long from north to south, and about 3 miles broad. The water of Orr flows eastward through the parish, and in the southern part there is a sheet of water called Loch Gelly, which discharges itself by a small rivulet into that stream. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and coal mining. Most of the parish is under tillage, and the rest in pasture. A considerable bed of coal and ironstone traverses this part of the county; the former has long been celebrated for its excellent quality; the latter is of the black band variety, but is not now worked. The parish contains part of the town of Lochgelly, at which place and at Cardenden there are stations on the Thornton and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. The area comprises 7,818 acres; rateable value, £25,425; the population in 1891 was 6,185, of whom 3,958 were in the town of Lochgelly, and in 1881, 4,322, of whom 2,484 were in Lochgelly.

AUCHTERMUCHTY,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF DUNSHALT.

AUCHTERMUCHTY is a parish and a royal burgh, the latter, 19 miles west-south-west from St. Andrews, 14 south-south-east from Perth, 5 south from Newburgh, 17 north from Kirkealdy and 28 nearly due north from Edinburgh. A station on the Mawcarse and Ladybank section of the North British railway is adjacent to the town. The land in the vicinity of the town is remarkably rich and fertile, and the climate is considered very salubrious; the parish is bounded north by Perthshire, west by Strathmiglo, south by Falkland and east by Collesie; the town is situated on the road from Kinross to Cupar, Fife, 9 miles from the latter town. It is irregularly built; many of the houses are thatched and low, but the greater portion are of a superior appearance. A stream of water called "Lover's Pool" runs through the town, dividing it into two nearly equal parts; it was constituted a royal burgh by James IV. which charter was confirmed by James VI. and it still enjoys all the privileges arising therefrom, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, twelve councillors, a treasurer and town clerk, and has a sheriff's small debt court, which is held quarterly. A considerable trade is carried on here in manufacturing linen. Malting and distilling are likewise engaged in, and the making of scales, beams and weighing machines has been established here for upwards of a century. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a Savings Bank. The Victoria Hall, erected in 1865, is a fine building. The parish church, near the centre of the town, is an ancient structure, and has been enlarged. The People's Institute comprises reading, recreation and temperance refreshment rooms; it also contains some bedrooms and a hall for meetings. There is also another reading room in the town, and a well-stocked library. Fairs are held on the last Monday in April and the Thursday after the second Monday in July. The Marquis of Bute K.T. Thomas Blyth esq. of Newhill, and William Bonthronne esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,530 acres: rateable value of parish, landward £7,591, of burgh £2,551; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,002, of whom 665 were in the burgh; the figures in 1881 were 2,322 and 824.

Dunshalt is a small village situated about 1 mile south from and in the parish of Auchtermuchty, where there is a linen factory and a board school. Auchtermuchty railway station is about half a mile distant. Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Auchtermuchty (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have

R.S.O. Fifeshire added to them); Wm. Stocks, postmaster. Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 6.20 p.m.; dispatches, 7 a.m. & 4.5 & 7.40 p.m.

Post Office, Dunshalt; James Anstin, postmaster. Letters received through Auchtermuchty, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant. Deliveries, 9.40 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 3.10 & 5.20 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Letters for Dunshalt should bear "near Auchtermuchty R.S.O. Fifeshire"

AUCHTERTOOL is a small inland parish and village, the latter situated 4 miles west from Kirkealdy and about the same distance north-west from Kinghorn, bounded on the east by Abbotshall, on the south by Kinghorn and Aberdour, on the north by Auchterderran and on the west by Beath; extends from east to west 5 miles by 2 in breadth; small debt court of Kirkcaldy. From a little lake called Camilla-caldy, in this parish, the river Teel takes its rise; on the verge of the loch are the ruins of Camilla Castle, or "Hallyards." Auchtertool is said to have been the original name of the parish, deriving the appellation from its situation on the banks of the Teel. The area comprises 2,738 acres; rateable value, £8,292; the population in 1891 was 721, and in 1881, 706.

BALLINGRY is a parish on the borders of Kinross-shire, extending 3 miles from north to south by 1½ broad; its kirktown is 2½ miles north-west from Lochgelly, a small portion of which town is in the parish; it is in the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded on the north by Port-lock (in Kinross-shire), east and south-east by Auchterderran, south-west by Beath and north-west by Kinross. The mining villages of Lamphians and Lochore are in the parish. The nearest railway station is at BALMERINO, or Balmerinoeh (pronounced Balmernie), is a parish lying on the south bank of the firth of Tay, and extending 4 miles from east to west by 2½ broad; its kirktown is about 5 miles west of Newport; the parish is bounded east by Forgan, west by Blisk and Creech and south by Kilmay, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar-Pife. The harbour of Balmerino is small, and at one time a considerable quantity of grain was exported from it, but this trade has now declined. To the west, and on the banks of the Tay, stands the ancient village of Balmerino, adjacent to which are the ruins of the once famed abbey, a beautiful structure, begun by Alexander II. and his mother, Emergare, daughter of the Earl of Beaumont, in 1229.

 These ruins are richly clothed with ivy and surrounded with some fine trees. The nearest railway station is at Wormit, on the Leu-chars and Tay Bridge section of the North British line, about 3 miles distant. Galdry, a small village in the above parish, is about 4 miles south-west from Newport. Here is a Board school and Free church. The aspect of the county is of an undulating character, and agricultural. This place once conferred a peerage title on the Ephing-stone family, Lords Balmerinoeh, but the title became extinct on the death of Arthur, sixth lord, who was beheaded 18 Aug.
 1746, for his participation in the rising of 1745. Col. A. W. Anstruther-Duncan, of Naughton House, and Henry Scrymgeour-Wedderburn esq. of Birkhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,431 acres; rateable value, £5,620; the population in 1891 being 658, and in 1881, 664.

Post Office, Galdry; Andrew Husband, postmaster. Letters received through

Dundee, arriving at 11.30 a.m. & 6 p.m. & are dispatched at 6 a.m. & 4 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Wormit & telegraph office is at Newport R.S.O. 5 miles distant BEATH is a parish about 4 miles north to south, and about 3 in breadth; its boundaries are—on the west, Dunfermline; on the east, Ballingry and Auchterderran; on the north, Cleish (Kinross-shire); on the south, Aberdour and Dalgetty; it is in the parliamentary division of West Fife, poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and contains the police burgh of Cowdenbeath, and the villages of Kelty, Lassodie and Oakfield, a small part of Kelty being in Kinross. The ground is hilly, and is watered by the Kelty and a stream which flows from Loch Pitty, a shallow lake on the western boundary. Several collieries are in active operation, and give employment to most of the inhabitants. The North British railway has stations on its Dunfermline and Kinross section at Cowdenbeath and Kelty, and the same company's section from Thornton Junction to Dunfermline runs through Cowdenbeath station. The principal landowners are the Earl of Moray, Sir Charles Adam bart. of Blair Adam, Kinross, James Dewar esq. and the Fife Coal Company Limited. The area of the parish is 6,345 acres; rateable value of landward, £34,895; the population in 1891 was 8,298, and in 1881, 8,412; the population of Kelty in 1891 was 1,220, and of Lassodie, 853.

Kelty and Oakfield are villages in this parish, and adjoin Blairadam, in Kinross-shire, each about 2½ miles from Cowdenbeath, and the former has a station on the Kinross branch of the North British railway. At Kelty are the collieries of the Fife Coal Company Limited, and the Blairadam Coal Co. Limited. There are two Free churches and a Presbyterian church.

Lassodie is a colliery village in the parish of Beath, 4½ miles distant from Dunfermline, its post town, and has a Free church and a public school. Population in 1881, 808.

BUCKHAVEN, METHIL and INNER LEVEN, which now form a united police burgh, and a small town, village and hamlet, in the parish of Wemyss, and constituting a good shipping station for coal export and a shelter for fishing, Buckhaven having a harbour and Methil a new dock with appliances for loading colliers; they are situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 2 miles south of Leven and 7 north-east of Kirkcaldy; the burgh is governed by a senator and two junior bailies and six commissioners. Methil is a quoadsacra parish. The dock at Methil, opened 5th May, 1887, was built by Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. of Wemyss Castle, but is the property of the North British Railway Co. and in 1898 1,230,554 tons of coal were shipped and 54,131 tons of merchandise, consisting chiefly of pit-wood, sawn wood, esparto, flax and hemp were imported. The dock has an area of 4½ acres, with width at entrance of 50 feet, and a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 23 feet, and at neaps of 19 feet; it is fitted with three of Sir William Armstrong & Co.'s hydraulic hoists, each capable of loading a vessel with 2,500 tons of coal in 24 hours; there are also hydraulic cranes for working other import and export goods. The dock is connected with the main railway system of Fifeshire, and is in direct communication with all the Fife collieries, and is lighted by electricity. A new dock has been constructed, at a cost of £200,000, the area being 7 acres. The manufacture of fishing nets is carried on at Methil and Buckhaven, on the branch line of the North British railway from Thornton Junction. Inner Leven forms part of the town of Leven. The populations in 1891 were—Buckhaven, 4,006; Methil, 1,662 and Inner Leven 579, and in 1881, 2,952, 754 and 501 respectively; rateable value of the burgh, £17,310.

BURNTISLAND.

Is a royal and parliamentary burgh, seaport and parish, with a station on the North British railway, situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 8 miles by ferry, or 20½ by rail north-by-west from Edinburgh, 16 south-east from Kinross, 6 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 east from Aberdeen. The parish, originally a portion of Kinghorn, is 3 miles square and consists of the Bin and Dunearn ranges of hills, with the High Bents on the east side of the town, extending into Kinghorn parish: some portions of the hills contain fine specimens of basaltic columns; they are eruptive through limestone and sandstone strata. It is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded east and north by Kinghorn and west by Aberdeen. Burntisland was originally a burgh of regality under the Abbot of Dunfermline; in the year 1541 it was purchased from him by James V. and erected into a burgh royal, confirmed by James VI. in 1587 and renewed by Charles I. in 1632. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors, and together with Kirkcaldy, Dysart and Kinghorn forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708 and returns one member. The town council are the police commissioners and the local authority, and four members of the town council with four representatives from the N. B. Railway Co. constitute the harbour commissioners; there is also a parish council: the municipal, police and parliamentary boundaries have been made identical by an Act obtained in 1876, and the burgh forms part of the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district; the same powers have been granted to the magistrates as are at present possessed by the sheriff and justices of peace under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854; this admits of the administration of justice in nautical cases being conducted in the town instead of in Kirkcaldy as previously. There are police and bailie courts, the sheriff and small debt courts for the burgh being held weekly at Kirkcaldy. The present gasworks are the property of the burgh, and managed by the members of the town council. There is a railway institute and reading room. Weekly markets are not held here, the nearest being Thornton on Mondays and Dunfermline on Tuesdays, but there is an annual fair on the third Friday in July. Burntisland is now the head quarters of the custom house business for the district, which embraces the line of coast from Aberdour to Anstruther.

Burntisland was a place of great trade, particularly with Holland, but from 1693 its trade declined till 1848, when the opening of the Fife railway imparted an impetus to the export trade in coal and pig iron. The fine dock, built by Mr. Walter Scott, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. comprises an area of 53 acres, and cost about £100,000, including railway connections and hydraulic loading machinery; the depth of water in the dock is 22ft. 9in. at high water of spring tides and 19ft. 9in. at neap tides; the width of entrance is 50ft. A new dock is now (1899) being constructed, at an estimated cost of £300,000, by Sir John Jackson C.E. of Westminster, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. and Robert Henderson C.E.; the area will be 123 acres; the depth of water, 28ft. 6in. at high water of spring tides, and 25 ft. 6in. at neap tides, and the width of entrance 60ft. There is still a metropolitan ferry here, and the North British Railway Co. keep a steamer plying at stated intervals between Burntisland and Granton; the number of vessels, steamers &c. onwards was in 1898, 1,062. The railway from Burntisland westward to the Forth bridge, opened in March 1890, and constructed at a cost of over £140,000, has developed a picturesque district some 8 miles in extent; the line enters Burntisland by a long viaduct, which passes at the bottom of High street and crosses Harbour place, reaching the main line east of the present terminus. A direct line to the new railfields by Auchtertool is now completed. The herring curing trade, which used to be very flourishing, is extinct, although Burntisland is still a fishing station for the Firth fishery.

The railway locomotive works, situated between the Lammerlaws and the old town, employ 300 men. The sandstone quarries at Grange and Newbiggin give out extensive supplies of stone for buildings in the neighbourhood, and quantities are shipped at Starleyburn for other places. The limestone mine belonging to the Carron Co. at Starleyburn, is now in working and placed in connection with the railway. There is a distillery at Grange, about a mile from the town, belonging to Messrs. Young and Co. Limited. There are branches of the National and Commercial Banks of Scotland Limited, and a savings bank. The music hall, built by the late Joseph Young, of Dunearn, and presented to the town by his trustees, will hold 400, and is frequently used for lectures, concerts and public meetings. A golf course of 18 holes has been formed by the Burntisland Golf Co. Limited, and a club house erected on the grounds. There are three tennis courts and a bowling green. The only object of antiquity connected with Burntisland is Rossend Castle, built in 1119, by the abbots of Dunfermline; it occupies a very picturesque situation, and has a fine square keep: it was the residence of Cromwell during the occupation of Burntisland by his troops, and was a favourite resting place of Queen Mary; Rossend is now the property of James Shepherd esq. who takes a great interest in antiquarian researches.

The Established church, bearing the date 1592 over its entrance, is probably the oldest building in the town; in style after the model of the North Church, Amsterdam, the Dutch having a great deal of intercourse with Burntisland at that date. The galleries, adorned with antique carving, were erected in 1613, and formerly occupied by the Guilds, whose badges and insignia in some cases ornament the front, and there is a state seat for the magistrates, and it was within these walls that James VI. met the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and pressed his pet proposal for a new translation of the Scriptures, a proposal which took practical shape after that monarch's accession to the throne of England, and resulted in an authorised version. In connection with the Established church a fine hall was opened in 1894, seating 600 persons. An Episcopal school, founded by the late Rev. G. H. Forbes, continues to be conducted by his trustees: the Episcopal congregation have an iron church of a Gothic design, at Ferguson place. The old kirk of the parish was at "Litel Kingorne," or Kirkton, and when the present church was built in 1592-4 there was some litigation with the heritors before the services could be moved, which was not terminated until 1632; the "old kirk" is now a ruin. The cemetery at Bentfield was established by the Town Council at the cost of about £4,000. The only mortification belonging to Burntisland is Watson's, consisting of the annual rent of the East Binnlands, amounting to an average of £74, which is divided between three widows and the Board schoolmaster for the education of poor children. The Board schools, erected here in 1876, at a cost of £6,000, in the Elizabethan style, are situated in front of a hill rising more than 100 feet above the level of the sea. Roger Sinclair Aytoun, of Inchdairnie, the trustees of R. Kirke, of Greenmount, James Shepherd, of Rossend Castle, Rev. J. Haxton, of Pathhead, and Middleton, Rev. J. of Dunsarn, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,566 acres; gross rateable value of the parish in 1898-99, £36,408; net value £28,093; rateable value of the burgh, gross, £25,573; net, £21,072. The population of the parish in 1891 was 6,174, including 4,692 in the burgh, and in 1881 4,821, including 4,099 in the burgh.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 690. CAMERON is a parish, with a kirktown, about 4 miles south of St. Andrews. It is bounded on the north by St. Andrews, on the south by Carnbee and Kileconquhar, on the east by Denhoo, and on the west by Ceres. Its length is about 6 miles, and its breadth 4; it is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews and contains the villages of Lathones, Peat Inn and Radernie and part of the village of Denhead. The nearest railway station is at Mount Melville, on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The greater portion of the land is well cultivated, the remainder being pasture, well drained by numerous small streams. There is a parish church and school at Cameron, and a United Presbyterian church at Lathones, and a Board school at Radernie. The kennels of Fifeshire foxhounds are at Harleswold, Ceres, Sir John Gilmour bart. master. Cupar and St. Andrews are convenient places for hunting visitors. Major Henry J. C. G. Bonar, of Greigston, James H. Rigg esq. of Drumcarro, James Cheape esq. of Straththrum, John Purvis esq. of Kinaldy, James H. B. Melville esq. of Mount Melville House, D. Wedderburn Thoms esq. of Feddinch and Winthack, the trustees of John Paterson esq. of Sunnybrae, and Thos. Longmuir esq. of Denork House, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 9,325 acres; rateable value, £7,738; the population in 1891 was 886, and in 1881, 1,003.

CARNBEE is a parish and village, the latter about 3 miles north-east from Pittenweem; the parish also contains the hamlets of Arncroath and Ovenstone; it extends 5 miles from east to west with a breadth of 3 and is bounded north by Cameron, east by Craik and Kireenny, south by Pittenweem, south-west by St. Monance and west by Killoquhar. The nearest railway station is at Pittenweem, on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther. The minerals are limestone and freestone. The greater part of the land is rich and fertile, and well cultivated, the rest being adapted for pasture. Of late years dairy farming has been carried on in the parish extensively. A ridge of hills runs through the centre of the parish, the highest of which is Kellie Law, having an altitude of 800 feet above the level of the sea. Kellie Castle, formerly the seat of the Earls of Kellie, stands in this parish, on the south side of Kellie Law, and occupies a prominent and beautiful situation; it is now the residence of Mrs. Lorimer. Balcastie House, the seat of Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. D.L., J.P., principal landowner, stands on a rising ground between St. Monance and Pittenweem. The grounds are extensive and thickly wooded. The area comprises 8,396 acres; rateable value, £10,500. The population in 1891 was 952, and in 1881, 1,057.

Arncroath is a small village in this parish, 1 1/2 miles south-west from the kirktown of Carnbee and 3 miles north-west from Pittenweem.

CELLARDYKE, see KILRENNY.

CERES (or Cyrus) is a parish, with a village of same name, 3 miles south-east of Copar-Fife station on the Thornton Junction and Dundee section of the North British railway; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar-Fife, extends 8 miles from north-east to south-west with a breadth varying from 2 to 4 miles. The boundaries of the parish are on the north Kenbeck and Cupar parishes, on the east Cameron and Kilconquhar, on the north-east St. Andrews, on the south Largo, and on the west Cuts. The parish church, built in 1806, occupies an elevated site and has an embattled square tower. It will seat 1,100 persons. There are a United Presbyterian and a Free church in the village; and two public schools, situated respectively at Craigothie and Ceres. The inhabitants are mostly employed in agriculture. There is a spinning mill at Tarvit, and lime and coal are found at Newbigging. Races are regularly held here on the anniversary of the battle of Bannockburn, fought 24 June, 1314. The Leith Holiday Home has leased from 1896 the Adamson Institute, and provides a fortnight's holiday for upwards of 300 poor, and in many cases delicate children from the slums of Leith. It is supported entirely by voluntary contributions; secretary, Mr. Robert Scott, 9 Summerside street, Leith; matron, Mrs. Hempstead.

The Kennels of the Fife Foxhounds are situated at Harlewood, in this parish; Sir John Gilmour bart. M.F.H., John Shepherd, huntsman. Cupar and St. Andrews are convenient places for hunting visitors. In the western part of the parish are the ruins of the House of Scots-tarvit, on the border of the Howe of Fife, and about a mile south of the village is Craighall Castle, the seat of the Hope family from 1625, but now also in ruins; and near Craigothie are the ruins of Struthers, the original seat of the Earls of Crawford. The farm of Pitscottie occupies the site of the house occupied by Robert Lindsay, of Pitscottie, author of the "Chronicles of Scotland." Col. John Anstruther Thomson V.D. of Charleton, Collinsburgh, Edward Gorrie Baxter esq. of Teasles House, the Hon. Thomas H. A. E. Cochran M.P., of Crawford Priory, David Wemyss esq. of Wemyss Hall and Henry Walter Hope esq. of Craighall are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,075 acres; rateable value, £12,277; the population in 1891 was 1,677, and in 1881, 2,063.

Craigothie, Chance Inn and Balannic are three small villages in the parish of Ceres.

COWDENBEATH is a small town in the parish of Beath, and constituted a police burgh in 1890, situated just below the junction of the Dunfermline and Kinross and the Dunfermline and Thornton Junction sections of the North British railway which has two stations here. The burgh is supplied with water from works constructed by the local authority in 1887, and now under the control of the police commissioners. The parish church lies a mile north-west of the town, and there are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, a Baptist chapel, and two Board schools. A drinking fountain, surmounted by three lamps, was erected in the High street, and presented to the town, in 1897, by H. Mungall esq. J.P. in commemoration of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. The Fife Coal Co. Limited are the principal landowners in the Cowdenbeath district. The rateable value of the burgh in 1899 was 12,142, and its population in 1891, 4,249.

CRAIGROTHIE, see CERES.

CRAIL is a seaboard parish, occupying the extreme north-easterly shore of the Firth of Forth, the Fife Ness promontory marking the mouth of the Firth; the seaport of same name as the parish lies a few miles south-west of the Ness, in a royal and parliamentary burgh; it was known formerly as Cathair-nille or Carr-uille, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, extends 3 miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth, and its breadth of 2 miles lies along the North sea, besides which a part almost as large lies inland north of Kärenny and Carube parishes, and on the north-west and north the boundaries are the parishes of Denino, St. Leonard and Kingsbarns. The burgh, which consists of two main streets, one containing some massive old houses, is mentioned by old historians as a town of considerable note so early as the middle of the 9th century. Its importance in latter days has, however, greatly declined, notwithstanding it possesses great capabilities as a port, and with the exception of crab fishing, for which it is famous, it enjoys but very little trade. This in some measure may be ascribed to the inconvenience of its harbour, for it is otherwise eligibly situated. Its principal exports consist of grain and potatoes; the imports are chiefly coal. Crail was erected into a royal burgh by David I. and confirmed by Robert Bruce, and it is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors. In conjunction with St. Andrews, Cupar Fife, the Anstruthers, Kärenny, and Pittenweem, it forms the St. Andrews parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. It is now a place of summer resort, and has two golfing courses and public bowling greens, and there is also a public library of 2,000 volumes. A little to the east of the harbour are the fragments of a castle, or palace, once the residence of David I., the remains of which consist chiefly of a wall, now partly enclosed in a garden. The parish church was anciently a collegiate church, and here John Knox preached. The celebrated James Sharp, Archbishop of St. Andrews, 1661-79, was minister of the church for 12 years, and his handwriting is still to be seen in the session records. Wormiston House is the seat of the Earl of Lindsay J.P. The Earl of Lindsay, Sir Thomas Erskine bart. of Cambo, Charleton J. B. Montgenny esq. of Pitmilny, Philip G. Anstruther esq. John Duncan esq. Kirkmay, Mrs. Mary J. A. Horsly, Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard M.A. of Rednock House, Stirling, and Col. George Hannay of Kingsmear, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,383 acres; rateable value £14,593; the population in 1891 was 1,704 of which the burgh contained 1,119, and in 1881, 1,740, including 1,148 in the burgh.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 195.

CREICH is a parish in the north of the county, with its kirktown 5 miles northwest of Cupar, which is the nearest railway station; it is in the small debt court district of Cupar and extends 3 miles from north to south by 2 wide; it is bounded on the north by Flisk, on the south by Moonzie and Monimail, on the east by Balmerino and Kilmay, and on the west by Dunbog. On a little eminence near the ruins of the old church are the vestiges of a Roman camp, and at a short distance therefrom are the remains of a castle, which formerly belonged to Cardinal Beaton. The parish was the birthplace of the Rev. Alexander Henderson, who represented the Scottish Church at the Westminster Assembly in 1643; and also of the Rev.
John Sage, consecrated in 1705 as the first of the post-revolution bishops in the Scottish Episcopal communion, and the author of that remarkable production, the "Fundamental Charter of Presbytery." The surface of the parish is undulating, and the soil sandy and thin. David Cook esq. of Carphin House, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,341 acres; rateable value, £2,647; the population in 1891 was 325, and in 1891, 386.
Brunton and Luthrie are hamlets in this

CROSSFORTH, see DUNFERMLINE.

CROSSGATES, see DUNFERMLINE.

CULROSS is a parish on the Firth of Forth, originally included in the county of Perth, though surrounded by Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 23 February, 1891.
The parish contains the town of Culross, a royal and parliamentary burgh within the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, 4 miles south-east from Kincardine, 9 south-east from Alloa and 7 west from Dunfermline. The nearest railway station is at East Grange, on the North British railway, about 2 miles north. The burgh is situated partly on the acclivity of a hill rising from the Forth, the principal street running north from the shore. An extensive traffic in salt and coal was at one time carried on here, and 170 foreign vessels have been at one time in the roads. Culross was erected into a royal burgh by James VI. in 1588, and is governed by a provost, two baillies, treasurer and 7 councillors. Together with Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, it forms the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. This place affords a peerage title to the Colvill family, barons Colvill of Culross. The town and its vicinity possess many objects of antiquity. In 1217 a monastery was founded on the rising ground behind the town by Malcolm, Thane of Fife; considerable portions of this structure are yet extant. On the north side was the abbey church, which had a Decorated tower in the centre; the latter is still entire, as is also the Early English chancel, which is now used for divine service. In a chapel, erected in 1624 in honour of Sir George Bruce kt. who died 6 May, 1625, are recumbent effigies in white marble of Sir George and his lady, and figures of their eight children in a kneeling posture. To the west of the town, on the bank of the Forth, are the ruins of Dunmarle (the castle near the sea), an ancient stronghold of the Macduffs, and according to tradition the scene of the murder of Lady Macduff and her children.
The present house of Dunmarle is a modern castellated edifice, built by the late Mrs.
Sharp Erskine, who also erected in the grounds a beautiful mortuary chapel, within which she is interred. Within the house is a museum, comprising some beautiful paintings, rare old china and other articles of virtue, to which, and the extensive grounds, the public are admitted on certain days of the week. Culross Abbey House is a seat of the Earl of Elgin G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., P.C. Near the abbey church is a school endowed by the late Patrick Geddes esq.; a new building was erected by the late Miss Davidson, of The Park, at a cost of £1,500, and in 1896 this was enlarged, and is now combined with the public school, under the style of the Geddes Public School, which is available for 250 children: Lord Balfour of Burleigh P.C.; Robert Hoyer Millar esq. of Blair Castle; the trustees of the late Mrs. Magdalene Sharp Erskine, of Dunmarle; Archibald Dominic Smith-Sligo esq. of Inzievar, Oakley; Lawrence Johnston esq. of Sands; the Marquess of Lansdowne K.G. of Tulliallan; Robert W. P. Garke C.
Preston esq. Valleyfield; and John James Daigleish esq. of Brankston Grange, are the principal landowners of the parish.
The area comprises 7,584 acres; rateable value, landward £6,432, burghal £1,677; the population in 1891 was 1,066, and in 1881, 1,130. The population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 380.
The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 1,020.

CULTS is a parish, having its kirktown 2½ miles east of Ladybank, which is the nearest railway station, and is a junction on the North British line; the parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 2 wide, and is bounded north by Cupar and Menimail, east by Ceres, south by Kettle and Leven, and west by Kettle and Collessie; it is in the small debt court district of Onpar, and contains the village of Pitlessie. It abounds in coal, lime and freestone, and is generally well cultivated and enclosed. The name of the parish is derived from the Gaelic "coillie," which signifies "the woods." Sir David Wilkie R.A. the celebrated artist, was born here 18 Nov. 1785, his father having been minister of Cults for over 30 years. The annual fair is held on 23rd May. The Sir David Wilkie Memorial Hall was opened in 1898, and is used for public meetings. The Hon. Thomas H. A. Cochran, of Crawford Priory, Springfield, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,924 acres; rateable value, £7,988; the population in 1891 was 700, and in 1881, 704.

Pitlessie is a small village in this parish, 2 miles north-east from Kettle, on the road between Kirkcaldy and Cupar, 4 south-south-west from the latter town, and about 2 east from Ladybank station. There is a public school here which serves for the whole of the parish.

CUPAR-FIFE,

WITH THE VILLAGE AND HAMLET OF BRIGHTON.

CUPAR, a royal and parliamentary burgh and parish, designated Cupar-Fife, to distinguish it from Cupar-Angus, on the borders of Perthshire, is the capital of the county of Fife, and seat of the county council, 32 miles north (by rail via Forth Bridge) from Edinburgh, 12½ south from Dundee, 9 west from St. Andrews, and 9 north-east from Falkland, situated on the left bank of the Eden, and with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee branch of the North British railway. As a royal burgh Cupar is governed by a provost, three bailies, and a dean of guild, with a treasurer and 12 councillors. The ordinary sheriff court and the sheriff small debts courts are held every Thursday during session. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but in the present day its aspect is that of a modern town, nor are there any ancient remains to be discerned in or about Cupar. Of its castle, so frequently alluded to in Scottish history, not a vestige is now visible; the Castle hill, where that fortress once stood, and in which the plays of Sir David Lindsay and the "Satire of the Three Estates" were acted in 1555, is now the site of a public school. The principal streets of the town are the Crossgate, the Bonnygate and St. Catherine street, which last is built on the plan of the houses in Edinburgh. The burgh is lighted with gas, supplied by a company established in 1830. Here are the county buildings and two hotels. The places of worship are the parish church of St. Michael, a Free church, and United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Baptist and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of St. James, an edifice in the Classic style, occupies the site of a convent of Dominican or Black Friars. On the south side of the river is the old prison, now used as a private warehouse; the later gaol, built on rising ground a little to the north of the Dundee road, is now used as stores and a depot for the Fife Militia Artillery. The principal trade of Cupar arises from the linen manufacture, but brewing, tanning, coach building and other avocations are carried on. There are branch banks here of the British Linen Company, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, together with a bank for savings. Three newspapers are published in Cupar, the "Fife Herald and Journal," the "Fife News" and the "St. Andrew's Citizen." The Duncan Institute, in Crossgate, was founded by the late Miss Duncan, of Edengrove, for the benefit chiefly of the working classes; it consists of two reading rooms, library, well stocked with books, recreation and billiard room and lecture hall, and is managed by trustees. Near the station is a stone statue erected to the memory of David Maitland McGill Crichton, a prominent county gentleman, who took a leading part in the disruption of the Free Church in 1843. The Cupar Bell-Baxter school, an endowed secondary school, with a primary department, was endowed in the year 1832 by the famous educationalist, Dr. Bell, and received a second endowment in 1873 from Sir David Baxter bart. of Kilmarnock. It is governed by a body of eleven persons. Kilmarnock Castle is the residence of Thomas Morgan Boyd esq. and Birkhill of Henry Scrymgeour-Wedderburn esq. J.P.; Edgewood, of Alex. Macdonald esq. J.P. and Greigston, of Major Henry J. Cowan-Graham-Bonar. David Wemyss esq. of Wemyss Hall, and James Home Riggs esq. of Tarvit are the principal landowners. The weekly market for corn is held on Tuesday, and a cattle market on Tuesday once a month. The area comprises 5,736 acres; rateable value, landward £14,784, burghal £23,371; the population in 1891 was 6,990, including 4,765 in the burgh, and in 1881, 7,404, including 5,058 in the burgh. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 1,020. The villages of Springfield and Brighton are in this parish.

DAIRSIE is a parish and village, the latter being 3 miles north-east from Cupar, with a station on the Thornton, Ladybank and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 2 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Leuchars Lodge, and on the south by Kembach, east by Leuchars, and west by Cupar, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar. The river Eden, which skirts the parish, is crossed by a good bridge of three arches, supposed to have been erected by John Spottiswood, archbishop of St. Andrew's 1615-61, who was the proprietor of the Dairsie estate. The church was erected in 1626 by the same archbishop, at the time when he expected to establish Episcopacy in Scotland. At Dairsie Castle, now a ruin, a parliament was convened in the year 1355. The Pitcairn Institute, Library and Recreation Rooms, opened in 1897, were built and furnished at a cost of about £900. The late Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitonills, left the interest of £2,000 to be expended annually in part in the purchase of books, and in the maintenance of the recreation park. James Cheape esq. of Strathyrum, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,555 acres; rateable value, £4,600; the population in 1891 was 606, and in 1881, 693.

DALGETTY is a parish in the parliamentary division of West Fife and the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, about 1½ miles from Inverkeithing station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway; it extends 5 miles from north to south, by from 1 to 3 broad, and is bounded on the north by Beath, north-west by Dunfermline, west by Inverkeithing, south by the Forth and east by Aberlour. The Park of Donbristle, which includes the site of Dalgetty House and the fine gardeaus formerly attached to it, stands partly in this parish and partly in Aberlour; the house, which is a seat of the Earl of Moray, is in this parish, as are also the ruins of Conston Castle on an island in Otterston Loch, and Fordel Castle and Mansion House, the seat of the Henderson family; the castle, erected in the 12th century, was restored about 1850, but is only occasionally used: it possesses a fine banqueting hall. Dalgetty old church is roofless, but the walls are standing, and there are many monuments in the church and yard; a vault at the west end of the church, containing the remains of Alexander Seton, high chancellor of Scotland, and created, in 1606, Earl of Dunfermline, d. 1622: above it is a fine stone-pannelled room, open on the east side to the church, and once serving as a pew for the Earls of Dunfermline, a title which became extinct on the oncaury of the 4th Earl in 1690; the new church is about a quarter of a mile further north, and was built about 1830.

Fordell is a village in this parish, about a mile south-east of Crossgates railway station. It has a fine reading room, provided for the use of the workmen. Population in 1891, 480.

Saint David's is a small port in this parish, about a mile and a half to the east of Inverkeithing. The rise of this place can be mainly ascribed to the advantages it affords for the shipment of coal, brought from the extensive collieries at Fordell by means of a private railway five miles in length. At the pier here, which has been extended at a cost of from £4,000 to £5,000, upwards of 500 tons of coal can be shipped daily; and there is an average depth of 18 feet at high water, being greater than that of any other port on this part of the coast, admitting vessels of upwards of 600 tons to receive their cargoes at the pier. The nearest railway station is Inverkeithing, a mile and a half distant. The surrounding district is rich in coal, of which great quantities are exported from St. David's. Fordell House is the seat of the Hon. Hew Adam Dalrymple Hamilton Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson D.L. The Earl of Moray, Captain W. Mowbray and the trustees of the late George W. Mercer Henderson esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,340 acres; rateable value, £7,450; the population in 1891 was 1,341, and in 1881, 1,321.

Post Office, St. David's; John Dunne, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Inverkeithing R.S.O. Fifeshire, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant. Deliveries & dispatches, 9 a.m.

DUNFERMLINE is a city and a royal burgh, and the seat of a presbytery, the chief town in the western part of Fife, and one of the most important in the scale of manufactures in the county, also a parish and head of a poor combination and small debt court district. Its ancient title of city is now revived. It is 16 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 47 north-east from Glasgow, 31 south-south-west from Cupar, 12 east from Alloa, 21 south-by-east from Stirling, 15 south-west from Kirkcaldy, and 6 north from North Queensferry; situate on rising ground, 3 miles north from the Firth of Forth and 300 feet above the level at Limekilns, the nearest part of the coast. Thus elevated, it commands a prospect remarkably varied and beautiful, extending over fourteen different counties, and comprises a fine marine view on the south; and its salubrious situation renders it one of the healthiest cities in Scotland. There is a station here on the Dunfermline branch of the North British railway, whilst another line, about 4 miles in length, hence to Charlestown, is used principally in the conveyance of coal for shipment at that port, but a passenger service of trains has recently been established. The West of Fife mineral railway runs from the town north into the rich mineral district, which contains immense quantities of coal, ironstone and limestone. A line has been constructed between Dunfermline and Edinburgh by North Queensferry across the Forth by means of the Forth Bridge, which was finished in 1890, and opened by the Prince of Wales on March 4th of that year. Dunfermline Lower is on the main line from Inverness and Perth to Edinburgh, and passengers from Dunfermline can now reach Edinburgh in less than half an hour. In 1057 Malcolm Canmore ascended the Scottish throne. Besides founding the monastery of Dunfermline, he built a strong tower on a height in the adjacent glen, and from this tower the town derives its name and dates its existence. Dun, in Gaelic, signifies a hill or fort; far means crooked or winding; and lyn a pool and running water, which is exactly descriptive of the tower and locality. The arms of the town are tower, supported by two lions, with the motto, "Esto Rupes, inaccessus." Be thou an invincible rock." The burgh of Dunfermline, it appears, was held of the monastery, which formerly possessed paramount jurisdiction and exclusive privileges here for nearly two centuries, and became royal by a charter from James VI. dated 24th May, 1538. In this document the monarch ratifies sundry charters, donations, and indentures, by John and Robert, abbots of Dunfermline, particularly one dated the 10th of October, 1395, by which the abbot and convent renounce in favour of the aldermen and community the whole income of the burgh belonging to their revenue, with the small customs, profits of courts &c. "reserving, however, the power of punishment, should any of the magistrates be guilty of injustice in the exercise of their office." In 14 the burgh was placed on the footing it still maintains as respects its government, which is vested in a provost, four bailies, and a dean of guild, together with a treasurer, a chamberlain, a town clerk, and 15 councillors, elected pursuant to the terms of the Municipal Reform Act. Dunfermline, together with Stirling, Inverkeithing, Culross and South Queensferry, form the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. Dunfermline is also the seat of the sheriff substitute for the western district of Fife, who holds a regular court on the first and third Tuesday of every month during session. Burgh courts are held daily in the Corporation buildings. James VI. here subscribed the first covenant, and Charles I. was born in the palace which had been added to the old Royal Tower of Malcolm Canmore, the south-west wall of which still remains, and here Charles II. signed the Dunfermline declaration. In 1873, by a decision of the House of Lords, the ruins, and a portion of the grounds adjoining, were appportioned to the Crown, but admission is granted to the public.

The city consists of streets stretching from east to west, with a number of smaller streets crossing down hill at right angles, or proceeding in a northerly direction, and of late years has been greatly enlarged by the extension of the cross streets and the addition of a large suburb to the west and east. It is well supplied with water, the Corporation having obtained an Act of Parliament in 1876 to ensure a plentiful supply from Glensherrup, the works costing about £70,000. The streets are lighted with gas. There is an efficient fire brigade, with quarters in Campbell street, and fire plugs on the gravitation principle are placed at numerous points throughout the streets and lanes. The sewage of the city is conveyed by means of pipes to the sea at Charlestown, a distance of three miles. The plans were prepared by Mr. J. L. Stewart C.E. Edinburgh, and the cost of the undertaking was about £7,000.

The constantly increasing population and prosperity of Dunfermline may be entirely ascribed to its manufacture of table linens and damask goods. This branch of industry was started about the commencement of last century, and is carried on here to a greater extent than in any other town in Great Britain, many firms being engaged in this business. There are several large factories where power-loom weaving is carried on. It is said that the chest of the Incorporation of Weavers contains two curious specimens of their art—a man's shirt wrought in the loom by a weaver of the name of Inglis, and a woman's shift by another named Meldrum, both of which are without seam, and effected without the assistance of the needle; the only part which Inglis could not accomplish was a button for the neck. Exclusive of the linen trade, there are other branches of magnitude and importance, among which may be mentioned the large fire-clay works of Messrs J. & M. Craig Limited, at Lilliehill; Messrs. Street Brothers Limited, at Townhill; Loch-Head Fire Clay Co. Loch-Head; the Fife Coal Co. Limited, at Crossgates; and Messrs. Wallace Brothers, Halbeath. There are also iron and brass foundries and engineering works. The coal trade in the neighbourhood is also very extensive, and large quantities of this article are annually exported. About 4,000 men are employed in connection with the collieries. Six branch banks are established here, in addition to a Savings Bank, for which a fine building has been erected in East Port street, at a cost of £3,000. The board of directors includes the provost, bailies and clergymen of the town. There are three newspapers, namely, the "Dunfermline Press" and the "Dunfermline Journal," published on Saturday, and the "Dunfermline Citizen," published on Wednesday. The public park, at the east end of the town, extending over between 30 and 40 acres, is finely laid out and planted with trees, and has a polished granite fountain, given by the late Provost Donald, and a band stand with a gilt dome, the gift of Mrs. Carnegie. The park, on a clear day, commands a fine view of Edinburgh and the Firth of Forth.

The Town House, at the bottom of High street, on the site of the Old Town House, was begun in 1875 and finished in 1879 at a cost of about £20,000. The building, which presents a combination of the French and Scotch Gothic styles, is from a design by Mr. J. C. Walker, Edinburgh, and has two frontages, and at the north-east angle is a tower, 150 feet, containing a clock with four illuminated dials, and striking the hours on a bell, weighing 33 cwt. The exterior is adorned with carvings of the royal Scottish and burgh arms, and has also canopied niches with busts representing Malcolm Canmore and Queen Margaret and King Robert the Bruce and Elizabeth, his second queen, all of whom are buried in the abbey. On the Kirkgate front are eight carved stone panels from the old Town House, some of which are said to have originally belonged to the old market cross of 1620. The interior of the building includes a burgh court room and a council chamber, and offices for the town clerk and other officials of the burgh. The County buildings, on the south side of the High street, are in the Classic style, and include a tower with spire 132 feet; they contain a sheriff court room, justice of peace court room, and a suite of rooms for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal and other county officials. The Post Office, a building in Queen Anne street, stands on the site of the old High school. The Carnegie Public Baths, in Bath street, were erected in 1875 by a gift of £5,000 from Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of New York and a native of Dunfermline, from designs prepared by Mr. Andrew Scobie, architect, of Dunfermline. The Carnegie Free Library, in St. Margaret and Abbott streets, was erected in 1881-3, at a cost of £8,000, also given by Mr. A. Carnegie, and is a building in the domestic Tudor style, from plans prepared by Mr. J. C. Walker, architect, of Edinburgh. The library comprises 15,760 volumes, and there are reading rooms for ladies and gentlemen, recreation and smoke rooms, lavatories, and a dwelling house for the librarian. The memorial stone was laid July 27th, 1881, and the building was opened by the Earl of Rosebery, August 29th, 1883. Mr. Carnegie has since given further donations to the amount of £600 towards the maintenance and management of the library. St. Margaret's Hall, in St. Margaret st. was begun in 1876, and completed in 1878, at a cost of about £12,000, from plans prepared by Mr. Starforth, Edinburgh; the style is an adaptation of Early English, and the building contains a large hall, seating 1,500 persons, another seating 350, billiard rooms, a reading room, and several committee and board rooms. In the large hall is a splendid organ, purchased and presented by the ladies of the town and district at a cost of over £1,300. The building belongs to the St. Margaret's Hall Company Limited. The principal hotels are the City Arms, in Bridge street and the Royal, in High street. The Cottage Hospital, in Nethertown Broad street, containing 20 beds, was erected at a cost of about £4,500, and opened on September 1st, 1894; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions. The West Fife Joint Hospital for Infectious Diseases, situated at the west end of the town, was opened on November 1st, 1894, and is maintained by the Dunfermline committee of the West of Fife County Council, and local authorities of the burghs of Dunfermline, Inverkeithing and Culross, and contains from 40 to 50 beds.

The Abbey, the church of which is now the High Kirk of the burgh, was founded as a Priory of Benedictines on the site of a Culdee cell in 1080 by Malcolm Canmore, who was buried in the church in 1093; there must have been a church here previous to 1080, as King Malcolm is said to have been married to Queen Margaret in 1070 at Dunfermline; in 1124 it was created an abbey, and in 1224 the abbot received the mitre, and in 1304 most of the abbey buildings were burnt by order of King Edward I. At the Reformation, 1560, the remaining buildings and church, except the nave, which the "New Religion" reserved for their own parish kirk, were destroyed, and only this nave remained until 1821, when a new parish kirk, consisting of chancel, transept and central tower, 100 feet high, was added to the east of the nave, which then became a vestibule to the new church; the west doorway of the old church, between the two western towers is Norman, and above it is a fine decorated window; the Norman nave is of eight bays, with a north porch containing a rich Norman doorway; the transept, central tower and choir composing the present church, are in a modern Gothic style, and beneath the tower the remains of King Robert Bruce have been re-interred; the nave contains 17 other royal tombs, besides those of the Regents, Thomas, Earl of Moray, and Robert, Duke of Albany; on the south side of the church are some remains of the refectory and cells. The tower has the words "King Robert the Bruce" in massive stone letters, four feet high, round the four sides at the summit. The parish church has been collegiate and under the care of two ministers since 1645.

The Grammar School, instituted towards the end of the 15th century, was, in 1873, by the operation of "The Education (Scotland) Act, 1872," transferred to the burgh School Board, the interest of the original sum of £2,000, which belonged to the school, being made over annually to that body. In 1877 the board, with the approval of the Board of Education, converted the school into one for the imparting of higher or secondary education. The present building was erected in Buchanan street at a cost of £7,500, and the school transferred to it in January, 1886. Adjoining is an annex for Technical Instruction, erected in 1893 by the munificence of Mr. Carnegie, at a cost of £10,000. The board have also erected a school in the west end of the town at a cost of £4,136, and a central school has been substituted for the Bolland and Commercial schools, at a cost of £5,143. A new infants' department was built in 1895 at an estimated cost of £2,800. There is also a school originally erected in connection with St. Leonard's steam power weaving factory, but which the board purchased at a cost of £1,200. Altogether there are seven schools under the control of the board, while a supervision is exercised over three other educational institutions. Broomhall, the seat of the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., P.C. and Pittfirn House, the seat of Sir Peter A. Halkett bart, D.L., J.P. are in this parish. The market is held on Tuesday for grain, which is disposed of by stock and sample. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, March, April, June, July, September, October and November. The entire parish of Dunfermline comprises 20,764 statute acres; rateable value, of burgh, £84,854; landward, £46,010; the population in 1891 was 28,948, including 22,157 in the royal burgh, or 19,647 in the parliamentary burgh, and in 1881 in the parish, 26,568; in the royal burgh, 19,812.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 3,037.

Crossford, Halbeath, Townhill, Wellwood, Kingseat and Miles Mark are small villages and hamlets in this parish, and in the parliamentary division of West Fife, from one to three miles distant from Dunfermline. At Halbeath are the colliery and offices of Wallace Brothers, and a board school. At Townhill are the collieries and offices of the Townhill Coal Company and a board school. At Wellwood are the collieries and offices of Messrs. Thomas Spawars and Co. Limited, and a school. At Miles Mark a school has been built by the joint aid of the parish and burgh School Boards, at a cost of £3,000 for 400 children. Population in 1891: Crossford, 511; Halbeath, 767; Townhill, 1,801; Wellwood, 590; Kingseat, 735; and Miles Mark and Park Nook, 482.

Crossgates is a village partly in the parish of Dalgity and partly in this parish, 4 miles east-north-east from Dunfermline and 4 north from Inverkeithing, with a station on the North British railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries surrounding the village. There are Established and United Presbyterian churches, and there is likewise a Board school. Population in 1881, 1,057, and in 1891, 1,165.

for about 2 miles east to west; it contains the royal and parliamentary burgh and seaport of Dysart, and is the head of a poor combination, with a station on the Perth and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish also comprises a considerable portion of the royal burgh of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded on the north by Kinglasis, east by Wemyss and Markinch and west by Kirkcaldy parish, and is within the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy.
Dysart town is 2 miles north-west from Kirkcaldy, on a gentle declivity towards the Firth of Forth. The central street contains many substantial houses, and is of very antique appearance. The streets are lighted by gas supplied by a company formed in 1843. So early as 1546 Dysart is mentioned as one of the principal trading towns on the coast of Fife. The trade now consists in the weaving of ticks, checks and similar linen fabrics, also woollens, tweeds, druggets and winceys. There are large power-loom factories in the burgh, besides two flax spinning mills, and in the vicinity are mines of coal, extensively wrought. The harbour is very good, and there is an excellent wet dock with about 18 feet of water. Coal is the principal export. Dysart was created a royal burgh in the beginning of the 16th century, but the original charter is lost. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and, together with Kirkcaldy, Kinghorn and Bruntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The most remarkable object of antiquity near the town is the castle of Ravenscraig, standing on a steep crag fronting the sea; this castle is alluded to in Sir Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," under the name of Ravenshough.
It was inhabited in Oliver Cromwell's time, and was assaulted by a party of his troops, but has for many years been deserted, and is now ruinous. Dysart gives the title of earl to a branch of the Marquises of Tullibardine.
The Normand Memorial Hall, a building of stone, was erected at a cost of between £5,000 and £6,000, and presented to the town by Mrs. James Normand, in memory of her deceased husband. There is also a Mechanics' Institute, and a golf course of 9 holes. Dysart House is the seat of Michael B. Nairn esq.
J.P. The area comprises 4,197 acres; rate-able value, burgh (including part of Kirkcaldy), £50,561; landward, £7,435; the population in 1891 was 13,626, including 3,022 in the royal burgh of Dysart and 9,839 in the royal burgh of Kirkcaldy; the population of the parish in 1881 was 11,601, of whom 2,645 were in Dysart burgh.

mentary register in 1898 was 2,232.

EARLSFERRY, a royal burgh, formerly in the parish of Kilconquhar, but transferred in 1892 to that of Elie, lies at the head of Elie bay, and in the police burgh of that name, which lies farther to the east by about half a mile, is the nearest railway station and post office, Elie being, in fact, a suburb of Earlsferry and possessing the harbour. The royal burgh, which is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, is 13 miles south-east from St. Andrews and 5 east from Largo, and remains in the ecclesiastical parish of Kilconquhar. The date of its erection into a royal burgh is uncertain, as its earliest charter was destroyed by a fire in Edinburgh. A new one was in consequence granted by James IV. by which all its ancient privileges were renewed and confirmed; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Its trade consists chiefly in the export of grain and potatoes. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch at Elie. Earlsferry consists principally of one main street and commodious residences facing the shore, and enjoys with Elie a high reputation as a seaside resort; the beach is very fine and sandy, bathing and golfing, with a tennis club, being the special attraction. The rateable value of the burgh is £2,485; the population in 1891 was 304, and in 1881 286.

ELIE is a parish and police burgh and seaport, with a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish of Elie, which extends 3½ miles along the north shore of the Firth of Forth by about 1½ inland, and is in the Anstruther small debt court district; in 1892, under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1890," it was added to the royal burgh of Earlsferry, of which town Elie is really a suburb; the parish boundaries are St. Monance on the east, Kilconquhar on the north and Newburn on the west. The burgh is situated on the north-east part of Elie bay, 14 miles south-east from St. Andrews, 32 north-east from Edinburgh and 5 east from Largo, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is a small well-sheltered harbour but no docks. The trade of the district consists in the export of grain and potatoes. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. There are golfing links and a good beach, and Elie is a summer resort in conjunction with Earlsferry. In one of the principal streets near the sea are some substantial ancient residences, evidently once the habitation of families of distinction. Elie House, the residence of William Baird esq., D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion of stone standing in good grounds. William Baird esq. of Elie House, Sir James Malcolm bart. of Twickenham, Middlesex, and Miss Gourlay are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,020 acres; rateable value for the burgh, £6,583, and landwards, £4,756; the population of the parish was 764 in 1891, including 728 in the police burgh of Elie, and in 1881, 670.

Williamsburgh and Liberty are small hamlets in the parish and form part of the police burgh.

FALKLAND is a royal burgh and parish, with a station on the Thornton, Ladybank and Dundee section of the North British railway, 2½ miles east of the burgh, and known as Falkland road. The burgh lies 25 miles north from Edinburgh, 15 south-east from Perth and 10 south-west from Omar. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty, extends 6 miles from east to west by 4 broad, and is bounded north by Auchtermuchty, west by Strathmiglo, south by Leslie and Markinch, and east by Kettle.
 The town was erected into a burgh by James II. in 1458, and its charter was confirmed and renewed by James VI. in 1595.
 The government consists of a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a town clerk and nine councillors. Falkland consists principally of one street, the eastern part of which is broad and spacious, but towards the west is narrow. The few good houses are of an antique character, somewhat in keeping with the architecture of the palace, a building well worthy of notice, and for a long time was only a ruin, but was rescued from total decay and repaired by the late Mr.

Bruce of Nethill. It has now, since 1895, been undergoing complete restoration at the expense of the Marquis of Bute. The royal family of Scotland resided here occasionally up to the time of Charles II., who called here on his return from the continent in 1650. James V. died here in 1542.
 In the old castle of Falkland, David Stewart, Duke of Rothesay, eldest son of Robert III. was confined, and here he died, 27 March, 1402. Sir Walter Scott, in his "Fair Maid of Perth," wove in the traditional story. Only a portion of the foundations of this ancient fortress now remains. In 1715, it is said, the famous Rob Roy garrisoned the palace with a party of Macgregors, and laid the country under heavy contributions. The manufacture of linen forms an important branch of trade here, and the chief occupation of the inhabitants is weaving. A town hall was erected in 1804, in which balls and other public assemblages take place. A large common, which belongs to Falkland, and on which the inhabitants had a right to turn their cattle, &c. was in 1818 divided among the heritors, and is now nearly all enclosed. The parish church, erected by the late O.T. Bruce esq. at an expense of £7,000, is a fine structure, with a tower and spire; a monument to Mr. Bruce has been erected on Black Hill, near the Lomonds, and in the square behind the palace is a memorial to Col. Robert Bruce, and John Bruce, king's printer for Scotland. The House of Falk and, erected by the late Mr. Bruce, and one of the finest mansions in the county, is now, with the estates, the property of the Marquess of Bute K.T. The Lomond hills in this district are cone-shaped; the eastern Lomond, which is the most regular and beautiful, is about 1,450 feet above the level of the sea, and appears to have been fortified. The western Lomond is higher, and has on its top a large cairn. The Marquess of Bute K.T. George Johnston esq. of Lathrisk, and Edward Balfour esq. of Balbinnie, are the principal landowners.
 The area comprises 8,265 acres; rateable value of parish, £11,628; of burgh, £2,558; the population in 1891 was 2,470, including 959 in the royal burgh, and in 1881, 2,698, including 972 in the royal burgh.

Freuchie is a village in the parish. The manufacture of linen is carried on here, and there are United Presbyterian and quoad sacra churches. There is also a public school. Falkland road is the nearest railway station, one mile distant. Population in 1801, 913, and in 1881, 1,059.

Newton of Falkland is a hamlet about midway between Falkland and Freuchie, where there is an extensive trade carried on in brewing. Falkland road is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

FLISK is a parish on the south shore of the Tay, its kirktown being 9 miles west from Newport and 6 east from Newburgh station on the North British railway; it is bounded on the west and south by Dunbog, south-east by Creich and east by Balmerino, and is in the small debt court district of Newburgh. The land is almost wholly arable. There are several salmon fishing stations along the banks of the Tay. At the west end of the parish are the extensive ruins of Ballinbreich, once the seat of the Earls of Rothes, some of whom are interred in the parish churchyard. The Marquess of Zetland and James Carnegie esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,855 acres; rateable value, £3,218; the population in 1891 was 248, and in 1881, 259.

FORGAN parish extends for about 4 miles in length and about 2½ in breadth, along the south bank of the Firth of Tay, exactly opposite the town of Dundee. It is bounded by Ferry-Port-on-Craig on the east, Balmerino on the west and Leuchars and Kilmarnock on the south, and is in the small debt court district of Coupar. It contains the town of Newport, which has two stations (East and West Newport) on the North British railway. A little north of Wormit station, also in this parish, is the Tay railway bridge, connecting the southern line with Dundee. The parish church of Forgan is nearly two miles inland, being 10 miles north-east from Cupar and the same distance north-west from St. Andrews. The landward part of the parish is richly wooded and well cultivated. The mansion house of St. Fort, in this parish, is now (1899) unoccupied, and about 1 mile west from Newport is the small harbour of Woodhaven, off which the industrial training ship "Mars" is moored. The area comprises 4,983 acres; rateable value, £37,000; the population in 1891 was 3,763, including 2,548 in Newport and 453 on the training ship "Mars," and in 1881, 3,308, including 2,311 in Newport and 395 on the "Mars."

Letters for Forgan should be addressed "Newport R.S.O. Fifeshire."

INVERKEITHING is a burgh and parish and seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline. The town is a royal and parliamentary burgh, with a station on the main line of the North British railway, the Forth railway bridge terminating at North Queensferry in this parish. The burgh is 11 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 13 north-west from Kirkcaldy and 4 south-east from Dunfermline, and occupies a slight hill sloping up from the north-west side of Inverkeithing Bay, commanding an extensive view of the south side of the Forth. The parish extends 6 miles from north to south by 6 miles broad; the outlying portion having been transferred by Boundary Order 67 to Dunfermline, by which it is bounded on the north-west and on the north-east by Dalgetty. This burgh, together with Stirling, Culross, Dunfermline and South Queensferry, forms the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. So early as the days of David I. Inverkeithing was a royal residence, and received a charter of confirmation in the reign of William the Lion, confirming charters of earlier but unknown dates; a number of intervening charters were confirmed by one from James VI., in 1598. The government is vested in a provost, or sheriff, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, elected by the councillors. The trade of the burgh consists of fire-cloy works, paper mills, tanning, rope making and shipbuilding; connected with the latter branch is a patent slip, of great use in repairing vessels. Freestone and whinstone are abundant in this neighbourhood, and of excellent quality, and considerable quantities of each are annually exported. The harbour is capacious, and the bay is noted as a place of security in all winds. The private harbour of East Ness affords additional accommodation, and has about 18 feet of water at spring tides. The town consists chiefly of two streets, which are lighted by gas; the town house comprises a gaol and apartments for the courts. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, is established here. There are many remains of antiquity, some of which are coeval with the earliest periods of Scottish history. Among these is the "Inns," or old Palace, which is said to have been the residence of Annabella Drummond, Queen of Robert III., who died at Inverkeithing. This Queen is supposed to have presented the burgh with its cross, on the occasion of the marriage of her son, the Duke of Rotheay, with the daughter of the Earl of Douglas, in 1398: the top of the cross is adorned with shields charged with the royal arms of that Queen and the Earl of Douglas. On the island of Inebargrie, just below the Forth bridge, are the ruins of a castle partially destroyed during Cromwell's campaign. There is a church of the Establishment and a United Presbyterian church. The parish church contains a beautiful font, said to have been the gift of Queen Annabella, and discovered in 1806, when the church was undergoing a series of repairs. There is a large public school under the School Board. A fair is held on the first Friday in August. The Earl of Elgin G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., P.C. and the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C. and the Hon. Hew H. Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson, of Forde, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,482 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £20,877; landward, £43,479; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,943, including 1,367 in the Royal burgh, or 1,676 in the prt, and in 1881, 2,565 in the parish, including 2,565 in the port.

Hillend, James Town and Rosyth are hamlets in the parish of Inverkeithing. At the latter place are the ruins of the old castle of Rosyth, the celebrated residence of Margaret, spouse of Malcolm Canmore, and subsequently of the Stuart family. The rock on which it stands is connected with the mainland by a causeway, and a stone slab, placed in the wall over what appears to have been the principal entrance, bears the date of 1561. In Sir Walter Scott's novel of "The Abbot," this castle is alluded to, and tradition points it out as being the birthplace of the wife of Oliver Cromwell. It is now the property of the Earl of Hopetoun, whose noble mansion stands on the opposite shore.

North Queensferry, in the parish of Inverkeithing, is 2 miles south from Inverkeithing, and is well known to travellers as the port and point of land opposite to Queensferry (or South Queensferry), in Linlithgowshire, and a steamer passes between the two several times daily. The Forth bridge, for carrying the North British railway over the Firth of Forth, forms a connection at this place. It was opened by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on the 4th of March, 1890, the cost of its erection being about £3,000,000. Two of the spans of this gigantic undertaking are 1,710 feet each in length, and have a height of 150 feet above high water at spring tides. There are two other spans of 680 feet, fifteen of 168 feet, four of 67 feet and three of 25 feet each: the total length with the viaduct approaches is a mile and a half (for full particulars see Queensferry, Linlithgowshire). By its erection the direct journey north can be taken without break as formerly, when passengers had to cross the Forth by ferry from Granton to Burntisland. A short distance to the west of the village is the anchorage ground, resorted to by vessels in stress of weather or contrary winds, called "Saint Margaret's Hope." Here is a station of the coast-guard, and a fishing ground for a kind of sprat, of which quantities are taken. There are large whinstone quarries, employing a number of men. Population in 1891, 489.

KETTLE is a parish, including the village of Kingskettle, which is situated 4 miles east from Falkland and 17 south from Dundee, with a station, called Kingskettle, on the main line of the North British railway. The parish extends about 9 miles east to west by 3 broad; is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and is bounded north by Collassie and Culti, east by Largo, south by Kennoway and Markinch, and west by Falkland. The name of Kingskettle, by which the village is now called, has arisen from its being the property of the Crown. This district forms a large portion of the rich and beautiful territory on the north side of the Bow of Fife. The river Eden bounds the parish on nearly the whole of the northern side. The manufacture of linen is the principal trade carried on here. A fire engine is maintained here by public subscription; the brigade consists of a captain and seven firemen. The cemetery, opened in 1836, is under the management of the parish council, and contains a beautiful marble monument, erected by H. V. Haig esq. of Ramornie, to the memory of his wife, Archie Anne Lindsay Fraser. George Johnston, of Lathrisk, Edward Balfour, of Balbirnie, H. V. Haig, of Ramornie, and James Homs Bigg, of Downfield Kettle, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,612 acres; rateable value, £10,654; the population in 1891 was 1,939, including 558 in the village of Kingskettle, and 478 in Kettlebridge village, and in 1881 the figures were 2,054, 598 and 451.

Kettlebridge is a village in this parish, about one mile south of the church, and about half a mile from the village is the hamlet of Balmalcolm, where there is a Free Church

KILCONQUHAR is a parish and village, with a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrew's section, of the North British railway, is 4 miles east of Largo and 10 south of St. Andrew's. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and contains the village of Colinsburgh (which see); it extends about 6 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 2 to 3 miles, and is bounded south by Elie, west by Newburn and Largo, north by Ceres and Cameroun, and east by Carnbee. Until the 15th May, 1892, the royal burgh of Earlsferry was in Kilconquhar parish, but the Boundary Commissioners then transferred a detached portion of Elie parish (consisting of Muircambus and part of Chrsleton estates) to Kilconquhar, and in exchange gave to Elie parish all the land formerly belonging to Kilconquhar to the south of Cockle Mill Burn and the North British railway. This area included the burgh of Earlsferry, which now forms part of Elie parish. Coal and lime are extensively Anstruther-Thomson. The church has a fine square tower 80 feet high. Balcarres House, the seat of the Earl of Crawford K.T., V.D. and about one mile north of Colinsburgh, is a mansion in the Tudor style, situated on a southern slope about 3 miles from the sea-coast; Kilconquhar House is the residence of the Earl of Lindsay, and Charleton House, of Colonel John Anstruther-Thomson D.L., J.P., V.D. Balcarres Craig, near Balcarres House, is a remarkable hill, rising abruptly 200 feet above the level of the land. At the lower end of the parish, close to the sea coast, the hill of Kin-craig rises to a height of 200 feet above the level of the sea, and in its rocks are several large caves. Kilconquhar Loch is a fine sheet of water, three-quarters of a mile in length and nearly the same in breadth, and about 2 miles in circumference, with two small islands, which harbour swans and wild fowl. The Earl of Crawford and the Earl of Lindsay, Col. John Anstruther-Thomson, William Baird esq. and David Adams esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises about 6,000 acres; rateable value £11,703. The population in 1891 was 1,746, and in 1881, 1,767, in both cases excluding Earlsferry, but including 345 in 1891 and 350 in 1881 in the village of Kilconquhar.

Post Office; Mrs. Christina Robertson, postmistress. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Fifeshire added.) Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 6 & 11.5 a.m. & 3.30 & 6.15 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Nearest money order & telegraph office is at Colinsburgh, 1 mile distant KILMANY is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles north of Cupar, and 5 south-west of Newport. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar, extends 6 miles from north-east to south-west by a breadth varying from 1 to 3 miles; it is bounded north by Balmerino, north-east by Forgan, east by Logie, south by Cupar and west by Creich. Cupar is the nearest railway station for the south of the parish, and is on the North British main line; the nearest station to Kilmanny village is St. Fort, on the same system. With the exception of a few acres which are chiefly woodland, the entire parish is in a high state of cultivation, being well watered and drained by numerous streams. In 1680, David Hackston, at that time proprietor of the estate of Rathillet and a bigoted leader of the Covenanters, was executed for complicity in the murder of Archbishop Sharpe, of St. Andrews. David Gillespie, of Mounthquhame and Major William Anstruther-Thomson, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,343 acres; rateable value, £6,928; the population in 1891 was 588, and in 1881, 634.

Rathillet is a village in the parish of Kilmanny, about 3 miles from St. Fort railway station.

KILRENNY is a royal and parliamentary burgh, also a parish, and contains the port and village of Cellardyke. The burgh is 1 mile north-east of Anstruther Easter, 3 south-west from Crail, and 8 south-east from St. Andrew's. The nearest station is at Anstruther, on the North British railway. The parish extends 3 miles along the shores of the Firth of Forth, by 2 inland, and is bounded on the west by Anstruther Easter and Carnbee, north by Airdrie and east by Crail; it is in the small debt court district of Anstruther. The coast here is one continued range of rocks, with two small creeks, which form the harbour of Anstruther, and the port of Cellardyke, or Nether Kilrenny, which place forms a portion of the town of Anstruther, which comprises the burghs of Anstruther Easter and Wester, and the village of Cellardyke, while the burgh of Kilrenny is composed of Upper and Nether Kilrenny, or Cellardyke, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six councillors, and in conjunction with St. Andrew's, the two Anstruthers, Crail, Cupar and Pittenween, forms the St. Andrew's district of burghs, and returns one member to Parliament. The Town Hall, which includes council, reading and amusement rooms, was erected and presented to the burgh by Stephen Williamson esq. and the representatives of the late Jas. Fowler esq. The representatives of the late Col. Anstruther, Walker Morrison esq. of Falfield, Sir Thomas Erskine bart. of Cambu, and Charles C. Bethune esq. of Rennyhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,776 acres; rateable value, of the landward, £5,193, burghal (including part of Anstruther Easter), £6,208. The population of the entire parish in 1891 was 2,998, and in 1881, 3,198; 2,610 in 1801 and 2,759 in 1881 being in the burgh of Kilrenny, and 109 and 101 in the burgh of Anstruther.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 360.

The village and quad sacra parish of Cellardyke (or Nether Kilrenny), is an extensive fishing village, but forming part of the burgh of Kilrenny. There is a small harbour for fishing boats here. Cellardyke is specially noted for its oil clothing, fishing material, and net manufacturing, a considerable number of persons being employed in these industries. The greater number of the inhabitants are fishermen, about 200 boats belonging to the place. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,662. Post Office; William Dewar, postmaster. Letters through Anstruther. Deliveries, 10 a.m. & 7.30 p.m.; dispatches, 10.45 a.m. & 3 & 8.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Anstruther, 2 miles distant

KINCARDINE (or Kincardine-on-Forth) is a town in the parish of Tulliallan, which was transferred to this county by a Local Government Order in December, 1890, having up to that time been included in Perthshire. The town is a seaport and a burgh of barony. 15 miles west from North Queensferry and 5 south-east from Alloa, and has a station on the North British railway. It is situated on the north bank of the Firth of Forth. At one time this place was called "West Pans," from the salt works established in it, but these have long ceased to exist. The town, although irregularly built and the streets narrow, contains some good houses. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited is established here, and there are rope and twine and worsted and woollen factories. The population in 1891 was 2,007, and in 1881, 1,985.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Kincardine; Mrs. Ann Baxter, postmistress. Letters should be addressed Kincardine-on-Forth. Deliveries, 8.15 & 10.15 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7.5 a.m. & 2.20 & 5.10 p.m.

KINGHORN is a seaport and a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, also a parish, 3 miles south from Kirkcaldy and 2½ east-by-north from Burntisland, and has a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish extends 4½ miles from north to south by about 4 wide; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded south by Burntisland, west by Aberdour and Auchtertool, and north by Abbotshall and part of Kirkcaldy. Kinghorn was invested with the privileges of a royal burgh by King David I., and about that time was said to have been a royal residence. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Dysart, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. There are two principal streets in the town, one running from east to west, and the other from south to north. The harbour has fallen to decay, and the nearest pier is about half a mile distant, at Petty-Cur, which for many years was the ferry place for Edinburgh, now transferred to Burntisland. There is a church of the Establishment, and Free and United Presbyterian churches. The ancient Established church, which has occupied the site from time immemorial, has undergone restoration at an expense of £3,000. The Town House is a good building, and there is a public library and museum at the school, and a branch of the British Linen Company's Bank. In 1887 the municipal authorities purchased Links Park, adjoining the town, for public and recreation grounds, at a cost of £1,050, with £300 additional in laying out the golf course, bowling green and tennis court. A golf club house was erected in 1894, facing the links. About a mile to the eastward of Kinghorn is the Kirkcaldy Combination Poorhouse for the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Burntisland and Kinghorn; it occupies a commanding situation near the coast. (Further particulars will be found in the account of Kirkcaldy.) About 1 mile from Kinghorn, on the Burntisland road, is a monument in the form of a Celtic cross, to commemorate the death of Alexander III., who was killed by falling from his horse in 1286. This monument was raised by public subscription, among the subscribers being H.M. the Queen. The inscription reads, "To the illustrious Alexander III., the last of Scotland's Celtic Kings, who was accidentally killed near this spot, March 19th, M.CCLXXXVI. Erected on the Sex-centenary of his death."

There is a strong battery at Inchkeith, which island forms part of the parish of Kinghorn, distant about three miles from Petty-Cur. It also has a large harbour, erected by government at a considerable cost, and a lighthouse with a revolving light on the highest point of land standing 235 feet above the sea level. Certain writers say Inchkeith was so called from an old noble family named Keith, while others connect it with Guidl. Here, they supposed, was raised the town or fortress of Guida, described by Bede, more than 1,100 years ago, as situated in the middle of the great arm of the sea which runs into Britain from the east. About the year 700 a church or monastery, founded by St. Adamnan, successor to St. Columba, in the abbacy of Iona, was erected on the island. Inchkeith was seized by the English in 1547, and a fort was built on it, which was taken by the French during the regency of Mary, queen of James V.

The area of the parish comprises 5,212 acres; rateable value of landward £10,933, and in 1891 had a population of 3,337, and in 1881, 3,650, of whom 2,036 in 1891 and 1,790 in 1881 were in the parliamentary and police burgh; and 1,569 in 1891 and 1,423 in 1881 in the royal burgh; the rateable value of the burgh, which includes part of Kirkcaldy, is £8,349.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 255. Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, 27 High street; Thomas M. Henderson, postmaster. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Fifeshire added). Deliveries, 8.30 & 11 a.m. & 6.20 p.m.; sundays, 9.20 a.m. Dispatches, north, 6.30 & 7.55 a.m. & 2.45, 4.20, 5.40 & 7.30 p.m.; sundays 7.20 & 8.50 p.m.

KINGLASSIE is a parish and village, the latter 3 miles south from Leslie, 4½ north-east from Lochgelly, and 3 north from Cardenden station on the Dunfermline and Thornton Junction section of the North British railway; there is also a station at Leslie on a branch line from Markinch. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and extends 5 miles from east to west by a width of 2 to 4 miles, is bounded north by Leslie and Portmoak, west by Auchterderran, south by Dysart, and east by Markinch. It is watered by the Lochy and the Ore, tributary streams of the Leven. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in mining. A Public Hall was erected in 1896, at a cost of £3,000, by the late Mr. Alexander Mitchell, of Redwells. A fair is entitled to be held on third Wednesday in May, and on the Thursday before Michaelmas (o.s.). Rodger Sinclair Aytoun esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,717 acres; rateable value, £9,340; the population in 1891 was 1,372, including 1,282 in the village, and in 1881, 1,292.

Post Office, Mrs. Agnes Murray, post-mistress. Letters arrive through Cardenden R.S.O. Delivery, 10 a.m.; dispatch, 3 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Leslie is the nearest money order office, and telegraph office at Cardenden station, 3 miles distant

KINGSBARN is a parish and village, the latter 3 miles north-west of Crail and 7 south-east of St. Andrews, with a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, extends 3½ miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, is bounded north by St. Andrews and St. Leonards, west and south by Crail and east by the North Sea. Originally Kingsbarns formed part of Crail, but was separated from that parish in 1631. Pitmilny, a very ancient seat, stands in the northern part of the parish. Cambo, the seat of the former Earls of Kellie, but now of Sir Thomas Erskine bart. D.L., J.P. is in the south portion of the parish. George A. Russell esq. Kenly Green; Charleton J. B. Monypenny esq. Hillhead; Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard M.A. of Rednock House, Stirling; James Cheape esq. of Strath-tyrum; Andrew B. Bell esq. of Kildincaan; Sir Thomas Erskine bart. and Edmund P. B. Hay esq. Randerston, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,074 acres; rateable value, £7,144; the population in 1891 was 753, and in 1881, 795. Post, Money Order, Telegraph, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; James Lothian, sub-postmaster. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Fifeshire added). Deliveries, 9.40 a.m. & 3.20 p.m.; dispatches, 8.35 a.m. & 2.10 p.m

WITH ABBOTSHALL, CHAFEL, PATHHEAD, SINCLAIRTOWN AND GALLATOWN.

KIRKCALDY is a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, a seaport and head of a parish, of a poor combination and of a small debt court district; it has a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway, 12 miles east of Dunfermline. The parish of Kirkcaldy is 3 miles in extent from north to south, by one mile wide, and is bounded north and east by Dysart, south and west by Abbotshall, and north-west by Auchterderran; the parish extends along the northern shores of the Firth of Forth, at the base of a range of rising ground for upwards of 3 miles. By an Act of Parliament the suburbs of Abbotshall, Pathhead, Gallatoun and Sinclairtown are comprised within the boundaries of the burgh, which also includes portions of the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Kinghorn and Dysart, and the quoad sacra parishes of St. James, Invertel, Raith and Pathhead. The civic government of the town, which was made a royal burgh by Charles I. is vested in a town council consisting of 27 members, of whom one is provost and admiral of the burgh and harbour, four bailies, one dean of guild, and one treasurer. The council are also commissioners of police under the General Police Act, and local authority under the Health Act. The management of the harbour is vested in a board of commissioners, fourteen in number, consisting of the provost and bailies and others. The burgh, together with Kinghorn, Dysart and Burntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The sheriff holds a court every Wednesday for the disposal of ordinary debts recovery, and small debt cases. The justices of the peace sit here for trial of offences within the Kirkcaldy district of county, and here hold licensing courts; this is also the meeting place for the County Council of the district. When Charles I. erected Kirkcaldy into a royal burgh, it had, according to tradition, 100 ships belonging to it, and ranked as the sixth place of maritime importance in Scotland; but in 1673 the number of vessels in its possession had decreased considerably. On the return of peace in 1763, the trade of the port revived, and the number of shipping consequently increased and progressively augmented, so that in 1792 it boasted 26 vessels; from this period Kirkcaldy has gradually risen into repute, both as a port and a manufacturing town. The principal importations are flax, timber, grain &c.; the exports are floor cloth, linoleum, linen, yarn, machinery and coal. The number of vessels belonging to the port has for some years been on the decline again. Vessels from this port were employed in the

Davis Straits whale fishery for many years, but this trade is now discontinued. A branch from the main line of railway traverses the entire length of the harbour—a great convenience to operations of loading and unloading vessels. The harbour is dry at low water, but at full tide is capable of admitting vessels of large burden. The number of vessels that entered the port in 1898, from and to foreign countries and British possessions, with cargoes and in ballast was: British, 996 of 410,721 tons; foreign, 1,661 of 660,327 tons. Cleared: 990 British, 443,170 tons; foreign, 1,694, 680,655 tonnage. In the coasting trade, vessels entered of 412,129 tonnage, and 499 cleared of 85,743 tons; in intercourse with Great Britain and Ireland, 16 only entered, of 3,996 tons. In 1898, 100,613 tons of coal were shipped from this port. In 1898, 32 vessels, aggregating 1,136 tons, were registered in this port, and 4 vessels, equal 1,072 tons, were built; the number of fishing boats registered at the port was 423, aggregating 2,758 tons, and employing 1,409 men and boys, and 1,085 extra hands; there were also 21 steam trawlers of 363 tonnage. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters K. Y. The custom house, having control over a considerable line of coast, extending from Aberdeen to Anstruther, has been removed to Burntisland. There is, however, an office here. The prominent trade of Kirkcaldy and neighbourhood bears an intimate affinity with that of Dundee, consisting of the spinning of flax, tow, jute, and the weaving of linen goods for home and foreign consumption; striped hollands, dowlas, ticks, checks, calicoes &c. are amongst the fabrics produced, and in the manufacture of which there are several extensive power-loom factories in full operation; there are also several bleaching fields and dye works, and also china and earthenware factories, where a superior class of goods is made. Kirkcaldy is now the centre of the floor cloth and lineum manufacture of the kingdom. The other branches include brass and iron founding, machine making, and a considerable corn, malt and meal trade. The town, owing to its disproportionate length, has from an early period been styled "the long town of Kirkcaldy," but it now comprises many well-built cross streets and detached dwellings. The streets are paved, and lighted with gas. The Town House, erected in 1829, contains a hall for burgh and district meetings, an office for burgh clerk and record room, an office for the town clerk, and other apartments. The buildings of the Fife County Council, in Whyte's causeway, were opened May, 1894, at a cost of £6,000. Here the sheriff holds a court every Wednesday. The district committee meetings of the County Council are also held here, and the Justice of Peace Court. There is a good hotel, the "George," in High street. Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations," was born here 5 June, 1723. The Adam Smith Public Hall, in St. Brycedale avenue, also contains the Beveridge Hall and Library, built with money left for this purpose by the late Michael Beveridge esq. of Beochwood, and provost of Kirkcaldy. Provost Beveridge also gifted to the inhabitants a fine public park, some 100 acres in extent, with an artificial lake in the centre, which in winter is used as a skating pond. The Cora Exchange, in Cowan street, the first stone of which was laid with masonic honours in May, 1859, is now used only for public meetings, concerts &c. The Combination Poorhouse, situated on the lands of Abden, in the parish of Kinghorn and commanding an extensive view of the Firth of Forth, was erected in 1849, at a cost of over £5,000, and opened May, 1850; it is available for 130 inmates and is the joint property of the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Burntisland and Kinghorn, nearly half being held by the parish of Kirkcaldy, and its management is vested in the Parish Council. The Swan Memorial, a building of red stone, was erected in 1895, at the bottom of Kirkwynd, as a memorial to the late Provost Swan, and contains a set of rooms for the Young Men's Christian Association, to whom it belongs.

The parish church of Kirkcaldy, mainly erected in 1807, stands on rising ground in the centre of the town, the principal feature of the building being the fine Norman tower, dating from the middle of the 13th century, and formerly part of the old church of St. Brisse, dedicated in A.D. 1244: in the south porch is a marble monument to George Gillespie, one of the commissioners to the Westminster Assembly in 1643, and there are two stained windows, designed by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. D.C.L. and executed by the late William Morris F.S.A. of London. St. James's church, built in 1841 as a chapel for the original seceders, has belonged since 1853 to the Church of Scotland. St. Brycedale Free church, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected at a cost (exclusive of the site, which is valued at about £8,000) of fully £22,000. It contains a number of memorial windows, two of which are from designs by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. The other places of worship are the parish churches of Invertrie, Abbotshall, Raith, St. James, St. Clairtown and Pathhead, five Free churches, four United Presbyterian, two Episcopalian, and Original Secession, Congregational, Baptist, Wesleyan, Unitarian and Roman Catholic churches. The High School, built on the site of the old burgh school by M. B. Nairn esq. of Rankellour, chairman of the Kirkcaldy School Board, includes an elementary department. The schools, established under the will of the late Robert Philip esq. of Edenshead, for children of both sexes, have been transferred to the care of the School Board, and the children entitled to the benefits of this foundation are educated at the board schools, and receive clothing as before, free. A number of bursaries are also provided for the purpose of enabling the children of poor parents to attend the High School, or to prosecute their studies at the universities. There is also a charitable trust left by John Thomson, for educating poor children, and for providing annuities for the support of poor inhabitants. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited (with sub-branch at Pathhead), the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited (who have sub-branches at Pathhead and the West End), the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Company, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. There is also a branch of the Kirkcaldy Savings Bank. Four newspapers are issued here, the "Fife Free Press," "Fifeshire Advertiser," "Kirkcaldy Mail" and "Kirkcaldy Times." The market, which is a stock market for the sale of grain, is held on Saturday. Raith, a mansion with a lofty tower and fine grounds, is the residence of Ronald C. M. Ferguson esq. M.P., D.L. The area of the parish comprises 1,177 acres; rateable value, £66,288. The population of the entire parish in 1891 was 9,994, and in 1881, 8,528. The royal burgh had a total population in 1891 of 27,151, 9,887 of whom were in Kirkcaldy parish. The parliamentary burgh had a population in 1891 of 17,324.

The number of electors in the parliamentary register in 1898 was 3,221, and in the whole district of burghs, 6,396.

Abbotshall, although a distinct parish, is now included in the burgh of Kirkcaldy, and in Kirkcaldy poor combination. The parish, the extent of which is about 2 miles either way, rises gradually from the coast northward into tolerably high ground. Here are spinning mills, dye works, an earthenware manufactory, and a large corn mill. The present parish church was built in 1788 to replace the original church erected at the first disjunction of the parish in 1650. The small village of Chapel is in this parish. The area comprises 4,135 acres; rateable value, £31,157; the population in 1891 was 6,934 and in 1881, 6,435.

Invertrie is a quad sacra parish formed from those of Abbotshall and Kinghorn. There is an Established church and also a Free church. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 2,246.

Pathhead, now included within the burgh, is in the parish of Dysart and is situated chiefly on the face of a hill, looking towards the Firth of Forth; it is joined by two other districts, respectively named Gallowtown and Sinclairtown, also in the same burgh and parish. The manufacture of linen goods is briskly followed in these places. Dowlas, ticks, sheeting &c. are produced; flax spinning is also carried on to some extent. At Sinclairtown are three earthenware manufactories. The Public hall, in Back street, was erected about 1883; a branch of the Beveridge library is located in this building, and there is also a reading room. At Pathhead are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A cottage hospital was erected in 1890, in Nether street, at the expense of Michael B. Nairn esq. There is an Established church, two Free churches, and Episcopalian, Evangelical Union, Congregational and Baptist chapels. The trustee of the Earl of Rosslyn is the chief landowner. The rateable value of the parish of Dysart, in which Pathhead &c. are included, was in 1899, £53,474; the population of portion of Kirkcaldy burgh, in Dysart parish, in 1891 was 9,839.

LADYBANK is a village, 5 miles south-west from Cupan, and in conjunction with Monkston a police burgh, governed by a chief magistrate, two junior magistrates and six commissioners; it is in the parish of Colleslie and is an important railway station on the North British system, being the junction for the lines from Edinburgh, Alloa and Perth with the line to Dundee. The chief business is linen manufacturing, but maling and bobbin making are likewise carried on. A Free church, with spire, was erected here in 1876; a quoad sacra church has also been built, and there is a public school. Population in 1891, 1,198; rateable value, £3,730. Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; William Scott, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m. & 5.50 p.m.; dispatches, North, 7.40 a.m. & 5.15 p.m.; South, 6.30 a.m. & 1.45, 4.30 & 7.15 p.m.

LARGO,

INCLUDING LARGO (UPPER & LOWER) & LUNDIN.

LARGO is a parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, at the head of Largo bay, in the small debt court district of Leven, and contains the villages of Upper or Kirkton of Largo, Lundin Mill and Lower Largo, the latter a small seaport with a station on the Thornton, Austruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, and there is another station at Lundin Links, one mile from Largo. The parish is 4 miles in extent from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ceres, east by Kilconquhar and Newburn, and west by Scoonie. A striking feature in the landscape is Largo Law, a conical hill, rising to a height of 350 feet above the level of the sea, and green to the summit, where it is cleft in two. From its top a splendid view of the Firth of Forth, with its islands, and the opposite shore of the Lothians is obtained. The minerals worked are coal and limestone, the latter being most excellent in quality. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch, and a Savings Bank is also established. Largo was the birthplace of Sir Andrew Wood, a celebrated admiral in the reign of James III, who presented the barony of Largo to him in recognition of his services, and the shore for an extent of 5 miles is still claimed by his descendants. Sir John Leslie, the philosopher, was also born here. Within the grounds of Largo House is a conical-topped tower, which formed part of the old castle built by Sir Andrew Wood. This tower, it is said, was built by the prisoners taken by Sir Andrew in his sea fights. Lower Largo was the birthplace, about 1676, of Alexander Selkirk, rendered famous by the pen of De Foe as "Robinson Crusoe." A descendant, named Catherine Selkirk, was resident in this village until her death, in 1862. Mr. David Gillies, of Cardy works, also a descendant of the family, has erected, on the site of his birthplace, a life-size bronze statue to Alexander Selkirk, which was unveiled 11th December, 1885, by the Earl of Aberdeen. The tablet bears the inscription—"In memory of Alexander Selkirk, mariner, the original of Robinson Crusoe, who lived in the island of Juan Fernandez, in complete solitude, for four years and four months. He died 1723, Lieut. of H.M.S. Weymouth, aged 47 years." The Simpson Institute Hall, opened May 8th, 1891, a stone building in the old Scottish style, was erected by means of a legacy of £4,000, bequeathed by Mrs. Galloway in memory of her father, George Simpson, of Upper Largo. It is for educational, recreative and social purposes, and contains public hall, library and billiard table, with grounds, bowling green and tennis court. The institute is controlled by a board of trustees. Wood's Hospital, which stands in the Kirkton of Largo, was erected under an endowment by Mr. John Wood, a native of this place, for "any man or woman of the name of Wood," to whatever part of Scotland he or she may belong. The foundation provides the inmates with two rooms each, beds and bedding, and the produce of the gardens. The parish church is in Upper Largo, and has in the transept a memorial window to Sir Andrew Wood, before named. A Celtic cross of unknown date, found in the parish in the year 1839 by General Dalriach, then proprietor of Largo, now stands in the parish churchyard. Largo House is a spacious mansion built in 1750, situated a little to the west of the village on a slope with southern aspect, amid richly ornamented grounds. The present occupier is Mrs. Fanny Aitken. The soil is partly of a light character, but more commonly of a black loam. The inhabitants are mainly devoted to agricultural pursuits, and the chief crops are wheat, oats, potatoes, rye and flax. Sir John Gilmour bart. of Montrave, Major-General David Briggs and John Baxter esq. of Gilston, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,386 acres; rateable value, £15,880; the population in 1891 was 2,324, and in 1881, 2,234; of these 337 in 1891 and 346 in 1881 were in the Kirkton of Largo, and 590 in 1891 and 562 in 1881 were in Lower Largo, while Lundin Mill contained 492 and 477 in the respective years.

 Lower Largo is a fishing village in this parish, one mile south-west from Upper Largo, 2½ miles north-east from Leven and 3½ south-west from Colinsburgh, on the shore of an indentation of the Firth of Forth, called Largo bay; it stands at the efflux of a rivulet named the Keil, whose estuary forms a harbour to the place.
 Lundin Mill is a village adjoining Lower Largo, with a station called Lundin Links, on the North British railway. A square tower, which formed part of the ancient castle of Lundin, still remains. Here also are the three "Standing Stones of Largo," supposed to have once formed part of a Druidical temple. Letters through Largo.

land; and here is the scene laid of the song of the "Jolly Beggars." The streets are lighted with gas. At the eastern entrance to the town is a public green, which in former times was the scene of various pastimes, and the place of annual meeting for the pedlars or packmen of Scotland. The increase of this town is attributable to the prosperity of its manufactures consisting of flax spinning, and bleaching and paper making; the works standing chiefly on the banks of the Leven. There is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, established here. The places of worship are the parish church, a quoad sacra church at Prinlaws, the west end of the town, a Free and two United Presbyterian churches, and a Baptist chapel. There is a library consisting of about 1,200 volumes, connected with the Young Men's Christian Association, and Reading Room. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of April, and on the first Friday in October. Leslie House, at the east end of the town, is the residence of the Hon. George Waldegrave-Leslie. The Hon. George Waldegrave-Leslie P.R.S.E., F.R.G.S. and George D. Douglas (Lehane esq. of Strathendry, are the principal landowners. LEUCHARS is a parish lying on the sea coast to the north of St. Andrews bay, and a village, which is 5 miles north-west from St. Andrews, having a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and half a mile south is the station of Leuchars junction, on the North British main line. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, is about 5 miles from north to south by the same extent in width, and is bounded on the north by Forgan and Ferry-Port-on-Craig, west by Logie and south by the Eden. The ancient Established church, supposed to have been erected in the 12th century, is one of the most perfect examples of Norman architecture in Scotland. There is also a Free church. The Pitcairn Institute, the gift of Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitcairn, contains a library and reading rooms, and has recreation grounds attached to it. Guard Bridge is in this parish; the Guard Bridge Paper Co. Limited, have extensive works here, and there is a station on the North British railway. Balmullo, a small village, is also in this parish. Near Leuchars there is the old castle of Earlsball, which has been recently restored by its owner, R. W. R. Mackenzie esq. The parish comprises 13,354 acres; rateable value, £24,648; the population in 1891 was 2,370, including 689 in the village of Leuchars and 524 in that of Guard Bridge, and in 1881 the parish had 2,185 inhabitants, the village 588 and Guard Bridge, 320.

LEVEN is a town in the parish of Scoonie, divided by the river Leven into two portions, the larger being the police burgh of Leven, and the smaller one the suburb of Inver Leven. The Leven river, which here runs into the Firth of Forth, and is crossed by a bridge, forms a good harbour, and has a dock, 500 feet long by 250 wide, capable of taking in vessels up to 400 tons burthen, opened in January, 1880, at a cost of £40,000. Inver Leven, connected with Leven by a stone bridge over the Leven, was, in conjunction with Buchhaven and Methil, been made into a police burgh. The town, which is the head of a small debt court district, is 9 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy and 3 south-west from Largo, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The town is irregularly built, and consists of three main streets and a collection of houses bordering the links, where three golf clubs are established. The police burgh is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 9 councillors. The sheriff holds a small debt circuit court here, the day after the second Monday in January, April and July, and Friday after the first Monday in October. The principal imports are flax, tow, barley, linseed, bones and timber. The staple trade of Leven is the preparation and spinning of flax and seed crushing, paper making, engineering, &c. the mills of the first-named trade, especially, employing a considerable number of hands. The Scottish Cyanide Co. also have extensive works at Kirkland, and there is a bone dust mill, salt works and rope walks. In the district are collieries, and the Fife Coal Co. whose offices adjoin the railway station, are large employers of labour. There are branches here of the British Linen Co.'s Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. A fair is held on the Thursday after the third Monday in July. The Greig Institute, erected in 1873, contains a news room, library, billiard room and a class room for technical instruction, its name was adopted in compliment to Mr. Greig, of Gleacorse, who gave the site and £1,000 towards the building fund. There is an Established church, a Free church and churches for the United Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Baptists. A large public school was erected in 1893, at a cost of £10,000, for 1,200 children, the average attendance being about 1,100. A bequest by the late Edward Boase, of Leven, of £500, yields a bursary of £25, tenable for three years, and the late Alexander Balfour, a former resident of Leven, left £12 per annum for three bursaries for boys or girls. The Caledonian hotel is near the bay shore, and has a large posting establishment attached. The "Leven Advertiser" is published every Thursday, price one halfpenny. The rateable value of the town is £27,000; the population in 1831 was 4,577, viz. 3,998 in the police burgh and 579 in the suburb of Inver Leven, and in 1881, 3,568, or 3,067 and 501 respectively.

LIBERTY, see ELIE.

LIMEKILNS, with the creek of Brucehaven, forms a small harbour on the north bank of the Forth of Forth, in the parish of Dunfermline and parliamentary division of West Fife, 4 miles west from North Queensferry and 3 south of Dunfermline town. The adjoining village of Charlestown forms a part of the port, and contains a station on the Dunfermline and Charlestown branch of the North British railway, opened for passenger traffic, 1st September, 1894. There is a shipbuilding yard at Brucehaven, and at Charlestown, which is the property of the Earl of Elgin, and contains a harbour formed by him, but now owned by the North British Railway Co. large quantities of coal and lime are shipped; there are also two salt works and an iron foundry. MARKINCH is a parish extending 5 miles from north to south by 2 to 3 in breadth, in the poor combination of Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and bounded north by Kettle, east by Kenogway, south by Dysart and Wemyss, and west by Kinglassie and Leslie. Its kirktown, which has a station on the main line of the North British railway, lies 10 miles south-west from Cupar, 8 north from Kirkcaldy and 6 west of Leven, and is a police burgh and is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. It occupies an open situation on a piece of irregular rising ground, and on the highest part is seated the church. There are extensive paper mills, bleachfields, a woollen manufactory and corn mills in active operation. The districts round about in coal. In the village there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and of the Royal Bank of Scotland. There is a town hall. The Municipal Buildings, erected in 1899, were the gift of Edward Balfour esq. of Balbirnie. The places of worship include a church of the Establishment and Free and United Presbyterian churches. The parish is traversed by the streams of the Leven and the Ore, and the great road through the country crosses it. The North British railway is carried over the first-named river by means of a viaduct of ten arches, nearly 90 feet in height. Balgonie Castle, the property of Charles Barrington Balfour esq. of Newton Don, but now a ruin, is of great antiquity; it stands on the south bank of the Leven, in the midst of some finely-wooded grounds. About half a mile to the east is Balfour House, the property of Charles Barrington Balfour esq. and now (1899) occupied by George J. Lumsden esq. Balbirnie, an elegant mansion, is the seat of Edward Balfour esq. D.L., J.P. and lies about half a mile north-west of the village. Edward Balfour esq. of Balbirnie, and Charles Barrington Balfour esq. of Balgonie and Newton Don, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,816 acres; the population in 1891 was 6,377, and in 1881, 5,863; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 1,350, and the rateable value of Markinch, with Windygates, landward, £35,873; burghal £5,448.

Windygates, now the head of a post district, in this parish, stands on the high road between Markinch and Leven, about 2 miles west from the latter. Contiguous to the village is the extensive distillery of the Distillers' Company, Limited. Close to Windygates is Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Population in 1891, 453.

Woodside, in the parish of Markinch, is a small village about one mile and a half south-west from Markinch, its post town, and 2 from Thornton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed at the paper mills and bleachfields in the neighbourhood. Population in 1891, 205. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

Miltown, or Milton of Balgonie, is a village about midway between Windygates and Markinch, in the parish of Markinch, and quad sacra parish. The nearest railway station is Markinch, a mile and a half distant. There is an Established church here. Population in 1891, 361.

Coaltown, or Coaltan of Balgonie, lies one mile and a half south from Markinch, its post town and parish. The inhabitants are principally employed at the Balgonie colliery and bleachfields in the immediate neighbourhood. Population in 1891, 568. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

Thornton is a village and quad sacra parish in the civil parish of Markinch, near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, and close to the Thornton junction on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British and the Leven and East of Fife railways, which have a joint station here. The Dysart Combination Poorhouse, erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, is about half a mile from this village, and is capable of receiving 130. There is a chapel of the Established church and a Free Church hall. Population in 1891, 607.

Balcruvie is situated on an eminence about half a mile from Windygates, its post town, in the parish of Markinch, about 3 miles east from the latter place, one mile south from Kennoway, and half a mile from Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Population in 1891, 249.

ISLE OF MAY. This small island, 1 mile by three-quarters in extent, contains a lighthouse, visible at 21 miles; the island, though included in the county of Fife, is annexed to the parish of West Anstruther, and lies at the mouth of the Firth of Forth, 6 miles south-east of Cellardyke and the same distance south-east-by-south from Crail. There are some remains of a monastery. The population in 1891 was 27, and in 1881, 22.

MONIMAIL is a parish, in the northern part of the county, and in the small debt court district of Cupar, its kirktown being 5 miles west of Cupar. It is bounded on the north by Dunbog, Creich, and Moonzie, on the south by Cults and Colleslie, on the east by Cupar, and on the west by Abadie; it is 5 miles from north to south by a breadth of 4. Colleslie, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Ladybank section of the North British railway, is the nearest station.
The northern parts consist of a fine range of hills, the highest of which is called Mount Hill. The monument to the late Earl of Hopetoun, erected on its summit, is a plain Doric column, 92 feet in height, and within is a narrow spiral staircase giving access to the top, whence a fine view of the valley of the Eden and the Firths of Forth and Tay is obtained. The greater portion of the parish is in a high state of cultivation, the remainder being pasture and woodland. The parish church at Monimail is a handsome building, and contains nearly 600 sittings. There is also a Free church at the Bow of Fife. Fernie Castle, a place of great antiquity, and once of considerable strength, is now the residence of Major Francis W. Balfour J.P.
Melville House is the residence of Miss Leslie-Melville, Miss Leslie-Melville, of Melville, the Earl of Leven and Melville, Major F. W. Balfour, of Fernie, R. W.
Rankine esq. of Cunnouquhie, and Henry W. Hope esq. of Rankellour Hope, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,534 acres; rateable value, £7,085; the population in 1891 was 769, and in 1881, 834.

Bow of Fife is a hamlet in the parish, 1½ miles south-east from the kirktown. Springfield is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

Easter Fernie is a hamlet in the parish.
Cmar is the nearest railway station, 3½ miles distant.

Letham is a village in the parish. The nearest railway station is at Colleslie, 1½ miles distant.

NEWBURGH is a royal burgh and a parish on the south shore of the Firth of Tay, 33 miles north from Edinburgh, 11 south-east from Perth, 10 north-west from Cupar, and a station on the Ladybank, Newburgh and Perth section of the North British railway. The town consists of one long street in the direction of east and west, parallel with the course of the river, and a lane or two leading towards the shore, where there are quays for shipping, and a spacious harbour. The Tay up to this point is navigable for vessels of about 400 tons, and from here to Perth during spring tides for vessels of 300 tons. According to some authorities the town owes its origin to the patronage of the adjacent abbey of Lindores, founded in 1178 by David, Earl of Huntingdon, on his return from the Holy Land. In the year 1286 the town was erected into a burgh of regality, and in 1631 Charles I. granted to the place a charter, forming the community into a royal burgh. There is, however, no evidence of it ever having sent a member to the Scottish parliament. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and fourteen councillors, with a treasurer and a town clerk; it is the head of a small debt court district and a police burgh. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south, by 1 to 2 broad, is bounded east by Abdie, south by Collesie, and west by Abernethy in Perthshire and Auchtermuchty. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and also a Savings Bank. The manufacture of linen goods may be considered the staple trade of the place, exclusive of which the business in corn and timber is considerable; and there is a large floor cloth factory; the salmon fishery and the sale of fruit also add considerably to the trade. The name of Newburgh is supposed to be conferred upon it in contradistinction to the ancient decayed burgh of Abernethy, which lies about three miles to the west. Formerly the greater proportion of the habitations were low-built and roofed with thatch, but of late years a better style of architecture has prevailed. The Town Hall stands near the centre of the town. The Laing Institute, erected in 1835, and incorporating the Free Library, owes its origin to a bequest of Alexander Laing LL.D. of this town, who left £1,000 for the building, and £400 as an endowment fund, together with his own valuable library. There are now (1899) about 4,200 volumes in the lending department and 3,700 in the reference department. In the High street is a fountain, erected as a memorial to John Livingstone esq. of Edinburgh, who was the donor of the Livingstone Hall, a building in the Cupar road. The places of worship include the Established Church of St. Catherine, erected in 1833, United Presbyterian and Evangelical Union churches, a Baptist chapel, and an Episcopal Mission Hall. A fair is held on the third Friday in June. There are two ancient crosses within the parish, one at Mugdrum, about thirteen feet high, and the Macduff cross, now only fragmentary, but of great interest, from its having been granted to Macduff as a sanctuary, for his successful aid against Macbeth. About a mile to the east are the remains of the abbey of Lindores. The unfortunate David Stewart, Duke of Rothsay, eldest son and heir of Robert III. who died at Falkland Palace, 26th March, 1402, was buried here. Several stone coffins have at different times been discovered, and are still to be seen. Edmund de la Paterson Balfour-Hay esq. and Robert Cathcart esq. of Pitcairnie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,365 acres; rateable value landward, £2,198; burghal, £7,159. The population in 1891 was 1,812, including 1,506 in the royal burgh, and in 1881, 2,191, including 1,852 in the burgh.

Part of the parish of Abdie has been added to the burgh.

NEWBURN is a parish, on the north-east coast of Largo Bay, its kirktown being two miles north-east from Largo, 5 from Leven, and 10 south-by-west from St. Andrews.
 The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south by 1 1/2 breadth, is in the small debt court district of Leven, and is bounded north and west by Largo, east by Elie and Killoquhar, and south by the Bay of Largo.
 The nearest railway station is at Largo on the Thornton, Anstruther and St.
 Andrews section of the North British railway. Three-fourths of the land is under cultivation, and the inhabitants are dependant on agriculture for employment. J. Anstruther-Thomson esq. V.D. of Charleton, Colinsburgh, and W. Baird esq. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,040 acres; rateable value, £4,209. The population in 1891 was 322,
 and in 1881, 341.

NEWPORT AND WORMIT.

NEWPORT, a handsome village and a police burgh, in the parish of Fergan, stretching along the Firth of Tay, is picturesquely situated, directly opposite to Dundee, and about 2 miles south therefrom, and 3 south-west from Tayport, the ground sloping upwards to a considerable height from the river Tay. Many villas have been erected here; and as there is constant communication with Dundee by railway since the opening of the Tay Bridge, and also by the steamers which ply hourly, and the climate being salubrious and comparatively mild, it has now become a popular suburb of Dundee. The south end of the Tay Bridge is at Wormit, about a mile to the west of Newport. There is a station on the North British railway at East Newport for goods and passengers, and one at West Newport for passengers only. Newport was made a burgh in November, 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. It possesses five churches, and a public hall, erected at a cost of £4,000. Population of Newport in 1891, 2,700; rateable value of the burgh, £22,150.

Wormit is pleasantly and conveniently situated for Dundee business men; there is a station here on the North British line, and many villas overlooking the river have been erected since the opening of the Tay

Ridge. There is a Mission church here attached to Fergan Established Church, and one attached to the Newport Free Church.

OAKFIELD, see BEATH.

PATHHEAD, see KIRKCALDY.

PITLESIE, see CULTS.

PITTENWEEM is a seaport, a royal parliamentary and police burgh, and a small parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending from east to west; it has a small harbour for vessels drawing under 12 feet, and a station on the Thornton Junction, Leven and East of Fife section of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Crail, 10 south-east from St. Andrews, 20 north-east from Kirkcaldy and 14 south-east from Cupar; together with the two Anstruthers, Crail, Cupar, Kilrenny and St. Andrews it forms the St. Andrew's parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. It is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 8 councillors, who are also the police commissioners. The parish, which is in the small debt court of Anstruther, is bounded north by Carnbee and Anstruther Wester, east by the Anstruthers, south by the Firth and west by St. Monace. The burgh, was originally attached to a priory, some remains of which stand on a hill above the harbour; it was created a royal burgh in 1537 by James V. whose charter was confirmed by Charles I. The town consists of three good streets, with a few bye thoroughfares, the houses generally bearing an ancient aspect. From the time of its being erected into a royal burgh until 1639, it appears that Pittenweem was a place of considerable note and trade; but from that period to the year 1645 it suffered severely, no fewer than thirteen sail of large vessels belonging to this port having been either taken by the enemy or wrecked. It was here that the robbery was committed upon the collector of the excise by Wilson and Robertson, which led to the outrages of the Porteous mob and the consequent catastrophe; the house in which this transaction took place is still standing on the north side of the street, north of the church. It is now a fishing station of some importance and fish curing is carried on rather extensively, in addition to which the trade in grain and potatoes is of some consequence; there are also two large cooperages, with sail making. Adjacent to the Monastic ruins stands the parish church, an ancient edifice with a turreted spire. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited (branch), High street, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in James street. Walter Douglas Irvine esq. J.P., D.L. of Grangemuir, Sir Ralph William Anstruther bart. J.P., D.L. of Balcaskie, and William Baird esq. J.P. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 663 acres; rateable value, landward, £780; burghal, £5,815; the population in 1891 was 1,991, and in 1881, 2,119; these figures also represent the population of the royal burgh, it being conforminous with the parish, though the parliamentary and police burghs are a little smaller, and contained in 1891, 1,962 persons.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 346.

ST. ANDREWS,

WITI ST. LEONARDS.

ST. ANDREWS is a seaport, royal burgh and parish, extending 9 miles along the shore of its bay, and is from 1 to 3 miles in depth, bounded south by the parishes of Dunino, Camron, Ceres, and Kenbuck, east by Kingsbarns and west by Leuchars. This ancient city, seaport, royal burgh and university town lies on the shore of the bay, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, which here forms a junction with the section running via Leuchars to the Tay bridge and the north, 39 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 10 east by north from Cupar and 10 north-west from Crail. St. Andrews was created a free (royal) burgh, by virtue of a charter conferred by David I., which was confirmed by Malcolm IV.; this latter charter, together with the silver keys of the city, and the axe which was used for the decapitation of Sir Robert Spotswood and some other royalists, are still to be seen in the Town Hall. The city is governed by a provost, a dean of guild and four bailies, twenty-two councillors and a treasurer, and is the head of a small debt court district. The burgh unites with Cupar, the Anstruthers, Kilmenny, Pittenweem and Crail in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. There are three principal streets; North street, which contains some fine buildings, including those of the United College; Market street, which runs through the middle of the town; and South street, a spacious thoroughfare lined with trees, extending from the old west port to the ruins of the ancient cathedral. From the tower of the church of St. Regulus, a structure of the early 12th century, 109 feet in height, there is a beautiful view of the Bell rock, the bay, the city and the surrounding country. The ruins of the once formidable castle, the scene of Cardinal Beaton's cruelty to others, and of his own assassination, lie towards the north-east and jut out into the sea. On the shore to the westward is a small eminence called the Witch Hill, the place where those convicted of witchcraft suffered. Near this spot is a monument raised in 1842 to the memory of the martyrs, Wishart, Mill and others. It is in the form of an obelisk, and is 30 feet in height. The ruins of the Blackfriars Convent stand by the Madras college. St. Andrews at one time had an extensive foreign trade. The harbour is not large, and is very difficult of access, but safe anchorage; its most dangerous wind is from the north-east. The export traffic is chiefly in potatoes and grain, and the import in coals, pavement, timber &c. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, The Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the Cheque Bank Limited. Golf, one of the national games of Scotland, has its stronghold in St. Andrews, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club having been established in 1754; the Queen is patroness, and it numbers upwards of 950 members; two great meetings are held annually. The principal hotels are the Royal, in South street; the Star and the Cross Keys, in Market street; the Golf and Ruseck's Marine hotel, both on the Links facing the sea; the Imperial, in North street and Murray park; the Alexandra, in Alexandra place and the Grand. The Memorial Cottage Hospital for medical and surgical cases, in Abbotsford place, is supported by voluntary contributions; hon. sec. and treasurer, Andrew Syme esq.; medical officers, R. and J. W. Moir M.D.s. The hospital in Argyle street, the gift of the late William Gibson, for aged, infirm and sick persons, was erected at a cost of £4,000, and opened in January, 1884. There are four public halls, viz., the Town Hall, in South street; the City Hall, in Church square; the Good Templar Hall, North street and the Rifle Volunteers' Hall, in Alfred place, the last-named and the Town Hall being large structures, suitable for entertainments and public meetings.

The legendary history of this see ascribes its foundation to the translation hither of the relics of St. Andrew, by the hands of Regulus, a monk of Achaia, who, about A.D. 370, is said to have been miraculously guided to this spot, but its actual establishment is with much greater probability attributed to Aeca, bishop of Hexham, A.D. 709-39, who, settled here as a refugee from his own diocese, then ravaged by the Danes. The cathedral of St. Andrew, now a complete ruin, was connected with the ancient Culdean monastery once existing here, and with the later Augustinian priory, founded in the 12th century. It was begun in 1160, and consisted of a nave of twelve bays, transepts with eastern aisles, choir of six bays with aisles, eastern lady chapel and a central tower, 108 feet high; the total length of the church being 377 feet; the monastic building adjoined on the south side. Of the original Norman work there remains the east end of the lady chapel with its flanking turrets, the bases of some of the piers in the choir, the west and south walls of the south transept, and part of the south wall of the nave, the rest of which and what remains of the west front date from the period 1271-9; beyond these portions scarcely anything now exists. Of the priory, nothing is left save the south wall of the chapter house, its vestibule, and some walling adjacent; the cloister garth was 132 feet square, with an alley on each side; the precincts were enclosed by the existing wall, built 1522-35, and continued along the south-east side of the town; this fine work, reared by Prior Hepburn, includes 14 round or square towers, each with an external niche, and once had a corbelled battlemented parapet. The destruction of the cathedral and the priory has been attributed to the fanatic violence of Knox and his adherents, but recent examinations of the site have suggested that its collapse was really due to the inherent weakness of its construction; in or about 1887 the plan of the cathedral was discovered by excavation, and is now marked out on the turf. The see of St. Andrews was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric in 1466, Patrick Graham, then bishop of Brechin, being appointed the first archbishop. After the Revolution of 1688 the see was abolished, but was revived in 1844, in place of the intermediate see of Fife, which existed from 1726 to 1844, and it now includes also Dunkeld and Dunblane.

The Established church of the Holy Trinity, in South street, was originally built by Bishop Turgot, in 1112, the present structure, erected in 1800 upon the foundations of the old church, is about 150 feet long by 60 wide, and contains a superb monument to Archbishop Sharp, erected by his son in 1679; it is of white marble, and includes a kneeling figure of the prelate, and below, in relief, is a carved representation of his assassination by the Covenanting faction, 3 May, 1697. The church was thoroughly repaired in 1850 at an expense of about £100. Besides the two parish churches there is a chapel of ease to Holy Trinity, Free, Episcopal and United Presbyterian churches, and Baptist, Independent and Roman Catholic chapels, and at the end of South street are the ruins of the ancient cathedral and the priory.

The market is held on Monday, and the fairs (for cattle and hiring) on the second Tuesday in August and the first Monday after the 10th of November. The area of the parish comprises 11,482 acres; rateable value of landward £22,363; of St. Andrews burgh, including St. Leonards, £50,683; the population of the parish of St. Andrews in 1891 was 7,987, and of St. Leonards 763, and out of these the royal burgh contained 6,853; in 1881 the figures were St. Andrews, 7,833; St. Leonards, 763 and the burgh, 6,406; the area of St. Leonards is computed at 1,008 acres.

St. Leonards is a small parish so intersected by that of St. Andrews, that it is identical in all its interests. It consists of detached portions in and around the city, and is connected both historically and politically with the city and parish of St. Andrews.

Denhead, a small village, is partly in this parish and that of Cameron; for names, see Cameron. Boarhills and Guard-bridge are also small villages, distant about 4 miles from, and partly in the parish of, St. Andrews.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

The University, which is the oldest in Scotland, was first founded in 1410 by Bishop Wardlaw, and in 1411 obtained a charter and endowments, soon after which, Benedict XIII. issued a papal bull in its favour.

The original colleges were St. Salvador, founded 1450; St. Leonards, founded 1512, and St. Mary's in 1537; of these, St. Salvador and St. Leonards were united into one college in 1747, by Act of Parliament, and in 1890, Dundee college was affiliated to the University.

The United college occupies comparatively new buildings, and has a principal, with professors of Greek, logic, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, humanity, mathematics, natural history, anatomy, English literature, and education. The college of St. Mary consists of a principal and professors of divinity, biblical criticism, church history and Oriental languages.

The University Library, which contains 115,000 volumes, was founded in 1610, and occupies a building which has occasionally been used for sittings of the Scotch Parliament; of the old buildings of St. Salvador only the chapel and steeple remain, and of St. Leonards only the ruins of the chapel.

The site of the Madras college is on the south side of South street, immediately behind and comprehending within it part of that fine old ruin of the Black Friars' College, endowed by the late Dr. Bell, the distinguished founder of several similar establishments, both in this and in other towns in Scotland, cannot fail to secure to his memory, for ages to come, that veneration and esteem to which, as a benefactor of his race, he is so well entitled. The foundation stone was laid on the 9th April, 1832. Under the plan formulated by the Endowed Schools Commissioners for Scotland, this institution is now converted into a school for secondary education.

The St. Andrews School for Girls' Co. Limited, has two important schools here for senior and junior pupils respectively. St. Leonard's School is intended to provide for girls an education equal to that given to boys at great public schools, and has seven houses for boarders, each holding from 26 to 28 girls, and an auxiliary house for 12 girls, and there are also from 20 to 30 day scholars. Attached are grounds of 16 acres, including a cricket field, golf course, and tennis, hockey, and fives courts; instruction is also given, by arrangement, in riding and driving. There is a hospice for non-infectious, and a sanatorium for infectious illnesses. The council give seven scholarships, each of the value of £25 per annum, to girls who have obtained one of the higher certificates of the Oxford and Cambridge Board, and have been not less than two years in the school, and these are tenable as long as the holders remain at the school.

Annually, in October, the Council give a scholarship of £35 a year, tenable for three years at any college selected by the scholar. Triennially, in October, Miss Dove's Classical Scholarship of £20 a year, with £15 added by the council, and tenable for three years at Girton College, Cambridge, is awarded. Head mistress, Miss Grant Boarding houses, St. Leonard's, Miss Grant; Bishopshall east, Miss Storey; Bishopshall west, Miss de Natrop; St. Rule east, Miss Sandys; St. Rule west, Miss Lewis; Abbey park north, Miss Sanders; Abbey park south, Miss Wilson; 5 South street, Miss Worsfold. Head of sanatorium and hospice for both schools, Miss Young, The Hospice.

St. Katharine's School is a preparatory school for St. Leonard's, and is intended for girls under 14 years of age. The buildings are situated between North street and the Scores, and include a large workshop, used by all the children, and in which carpentry, book-binding and basket-making are taught. Attached is a playground and a garden, together about two acres. Head mistress, Miss Gray, Classical Tripos, Newnham College, Cambridge. House mistresses, Miss Gray, St. Katharine's lodge, Miss F. Warrack, Chattan house and Miss Hoyle, The School house.

There are now over 300 girls, received from every quarter of the globe, in the two schools, which are managed by a mixed council, of which the president is the Dowager Countess of Airlie. Treasurer and secretary, T. T. Oliphant esq. St. Leonard's lodge; medical officer, J. W. Moir M.D. 15 Howard place; legal adviser, J. Gordon Stuart W.S. 56 Frederick street, Edinburgh.

ST. LEONARDS, see ST. ANDREWS.

ST. MONANCE (or St. Monans) is a parish and a municipal burgh. 2 miles west of Pittenweem, 10 south of St. Andrews and 14 south-east from Cupar, having a small harbour on the Firth of Forth and a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section, of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 1½ in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and is bounded north and north-east by Carnbee, east by Pittenweem and west by Kiloconquhar. The burgh is governed by three bailies, a treasurer and twelve councillors. The principal employment of the inhabitants is fishing. The parish church stands on a hill above the village, and dates back to the 13th century. Newark Castle, the ruins of which stand on an eminence near the church, was at one time the seat of David Leslie, 5th son of the Hon. Sir Patrick Leslie, kt. of Pitcairle, and commendator of Lindores: having served under Gustavus Adolphus, he was appointed a major-general in the Scottish forces, under the Earl of Leven, sent in 1644 to help the English Parliamentarians during the Civil war; in 1650, on the invasion of Scotland by Cromwell, Leslie hemmed him in at Dnnbar, and, but for the interference of the clerical party, would have been the victor; he subsequently fought at Worcester, and at the Restoration was created Baron Newark, a title which became extinct on the death of the 2nd baron, 15 May, 1694. Up to 1646 this parish was known as Abercrombie or Invery, but has since been called by the name of its kirk. Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. of Balcaiskie and William Baird esq. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,203 acres; rateable value, £5,214; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,998, and of the burgh 1,864, and in 1881, 2,054 and 1,918 respectively.

STRATHMIGLO is a burgh of barony and a parish in the north-western portion of the county, 2 miles south-west of Auchtermuchty, 3 north-west from Falkland and 8 north-west from Kinross, with a station on the Mawearse and Ladybank section of the North British railway. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4 in breadth, and is bounded north by parts of Abernethy and Arngask, west and south-west by Kinross-shire, south-east by Falkland and north-east by Auchtermuchty; it is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty. The burgh consists of two portions, Cashfeus and Strathmiglo, and has two principal streets, with several diverging lanes. The Town house stands near the centre of the principal street; it has a square tower, with a balustraded parapet, the whole being surmounted by a spire nearly 80 feet high. On the front of the tower is a stone sundial, now much defaced; and above this are the arms of the house of Burleigh. By a charter granted in 1600 the detached portions of Feus were erected into a burgh of barony, and this grant was confirmed by James VI. in 1605, but the nomination of bailies and admittance of burgesses was vested in the person of the superior. On the opposite side of the Miglo is the village of the Feus of Cash, and between the old town and this village is a level meadow called Town green, intersected by the Miglo and belonging to the burgh. The principal trade is the manufacture of linen, and there is also a large bleach works. A fair is held at Strathmiglo on the last Friday in June. The Marquess of Bute K.T. George Johnstone esq. and Wm. B. Skene esq. D.L., J.P. and Lieut.-Col. George C. Cheape D.L., J.P. of Wellfield, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,024 acres; rateable value, £11,537; the population in 1891 was 1,753, including 1,099 in the burgh, and in 1881, 2061, including 1,283 in the burgh.

Gateside is a village in the parish of Strathmiglo, distant 2 miles west from the village, with a station on the Mawearse and Ladybank section of the North British railway, and contains a United Presbyterian church and a board school.

TAYPORT,

WITH THE PARISH OF FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG.

TAYPORT, known originally as South Ferry, then successively Ferry of Scots-craig and Ferry-port-on-Craig (a name now confined to the parish in which the town is situated), is a seaport town and police burgh and was made such in the year 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. Many houses and villas have been erected on the slopes of the Tay, commanding a fine prospect of the opposite shore, Broughty Ferry and Dundee, and it has become to some extent a residential suburb of Dundee, on the Firth of Tay, opposite to Broughty Ferry, at about a mile distance by water, 11 miles north-by-east from Cupar, and 5 south-east from Dundee; it has a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and is connected by a branch with the Tay bridge.
For facilitating the shipping of goods, the railway company have constructed a dock and a pier, which can be approached by steamers at certain times of the tide.
There are two factories here for the spinning of yarns and the manufacture of linen and jute goods, also a foundry, engine works, and an extensive timber yard and works, which provide employment for many of the inhabitants. The North of Scotland Bank Limited has a branch here. The salmon fishery, which is co-extensive with the coast line of the parish, is actively pursued during the season, the fish being mostly sent to the London markets; mussel dredging is also carried on extensively in the season. Tayport, with the parish, was originally an estate of the bishops of St. Andrews, and having in the reign of Alexander III. been feued to Sir Michael Scott, better known as "the Wizard," who is believed to have given it the name of Scotsraig.
The parish church was built in 1794 and rebuilt in 1825, there are also a Free church and United Presbyterian churches, and a Baptist chapel.

Ferry-port-on-Craig is a parish in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, 5 miles in length and from half a mile to a mile in breadth, stretching along the south margin of the Tay to its mouth, where it empties itself into the North Sea. It was erected into a separate parish in 1808, having up to that time formed part of Leuchars; part of Tents Muir forms the eastern portion of it; but this district, at one time the residence of a wild tribe, is now a desolate sand waste. The land rises to a hilly range extending westwards, and is bounded on the south by the parishes of Forgar and Leuchars, and on the north by the river Tay. The estate of Scots-craig, which comprises the whole parish, was formerly the property of Archbishop Sharp, of St. Andrews, of whose house some remains can still be traced. The present mansion house, built in 1807, stands amidst fine plantations and well laid-out grounds, and is the property and residence of Mrs. Maitland Dougall. The area of the parish comprises 2,758 acres; rateable value landward, £2,287; burghal, £11,592. The population of the parish in 1891 was 3,008, including 2,871 in the town, or 2,829 in the burgh, and in 1881, 2,818, including 2,630 in the town, or 2,605 in the burgh.

THORNTON, see MARKINCH.

TORRYBURN is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles south-west of Dunfermline, and 17 south-west from Kirkcaldy. The parish, formed by the union of the baronies of Torry and Crombie, extends for 5 miles along the Firth of Forth, and is about 1½ broad; it lies within the parliamentary division of West Fife, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and is bounded north by Saline parish, west by Perthshire, and east by Inverkeithing and Dunfermline. The nearest railway stations are at Oakley and East Grange, on the Dunfermline, Alloa and Stirling section of the North British railway. The inhabitants at one time were chiefly employed in weaving, but this branch of industry has become extinct. From the rocky state of the shore it has been found impossible to form a harbour here; but a pier is situated at Crombie point, where steamers can land goods and passengers. The collieries of the Coltness Iron Co. Lim. situated at East Grange in this parish, find employment for most of the inhabitants. A fair is held at Torryburn on the second Wednesday in July. Within the boundary of the parish and adjacent to Torryburn village, is that of Low Torry. It is a very pretty village, having Torry Bay in front, with comparatively high back grounds protecting it from the north wind. Comrie Castle, in this parish, is at present unoccupied. Raddolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. Archibald Dominic Smith-Sigo esq. of Inzievar, Oakley, Major Marioddo, R. W. P. Campbell-Preston esq. and John Allan Macnochie-Wellwood esq. J.P. of Pitliver House, Dunfermline, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 3,994 acres; rateable value, £7,337. The population in 1891 was 913, including 607 in the village, and in 1881, 737, including 427 in the village.

TULLIALLAN is a parish, formerly included as part of Parthshire, though locally situated in Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 13 December, 1890, and confirmed 23rd February, 1891; it is in the poor combination of Stirling and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and contains the town of Kincardine (or Kincardine-on-Forth), and extends about 5 miles from north to south by 2 in breadth. It is bounded on the north and east by the parishes of Saline and Torryburn, and south and west by the river Forth and part of Clackmannanshire. The old church, which remains standing in the burial ground, is a ruin, the steeple, however, being perfect. Tulliallan Castle, a seat of the Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., G.C.S.I., P.C. who is lord of the manor, is a modern mansion close to the ruins of the ancient castle. The Marquess of Lansdowne, Lord Balfour of Burleigh P.C. and Laurence Johnston esq. of Sands, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,586 acres; rateable value, £8,632; the population in 1891 was 2,177, of whom 2,007 were in the town of Kincardine, and in 1881, 2,207, of whom 1,985 were in the town.

WEMYSS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF EAST AND WEST WEMYSS.

WEMYSS is a parish in the poor combination of Dysart, and (except West Wemyss, which is in the Kirkcaldy district) in the small debt court district of Leven; it contains the town of Buchhaven (which see), and the villages of Methil and East and West Wemyss; it derives its name from the Celtic word "wamh," signifying a cave. The parish is bounded on the north by Kennoway and Markinch, on the south by the Firth of Forth, on the east by Scoonie, and on the west by Dysart; its length is 6 miles east to west, and a mile and a half in breadth. There are four stations in this parish on the branch of the North British railway, which runs from Thornton Junction to Methil, and the Anstruther and St. Andrews line skirts the northern border of the parish. The minerals are ochre, ironstone and coal, the latter being very considerable and extensively wrought. A large portion of the Wemyss estate consists of coal seams of various depths, which have been increasingly wrought of late years, and a very large quantity of coal is yet unexcavated. In West Wemyss the coal trade has considerably increased, and several pits have been opened at Muiredge, beside a new pit sunk between the Castle and East Wemyss. Within the parish is the ancient castle of Macduff, now a ruin. This massive structure crowns a height above the shore, to the east of East Wemyss, commanding a most extensive view seaward. Near Macduff's Castle are several extensive excavations at the base of the bank, which have evidently been formed by the action of the sea at a very remote period; one of these caves is called the "King's Cave," from the tradition that James V. in one of his frolics, joined an encampment of gipsies here. The formation of the caves themselves is a result of the extraordinary force of the sea rolling in upon the new red sandstone rocks forming this part of the Fife coast from the German Ocean. One of them, immediately under Macduff's Castle, is so narrow at the mouth that it is difficult to enter, but it expands so as easily to contain 100 persons. Another near is about fifty feet in height, and formed like a fine cupola. A third, still larger, between East and West Wemyss and termed the "Glass Cave," was used at the end of the 18th century for the manufacture of glass from kelp formed from the seaweed. The land generally is in an excellent state of cultivation. A fair is held at Wemyss on the second Wednesday in September. This place gives the title of Earl to the Wemyss-Charteris-Douglas family, also Earls of March (1697), Barons Elcho, and Wemyss, of Elcho, 1628, in the peerage of Scotland, and Baro Wemyss, of the United Kingdom, 1821. There are Pree and Established churches in the village. Randolph Gordon Erskine-Wemyss esq. D.L., J.P. of Wemyss Castle, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 4,732 acres; rateable value, landward, £54,651, burghal (Buchhaven and Methil), £17,310. The population in 1891 was 9,955, including 4,006 in Buchhaven, and in 1881, 7,307, including 2,952 in the town.

East Wemyss is a village in the parish of Wemyss, one mile north-east from West Wemyss, 5 north-east from Kirkcaldy, and 3 north-east from Dysart, situated on the Firth of Forth. In this village the manufacture of linen fabrics is carried on extensively, the factory of Messrs. G. & J. Johnston containing between two and three hundred power looms; there is also a brewery and malting house. Population in 1891, 1,010, and in 1881, 846.

West Wemyss is a village, a mile west from East Wemyss, 4 north-east from Kirkcaldy, 5 south-west from Leven, and 2 north-east from Dysart; it is in the parish of Wemyss, and is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies, twelve councillors and a treasurer. The harbour is situated at its western extremity, and has several vessels belonging to it employed in the exportation of coal, which is wrought close to the harbour. A short distance east of the village, on the brink or face of an eminence, and surrounded on the land side by beautiful plantations and pleasure grounds, is Wemyss Castle, the seat of Randolph Gordon Erskine-Wemyss esq. D.L., J.P. who is the sole proprietor of the parish, and the representative of the oldest family in the county. The Established church is the only place of worship. There is also a school here. Population in 1891, 1,300, and in 1881, 1,206.

FORFARSHIRE, OR ANGUS,

A maritime county on the east coast, is bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the west and south-west by Perthshire, on the south, south-east and east by the Firth of Tay and North Sea, and on the north-east by Kincardineshire; its extent from north to south is about 38 miles, and from east to west 36, with 45 miles of coast line. The figure of this county is, perhaps, the most uniform of any in Scotland. The area is 562,162 acres; of these there are about 300,000 cultivated and 260,000 uncultivated; the portion occupied by the lakes is inconsiderable. In size Forfarshire is classed as the twelfth, and in population as the fifth of the Scottish counties. The population in 1891 being 125,412 males and 152,376 females; total 277,788, against 266,321 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 59,682 in 1891, and 52,681 in 1881.

Early History.—The district of Angus (now Forfarshire), with the contiguous county of Kincardine on the north, anciently formed the country of the "Horesti" and a portion of the Pictish kingdom. On the dissolution of that government by Kenneth II., about the end of the 9th century, he is said to have divided it between his two brothers, Angus and Mearns, from whom the two counties derived their appellation. The district gave the title of Earl to two different families; on the extinction of the first, the earldom was conferred on a relation of King David Bruce, and in 1477 it merged in the family of the Douglasses; it has since devolved on the Duke of Hamilton. There are a number of old ruinous castles in this county, most of which have fallen to decay, in consequence of the baronies on which they stand having passed into the hands of the proprietors of other estates. There are also remains of forts, the principal ones being at Castle-Finhaven, Dundee, Law, Monifieth, Dumbarrow and Caerbuddo.

Soil, Surface and Produce.—The great level valley of Strathmore runs through the centre of the county from east to west, and the lines of hills which flank this extensive and fine tract of country, with the Grampians on the north and some minor ranges on the south, may be said to form this district into a series of continuous ridges, generally pursuing a direction from west to east, interrupted occasionally by the different rivers and streams coursing to the sea. The eminences of greatest altitude in the shire are—Hill of Dundee, 525 feet; Dunnichen Hill, 720; Belmont, 759; Sidlaw, 1,406; Craigowl, 1,609; Oathlaw, one of the Grampians, 2,264; and Mount-Battock, 2,465 feet above the level of the sea. The portion of the Grampian mountains in this shire is diversified by many beautiful valleys, and from the summit of these elevations to the ocean on the east, and the Tay on the south, the surface of the land may be considered an inclined plane. From the aerial region of the highest Grampian an extensive and well varied prospect is presented, not only of almost the whole country adjoining the Tay and of the ocean, but of the eastern part of the peninsula of Fife, the coast of East Lothian, and the heights of Lammermoor. From the mouth of the Tay to near the Westhaven, the coast is sandy, having, from thence eastward, many sunken rocks. Within a mile to the east of Arbroath the shore becomes bold and rocky, presenting precipices to the sea, perforated with caverns by the incessant and insidious workings of the waves; the "Redhead," a promontory upwards of 200 feet in perpendicular height, is the most striking feature of this rocky front; it forms the southern point of Lunan Bay, and exposes a beautiful beach to the ocean for nearly three miles. The capabilities of Forfarshire for agriculture continued for centuries in a dormant state, but it has now a practically enlightened system of farming. The farmers of this county have kept at least equal pace in the improvements adopted with those of similarly situated divisions of the country. The general drainage of the land has been proceeded with to a great and beneficial extent; and several lochs, particularly that of Rescobie, have been drawn off for the purpose of obtaining shell-marl, which has long been in high repute with the agriculturists, and the introduction of bone manure has been followed by the most gratifying results. The sowing of permanent pasture grasses and turnips is persevered in, and the quantity of ground appropriated to tillage is annually increasing. Wheat and beans are also grown, but only in the more favoured localities. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1888," are oats, 47,836 acres; barley, 29,549; wheat, 8,439; rye, 919; beans, 704; turnips and swedes, 33,970; potatoes, 11,965; vetches, 536; small fruit, 210; hay (all kinds), 21,630 acres; total corn crop, 87,536; green crops, 46,902; land under grass, 116,801 acres. In traversing the lower parts of the shire, beautiful enclosures and plantations meet the eye, and excellent roads have been formed. The planting of waste lands seems to have made very little progress till about the middle of the last century, Scotch firs were the only sort of trees planted in such situations, but more recent planters introduced the larch as a valuable specie of timber, and adapted, as they thought, to every variety of soil and situation; but experience has proved that by the operation of draining the moors and waste lands produce excellent oak and beech, of which a number of proprietors have planted extensively. The polled black Angus cattle, now less common than at one time, have given place to other breeds, and many young and lean cattle are imported from Ireland. Numbers of black-faced sheep are reared on the hills. The live stock comprised in 1898, 8,438 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,677; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 12,624; other cattle, 43,520; ewes kept for breeding, 57,919; other sheep, 107,101; sows kept for breeding, 1,019; other pigs, 5,227. The fisheries of Forfarshire are of great importance, those of the North and South Esk, and the coast of the county, are at the present time very valuable; and the mode of packing salmon in ice, for the London market, is a practice which has proved of peculiar advantage to those connected with that branch of the fishery. Haddock, cod, ling, soles, halibut, turbot &c. are also caught, and during July and August the fishermen are engaged in fishing for herring, of which large numbers are taken off the north-east coast. The fishing boats registered in the county, under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, at Arbroath are, 154 boats, 1,369 tons, 637 hands; Dundee, 170 boats, 1,683 tons, 502 hands; Montrose, 314 boats, 4,534 tons, 808 hands.

Manufactures and Minerals.—The manufactures of Forfar are of very high consequence; and as Fifeshire is celebrated for the production of the finer linen fabric, so is this county noted for the manufacture of the coarse hempen goods, wrought up from foreign materials; the spinning of yarn in large mills is carried on very extensively. Dundee, Arbroath and Montrose are its principal trading ports; the two first-named enjoy pre-eminence in the making of sailcloths, Osaburgs, sacking, dowlases, and other linen textures; Brechin participates largely with other places in the preparation of flax; and the towns of Forfar, Montrose and Kirriemuir are seats of material manufacturing importance. Exclusive of these particular stations, the inhabitants of all the little towns and villages are industriously employed in weaving the already prepared materials into cloth, and in the process of bleaching. Besides the branches above mentioned, there are also many engineering works, breweries, tanneries, paper works, distilleries, and starch and tobacco manufactories. This county is not distinguished for its mineral treasures. The output from quarries worked under the "Quarries Act," during the year 1897 was, basalt, 41,336 tons; fireclay, 4,230 tons; and sandstone, 192,305 tons.

Rivers, Lochs and Railways.—The principal rivers are the North and South Esk, which rise near each other on the northern confines of the county, in the Braes of Angus; the first-named being formed by the Mark and the Lee (which latter river runs through Loch Lee), receiving the Tarf, Westwater, Cruick and Luther, and debouching into the North Sea 3 miles north of Montrose. The South Esk rises on the north-west border, and, passing south-east nearly through the centre of the county, is fed by the Norb, Lemno, Carity and Prosen, and reaches the sea at Montrose; there is a third river of some size, the Isla, which rises near the west border and flowing south-east receives the Dean, Carlect and Glamis, and turning west near Alyth, joins the Tay at Kinclaven. There are also two lesser rivers, the Dighty and the Lunan. The former proceeds from some small lakes in the parish of Lundie, and falls into the mouth of the Tay, east from Broughty Ferry; the latter conveys the waters of the lakes of Rescobie and Belgavies to the sea at Lunan Bay. The Lunan is famous for its eels, and the other rivers abound with different varieties of the trout and salmon. The Tay skirts the southern portion, and is the great cause of the commercial prosperity of Dundee; it rises in the western part of Perthshire, a little east of Perth city it becomes an estuary or firth, and about 8 miles below Dundee it expands into the bay of St. Andrews, in which is placed the Bell Rock light. The lakes of most consequence are Loch Lee, in the parish of its name; Loch Brandy, in the parish of Clova; the Loch of Forfar, near that town; the Lochs of Rescobie and Lintrathen, in the respective parishes so denominated; and of Belgavies, in the parish of Aberlemno. None of these are of great magnitude—indeed few, if any, are more than a mile in extent. The railways are confined to the southern and eastern portions of the county, where they connect the different towns with Aberdeen on the north and Edinburgh and Glasgow on the south. These lines are chiefly part of the Caledonian Railway system, the main line of which enters the county a little east of Cupar Angus, and at Alyth Junction, south of Ruthven, it sends a branch to the north-west to Alyth and one south-east-by-south to Dundee, the main line proceeding on to Forfar (from which place is a line to Kerriemuir) where also a line from Dundee, via Broughty Ferry, comes in on the south, thence to Guthrie, whence a branch goes south-east to Arbroath; the next junction is at Dabton, where the Montrose line joins, after which the Caledonian leaves the county, near Craig; the North British enters at Broughty Ferry, whence the line which belongs to the Caledonian from Dundee becomes joint property as far as Arbroath, and from thence the North British passes through Lunan Bay to Montrose, and on to Marykirk and Aberdeen.

Divisions, Representations &c.—Forfarshire comprises 52 parishes, in which are five royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Brechin and Forfar; the four last-named burghs, with Bervie (in Kincardineshire), unite in sending one member to Parliament. Dundee, raised to the dignity of a city by royal charter, returns two, and the county one; the parliamentary constituency in 1898 was 12,394. The valuation of the county for 1897-98 was £1,640,991.

ABERLEMNO is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Forfar, with a hamlet of the same name, 5 miles north-east from Forfar and 6 south-west from Brechin, the nearest railway station being at Aldbar, on the Caledonian railway, 3½ miles south, near the boundary of the parish. The parish is about 5 miles from north to south by 4 miles wide, and bounded on the north-east and east by the parish of Brechin, Guthrie on the south-east, Rescobie on the south-west, Oathlaw on the west, Tannadice on the north-west and Careston on the north. The river South Esk flows along the north boundary. The Established church here is a good building of stone, and there is also a Free church. A quarry in the parish yielding good flagstones and slates, employs a considerable number of the inhabitants, the remainder being occupied in agriculture. Turin Hill, the highest elevation in the parish, is 800 feet above sea level. In the parish churchyard is an inscribed monolith, and a little to the north of the parish church are three others. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about 2 miles north-east from the church are the ruins of Melgund Castle, supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. The "vitrified Fort of Finhaven" is about a mile west from the parish church. The Earl of Minto K.C.M.G., V.D. is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 8,914 acres; rateable value, £8,992; the population in 1891 was 477 males and 449 females, total 926, against 993 in 1881.

Post Office; Andrew Davidson, sub-postmaster. Delivery, 10 a.m.; dispatch, 11.30 a.m. & 12.55 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Forfar, & the nearest telegraph office at Aldbar station. Letters should be addressed "near Forfar."

Past Office, Netherpton; James Bruce, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Brechin; delivery, 10.15 a.m.; dispatch, 2 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Brechin is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 4 miles distant. Inspector of Poor, Collector of Rates & Registrar of Births, Deaths & Marriages, James Stewart, School house

AIRLIE (formerly Aivy) is a parish with a kirktown, about 5 miles west from Kirriemuir, 10 miles north-west from Forfar and 5 miles north-east from Olyth, in the western part of the county, on the borders of Perthshire, and in the small debt court district of Kirriemuir; its length from north-east to south-by-west is about 6 miles, with a breadth varying from a half to 4 miles, and it is bounded on the north by Lutrathen and Kingoldrum, on the east by Kirriemuir and Glamis, on the south by Essie and Meigle and on the west by Glenisla and Ruthven; part of the line of boundary being formed by the river Isla and its tributaries, the Meigle and Dean. The nearest railway stations are Essie and Glamis, on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway; each about 4 miles south-west and south-east respectively from Airlie kirktown. Within the parish is situated Airlie Castle, the ancient seat of the Ogilvies, earls of Airlie, and now much frequented in the summer months by visitors. Small portions only of the ancient structure are preserved, these being the front wall and entrance tower, the arch of which still retains its portcullis; these are incorporated in the modern mansion, called Airlie Castle, now the residence of the Dowager Countess of Airlie. Lindertis is the residence of Sir Thomas Munro bart. D.L. J.P. who is the principal landowner; the Earl of Airlie, the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, and Edward Cox esq. of Cardean, are also landowners. The area of the parish comprises 8,923 acres; rateable value, £8,284; the population in 1891 was 741, against 844 in 1881.

Post Office, Miss Jane Veitch, sub-postmistress. Letters arrive from Kirriemuir at 10.40 a.m. & dispatched at 2.10 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Kirriemuir is the nearest money order & telegraph office ARBIRLOT is a parish and village, the former bounded on the east by the German Ocean, north by Arbroath and St. Vigeans, west by Carmyllie and south by Paubride parishes; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath and extends 4 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth. The loop line of the Dundee and Dunton section Joint Caledonian and North British railway runs along the coast and has a station 2 miles east of the church, called Elliot Junction. The village, which is 3 miles west of Arbroath and 14 north-east from Dundee, is on the east bank of the Elliot burn, from which the old name of the parish (Aber-ehiot) was derived. About a quarter of a mile south-east of the village stands Kelly Castle, which originally belonged to the family of Ouchterlony, and is now held by the trustees of the late Earl of Dalhousie; it is at present tenanted by Henry M'Grady esq. The surface of the land is flat and along the sea coast the soil is sandy; inland it is a rich loam, capable of producing various crops. The trustees of the late Earl of Dalhousie K.T. (d. 1887) are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,747 acres; rateable value, £11,049; the population in 1891 was 843, against 822 in 1881.

ARBROATH,

WITH THE JOINT PARISH OF ST. VIGEANS AND VILLAGE OF MARYWELL.

ARBROATH is a royal burgh, a seaport and the seat of a presbytery, 60 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 110 north-east from Glasgow, 17 north-east from Dundee, 15 south-east from Forfar and 12 south from Montrose, situated on a small plain on the coast of the German Ocean, and on both sides of the river Brothock where it flows into the sea. It has a station, which is a junction for the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar Joint railway of the Caledonian and North British lines with the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. The harbour is extensive, and has been greatly improved, at a cost of more than £20,000; steamers of a fairly large size frequent the port. The number of sailing and steam vessels registered as belonging to the port, December 31, 1898, under Part I of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1898, was 11 of 1,959 tons. The number of vessels that entered the port in 1898, with cargoes and in ballast, was, British, 224 of 21,936 tons; foreign, 19 of 8,652 tons. The number cleared was, British, 228 of 21,881 tons, and foreign, 18, 7,554 tons. In the coasting trade 218 entered of 16,549 tons, and 242 cleared of 28,590 tons.

At the commencement of the 18th century, Arbroath had but little trade, nothing being then directly imported except occasional cargoes of wood from Norway; flax, iron and other useful commodities being purchased from the merchants in Dundee and Montrose. About the year 1738, the manufacture of coarse linens was introduced, and the staple trade of Arbroath at the present day is the manufacture of sail cloth and other coarse linens; the preparation and spinning of the yarns of these productions of the loom is carried on extensively by many firms and individuals. Jute spinning has also been introduced, but is of small extent compared with flax spinning. In addition to the linen trade there are various concerns of magnitude, including engineering works, iron foundries, a tannery, large and flourishing boot and shoe manufactories, roperies &c. and a good trade exists in the exportation of grain and potatoes. There are branches here of the British Linen Company, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a bank for savings. This town was gifted to the abbey of Aberbrothock (founded in 1178 by William the Lion), and the abbey was erected into a burgh of regality and received a charter as a royal burgh in 1593. The existing remains of the abbey comprise the south gable of the transept, the north-west tower, about 70 feet high, portions of the chapter house, and the west door and the gate house, with its crow-stepped gable, the style is Early English and Transitional, and has some remarkable arcading in the lower stories. A part of the abbot's lodgings is also extant. In this house King Robert the Bruce was frequently entertained by the abbot, who was also Chancellor of Scotland. The monks first came from Kelso, and Reginald (a monk of Tyron) was first abbot. The abbey was very extensively endowed with lands and other gifts by Kings William I., Alexander II. and Robert I. and their nobility. It possessed 46 parish churches, and extensive lands in several counties, particularly in the north of Scotland, with privileges of regality &c. The abbots of this foundation had privileges which others did not enjoy—they were exempt from assisting at the yearly synods, and had the distinction of making use of and wearing the pontifical ornaments. King John conferred on the inhabitants of the place the same privileges that his subjects enjoyed throughout all England, except in his city of London.

Arbroath is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 12 councillors. There is a guildry and a body of seven incorporated trades, but these are now virtually private bodies. This town unites with Forfar, Montrose, Brechin and Bervie in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. Arbroath is the seat of a sheriff court for the district. The court sits weekly, on Wednesday, during session. Police courts are also held weekly, or oftener when necessary, and burgh and justice of peace courts are also held. The parish of Arbroath is now a joint parish with St. Vigeans for administrative purposes, by Order which took effect from the 15th July, 1895; they are in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. There are many well built streets, the principal business streets being High street, Keptie street and West port. The town has been greatly improved by paving and sewerage, and by the addition of elegantly fitted and well supplied shops, and possesses a Free Public Library, and several good hotels, the principal being the White Hart. The Victoria Park, adjoining the cliffs on the north-east side of the town, was opened in 1897 in commemoration of Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee. The Town House was built in 1812, and in 1855, at the rear of it, commodious market buildings were erected by the magistrates and town council, at an outlay of about £7,000. A large public hall, with subsidiary rooms, in High street, was erected in 1866 by an incorporated company. The porchouse, situated in an elevated and healthy suburb of the town, was erected in 1866. A Free Public Library was opened June 4th, 1898 in the building formerly the High School, purchased by David Corsar esq. of The Elms, and by him presented to the town, Andrew Carnegie esq. contributing £1,000 towards the library. The market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the last Saturday in January for general business and hiring servants; on the 28th May, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring; July 18th (if it fall on a Saturday, if not, on the following Saturday) for general business and hiring; and 28th November, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring. Two newspapers are published in the town, the "Arbroath Guide" (every Saturday) and the "Arbroath Herald" (every Thursday).

Arbroath is the seat of a presbytery (No. 52), which meets on first Tuesday of February, April, May, July, September and December; it has, with the joint parish of St. Vigeans, seven Established places of worship, five Free churches, and also Episcopalian, United Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregational, Evangelical Union, Wesleyan Methodist, Original Secession, Roman Catholic and Catholic Apostolic churches. The parish church (with the exception of the steeple) was totally destroyed by fire in November, 1832, but was rebuilt in 1835, at a cost of £10,000, in the Early Pointed style, from designs by John James Burnet esq. A.R.S.A. of Glasgow; the former steeple, built in 1832, and 150 feet in height, remains; the east window is a memorial to John Macdonald esq. town clerk and his wife; the carved oak pulpit was presented by the Young Men's Guild. The High school, in Keptie road, at the west end of the town, on seven acres of ground, feued from the Hospitalfield Trustees, was erected in 1835 at a cost of £12,000, and is in the Elizabethan style, from plans by Messrs. Carver and Symon, Arbroath; the building is of two storeys and contains 18 class rooms, science, art, and music rooms, five teachers' rooms, lavatories &c.; the school includes an elementary department for children till they have passed Standard III. The endowments, including a grant from the County Committee, amount to about £665 per annum; there are about 60 free scholarships for children from Arbroath and the neighbouring parishes, 8 Gibson scholarships, and 7 bursaries of £3 each, given by the Educational Trust; the school is in charge of a rector and a large staff of teachers, and is under the management of the School board.

The local charities of the town include the Infirmary and Dispensary at High Common (with Epidemic Hospital adjacent), two destitute sick societies; also a number of mortifications, viz.: Carmichael's, founded in 1738, for seven widows of ship masters; Colvill's, founded in 1812, providing £60 annually for the education of ten poor children; £10 for Scotch Episcopal clergymen; £10 for the poor of Arbroath; the like sum to the poor of St. Vigeans, and the residue to 29 poor householders; Dove's, founded in 1841, for the education of "native born boys," of poor parentage; Mrs. Renny Strachan's, of £50 yearly, for providing coal and oatmeal for distribution at Christmas amongst the most necessitous poor; Forbes's Fund, founded 1864, from which sums of not less than £8 nor more than £10 yearly are given for the relief of destitute widows and old unmarried females in the town of Arbroath; Gibson Fund, founded 1868, and consisting of the annual produce of the residue of the trust estate of William Gibson, and applied as follows:—£100 to the rector of the High school for the education of eight boys, and the remainder to be divided yearly in sums of not less than £20 and not more than £25 among poor householders of the town of Arbroath, preference being given to respectable worthy people of fallen fortunes; the Gibson Christmas Charity, founded in 1868, and being the annual revenue of a sum of £2,000, applied in the purchase of coals, groceries, oatmeal and clothes for distribution among the necessitous poor of the town; the Gibson Mortification, founded in 1868, annual revenue of a sum of £4,000, divided yearly among 16 poor householders; the Petrie Gift, a fund supposed to amount to about £2,000, bequeathed in 1875, by Mr. William Petrie, manufacturer, to be distributed in £10 shares among "poor, deserving women of respectable character, being in and belonging to, and at the time resident in the parish of St. Vigeans, and who have not been in receipt of parochial relief for the preceding five years at least;" Duncan Charity, founded in 1869, annual profits of three-eighths of the residue of the estates of the late David Duncan, for the behoof of poor, aged and reduced persons, not being objects of parochial relief; the Arbikie Fund, bequeathed by John Mudie, of Pitmuirs, being the personal estate of his sister, the late Miss Catherine Mudie, of Arbikie, to which he had succeeded, the free revenue being divided into annuities of £40 each, among deserving persons residing in the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans; and Arrott's Mortification, bequeathed by the late Dr. James Arrott, of Dundee, the capital sum amounting to about £5,000, the free revenue of which is annually distributed in annuities of about £6 each.

The land in the neighbourhood of Arbroath slopes gradually upwards from the shore; the surrounding country is agricultural and for the most part very fertile, the soil, though varied, being excellently adapted for all the different grain and green crops usually grown in Scotland. About a mile north-east the coast becomes very bold, rocky and perpendicular, and comprises a number of caves and arches perforated by the action of the waves; these are a great attraction to visitors, having been rendered famous by Sir Walter Scott in his "Antiquary." Near the harbour at Lady Loan is a signal tower for communication with the Bell (or Luch Cape) Rock, which rises from the German Ocean, about 12 miles in a south-easterly direction from Arbroath. Of this rock, and the tradition attached to it, a most entertaining account will be found in Chambers' "Gazetteer," and other works. On "the rock" is a lighthouse, the first stone of which was laid in July, 1808, and the beacon first loomed over the deep on the 1st of February, 1811: at the lighthouse there are a principal lightkeeper and three assistants: at the signal tower, on shore, each keeper has apartments for his family; the tower is about 80 feet in height and is furnished with an excellent telescope. Signals are arranged with the persons at the lighthouse on the rock by the lightkeeper on shore daily at nine morning, weather permitting: communication is by steamer from Grafton. Hospitalfield, the mansion of the late Patrick Alan Fraser, esq. H.R.S.A. contains many art treasures, and is open to the public once a week during the summer months; it was the Monkbarns of the "Antiquary." The trustees of the late Patrick Alan Fraser esq. of Hospitalfield, and John Jamieson esq. of Denfield, are the principal landowners of Arbroath parish; and Fitzroy Charles Fletcher esq. of Letham, Sir Leonard Lyell bart. of Kinordy, the Hon. Frederick John Bruce, of Seaton, John Duncan esq. of Parkhill, and P. R. Macdonald esq. of Lochlands, for St. Vigeans. The rateable value of the burgh (parliamentary and royal) is £77,996, and the population in 1891 was 22,987, against 21,758 in 1881; the area of the united parish of Arbroath and St. Vigeans, including the burgh, is 13,674 acres; the rateable value of the part outside the burgh is £17,530, with a population of 2,548.

St. Vigeans is a parish, 8 miles from east to west by 4 in depth, lying north of that of Arbroath, with which, by an Order, dated 28 May, 1895, it is incorporated for administrative purposes, and contains the villages of St. Vigeans and Marywell and half the town of Arbroath; it is bounded on the north and north-east by the parish of Inverkeilor and south-west by Carnyllie, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The Arbroath railway station is in this parish. The Established church here dates from the 12th century. The name by which this parish is now known is that of a famous hermit who had his chapel and hermitage at the Grange of Conan, near to which was a baronial castle, named Gory, or Gregory. From Whiting Ness, and as far as Auchmithie, the coast is very rugged and precipitous (gradually rising to Dickmontlaw Hill, 250 feet above the sea level) and contains a number of caves and arched rocks, some of which may be passed through in boats and others on foot; these form a great attraction, and are much visited. The stream of the Brothock flows through the parish and passes through the town of Arbroath, entering the sea at its harbour. Marywell is a small village in this parish. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans is 4,103 and 1,299 respectively, and the following quoad sacra parishes have been formed out of the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans: Ladyloan, population 4,662; Abbey, 5,737; Inverbrothock, 5,383; St. Margaret's, 3,123; Colliston, 575, and Auchmithie, 487. Letham Grange, in the parish of St. Vigeans, the residence of Fitzroy Charles Fletcher esq. J.P. is a large mansion in the Grecian style, situated about 3 miles north from Arbroath.

AUCHMITHIE, a quoad sacra parish formed from the civil parish of St. Vigeanes and a village, situated on the shore of a small bay for fishing boats, on the east coast, about 3½ miles north from Arbroath, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The harbour, towards the construction of which the Fishery Board of Edinburgh made a grant of £3,900, coat in all £5,200. The coast here consists of bold rocky cliffs. Arbroath and Letham Grange, on the North British Coast line from Arbroath to Montrose, are the nearest railway stations, and are distant 3 miles south and west respectively. A public hall was erected in 1888, and is used for entertainments and meetings. The Earl of Northesk is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 487.

Post Office, Mrs. Eliza Wilkie, sub-post-mistress. Letters through Arbroath. Dispatch, 1.15 p.m. Nearest money order & telegraph office, Arbroath, 3½ miles distant.

BARNHILL. see BROUGHTY FERRY.

BARRY (or Barrie) is a parish, about 3 miles north from south by 3½ in the south-east angle of the county, and at the mouth of the Tay, which bounds it on the south, the eastern boundary being the North Sea, and the western Monifeth, it is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and contains the village and kirktown of Barry and two-thirds of the burgh of Carnoustie, at which town and at Barry are stations on the Dundee and Arbroath Joint railway. The village is 9 miles north-east from Dundee and 8 south-west from Arbroath, and contains an Established church, Free church and school. The soil is sandy and the country undulating. The trustees of the late Earl of Dalhousie, John Mill esq. of Grange of Barry, and the trustees of Mrs. Lingard Guthrie, of Carnoustie, are the principal landowners. In 1892 the Government acquired, at a cost of £48,000, the extensive links in this parish as a training ground for military purposes; its artillery range is one of the best land ranges in Britain, and the ground is otherwise very suitable for manoeuvres, rifle practice and encamping, it being easy of access by rail and water. At Buddonness, on the southern extremity of the parish, are two lighthouses, and close by is a lightship to guide vessels on their entrance into the Tay. The area of the parish comprises 5,328 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £7,650; the population in 1891 was 3,787, including 3,225 persons in the burgh of Carnoustie; in 1881 the figures were 3,233 and 2,728.

BRECHIN.

BRECHIN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery and of a bishopric, and the head of a poor combination and small debt court district, 11 miles north-east from Forfar and 70 north-by-east from Edinburgh, situated on the north bank of the South Esk, with a terminal station on a branch line from Bridge of Duo, of the north-easterly section of the Caledonian railway. Brechin more than once suffered by the incursions of invaders and the broils of civil wars; it was burnt by the Danes in 1012, and in 1645 was subjected to a similar calamity by the Marquis of Montrose; two years afterwards it was nearly depopulated by that dreadful scourge, the plague. Formerly the city was walled, but the walls and gates have been long removed. An interesting fragment remains of the hospital of Maison Dieu, founded by William of Brechin in 1264. Between the town and the river, and only separated from the former by a ravine, stands Brechin Castle, an ancient seat of the Maules of Paomure, now represented by the Earl of Dalhousie; it is built on a precipitous rock overhanging the stream: it sustained a siege of 20 days in 1303 from the English army under Edward I. but Sir Thomas Maule, its commander, being killed, it surrendered: the south front, towards the river, consists of some remains of the original structure, with some more recent erections, including a square tower: the west front is formed with regularity, in the style of the 17th century, with round towers at the angles. This town has given birth to more men of genius and literary distinction than any place, in proportion to its size, in Scotland, among whom may be enumerated Maitland, the laborious historian of Edinburgh and London; Dr. Gilles, the historian of Greece; his brother, Lord Adam Gillies, Dr. Thomas Guthrie and Colvin Smith, the eminent artist, to whom Sir Walter Scott sat on five different occasions, and numerous others. The antiquity of Brechin as a royal burgh is of remote date; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master and seven councillors, who are also police commissioners. The burgh joins with Forfar, Montrose, Arbroath and Inverberrie in returning one member to Parliament. A burgh or baillie court is held every Wednesday, and oftener when necessary; the magistrates are the judges: a justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday in every month, and a sheriff court on the third Tuesday of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last-mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims.

The cathedral of Brechin was one of the few places of worship in which the service of the liturgy was for some time performed without interruption after its promulgation in 1637: the bishop was a man of singularly strong and daring character, and ascended the pulpit with a pair of pistols under his gown, determined to carry the behests of royalty into execution at whatever risk. The see of Brechin was founded in 1150, by David I., who also richly endowed it, and the cathedral church of the Holy Trinity, erected in the 13th century, originally consisted of an aisleless choir of uncertain length and a clerestoried nave of five bays with narrow aisles; the transepts, removed in 1806, do not appear to have formed part of the original plan, but to have been a later addition, and were small and of no great height: the north-west tower, with its projecting embattled parapet, turret and octagonal spire, dates from about the middle of the 15th century; the height to the top of the spire is nearly 130 feet, and there are 3 bells: the ruined choir now comprises portions only of the north and south walls, including a number of Early English windows, with clustered shafts and dog-tooth moldings, and on the floor lies a fragment of a Celtic tomb slab: in 1806 the church was to a large extent rebuilt in a very debased style, and greatly injured, the aisles being widened and raised so as to destroy the clerestory, galleries carried round the whole interior, and the east and west piers mainly injured by the erection of stone stairs: the west end of the south aisle now abuts on a fine round tower of the 11th century, 87 feet in height, and tapering slightly towards the top, and finished with a corbelled cornice and octagonal spire; the circular-headed entrance is about 6 feet from the ground, and has over it a figure of the "Crucifixion," and on either side rude carvings of bishops: the west doorway, recessed in six orders, is of the same period as the choir, the window over it displays rich flowing Decorated tracery: the extreme length of the church, excluding the bell tower, is 94 feet; originally, with the choir, it was about 180 feet: the communion plate is of beaten silver. The cathedral is now (1839) about to be restored by John Honeyman R.S.A. architect, of Glasgow, at an estimated cost of £10,000, which sum has been collected by public subscription. There is also an Established church for the East parish, and the Gardner memorial church, built in 1897-8, at a cost of £10,000 in memory of the late Rev. Alexander Gardner M.A. for 50 years minister of Brechin, and his son, James Alexander Gardner, advocate of Edinburgh; £7,000 of the total cost was provided by the late Mrs. Milne and Miss Milne, of Morranbank, Brechin. There are also Free, United Presbyterian, Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches, and chapels for the Evangelical Union and Plymouth Brethren.

The Municipal buildings, in Bank street, include a court room, council chamber &c. The Post Office is in Panmure street, where also new Parish Council chambers have recently (1899) been erected. Flax spinning and the manufacture of linen and a paper mill employ numerous hands; there are also two distilleries and a brewery. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, British Linen Co. Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, are established here. A newspaper, entitled the "Brechin Advertiser," established in 1848, is published on Tuesday morning. The principal hotels are the Commercial, the Dalhousie and the Crown. The Mechanics' Institution, erected at the sole cost of the late Lord Panmure, is an edifice in the Tudor style, and has a castellated parapet with pinnacles; a fine tower rises in the centre to the height of 80 feet, from the summit of which there is a fine prospect: it contains an excellent library, reading room and billiard club: Lord Panmure also presented to the institution numerous valuable paintings and endowed it with £1,000 to be vested in interest, which now yields about £40 a year. The Public Library, near the Railway station, was erected with a sum of £5,000, given anonymously. The premises of the Young Men's Christian Association, in Bank street, were built at a cost of £1,500, and opened in 1878. The Poorhouse, in Infirmary street, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £3,000, and is available for 100 persons: the Infirmary, close by, is a substantial-looking building of stone, erected in 1869, for 33 patients. The cemetery, approached from Panmure street, has recently (1899) been enlarged. Trinity Wuir, one mile north of the town, besides being the site of a fair, is resorted to by cricket and golf players during the summer. A public park, off Park road, was opened in 1857 and has also been enlarged to accommodate the Diamond Jubilee of H. M. the Queen; in front of it, in St. Ninian's square, are gardens and walks well laid out. Fairs are held on the 3rd Thursday in June for cattle and horses and on the Tuesday after the 2nd Thursday in July for wool; hiring market on 1st Tuesday after 28th May and on Nov. 28th and first Tuesday in March for married ploughmen, which is called the "Carlie Market." The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and a local company conducts weekly a large sale of cattle &c. The area of the parish comprises 14,313 acres; rateable value, £19,755, and had in 1891 a population of 10,453, of which 8,955 persons were in the burgh, and in 1881 the figures were 10,499 and 9,031. Post, Telegraph, Money Order Office, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post, Savings Bank & Insurance & Annuity Office, Panmure street, Brechin; James C. Robertson, postmaster. Letters arrive from all parts at 7 & 8 a.m. & 3.15 & 7.15 p.m.; and are dispatched to the north at 7.10 a.m.; to all parts, 1.15 p.m.; to the south, 3.20 a.m. & 5.35 & 7.15 p.m.; & to all parts, 10 p.m. Post messengers are dispatched to Aldbar, Farnell, Findowie & Menmuir at 7 a.m. & to Edzel at 6.45 & 7.45 a.m. Town Post Office, Little Brechin; Mrs. John Clark, sub-postmistress. Letters are dispatched to head office, Brechin, at 3 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Brechin.

BROUGHTY-FERRY.

BROUGHTY-FERRY is a considerable modern town and police burgh, seated on the Firth of Tay, with stations on the Dundee and Arbroath railway, about 4 miles east from Dundee, nearly opposite to Ferry-Port-on-Craig, or Tayport. The place takes its name from the old castle of Broughty or "Burgh Tay" (the defence of the Tay), situated on its south-eastern extremity, on a rocky eminence jutting into the water; the castle, formerly in ruins, has been made into a formidable defence for the mouth of the Tay. Broughty is divided into three districts, East Ferry and West Ferry and Barnhill: East Ferry and Barnhill are in the parish of Monifieth, and West Ferry in that of Dundee; it is regularly built, and has improved very considerably during the last few years, having become the place of residence of many of the principal bankers and merchants of Dundee. The town is governed by commissioners of police and police magistrates, under the provisions of the Police Act of 1892. It is lighted by gas from works owned by the commissioners, and is supplied with water from the Dundee waterworks, and is in the Dundee small debt court district. At one time the East Ferry comprised only a few fishermen's huts, built along the beach, but now the population is considerable, while persons from various parts of the country visit it during the summer months to enjoy its pleasant scenery, pure air and bathing. The pier and harbour were constructed in 1871 at a cost of about £3,800, projecting in the river about 200 feet due south, with a width of 30 feet; at the outer end of the pier is a wooden platform and slip, supported on piles, forming an angle running eastward in the direction of the North British railway pier, which gives it a semi-dock like appearance, and providing berthing for four or five small vessels; the slip is of a uniform breadth of 20 feet, running from the top of the pier down to low water, partly under the platform at a gentle declivity; this arrangement will accommodate vessels at low water, and the landing and embarking of passengers from small steamers at any state of tide. Storehouse, office, and steelyard have also been added. About half a mile to the north of Broughty-Ferry is Fort-hill, or Hill of Balgillo, on which fortifications were erected by the English in 1548, during the reign of Henry VIII, and regency of the Earl of Arrat, when they ravaged Dundee and the surrounding country; in 1550 the works on this hill, being surrendered to an allied army of Scots, Germans and French, under M. Des Thermies, were dismantled, and at the present day they present merely scattered remains. There are Established, Free, United Presbyterian and Episcopal churches, and Independent and Baptist chapels. The East Free church, built in 1865, is a Gothic structure. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, and a Savings Bank, are established here. There are two public halls. The "Broughty-Ferry Guide" newspaper is published every Friday. There are two public parks, the Rees Hill Park and the Orchar Park, both opened in 1887, and each consisting of about 6½ acres. The principal seats are Forbes Court, the residence of the Right Rev. Hugh Willoughby Jermyu D.D. Bishop of Brechin and Primus of the Episcopal Church in Scotland; Carbet Castle, the residence of Mrs. Grimmond; Castleroy, the residence of Mrs. S. Gilroy; Balgillo, the residence of John C. Buist esq. J.P. and Dualestair, the property of Alexander Bruce Gilroy esq. of Castleroy, but at present unoccupied. The area of the burgh is 1,324 acres, valuation, £62,500. The population of the town in 1891 was 9,256, and in 1881, 7,923, estimated population in 1899, 10,000.

Barnhill, one mile east from Broughty-Ferry, in Monifieth parish, and now included in that burgh, is a station on the Dundee and Forfar direct line, which has facilitated the opening out of this locality, and has now become a favourite place of residence. Here is a Convalescent Home in connection with the Dundee Royal Infirmary, erected in 1876, from funds left by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and opened in March, 1877, and enlarged in 1899. There is a cemetery five acres in extent.

CARESTON is a small parish about 2 miles by 1½, situated between the parishes of Brechin and Tannadice, 4 miles southwest of Brechin town, on the north bank of the South Esk; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Menmuir and Fearn parishes respectively, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin. There is a station in the village on the Brechin and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway. The land is composed of beautiful and well cultivated braes, sloping to the south. The castle of Care-ston, erected about the year 1400, of which William Shaw Adamson esq. J.P. is the proprietor, was formerly one of the residences of the Earls of Crawford: above the mantelpiece, in what is called the old drawing room, are the royal arms of Scotland, under which is an inscription. William Shaw Adamson esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 2,085 acres; rateable value, £2,226;
the population in 1891 was 198, and in 1881, 194.

Post Office; Andrew Gardiner, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Brechin, delivered at 11.25 a.m. & dispatched at 10.25 a.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Brechin, 4 miles distant, is the nearest money order office & telegraph office for delivery, but the station is the nearest for collection of telegrams

CARMYLLIE is a parish 3 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth, and bounded by parts of eight parishes, viz.: Panbride, Monikie, Guthrie, Dunnichen, Kirkden, Inverkeilor, St. Vigeans and Arbroath. The parish of Carmyllie includes the villages of Redford and Greystone, the former of which is about 5 miles south from Fricockheim and about 7 west from Arbroath, in which small debt court district it is situated. The nearest railway stations are Fricockheim, 5 miles north, on the Arbroath and Forfar section of the Caledonian line, and Elliot Junction 5 miles east, on the Dundee and Arbroath railway. The river Elliot runs through the parish, and the surface is hilly with a fairly productive soil, and near are some large quarries of paving stone. A cattle fair is held on the last Tuesday in April. The Earl of Dalhousie, Col. Thomss Heathcote Ochterlyny J.P. of Guynod, and John Alex. Wilson esq. of Covonsyth, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,552 acres; rateable value, £7,870; the population in 1891 was 1,083, and in 1881, 1,137.

Post Office, Redford; Alexander Booth, sub-postmaster. Letters through Arbroath.
Delivery 9.30 a.m.; dispatch 1 p.m.
The nearest money order & telegraph office & savings bank is at Fricockheim, ½
miles distant

Post Office, Greystone; Mrs. Ann Sturrock, sub-postmistress. Letters through Arbroath. Delivery, 10.5 a.m.; dispatch, 12 noon. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Letham, 5 miles distant

CARNOUSTIE is a thriving town on the North Sea and a police burgh, two-thirds of which are within the parish of Barry and the remainder, known as Newton and West-haven portious, in the parish of Panbride; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which town it lies 7 miles south, and is 11 east-by-north from Dundee with a station on the joint line of the Caledonian and North British railways. The Bay, to the north-west of which the town stands, is large, but too open and shallow to be useful as a harbour, but this place is now much resorted to as a watering-place and has good bathing and accommodation for visitors, besides golf clubs. The golf course is of 18 holes. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six commissioners. It is well drained and has waterworks connected with a large reservoir at Crombie belonging to Dundee.
The large jute works of Messrs. James Smieton and Sons employ about 400 hands, and there are also vitriol works, a large iron foundry, boot and shoe factories and vegetable preserve works. There are several first-class hotels. The Union Club Limited, in Park avenue, and opened 2 Jan. 1899, was erected at a cost of about £1,500, and has now (1899) about 220 members. The Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank Limited have branches here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The Municipal offices in the High st. were erected in 1897-8, at a cost, including furnishing, of £3,000, from designs by Mr.
James P. Bruce, architect, Dundee and Carnoustie. There is an Established church, two Free churches, and United Presbyterian, Episcopal, and Original Secession Churches. The rateable value is £21,200; the population in 1891 was 4,134,
and in 1881, 3,321.

CRAIG is a parish on the east coast occupying the peninsular south of Montrose basin and the creek which connects that water with the sea, and bounded on the south by Lunan Bay, is 6 miles from east to west by 2½ from north to south; it is in the small debt court district of Montrose, and contains the fishing villages of Ferryden and Usan. The nearest railway station is at Montrose, 1 mile north, on the Caledonian and North British systems. Dumnald Castle is the residence of Capt. John Stansfeld J.P. and Rosie Castle of Edward Miller esq. J.P.; these, with George Keith esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. (Inchbrayock, or Rosie Islet, in the creek, now belongs to the parish of Montrose). The land is arable, with plenty of limestone. The area comprises 4,371 acres; rateable value, £10,362; the population in 1891 was 2,472, and in 1881, 2,589.

Ferryden is one of the largest fishing villages on the east coast of Scotland, with a population of 1,482 in 1891, and 1,520 in 1881, and owning boats and other fishing appliances to the extent of upwards of £30,000.

Post Office, Ferryden; William Smith, sub-postmaster. Letters are delivered at 7 a.m. & 11.40 a.m.; dispatched to head office, Montrose, at 8.30 a.m. & 12.40 p.m. Postal orders issued, but not paid. Nearest money order & telegraph office, Montrose, 2 miles distant

DUNDEE.

DUNDEE is a seaport, royal burgh and parish, and since 1892 it has been a city; it is second in point of commercial position and third in population in Scotland; the city lies on the north bank of the Firth of Tay, about 9 miles from the mouth of the Firth, and the parish, which is about 5 miles east to west and 1 north to south, is bounded on the south by the Tay, on the north by the united parishes of Mains and Strathmartine, on the east by Mirroes and Monifieth, and on the west by the united parish of Liff, Benzie and Lovergowrie, a large portion of which is incorporated with the burgh. The city is 43 miles north from Edinburgh, 66 south-south-west from Aberdeen, 29 south-west from Montrose, 20 east-by-north from Perth, 17 south-west from Arbroath and 14 south from Forfar. The Caledonian and North British railways have each stations in the city. The Caledonian railway system connects Dundee with Perth, Stirling and the west of Scotland generally, and London and the south by the West Coast line. One branch runs northward to Newtyle, Blairgowrie and Alyth, and another branch goes direct to Forfar, the county town. The Caledonian are joint owners with the North British Company of the Dundee and Arbroath railway, which connects Dundee with Arbroath, Montrose, Aberdeen and the whole north-east of Scotland. The North British has running powers for a certain distance over the east and west lines, and has a joint right in part of both the terminal stations—one at the east and the other at the west end of Dock street; the company has also constructed the Arbroath and Montrose direct line, which increases the facilities for communication between Dundee and the south-eastern portion of Forfarshire and the south-western portion of Kincardineshire. Alongside the west station at the end of Dock street is the North British or Tay Bridge station. In 1870 the North British Railway Company obtained an Act of Parliament for bridging the Tay at Dundee. This bridge was designed by Sir Thomas Bouch, the company's engineer, the plans being for a single line of rails only. On the 31st May, 1873, the bridge was 10,612 feet in length, and consisted of 85 spans, some of these being over 90 feet above high water level, and the cost was said to be £350,000, but on the evening of the 28th December, 1879, during the prevalence of a gale of unusual force, while the mail train from Edinburgh was passing over it, the whole of the "high girders," extending over 13 spans, were blown into the river, together with the trail, leaving a gap of 3,000 feet, and upwards of 70 persons perished; the present bridge, from plans by William Henry Barlow C.E., F.R.S. was approved by Parliament in May, 1881, and the structure, starting from the south side of the Firth of Tay, near St. Port, comprises 84 spans, varying in breadth from 50 to 245 feet; the first four above high water mark are continued by 23 of varying size, which take the line to the south side of the navigable channel, where they connect with the 13 great spans crossing the mid channel; of these, the southern ones vary in height above high water from 63 to 65 feet, the four main spans have a height of 77 feet clear, and those on the south 68 to 75 feet; 36 spans continue the bridge from the north side of the mid channel to Dundee shore, and seven land spans carry it into Dundee; the trails run on the lower part of the great spans, and on the upper portion of the others; the whole length is about 2 miles, and it has a double set of rails on a steel floor; the foundations are on iron caissons; the contractors were Messrs. Arrol and Company, of Glasgow, and the bridge was opened for general traffic in June, 1887.

The situation of Dundee is very beautiful, the river here forming a bay 2 miles broad, from the margin of which the town spreads over a gradual acclivity, ascending towards the base of a lofty and sheltering eminence called "Dundee Law." The picturesque coast of Fisherie forms the southern border of the Tay, westward of the town, which commands a view of the town the opposite shores of the estuary. The greater part of the mansions of the opulent are ranged on the lofty bank of the Tay, westward of the town, which commands a view of the river and the beautiful scenery on the opposite coast, including Newport and Wormit, places which may be considered as residential suburbs of Dundee.

History.—Dundee is a place of considerable antiquity. From a fishing hamlet it came to be a walled town, with a castle of considerable strength. During the usurpation of Edward I. the town was made the station of an English garrison; and in the course of the struggle for the Scottish crown between that prince and Robert Bruce, Dundee was twice taken and retaken. The patriot Wallace, whose deeds have endeared the enthusiasm of bard and historian, received his education at the Grammar School of Dundee. The castle of Dundee becoming so formidable an annoyance when in possession of an enemy, an occurrence but too frequent, Bruce deemed it expedient to demolish it, and out a vestige of it now remains. Its site was near the present Castle street—that street having been formed by blasting a portion of the rock on which it stood. The town was destroyed in the reign of Richard II., and again in that of Edward VI., but on each occasion it speedily recovered, and resumed its rank among the principal Scottish towns, being several times pledged as security for ransoms, and for the fulfilment of treaties. It was also a place of royal residence, there being a palace (known as Whitehall) to the south of the Nethergate, and a mint at the foot of the Overgate, the site of which is still indicated by the name of "Mint Close," given to an entry in that quarter. Robert III. was the first sovereign who struck coin at the mint. Dudhope Castle, originally the seat of the Scrymgeour family, standard bearers to the Scottish kings, stands on the face of the rising ground to the north of the town, and was at one time the property of Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee: in recent times it was used as a military barracks, but the castle and grounds now form a part of the Barrack Park. In Dundee the reformed religion found some of its earliest and warmest defenders. So zealous was the town in its cause, as to be honoured with the appellation of "the second Geneva." In 1544 George Wishart, who suffered martyrdom at St. Andrews, preached here, and on one occasion narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of one of Cardinal Beaton's emissaries: in memory of his escape the East Port or Cowgate, where he preached, and the only portion of the old walls extant, is still kept standing. In April, 1645, the Duke of Montrose took Dundee by assault. The last calamity of this kind that befell the town was its capture and plunder a few years later by General Monk, an event which is the subject of many local traditions. A few eminent men have conferred honour on Dundee, from its being the place either of their birth, education or labor:—Hector Boece, the historian; Sir William Wallace; John Blair; Goldman and Ferguson, the poets; Sir George Mackenzie, the scholar and lawyer; and in more recent days, Drs. Small, Willison, Davidson and Russell; Nicoll, the poet; George Gillilan, the critic and preacher; Dr. Thomas Dick, the astronomer and christian philosopher; and the naval victor, Admiral Duncan. The author of the "Song of the Shirt," Thomas Hood, also resided in the town for a short time, and some of his first efforts at versifying appeared in the columns of the "Dundee Advertiser."

Municipal.—Dundee was created a royal burgh by William the Lion in return for the attention paid to his brother, the Earl of Huntingdon, who, in returning from the Crusades, was shipwrecked near this port. The oldest charter, now extant, is one granted by Robert Bruce, confirming these burghal privileges. It was made a city by a royal charter granted in 1892, and in 1894 was created a county, the lord provost being lord lieutenant of the same. The municipal government of Dundee is exercised by a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a hospital master, a kirk master, and a council, including the magistrates, of 28 members. There are 13 trade guilds, viz.: the Masons, Wrights and Slaters (known as the Three United Trades), the Bakers, Shoe Makers, Glovers, Tailors, Bonnet Makers, Fleshers, Hammermen, Weavers, Dyers and the Maltmen Incorporation. Six courts are held within the town—the Burgh of Bailie Court, the Sheriff's Court, the Commissary Court, the Guild Court, the Police Court and the Justice of Peace Small Debt Court. The city is divided into nine districts and wards. Dundee sends two representatives to Parliament. The larger portion of the city is lighted with gas from works the property of the burgh and under the control of the corporation, but in March, 1892, the central portion of the city was supplied with electric lamps from new works, erected by the Corporation, in Dudhope crescent, at a cost for buildings and fittings of £30,000. The corporation also own the waterworks, drawing their supplies from Loch Lintathen and the river Tay, and they have also now (1893) taken over the tramway system. The Town House, now called the Council Chambers, in the High street, was completed in 1734, from designs by Adam, and comprises a Guild Hall, Court Room, Record Chamber and other offices; the front has a piazza, and from the centre of the building rises a spire 140 feet high; a large addition was made to the building in 1873, with the view of including in it all the public offices.

Commerce and Manufactures.—Dundee is a place of great commercial activity, and is the principal seat of the linen and jute industries; the rapid increase, both of its productions and shipping, is the most striking feature of its recent history. When Monk captured the place in 1651, 60 vessels were found in the harbour, so richly laden as to afford a booty to the captors exceeding in value the whole of their spoils "in the wars throughout the three nations;" the plunder, however, did not enrich the captors, for the ships sunk in passing the bar. For several years subsequently few vessels floated in the deserted harbour; but in 1669 37 vessels arrived in the port; in 1673, 49; in 1680, 85; by 1731 the number had considerably decreased, and the trade continued to dwindle till this once flourishing port was chiefly the resort of fishermen and smugglers. But the situation of Dundee, the commodiousness of its harbour, and the enterprise of its inhabitants, caused the tide of commerce to turn, and the town, from 1792, has continued to progress. In 1745 the port dues scarcely amounted to £1,200; but in 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, of 8,550 tons; and about the same period the foreign clearances outwards and inwards were nearly 12,000 tons, while the coasting trade was about 60,000. Since 1815 the increase has been enormous, and the total revenue from all sources from that date, until May, 1898, amounted to the aggregate to £2,655,295. During the year ending May, 1898, the revenue amounted to £40,937, in the year ending May, 1861, it was only £25,329. In consequence of the augmentation tion of its shipping, new sea walls and quays were built, the tidal harbour was extended, wet docks and graving docks constructed, and there are now but few ports in Great Britain affording greater facilities and accommodation for shipping. In 1815 the management of the harbour was placed in the hands of commissioners, appointed annually under an Act of Parliament; but by an Act passed in June, 1830, the control was transferred to trustees, elected annually, the provost, bailies and dean of guild to be perpetual trustees, in virtue of their office. The total expenditure for maintaining the harbour from July, 1815, to May 31, 1898, inclusive of interest on debt and sinking fund, was £2,341,551. The total cost of harbour and property up to same date amounted to £1,147,085. The debt due by the Dundee Harbour on the 31st May, 1898, amounted to £386,883. The progressive increase of revenue will appear from the following statement:—

The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1898 was 112, of the aggregate register of about 100,500 tons. The whale fishery employs several ships from this port. Steam navigation is conducted by the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company, whose vessels ply to London twice a week, and to Hull, weekly. There is also regular steam communication with Newcastle, Liverpool, Manchester, Hamburg, Rotterdam, Belfast &c. besides several large steamers engaged in the coal trade. Direct steam communication is carried on with New York at irregular intervals. The number of fishing boats registered at Dundee under part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, was 170, aggregate tonnage, 1,633 tons, employing 502 hands; in addition 5 steam fishing boats were registered of 145 tons, besides 143 other vessels, aggregate tonnage 109,138 tons (84 of which were steamers). In 1893, 25 vessels (steamers) were built; registered tonnage, 8,217.

The earliest articles produced in the town seem to have been soap and glass, which engaged a number of hands; and the brewing of ale was carried on to some extent. The glass manufacture has died out, as has also the sugar refining, which was once carried on. In 1866, however, linseed crushing was established, and has since been carried on to a moderate extent. The manufacture of boots and shoes and tanning and currying is carried on by Messrs. Henderson on a very extensive scale. The wholesale shoe trade, which at one time flourished in this town, has been revived, and there are two large factories, employing a considerable number of persons. The manufacture of marmalade has for many years employed a large number of hands, Dundee marmalade being famous throughout the world. Messrs. Kellier and Sons' establishment is probably the largest in the kingdom, and there are other firms extensively engaged in the trade. At an early period the wants of shipping led to the introduction of the manufacture of cordage, which still remains a branch of commerce, but not to such an extent as formerly.

The manufacture of cotton was once tried, and had the appearance of forming an important branch in the trade of Dundee, having at one time seven companies engaged in it; but at length it declined, and finally died away, in favour of Glasgow. The production of woollen cloths was next attempted, but met with no success. Out of the failures arose a spirit for manufacturing goods from flax; and as an encouragement to this branch in its infancy, a bounty was given by the Government on all linen exported, and a heavy duty laid on the importation of foreign lins. Whether the effect of these enactments, the trade of Dundee continued to increase, and since the introduction of the jute manufacture, the progress of the city has been very great. The following returns of the quantities of flax &c. imported in various years since 1745, will show the progress of the flax trade:—

Jute was first brought into notice at Dundee by the late Thomas Neish esq. but as the fibre was hard and difficult to work, it did not attract much attention at first; improved machinery, however, and the discovery of the means of softening the fibre, caused jute to gradually grow more in favour, until the outbreak of the civil war in America, producing a stoppage of the cotton supply, gave the trade an impetus which has continuously increased, owing to the cheapness at which cloth can be produced from the fibre, and its usefulness for various important purposes. At first the fibre was imported in small quantities to London and Liverpool, and thence trans-shipped to Dundee; but as the trade grew in importance, manufacturers imported direct from Calcutta, and the direct imports now greatly exceed those into London. Most of the jute received in Liverpool and London also finds its way to Dundee. In 1849 the imports (exclusive of coast-ways) amounted to 8,176 tons; in 1850, 8,127 tons were received. In 1865 the receipts at the harbour, both coast-ways and from Calcutta, reached 36,291 tons. To give an idea of the expansion of the trade, we give the following returns for the years ending 31st May, 1871, 1876, 1881, 1886, 1891, 1896 and 1898:—

Other imports from foreign countries to which attention may be directed are timber and whale and seal blubber, the former being about 50,000 loads annually, and the latter varying according to the success or failure of the fishing, but probably averaging not less than 2,500 tons each season. The oil produced from this blubber is chiefly used for "batching" the jute in its raw state, in order to soften the fibre and facilitate the various operations of preparing and spinning. The exports of manufactured goods from the harbour by no means represent the extent of business done in the town, the larger portion of the manufactured goods being sent by rail to Glasgow and Liverpool for export to the United States, South America, Australia &c. Originally there were only four steam spinning mills; there are now probably above 100, including spinning and weaving factories, where thread is woven into osnaburghs, sheetings, baggings, sailcloth, sacking, dowias &c. At the commencement of the civil war in America, as has been said, the trade of Dundee increased to a most extraordinary extent, fabrics of jute and linen being in great demand to take the place of cotton. The manufacture of machinery, steam engines, boilers and millwright work is in a flourishing condition and carried on extensively by several eminent firms, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. James Carmichael and Co. Limited, Ward foundry; Thomson, Son and Co. Douglas foundry; Urquhart, Lindsay and Co. Blackness foundry; the Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited, Lilybank foundry; Gourlay Brothers and Co. Dundee foundry; and Robertson and Orchar Limited, Wallace foundry. Iron ship building and marine engineering are also important features in the general prosperity and industry of the city, and give employment to a large number of artisans. Messrs. Gourlay Brothers and Co., The Dundee Ship Builders' Co. Limited and the Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited, are the principal firms engaged in these important industries. There are also several extensive saw mills and timber yards, the principal of which belong to Messrs. Bell and Sims Limited and Messrs. Fleming and Barry Limited.

Descriptive Sketch.—Although Dundee is not conspicuous for architectural beauty, it contains several handsome streets. In the central portion is a wide oblong area, called the High street, on the south side of which stands the Town House. Directly south of this street lie the Docks, and to the south-west the terminal stations of the North British and Caledonian railways, and northward various streets lead to Barrack Park and the high ground known as Dundee Law. The Clydesdale Bank, at the east end of High street, is also a good building. Dock street runs from the railway stations along the line of Docks, and from the west end of Dock street, Union street forms a communication with the Nethergate; it contains excellent shops; running north from the centre of Dock street, Commercial street is a splendid thoroughfare, lined on either side by elegant shops and houses, and the old and narrow thoroughfares called Murraygate and Seagate have given place to wide streets. Whitehall street, completed in 1893, runs from the Nethergate southwards; at the lower end it curves semi-circularly towards South Union street on the west, and Green market on the east. In Meadowside new premises were completed and opened in 1899 by the Scottish Provident Institution, the Pearl Life Assurance Co., and the Prudential Assurance Co. The Albert Institute, completed in 1889, is to the south-east of the High school, the western portion was erected from designs by the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. and the eastern and northern portions from others by Mr. Mackenzie, a local architect, and Mr. Alexander, the city architect; the cost of the entire building was about £50,000, exclusive of the site, which cost £8,000. It comprises a large hall (used as the reference library), libraries, reading room, museum, and fine picture galleries. These are free to the public, the town having 35 years ago adopted the Free Libraries Act. Adjoining are the Victoria Art Galleries, opened by the Marquess of Lorne on October 25th, 1889. In the grounds in front of the Albert Institute is a bronze statue, modelled by Mr. Steell of Edinburgh, of George Kinloch, the first representative of the burgh in the first reformed Parliament; in the south-west corner of the grounds is a bronze statue of Burns, also by Steell. There is also a statue by John Hutchison R.S.A., of the late James Carmichael, the inventor of the fan blast. A fountain, erected at considerable cost, faces the west front of the Institute. The Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, Panmure street, erected in 1852, at a cost of about £10,000, is a building in the Flemish-Gothic style of the 14th century, with a fine tower. To the south of the Albert Institute stand a Club House, in the Venetian style, the Free Gaelic church, and the National Bank buildings. The Royal arch, in the centre of Dock street and spanning the north end of the Mid quay, raised to commemorate the landing near this spot of H.M. Queen Victoria, on her first visit, is a structure, with a wide central arch, and two of smaller dimensions at the sides; each front is richly sculptured, and octagonal turrets rise from the summit. The Custom House, in Dock street, is a building with a Classic portico. The Sailors' Home, opened by the late Earl of Dalhousie, 16 December, 1881, at a cost of upwards of £12,000, is designed in the Elizabethan style, and has sleeping room for about 100 seamen. The offices of the Mercantile Marine Department are in the same building. The Public Hall, in Bank street (for which the inhabitants of Dundee are mainly indebted to Lord Kinnaird), is a building in the Italian style; the hall itself is an apartment 130 by 60 feet, and 42 feet 6 inches high, with room for about 2,500 people. The organ, provided in 1861, cost £1,500. The orchestra will accommodate some 280 performers, and there is a gallery holding 200 persons. The Court House, in which the assizes are held, is a building in the Classic style, upon the pediment of which the Royal arms are boldly sculptured; adjoining it is the gaol. The Post Office, in Meadowside, opened in 1898, is a building of stone, in the French Renaissance style, and cost £21,366.

Ecclesiastical.—The "Old Steeple," in the Nethergate, a little west of High street, is a fine solid tower, built, probably, the early part of the 15th century; it is 156 feet high, with walls 8 feet thick, and formerly contained 2 bells, the larger erected in 1819 and the smaller bearing date of 1693; but when the "Steeple" was restored in 1872, under the superintendence of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, 6 more bells were provided, being gifts from various citizens, and the whole 8 were rehung in the bell chamber: this "Steeple" forms the tower of the town churches, of which there are three, all connected with it, and known as the "East," "South" and "Steeple" churches; the two first were destroyed by fire in 1841, but were rebuilt in a very short time, the East church being reopened on the 10th March, 1844, and the South church in 1847; the same architect, Mr. Burn, of Edinburgh, designed both churches, which are in the Decorated style: the East church consists of a nave of five bays, with clerestory and open timber roof and side aisles divided from the nave by arcades of clustered pillars: there are galleries in the aisles and across the west end: the east window of three lights is stained, and displays the arms of the town, the fraternity of Merchant Seamen, the Maltmen, and the "Three United Trades"; the South church stands north and south, and has a western transept, containing a gallery. St. Clement's, or "the Steeple" church, which is the western of the three, is a plain edifice of stone in the Perpendicular style, erected in 1789: a gallery surrounds all three sides. These three churches are really one large building, the Steeple church being the nave, the South church the north and south transepts, and the East church the chancel, and occupy the site of the original church of St. Mary. Adjoining these churches is the Town or Market Cross, moved here from High street, and consists of a pillar surmounted by a unicorn supporting a shield.

St. Paul's Free church and St. Enoch's Established church are in the Nethergate, and St. Mark's Established church, St. John's Free church, in Ryehill, and the United Presbyterian church, and the McCheyne Memorial Free church, in the Perth road. St. Paul's Episcopal church, on the Castle Hill, is an edifice in the Gothic style, from the designs of the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. and has a tower with lofty spire, containing a peal of bells. In the Cowgate is a meeting-house for the Glassites—a sect founded by Mr. John Glass, who was made a freeman of Dundee by the town council in 1753. The Gillfillan Memorial Hall, in Whitehall crescent, is used for worship by the congregation of the Rev. Walter Walsh; it is also adapted for holding concerts and meetings.

Schools.—The High School, in Euclid crescent, was erected in 1834, at a cost of £10,000, since which extensive additions have been made to it, including a gymnasium and workshop, and class rooms for girls have also been erected in Euclid street: the institution is largely indebted to the late ex-Bailie Harris, who gave £20,000 for the purpose of improving it: Miss Harris, his sister, has also been a great benefactor. The Harris Academy, in Park place, erected with a sum of £10,000, bequeathed for the purpose of promoting secondary education, was opened in 1885. The Morgan Academy, in the Forfar road, owes its existence to the benevolence of the late Mr. Morgan, a native of Dundee, who left the bulk of his fortune, reduced by litigation to £73,500, for its erection and maintenance. It was originally designed for 100 boys, the sons of tradesmen, mechanics and persons of the working classes generally, in Dundee, Forfar, Montrose or Arbroath, the preference being given to the boys of parents belonging to this town. In 1889 the Endowed Schools Commission converted this building into a secondary school: the building, erected at a cost of £15,000, is in the Flemish-Gothic style, from designs by Messrs. Peddie and Kinnear, architects, of Edinburgh, and is quadrangular in form, two storeys in height, with an interior open court, and a centre tower rising to a height of 120 feet.

University College, in the Nethergate, was erected and endowed through the munificence of the late Miss Baxter, of Belgavies, and her relative, the late Dr. Boyd Baxter, who provided a sum of £150,000 for this purpose; buildings already on the site were utilised as class rooms, laboratories, and a college hall: a large chemical laboratory was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and in all £50,000 was spent in purchasing and equipping the buildings, and £100,000 appropriated as a permanent endowment fund: the deed of endowment and trust directs that the college shall be for promoting the education of persons of both sexes for the study of science, literature and the fine arts: the institution is entirely unsectarian, and has been incorporated with the ancient University of St. Andrews and the Faculties of Arts, Medicine and Science have now been established: there are at present fourteen professors and a number of lecturers. The Technical Institute, in the grounds of University College, and opened in 1892, was established with a sum of £20,000 (afterwards increased to about £26,000), left by the late Sir David Baxter bart. for the establishment of a school for the instruction and training of artisans in their various trades and arts; there were upwards of 700 students in attendance during the session 1897-98. The School Board includes under its control the Harris Academy and the Morgan Academy, and has altogether 23 schools. The Royal Orphan Institution, founded in 1815, is at Craigie terrace, overlooking the river. The Dundee Industrial Schools Society's School for girls, at Balgay, Blackness road, was erected in 1896, at a cost of £12,000, and will hold 120; the school for boys is at Baldovan, a healthy village to the north of the town. The "Mars" Training ship for Homeless and Destitute Boys, is an old three-decker, moored in the Tay, at Woodhaven, and here four hundred boys are trained, chiefly with a view to their joining the merchant service or entering the Royal Navy. The institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, established in 1846, and situated at Duthgow Bank, Locher road, is maintained by the directors of the Dundee Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, from the interest of invested funds, and from property left by the late James Key esq.

The Royal Lunatic Asylum, at West Green, in the parish of Liff, about 4 miles west of Dundee, was erected in 1882, at a cost of £50,000, from designs by Messrs. Edward and Robertson, architects, of Dundee, and will hold upwards of 400 patients; the directors are now (1893) erecting a private asylum as an addition to the present building, at an estimated cost of about £20,000, so as to provide 70 more beds; the grounds in connection extend to nearly 100 acres. The Poor House, opened in November, 1856, at a cost of about £10,000, and since enlarged, at the sole expense of Mr. Molison, chairman of the Parochial Board, at a cost of upwards of £1,000, will now hold about 300 inmates; in 1893 a sick hospital containing 320 beds was built, at a cost of £25,000. The Curr Night Refuge, in West Bell street, erected by money left by the late Mrs. Curr, affords a retreat for the night to homeless strangers. The Royal Infirmary, erected in 1853, near to the Barrack Pier, from designs by Messrs. Coe and Goodwin, of London, has two wings, a central tower, and embattled parapets; the infirmary provides for 300 in-patients; in 1895 a new operating theatre was built at a cost of £2,000; in 1895-7 two Nurses' Homes were erected at a cost of £7,000, and in 1898-9 a section for obstetric and gynecological cases, at a cost of £6,000. The Victoria Hospital for Incurables, Balgay, Blackness road, established in 1899, at a cost of £10,000, is a building of stone in the Renaissance style, from designs by Mr. J. Murray Robertson, and has 40 beds; the hospital has an endowment of £40,000. In 1899 Mr. Alexander Moncur, of this city, gave £10,000 to establish and equip a hospital for consumptives. The Public Gymnasium, in the Ward road, opened in 1892, and designed by Bailie McCulloch, of Dundee, is in the French Renaissance style; it is spacious and well appointed, and available also for instruction in cycle riding. Adjoining the old entrance to the barracks is the public bleaching green; near this spot a time gun has been placed.

Besides the burial grounds belonging to the corporation, the Dundee Cemetery Co. Limited, has a fine cemetery in the Perth road, covering an area of 12 acres: in this cemetery lie the remains of William Thom, known as the Inverury Poet, and the author of the "Mitherless Bairn." To the east of the Baxter Park is the Eastern Necropolis, a beautifully laid out cemetery, and to the west of the Balgay Park is the Western Necropolis.

Baxter park, at the east end of the city, and upwards of 30 acres in extent, was presented to the town in 1863 by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and endowed with funds necessary to maintain it at a total cost of not less than £50,000; the park was beautifully laid out by the late Sir Joseph Paxton. In 1889 the corporation acquired Balgay Hill, a wooded eminence at the west end of the town, to be used partly as a public park and partly as a cemetery for the west end of the burgh: the portion retained as a public park is 36 acres in extent, finely wooded, and from the higher parts of the ground magnificent views are obtained. The Law Hill, behind the town, has also been laid out as a place of recreation. The inhabitants have also the use of Magdalen Green, close by the river at the west end of the town, and the Barrack Park, which was acquired by the corporation early in 1865. The "Esplanade" was formed by an arrangement with the railway companies when the Tay Bridge Works were constructed, and has recently been extended westward.

Newspapers.—There are two daily morning papers, the "Dundee Advertiser" and "The Dundee Courier," and one daily evening paper, "The Evening Telegraph" (a halfpenny paper). The weekly papers, five in number, are "The People's Journal," "The Weekly News," "The Dundee Catholic Herald," "The People's Friend" (a weekly issue of tales and literary miscellany), and one comic paper, "The Piper." Immediately opposite the Kinnaird Hall stands a building, 215 feet in length, the printing establishment of the "Dundee Advertiser," "People's Journal," "Evening Telegraph" and "People's Friend." The proprietors of "The Dundee Weekly News" have acquired the site of the old Post Office, and are now erecting a printing and publishing office on it.

The principal market days are Tuesday and Friday; and there is a cattle and sheep market held every Tuesday. Fairs—Stobh's fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 11th July, or the first Tuesday following (o.s.); Dundee first fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 26th August, if that day falls on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, if not, the first Tuesday after the 26th August (n.s.); and the second Dundee fair on the 19th September, the same rule observed as that regulating the first fair. Feeding markets for servants are held on the 28th May and on the 28th November, or on the first Friday thereafter.

The population of the city (or royal burgh) in 1831, was 153,587, in the parishes of Dundee, Liff, Benvie, Invergowrie, Mains and Strathmartine, and in 1881, 142,455, and this year (1899) it is estimated as 166,072. In the parish, the Right Hon. the Earl of Home, A.D.C., V.D. of Harecraig and Douglas, David Charles Guthrie esq. of Craigie, and Robert McGavin esq. J.P. of Ballumbie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,201 acres, and the population in 1891 was 109,875, of whom 107,250 were in the burgh, and in 1881, 100,598 (98,205 within the burgh). The rateable value of the city is £771,330 8s.; of Liff and Benvie, £17,449 10s.; of Dundee Landward, £11,631 13s. and of West Ferry, £12,535 18s.; total, £812,997 3s.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 18,330.

LOCHEE is an important but scattered suburb, forming part of the royal burgh of Dundee, within the united parishes of Liff and Benvie, extending one mile and a half north-west from Dundee, and it contains several mills and factories for the spinning and manufacturing of flax, jute &c.; the principal of these being the Camperdown Jute Works, belonging to Messrs. Cox Brothers Limited, covering a space of about 25 acres, and giving employment to about 5,000 persons: these works have a tower with a peal of fine-toned bells, and a clock with four dials, which are illuminated at night. There is also a furniture manufactory here. The Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian railway passes through this place, and is connected by a branch. There are two railway stations, one in Lochee and the other at Lochee West, about a mile north. In the immediate neighbourhood are several quarries of excellent freestone, which have been wrought for a long period. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Dundee Savings Bank. The Free Library in High street, opened in Dec. 1895, was erected with funds provided by the late Mr. Thomas H. Cox, of Duncarse, and comprises a library, reading room and baths. Camperdown House is the residence of the Earl of Camperdown, and Clement Park is the residence of Miss Cox. The Established church of St. Luke was the gift of Thomas H. Cox esq.; there is another Established church, a Free church and Episcopalian, United Presbyterian, Baptist and Roman Catholic churches. The United Presbyterian church, erected at a cost of upwards of £6,000, is a building in the Middle Pointed Gothic style, with a tower and spire rising to a height of 130 feet, and containing 8 bells, the first erected in any church in Dundee, and presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers: the church affords 1,000 sittings. The United Presbyterian church in Logie street, erected in 1835, will hold 700. Four manses have been erected for the ministers of the United Presbyterian and two Established churches. Lochee Park, presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers, at a cost, including endowment, of upwards of £20,000, comprises 25 acres, and has a lodge of two storeys, with a tower. In 1881 Lochee was returned as having a population of 15,000: the census of 1891 gave the registration district as containing 13,867 persons.
