called the Castle yards of Inverurie. The area is 4,946 acres; rateable value—burghal, £8,967; landward, £4,384; population of the parish in 1881, 3,038, and in 1891, 2,954; of this number the burgh contained 2,625.

KEITH HALL and KINKELL form a united parish in the district of Garioch, lying on the left banks of the Ury and Don, which rivers unite opposite its centre, 3 miles east from Inverurie station on the Great North of Scotland railway. It is recorded that many who fell in the battle of Harlaw, 24 July, 1411, were buried at Kinkell, which at that period was the principal church in this part of the county. The Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G., has a seat in this parish. At Kinmuck, also in the parish, the Society of Friends established themselves about the year 1662, but the present meeting house was probably built about 1681, and had a school and residence for the masters. It has since been improved, and contains a free library with many ancient and modern works, illustrative of the history and doctrines of the society. Their burial ground is near it, on the opposite side of the road. Area, 7,601 acres; rateable value, £7,826; population in 1881, 880, and in 1891, 822.

Post Office, Kinmuck; Mrs. Barbara Adam, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Inverurie. Delivery, 12.15 p.m.; dispatch, 12 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Inverurie, 3½ miles distant.

KILDROMMY parish lies in a valley, 7 miles from Alford railway station, 35 miles west from Aberdeen and 16 south from Huntly, in the Huntly small debt court district. The castle of Kildrummy, which anciently belonged to David, Earl of Huntly and Garioch, was a seat of King Robert Bruce, and served as a place of retreat for his queen in the winter of 1306; it is a ruin of great antiquity and appears to have been strongly fortified and furnished with subterraneous passages and places of concealment. One of its seven towers, from the whiteness of its stone, was called the "Snow Tower;" the ruins cover an acre of ground, but the whole, including the grounds, was purchased in 1899 by James Ogston esq. and is now in course of restoration for the purpose of residence. Brax Lodge is the residence of the Hon. Atholl Monson Forbes D.L., J.F. The parish has an area of 10,362 acres; rateable value, £4,093, and its population in 1891 was 563.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, a parish and village, the latter the east of a presbytery, is on the public road and the banks of the Dee between Aberdeen and Ballater, 26 miles west from the former, 16 north-east from the latter and 2 south-east from Dees station, Deeside line, and in Aberdeen small debt court district. St. Erchan's well, whose waters are said to be of a medicinal character, is near this village; this place is much resorted to for the summer retirement of invalids, being much protected from the north and east winds, and having an extensive prospect up the river towards the Grampian mountains. In early days Kincardine was of some note, for it is upon record that a wooden bridge was built across the Dee 600 years ago, the expense of which was defrayed by a knight called Allan Dward. The parish, which is about 9 miles in length by 6 in extreme breadth, is partly hilly and pastoral and partly arable, while in some places are thriving plantations. The village contains a public hall, erected in 1885 by subscription. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last Tuesday in August (o.s.). Mrs. Mary Pickering is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 18,132; rateable value, £13,333; and the population in 1881 was 1,951, and in 1891, 1,828; ecclesiastical parish, 1,006.

KING EDWARD is a parish with a station on the Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 6 miles north from Turriff, 5 south from Macduff and 5 south-east from Banff, in the northern part of the county, in Buchan poor combination and Turriff small debt court, and is 12 miles in length from west to east by from 2 to 5 in breadth, its western extremity being washed by the Deveron; on the north it is bounded by Gamrie, on the east by New Byth and on the south by Turriff. The general surface is undulating; there are extensive plantations and the district is advanced in agriculture. A streamlet, tributary to the Deveron, pursues a westerly direction through the parish, and on its right bank stands the ruins of the ancient castle of King Edward, once the seat of the potent Comyns, Earls of Buchan. The parish church, built in 1848, is a plain stone building, with belfry on west end containing one bell: there are sittings for 600 persons. The principal landowners are the Duke of Fife K.T., P.C., Major Francis E.
 R. Pollard Urquhart D.L., J.P. of Craigston and B. C. Urquhart, of Mel'drum and Byth. Rateable value, £12,450; acreage, 18,570; population in 1881, 3,068, and in 1891, 2,817.

KINTORE is a royal burgh, and gives its name to the parish; the town, which is small, is 12½ miles north-west from Aberdeen and between 3 and 4 south-east from Inverurie, on the public road near the Don, and has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, which is also the junction for Alford. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, assisted by a council of nine other burghesses, and is in the same parliamentary division as Inverurie. In this parish are numerous cairns and tumuli, which are said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the army of Edward I. after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverurie; and within the parish are the ruins of Hall Forest Castle, formerly a hunting seat of King Robert and now the property of the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. to whom three-fourths of the parish belongs. The North of Scotland Bank Limited have a branch establishment. The markets formerly held here have been discontinued. Port Elphinstone, a village in this parish on the river Don, about a mile from Inverurie, has meal and paper mills and a brewery; here also have been erected several prettily-situated residences. The area of the parish is 9,092 acres; rateable value, burghal £2,707, landward £3,746; population of the parish in 1881, 2,327, and in 1891, 2,409, 686 of this number belonging to the town.

LEOCHEL - CUSHNIE is a joint parish, 2½ miles from Whitehouse railway station and 3 south from Alford, in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. The ruins of the ancient castles of Lintnirk and Corse are within the parish. In the latter several of the Forbes family were born, one of whom, Patrick Forbes of Corse, Bishop of Aberdeen 1618-35, wrote a Commentary on the Revelations. Craigievar Castle, the elegant seat of Lord Sempill D.L., J.P., V.D. is also in this parish, and from its elevated situation commands an extensive prospect of the country. Acreage, 12,856; rateable value, £7,486; population in 1881, 1,217, and in 1891, 1,146.

Post Office, Milltown of Cushnie; James Mitchell, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Aberdeen. Delivery, 11.55 a.m.; dispatch, 1.30 a.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Sinnahard is the nearest money order office; the nearest telegraph office is at Alford, 7½ miles distant.

Post Office, Craigievar; George Adam, postmaster. Letters received through Aberdeen. Delivery, 11.30 a.m.; dispatch, 5.30 a.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Whitehouse railway station, 5 miles distant.

LONGSIDE is a parish and village, with railway station, 6 miles west of Peterhead, 4 east from Old Deer and about 30 north of Aberdeen, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. Feeding fairs are held on the second Thursday in May and the second Tuesday in November. The Established church, built in 1836, is a plain stone building, seated for about 1,200 persons. The old church, built in 1620, still stands in the churchyard, and was the original church of the parish. The whole district included in the parish once formed part of the parish of Peterhead, then called Petergrie. The entrance to the churchyard is by a lych gate, built in 1705, but rarely seen in the North of Scotland. The Episcopal church of St. John is a fine stone structure, and consists of chancel, nave with aisles, and a tower, rising 90 feet high, between nave and chancel: the altar is of white Sicilian marble, and there is a beautiful reredos of Caen stone: there are sittings for 500 persons. In the churchyard of this parish is a monument to the Rev. John Skinner, who died in 1807, having been for 64 years minister of the Episcopal congregation at Longside; he was also dean of the diocese, and author of the popular song entitled "Tullochgorum," as well as other poetical compositions, and a contemporary of Burns. His son (Bishop John Skinner) and his grandson (Bishop William Skinner) became subsequently Primus of the Scotch Church. There is also a Free church in the parish. Acreage of the parish, 16,836; valuation, £17,591; population in 1891 was 3,018.

Mintlaw is a village in this parish, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The Public Hall was erected in 1893, and there is a board school. Population in 1891, 435.

LONGMAY parish, with a station on the Fraserburgh branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, 4 miles south-east from Fraserburgh, has about 4 miles of sea coast, is 10 miles long, and varies in breadth from half a mile to 4 miles. It is in Bucban poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court. The parish church, built in 1788, is a plain stone building, and has sittings for 500 persons; the former church, built in 1607, and part of a wall is still standing. The original church, now in ruins in the churchyard at St. Comba, must have been erected somewhere about the 12th century, and was dedicated to St. Columba, hence the name of the village of recent date which is now beside it. Adjoining the present church is the family burying-ground of the Gordons of Cairness. The Episcopal church of St. Columba, originally built about 1720, but reconstructed and added to in 1862, now consists of nave, chancel, small transept, porch and vestry, and has sittings for 200 persons; there is a brass by the chancel arch in memory of Lady Arabella Diana, wife of Sir Alexander Banerman bart. d. 1869, and in the churchyard is the grave of Sir Alexander Banerman bart. of Elswick and Crimonmogate, d. 1877. Crimonmogate is the seat of Lord and Lady Carnegie; and Cairness, the seat of Sir James Lyle Mackay K.C.I.E. The chief landowners are Charles T. Gordon esq. D.L., J.P. and Lady Carnegie. The soil is sandy, but generally fertile. The acreage of the parish is 11,075; assessable value, £11,907; population in 1891, 1,726.

St. Comba is a nsning village in the parish; the nearest railway station is at Rathen, 3 miles distant. Population in 1891, 561.

LUMPHANAN parish has a station on the Decaide railway, about 26 miles west from Aberdeen and 16 north-east from Ballater; the parish, which is about a x miles in length and four in breadth, is in the Aberdeen small debt court district. The name signifies "the bare little valley," but this designation is not in the present lay applicable to the lowlands, which are well cultivated and fruitful. This is the distr ct in which Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place is about a mile north from the kirk, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones (in the midat of which a stone coffin was found some time ago) has been raised commemorative of the event, and corroborative of the finale of Shakespeare's drama. The principal landowners are Dr. Robert Farquharson M.P., M.D., D.L., J.P. of Finzean, Aboyne, Lord Sempill and trustees of the late Robert Smith esq. The parish consists of 8,754 acres; rateable value, £6,269, with a population in 1881 of 1,130, and in 1891, 992.

NEW MACHAR is a parish in the district of Buchan, lying chiefly in Aberdeenshire, but partly in the county of Banff, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway; it extends nine miles in length by two and a half in breadth; it is in the Aberdeen poor combination and small debt court district of same. The parish kirk stands in the village of Summerhill, 10 miles north-north-west from Aberdeen, where there is also a Free church and a public school. The Episcopal church of All Saints, at Whiteashes, was built in 1850 and consecrated in 1880. The country is generally rather flat and the soil is mostly arable, with several patches of wet mossy land, while in the southern quarter are some fine plantations. There is a small lake near the boundary of Old Machar, called Bishop's Loch, in which is an island whereon stand the ruins of a castle once belonging to the Bishops of Aberdeen. The area is 9,002 acres; rateable value, £9,445; population in 1881, 1,605, and in 1891, 1,397.

Post, Money Order, Telegraph, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Summerhill; George Cooper, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Aberdeen. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 1.30 p.m.; dispatch, 8.25 a.m. & 2 p.m.

OLD MELDRUM is a police burgh and a market town, pleasantly situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff, 18 miles north-west from the former, 27 south-east from the latter and 5 north-east from Inverurie. The Great North of Scotland railway has a branch line here from Inverurie. The streets and dwellings are irregularly laid out, but of late have been much improved. Meldrum was constituted a burgh of barony in the year 1672, under the jurisdiction of two bailies, and was elected a police burgh in 1833. Meldrum House, the property of B. C. Urquhart esq. and now occupied by Mrs. Duff, is romantically situated, and from its antique style of architecture, has a striking effect, and is surrounded with fine scenery. The Town Hall has a tower with an illuminated clock. The North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Town and County Bank Limited have each a branch establishment in the town. The principal branches of business are composed in an extensive distillery and a brewery. The district is partly arable and partly pastoral; the soil of the southern portion is fertile, but that of the northern shallow and less fruitful. The market is held every third Tuesday. Acreage of the parish, 8,102; rateable value, burghal £3,794, landward £7,545; population in 1881, 2,254, and in 1891, 2,019, of which number 1,321 were returned for the town.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; Charles Peterkin, sub-postmaster. METHLICK parish, 6 miles west from Arnage station on the Aberdeen and Fraserburgh section of the Great North of Scotland railway, about 7½ miles east-south-east from Fyvie, the same distance north from Old Meldrum, 14 south-east from Turfiff and 21 north-west from Aberdeen, is bounded by Fyvie on the west, New Deer on the north, Saroch and Ellon on the east and Tarves on the south; it extends 9 miles in length by upwards of 4 in breadth; it is in Buchan poor combination and Ellon small debt court. The district is intersected throughout its extent from the north-west to the south-east by the river Ythan, on the banks of which are some thriving plantations. Close to the village the river is crossed by an iron bridge. The parish church, built by the Earl of Aberdeen in 1867, at a cost of over £4,000, is a cruciform structure in the Norman Gothic style, after plans by Messrs. Brown and Wardrop, Edinburgh, and consists of nave, transept, eastern apse, vestry and a saddle-back tower: there are sittings for 920 persons. The old church, built in 1780, is now in ruins and covered with ivy; in the old churchyard is the mausoleum of the Hamilton-Gordon family, Earls of Aberdeen. Two miles from the village is Haddo House, a seat of the Earl of Aberdeen G.C.M.G., P.C. lord lieutenant of the county and sole heritor of the parish; it is surrounded with extensive parks, in which are many fine drives and grand old trees; the house is in the Palladian style, but has been frequently added to and altered, the present earl having built a chapel on the north side and made large additions on the south side. Fairs formerly held in the village on the first Thursday after the 11th of May and the first Wednesday after the 18th of November, are now obsolete. Area, 14,842 acres; rateable value, £10,625; population of the parish in 1881, 2,162, and in 1891, 2,067.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; Lewis Cant, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Aberdeen. Deliveries, 8.35 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 6.30 a.m. & 12.10 p.m.

Post Office, Cairnrorrie; John Gammie, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Aberdeen. Arrival, 10.10 a.m.; dispatch, 1.20 p.m. Methlick, 3 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office.

MONYMSK parish is about 7 miles long and from 4 to 5 broad, 8 miles south-west from Inverurie, in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. The Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland Line has a station about half a mile from the village, and one at Tillyfourie, 3 miles distant. Monymusk House, the seat of Sir Arthur Henry Grant bart. D.L., J.P. is on the right bank of the Don, environed by fine plantations; the estate is remarkable for its fine timber, some larch and fir trees near the river being of unusual size. Pitfichie Castle, now in ruins, is finely situated. The village is built in the form of a square, with the parish church in the centre, a part of which is believed to have been erected about the time of Malcolm Canmore: there was formerly an ancient priory beside it. Area, 10,728 acres; rateable value, £7,890; population in 1881, 1,155, and in 1891, 1,025.

OYNE, a parish in Garioch district, is of an irregular figure, stretching about 6 miles in length, by from 2 to 3 in breadth, the high hill of Benachie lying within it, and has a station on the Great North of Scotland line. Aberdeen is about 25 miles south-east and Huntly 14 north-west. Pet-mathen House, the residence of Major Thomas Leith D.L., J.P. is a short distance off the railway station, and near to it is West Hall, the seat of Mrs. Disney Leith.
In this parish are the ruins of an old castle, believed to have belonged to the family of Leith. A detached part of the parish (Tillyfour) lies along the river Don: here is Tillyfour Castle, the seat of Francis Robert Gregson esq. D.L., J.P. Acreage, 10,131;
rateable value, £6,028; population in 1881,

PETERCULTER parish is about 12 miles in length and 4 in breadth and is situated 7 1/2 miles south-west from Aberdeen.
The surface is rugged and uneven, with hills and valleys, rocky eminences and marshy flats interspersed. On the banks of the sea and its tributary streams, however, the soil is tolerably fertile. On the summit of the hills of Oldtown are the remains of a rectangular encampment. The Dee Side Railway Company have three stations in the parish, in which are also the paper mills belonging to the Culter Mills Paper Co. Limited, employing about 500 hands. The area of the parish is 10,547 acres; rateable value, £41,139; population in 1891, 2,052; ecclesiastical parish, 2,001. Cults, a village, has been transferred from this parish to Aberdeen city parish, under the Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act.

MURGLE & MILLTIMBER are villages on the road to Aberdeen, both with stations on the Dee Side railway.

PETERHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BUCHANHAVEN, BURNHAVEN, INVERNETTIE AND INVERUGIE.

PETERHEAD is a considerable sea-port town, burgh of barony, and parish, within the district of Buchan, and is the terminus of the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway, opened 1862, 141 miles north-by-west of Edinburgh, 34 south-east of Banff, 33 north-east of Aberdeen, 18 south-south-east of Fraserburgh and 584 from London. It is situated upon a peninsula (the most easterly point of Scotland), about a mile south of the mouth of the river Ugie, the isthmus between the peninsula and the mainland being only eight hundred yards wide. The town is built in the form of a cross and is divided into four districts called the Kirktown, Bonheads, Keith Inch and Peterhead proper. The houses, built of granite, are many of them commodious and elegant, and the town is lighted with gas and supplied with excellent spring water. In years gone by the medicinal wells of Peterhead were much frequented; the waters are chalybeate and are abundant in the town and neighbourhood. Fossil shells in great quantities and of various kinds are found in the neighbourhood, 20 or 30 feet above the level of the sea, and these of kinds not to be met with in an original state; many curious pebbles also may be picked up on the shore. Numerous elegant buildings have within recent years been erected in the centre of the town. The Court House, a handsome building of granite, is in Queen street, and here the sheriff's court is held on the three first Fridays in the month. The Town House, at the head of the principal street, is an elegant edifice, with a spire 129 feet high and an illuminated clock, and contains the town hall. The Music Hall buildings form a large and beautiful pile, comprising upper and lower halls, small halls and convenient ante-rooms, with shops on the ground floor. The Police Offices, in Merchant street, erected in 1899, are also of granite. Peterhead was founded and erected into a burgh of barony by George, Earl Marischal, in the year 1593; but in 1715 it was forfeited by this family in consequence of their adherence to the unfortunate house of Stuart, and purchased, with the neighbouring lands, by the York Building Co. in 1726, but that concern being dissolved, it was bought by the trustees or governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, Edinburgh, for £3,000, and they are still the superiors.

The town is governed by a provost and magistrates and a town council. The nomination of the magistrates was, by charter, vested in the superiors of the town and the magistrates and councillors, the latter of whom were formerly elected by a majority of the feuders, but since the elective franchise was conferred upon the burgh the magistrates and councillors are elected by the householders therein. The town now enjoys the privileges of a parliamentary burgh, and in conjunction with Kintore, Elgin, Cullen, Banff and Inverurie, returns one member to Parliament for the Elgin district of burghs, and when, in 1868, the county of Aberdeen was separated into Eastern and Western parliamentary divisions, each returning one member to Parliament, Peterhead was created the returning burgh for the Eastern division, and is known as the capital of Buchan or East Aberdeenshire, but the electoral returns are now made in Aberdeen. In front of the Town Hall and facing the main street, on a pedestal of granite, stands a statue in bronze of Field-Marshal James Francis Edward Keith, born at Inverugie, 1696; killed at the battle of Hochkirchen, 14 October, 1758. This statue was presented by William I. King of Prussia, to the Town of Peterhead, in August, 1868.

For a long series of years the harbours of Peterhead have been held to be of great importance. So early as 1661, in the first Parliament of King Charles II. an Act was passed "for a contribution for repairing the harbours of Peterhead." In 1705 an Act of the Scottish Privy Council was obtained for a voluntary contribution within all the parish churches of the three Lothians and beyond of the Forth, for building and repairing these harbours; and in 1729, and again in 1739, the convention of royal burghs authorised a voluntary contribution throughout all the royal burghs in Scotland for the same purpose. In 1807, and again in 1827, Acts of Parliament were obtained for their further improvements. In recent years very large sums have been expended on the harbours, and Peterhead now possesses the finest and safest harbours to be found along the whole of the east coast of Scotland. The harbours are managed by a rotary board of trustees, a certain number of whom are elected annually from among the proprietors of land and heritages in the burgh, the ship owners and shore due ratepayers. The revenue can be applied only to the maintenance of the harbours, the payment of the interest of the debt, and the liquidation of the principal. In 1884 Peterhead was selected as the site of a national harbour of refuge for the Scotch coast, to be constructed by convict labour, and a large convict prison has since been erected, to which all Scotch convicts are now drafted, and up to the present year (1893) considerable progress has been made with the breakwater. The South Bay, which is the site of the projected harbour of refuge, has good anchorage. Peterhead possesses the grand advantage of north and south harbours, respectively of 11 and 7 acres in extent, communicating by means of a canal or channel, over which is a cast-iron swing bridge, upon the construction of which upwards of £8,000 was expended. In the north harbour there are two graving or dry docks, and at the entrance to both harbours are good lighthouses. Adjacent to the north harbour is also the boat harbour of Port Henry. The total number of British and foreign vessels entered with cargoes and in ballast in 1898 was 540, tonnage, 62,066; the number cleared was 542, of 60,360 tons. In the general coasting trade 480 entered, 47,222 tons; 474 cleared, tonnage, 46,166. The number of sailing and steam vessels registered under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, on December 31, 1898, was 35, of 2,173 tons. The number of fishing boats registered as belonging to this port under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, at the same date, was 411, requiring 2,064 men and boys to work them. Fishing boats and their implements are to be marked with the letters P. D. The revenue of the harbours in 1898 amounted to £11,869. At one time the community were deeply interested in the whale and seal fisheries, but recently, and at present, owing to the exhaustion of the Arctic fishing grounds, the industry is threatened with extinction. The herring fishery, commenced here in 1818 by a joint stock company, has become important, Peterhead having now obtained the first rank in this branch of maritime industry. Independent of the fishing and shipping trades, the town enjoys a good local trade. There are also two extensive and prosperous granite polishing establishments, employing upwards of 100 men, and Peterhead granite has attained considerable popularity throughout the world. The quarries are largely worked by Aberdeen polishing firms.

The Established church, standing at the junction of the south and west roads, founded in 1804 and opened in 1806, is a plain edifice of stone, with sittings for about 1,600 persons.

The East church (quoad sacra), in Queen street, was erected in 1877, and is Gothic in style; there are sittings for about 600 persons.

The Episcopal church of St. Peter, built in 1814, is also in the Gothic style, and affords sittings for 675 persons.

The governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, of Edinburgh, proprietors of the estate at Peterhead, have laid out and enclosed a large space as a public cemetery.

Amongst the literary institutions of the town may be mentioned the Reading Society, established in 1808, and a Mechanics' Institution, founded in 1836. The library belonging to the Reading Society numbers upwards of 5,000 volumes, and the library of the Mechanics' Institute about 1,000. There is also a solicitors' library. The Public Library's Act was adopted in 1890, and a building erected in 1892 in St. Peter street, in which is contained the Arbuthnot Museum and Art Gallery, reading room, lending library, reference library and recreation room, the whole costing about £6,000; the museum, a very valuable one, collected by the late Adam Arbuthnot esq. by whom it was bequeathed to the town, contains a great variety of specimens from the animal and mineral kingdoms, while the collection of coins is one of the most complete to be met with; the museum is under the care and management of the Public Library Committee; the lending library, containing over 7,000 volumes, is much used, while the news room is largely taken advantage of by all classes; the foundation stone was laid 8th August, 1891, by Mrs. Carnegie, wife of the famous millionaire, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of Pittsburg, who has contributed handsomely to the funds of the building.

There are also several excellent schools. Public Baths were erected in 1899, in Lodge walk, and comprise two swimming ponds and Turkish and slipper baths. Two newspapers are published here—the "Peterhead Sentinel," established in 1856, and the "Buchan Observer," both enjoying a large circulation in the district of Buchan; the "Sentinel" is published on Saturdays, and the "Observer" on Tuesdays. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the third Tuesday in May and the second Tuesday in November. The area of the parish is 9,170 acres; the assessable value of the burgh is £42,697, and of the landward part of the parish, £17,780; total, £60,477. The population of the burgh was in 1881, 10,953, and in 1891, 12,226, of whom 5,000 are within the East Church district; 3,604 of the parish population are beyond the limits of the burgh.

Buchanhaven is a small fishing village on the east coast, within the burgh of Peterhead and about half a mile distant.

Burnhaven and Invernettie are two small villages in the parish of Peterhead, situated about half way between that town and Boddam, and chiefly inhabited by fishermen. At Invernettie are the very extensive works of the Glenugie Distillery. The nearest railway station is at Peterhead, 2 miles distant. Inverugie is a village, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 2½ miles west from Peterhead. Here are the ruins of Inverugie Castle, the birth-place, in 1696, of Field-Marshal Keith; the walls are still standing. The ruined castle of Ravenscraig, standing on the opposite side of the river, is built upon a rock, and is a good specimen of the ancient Scottish baronial style, in the square form so common to the beginning of the 13th century, and its walls are of such strength that, previous to the use of artillery, they would have rendered the place impregnable. See St. Fergus, p. 133.

PITSLIGO, see ROSEHEARTY.

NEW PITSLIGO is a quoad sacra parish formed in 1853 from Aberdeen, New Deer, Strichen and Tyrie, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village, about 4 miles west from Strichen station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and 12 south-west from Fraserburgh, was founded in 1787 by Sir William Forbes. Pillow lace is made here. Near the village are several good quarries of granite, largely used for building purposes in Buchan district. The Established church, standing on the hill of Terlundie, was erected in 1804, and rebuilt in 1853, and is a plain edifice of stone with a belfry; there are sittings for 850 persons. The Free church, built about 1846, is also of stone and will seat 350 persons. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist was erected in 1871, on the site of the former building, at a cost of about £4,000, from designs by Mr. George E. Street R.A.; it is in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, transept and crypt; it has sittings for 450 persons. The Congregational church, built in 1862, has sittings for 250 persons. The population in 1891 was 2,433.

RATHEN parish (and a station on a section of the Great North of Scotland railway) is about 3½ miles south from Fraserburgh, and is about 8 miles long with a medium of 2 in breadth, in Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court. The parish church, built in 1870, is an edifice of granite and freestone, with a tower and spire, and has sittings for 650 persons: the south aisle of the old church, which is several hundred years old, is still standing. The chief landowners are Lord Saltoun, Lieut.-Col. Alexander Chambers Hunter, of Tillery; Mrs. Fraser and William F. Cordiner esq. There are ruins here of two castles, which seem to have been places of considerable strength. The area is 9,587 acres; the assessable value is £11,072; population in 1881, 2,825, and in 1891, 2,827.

RHYNIE and ESSIE form a united parish in the district of Strathbogie, comprehending an area of 30 square miles, and bounded on the north by the barony of Gartly, on the south by Auchindoir and on the west by Cabrach, in the Hently small debt court district. The centre may be about 10 miles south from Huntly. Gartly station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, is 4 miles distant. The soil is rich and fertile on the banks of the Bogie; towards the hills it is light and gravelly, yet productive. Feeding markets are held on the Mondays before the 28th of May and the 28th November, and cattle markets from November to May, on the Saturday before the fourth Monday in each month, and the day after Keith in September and the day after Kennethmont in October. The only antiquity in this parish worthy of notice is a vitrified fort on the top of Noth Hill. The area is 12,897 acres; rateable value, £4,343; the population in 1891 was 1,043.

ROSEHEARTY AND PITSLIGO PARISH,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF SANDHAVEN, PITTLIE AND ARDLAW.

ROSEHEARTY, a maritime village and formerly a burgh of barony, is now a police burgh under the Act of 1892, in the parish of Pitsligo, Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Fraserburgh and 18 east from Banff. It has two good harbours, capable of admitting vessels of from 80 to 150 tons. The chief imports are coals and salt, and the exports, fish and grain. Although inconsiderable in size, it was a burgh of barony by charter of Charles II. dated July 13th, 1681.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; Alexander Mitchell, postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. Deliveries, 10.5 a.m. & 3.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.10 a.m. & 5.45 p.m.

Pitsligo parish lies in the district of Buchan, on the sea coast, betwixt New Aberdour on the west and Fraserburgh on the east, commencing about 2 miles west of Kinnaid Head, and $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Fraserburgh railway station. The land is generally fertile, and the face of the country level. Pitsligo Castle, formerly the seat of the Barons Forbes of Pitsligo, is an ancient structure, now in ruins, surrounded with extensive gardens. Pittulie Castle, half-a-mile east, once in possession of the Cumyn family, is also now in ruins. The labouring portion of the population are principally employed in fishing. The Established Church, originally built in 1632, and rebuilt in 1890, is a plain edifice of granite in the Gothic style: in the Pitsligo aisle is a carved oak screen, removed from the old church, where it was placed in 1634 by Alexander, first Lord Forbes of Pitsligo: this aisle and the pulpit are panelled with carved woodwork, also taken from the old church: there are sittings for 520 persons.

Sandhaven and Pittulie are two small villages, both situated between Kinnaid Head and Roseheartly Point, inhabited chiefly by fishermen. There is a good harbour at Sandhaven, which has been considerably enlarged and improved, £20,000 having been expended on it by the proprietor, the Hon. Charles J. R. H. S. Forbes-Trefusis, of Fettercairn, Kincardineshire.

Ardlaw is a small hamlet in this parish. In 1891 the parish of Pitsligo, the acreage of which is 4,641, contained a population of 2,582, and in 1891, 2,290, of which 1,236 were residents of Roseheartly.

The assessable value of Roseheartly burgh is £2,476, and of the landward part of Pitsligo parish, £6,086; total, £8,562.

Post & Telegraph Office, Sandhaven; Peter Slessor Third, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. Delivery, 9.45 a.m.; dispatches, 10.30 a.m. & 6 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Fraserburgh.

Post Office, Ardlaw; Fordyce Smart, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. Delivery, 11 a.m.; dispatch, 4.10 p.m. Roseheartly is the nearest money order office & Tyrie the nearest telegraph office, 2 miles distant.

ST. FERGUS, a village and parish on the coast of Aberdeenshire, is in that part of the district of Buchan which formerly belonged to the county of Banff, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. It is bounded on the east by the North Sea and on the south by the small river Ugie, which separates it from Peterhead. The village is 5 miles north from Peterhead terminal station on a branch from Maud Junction on the Great North of Scotland railway, and 13 south-east from Fraserburgh. The Established church, built in 1849, is a plain stone building with a belfry at west end: there are sittings for 677 persons. There is also a Free church and a Baptist chapel in the parish. James Franc's Edward Keith, field marshal in the Prussian service, and killed at Hochkirch, 1758, of whom a statue in bronze was presented to the town of Peterhead by King William I. of Prussia, was born in 1696 at Invergie Castle, the ruins of which stand in a bend of the river. Acreage of the parish, 8,856; assessable value, £7,541; population in 1881, 1,527, and in 1891, 1,318. Post & Telegraph Office: Alexander Walker, sub-postmaster. Letters through Peterhead arrive at 11.35 a.m.; dispatches, 11.25 a.m. & 3.30 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Peterhead SLAINS (which includes the ancient parish of Forvie) is on the sea coast, and lies north-east of the old burgh of Newburgh and separated therefrom by the navigable river Ythan. It is about 5 miles east from the burgh of Ellon, on the old turnpike road between Aberdeen and Peterhead, and is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, the coast here being rocky, with many caves, one of which is 200 feet in length.

Forvie was once a parish, and the ruins of the old church may still be seen there. A sandy desert, partly covered with bent, lies directly south from Collieston, and in the immediate neighbourhood. The ruins of Slains Castle, dismantled about 1594, are on a rock 120 feet above the sea and about 2 miles north of St. Catharine's Dub, where it is supposed that the "St. Catharine," one of the ships of the Spanish Armada, was wrecked in 1588. The Established church was erected in 1806. The area is 9,124 acres; rateable value, £7,505; population in 1891, 1,279.

Collieston and Oldcastle are villages, largely frequented by visitors in summer for sea bathing, and at the former a harbour is being constructed.

"TRICHEN" is a parish, with a station on the Promartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 3½ miles north of Aberdeen, 20 east of Banff, 16 west-by-north from Turriff, 15 north-by-west from Peterhead and 9 south from Fraserburgh, situated on the north bank of the Ugie, Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village is well supplied with water, and the streets are lighted with gas by a company. The town house is a structure erected in the year 1816 by the late Mrs. Fraser, of Strichen, at an expense of £2,000. On the side of one of the hills in this parish are the figures of a horse and a stag, formed by large pieces of stone, which have a singular effect at a distance. Upon the same hill is a hunting lodge, on which is inscribed, "This hunter's lodge, Rob Gibb commands." About one mile south-west from the village is Strichen House, the property of the late George Alexander Baird esq. of Strichen and Stichill, a substantial building in the Gothic style, erected in 1820-2; it is surrounded by an extensive park, embracing the finest woods and trees in Buchan district. The Established church is a plain stone building, built in 1799, and remodelled and re-seated internally about 1884, and has sittings for 900 persons. The Episcopal church of All Saints is a small structure in the Early English style, and consists of nave and chancel: it was built in 1861, consecrated in 1863, enlarged and re-consecrated in 1891, and has sittings for 200 persons. The Free church is a stone building, and was opened in July, 1894: it is in the Gothic style, and will seat 400 persons. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday of every month. Acreage of parish, 10,183; assessable value, £15,338; population in 1881, 2,348, in 1891, 2,171, and including Technuiry, 2,552; ecclesiastical parish, in 1881, 1,204, and in 1891, 1,902.
 The district of Technuiry, which was until 1890 part of the parish of Fraserburgh, was transferred in that year by the Boundary Commissioners to the parish of Strichen; it contains a school under the management of the School Board of Strichen; it is also used as a preaching station in connection with the Established church of Fraserburgh.

TARLAND parish is in the Western division of the county and in the Aberdeen small debt court district. The village, which is a burgh of barony, is 31 miles west from Aberdeen, 5 1/2 north-west from Aboyne and 11 north-north-east from Ballater, situated nearly in the centre of the district of Cymarr, the nearest railway stations being Aboyne, 6 miles and Dinnet, 5 miles distant, both on the Great North of Scotland railway. The lands about here are mostly level, but the greater proportion of the parish is mountainous, and the seasons are cold; the woods which have been planted will, however, be the means of materially ameliorating the latter. A small rivulet falls into the river Dee, near Aboyne.
 Branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Town and County Bank Limited are established in the burgh. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in January, second Wednesday in February, second Wednesday in March, third Wednesday in May, first Wednesday in June, Friday after St. Sairs in July, third Wednesday in November and first Wednesday in December. The Earl of Aberdeen G.C.M.G., P.C., F.S.A. is the principal landowner. Acreage, 17,381; rateable value, £3,873; population of the parish in 1891, 658.

TURRIFF is a free burgh of barony (of which the Duke of Fife is the feudal superior), the seat of a presbytery and the capital of the parish of that name, with a station on the Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 34½ miles north-north-west of Aberdeen, 17 north-north-west of Old Meldrum and 11 south-south-east of Banff; it is situated on a tributary stream of the Deveron and near that river, and is in Buchan poor combination. A charter, dated 10th March, 1511, was granted by James IV. in favour of Thomas Dickson, prebend of Turriff, by which the inhabitants were entitled to hold a weekly market on the Sabbath day, and three fairs annually, each to continue eight days. A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly in the Town Hall, and justice of peace and police courts when required. In 1853 the householders adopted certain provisions of the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act of 1850, and latterly almost the entire provisions of the more recent Act of 1862, but the affairs of the burgh are now regulated and administered under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, by nine commissioners of police, three of whom are elected annually. These commissioners elect from their own number a provost and two junior magistrates, who in their turn appoint a procurator fiscal, and within their jurisdiction exercise in all cases of petty offences the functions of sheriff and magistrates of police. Turriff is one of the most flourishing little towns in the north of Aberdeenshire. The town is clean and neat, and gas-lighted by a private company, formed in 1837. In the same year a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited was established here, and subsequently three other banks; the premises of the North of Scotland Bank Limited, erected at a cost of about £2,000, are of red sandstone, in the old Scotch style, and include a tower containing an illuminated clock with three dials. The Town Hall, a plain building of stone, was erected in 1898, at a cost of £1,100; it will hold 600 persons and is the property of a limited liability company. The Parish Church Hall, built in 1894, at a cost of £1,500, with sittings for 600 persons, and the Episcopal Church Hall, erected in 1897, at a cost of £350, with 400 sittings, are both available for all descriptions of public meetings. The Cottage Hospital was erected by the Commissioners of the burgh and the Turriff district committee of the County Council, for the joint use of the burgh and district, at a cost of £2,000; it contains 16 beds, and is used for infectious diseases. The public park, on the old Market hill, over 11 acres in area, was purchased by Provost Hutcheon, at a cost of £400, and presented by him to the burgh in 1899. The Haughs, situated between the town and the railway station, and extending over 44 acres, were taken over, about 1875, from the Earl of Fife on an improving lease and reclaimed from a bog state, and in 1898 purchased from the present superiors of the burgh, at a cost of £1,600; the land is at present (1899) under the control of the Haughs Association, but will eventually become the property of the burgh. The parish church, built in 1794, is a plain edifice of stone, slightly Gothic in style, and has sittings for 1,400 persons. The church of Turriff in the Middle Ages belonged to the Abbey of Arbroath. The former church, now in ruins, stands on the site of an earlier fabric. The Episcopal church of St. Congan, built in 1862, consists of chancel, nave and a tower with spire 80 feet high; the windows are stained, and there are sittings for 300 persons. The Free church, built in 1844, is a plain building of stone, and has sittings for 500 persons; the manse adjoins the church, and has a good garden. The vicinity of Turriff is of an agreeable character, and among its residents are several families of distinction. The Trot of Turriff was fought between the Covenanters and Royalists in 1639, and was the first blood shed in the great Civil war. Within the parish are the ruins of Towie Barclay Castle, the seat of the ancient family of Barclays, the banquet hall of which is still in perfect preservation. Michael Barclay De Tolly, the famous Russian general, and a member of this family, led the Russian army on the occasion of Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow. The chief landowners are Ainslie D. Ainslie esq. of Deigaty Castle; Major Garden A. Duff, Hatton Castle; Henry A. Farquhar-Spottiswood esq. Muireisk; Alexander Stuart esq. Laithers; Lieut.-Col. Franc's E. R. Pollard-Urquhart, Craigston Castle; John Adam Milne esq. of Ardmiddle; and the tutors and curators of Sir George William Abercrombie bart. of Birkenhead and Forglan (a minor). Messrs. Alexander and Francis George, of Bonif and Macduff, are the proprietors of the burgh. Fairs were held on the second and fourth Wednesday in each month, but these are now obsolete; those now held are on Saturday before the 27th of May (feeling market) and Saturday before the 23rd of November; cattle markets and auction sales are held every Tuesday and Thursday. The area of the parish is 18,386 acres; rateable value, burghal £7,262, landward £18,039; the population was in 1881, 4,343, and in 1891, 4,253, of which the town contained 2,341.

TYRIE parish is 5½ miles south-west from Fraserburgh station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and extends about 10 miles in length by 4½ in breadth, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The surface is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, heath, moss, meadow, corn land and grass parks. On the northern verge of the parish is the old church of Tyrie, an ancient structure, supposed to have been originally erected about the year 1004, when the Thane of Buchan routed the Danish army upon the neighbouring emineces. The present church, built in 1800, is a small stone building, and will seat about 300 persons. The area of the parish is 11,182 acres; rateable value, £10,305; the population of the entire parish of Tyrie was in 1881, 3,391, and in 1891, 2,843 (of which 2,436 belongs to New Pitsligo, which see); ecclesiastical parish, 795.

Boyndlie is a part of the parish of Tyrie, and is a large farming district. Boyndlie is the seat of John O. M. Ogilvie-Forbes esq.
D.L., J.P. The nearest railway station is Robertson, distant 5 miles south.

ARGYLLSHIRE,

Or, as it is frequently written, Argyleshire, and known to the Latin geographers as "Argathela," is a large county in the south-western extremity of the Highlands, the second largest county in Scotland, and third largest in the United Kingdom, extending 115 miles from north, near Loch Eil, to the southern point Sanda, an island lying off the Mull of Cantyre, with a width, excluding its most westerly islands, of about 70 miles. It is bounded on the north by Inverness, east by Perth, Dumbarton, Renfrew, Rute and Ayr, and on the south and west by the sea; its coast is very much indented by bays, inlets and sea lochs, and the coastline measures nearly 700 miles: this includes the numerous islands belonging to this county, of which the largest are Islay, Jura and Mull. The area comprises 2,025,154 acres. The population in 1891 was 75,003 (36,771 males and 38,232 females), and in 1881, 76,488; the inhabited houses were 15,680 in 1891, and 15,481 in 1881.

The early history is to some extent that of the kingdom of Scotland. The Scots, who were reputed to be a Spanish sept, settled in Ireland, then known as Scotia, having in the third century set out an expedition under Cairbre Ruadh, son of Conan II. king of the Scots; this army landed in Cantyre, in the county, and founded Dalruadhain (now Campbeltown), but the Scots were afterwards driven back to Ireland, only to return in the fifth century under Lorn Angus and Fergus, sons of Ere, from the first of whom a large division of the county took its name; these Scots, subsequently conquering the North and South Picts, and Strath Clyde Britons, became kings of what was from that period styled Scotia, or Scotland. Later on, when they moved their seat of government to a more central position, the county of Dalruadhain (or Argyll) fell under the dominion of the Macdonalds of the Isles, who assumed royal powers, holding parliaments, and enacting laws, until the Bruces brought the disorderly clans into some kind of subordination. The ancient inhabitants of the Highlands of Argyllshire prided themselves on their endurance of hunger and fatigue, and they were passionately fond of music and poetry. In former ages the western coast of Argyllshire was perpetually exposed to descents and depredations of the Danes and the Irish, who could not penetrate any considerable distance into the interior; if an enemy landed, or was seen hovering on the coast, in the course of a few hours the whole country was alarmed, and the men repaired to the shore completely armed. The men celebrated by Ossian were a militia, established in Argyllshire, for the purpose of defending the country in any sudden emergency. The Stone of Destiny, now in Westminster Abbey, London, on which the Scottish kings were crowned, was brought from Tara to Iona before being deposited at Scoone, and it was in the Isle of Iona that Christianity was first introduced into Scotland.

Soil, Surface, Produce, Climate &c.—The surface of this county is like most other parts of the Highlands, mountainous. Glen-coe and Glencoe are, perhaps, amongst the most picturesque valleys that can be found. The coast is rocky, but indented with navigable bays and islets, which afford good harbours for shipping. Its western coast, lying as it does clear of the northern extremity of Ireland, is exposed where not sheltered by outlying islands to the full force of the Atlantic. From the nature of the county, agriculture is not widespread, but in certain districts in Lorne, near Campbeltown, and in Islay, farming is favourably pursued. The staple corn crop is oats and barley, and large quantities of excellent potatoes are grown. The mountains feed numbers of sheep, and the cattle bred are of the hardy Highland type and reared for exportation to the Lowland markets. Limestone is abundant, and granite is occasionally met with, whilst near Campbeltown is worked a remarkably productive seam of coal. Lead is wrought in Islay, but the chief mineral is slate, of which there are several quarries, the most extensive being at Ballachulish, and in Easdale, Seil and Luing islands. In the beginning of the eighteenth century, much of the natural wood was cut up and sold by the proprietors, at prices by no means proportionate to the injury perpetrated on the face of the country. The number of acres in tillage bears a insignificant proportion to those occupied by pasture, wood, hills, lakes and rivers. The climate of the lower parts of Argyllshire is mild and temperate, but in the upper inland districts the atmosphere is severe, and on the tops of many of the hills the snow often lies for months, giving the country a cheerless aspect, even in tolerably mild, open weather. In the valleys the air is of a more mild nature, these places being protected from the north and north-west winds, and having generally a southerly exposure. The central districts are more subject to rains than the coast, from the proximity of high hills, whose summits attract and break the clouds from the Atlantic. The most considerable elevations in the county are:—Ben Starao, 3,541 feet; Stob Gabhar, 3,565; Ben Fhionlaidh, 3,139; Ben Doirean, 3,523; Ben Cruachan, 3,611; Ben Soulcraid, 3,053; Oaeh Leathael, 3,602, all in the north-eastern district; Ben Inne, 3,318 feet and Ben Arthur, 2,891, on the eastern border; Paps of Jura, 2,412 feet; Ben Respol, 2,774; Ben Mere, 3,185; Ben Buy, 2,352 in the south and north-west.

According to the Agricultural Returns for Great Britain for 1898, the chief crops are oats, 17,847 acres; turnips, 5,627; barley, 1,578; rye, 846; hay, 11,235. The total corn crops being 20,397 acres, and green crops, 10,633; land under grass, 75,918; permanent pasture, 74,732. The mountain and heath land in 1898 was 1,499,440 acres; woods, 46,344 acres and plantations, planted from 1881 to 1895, 2,068 acres. The live stock in 1898 comprised 4,694 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 1,972 unbroken horses; 23,071 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; 39,192 of other cattle; 417,494 ewes kept for breeding; other sheep, 602,234; sows kept for breeding, 532; other pigs, 3,615.

The Manufactures of Argyllshire are on a very small scale. The principal article made for exportation is whisky, which is of a remarkably fine quality. Campbeltown alone boasts about 20 distilleries, and there are others in several parts of the county, for which Glasgow is the depot. Among the other branches of industry may be named net and rope making, and the manufacture of woollen cloth and gunpowder, for which latter there are several extensive works. From the way that the county is intersected by lochs and other water ways, the communication between its insular and mainland portions has been greatly facilitated by steam navigation; and now a very considerable number of steam vessels are constantly employed conveying passengers and goods to and fro throughout the county, and in transporting produce to Glasgow. There is not, at the present day, a bay, a loch, or inlet, but has a daily or a weekly communication with the Lowlands, and the several districts of the county. By this means the farmers are encouraged to fatten stock and adopt modern improvements in husbandry.

Fishing is also an industry of some importance. The number of boats registered in 1898 at the 3 fishing ports of Ardrishaig, Campbeltown and Obao being 751, with an aggregate tonnage of 2,924 tons, and employing 1,772 hands, while 37 vessels equal to 2,391 tons were registered as being owned at Campbeltown.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The county is well watered by rivers (none of which are very large), brooks and lochs, which abound with fish. Loch Fyne is celebrated as furnishing the best herrings of any found on the coast of Scotland, and it was estimated that there were caught in this arm of the sea from twenty to thirty thousand barrels annually; but the "take" has greatly fallen off in later years, the herring having deserted the loch, which has caused the fishing centre to be removed from Tarbert to Campbeltown. Loch Shiel is about 25 miles long, and contains salmon and sea trout. Loch Awe is a beautiful fresh water lake, about 28 miles long and from one to two broad, reckoned the most picturesque lake of any in the Highlands, and possesses many woody islets, among which are seen the ruins of several old castles. Its waters, which abound with salmon, trout and eel, discharge themselves into Loch Etive, a branch of the Atlantic Ocean, at Bonaw Ferry. There are many smaller lochs, some of them situated amidst grand and mountainous scenery. Loch Long is 24 miles in length, and is recorded to have been made use of by the Norwegian invaders. Loch Linnhe is really the beginning of the Caledonian Canal.

The only railway is a branch of the Caledonian line from Tyn-drum, where the West Highland joins it to Obao, on the Firth of Lorne, and the West Highland railway skirts the eastern border of the county, entering it twice for a short distance.

Divisions &c.—The county is divided into 6 districts—Argyll Proper, Cowal, Islay, Kintyre (or Cantyre), Lorne and Mull. Cowal is divided from Dumbartonshire by Loch Long, and bounded by Loch Fyne on the west; betwixt Loch Fyne and Loch Linnhe, and stretching away to the north, is Lorne; from which, on its south-west quarter, there extends in a southerly direction into the Irish Sea the peninsula of Kintyre. The islands of Mull, Jura, and Islay are divided from the continent, or from each other, merely by narrow sounds, and may be taken from their proximity and accessibility as little else than portions of the mainland. There are other districts of inferior size within the principal ones—as Ardnamurchan, the most westerly point of Sunart; Appin, a piece of Lorne bordering on Loch Linnhe; Glenorchy, another portion of Lorne on its eastern side; and Knapdale, occupying a position between Kintyre and Nether Lorne.

There are 39 civil parishes, in which are 2 royal burghs, Inveraray and Campbeltown; quarter sessions are held at Inveraray, and small debt courts at Inveraray, Campbeltown, Obao, Dunoan, Tobermory, Lochgilphead and Bowmore (Islay); there are 70 ecclesiastical parishes, divided into 7 presbyteries, in the synod of Argyll. The county returns one member to Parliament, the constituency in 1898 being 10,158. The burghs of Campbeltown, Inveraray and Obao, in conjunction with Ayr and Irvine, return one member. The county gives the title of Duke to the Duke of Argyll and of Marquess of Lorne (one of the county districts) to his eldest son. The Argyll title dates back to 1457, but the connection of the Campbells with the county is much older. The lordship of Campbell was elevated to the earldom of Argyll in 1457 by James III.; to a Marquessate in 1641 by Charles I., and to a Dukedom in 1701 by William III. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £519,572.

APPIN, or Port Appin, is a village on the shore of Loch Linnhe, 12 miles north from Oban and 35 north-west of Inveraray, in the united parish of Lismore and Appin and the poor combination of Lorne. There is a ferry here to Lismore island. The nearest railway station is at Connel Ferry on the Stirling and Oban section of the Caledonian line, and there is communication by steamer from Glasgow to Airds pier, Appin. There is in course of construction (1899) an extension of the Caledonian railway from Coumel Ferry to Ballachulich, which will bring the railway system within 2½ miles of Port Appin. The parish is of great extent, chiefly occupied as grazing farms. About 5½ miles to the north is Appin House, the seat of James M'Alpine Downie esq. of Appin; this mansion is surrounded by some of the finest timber on the coast. The ruins of the old parish church, built in 1643, are still standing on the Strath of Appin, a little off the high road, a distance of 2 miles from Appin pier. The present parish church was opened in July, 1890. The Episcopal church, Portnacroish, stands a short distance from Rose place, and in its churchyard rest the remains of the Stewarts of Fasnacloich. The Free church, built in 1846, stands on the south side of the bay running in past the Castle of Stalker up to Kenlochlaich, the much admired strath. On a small island near Portnacroish, full 2 miles north, is the ancient and partly dilapidated castle of Stalker, which is nearly square, of considerable height, and has evidently been a place of some strength; though its area is not extensive, it occupies almost a moiety of the little islet on which it stands; it was the seat of the Stewarts of Appin. Shuna island also contains the ruins of a castle. About half a mile from the pier, situated in a park on the road to Shiab, is Airds House, the residence of Col. William M'Fie O.B., V.D. of Airds and Oban, which commands a fine view of the head of Airds Bay. Beyond this, at a distance of a quarter of a mile, is Drimuel House, belonging to Dr. Lennie; and near the village are Barriemore House, the residence of Mrs. Campbell; Achnacone House, that of Alexander K. Stewart esq. and Kenlochlaich House, of D. H. Campbell-Munro esq. This parish includes Glencoe, for which see Ballachulich (South). Col. William M'Fie O.B., V.D. of Airds; Alexander K. Stewart esq. Achnacone House; Capt. John C. Stewart, Fasnacloich; Duncan H. Campbell-Munro, of Kenlochlaich; W. M'Alpine Leny, of Duror; Mrs. C. Cameron Lucy, of Callart; George W. Anderson, Ardsalch; James M'Alpine Downie esq. of Appin, and John Montague Spencer Stanhope, of Invercroran, are the principal landowners. The population of the Appin portion of the parish in 1891 was 2,649; the population of the ecclesiastical parishes being, of Appin 669, of Duror 412, and of St. Munda (Glencoe) 1,480. The area of the united parishes comprises 114,918 acres; rateable value, £18,040; and the population in 1891, 3,131, and in 1881, 2,968.

ARDCHATTAN and MUCKAIRN is a united parish including Duirinish, Eriaka and Innisclonnan islands; it is in the Lorne poor combination; the kirktown of Ardchattan lies close to the north shore of Loch Etive, 5 miles north-east of Oban and 25 south of Fort William; the parish extends 25 miles from north to south by 13 in breadth and is bounded west and north-west by Lismore and Appin, east by Glencorchy and south by Kilmennan and Kilmiver, and is bisected from north-east to south-west by the river and Loch of Etive; on the south of the loch are the remains of an ancient priory of the Benedictines, founded in 1232, by M'Coull, ancestor of the Lords of Lorne. Here Bruce is thought to have held a Gaelic council after the battle of Methven. The railway station of Connel Ferry on the Caledonian line is in the south of this parish, and also those of Taynuilt and Loch Awe. Ben Crachan stands in the south-east of the parish, it is 3,670 feet above the sea level and 20 miles in circumference at its base, the view from its summit includes the whole archipelago of the Western Isles from Islay to Skye. A church was erected at Ardchattan in 1836, at an expense of about £1,000; it contains sittings for 400. Archibald A. L. Campbell esq. of Lochell; Mrs. Ogilvie, of Barcaldine, and Allan G. Campbell esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 114,916 acres; rateable value, £19,279; population in 1891 was 1,976, and in 1881, 2,005; the population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1891 was, Ardchattan 1,253, Muckairn 722.

Muckairn, besides being the joint civil parish with Ardchattan, gives it name to a quoad sacra parish, erected out of the original ecclesiastical parish of Ardchattan and Muckairn. The church was built at the expense of General D. Campbell, of Lochell, in 1827. A rude block of granite, the first monument erected in Britain to the memory of Lord Nelson, stands on an eminence.

TAYNUILT is a village, in the united parish of Ardchattan and Muckairn. Here is a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, about 13 miles east from Oban and about 2 miles south of Loch Etive. Near the station is an hotel, and anglers can obtain fishing in the famous salmon river Awe. Two miles east of Taynuilt, where a stone bridge crosses the river Awe, is the scene of Sir Walter Scott's tale of the "Highland Widow," and 2 miles further is the Pass of Crauchan or Brander, where King Robert Bruce defeated Macdougall of Lorne in 1309.

AUR-NA-CLOICH, in this parish, about 9 miles from Oban, is a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway. A pier has been erected, from which a steamer runs to the head of Loch Etive.

ARDENTINNY, see DUNOON.

ARDGOUR is a civil parish and village on the shore of Loch Linnhe, with a pier for steamers, in the quadra sacra parish of Ardgour and Kingairloch, 9 miles south from Fort William station on the North British railway and 3 west from Ballachulish. There is a reading and recreation room in the village. The old seat of the Macleans, Ardgour House, is about 1 mile west of the pier of Ardgour and near to the village of Clovullin. At Corran Ferry, where Loch Linnhe narrows to a quarter of a mile in breadth, a lighthouse has been erected. Ben Nevis is distinctly seen from here, and to the right there is a magnificent view of Glencoe.

Kingairloch is a small village in the parish of Ardgour, and situated 16 miles south-west from Ardgour; it contains an Established church, school, and granite quarries.

The Earl of Morton, Conaglen House; the trustees of the late A. McLean esq.; George B. Sheriff esq. and William K. Gair esq.

are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 90,421 acres; rateable value, £4,848; the population of the part of the ecclesiastical parish in Kilmallie in 1891 was 277; the population of the entire civil parish in 1891 was 689.

ARDLAMONT, see KILFINAN.ARDNADAM, see SANDBANK.

ARDNAMURCHAN is a parish and hamlet at the north-western extremity of the county, in the poor combination of Mull, and extends 26 miles from east to west by 7 in breadth; it is bounded by Loch Sunart on the south, Kilmallie on the east and the sea on the north and west, and its coast is considered dangerous, the Atlantic breaking with full force on Ardnamurchan point, which lies exposed between the Islands of Rum and Coll. Upon the point a lighthouse has been erected by the Commissioners of Northern lights, which is of great service to navigation. Dornlin House, the residence of Lord Howard of Glosop, is situated at Salen, a hamlet in this parish, north of Loch Sunart. The village of Strontian is in the quadra sacra parish of Strontian, partly in this parish and partly in Morven, at the head of Loch Sunart. This place is about 20 miles south-west from Fort William station on the West Highland railway. At Strontian fairs are held in May on Thursday before last Wednesday; June, on Friday after third Thursday (o.s.); August, for lambs, on Wednesday if 12th, if not, following Wednesday; and October, on Thursday before last Wednesday. Kilchoan, near which are the ruins of Mingary Castle, is a village near the entrance to Loch Sunart. Arisaig is a small hamlet on a little harbour of same name on the west coast of Inverness-shire, 35 miles west of Bannavie. The soil of the parish is sterile, but feeds large flocks of sheep and some cattle, and the hills are stated to be rich in minerals. The area of the entire parish comprises 216,969 acres; rateable value, 1897-98, £7,358; the population in 1891 was 3,636. The ecclesiastical parish of Strontian in 1891 had a population of 674, 614 being in Ardnamurchan.

ARDRISHAIG is a quadra sacra parish and small seaport at the southern mouth of the Crinan canal, which connects the Sound of Jura with Loch Fyne, and saves a detour round the mull of Cantyre; the canal is 10 miles in length, the other entrance being at Crinan. Ardrishaig is in the civil parish of South Knapdale and the small debt court district of Loch Gilphead, to which place it serves as a port; it lies 20 miles south-west of Inveraray and 10 north of Tarbert. In addition to a protective pier of 400 yards in length, with a small lighthouse at its extremity, a commodious low-water pier and slip within the harbour, with a depth of seven feet, were erected in 1837 by the Government commissioners of the Crinan canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing and curing herrings. In 1898 there were 294 fishing boats, aggregating 1,261 tons, and employing 855 men and boys, registered in this port. Steam packets pass through the canal on their way from Glasgow to all parts of the western coast, and by the Caledonian canal to Inverness. The "Royal" is a first-class hotel and posting house. Several villas in the village are let furnished, the increased communication with the south making it a favourite coast resort. The rateable value (South Knapdale) is £16,979, and the Ardrishaig drainage and water district £4,334; in 1891 the population of the ecclesiastical parish was 1,371; the population of the village being 1,258 in 1891, and 1,224 in 1881.

BALLACHULISH AND GLENCOE.

BALLACHULISH (South) is a village and small port on the southern shore of Loch Leven, close to the entrance to the Loch from Loch Linnhe, in the civil parish of Jismore and Appin, and the quad sacra parish of St. Munda (Glencoe), 10 miles north-east of Appin, 23 north-east of Oban and 10 south of Fort William. On a small island opposite the village of Ballachulish are the ruins of an old chapel, supposed to have been built by St. Mungo. The island is now used as a burying ground. At Ballachulish South Ferry is an hotel and posting house; about three-quarters of a mile distant, a pier, with waiting room &c.; here the steamers call, and a conveyance from the hotel awaits their arrival. There are very extensive slate quarries at the foot of the Glencoe Hills, which employ about 500 men and boys. In the immediate vicinity, at the entrance of a sequestered valley, is Ballachulish House, the property of Capt. Francis Beresford Drummond; 3 miles from which is Ardsheal, the residence of William D. Anderson esq. About a mile above the quarries, on the margin of Loch Leven, is Invercoe House, the residence of The Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal P.C., G.C.M.G. The population of Ballachulish in 1891 was 1,045, and in 1881, 1,019, and of ecclesiastical parish of St. Munda's, 1,480 in 1891.

Glencoe is a wild and picturesque mountain pass, on the road from Ballachulish to Dumbarton, and is historically celebrated as being the spot where the massacre of the Macdonalds took place in 1691. There is an Episcopal church and a post office in the village.

BONAW is a scattered village in the civil parish of Ardchattan and Muckairn. The name Bonaw was formerly applied to the village on the south side of Loch Eivie, at the mouth of the river Awe, but this is now generally included under the name Shere, Taynult, being within a mile of the post office and railway station of Taynult; it is on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, 80 miles north-west of Glasgow, 12 east of Oban and 20 north of Inveraray, by Port Sonachan Ferry—but round the head of Loch Awe, by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, it is 32 miles. The Bonaw granite quarries, leased by Messrs. J. and A. Gardner and Co. Glasgow, employ about 200 workmen. The river Awe is much celebrated for its salmon fishery, which affords employment to a considerable number of persons in the season. Large quantities of fish are sent fresh in boxes to Glasgow and other parts of Scotland. The railway has brought an increased number of tourists, and many houses have been built in the neighbourhood.

CAIRNDOW, see LOCHGOILHEAD.

CAMPBELTOWN is a royal and parliamentary burgh, parish and seaport on the east coast of Cantyre; 144 miles west by south of Edinburgh and 80 south-west of Glasgow by sea, but by land the distance to either city is greater by 36 miles; 76 south-south-west of Inveraray, 37 south of Tarbert, 10 north of Southend and 6 east from Machrihanish Bay (or Salt-pans); the town is reached by mail steamer from Glasgow to Tarbert, thence by coach daily or direct steamer from Glasgow. The parish extends 11 miles from north to south by 8 in breadth, bounded east and west by the sea, south by Southend parish and north by those of Saddell and Killeen. The burgh is a place of great antiquity, having been a royal residence so early as the fifth century, at which period, Fergus, the first king of Scotland, fixed his residence here, and it continued the seat of his successors till 843. It was then called Dalruadhain, or the capital of the kingdom Dalruadan, founded by the Scots who came from Ireland under Cairbre Ruadh, a son of Conan II. king of Ireland, and a place on the north side of the present town is still known by the name, now written Dalruan; a strong castle existed where the principal parish church now stands; but the appellation formerly applied to the site of modern Campbeltown was Ceap Lach (i. e. "head of the Loch"), by which name the country people still designate the town in Gaelic; the present name was given to it in honour of the Duke of Argyll when it was made a royal burgh in 1701. The municipal government of the town is veiled in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and twelve councillors; under the "Reform Act of 1832," this burgh combined with Ayr, Inveraray, Irvine and Oban forms the Ayr district, returning one member to the Imperial parliament. The town is lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water from Lochruan and Crosshill. The town is sheltered on the north and south sides by lofty mountains, and has one of the safest harbours in the Western Highlands, possessing a depth from three to fifteen fathoms at low water. The haven is spacious, being nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and protected at its mouth by the Isle of Davaar, which is joined to the main land on the south side by a bar of sand, visible at low water, about half a mile long—the entrance to the bay being from the north. A lighthouse stands on the above island, which is far more efficient than the one which formerly stood on the shore. From the shore two quays project into the bay, for vessels to load and unload at low water; and there is a third small quay on the opposite side of the loch, adjoining that part of the town called Daintober. A large fishery trade is carried on, the number of boats registered at this port in 1898 being 394, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,539 tons, and employing 854 men and boys; in addition the number of vessels registered as being owned at the port was 37, with a total tonnage of 2,391 tons, and 3 steam vessels, total tonnage 3,231 tons, were built here in 1894. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters C. N. The number of vessels that entered in 1898 in the coasting trade, with cargoes and in ballast, was 1,227, of 104,980 tons, and cleared, 1,223 of 105,800 tonnage. There are branches in the town of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, besides a bank for savings in Bolgam street, which was established in 1827, under the provisions of the Act 59, George III. cap. 62. The principal trade here is the distilling of whisky. Next in consequence, and mainly, if not entirely, dependent for its prosperity on the last-named branch, is matting. A woollen factory, a colliery, a net manufactory, a rope walk and a ship building yard add to the importance of the place, whilst its neighbourhood abounds with lime and stone. Agriculture of late years has risen into importance, as some of the finest and richest land in this part of Scotland lies to the north and west of the town, and is chiefly the property of the Duke of Argyll and Hector Macneal esq. Steam vessels sail regularly to Glasgow, Greenock and Ayr, and occasionally to the adjacent coast towns, and to Belfast &c. in Ireland; and numerous coasting vessels to Liverpool and other parts of the country. The principal exports are whisky, wool, herrings, fishing nets, live stock, coal and potatoes. The imports are barley, timber, grain, yeast, groceries, ironmongery &c. The Town Hall, a convenient building, ornamented by a spire, contains a council chamber and an assembly and other rooms. The Free Library and Museum, opened in 1898, and presented to the burgh by James Macalister Hall esq. of Taoghy and Killeen, is a building of Kilkevan stone with sandstone dressings, and comprises a reading room, ladies' room, museum and keeper's apartments; the library contains 6,000 volumes, and the reading room is supplied with monthly and weekly periodicals and newspapers. The Campbeltown and District Cottage Hospital, opened in 1896, was founded by Mrs. Peter MacKinnon, of Ronachan, and contains 12 beds. The County Buildings, on Castlehill, opened in 1871, are of stone in the baronial style, and contain a justice of the peace court, sheriff's court, and the fiscal offices; and adjoining is County Office of Supply. There is also a custom house. In the town is an Artillery Volunteer Corps, and a Rifle Volunteer Corps. For the latter a large drill hall, called the "Victoria Hall" in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee, was erected in 1887, on part of the site of the old bowling green in Bolgam street, having a frontage to Kinloch road of about 70 feet.

The Castlehill church occupies the site of the ancient royal castle and was erected in 1781. The Gaelic church, so named from the language in which the service is rendered, was built in 1807 and has a stone spire, added in 1836. The United Presbyterian church, erected in 1767, is an edifice of stone in the Italian style, with a tower 150 feet in height, built in 1834; the church was rebuilt in 1874. The Episcopal church, of St. Kieran, in Argyll street, opened in 1834, was at first occupied as a Secession church, and afterwards as a branch of the Scotch Episcopal church. There are two Free churches, one in Lochend, and the other in Lorne street. The Roman Catholic church, opened in 1843, is a neat structure, with a carved stone front and pinnacles.

The most remarkable piece of antiquity is an ancient cross, erected in the middle of the main street. The inscription is in the Saxon character, and the following is a literal copy, with the translation annexed—Hæc est: crux: Domini: YVARI: M: II: EACHYRNA: quondam: Rectoris: de KYREGAN: et: Domini: ANDRE: nati: ejus: Rectoris: de KIL: COMAN: qui hanc cruce[m] fieri faciebat: "This is the cross of Master Edward M. H. Eachran, once Rector of Cryegan, and Master Andrew his son, Rector of Kilcoman, who erected this cross." There is, however, no date, but it is said to have been executed about the twelfth century, and to have been brought from the Isle of Iona. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the first Thursday in February, for horses; the second, on the last Wednesday in May, for horses and cattle; the Wednesday before the second Thursday in August, for sheep and lambs; and on the second Thursday in the same month for horses; and the third Thursday in November for horses. South of the town is the high mountain called Bengeolion, from which there is an extensive view of the surrounding country, including the distant objects of Arran and Pladda islands, Cowal hills, the bay and heads of Ayr, the Lowlands as far as Loch Ryan, Ailsa Craig, Black Head at the entrance of Belfast Lough, Dunaverty, Sanda Isles, part of the Irish coast near the points of Garroch Head, Red Bay and Fair Head, the dangerous bay of Machrihanish, the Mull of Islay and the Paps of Jura; also the cemetery at Kilkerran, with the points of Saddell, Carradell and Skipness. The Duke of Argyll; Captain Hector Macneal, of Usgadale; Richard Campbell-Davys esq. of Askomel; William James Laidlay esq. of Drumore; Captain Duncan Stewart R.N. of Knochrioch; the trustees of the late John Cochrane, of Machrihanish; Robert Reid esq. of Killeen, and Alexander Fleming esq. of Kilmasho, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 44,220 acres: rateable value of the burgh, £38,925, and landward, £26,265, total, £64,190; the population of the parish in 1891 was 10,260, including 8,304 in the town, and in 1881, 9,755, including 7,712 in the town. The number of voters on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 827.

MACHRIHANISH, formerly called Salt-Pans, from salt having been made here from sea water, is a small village $\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Campbeltown, on the southern shore of Machrihanish bay; here are the extensive links of the Machrihanish Golf club. A large new hotel is now (1899) in course of erection, in place of one destroyed by fire in 1898. Nearly half a mile south is Lisset House, the modern mansion of Hector Macneal esq. of Usgadale. At Drumlemble, about 4 miles from Campbeltown, are the works of the Argyll colliery, which are connected with Campbeltown by a narrow gauge railway. Here is also a Board school. At Kilkerran, on the south side of the bay, is an ancient burial place and the remains of an old castle.
