INCHES, see DOUGEAS.

KILBRIDE (EAST) is a burgh of barony, village and parish, in the Middle Ward, Hamilton poor combination and small debt court district; the village, on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, is 8 miles south by road from Glasgow and 10 1/2 by rail, between 6 and 7 west from Hamilton and 45 west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Glasgow and East Kilbride branch of the Caledonian railway; there are also three other stations in the parish, viz.: Busby, 4 miles north-west; Thornton Hall, 3, and Hairmyers 1½ west from the village. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated parish of Torrance, contains some extensive lime works, and coal also lies beneath the surface. Under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary orders 75 and 137, a part of the parish of Cathcart has been transferred to East Kilbride. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are Dr. William Hunter M.D., F.R.S. born 23 May, 1718, died 30 March, 1783, and his brother John Hunter F.R.S. the celebrated anatomist and phy-siologist, born 14 July, 1728; he was at first a student at Chelsea Hospital and subsequently for some time a member of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and his portrait hangs in the dining hall of that society; he died 16 Oct. 1793, and an oration in his honour is annually delivered at the Royal College of Surgeons, in London. There are several Board schools. A market is entitled to be holden here on Monday. The cattle show, which is held on the first Friday after the 10th of June, for Clydesdale horses and Ayrshire cattle, is the only fair that takes place in East Kilbride. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Busby is a village and railway station at the north-western extremity of the parish, partly in this county, but chiefly in Renfrewshire (which see). The principal landowners are Lady Sophia C. Allenby Montgomerie, of Southanion House, Fairlie, Col. Robert Edward Stuart Harington-Stuart, of Torrance, and Allan Graham-Barns-Graham esq. of Craighallan, Milngavie. The area comprises 22,760 acres; rateable value, £36,593; the population in 1891 was 3,861, and in 1881, 3,975.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, East Kilbride; Miss Margaret McMartin, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 8.15 a.m. & 6.10 p.m.; dispatches, 7.20 a.m. & 12.30, 3.45 & 7.15 p.m.
Post Office, Thornton Hall Station; James Stott, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 7.39 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 8.45 a.m. & 6.55 p.m. Busby, 2 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office for delivery, but the railway station is the nearest for collection of telegrams

LANARK.

LANARK (W. Hanreck, a clearing in a forest) is a royal burgh, market town, the seat of a presbytery, and the chief town in the Upper ward, the head of a poorhouse combination, and a parish on the main road leading from Stirling to Carlisle, one mile above the left or east bank of the river Clyde, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway connecting the burgh with the main line at Carstairs, and affording easy communication with Edinburgh and Glasgow, and also by a direct route with Ayr on the west; it is 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-east from Glasgow, 15 south-east from Hamilton, 35 from Stirling, 47 from Ayr, and 12 north-west from Biggar, and may be considered as the centre of the Lowlands. The parish is bounded on the east and south by the river Clyde, and on the north and west by the parishes of Carstairs and Carluke. An old arched bridge, of unknown origin, spans the Mous or Moss water near its junction with the Clyde, a short distance north-west of the town, and from this point a fine view is obtained of Cartland bridge, erected in 1822, from designs by Thomas Telford F.R.S. the celebrated engineer, and Cartland Crags. The town occupies an elevated site about half a mile north-east of the Clyde; all the older streets, viz. High street, Wellgate, Castlegate, Broomgate, Bloomgate, Wyde close, radiate from a central space called the "Cross." The High street, a wide thoroughfare, extends eastward to the "Port, and is continued by St. Leonard street, which leads to Carstairs, and by Banatyne street, conducting to the railway station. Hope street branches off from Bloomgate and leads to Cleghorn. Westport is a continuation of Bloomgate and conducts to the Old and New Carluke roads. The burgh is encircled by a series of narrow lanes, called the North Vennel, the South Vennel, The Delves, Friars' or Arnold lane, Greystonebalks and others. The road from Stirling to Carlisle traverses the parish from west to east, and the Moss water, which rises in the moorlands, 8 miles distant, flows through the parish and falls into the Clyde, about a mile west of the borough; on the banks of this stream are the deep and finely wooded ravines of Cleghorn and the famous Cartland Crags. The town is lighted with gas by a limited company, and an abundant supply of excellent water is obtained from the Tinto range of hills, seven miles distant. The original charter of the burgh seems to have been granted by Alexander I. (1107-24); and in the reign of Malcolm (1153-65) it appears to have been regarded as a royal burgh, many of the ancient kings of Scotland having made Lanark their place of residence. The charter was finally confirmed by Charles I. in 1632, and the town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and 15 councillors. A sheriff court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday and Friday during the session, and small debt and debts recovery court on the days. Here are also held the meetings of the County Council for the Upper ward. Lanark, together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Airdrie, forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the

Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The landward parish is included in the South Lanarkshire parliamentary division, which also sends one member to Parliament. The old parish church, now in ruins, stands within its burying ground, on the south-east border of the town. Tradition asserts that in this church Sir William Wallace first saw Marion Braidfoot, who subsequently became his wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the ruins of the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and James VI., born at Lanark about 1580. After traversing a great portion of Europe and Asia he was tortured and committed to prison by order of the Spanish Inquisition, but eventually returned, though in a crippled condition, and settled in his native parish till his death, about 1645. The modern parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, is a plain rectangular structure of two storeys with a square projecting turret at the east end, the lower stage of which forms a porch; in the belfry are 2 bells; in a niche over the entrance is a statue of Wallace, executed by Forrest, a self-taught genius and a native of the district, and presented by him to the town. The fountain, in the Horse market, was erected by public subscription, in commemoration of Her Majesty's Jubilee in 1887. The County Buildings, in Hope street, erected in 1836 at a cost of £5,000, are of freestone, in the Classic style, and contain court-rooms and a series of offices. In the town is a live stock auction mart belonging to Messrs. Lawrie & Symington, at which important sales of Ayrshire dairy cattle and fat stock are held weekly on Monday. This is the recognised centre for the sale of black-faced sheep and lambs, the largest sales in the country being held here during the season. The fairs, still observed, are as follows:—Monday, 10th June, rough sheep; Monday, 24th June, rough sheep; Saturday, 13th July, Cattle Show; Monday and Tuesday, 5th and 6th August, lambs; Wednesday, 7th August, horses; Tuesday, 20th, black-faced, cross and cheviot lambs; Monday, 2nd September, sheep and lambs; Thursday, 10th October, sheep and lambs. Horse races are held in September on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and half east of the town. Lady Hozier's Convalescent Home was opened July 10th, 1833, by Sir William Wallace Hozier bart. of Mandislie Castle, Carluke (now Baron Newlands, of Newlands and Mandislie), who presented a donation of £10,000 towards the endowment of the institution as a memorial to Frances, his wife, who died in 1891; the home is available for 42 inmates, and is connected with the Western Infirmary, Glasgow. There was anciently a castle here, which stood on an apparently artificial mound at the foot of the Castlegate, but the site is now converted into public and private bowling greens. In the vicinity is Lanark Loch, a fine expanse of water, some 24 acres in extent, the shores of which have been embanked and planted, and a delightful promenade laid out, which is much frequented by the inhabitants. Adjoining the loch is Lanark

Moor; on the upper moor races are held; the lower moor is used as a golfing green, and as a camping ground for the Lanark militia, and also affords ample space for cricket and football. The neighbourhood presents much fine scenery, including the romantic grounds of Bonnington, Cartland Crags and the Falls of Clyde; these last are three in number, viz.: Bonnington Falls, divided into two by a rocky islet; Corra Linn, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making a descent altogether of 84 feet, and Stonebyres Falls, three miles further down stream. In the parish are traces of ancient Roman camps and of a Roman road, the famous Watling Street, and indications of lake dwellings were met with in 1898, on Hyndford farm. The Lea is the seat of Col. Sir Simon Macdonald-Lockhart bart. M.V.O.; the mansion is in the Scottish castellated style, with a round tower at each angle; in the grounds are some very fine oak and larch trees; one of the latter planted in 1730 is now 100 feet high and 18 feet in girth; here is preserved a curious stone called the "Lee Penny," which has a legendary history, and is said to have suggested to Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel, "The Tailor's" this stone, reputed to have healing virtues, was acquired from the Saracens in 1329. Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms, erected in 1827 on the site of a Franciscan monastery. Handloom weaving, formerly the general occupation, has greatly decreased, but the manufacture of wineys, skirtings &c. is carried on by two firms, and there is a brewery belonging to Messrs. Thomas Gilroy and Co.; a tannery, carried on by John Vassie, and the fancy wood-work establishment of Messrs. Mackenzie and Meikle, where a great variety of ornamental articles in wood are made. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Company Bank. The principal hotel is the "Clydesdale." Cleghorn House is the residence of William Elliot-Lockhart esq. D.L., J.P. Jerviswood House is the property of the Earl of Haddington. The Earl of Haddington A.D.C. of Yrningham House; Sir Chas. Henry A. F. Ross bart. of Bonnington and Balnagown; W. Elliot-Lockhart esq. of Cleghorn; Col. Sir Simon Macdonald-Lockhart bart. M.V.O., V.D. of Lee and Carnwath; William Lindsay Stewart esq. of Spetchley park, Worcester, J. Noble Graham esq. of Carfin; Charles Walker esq. of Brethardg Holt, Westmoreland; C. E. Edmundstone Cranston esq. Covehouse, and Crawford Esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 10,385 acres; rateable value, burgh, £17,743; landward, £24,680; total, £42,424; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 7,110; ecclesiastical parish, 3,964; of the royal burgh, 5,573; and of the parliamentary burgh, 4,579. The number of electors on the parliamentary register, in 1898, was 721. New Lanark is a village, about 1 mile south from Janark, and on the same side of the Clyde, and in the parish, Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark.

It originated in 1783-4, when Richard Arkwright and Mr. David Dale built cotton mills here, and constructed a subterranean aqueduct, about 100 yards in length, through the solid rock, by which means the waters of the Clyde were conducted to the sloping plain on which the mills and the village now stand. Robert Owen, chiefly known as a social reformer, was in his earlier years a partner in these extensive mills. The works were sold in the spring of 1881, and now belong to the Lanark Spinning Co. Acreage and rateable value included with Lanark: the population of the village was in 1881, 706, in 1891, 672.

LARKHALL is a town and quoad sacra parish, formed from Dalsert and Hamilton civil parishes, and is in the Middle ward, poor law combination and small debts court district of Hamilton, and on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, 3½ miles south-east from Hamilton, with a station on the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the Caledonian railway. The bleach works of Messrs. D.
 O. Miller & Co. Limited, in this place, give employment to many of the inhabitants.
 The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The rateable value is £55,690: the population in 1891 was 8,349 in the town and 8,845 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LEADHILLS is a village and a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parishes of Crawford and Crawfordjohn, in the Upper ward, and is on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, about 5 miles west from Elvanfoot station on the Carlstairs and Dumfries section of the Caledonian railway, 46 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 44 south from Glasgow and 15 south from Douglas. It derives its name from the lead mines hereabouts, which have produced in some years 18,000 bars, of nine stone (avoir-empois) the bar; in the year 1897, according to the "Mineral Statistics," 1,066 tons of lead ore were raised, producing 4,150 ounces of silver, also 790 tons of lead. Gold was found in the mountain sand at an early period, and in 1881 the miners of Leadhills, during their spare hours, collected a quantity weighing 1,000 grains, and presented it to the Earl of Hopetoun, lord of the manor, on the attainment of his majority. Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born here 13 Oct. 1685, and subsequently became a bookseller in Edinburgh; he died 7 Jan. 1758. In the village is a good inn, the Hopetoun Arms. A monument was erected here to Symington, a native of Leadhills, who first applied steam to navigation. Fairs used to be held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October. The population of the village in 1881 was 1,023, and in 1891, 998, and of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 1,018.

LENZIE is partly in the parish of Cadder, in the county of Lanark, and partly in the parish of Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire, will be found in the latter county.

LESMAHAGOW is a parish and village in the Upper ward of the county and in Lanark small debts court district, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway from Glasgow and Hamilton, the village, also called Abbey Green, is on the river Nethan, a tributary of the Clyde, and is 38 miles west from Edinburgh, 23 south-east from Glasgow and 6 south-west from

Lanark; the parish is 12 miles square, and bounded on the north-east by the river Clyde, south-east by the Douglas and Poodiel waters, and north-west by the Kype water; it abounds in coal, ironstone and limestone, in the working of which a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment; a line of railway, for this traffic only, passes through or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian main line at Motherwell. A new line of the Caledonian railway is now (1899) in course of construction, between Lesmahagow and Darvel, passing through Strathaven. The parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish in 1808, stands on part of the site of the priory, and has lately (1899) been internally restored, at a cost of about £3,500. The British Linen Co. Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. The principal hotels are the Abbey Green, the Commercial, the Royal, and the Masons' Arms, all of which are also posting-houses. Two hiring fairs and two others for general business are held during the year. In the month of December is one market day, known as Big Wednesday. Here was anciently a priory, founded by David I. in 1140, and dedicated to St. Machutus. The noble ruins of Craignethan, or Draphane Castle, the property of the Earl of Home, are immortalised by Sir Walter Scott in "Old Mortality," under the name of "Tilletiedlem Castle," and a room in the castle is still shown as that in which the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochleven Castle, in 1567. The Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Home A.D.C., V.D. and J. C. Hope-Vere esq. of Craigie Hall, Edinburgh, are the principal landowners. The area is 41,299 acres; assessable value, £60,953; the population in 1881 was 9,949, and in 1891, 9,752 in the civil parish and 8,423 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Coalburn is a mining village, about 4 miles south of Abbey Green, with a station on the Lesmahagow branch of the Caledonian railway.

Crossford is a village in a beautiful valley on the left bank of the river Clyde, and near its confluence with the Nethan; it is about 5 miles north-by-east from Abbey Green and 4½ north-west from Lanark. Population in 1881, 816, and in 1891, 818.

Kirkmuirhill and Blackwood are villages adjacent to each other, about 3 miles north-west from Abbey Green, on the Glasgow road, and at Blackwood is a station on the Caledonian railway. Boghead is a small village about 1½ miles distant from Kirkmuirhill; the inhabitants of which are principally employed in Dunduff Stone Quarry. Aucheneath, a mining village, is about 3 miles north from Abbey Green, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. Populations in 1891: Kirkmuirhill, 519; Aucheneath, 516; Blackwood, 373.

LOW BLANTYRE, see BLANTYRE.

MARYHILL, see GLASGOW.

NEW MONKLAND is a parish, in which is situated the burgh of Airdrie, and contains also the villages mentioned below, and is in the Middle Ward of the county and New Monkland poor combination.
 Paper making is carried on both at Moffat and Caldercruix; at the latter are calico printing works. In the district are also coal pits, stone quarries and brick yards. Mrs.
 Rankin, of Cleddans, Col. Sir David C. R.
 Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B., D.L., J.P. of Drumpeffer, and William Black esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 19,885 acres; rateable value: landward, £83,138; burghal (Airdrie), £56,429; the population in 1891 was 33,860 in the civil parish, of which 19,135 are in Airdrie burgh.
 Glenmavis is a village in New Monkland parish, 1½ miles from Airdrie.

Greengairs and Wattstown are other villages, 4½ miles north-east from Airdrie, and in an extensive coal district. Population in 1891 of Greengairs was 877, and of Wats-town, 354.

Longriggend, Roughrigg, Longrigg, Drumbreck and Avonhead are villages in this parish, 5½ miles north-east from Airdrie.
 Mining is the chief occupation of the inhabitants. The population of Longriggend in 1891 was 1,403; of Roughrigg, 470, and of Avonhead, 472.

Plains is a small village, 2½ miles east from Airdrie, with a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway. There are two forges in the neighborhood for the manufacture of shovels &c. and a short distance farther east, at Caldercruix, are extensive calico printing, and paper works, and a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway. Population in 1891 of Plains, 818, and of Caldercruix, 420.

Whiterigg and Stand are small villages in the parish of New Monkland. The population of Whiterigg in 1891 was 640.

Glenowan is a village about 5 miles east of Airdrie, and has large calico print works, which employ most of the inhabitants.
 The population in 1891 was 732.

Glenboig, a village partly in this parish and partly in the parishes of Cadder and Old Monkland, will be found under a separate heading.

OLD MONKLAND is a parish in the Middle ward and the small debts court district of Airdrie, and extends from the right bank of the Clyde to the border of New Monkland, a distance of between 7 and 8 miles, by a breadth near the Clyde of little more than 1, but afterwards expanding to nearly 4 miles. It is bounded on the north by Cadder and the barony parish of Glasgow, and on the south by Bothwell, and is rich in minerals. The village of Old Monkland and the parish church are now locally part of Coatbridge. Sir David C. B. Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B., D.L., J.P. of Drumpellier, Capt. George Frederick Russell Colt D.L., J.P. of Gartsherrie, the Rev. Sholto Douglas Campbell-Douglas M.A. of Douglas Support, and Mrs. Gould, of Bredisholm, are the principal landowners. The area of Old Monkland parish, as altered by order of the Secretary for Scotland, is 10,935 acres; rateable value, landward, £36,627; burghal (Lanarkshire part of Coatbridge), £153,684; in 1881 the population was 37,238, and in 1891, 44,615 in the civil parish and 12,898 in the ecclesiastical.

Broomhouse, in the parish of Old Monkland, is a small village, 2 miles from Baillieston and 6 from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the North British railway. There are several collieries in this neighbourhood. John Fulton Millar esq. of Greenock, and Mrs. Scott, of Blantyre, are the chief landowners. Population in 1891, 743.

Cuilhill, a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, is about a mile from Baillieston and has a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the North British railway. Bargeddie, almost adjoining it, is the nearest post office.

Carmyle is a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, on the banks of the Clyde, and about 4 miles from Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railway.

Fullarton is a small hamlet adjoining Tolcross, about 3 miles from Glasgow, and contains the large iron furnaces and coal pits of James Dunlop and Co. Limited.

Swinton and Easterhouse are both small villages in Old Monkland parish, adjoining one another, and about a mile from Baillieston. West Maryston is a little village adjacent. At Easterhouse is a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the North British railway. The population of West Maryston in 1891 was 489.

Mount Vernon is a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, about 4 miles from Glasgow, and has a church, a school, and a station on the Caledonian and North British railways.

THERWELL is a town and police burgh, new in the parish of Dalziel, as altered by order of the Secretary for Scotland, and in Middle ward, Cambusnethan peer combination and the small debt court district of Hamilton, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 2 miles north-east from Hamilton and 11 south-east from Glasgow.
 The town was constituted a police burgh in 1865, under the "General Police of Scotland Act, 1862," and is governed by a provost, four magistrates and 10 commissioners. The town is supplied with water from Coldestream and Netherton, near Carluke, and the streets are lighted with gas by a company. The Town Hall was opened in November, 1887, at a cost of about £7,000. The extensive works of Messrs. David Colville and Sons Limited and the Glasgow Iron and Steel Co. Lim.
 (each employ over 1,000 hands), the Lanarkshire Steel Co. Limited and the Motherwell and the Brandon Bridge Building Cos.
 also have works here. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, British Linen Co. Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank
 Limited and the Commercial Bank Lim.
 The population of the burgh in 1881 was 12,904, and in 1891 was 18,726, and is now (1899) about 27,000; rateable value of the burgh, £89,707.

SHOTTS is a large parish at the north-eastern extremity of the county, extending from north to south about 8 miles and east to west about 9, bounded on the north-west by the parish of New Monkland, on the west by Bothwell and Dalziel, on the south by Cambusnethan, and on the east and north by the county of Linlithgow; it is in the Middle ward, Cambusnethan poor combination and small debts court district of Airdrie and Wishaw, and has a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. The kirktown of Shotts is 3½ miles north-west of the station, 7 south-east from Airdrie and 6½ north-east from Wishaw. Fairs are held here annually, on the third Tuesday in June and the last Tuesday in November. The parish also includes the villages of Harthill, Benhar, Salsburgh, Dykehead, and part of the village of Shotts Ironworks. The coal and iron works in the parish furnish employment for the inhabitants, and include the collieries of the Coltness Iron Company. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch at Shotts, and close to the station is a good hotel. The Duke of Hamilton, Lieut.-Col. Robert King Stewart D.L., J.P. of Mordoustoun Castle, Newnains, and Col. Sir David C. R. Curriek-Buchanan bart. K.C.B., D.L., J.P. of Drumpeller House, Coatbridge, are the principal landowners.

Harthill and Benhar have been erected into a quoad sacra parish. The population in 1891 was 2,801, of Harthill only, 1,008.

Greenhill is a small village about 4 miles east from Holytown and 1 from Omoa station on the Holytown Junction and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. There is a Board school in the village, and extensive collieries in the neighbourhood. Salsburgh, "Sallysburgh," or "Saltsburgh," is a village in the parish of Shotts, 5 miles east from Holytown.

Newhouse is a hamlet 2 miles east from Holytown. Here are the works of the Linrigg Coal Co. Limited.

Shotts Ironworks, with Torbothie, form a village on the southern border of the parish, half a mile east from Shotts railway station; the village is partly in the adjoining parish of Cambusnethan. The population in 1891 was 1,141.

Tillingbairn is a hamlet near the village of Greenhill, about 4 miles east from Holytown and 2 from Omoa station on the Cleland and Mid-Calder branch of the Caledonian railway. The works of Mr. James Muir, artificial manure manufacturer, are in this hamlet.

Cleland, a large village and quoad sacra parish in this civil parish, will be found under a separate heading.

The area of the entire parish comprises 25,336 acres; rateable value, £83,286; population in 1891 was 11,957.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of burony, on the river Avon, in the parish of Avondale and in the Middle ward and poor combination and small debts court district of Hamilton, with a terminal station on a branch from Blantyre station on the Caledonian railway, 44 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 15 south-by-east from Glasgow, 28 north-east from Ayr, 21 east-by-north from Kilmarnock, 14 west from Lanark and 7½ south from Hamilton. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, by William, Earl of Douglas. The local trade is chiefly in cheese and grain, and the silk, cotton and hosiery goods manufactured here. A new branch of the Caledonian railway is now (1899) in course of construction from Leamslaw to Darvel, and passing through Strathaven. The market, which is held on Thursday, is well attended; fairs are held on the first Thursdays in January, March and April, for cattle and hiring servants; Thursday in Whitsun week, the last Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August, and (the old fair) on the 2nd of November. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. On the south side of the river Avon remains of a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles. The population in 1891 was 3,478.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. Lanarkshire added; Archibald Morton, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m. & 2.40 & 7 p.m. & Saturdays, 5.45 p.m.; dispatches, 8 a.m. & 12.20, 2.45 & 6.25 p.m.

WANDELL and LAMINGTON form a united parish, bounded on the west by the river Clyde, on the south by Crawford parish and east by Culter parish, in the Upper ward and in the small debts court district of Lanark. The village of Lamington, 6 miles south-west from Biggar, has a station on the Carstairs and Dumfries section of the Caledonian railway. The district is hilly, but fertile, and chiefly agricultural. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity here was built by the late Lord Lamington. Lamington House, at present unoccupied, is the property of Lord Lamington K.C.M.G., D.L., J.P. governor of Queensland since 1895, and the principal landowner; the estate affords about 8,000 acres for shooting, and there is excellent trout fishing on the Clyde. The mountain of Tinto, 2,335 feet, and Coniter Fell, 2,459 feet above sea level, are the loftiest eminences in this romantic neighbourhood. Acreage, 12,820; rateable value, £5,947; population in 1881, 316, and in 1891, 305.

Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Lamington (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed R.S.O. Lanarkshire); Mrs. Elizabeth Forrest, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 6 a.m.; dispatches, 4.15 & 7.5 p.m. Telegraph office at the railway sta

WILSONTOWN, see CARNWATH.

WISHAW.

WISHAW is a quoad sacra parish, town and police burgh, in the Middle ward of Lanarkshire and civil parish of Cambusnethan, and Dalziel, poor combination of Cambusnethan, and is 15 miles southeast from Glasgow and 32 west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway. It was made a burgh under the Scotch Police Act of 1850, and on the adoption of the Act of 1862, modifications took place, but under the Act of 1892 the burgh is now governed by a provost, three bailies and seven commissioners, and the boundaries having been extended, now include within their limits the village of Cambusnethan. The town, pleasantly situated on the face of a hill, comprises several spacious streets. The parish church of Cambusnethan, on Kirk Brae, is a modern building with a square tower. Wishaw church (quoad sacra), in Main street, is a large edifice, and has a tower with a spire and a clock. A police court is held at the County buildings as occasion requires, and a sheriff's small debt court every three weeks. There are branches here of the British Linen Company's Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and Mercantile Bank of Scotland. The Wishaw Iron and Steel Works, two iron foundries, the malleable iron works of Messrs. John Williams and Co. and the Clydesdale Distillery Co. Limited, afford employment to a large number of work-people. Large cattle sales are held every Tuesday and Thursday by Messrs. J. and J. Marshall, auctioneers, Carluke. Two newspapers, the "Wishaw Press," published every Saturday, and the "Wishaw Herald," published every Friday. In 1881 the burgh of Wishaw had a population of 13,112, and in 1891, 15,252, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 11,187; rateable value of the burgh, £49,245.

Craigneuk is a small village in Dalziel parish, situated between Motherwell and Wishaw. Here are the works of the Etna Iron and Steel Co.

WISTON and ROBERTON form a united parish, bounded by the river Clyde, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. Wiston is on the Garf water, a tributary of the Clyde, 1½ miles north-west from Lamington station on the Carstairs and Dumfries section of the Caledonian railway, and 7 miles south-west from Biggar, which is the nearest market town. Wiston Lodge, the property of Jabez Edward Johnson-Ferguson esq. M.P., J.P. of Springkell, Ecclefechan, is at present occupied by Mrs. McLaren, and Hardington House is the residence of Thomas Balmain esq. The Earl of Home A.D.C., V.D. Lord Lamington K.C.M.G. and J. E. Johnson-Ferguson esq. M.P., are the principal landowners. Acreage, 13,140; rateable value, £7,475; population in 1881, 562, and in 1891, 497. Roberton is on the Roberton brook, another tributary of the Clyde, 3 miles south-west from Lamington railway station.

Post Office, Wiston; Miss Marion Hamilton, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 9 a.m.; dispatch, 1.50 p.m. Letters received through Biggar. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Lamington is the nearest money order office & Lamington station the nearest telegraph office, 2 miles distant

Post Office, Robertson; Mrs. Margaret Buchanan, sub-postmistress. Delivery 8 a.m.; dispatch, 2.50 p.m. Letters through Abington R.S.O. Lanarkshire. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Abington, 4 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

LINLITHGOWSHIRE.

THE ancient division of West Lothian, is a small county of a pentagonal shape, lying south of the inner portion of the Firth of Forth, and bounded on the west by Stirling, south-west by Lanark, and south-east and east by Edinburghshire; its extent along the Firth coast is 16 miles, and from north to south about 15. Its area comprises 77,310 acres; its population in 1891 comprised 27,946 males and 24,862 females, total, 52,808, and in 1881 the total was 43,510; the inhabited houses were 10,173 in 1891, and 8,352 in 1881. It ranks in point of size as the thirty-first, and in population as the seventeenth of Scotch counties.

Early History.—The Gadeni are the first who are mentioned as holding this district, and they were subdued by the Romans, whose great bulwark, "Grimmas Dyke," ended at Carriden, in this county, and several forts can still be traced in other parts of the county; it suffered in common with other parts of Lothian from invasions by Norwegians, and by the successes of the Northumbrian Earls, passing at length in 1018 under the Scottish rule. This county was probably separated into the sheriffdom in the reign of David I. It was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so it continued until the time of James IV. (1488-1513). No other district appears to have been so divided into petty baronies, baileries, regalities and other independent jurisdictions, nor so domineered over by a number of peers inimical to peace and regardless of justice. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion (1165).

Soil, Surface, &c.—This county has an irregular surface, but the hills are only of moderate elevation; the highest being found about the middle of the county. Many places present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the parish of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of basaltic rocks, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. The hills are generally well clothed with wood; about one-third of the county is either old pasture or laid down with artificial grasses; and there are more than four-fifths of the shire inclosed. Until the year 1723, there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district. Soon after this period, John, Earl of Stair, in conjunction with Charles, first Earl of Hopetoun, introduced new modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, turnip, and carrot by the plough. The highest elevations are Cairnnapie, 1,000 feet above sea level; Riccarton, 800; Caithlaw, 940; and Drumbowie, 705.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals, &c.—Rather more than one-fourth of the land is under corn and green crops, and one-ninth under hay, while only one-tenth is under heath land and wood. The chief crops, as shewn by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," 1898, are, oats, 9,740 acres; barley, 3,035; wheat, 1,527; beans, 341; turnips, 3,885; potatoes, 1,636; total corn crops, 14,854; green crops, 5,906 acres; hay, 8,114 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses not for hay, 8,163 acres, and permanent pasture, 21,762 acres; total area of land and water being 77,310 acres; mountain and heath, 2,574 acres; woods, 20,542; plantations, 957. The live stock in 1898 comprised: horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 1,673; unbroken horses, 557; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 4,884; other cattle, 7,985; ewes kept for breeding, 7,255; other sheep, 19,852; sows kept for breeding, 435; other pigs, 1,526. Linlithgowshire contains a considerable quantity of minerals. Coal abounds throughout, limestone is prevalent, in some parts ironstone is also found, and the whole surface rests on a bed of sandstone of the finest quality, and there is fire clay and brick clay and basalt. This is the richest district in Scotland for the production of shale, from which paraffin oil is extracted, and for the manufacture of which very extensive works are in operation in the neighbourhood of Bathgate, Linlithgow, Uphall and Whitburn. Besides this branch of trade, there are also large iron and steel foundries, paper mills, distilleries, chemical works, and brick, tile and earthenware manufactories. The production of coal in 1897 was 896,942 tons; valued at £257,871; basalt, 13,427 tons; fire clay, 22,576 tons, value £3,386; brick clay, 29,637 tons, value £740; iron ore, 40,798 tons, value, £15,299; oil shale, 1,378,413 tons (the largest production in Great Britain); limestone, 3,552 tons; sandstone, 333,740 tons; gravel and sand, 8,393 tons.

Rivers and Railways.—The only river of consequence is the Almond, or Amond, but there are a number of considerable rivulets and burns. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanarkshire, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, falls into the sea at Cramond; at its mouth it assumes the appearance of a small loch or arm of the sea, running up the bottom of a woody ravine; but it is only navigable for a very short distance, and then only for boats and very small sloops. Linlithgow Loch, north of the town, is the only considerable sheet of water in the county. The Union canal runs across the northern portion of the county. The railways belong to the North British Co. and their lines are one coming from Falkirk, entering the county about 2 miles west of Linlithgow town, and leaving it again near Hough; another branch from Ratho enters the county a little south of Hough, runs to Uphall, whence a line goes to East Calder; the main branch proceeds to Bathgate, from which three lines diverge, one south to West Foulshiels, where it again divides, going east to West Calder and west to Crofthead &c.; the second line from Bathgate runs west to Armadale and the third north-west to Blackston Junction, where it joins the line from Bo'ness to Slamannan. Besides these railways there is the line to Queensferry for the Forth Bridge, which crosses the north-east angle of the county.

Divisions, Representations, &c.—This county comprises 14 civil parishes and parts of two others, and 14 ecclesiastical parishes with parts of two others, all of which are included in the Presbytery of Linlithgow; it contains two royal burghs, namely, Linlithgow and Queensferry; the next largest town is Bathgate. Its seaport is Bo'ness, and there are a number of thriving villages. The burghs of Linlithgow, Hamilton, Lanark, Airdrie and Falkirk, in conjunction, send one representative to the Imperial Parliament, and the shire at large another. The parliamentary constituency for 1898 was 8,153. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £367,133.

ABERCORN is a parish, in the northern part of the county, on the south bank of the river Forth, at the point where the Haugh brook flows into that river, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow, and contains the villages of Newton & Philipstoun. This place has afforded the title of baron (1603), earl (1606), marquess (1790) and duke (1868), to the Hamilton family. Hopetoun House is the seat of the Right Hon. the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G. P.C. The area of the parish is 4,500 acres; rateable value, £13,167; the population in 1881 was 850, and in 1891, 863.

Newton is a village on the east side of the parish, about 2½ miles from Queensferry.

Philipstoun is a village on the west of the parish, with a station, about 1 mile south, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 4 miles east from Linlithgow. In the village is a large shale mine for the extraction of oil and other products, which gives employment to most of the inhabitants. The United Presbyterian church at Wester Pardovan, close to the village, is locally in the parish of Linlithgow. The nearest school for this village is at Bridgend, 1 mile distant. The population in 1891 was 560.

ARMADALE is a quoad sacra parish, town, and police burgh, entirely within the civil parish of Bathgate, 2 miles west from Bathgate, 20 miles west from Edinburgh, with a station, a mile from the town, on Bathgate and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 22 miles east from Glasgow, and 7½ south from Linlithgow. It was constituted a police burgh under the provisions of the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners, and is lighted with gas by a limited company. In the vicinity are extensive coalfields and ironstone quarries; several brick and tile and fire-brick manufactories, shale works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products and large steel works. In the town is a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Lim. Sir William Honyman bart. one of the lords of the Court of Session at the beginning of the present century, took the title of Lord Armadale from this place. The Rev. Sir William Macdonald Honyman bart. M.A. of Torbanehill; Thomas M. Durham esq. J.P. of Boghead; the trustees of the late Sir William Baillie bart. of Polkemmet (d. 1890) and Capt. Thomas Hope J.P. of Bridgecastle, are the principal landowners. Bathville is a thriving suburb of the burgh. The soil is of strong clay, and its products principally oats and grass for grazing purposes, and the surface is flat and waving. The rateable value is £6,207; the population of the burgh in 1891 was 3,190, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 4,557.

BATHGATE.

BATHGATE is a market town, police burgh and parish, on the middle road betwix Edinburgh and Glasgow, with stations on the Bathgate branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow and Monklands sections of the North British railway, in Linlithgow poor combination, 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 24 east from Glasgow, 14 east from Airdrie and 7 south from Linlithgow. The Conston water, a tributary of the river Clyde, flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the west by the Barbauchlaw brook. The town occupies a pleasant site near the southern base of a great ridge of hills extending across the county, and sheltering the town on the north and east, and at the same time it has a fine southern aspect, possessing several good streets, Hopetoun, Engine, Mid and Jarvey streets being the principal thoroughfares; it is lighted with gas from works the property of a local company, and abundantly supplied with water of excellent quality from works erected at a cost of £6,000. Bathgate was made a burgh of barony by Charles II. in 1661, and created a free and independent burgh of barony by Act of Parliament in 1824; subsequently the burgh adopted Provost Lindsay's Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, two bailies and twelve commissioners. A small debt court is held in the burgh once a quarter. The old parish church, erected about 1737, was taken down in 1882. The present church, erected on the same site at a cost of upwards of £8,000, and opened in 1884, is a handsome edifice of stone, chiefly in the Norman style, and has a square tower at the south-west angle, rising to a height of 108 feet and ornamented with crocketed pinnacles. The tower contains a bell and an illuminated clock, the gifts of John Waddell esq. of Inch, and ex-provost of the burgh, Bathgate, the estimated cost of which was over £250; a gallery is carried round three sides of the church, and the east gable is relieved by a semi-circular apse with five memorial stained windows. The church affords about 1,100 sittings, and adjoining are vestries and a hall. The Evangelical Union church, in Marjoribanks street, rebuilt on the old site in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £2,200, is an edifice in the Early English style from designs by Mr. J. Graham Fairley, architect, of Edinburgh. The United Presbyterian church, erected in 1894-5, and opened in October, 1895, at an estimated cost of £3,700, is an edifice in a plain Gothic style, and has a tower of three stages with octagonal breach spire, and containing one bell, weighing nearly a ton; various gifts have been made to the church, including a communion service and font basin of solid silver. The Bathgate Academy, which stands on a commanding and healthy site in the immediate vicinity of the town, was endowed by a bequest of the late John Newland, of Kingston, Jamaica, a native of this town, with a sum of between £16,000 and £17,000; the building is an elegant and extensive structure, comprising seven large class-rooms, library, trustees' room and a janitor's house. It is now under Government inspection, and is managed by a body of trustees, one of whom represents the lord of the manor and another is appointed by the Commissioners. The neighbouring hills abound with limestone quarries yielding fine specimens of fossil remains. Paraffin oil and candles are manufactured here from the Torbanehill shale, which is largely found in the county, and Young's Paraffin Light & Mineral Oil Co. Limited has extensive works in the vicinity. At Westfield, about two and a half miles distant, is an extensive mill of the Westfield Paper Co. Limited. The weaving of goods for the Glasgow manufacturers, at one time very active, is now carried on only to a very limited extent. In the town is an iron foundry, two spade and shovel works and a large distillery, and in the district are many large collieries, and coal and ironstone &c. are much worked in the immediate neighbourhood. On the north border of the parish are ancient silver mines worked in the early part of the 17th century, and a few years ago re-opened. The market day is Tuesday, when a large supply of grain of all kinds is brought from the surrounding country to the Corn Exchange, in Jarvey street. A cattle auction is also held at the mart in Engine street on market day. The authorities of the burgh are entitled by Act of Parliament to hold seven annual fairs—namely, on the third Wednesdays in April, July and August, on the first Wednesdays after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (o. s.), and the fourth Wednesdays in June and October; the principal fairs are those held at Whitsuntide and Martinmas, which are well attended by cattle dealers. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The "West Lothian Courier" is published here every Saturday. The following eminent men were born in the parish—Dr. John Fleming, professor of natural science, Aberdeen; Dr. John Reid, professor of anatomy, St. Andrews, and Sir James Young Simpson bart. M.D. the discoverer, in 1847, of the anaesthetical properties of chloroform; he was born here 7th June, 1811, and died at Edinburgh 6th May, 1870. Boghead is the residence of Thomas Maxwell Durham esq. J.P. The principal landowners are the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C.; Thomas M. Durham esq. J.P. of Boghead and Foulshields; the trustees of the late Sir Wm. Baillie bart. of Polkemmet (d. 1890); Major James Henry Cowan; Geo. Readman esq. and Alexander Russell esq. of Moss Side. The land is fairly productive, while the surface is largely undulating. The parish of Bathgate has an area of 10,876 acres; rateable value of the laudward part of the parish (excluding the burgh of Armadale), £30,751; the burgh of Bathgate, £15,688; in 1881 the civil parish contained a population of 9,450, and in 1891, 11,359, of which the town possessed 5,331; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 7,557.

Bridgend is a small village adjoining the burgh of Bathgate. The population in 1891 was 435.

Woodend, a small colliery village, 3½ miles distant.

Durhamtown is also a mining village in this parish. The population in 1891 was 368.

BATHVILLE, see ARMADALE.

BLACKBURN is a small village, on the river Almond and the road from Bathgate to West Calder, in the parishes of Livingstone and Whitburn, and is 1½ miles east from East Whitburn station on the Morning-side section of the North British system, and 3 south from Bathgate. Adjacent to the village are leek stone quarries, the stone from which is specially used in the construction of ovens, being capable of bearing any amount of heat, but it is unsuitable for building purposes. There are also works for the manufacture of mill-board. The population in 1891 was 814.

BORROWSTOUNNESS (or, as it is now generally pronounced, Bo'ness) is a parish, seaport town and police burgh, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow. By a Local Government Board Order, dated 8th February, 1895, under section 51 of the Local Government (Scotland) Acts of 1889 and 1894, and which came into operation 15th May, 1895, the parish is now, for civil purposes, united to the parish of Carriden and also includes the villages of Borrowstoun and Newtown. The burgh has also been extended from the same date and now includes on the east side the suburban villages of Grangepens, Cowdenhill and Bridgeness, and on the west side the mining village of Kinnell. The town is built on low ground on the south shore of the Firth of Forth and is 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 9 west from South Queensferry, 32 north from Linlithgow and 8 east-by-north from Balfark, and has a terminal station on the Monkland section of the North British railway. A tract of flat but rich alluvial land called the "Carse of Kinnell" lies to the north-west, and the beach from thence eastward is low ground lying between a high bank landward, and a great expanse of muddy silt extending at ebb tide to the sea; all the rest of the parish declines gradually from Irongath Hill to the west and north. The soil is deep loam and is well cultivated. The town consists principally of two streets, running eastward and terminating in one of nearly the same length, and the greater portion of the houses appear to be of ancient date. It is lighted with gas, and governed by a provost, two bailies and 12 councillors. Between 1750 and 1780 Bo'ness was one of the most thriving towns on the east coast, and ranked as the third port in Scotland; but on the construction of the Forth and Clyde canal, Grange-mouth, at the east end of the canal, became the chief seat of commerce, and in 1810 was erected into a separate port, with a custom house. In 1876, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, the Harbour Commissioners here constructed a new pier, and also a wet dock, 7½ acres in extent, at a cost of £200,000, finished towards the end of 1881. The quays have also been rebuilt and the area extended from 24 to 54 acres, and the depth of water largely increased. The extent of the quays in the dock is 2,400 feet, and in the harbour 1,900 feet.

of worship is at Carriden, 3 miles distant. Blackness Castle, situated on the banks of the Forth, close to the village, was, during the reign of James VI. the principal state prison in Scotland, and as such received within its gloomy walls many distinguished persons; one of the most remarkable of its prisoners was James (Stewart) 4th Lord Ochiltree, who, for accusing the Marquis of Hamilton of aspiring to the Scottish crown, was here confined from 1631 for upwards of twenty years, during nearly the whole reign of Charles I. The fortress was subsequently converted into barracks, and has since been altered, repaired and fitted up as a powder magazine or depot, with barracks attached for a military guard in charge of the magazine, stores and premises.

BO'NESS AND CARRIDEN.

The harbour has a depth of water on the sill of 22 feet at spring tides and 18 feet at neaps, from which 2 feet has to be deducted for silt in the channel. The dock and attached works are of the most substantial character, and have been furnished throughout with hydraulic machinery of the latest description, and the lines of railways on the quays are in direct communication with the North British Railway Company's system, thus affording access to and from all parts of the United Kingdom. The hydraulic appliances consist of three coal-shipping hoists, each capable of shipping 2,000 tons of coal per day of 24 hours, or 6,000 tons by all the hoists, six portable cranes, each capable of lifting two tons, three of which can at one time be applied to the discharge of the same vessel, capstans for hauling ships into and out of the dock, and wagon capstans for working the movable traffic on the quays of the dock &c. Large sheds, in which are fitted hydraulic cranes for lifting goods, are also provided for the storage of cargoes. The trade of the town and port consists chiefly in the importation of timber, pitwood for mining purposes, esparto grass, grain, iron ore, phosphate &c., and the exporting of coal, iron and general goods. Steamers run direct once a week between Bo'ness and London, and ample staidage for coal wagons, worked by self-acting gradients, has been provided to facilitate in every possible way the quick shipment of cargo and bunker coal at the hoists. The number of vessels that entered the port in the general coasting trade was 506, tonnage, 106,985; cleared, 520, of 88,706 tons. In the British trade, 502 entered, 133,019 tons; cleared, 595, of 193,148 tons; foreign, entered, 553, of 133,666 tons; cleared, 574, of 190,528 tons. Amongst the chief industrial works of the burgh and district are two large collieries, freestone and whinstone quarries, an extensive distillery, earthenware manufactories, chemical manure works and several iron foundries. The Established church is a good building with a tower and spire, erected in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £1,000. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The "Bo'ness Journal" is published here every Friday, price 1d. Kinnell House is the property of the Duke of Hamilton, who is superior of the burgh and parish; it is now (1899) unoccupied. Here the celebrated James Watt realised some of his earliest improvements in the steam engine. The Roman wall of Antoninus, commonly called "Graham's, or Grim's, Dyke," but chiefly constructed by the Pro-prefect Lullius Urbicus, A.D. 139-40, passes through the parish; and within a short distance of the town on the south-east, the traces of a Roman camp are still visible. The parish of Bo'ness and Carriden have an area of 5,551 acres; rateable value of the burgh: £33,785; landward, £12,716; population of the burgh in 1895, 7,650, and landward, 505.

 Carriden, now a joint parish with Borrowstounness for civil purposes, adjoins it on the east, and is 7 miles west from South Queensferry and 4 north from Linlithgow, on the south bank of the Firth of Forth. The nearest railway station is at Borrowstounness. The soil is light and produces plentiful crops; the surface of the land is very unequal, rising rapidly from the shore and declining again to the south; it comprises part of the Irongath or Glour-er-em hills, and has there an extreme altitude of 519 feet above the sea level; the land is entirely arable and enclosed. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T. P.C. the Earl of Hope-toun G.C.M.G., P.C. James Hope Lloyd-Verney, of Carriden; Henry M. Cadell Esq. J.P. and the Duke of Hamilton are the principal landowners. Population landward in 1895, 936; the other portion of the parish is in the burgh of Bo'ness; area of the parish, 2,705 acres; rateable value with Borrowstounness.

Borrowstoun is a small hamlet half a mile from the burgh.

Bridgeness is a suburb of the burgh, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and has a small harbour used by vessels employed in the coal trade &c. connected with the colliery of the Bridgeness Coal Co. There is an Established church here.

Cowdenhill is a suburb of the burgh. Grangepens is a suburb of the burgh, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and has a Mission church in connection with the Established church at Bridgeness, a public school and an infants' school.

Kinnell is a mining village and a suburb of the burgh. The barony of Kinnell is one of the most ancient possessions of the house of Douglas-Hamilton, Dukes of Hamilton and Brandon.

Muirhouses is a small hamlet in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden. Newtown is a mining village adjacent to the burgh.

BRIDGEND, see BATHGATE.

BRIDGENESS, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

BROXBURN is a small town in the parish of Uphall, and in the small debts court district of Linlithgow; the town stands on the Brox brook, a tributary of the Almond, and the road from Bathgate to Edinburgh, and is 1 mile north from Drumshoreland station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, 11 west from Edinburgh, 7 east from Bathgate, and 7 south-east from Linlithgow. The western extremity of the place is crossed by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal. The Public Hall was erected, together with billiard and reading rooms, in 1873, at a cost of £1,300, and will seat 500 persons. There is a branch here of the British Linen Co. Bank. In the neighbourhood are the works of the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited, which afford employment to the greater part of the inhabitants. The population in 1891 was 5,898; rateable value returned with the parish.

CRAIGIE, see DALMENY.

CRAMOND (NOW IN DALMENY PARISH), see EDINBURGHSHIRE.

CROFTHEAD, see WHITBURN.

DALMENY is a parish and small village; the parish consists of a landward portion and a burghal portion, the latter embracing the burgh of Queensferry, which see. Its length from east to west is about 6½ miles, and its breadth 3½ miles, and is on the shore of the Firth of Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1839" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 9 and 122, that part of Cramond in this county has been added to Dalmeny. By the same act part of Dalmeny was annexed to Ecclesmachan and part transferred to Kirkliston parish. The village has a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and is about a mile from Queensferry and about 19 west from Linlithgow. This place gives the title of baron to the Primrose family, Earls of Rosebery. The parish church is an ancient structure, built probably about 1154, in the late Norman style; before the Reformation the patronage belonged to the Abbot and Convent of Jedburgh, but from 1545 it was attached to the barony of Barnbougle, and since 1712 the right has been exercised by the Earls of Rosebery. A cemetery was provided by the parish council in 1898 for this place and South Queensferry, at a cost of £2,000. Here are the works of the Dalmeny Oil Co. Limited, which give employment to a large number of hands. Nearly the whole of the parish is well cultivated and enclosed, and contains several mansions, amongst which are Dalmeny House, the seat of the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. surrounded by an extensive and beautiful park. The Earl of Rosebery, James Russel esq. and J. C. Hope-Vere esq. are the principal landowners. It has an area of 6,002 acres, as altered under the Secretary of Scotland's Order, and in 1881 contained a population of 1,660, and in 1891, 2,112, of which 768 are in Queensferry; rateable value, excluding Queensferry, £47,643. The small hamlet of Craigie is in the parish.

ECCLESMACHAN is a village, about 1½ miles north from Uphall station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, and 5 miles south-east from Linlithgow. The parish, which is in the small debts court district of Linlithgow, is 4 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and is watered by the Brox and Bneux brooks, tributaries of the Almond. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 108 and 122, portions of Dalmeny and Linlithgow parishes have been added to Ecclesmachan.

Robert Liston F.R.S. the eminent surgeon, was born here 28 Oct. 1794, his father then being parish minister; he died 7 Dec. 1847. Near the church is a weak sulphureous spring, called the "Bunion Well." The Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C.; Peter Thomson esq. of Binny, the trustees of the late Wm. Thomson, of Craighinning, and Edinburgh Parish Council, are the principal landowners. The surface of the soil is flat and sandy. The land is under tillage, with a fair sprinkling of wood. Freestone and sandstone are plentiful in the parish. The area of the parish is 2,647 acres; rateable value, £8,552; the population in 1881 was 278, and in 1891, 506.

There is no post office in the village, but a post messenger calls at 9.30 a.m. & clears letter box at 1 p.m. Letters should be addressed Uphall S.O. Linlithgowshire

KINGSCAVIL is a small village, in the parish of Linlithgow, on the road from that place to Edinburgh, and in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, 15 miles west from Edinburgh, 10 east from Falkirk, and about 1 1/2 miles east from Linlithgow station on the North British railway. The district is celebrated for the shale stone, from which oil and other products are extracted, and there are two large mineral oil works, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. The Established Mission church here is a temporary structure of iron. Rateable value, £725; population in 1891, 708.

Post Office; Miss Marion Brock, sub-postmistress. Deliveries by postman from Linlithgow; dispatches, 11.45 a.m. & 6.45 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Linlithgow, 2 miles distant

KINNEIL, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

KIRKLISTON is a parish and village partly in Edinburghshire, but chiefly in Linlithgowshire, and in Linlithgow poor combination; the village, anciently called Temple-Liston, from the fact that the Knights-Templars formerly had an establishment here, is situated on the left bank of the Almond, on the road from Edinburgh to Polkirk, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Dalmeny branch of the North British railway, 3 miles west from Edinburgh. The Niddry burn, in the northern part, and Brox brook in the southern part of the parish, both tributaries of the Almond, join that river in this parish. The village is well built, the principal industry being shale mining, but there is also a large distillery. The land is generally rich, well cultivated, and produces excellent crops. Here Lord Stair first introduced the culture of cabbage in the open fields. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1859" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 83 and 122, a part of Dalmeny parish was added to Kirkliston. The parish church is an ancient structure, originally erected in the Norman period, and retains a fine doorway in that style; within the church is the mortuary vault of the noble family of Dalrymple, Viscounts and Earls of Stair, and here was buried Elizabeth (Dundas), wife of John, 1st Earl of Stair, and the "Lady Ashton" of Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." The church affords 700 sittings. The "Catstane," a remarkable monument of antiquity, within a field which stands on Westbrigg farm, on the east bank of the river Almond, rises 4 1/2 feet above the ground, and is about 1 1/2 feet in circumference; it bears a much worn inscription as yet undeciphered. Newliston, near the seat of Thomas Alexander Hog esq. J.P. was once the property and favourite residence of the distinguished soldier, Field-Marshal John, 2nd Earl of Stair K.T. who fought at Oudenarde and Dettingen, but the estate was sold by John, the 6th Earl, who died in 1789; the mansion was built in 1794 from the designs of William Adam, and the plantations in its grounds are said to have been arranged so as to represent the disposition of the British army on the eve of the battle of Dettingen, fought 16 June, 1743. Carlrowie Castle is the residence of Thomas Hutchison esq. and Clifton Hall, of John D. Bell esq. The Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., Sir James Ramsay Gibson Maitland bart. J.P. of Bannockburn, T. A. Hog esq. J.P. and James Russell esq. of Dundas, are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 9,506 acres; rateable value, including minerals and railways, £25,169; the population in 1881 was 2,580, and in 1891, 3,777.

Niddry is a hamlet in this parish, 1/2 mile from Winchburgh, on the road to Kirkliston. Letters received through Winchburgh S.O. This place, since 1814, has given the title of baron to the Hope family, Earls of Hopetoun.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Kirkliston (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Linlithgowshire added); Miss Agnes Henderson, sub-postmistress. Deliveries, 8.15 a.m. & 6.15 p.m.; dispatches, 10.15 a.m. 1.55 & 6.37 p.m. (Saturday, 2.20 p.m.)

LINLITHGOW.

LINLITHGOW (popularly called Lithgow) is a county town, a parish, royal burgh, and the head of a poor combination, small debts court district and presbytery, on the northern border of the county. The parish is bounded on the west by the river Avon, which separates it from Stirlingshire, and falls into the Firth of Forth near Borrowstonness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), houndary order 108, a portion of Linlithgow parish has been annexed to that of Ecclesmachan. The town, situated on the banks of a fine pool, or "linn," from which in part it derives its name, consists chiefly of a single street which runs east and west along the south edge of the lake, and is nearly a mile in length. It has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and is 16 miles west from Edinburgh, 31 east-by-north from Glasgow, 8 east from Falkirk and 3½ south from Bo'ness. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, three magistrates, or bailies, and fifteen councillors, and together with Laarak, Hamilton, Airdrie and Falkirk it forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The Union (Edinburgh and Glasgow) canal, which terminates at Falkirk, where it is joined by the Forth and Clyde Navigation, completed in 1790, passes through the town and parish, and is carried across the Avon on a fine aqueduct of twelve arches. The local industries comprise papermaking, tanning, currying and boot making; tanning and currying are carried on by several large establishments, the principal of which belongs to Messrs. T. Nimmo & Co. There is also close to the town a distillery, soap works and two paper mills, belonging respectively to Messrs. Thomas Chalmers & Sons and Messrs. J. Lovell & Son. In the vicinity are several stone quarries, and within 3 miles there are two large shale mines, and works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products. The Town House, an elegant structure, erected in 1688, was partially destroyed by fire in 1847, but immediately repaired; it contains a council chamber and sheriff court room, and a large hall, tastefully decorated, which is used for public meetings. To the north of this stands the County Hall, a handsome and convenient building, in which hang full-length portraits of General Sir John Hope K.C.B., 1st Baron Nidry, and subsequently 4th Earl of Hopetoun (d. 27th August, 1823), of his brother General Sir Alexander Hope G.C.B., M.P. (d. 19th May, 1837), and of John Alexander, late Earl of Rosebery (d. 2nd April, 1873). The Court House, on the south side of the street, contains offices for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal and chief constable; besides a spacious court room, small court room, witness and jury rooms, and a hall for the procurators of the court. A court is held every Tuesday for criminal cases, and on Friday for civil and small debts cases. The Victoria Hall, in High street, the foundation stone of which was laid, with masonic honours, December 31st, 1887, is a building in the Scottish baronial style, and was erected at a total cost of about £4,000; it has a frontage of 56 feet, and a depth from front to back of about 170 feet, and comprises ante-rooms, cloak rooms &c. and a hall seating about 800 persons. The Combination Poor House at St. Magdalene's stands on rising ground, about a quarter of a mile from the town, was erected in 1854, at a cost of £9,000, defrayed by the various parishes in proportion to the number of shares each has in the establishment. The Cross Well, which stands immediately opposite to the Town House, is a fountain, completed on the 4th of June, 1807, in imitation of the ancient Cross Well. It is hexagonal in form, on a graduated base, the water descending from the top, which is surmounted by a unicorn holding a shield. The stream falls into a basin, from whence it is spouted into a larger one through the mouths of six grotesque figures, whence it again issues through the jaws of other heads into the lower basin, which is surrounded by statues. The work, executed in 1807, is said to have been all hewn by Robert Grey, a one-handed stonemason, and there is an inscription on one side. There are also to the town several other fountains of similar formation.

The church of St. Michael stands close to the south front of the palace, and occupies part of its outer courtyard, is an edifice in the Gothic style, consisting of apsidal choir, nave, transepts, continuous aisles, vestries and a massive square western tower, which till the beginning of the present century was surmounted by a crown, something in the style of St. Giles's, Edinburgh; it has now a heavy parapet and pinnacles, and contains a fine peal of bells, one of which, re-cast in 1468, is named "Meg Duncan." In 1812 the interior was divided by a partition reaching across the nave at its junction with the transept, and galleries fitted up in the chancel; the whole has now been removed, and the vestry re-erected on the north side of the chancel; the cost of the whole work is estimated at from £4,000 to £5,000, towards which the Baird Trust has made a grant of £1,000, and the late Capt. Urquhart, of Veltore, Linlithgow, bequeathed a legacy of £500. The central window of the apse is filled with stained glass as a memorial to the late Sir Charles Wylie Thomson kt. LL.D., F.R.S. director in 1873-6 of the Challenger Deep Sea Dredging Expedition, who died at Bonyde, 10th March, 1882; there is another memorial window to the late Mr. Robert E. Glen, formerly town clerk, who died to his sister, and others have also been added to Adam Dawson esq. Mr. J. Miller Richards, of Clarendon, Mr. John Ferguson, and Esther Ferguson, daughter of the present minister. The font, presented in 1896 by the late Mr. William Gilkison, banker, of Linlithgow, and designed by Mr. John Honeyman, architect, of Glasgow, is of stone and consists of an octagonal panelled basin, ornamented with quatrefoils on a pedestal relieved with niches and crocketed pinnacles, the whole standing on a wide octagonal base of one step. The south end of the transept (called St. Catherine's aisle) is the spot where the Scotch nobles are said to have attempted, by means of a spectral apparition, to terrify James IV. from persisting in his invasion of England in 1513, an expedition which ended in his defeat and death at Flodden Field, September 9th in that year. In the vestry some interesting relics of the church are still preserved. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Co. Bank. The weekly market for grain on Friday has been practically extinguished since the establishment of a weekly auction mart on Mondays. Fairs are held on the Friday after the second Tuesday in January, February 25th, the third Friday in April, the second Tuesday in June, Aug. 2nd and the first Friday in Nov.

The Royal palace of Linlithgow, now only a majestic ruin, stands, together with the church of St. Michael, on a terraced promontory jutting out into the linn, and occupies the site of an earlier structure, demolished by order of Robert the Bruce, but rebuilt by Edward I. and in the new fortress, Robert II. was elected King of Scotland in 1371; of this building three round towers on the east side still exist, and have been used as abutments for supporting the massive east wall of the palace. In 1410 the palace and castle were seriously damaged by fire, but were again rebuilt or repaired, and here, 10th April, 1512, James V. is said to have been born; his daughter Mary, afterwards Queen of Scots, was also born in the palace, 8th December, 1542, in a room on the west side. The palace, as now standing, is a quadrangular building, enclosing a spacious open courtyard, about 90 feet square, with a turret staircase at each angle; the latest portion is the north side, erected by James VI. (James I. of England) about 1618, after his visit in the previous year; the original entrance was on the east side, but the palace is now approached through a turreted gatehouse adjoining the western tower of St. Michael's church, and opening to the spacious outer courtyard on the south side of the palace, which is entered by a porch, and includes a hall, chapel and ante-rooms; the great hall, on the east side, is about 100 feet long and 25 feet wide; on the west side is Queen Mary's room, and another apartment at the north-west angle is called by the name of James III. who is said to have taken refuge here during the civil disturbances of his reign. The final ruin of the palace was accomplished by the dragoons of General Henry Hawley, who were quartered here during the rebellion of 1745; in spite of the remonstrances of the custodians of the palace, the soldiery persisted in maintaining enormous fires, and on the night of 31st January, 1746, a conflagration broke out which destroyed everything save the walls. In the centre of the palace quadrangle are the shattered remains of a beautiful fountain, exquisitely and elaborately carved by Italian artists, brought over by one of the Stuarts. A restored facsimile of this fountain made under the direction of the late Mr. Matheson, of Her Majesty's Board of Works, now adorns the west front of Holyrood House. The fountain was supplied with water from the estate of Prestoo, about a mile distant, and the pipe leading to it have been discovered on the Carmelite Friars' lands on the south side of the town. Sir Walter Scott, in "Marmion," has vividly depicted the bustle and gaiety of the court when at Linlithgow. A miniature jewelled spinning wheel, formerly belonging to Mary of Lorraine, Queen of James V. and brought with other articles from the palace, is now the property of W. Murray Threipland esq. Her Majesty Queen Victoria paid a visit to the palace in 1842. Among the ancient dwellings in the town a particular house used to be pointed out to strangers as the place from whence James Hamilton, of Bothwellhaugh, shot the Regent Murray (23rd January, 1570). A broeze tablet, with the effigy of the regent, has been inserted in the wall of the county-court room to denote the spot where the house stood. The St. Andrew badge of the Order of the Thistle, wrought in gold and enamel, and worn by the regent at the time of his assassination, now belongs to the Earl of Galloway. On the north side of the railway, a little to the west of the station, there stood an old house which formed part of a preceptory of the Knight Templars of Torphichen, and was used in the reign of James VI. as the Scottish mint, but was pulled down in 1886. Bonnytown is the seat of Robert Mickel esq. and Preston House, of Seton Thomson esq. Stair Hathorn Johnston-Stewart J.P. of Champfleurie; the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C.; the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C.; the Duke of Hamilton; Patrick Baroo Seton esq. of Preston, and Charles Chalmers esq. J.P. of Longcroft, are the principal landowners. The soil in the south and south-east is a pretty strong clay, stiff and upon a retentive subsoil more suited to pasturage than to the plough, and in all other parts is generally light and free, easily cultivated and rich in its returns. The area of the parish is 10,127 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £15,923, and landwards, £30,682; the population of the whole of the civil parish in 1891 was 7,520, of which the royal and parliamentary burgh contained 4,155.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 595. Loch Mill is practically a siding of the railway about one half mile distant from Linlithgow.

Bridged, a small village on the Edinburgh road, 3 miles east from Linlithgow, consists mainly of the cottages of the working miners at the shale works adjacent. Rateable value, £530; the population in 1891 was 435.

LINLITHGOW BRIDGE is a small village, partly in the parish of Muiravonside, Stirlingshire, but chiefly in the parish of Linlithgow, and in the small debts court district of Linlithgow; it stands at both ends of the bridge over the river Avon, on the road from Linlithgow to Falkirk, about 1 1/2 miles west from Linlithgow station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 7 east from Falkirk and 18 west from Edinburgh. The general appearance of the country around is undulating, diversified by small summits of hill and woods. The stone bridge over the river Avon was built about 1650, by Alexander, Earl of Linlithgow. A little above it is the viaduct of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway over the Avon, with 20 arches of beautiful masonry, some of them upwards of 90 feet high. The nearest place of worship is at Linlithgow. Adjacent to the village is the large paper mill of Messrs. J. Lovell & Son, Avon paper mills, which gives employment to many of the inhabitants. The rateable value is £1,025; the population in 1891 was 594, of which 139 are in Stirlingshire

Post Office; John Dickson, sub-postmaster. Delivery by postman from Linlithgow; dispatches, 11.30 a.m. 12 & 3.5 & 7.5 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Linlithgow, about 1 mile distant

LIVINGSTONE is a parish and small village with a station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway; the parish, which extends for about 4 miles on both sides of the Brech water, is in the small debt court district of Bathgate. The village is 4 miles south-west from Bathgate and about 8 south from Linlithgow, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh. The parish church was rebuilt in 1732, and repaired in 1837. The soil varies from strong clay and loam to poor moor land. The shale oil works of the Pumpherston Oil Co. are in this parish; and there are likewise the ruins of an old Peel tower and a royal hunting lodge. Dechmont House, the residence of Mrs. Madden, adjoining the hamlet of Dechmont, 5 miles south of Linlithgow, on the Edinburgh road; also Baugour, the residence of John Cadzow esq. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., Capt. Robert Steuart,

Westwood, Sir James Pender bart. M.P., John Young esq. of Addiewell, Meldrum's trustees and the Rev. Sir W. McDonald Honyman bart. M.A. of Cotcu, Salop, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,362 acres; rateable value, £12,347; population in 1891, 1,616, and in 1881, 1,484. Post Office, Livingstone; John Crow, sub-postmaster. Letters through Mid-Caldar at 9 a.m. & 8 p.m.; dispatches, 3.40 & 8.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Mid-Caldar, 5 miles distant

QUEENSFERRY is a seaport town on the Firth of Forth, wholly in the parish of Dalmeny, under Secretary of Scotland's order, small debt court district of Linlithgow and poor combination of the same, and is 8 miles west from Edinburgh and 8 east from Bo'ness; it is sometimes styled South Queensferry, to distinguish it from the town of same name on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, and took its name from the use made of the ferry by Margaret, the queen of Malcolm Canmore, in her journeys to and from Dunfermline. Queensferry ecclesiastical parish, which is very small, faces the Forth and is bounded on three sides by that of Dalmeny. As a royal burgh Queensferry is governed by a provost, two bailies, and a town council. This burgh, together with Stirling, Culross, Luverkeithing and Dunfermline, forms the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The water supply is now obtained from Mid-Caldar. There is a good harbour accessible at any time, and about half a mile distant is Dalmeny station, on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. At Newhalls (a little to the eastward of the town) is a ferry across the Forth, and a pier. A short distance westward is another pier for the convenience of boats when they cannot make the former point. At this place the Firth is contracted to a gut of two miles in width; in the middle of the strait lies a small rocky island called Inchgarvie, and on a height above the town stands Dundas Castle with a modern house adjoining and bearing the same name. The Established church, consecrated in 1633, was thoroughly restored in 1898; there are also United Presbyterian, Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches. At the west end of the town are the ruins of the Carmelite priory of St. Mary, dating from 1330; the tower and part of the choir have been restored by the Dundas family, and are used by the Episcopal church. The cemetery is in Dalmeny parish. The old Town House has a good steeple. About half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, so named from Prince Edgar having landed there. From this place George IV. when on a visit to Scotland, embarked on his return to England. A clock has been erected in the centre of the village by public subscription, at a cost of over £200, in commemoration of her Majesty's Jubilee of 1837. The Countess of Rosebery Memorial Hall, erected in 1893, by the Earl of Rosebery, at a cost of over £3,000, contains a library and reading room, billiard and games rooms, and also a grand hall for concerts and public meetings, which serves also as a Town hall for the burgh.

The Forth Bridge.—The channel of the Forth here is contracted by the promontory of North Queensferry to a width of a little over a mile. Including the north and south approaches, the structure is rather over 1½ miles in length and runs nearly north and south from the west end of Dalmeny Park to Carlin Knowes, Fifeshire. The spans are 26 in number, of which two are of 1,710 feet, two of 680 feet, 15 of 168 feet, 4 of 57 feet and 3 of 25 feet. The south approach, 1,994 feet in length, consists of four stone arches, 57 feet span, 10 spans of 168 feet each, carrying an iron lattice girder bridge, succeeded by a half span (cantilever) of 680 feet, two cantilever spans of 1,710 feet each, then a half span and five lattice girder spans, succeeded by three arches of granite, each 25 feet span; these last 8 spans form the north approach, 980 feet in length; the portion crossing the deep water channel is 5,322 feet in length and is formed by 3 double cantilevers, each resting on four masonry piers, 49 feet in diameter, rising 18 feet above high water, the centre of each cantilever being 361 feet above high water. There is a double set of steel rails laid in steel troughs; the total weight of steel used was 54,076 tons. The engineers were Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker, and the resident engineer, Mr. F. E. Cooper, the contractors being Messrs. Tancock Arrol & Co.

The Royal Naval Sailors' Home, Bridge House, Newhalls, purchased for £1,200, and opened in 1895, has attached grounds. A training ship for about 700 boys is now stationed here. Public Baths (fresh and salt water) were erected by the Burgh commissioners in 1898, at a cost of £3,500. A fair is held on the second Friday in August. The area of the Royal Burgh is 11 acres; rateable value, £10,732; the population in 1891 was 768 in the royal burgh and 1,531 in the police burgh.

TORPHICHEN is a parish and village; the former, in the small debt court district of Lintlithgow, is bounded north and east by the parish of Lintlithgow, south-east by Bathgate, and west and south by the county of Stirling; the village lies 2 miles west from Westfield station on the Blackstone and Bathgate branch of the North British railway and on the road to Lintlithgow, from which town it is 4½ miles distant. Adjovent to the village, on the north-east, are some remains of the hospital or preceptory of Torphichen, the principal house in Scotland appertaining to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. This place gives the title of baron to the Sandilands family; Sir James Sandilands, the first peer (1564), was prior or preceptor here of the Knights of St. John. The parish church occupies the site of the nave of the preceptory church, and the ruins of the transept and a portion of the choir also remain. There is also a Free church. The Memorial Hall, erected in 1897 by Mrs. Fitzgerald, in memory of her husband, Capt. Gerald Fitzgerald, at a cost of about £1,400, contains reading and coffee rooms. The parish, although in some parts moorland, is generally fertile; coal and ironstone are found within it, and there is a paper mill. The Coltness Iron Co. the trustees of Robert Young esq. Capt. Thomas Hope J.P. of Bridge Castle, and William Forbes Lochcote esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,939 acres; rateable value, £13,564; population in 1881, 1,526, and in 1891, 1,724, of which 317 are in the village.

Blackridge is a small hamlet in this parish, and an agricultural district on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, ¾ of a mile north-west from Westcraigs station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway and ½ west from Bathgate. Several coal fields in the vicinity afford employment to the inhabitants.

Westcraig is a small hamlet in this parish, on the road from Bathgate to Airdrie, with a station (locally in Lanarkshire) on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway.

Westfield, now a hamlet in this parish, is about 2 miles from Torphichen.

UPHALL is a parish and village; the former, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, is bounded by Kirkliston on the north-east and east, by Mid-Calder on the south, Livingstone on the west, and Linlithgow and Ecclesmachan on the north. It is intersected from west to east by the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and is watered by a rivulet called Broxburn; its extent from north to south is 4 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles. Besides the village of Uphall, it contains the small town of Broxburn. Uphall is 1 mile north of the station of that name on the main line of the North British railway, and 1 mile south of Broxburn in Drumshoreland station, on the same line; the village is distant 11 miles west from Edinburgh and 5½ north-east from Bathgate. In the Buchan vault of the parish church are buried the Hon. Henry Erskine, 2nd son of the 10th Earl of Buchan, lord advocate of Scotland, who died 8 Oct. 1817, and his brother Thomas, 3rd son of the 10th Earl, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, created Baron Erskine, 1806, and died in 1823. Shale, which is now so largely used in the manufacture of paraffin oil, of which there are three extensive works in the locality, is found in abundance in the neighbourhood, and is said to be of a very rich quality; owing to this important industry, there has been a great increase in the population within the past few years; bone manures are also manufactured in the parish. The district abounds in coal, sandstone, limestone and ironstone. In this parish is Almondell House, a seat of the Earl of Buchan, and Houston House, of John Campbell Sharp esq. J.P. Middleton Hall and estate have been bought by the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited. The Earl of Buchan, the trustees of the late Robert Bell esq. John Campbell Sharp esq. J.P. and the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,541 acres; rateable value, £62,816; the population in 1881 was 4,812, and in 1891, 8,953, of which 922 are in the village.

WHITBURN (or Whiteburn) is a police burgh and parish in the Linlithgow poor combination and small debt court district, bounded on the south-east by the Breich water, which separates it from Edinburghshire, and on the north by the river Almond. The Cultrig and Bickerton brooks, tributaries of the Almond, both rise in the south-west portion of the parish. The village is on the road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, 1 mile west from East Whitburn station on the Bathgate and Morningside branch of the North British railway, ¾ south-west from Bathgate and 9 south from Linlithgow. Bents station, also on the Bathgate and Morningside branch, is in this parish, 5 miles south from Bathgate. The village is well built and regular. The inhabitants are supported by the coal and iron mines with which the parish abounds, and a little weaving of cotton goods for the Glasgow houses. The Baillie Institute, opened in 1897, was the gift of Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet. The schools were built by the trustees of the late Mr. Wilson, under a bequest made by him for the purpose. These schools have since been purchased by the school board, and the trustees now devote the endowments for the purpose of encouraging higher education, by means of scholarships and bursaries. Professor John Brown, the well-known biblical expositor, was a native of this parish. Mary, Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet, the Duke of Hamilton, the Rev. Sir W. McDonald Honyman bart M.A., J.P. of Coton, Salop, and John Story and John Waddell esqs. are the principal landowners. The soil varies considerably. In the upper portion of the parish there is much moss and pasture land; in the lower, the surface is arable.

Crofthead is a large mining village in the parish of Whitburn, with a station, about 1 mile east-by-north, on the Morningside section of the North British line, and about 6 south from Bathgate.

Loongridge, or Lanrie, is a small village in the parish of Whitburn, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Breich station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway, and about 6 south from Bathgate.

The area of the parish comprises 9,775 acres; rateable value, £25,880; the population in 1881 was 6,326, and in 1891, 5,782, of which 1,185 are in the burgh, and in the town of Fauldhouse, which includes Crofthead, 2,762.

WINCHBURGH is a small village in the parish of Kirkliston, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, with a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and on the bank of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal, 11 miles west of Edinburgh and 6 east of Linlithgow; it has a mission church under Kirkliston. The inhabitants are employed in the large shale works and brick and tile works in the parish. Niddry is a hamlet in Kirkliston parish, and half a mile from Winchburgh, which is its postal district. The surrounding country is rolling and wooded, the soil being heavy, with a subsoil of clay, and growing fair crops of wheat, barley, oats and turnips, with a considerable acreage of pasture. The rateable value of the village is £967; the population in 1891 was 424.

THE LOTHIAN.

LOTHIAN was in ancient times a district of the kingdom of Northumbria, and is now represented by the counties of Linlithgow (West Lothian), Edinburghshire (Mid-Lothian) and Haddingtonshire (East Lothian). Mid-Lothian is popularly used for Parliamentary purposes as a synonym for Edinburghshire.

MORAY.

THIS was formerly a large district in the north-east of the kingdom; lying south from Moray Firth and east of the Great Glen, and included the present counties of Elgin and Nairn together with a large portion of Inverness and most of Banff. It is now sometimes used as an alternative name for Elgin. The ancient earldom of Moray said to have been held by Beth and Angus in the 12th century, was first regularly conferred about 1314 on Sir Thomas Randolph, who fought at Bannockburn, but this peerage became extinct on the death of John, third earl, in 1346. In 1359 the title was conferred by David II. on Henry (Plantagenet) Duke of Lancaster, but on his death in 1361 it reverted to the Crown. This title was subsequently held by the Dunbar, Stewart, and Gordon families, and in 1563 was revived by Queen Mary in favour of James Stewart, afterwards Regent of Scotland, and the title still continues in that family now called Stuart.

NAIRNSHIRE.

THIS is a small maritime county in the northern part of Scotland, once forming a portion of the ancient province of Moray, and bounded on the north by the Moray Firth, on the east by the shire of Elgin, and on the south and west by the county of Inverness. It extends from the coast, on the north, to the small lake of Lochindorb (situate at its extreme southern apex) on the south, 20 miles; the breadth along the shore is about 10 miles, and its sides vary from 12 to 20 miles asunder. The shire comprises 104,245 acres. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was 367,133. The population in 1881 was 10,455, and in 1891, 10,019, viz: males, 4,683, and females, 5,336, showing a decrease during the last decade of 436. In size this county ranks as the twenty-ninth, but as regards population it is, with one exception (Kinross), the smallest in Scotland.

Ancient History.—In this shire is Cawdor Castle, the seat of the Earls of Cawdor, erected in 1454, and in which it is stated Macheth, Thane of Cawdor, was murdered. In the roof of the highest part of the building is shown the apartment where Lord Lovat lay concealed from his enemies, for some time after the battle of Culloden; upon the glass of the small window is rudely scratched the word "overcome," and the date 1665.

Soil, Produce, &c.—The agricultural properties of Nairnshire assimilate closely with those of the county of Elgin. Exclusive of the hilly part of the district, it may be described as a narrow border of level ground, along the shore of the Firth, from 1 to nearly 6 miles in breadth—and here for the most part it is arable; but as the county recedes further from the coast, it becomes bleak and hilly; there are, however, no eminences of great altitude or note. The farms are usually small, and most frequently uninclosed. Sheep and black cattle are reared in considerable numbers, and chiefly fed on the natural pasture. From the agricultural returns of Great Britain for 1898, the chief crops are shown as follows: oats, 5,315 acres; barley, or bere, 3,607 acres;

rye, 71 acres; total corn crops, 9,022 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,182 acres; potatoes, 324 acres; total green crops, 4,548 acres; hay, 2,501 acres; clover, grass and sainfoin not for hay, 8,044; permanent pasture, 2,188 acres; mountain and heath land, 31,534 acres; woods, 12,734. The live stock in 1898 was: horses, 1,389; cows and heifers, 1,925; other cattle, 4,546; ewes kept for breeding, 5,918; other sheep, 13,482; and pigs, 670. There are no minerals worked. The shire is entirely devoid of manufactures; but the fisheries—white, herring and salmon—are tolerably productive.

Rivers and Railways.—The county is crossed in its southern or hilly part by the river Findhorn, which runs in a direction from south-west to north-east, through Elginshire to the Moray Firth; parallel with this rapid stream, about 8 or 9 miles to the west, courses the river Nairn, which also runs into the Moray Firth. Besides the rivers there are several small brooks and burns, the banks of which are covered with woods and plantations; and there are some elegant seats scattered over the county. The only railway which passes through this county is the Highland railway, on which line Brodie and Nairn are stations. Small as this shire is, it possesses a distinct political and judicial establishment. It comprises three complete parishes, viz.: Ardcloch, Auldearn and Nairn, two parts of parishes, and contains one royal burgh, Nairn, which is the only town. This burgh, in conjunction with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres, sends one member to Parliament; and the county unites with Elginshire in returning another representative. The parliamentary constituency in 1898 numbered 722. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £51,508.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT FOR ELGINSHIRE & NAIRNSHIRE.

Hon. John Edward Gordon D.L., J.P. Quinta Santa Anna, Madeira; East Dene, Bonchurch, Ventnor, Isle of Wight; & 61 Prince's gate & Carlton club, London S.W.

The force consists of 1 sergeant & 7 constables.

Stations, Nairn, Auldearn, Cawdor & Belivat.

MILITARY.

The troops in this county are in the Scottish District command: head quarters, Edinburgh.

There are no Militia, Yeomanry, or Volunteers having head quarters in the county, but

The Highland Volunteer Artillery (Southern Division, Royal Artillery) (2nd Sub-District) (head quarters, Inverness) have Nos. 10 & 11
 Garrison Companies stationed at Nairn; Capts. J. F. McIntyre & D. M. Baillie V.D. (hon. major), in command.

ARDCLACH is a Highland parish, in the south-east of the county, bounded on the east by the county of Elgin, and is in general mountainous, covered with heath, and abounding in tracts of bleak and barren moss; it is 6 miles west from Dava station on the Highland railway, and 10 south-east from Nairn, in Nairn poor combination and small debts court district. It contains no village worthy of the name, and till within the last few years consisted of small crofters, with their plots of land, reclaimed from the surrounding wilds; but of late great improvements in agriculture have taken place, every year increasing the arable acreage of this parish. The river Findhorn traverses the parish, and the scenery along its banks is of the most varied and interesting description. There is a considerable quantity of timber along the banks of the river, which in its course through the parish receives the Tomlachlan, the Leenach and the Rihlean brooks. Glenferness House is the seat of the Earl of Leven and Melville. The principal landowners are Alex. Brodie esq. of Lethen, the Earl of Leven and Melville, the Earl Cawdor and Lady Gordon-Cathcart. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order No. 29, part of this parish has been transferred to Edinkillie parish in Elgin county. The area is 40,317 acres; rateable value, £3,506; population in 1881, 1,117, and in 1891, 942.

AULDEARN (anciently called Erin) is a parish and village; the latter, a burgh of barony, is 2½ miles south-east from Nairn, with a station opened in 1895 on the Highland railway. It is in Nairn small debts court district and poor combination. In the immediate neighbourhood of the village is the scene of a victory gained by the Marquis of Montrose over the forces of the Covenanters in 1645. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land, and the parish is bounded on the north-west by the Moray Firth, and the east by Elginshire. The Dunbar Memorial Hall cost £650. The principal landowners are Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen, Ian Ashley Moreton esq. of Brodie, Lady Gordon-Cathcart, Sir Alexander James Dunbar bart. and Earl Cawdor. The area is 14,035 acres; rateable value, £9,775; the population in 1891 was 1,315 in the parish, and 364 in the village.

CAWDOR is a parish in the Nairn poor combination and small debts court district. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders Nos. 49 and 133, the part of this parish formerly in Inverness-shire has been transferred to this county, and a part of Moy and Delarossie parish also added to the parish and a part of Cawdor added to Nairn. The village is 5 miles south-west of Nairn, the nearest railway station, on the Highland railway; and is interesting and picturesque, and upon the banks of the burn of its name is an excellent inn, frequented by tourists and families, who visit the spot to contemplate the scenery around and the towers of the ancient castle—the seat of the Thanes of Cawdor. The Castle, occupied in the shooting season by Earl Cawdor, is an ancient and interesting structure; some of the apartments are hung with tapestry, and there are also vaulted chambers. From the summit of the castle one of the most extensive and lovely views in the county is afforded. In the vicinity is one of the largest and oldest established distilleries in Scotland. This place, since 1796, has afforded the title of baron, and since 1827 that of Earl to the Campbell family, of Stackpole Court, Pemb. A cattle market is held once a year, viz. last Wednesday in July. Earl Cawdor and Harry F. Rose esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 29,366 acres; rateable value, £5,997, and it contained in 1881 a population of 1,070, and in 1891, 1,009.

Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Cawdor; Charles McGillivray, sub-postmaster. Letters through Nairn arrive at 9.15 a.m. & 4.15 p.m.; dispatches, 12 noon & 6.45 p.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Nairn, 6 miles distant.

NAIRN.

NAIRN is a royal burgh of considerable antiquity, having been regalised by William the Lion. It is the head of a poor combination and small debts court district, and has a station on the Highland railway, and is 185 miles north-north-west by rail from Edinburgh, 93½ north-west from Aberdeen, 128½ north by rail from Perth, 9½ south-west from Forres, and 15 north from Inverness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part of the parish of Cawdor in this county has been added to this parish. It is supposed that the town derives its name from the river Nearn (omhinn n'fearn), the alder river. The original charter of the burgh is not extant. It was granted by Alexander I. in the year 1100, and was renewed by King James VI. Nairn enjoys a strange immunity from rain, having the smallest rainfall of any town in Scotland. The mean annual rainfall is 23 inches, while that of Edinburgh is 32 inches. The town has been considerably improved of late years, and the neighbourhood affords some fine scenery. There is a harbour here with breakwater and pier. For a seaport town Nairn enjoys certain advantages obtained from a fertile country yielding various articles for exportation. The exports consist of timber, corn, potatoes, eggs, smoked haddocks and herrings. The imports are groceries, hardware, lime, manure and coal. The white fishery is carried on successfully, and salmon fishing is also prosecuted. A sheriff court and a small debt court are held weekly. This burgh, together with Inverness, Forres and Forres, forms the Inverness parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The present parish church was erected in 1895 at the corner of Seabank road, on a site presented by Lieut.-Col. Clarke, of Achareid, from designs by Mr. John Starforth, architect, of 35 York place, Edinburgh, at a cost of £9,500; it is in the Early Gothic style, and consists of transepts, organ chamber, vestry and session house, with a large square tower and belfry, and will have 1,200 sittings. There is a hall adjoining for Sunday school purposes, to hold 400 scholars. The New Free Church, opened on 1st January, 1882, is an edifice in the Early French Gothic style, and has a tower with spire containing a clock and bell; the church is seated for 1,200 persons. There is an excellent museum, containing a valuable cabinet of minerals. The Public Hall, in the High street, erected at a cost of about £1,800, will hold 600 persons, and is much used for public entertainments. The Court House, near the centre of High street, is a spacious structure, erected about 1818, for the sessions of the town and county courts. The Post Office, also in High street, was erected in 1896. Five branch banking establishments are settled here, and there is also a savings bank. Corn markets are held on Thursday weekly; feeing markets, Thursday preceding 26th May and 22nd November. About 4 miles distant are the extensive works of the celebrated Brackla Distillery Co. Limited. The freestone quarries in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of men. Some years ago baths were erected by a public company, at a cost of about £15,000, the flooring of which is formed out of the solid rock, with a graduated depth of water. The bathing facilities in Nairn are very good, and the special characteristics of the place are those of a fashionable watering resort. There is now a golf course upwards of 3 miles in length, with 18 holes, and a ladies' course of 9 holes; the president is Earl Cawdor. At the western extremity of the town is a monument to Mr. John Strath, forty years schoolmaster here. A bronze monument on a granite pedestal was erected in 1895, facing High street, at the cost of about £1,000, to John Grigor M.D. who left several legacies for the benefit of the people of the neighbourhood, and in 1897 a drinking fountain was erected near the Strath monument, in commemoration of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. The Nairn Hospital was built in 1846. The Northern Counties' Convalescent Home is at Trades park, about 1½ miles from the town. In 1896 the skeleton of a man, apparently over six feet, was discovered at the Kebleck Stone, near Delnies; the teeth in both jaws were perfectly preserved; the grave had been cut about two and a half feet from the surface, and a number of stones, about a foot square, forming an arch, placed over the body. Earl Cawdor; Major James Rose, of Kilravock Castle, lord lieutenant of the county; Ian Ashley M. Brodie esq. D.L. of Brodie Castle; Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen; Sir Alexander James Dunbar bart. of Boath House; Lady Gordon-Catheart of Cluny; John Mackintosh-Walker esq. of Geddes; Robert Anderson esq. of Lochduh, and Mrs. Grant, of Househill, are the principal landowners. The area is 8,827 acres; rateable value, £16,409 10s. 10d. including rail-

PETTY, a large parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," added to the county of Inverness.

URQUHART and LOGIE-WESTER form a parish, formerly part of this county, but has been transferred to Ross and Cromarty by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889."

THE ORKNEY ISLES.

THESE islands, which form a county, were known to the ancients by the name of "Orcaades," and are situated in the North Sea, separated from Caithness-shire by the Pentland Firth, and lying between the parallels of 58 deg. 44 min. and 59 deg. 25 min. north latitude, and 2 deg. and 3 deg. 30 min. west longitude; from the mainland they are distant four leagues, and from the Shetland Isles about 15. The form of the islands is extremely irregular; and from these circumstances the dimensions of some of them are ascertained with difficulty. They are separated from one another by portions of the sea denominated "sounds," "firths," or "ferries," some of which are only a mile broad, whilst others are more than 5. The whole area covered is of considerable extent, for from south-west to the north-east they extend about 55 miles, and upwards of 30 in another direction. The aggregate area is 249,565 acres. According to a survey taken by Dr. Murdo Mackenzie in 1750, the whole number of the islands under the denomination of the Orkneys amounted to sixty-seven, of which the following twenty-nine only are inhabited: Mainland (or Pomona), Græmsay, Hoy, Waas, Raasay, Faray, Cavaay, Flotay, South Ronaldshay, Swanay, Pentland, Skerry, Burray Lambholm, Copinsay, Shapinsay, Stronsay, Papa-Stronsay, Bdey, Fairay, Sanday, North Ronaldshay, Westray, Papa-Westray, Egilshay, Rousay, Weir, Enghallow, Gairsay and Damsay; the remaining thirty-eight, which, in the primitive language of the country, are termed "holms," are much inferior in size, and solely appropriated to pasturage. The population in 1891 was 14,298 males and 15,155 females, total, 30,453, against 32,044 in 1881; and the inhabited houses 6,409 in 1891, and 6,378 in 1881.

Early History &c.—The earliest inhabitants appear to have been Celtic, who, at an unknown period before the Christian era established themselves in Scotland. Diodorus Siculus mentions Cape Orkas as one of the extremities of Britain; and the Orcaades are first named in the 2nd century by Pomponius Mela, who states their number at 30; Pliny augments them to 40; but Ptolemy makes them only 30. Tacitus asserts that the Orcaades were discovered and subdued by Agricola, which seems to be corroborated by discoveries in the Orkneys of Roman coins belonging to the first century. The origin of the name is believed to be Celtic, and is probably derived from Orkin, a large marine animal—a term that has been applied to both whales and seals. Orkney therefore appears to mean "the land of whales," or of "seals." The Orcaades seem to have been esteemed of some importance in the time of Constantine, as they are especially mentioned, with Gaul and Britain, as the patrimony of his youngest son. Little is known of the Orcaades from that time until the convulsions in Norway, which ended in the elevation of Harold, "the Fair-Haired," to the undivided sovereignty of that country. About the middle of the 9th century Kenneth Macalpin obtained possession of the islands, and they continued with the Scottish throne until the end of the 11th century, when they were assigned by King Donsid Bain to the King of Norway, to whom they were subject until the middle of the 13th century, when they were again transferred by Magnus, King of Norway, to Alexander, King of Scotland. But, although the islands were thus ceded, the Norwegians still asserted their right to them until the year 1468, when James III. of Scotland married Margaret, daughter of the King of Denmark, with whom they again passed, in lieu of her dowry, to the Crown of Scotland; and upon the birth of her son, James IV., they were finally ceded, which cession was confirmed when James IV. of Scotland married Ann, daughter of the King of Denmark. From the middle of the 16th to the beginning of the 17th century the islands were possessed successively by Earls Robert and Patrick Stewart—Robert being a natural son of James V. and half-brother to Queen Mary. Subsequent to this period the islands passed into the possession of the English Crown, and were bestowed by Charles I., and afterwards by Charles II., on the Morton family. In 1776 Lord Morton sold them to Sir Lawrence Dundas, and they have since remained in the family of his descendants. Having been so long and so repeatedly in the possession of the Norwegians, many names of persons, as well as of places, are derived from the Scandinavian language. It will be comprehended that the Orcaadians bear no resemblance whatever to the Celtic Highlanders in language, dress, appearance, or customs. Orkney has given birth to some individuals who have attained to eminence in science, literature and the arts. Of these we may mention Malcolm Laing (1763-1818), author of a well-known "History of Scotland;" Mrs. Brunton (1778-1818), authoress; Samuel Laing (b. 1810), author of a "Tour in Norway;" his son, Samuel Laing, Finance Minister of India (1860-5) and M.P. Orkney, 1873-85; William Balfour Baikie M.D. the African traveller (1820-1864); Dr. Roe, the Arctic traveller; Thomas Stewart Traill (1781-1862), an eminent professor of medical jurisprudence in the University of Edinburgh; and Murdoch McKenzie, author of a "Survey of the Orkney and Lewis Islands." The grandfather of Washington Irving, the American writer, was born in the island of Shapinsay, and the eminent engraver of the last century, Sir Thomas Strange, was born in Kirkwall 1721, and died 1792.

Soil, Produce, Climate &c.—Compared with the sterile wilds in some of the sister islands of the Shetlands, or even with the lofty hills and bleak marshy plains of the mainland to the south, these islands gain in appearance that to the eye the surface presents a rich and pleasing variety. The hills composing the ridge that skirts the Western Ocean, as well as those that intersect the mainland, and occupy some of the other islands, for the most part are formed into ridges of some extent, with small intervening valleys; and their tops are generally either flat or rounded. Some few of them are almost entirely covered with verdure; at the base of many are cornfields, interspersed with patches of rich grass, affording excellent feeding for cattle; the soil is sandy or clay loam, and peat moss is found over a considerable portion of these islands. Much of the land under tillage is not regularly fenced, nor divided into separate fields. Numbers of cattle and sheep are raised, for the pasture of which this county is peculiarly well suited. According to the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1898," the chief crops are shown to be oats, 33,479 acres; barley or bere, 4,711; total corn crops, 38,233; turnips and swedes, 14,485 acres; potatoes, 2,755; vetches or tares, 311; green crops, 17,613; hay, 8,065; clover, sanfoin and grasses, not for hay, 26,516; permanent pasture, 15,993; total area of land and water, 249,565 acres; of which 62,337 are mountain and heath land and only 11 of woods and plantations. The live stock for 1898 comprised: 5,257 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,628; cows and heifers, in milk or in calf, 9,976; other cattle, 18,685; ewes kept for breeding, 14,894; other sheep, 22,645; sows kept for breeding, 335; other pigs, 2,302. The herring fishery is considerable; the principal "stations" are Papa-Stronsay, Deersound, Holm, Burray and South Ronaldshay. The markets are Ireland, Scotland and England, a few only being sent abroad from Orkney, except the produce of the early fishery, which is carried on in the neighbourhood of Stromness, and from that place the herrings are dispatched direct to Hamburg. The cod and ling fisheries are also prosecuted from almost all the islands, and in the curing of the fish many persons are engaged. Lobster catching is pursued with fair success, as is also oyster dredging. Particulars as to the number of fishing and other vessels belonging to the port of Kirkwall are given with that town. The manufacture of kelp was at one time the staple of Orkney, but in consequence of the reduction of the duty on barilla, this trade suddenly collapsed, but latterly has shown signs of reviving, as it is now used in the making of iodine and other chemical substances. The distillation of whisky has long been established, there being two distilleries, one near Kirkwall and another at Stromness. Throughout the whole of the islands rain falls in considerable quantity, especially on the western coasts; and it is supposed that the annual amount falling in these islands averages 36.95 inches. Snows are neither so frequent nor so heavy, but they come with comparative violence, and generally from the north-west and south-east; but though what falls in the course of the year may not be much short of the quantity in other northern latitudes, it continues only a few days at a time on the surface of the earth. A peculiarity of the climate with respect to the season of snow and hail merits some attention. Some part of the month of June, which in Britain is well known to be of a pleasant and genial warmth, is here not only colder than the preceding months, but also as much so as any month of winter; for two weeks, and even sometimes more, about the middle of June, the wind blows from the north, strong and piercing, accompanied with snow and hail showers.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The Orkneys comprise 21 entire parishes; the only two towns are Kirkwall, which is the capital and a royal burgh, and Stromness, a burgh of barony. The Isles of Orkney and Shetland form one sheriffdom or stewardry, under a sheriff depute, whose authority extends over all; but he has a substitute resident in Orkney, and another in Shetland, by whom the duties are principally performed. Combined they form one parliamentary district, under the title of the county of Orkney and Shetland, which returns one member to Parliament. Kirkwall, the capital of the Orkneys, is a representative burgh, joining with Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in sending another member. The parliamentary constituency of the county in 1898 was 3,356. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £77,670.

DEERNESS is a quoad sacra parish, in the most easterly portion of Mainland island, and was formed from the parish of St. Andrews; it is about 10 miles east from Kirkwall. At Scarvating, in this parish, are the graves of some 200 Covenanters, prisoners from the battle of Bothwell Brig, 22 June, 1679, who lost their lives on the coast in the same year, when on their way to the West Indian plantations; a monument was erected a few years ago to mark the place. The rateable value of the parish is £1,834; the population in 1891 was 844.

HOY and GRÆMSAY are two islands in Stromness small debt court district. The civil parish is formed of Græmsay Island and part of Hoy Island; the remaining part of the latter being included in Walls and Plotta parish. The island of Hoy, which is separated from Mainland of Orkney by Hoy Sound and Græmsay Island, is the most interesting of the Orkney group; it is about 11 miles long and from 3½ to 5 miles in breadth, and consists chiefly of three hills, the highest, Ward Hill, being 1,554 feet. In Hoy ore to be found many objects of interest, chief of which are the Dwarfie Stone, Hoy Head and the Old Man. The latter, on the north-west coast, is a stack or column of red sandstone, 450 feet in height. Rackwick is a small village in the island, on the west coast. There is communication with Stromness by steamer three times weekly. The area of the entire parish is 15,183 acres; rateable value, £796; the population of the entire parish in 1881 was 603, and in 1891, 537, viz.: Græmsay, 223 and part of Hoy, 314; the population of Hoy Island in Walls and Plotta parish in 1891 was 21.

Græmsay is a small island on the north-east of Hoy Island, in Hoy sound. Post Office, Hoy; Harry Mowat, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Stromness R.S.O. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Stromness, 4 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

KIRKWALL.

KIRKWALL, the capital of the Orkney Islands and of the united parishes of Kirkwall and St. Ola, is a town of great antiquity, a royal burgh, and the seat of a synod and presbytery. It is 353 miles from Edinburgh by land and ferry, but considerably less by water; 58 north from Wick, 54 north-by-east from Thurso, 41 north from John o' Groats, Caithness-shire and 14½ east from Stromness, and is situate nearly in the centre of the island, called by way of pre-eminence, Mainland, or Pomona, and on the south-east of the bay of Kirkwall. The town bears strong characteristics of antiquity; the principal street being exceedingly narrow, being in some places barely wide enough to afford passage for a cart; the houses are generally arranged with their gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular appearance. Many of these houses, both externally and internally, present striking features of old age—the doors and windows are small, the walls of great thickness, and the apartments narrow and gloomy. The modern dwellings are, however, an exception. The harbour of Kirkwall is safe and commodious, having two excellent piers, one, a massive and substantial structure, erected in 1855, at a cost of about £20,000, which enables steamers and other vessels to come to the pier head at all times of the tide; the other pier affords good anchorage. Two miles to the south is Scapa pier, erected in 1878, at a cost of £12,000, and here the mail steamer to and from Scrabster (Thurso) and Stromness calls daily. Altogether, the situation of the place is well adapted for the resort of shipping. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the harbour in 1898 was British, 2,437, of 223,393 tonnage, foreign, 35, 7,077 tons; the number cleared was, British, 2,428, of 223,179 tons; foreign, 31, 6,109 tonnage. In the coasting trade 2,454 vessels entered, 227,670 tons; cleared, 2,436, of 224,717 tons.

The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port under part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, December 31, 1898, was 43, of 2,538 tons. Fishing and fish curing occupy many persons, and the trade in timber is of some consequence. The number of fishing boats registered as belonging to the port, December 31, 1898, was 425, of 2,758 tons, employing 1,400 men and boys, besides 650 extra hands. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters "K. L." or "K." Kirkwall was created a royal burgh, in the first instance, by James III. and its charter was renewed by James V.; its government is confided to a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and seven councillors; it is a representative burgh, and together with Wick, Tain, Borneoch, Dingwall and Cromarty, forms the Wick parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October; the sheriff and small debts courts are held every Tuesday, except during the vacations. The Cathedral Church of St. Magnus, a Norwegian jarl or earl, canonised in 1155, was the seat of the see of Orkney, said to have been founded by St. Servanus in the 6th century, although the list of bishops does not begin till the reign of David I. (1124-53). After the revolution of 1688, the see was abolished, but was revived in 1733 under the title of Orkney and Caithness; in 1769 it was united to Moray and Ross, and is now held with Aberdeen. The cathedral, as originally built during the period 1137-60, consisted of apsidal choir with aisles, transepts, nave of seven bays with aisles and a central tower with spire; it was afterwards largely rebuilt and considerably extended, both eastwards and westwards, at different periods, and now consists of a choir of six bays with aisles, triforium and clerestory, transepts with eastern chapels, nave of eight bays, also with triforium and clerestory, and a central tower of two stages with a modern parapet and pinnacles, and a low pyramidal spire, the whole reaching a height of 123 feet; in the tower are four bells, rescued from the fire which partially destroyed the original steeple in 1671. The transepts, three bays of the choir and two of the nave, and the interior of the south doorway belong to the Norman church of 1137-60; during the Transition period (1160-1200) the piers and arches of the crossing were rebuilt and eastern chapels added to the transepts; during the period 1200-50, most of the nave piers and part of the walls of the aisles were rebuilt, and the entire nave and the centre of the choir vaulted in stone; the nave at this time appears to have consisted of six bays only, but after 1250 it was determined to lengthen the church, and the choir and its aisles were thereupon extended three bays, and a new west front erected, at a distance of about 30 feet from the then existing front, and somewhat obliquely to the axis of the nave, but this new front, probably from want of funds, was not united to the earlier structure, and the arcades completed, till the latter half of the 15th century, and the new part was never vaulted till 1850, when some plaster vaulting was put up. There were once many tombs in the church, but only one or two now exist, and include a mural tomb in the south aisle of the nave to Malise, Earl Palatine of Strathern and Earl of Orkney (d. c. 1330), and various inscribed floor slabs of the 17th and 18th centuries, but both the tombs and woodwork within the building were either destroyed or greatly injured in 1848, when the fabric underwent a considerable renoivation; only the choir, shut off from the crossing by a glass screen, is now used; it is filled with pews, and has a gallery over the north aisle; a number of carved fragments, both of wood and stone, and including some figures and shields of arms, are preserved in a vaulted chamber above the south chapel. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 232 feet; width across the nave, 56 feet, or through the transepts, 100 feet; the height is generally 71 feet. A monument to Dr. John Rae, the Arctic explorer, best known as having been in charge of two expeditions (1848-1851 and 1853-1854) in search of Sir John Franklin, and having on his return in 1854 brought back many relics of that ill-fated explorer, was placed in the cathedral in Portland stone on a pedestal of granite, with an inscription; opposite to this is a monument to William B. Baikie M.D. the African traveller. To the south of the cathedral are the remains of the ancient palace of the Bishops of Orkney, in which King Haco, of Norway, died after his defeat at Largs (3rd October, 1263), and here James V. slept in 1540; almost adjoining to these are the ruins of the Earl's Palace, built by Patrick Stewart, second Earl of Orkney of that name, beheaded at Edinburgh in 1614; the buildings have richly decorated turrets, mullioned windows and cross loops; they are built of grey freestone and as ruins have a fine effect. The ancient church of St. Ola, which is believed to have existed prior to the foundation of that of St. Magnus, and was then the only religious establishment, stood near the shore of the road, or bay, of Kirkwall, and from its situation the town originally obtained the appellation of Kirkjovanger, or the "Kirk on the bay," subsequently corrupted to Kirkwall. A short distance from the cathedral is a church belonging to the United Presbyterians, and near it is the Free church. There are also Episcopalian, Congregationalist, and Roman Catholic churches. Kirkwall sustains several educational establishments, including an academy, or grammar school, which is now under the control of the Burgh School Board. The Municipal Buildings were erected at a cost of nearly £6,000, the foundation stone having been laid by the late Earl of Mar and Kellie, on August 20th, 1884; they are three storeys in height, and are built in the Scottish baronial style, the principal entrance being emphasised by a fine semi-classic doorway, surmounted by two statues of the ancient halberdiers of the burgh in full uniform; on the ground floor is the Post Office, the offices of the burgh surveyor and the town clerk, and three other suites of offices, and also the Free Library, which now contains 3,600 volumes; on the first floor, at the back, is the Town Hall, the front being occupied by the town council chamber, immediately behind which, and between it and the Town Hall, is a room for the Commissioners of Supply. The County Buildings, mid-way between the ruins of the Earl's and Bishop's palaces, were erected in 1877, at a cost of about £5,000, and are built principally of the freestone of the district; they contain apartments for the sessions of the local courts and the business of county officials, and committee rooms &c. and are connected with the gaol. Here are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and several hotels. Two newspapers are published here weekly, viz. the "Orkadian," on Saturday, and the "Orkney Herald," on Wednesday. The Poor House, built at a cost of about £3,000, is for the poor of the whole county. The Balfour Hospital was founded by John Balfour esq. of Trenabie, for the relief of the sick and as an asylum for a certain number of aged, infirm persons, who are attended gratuitously by the faculty of Kirkwall; it contains 12 beds. A Fever Hospital was added in 1890, and contains 10 beds. The Kirkwall fair was at one time famed for the extent of its business, and the number of merchants and others attending from various distant places, and it has been compared to the famous Leipsic fair on a smaller scale. It is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of August, and continues during that week and the one succeeding; but the business is now comparatively trifling. There is also a horse and cattle market held on the first Monday in every month. Opposite to the cathedral, on the west side of the street once stood the ruins of a fortress called the "King's Castle." It was a place of considerable strength in 1581, when, or soon after, it was occupied by the Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. The remains were cleared away during the latter part of 1865, and the street, called Castle street, formed, leading to Harbour street. The area is 11,088 acres; rateable value, St. Ola, £4,588; burgh of Kirkwall, £14,392; the population of Kirkwall and St. Ola in 1881 numbered 4,777, and in 1891, 4,755, of which number 3,926 belonged to the burgh of Kirkwall; St. Ola, 829. Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Broad street; Alexander John Fife, postmaster. Deliveries, from the South, St. Margaret's Hope & Stromness, 8.30 p.m.; local & Stromness, 4 p.m.; dispatches, South & St. Margaret's Hope, 9.55 a.m.; Stromness, 9.15 a.m. & 6.5 p.m.; local, 5.30 a.m.; to the North Isles, tuesday, wednesday & saturday, from July to September & wednesday & saturday, from October to June; to Shetland, thursday & saturday, in summer & saturday in winter

SOUTH PARISH, see SOUTH RONALDSHAY.

STENNESS, see FIRTH AND STENNESS.

STROMNES is a burgh of barony and seaport, also a parish, 14½ miles west from Kirkwall, and situated on Mainland (or Pomona) Island, opposite to and north of Hoy Island, from which it is divided by the Sound of Hoy, in which, covering the mouth of Stromness harbour, lies the island of Gremsay and Holm Island, the latter forming part of the parish. Stromness harbour is a fine natural basin, extending from south to north more than a mile, and is sheltered from the Atlantic on the west by a high ridge, the southern extremity of which forms the north side of Hoy Sound; while its entrance is protected partly by the island of Gremsay, which lies midway in the sound, and partly by a ness or point of land stretching from the westward. On the east side it is shielded by two small islands or holms, and even beyond these, in a kind of outer harbour or roadstead, there is excellent anchorage for shipping. It was formerly no uncommon thing in the spring months to see in these havens upwards of 50 large vessels, on their way to the whale fishery in Davis Straits and Greenland, calling here for the purpose of completing their complement of men, generally about 20 for each ship. In some years, upwards of 700 men were furnished by this port for the operations in Davis Straits, besides 150 apprentices, but the numbers have for some years been gradually diminishing, and the fishing is now practically extinct. There are two patent slips and a former ship building was carried on, but the business now consists chiefly in the repairing of vessels. The pier, a substantial erection, was built in 1878, and extended in 1894, and in 1897 was again enlarged at a cost of about £14,000, and large steamers can enter at any state of the tide. Lobster and cod fishing are carried on to some extent, and during the last few years an extensive herring fishery has sprung up, which commences early in May and continues about eight weeks; in this work, from four to six hundred boats, coming from all the ports of the north and east coasts of Scotland, are engaged, necessarily causing a large influx of people to the town, so that for the time being the population is increased by about 5,000; the bulk of the herrings are cured and sent to the English and continental markets.

Stromness was created an independent burgh of barony by a charter from the Crown, granted in 1817, when the government was vested in two bailies and nine councillors; it is now a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," the government consisting of a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the third Thursday of March, June and September and on the first Thursday of December. Stromness is a very irregularly built town, the habitations having been erected without any regard to uniformity of arrangement, and generally as near the sea as possible; some are even within flood mark, and protected by bulwarks, quays, and jetties, which each individual appears to have constructed as suited his own convenience. The streets are paved and there are gas works in the town. There is a public library, supported by annual subscriptions. The market days are first Wednesday of each month. An annual fair is held on the first Tuesday in September. Branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, are established here, and there are two hotels. The Orkney Natural History Society's Museum contains Hugh Miller's celebrated Asterolepis, and many other specimens of much interest, and has been further enriched by assortments from the collection of the late Dr. Baikie. The area of the parish comprises 7,618 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £4,851, and of the remainder of the parish, £2,806; the population in 1891 was 2,383, including 1,698 in the town, and in 1881, 2,410, with 1,705 in the town; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 1,633.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order & Express Delivery Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Orkney added); Mrs. Elizabeth Ross, postmistress. Deliveries from the south & Kirkwall, 7 a.m.; Kirkwall & local, 2.30 p.m.; dispatches to the south & Kirkwall, 8.55 a.m.; Kirkwall, 3.15 p.m.; locals, 7 a.m.

STRONSAY and EDAY, formerly a united civil parish, but under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," are now two separate parishes, in Orkney poor combination and Kirkwall small debt court district, and comprise the islands of Anskerry, Eday, Papa-Stronsay, Pharay and Stronsay, which are separated from the other islands of the group by Stronsay Firth. Stronsay Island is about 22 miles north-east from Kirkwall. Communication with Kirkwall is maintained by steamer, three times weekly in summer, and twice in winter. The area of Stronsay is 9,000 acres; rateable value, £3,671; population in 1891, 1,251.

Pharay, an adjoining island, is in the parish, and contained a population in 1881 of 72, and in 1891, 58.

Anskerry is a small island south of Stronsay, on which is a lighthouse. The population in 1891 was 7.

Papa-Stronsay is a small island to the north of Stronsay. The population in 1891 was 27.

Eday is an island lying west-by-north of Stronsay, from which it is separated by Eday Sound, and is in the Orkney poor combination and the small debt court district of Kirkwall. There are several Pictish remains on the island. The rateable value is £1,510; the population of the island in 1881 was 730, and in 1891, 647, and of the parish, 705.

WESTRAY and PAPA WESTRAY form a united parish, comprising the two islands of that name, on the north-west of the Orkney, in Orkney poor combination and Kirkwall small debt court district.

Westray is an island and ecclesiastical parish, formed from the above united parish, and is about 28 miles north from Kirkwall, with which place there is communication by steamer three times weekly in summer and twice a week in winter. Fairs for cattle are held on the third Thursday in March and the first Thursday in August. The area of the entire civil parish is 13,585 acres; rateable value, £3,736; the population in 1891 was 2,445, and of the island, 2,007.

Papa Westray is an island in the united parish, and is separated from Westray by Papa Sound. The steamer from Kirkwall calls here on the same days as at Westray. The rateable value is £792; the population in 1891 was 537.

PEEBLES-SHIRE.

THIS county, otherwise Tweeddale, in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire, on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfriesshire, and by the county of Lanark for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures fully 30 miles; from east to west its breadth varies from 20 to 10 miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and it comprehends an area of 223,295 acres. In 1881 the population was 13,822, and in 1891 comprised 6,319 males and 7,848 females, total, 14,761; the inhabited houses in 1881 were 2,696, and in 1891, 2,989. In size Peebles ranks the twenty-fourth, and in population the thirty-first of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—The shire derives its present name from the county town, and Tweeddale from being the district in which the Tweed has its source, and the vale through which it pursues its course to the east. The Gadeni tribe of Britons, who inhabited this secluded territory on the Tweed, have left innumerable traces of their occupation demonstrated in the names of places, Druidic and warlike remains, and a sepulchral tumuli. About 80 A.D. the Romans subdued the British aborigines in the district. After the abdication of the Roman power in 410, the Gadeni associated with the kindred Britons of Strathclyde, and the descendants of those early settlers continued here throughout the Pictish period; about 530 the Picts were defeated by King Arthur at Cadernuir, near Peebles. Kenneth III. King of the Scots, obtained possession of the district about 974. From the epoch of the migration of the Strathclyde Britons, in the 9th century, the Scotch-Irish intermingled with the remaining Britons on the upper Tweed. The next and last class of intruders on the district were the Anglo-Saxons, from Lothian, who finally established a settlement in the shire. One of the chiefs of this people, called Eadulph, settled in the vale of Eilstone water; in this manner those of Saxon lineage founded the families of rank in Peebles-shire. At different times the county suffered in a small degree from the incursions of marauders from the English side of the border, but these generally passed to the east, up the coast, or through Dumfriesshire and Lanark. At the defeat of Montrose, 13 September, 1645, at Philiphaugh, some of the heads of the best families fell, or were taken prisoners, fighting on the side of royalty, and Montrose retired to Traquair, in this county; but in the insurrection of 1679, in the west of Scotland, ended by the battle of Bothwell Bridge, there were few natives of Tweeddale; the troops in 1715 and 1745 also passed clear of this county. Since these stirring events the county has not been prominent in the scenes of history. When Scotland began to be divided into sheriffdoms, about the 12th century, Tweeddale was put under the jurisdiction of two sheriffs, one of whom was settled at Traquair, the other at Peebles. Peebles-shire, from its connection with the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde, became a part of the diocese of Glasgow, in which it continued till the abolition of episcopacy.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—The county is an uninterrupted series of hill and mountain ranges, so close upon each other that there is scarcely to be found a plain of moderate dimensions in the district, and not one of any kind unless upon the margin of the Tweed, or its tributaries. The elevations for so small a county are very numerous, and some of them of considerable altitude. The following are among the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea:—Hartfield, 2,916 feet; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gurne Clengh, 2,200; Dundreich, Pykestone, and Hell's Clengh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800; Broughton Heights, 1,483; and Meigle, 1,480. Notwithstanding the attempts made by several individuals to encourage better modes of agriculture, till within the present century the management of arable farms was in a deplorably low condition; but in later years particularly, draining, ploughing and planting have been carried out effectually, and the general features of the country highly improved. The sides and summits of the hills are at the present time here and there clothed with plantations; and the great vale of the Tweed and its minor valleys are well cultivated, enclosed and divided; arable fields have taken the place of unproductive swamps, and are advancing up the sides of the hills. Oats is the chief corn crop; turnips are also raised largely, the soil being admirably adapted for the growing of this root, upon which large numbers of sheep of the Cheviot and black-faced breeds are fed. The chief crops, as shown by the agricultural returns for Great Britain, 1898, was oats, 8,174 acres; barley or bere, 381; total corn crops, 8,557 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,081 acres; cabbage &c. 370; potatoes, 369; total green crops, 4,896; hay, 3,616 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 15,347 acres; permanent pasture, 15,620; total area of land and water, 223,295; mountain and heath land being 153,357 acres; woods, 8,279 acres; plantations, 1,198 acres. The live stock in 1898 comprised 910 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 203; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 2,140; other cattle, 5,242; ewes kept for breeding, 86,242; other sheep, 109,610; pigs, 643. Little can be said of the minerals of the county. At the north-east extremity of the shire coal is found, but the production in 1897 was only 844 tons, value £243. The other minerals raised in the county in 1897 was, basalt, 6,880 tons; limestone, 2,916 tons; sandstone, 356 tons. The shire is almost devoid of manufactures, except at Peebles and Innerleithen, where there are several mills for the production of tweeds and shawls. The district possesses in the purity and fall of its waters a superiority which make it altogether advantageous for the establishment of paper and spinning mills, as well as general factories.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams. The upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedmuir, in this county; it is fed by many tributaries, and, after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the German Ocean. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manow, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed, and the Leggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are salmon and trout, and a lake, called the West Water Loch, is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. The North British railway enters the north of the county at Leadburn, and sending a branch via Broonlce (for West Linton) and Dolphinton, runs due south to Peebles, where it turns eastward to Innerleithen and Galashiels, while a branch of the Caledonian railway runs from Peebles westward, through the centre of the county to Biggar.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The shire comprises 14 parishes and 13 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 4 others; it contains one royal burgh, Peebles, but possesses no representative burgh; the county, in conjunction with that of Selkirk, however, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament; the parliamentary constituency in 1898 was 2,769. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 (including the burgh of Peebles) was £146,432.

DRUMELZIER (pronounced Drumel-yer) is a parish on the east bank of the Tweed, in the south-western part of the county, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, 3 miles south-east from Broughton station on the Carstairs and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south-west from Peebles. The parish church stands on the Powisall rivulet, a little way above its junction with the Tweed. Drumelzier Castle, formerly a seat of the once powerful family of Tweedie, stands in beautiful grounds, and is the last of a chain of fortresses placed every two or three miles on the banks of the Tweed. By the side of the Powsaye Burn, and a little below the churchyard, the famous prophet Merlin is said to have been buried. Dalwick House is the seat of Mrs. Janet Balfour. Mrs. Jane A. White, of Netherurd, Mitchell Thomson esq. of Polmoor and Walter Stuart, of Kingledores, are the principal landowners. The area is 17,948 acres; rateable value, £3,420; the population in 1881 was 208, and in 1891, 187.

EDDLESTON (or EDDLESTONE) is a parish and village in Peebles poor combination and small debts court district, 4 miles north from Peebles, with a station on the North British railway. The Eddleston water, which takes its rise from various springs on the north and north-east boundaries of the parish, divides the village into two parts, and at Cowie's Lynn forms a cascade thirty-five feet high. The South Esk also has its source in a small lake within two miles of the village. Anciently the kirk and its small hamlet stood among the hills to the east, where some vestiges of them still exist. Lord Elibank (Lord Lieutenant), of Darn Hall; the trustees of the late C. J. Mackenzie esq. J.P. of Portmore (d. April 10, 1896), and James Wolfe Murray esq. of Oringletie, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 18,490; rateable value, £11,932; population in 1881, 711, and in 1891, 571.

INNERLEITHEN (or INVERLEITHEN)

is a police burgh, in the small debt court district of Peebles, and a parish, near the mouth of the Leithen, within a quarter of a mile of the left bank of the Tweed, and environed on the east and west by high and partly wooded hills; a bridge across the Tweed connects the town with Traquair; here is a station on the North British railway, 28 miles south from Edinburgh, 16 north-west from Selkirk, 12 west from Greenshields and 6 east-south-east from Peebles. The burgh is governed by a provost and six commissioners, and is lighted with gas. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (62 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the portion of Innerleithen formerly in Selkirk county has been transferred to Peebles-shire. The Roman Catholic church was built by benefactions left by Lady Louisa Stuart, of Traquair, the last of the direct line of that family, d. 1875. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland, and a savings bank here. Upon the banks of the Leithen are several large woollen factories, the machinery of which is partly propelled by the stream, and the works employ a considerable number of hands. Tweed and other woollen goods are made here. Some of the prosperity of the village is derived from the number of visitors who resort here in summer for the benefit of the mineral springs, which possess properties similar to the waters of Harrogate and Strathpeffer, and are found beneficial in cases of scrofulous disorders, inflammation of the eye and various diseases originating in impurity of the blood, and also for dyspepsia and stomach disorders. Private furnished lodgings are obtainable, and there are likewise three hotels. A well-house was erected in 1826, which is now the property of the St. Ronan's Wells and Mineral Water Co. Limited, and a pump-house was built in 1896. About 1840 an association was instituted styled the "St. Ronan's Border Club," under whose auspices an annual festival was held for the exhibition of border games and gymnastic exercises. Though the club is extinct, the competitions still take place, and usually in August. About 3 miles west, situated on a knoll, are the ruins of Horsburgh Castle, an ancient border peel tower, said by Armstrong to have been habitable in 1775. Between Innerleithen and Walkburn are Purves Hill Terraces, which are planted with ash trees, but their contour may be easily made out; they vary from about 50 feet to about 120 feet in breadth, and the second in the ascent is over 900 feet in length; the depth between each terrace is about 14 feet. At one end of these terraces stood Purves Hill Tower, but only a few stones now remain to attest its site. This place is supposed to have furnished the scene of Sir Walter Scott's novel, "St. Ronan's Well." Glenormiston House is the residence of Michael G. Thorburn esq. J.P. The trustees of the late George Miller-Cunningham esq. of Leithen Lodge (d. 1897), Major James Llewellyn Evans, of Holylee, M. G. Thorburn esq. and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. of Scarthgillwell Hall, Tadcaster, Yorks, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 23,981 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,533; burghal, £10,816; the population in 1881 was 3,661, and in 1891, 4,161 in the civil parish, 2,775 in the ecclesiastical and 2,512 in the burgh.

KILBUCHO, see BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM AND KILBUCHO.

KIRKURD is a parish in Peebles poor combination, on the western confines of the county, and is bounded on the north by the Tarb, a tributary of the Tweed. The Broughton brook, a tributary of the latter, flows through the parish. From the first-named river the land rises in cultivated and enclosed grounds, and then becomes hilly, with eminences covered with plantations; it is about 4 miles south from Dolphinton station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and on the Carstairs and Dolphinton branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 north-west from Peebles. The ancient church of Kirkurd belonged to an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Solre, and it remained the property of that charitable institution until transferred to the hospital of Trinity Church, Edinburgh. Castlecraig is the seat of Sir Thos. David Gibson-Carmichael bart. M.P. D.L., J.P. the principal landowner. Acreage, 5,698; rateable value, £3,058; population in 1881, 282, and in 1891, 265.

WEST LINTON is a parish, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, with two stations, one at Broomlee, 1 mile south-east from the village, and another at Macbie Hill, 3 miles east, on the Leaburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway. The village is irregularly built, and is on the banks of the Lyne water. Besides this stream, the parish is watered by the North Esk, Tarh and West water, and although the greater part of the district is hilly, it is fertile, and famed for its excellent sheep pastures; it is 16 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 14 north-west from Peebles, and about 11 north-north-east from Biggar. Linton, from 1683, conferred the title of baron upon the family of Stuart, Earls of Traquair, but these titles have been dormant since the death of Charles, 8th Earl, in 1861. A branch of the Bank of Scotland and a savings bank are established in the village. Macbie Hill lies partly in this and partly in Newlands parish, and was inherited by Amelia, third daughter of Sir William Montgomery, up to 1830, when it passed by marriage to the family of the Bressford. Medwyn is the seat of John Houbton Forbes esq. J.P.; Garvald of William Allan-Woddrig esq. D.L., J.P. and Spittalhaugh of Sir James Ranken-Ferguson bart. D.L., J.P. J. H. Forbes esq. and Sir James H. Ferguson bart. of Spital Haugh House, are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 23,256 acres; rateable value, £12,146; population in 1881 was 1,117, and in 1891, 1,005; of this number 359 were returned for the village.

Carlops, in West Linton parish, is a small village, on the northern verge of the county, about 3 miles north-east from West Linton. It originated in the year 1784, and takes its name from some localities in the neighbourhood called "Carlobes lumps." It is a great summer retreat for visitors, and stands 1,000 feet above sea level. The falls of the North Esk at Patres Mill are of special interest.

LYNE is a parish, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, on the left bank of the stream of that name, and has a station on the Carstairs and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway. The Earl of Wemyss V.D., LL.D. is the sole landowner. The area of the original parish of Lyne and Megget is 17,227 acres; rateable value of Lync only, £1,436; the population of Lyne in 1891 was 436.
Megget, formerly with Lyne, a united civil parish, and still ecclesiastically annexed, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 56, transferred to Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire. MANOR is a parish, bounded by Peebles on the north and Megget on the south, and its northern extremity abuts on the Tweed. The district is the vale of the Manor water, which rises in its southern hill quarter, and falls into the Tweed about two miles west of Peebles, and from which the water supply for Peebles is taken. The parish, 3 miles south-west from Peebles station on the Caledonian and North British railway, is in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district; it formerly belonged to the rector of Peebles, and is supposed to derive its name from being the manor of the ancient church. Here are the remains of a Roman camp, and in the parish is a tower raised on an eminence, probably a watch tower, and a huge upright stone, of great age, perforated with many holes. In the vale, near the public road at the farm steading called Woodhouse, stands the cottage once inhabited by David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom it is said Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the "Black Dwarf," in his novel of that name. Sir Michael George Naesmyth bart. of Posso and Priory avenue, Hastings, Sussex, the Earl of Wemyss and the tutors of Sir Duncan Edwyn Hay bart. (a minor) are the principal landowners. Acreage, 16,622; rateable value, £5,030; population in 1881, 277, and in 1891, 243.

NEWLANDS is a parish, in Peebles poor combination, lying between West Linton and Eddleston parishes, watered by the Lyne and the Pointarf, and is bounded on the north-east by the North Esk, and on the north-west by the Medwyn, all of which are good troutling streams. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the hills are mostly green, without heath. Trees thrive in most parts of the parish, and the greater part is enclosed by hedgerows and fences. Newlands church is about 4 miles south from Broomlee station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and about 12 north-west from Peebles. There are two stations in the extreme northern part of the parish on the same branch, one at Lamancha, 5 miles north-east from the church, and another at Leadburn, 8 miles north-east. At the confluence of the Lyne water with the Tarth, stand the ruins of Drochil Castle, once a large structure, partly erected by the Regent Morton, and left unfinished when he was put to death on the scaffold. Lamancha was a seat of the Baris of Dundonald up to the beginning of the 19th century, and after several changes became the property of James Mackintosh esq. The Whim, in this parish, a massive, gloomy and unpicturesque edifice resembling an hospital, once the property of the Argyle family, and afterwards of Sir James Montgomery, baron of the Exchequer, is now the seat of J. Maitland Thomson esq. Macbie Hill is the seat of John George Massey-Beresford esq. J.P. Acreage of the parish, 12,518, assessable value, £7,542; population in 1881, 819, and in 1891, 715.

Noblehouse, in this parish, was formerly known by an inn at which the trustees of the turnpike roads used to assemble, but these meetings are now transferred to the County hall, Peebles. Romano, another house in the parish, was at the end of the 17th century the property and residence of Dr. Alexander Pencyetick, the author of some clever poems and a poetical "Description of Tweeddale," a district of which he was a native. It is now the property of Major Irving John Kennedy, and the residence of William Kennedy Sandilands esq. J.P. Post & Telegraph Office, Lamancha (Railway Sub-Office. PEEBLES.

PEEBLES is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of its county and parish, the seat of a presbytery, and the head of a poor combination, 22 miles south from Edinburgh, 22 west-by-north from Selkirk, 54 north-north-east from Dumfries and 47 east-by-south from Glasgow, situated in the centre of the parish, on a beautiful and large plain, having the Tweed running along its southern side and the Peebles (or Eddleston) water along its northern limit, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills; the neighbourhood is adorned by numerous plantations and mansions. Among the latter, Kingsmeadows, Kerfield, Venlaw and Rosetta are the most conspicuous. Peebles has a station on the Galashiels and Dalkeith section of the North British railway, and is also the terminus of a branch line from Symington on the Caledonian railway. For a long period Peebles has consisted of two towns, respectively, called New and Old; the former occupies the ridge of a peninsula projecting westward, along the northern side of which flows the Eddleston, over which is a bridge forming a communication with the Old Town. The Eddleston water, by a bend round the head of the peninsula, falls into the Tweed, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, which has been widened and improved. The streets and principal shops in the town are lighted with gas supplied by the corporation. There is a golf course near the town. It is not satisfactorily ascertained at what period Peebles was erected a royal burgh; Alexander III. was a munificent patron, and its original charter is supposed to have been bestowed by that monarch. Succeeding kings recognised its right to the distinction, and James VI. by his charter granted to the burghesses a large amount of landed property and right of common in different parts, nearly the whole of which has been lost. The government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, seven councillors and town clerk. A sheriff court is held on Tuesday and Thursday, and a sheriff small debt court every other Friday; general meetings of the County Council take place here in the months of May, October and December, and the meetings of lieutenantancy as occasion requires. The Established church, erected on the site of the former edifice, and opened March 24th, 1887, at a cost of about £10,000, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style of the 13th century, from designs by Mr. William Young, architect, of London, and contains upwards of 1,200 sittings. The Episcopal church has a beautiful window of stained glass. The Leckie Memorial United Presbyterian church was erected in 1877 by the surviving sons and daughters of the Rev. Thomas Leckie, the first pastor of the Associate Burgher Congregation, and presented by them to the congregation in memory of their father; it also has a stained window. A United Presbyterian church, for the west congregation, was erected at a cost of £4,000; it will seat 650 persons, and has a hall adjacent, to hold 300. The Baptist church is an edifice of red sandstone, and was opened in 1895. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1858 by the exertions of the Rev. J. Chapperton, aided by numerous friends. The Town and County Halls are used for public assemblies and meetings. The Chambers Institution is a fine building in High street, containing a library of 16,000 volumes, a reading room, museum, or gallery of art. Within the edifice is also a large hall for lectures and exhibitions, and a county museum. This valuable property was presented to the burgh by the late William Chambers LL.D. founder, with his brother Robert, of the publishing firm of W. & R. Chambers, Edinburgh. He was born here in 1800, and in 1832 began publishing "Chambers' Edinburgh Journal," and subsequently numerous works for the popularisation of knowledge; in 1865 he was elected Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and died in 1883. The old Market Cross, which was in existence in 1320, was, by a resolution of the Council in 1807, ordered for sale as being ruinous. The shaft was secured by the late Sir John Hay, and was preserved in his grounds at Kingsmeadows till 1858, when he handed it over to the burgh. The late Dr. William Chambers then had it placed in the quadrangle of the Chambers' institution, in 1859, and there it remained till Major Thorburn, in 1895, restored it to its original position at the junction of High street, Northgate, and Eastgate. The Unionist club, in High street, was opened in October, 1895. There are four woollen mills, which give employment to a large number of hands, and several good hotels. The Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Co. Bank have each a branch here. Two newspapers are published here weekly, which have a good circulation. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March (for hiring servants) and the second Tuesday in October. The Royal Company of Archers, or Queen's Body Guard for Scotland, come to Peebles from Edinburgh occasionally, attired in the ancient dress of the bowmen of Scotia, to shoot for the old-established prize of a silver arrow, given by the burgh to the most successful marksman. A poorhouse has been erected on the Rosetta road. An Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected by the local authorities of the county and the burghs of Peebles and Innerleithen, on the Kirklands, just opposite the poorhouse, and opened at the end of the year 1895; the building is a wood and iron one, and has 12 beds. The ruins of the two ancient churches are still extant, one of which was dedicated to St. Andrew; the other, built by Alexander III. in the middle of the 13th century, was dedicated to the Holy Cross and St. Nicholas; the same monarch likewise erected a house contiguous to the church, which continued a royal residence until the secession of James VI. to the throne of England. Neidpath Castle, a noble ruin, stands in a romantic glen, about a mile distant. This locality is much resorted to in summer for its excellent trout and salmon fishing. Half a mile to the east of the town, on a hill called "Janet's Brae," may be discerned the traces of two ancient British camps. The parish of Peebles has an area of 16,597 acres; rateable value: landward, £10,048; burghal, £25,705; the population in 1881 was 4,059, and 1891, parish 5,281, town 4,704, burgh 3,059. Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, High street, Peebles; Donald McIntyre, postmaster. Deliveries, 6.50 & 9 a.m. & 12.45 & 3 p.m.; dispatches, 7.30 a.m. & 9.50 a.m. & 1.15, 2.20, 4, 5.15, 7.10 & 8.45 p.m.; sundays, 6 p.m.

Wall Letter Boxes, in the town, are cleared as follows:—Bonnington road, 7.10 a.m. 1.40, 3.35 & 8.30 p.m.; Crossland crescent, 7.20 a.m. 1.45, 3.50 & 8.35 p.m.; Frankscoff, 7.20 a.m. 1.45, 3.45 & 8.35 p.m.; Innerleithen road, 7.45 a.m. 1.45 & 8.25 p.m.; Northgate, 7.25 a.m. 1.50, 3.55 & 8.40 p.m.; Young street, 7.15 a.m. 1.40, 3.45 & 8.30 p.m.

SKIRLING is a parish and small village in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district; the village is on the road from Biggar to Peebles, about 2½ miles east from Biggar station on the Carstairs and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway; the parish, which is about 3 miles long by 2½ in width, is bounded on the south by Biggar water, and west by Spittal brook, which separates it from Lanarkshire. The general features of the district are of the same hilly and undulating character noticeable throughout the surrounding country, but in a more advanced state of cultivation. The parish church is in the presbytery of Biggar. The whole of the land in the parish belongs to Sir Thomas David Gibson-Carmichael bart. of Castle-craig, Dalhousie. The area is 3,423 acres; rateable value, £2,545; population in 1881, 274, and in 1891, 216.

STOBO is a generally well cultivated planted parish in the western part of the county, about 6 miles in length and 4 in breadth, lying for the most part on the left bank of the Tweed, and bounded on the north-east by the Lyma water; it is in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, and has a station on the Carstairs and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway. The greater part of the parish is hilly and of a pastoral character; but adjacent to the Tweed and the Lyma the land is well cultivated, and some of it finely planted—the latter character of improvement especially in the grounds surrounding Stobo Castle, a modern and beautiful edifice, a short distance from the parish church, within view of the Tweed, and the seat of Sir Graham Graham-Montgomery bart. of Stanhope. Sir G. Graham-Montgomery bart. and the trustees of the late Alexander Balfour, of Dalwick (d. 1886), and the Earl of Wemyss are the principal landowners. Acreage, 10,302; rateable value, £6 198; population in 1881, 467, and in 1891, 433.

TRAQUAIR is a parish in the small debt court district of Peebles, and is on the south bank of the Tweed, and watered also by the river Quair; it lies opposite to Innerleithen, with which place it is connected by a modern girder bridge over the Tweed, erected at a cost of about £3,500. The Traquair, England and Newhall brooks and the Bold burn, all tributaries of the Tweed, flow through the parish. The parish is generally mountainous, and includes Gumsclough and Minchmoor, two lofty eminences lying on the old road to Selkirk, and over which Montrose retreated after his defeat at the battle of Philiphaugh, 13 Sept. 1645. The church is 3½ miles south from Innerleithen station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, and 9 south-east from Peebles; there is also a station at Cardrona in this parish, on the same branch, 6 miles north from the church. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 59, a portion of Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire, has been transferred to Traquair. This place, from 1683, conferred the title of earl upon the Stuart family, barons Stuart, Linton and Starborton, but all these became dormant on the death of Charles, 8th Earl, in 1861. Traquair House has a tower at the north-east corner, believed to have been erected before the year 900; large additions were made to this mansion by John, first Earl of Traquair. The chartulary of the family contains many ancient and important family and historical documents, some of which are dated as far back as the 9th century, and bear the signature of Malcolm III. The house is now the seat of Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. D.L., J.P. the present representative of the family, who acquired property through Lady Louisa Stuart, who died in 1875; it is delightfully situated on the banks of the Tweed, where that river and the Quair unite; and about a quarter of a mile to the west of the mansion-house is the "Bush above Traquair" (the subject of the celebrated ballad), now indicated only by a few birch trees, the remains of a thicket or arbour. The Glen, the seat of Sir Charles Tennant bart. D.L. is also in this parish. Cardrona House is the property of the trustees of the late Lord Watson P.C. died, 1899, now occupied by Miss Williamson. The area is 15,327 acres; rateable value, £8,348; the population in 1881 was 754, and in 1891, 700.

TWEEDSMUIR until about the middle of the 17th century, formed part of the parish of Drumelzier, but was then erected into a separate parish. It is in the Peebles poor combination and is in the south-western corner of the county, with Lanarkshire on its western and Dumfries-shire on its southern border. Within the bounds of the parish the river Tweed is augmented by the Fruid, Talla and Cor waters and several brooks. The water scheme (1895) of the Edinburgh and District Water Trust included the formation of a reservoir in the valley of the Talla, with pipes to convey 24,000,000 gallons daily, a bridge of granite and steel in place of the old narrow bridge at Tweedsmuir and a road to the reservoir. The church is 7 miles south from Broughton station on the Carstairs and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway, and about 16 south-west from Peebles. There are several ancient and rude strongholds in the parish, some of them dignified by the name of "Castles," but having few of the features belonging to a fortress. Earl of Wemyss V.D., LL.D., The Edinburgh Water Trust and Walter Thorburn esq. M.P. of Kerfield, are the principal landowners. Acreage 23,469; rateable value, £4,960; population in 1881, 215, and in 1891, 207.

WALKERBURN is a village, in the civil parish of Innerleithen and a quad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Innerleithen and Traquair; it is on the north bank of the Tweed. The village is supplied with spring water from the neighbouring hills, and has a station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, about 8 miles south-west from Peebles. In the village is a Public hall holding 800 people. About 1855 this village consisted only of two cots and a farm house, but the late Henry Ballantyne esq. having secured the use of the Tweed as a motive power for the mills, subsequently, in conjunction with the late Robert Freer, established woollen factories here, of which Messrs. James Dalziel and Co. are the present proprietors. The two mills give employment to a number of hands. Population in 1881, 1,026, and in 1891, 1,288.

PERTHSHIRE.

THIS is one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, lying nearly in the centre of the country, and forming the south-eastern district of the Highlands. It is bounded on the east by the county of Forfar; on the south-east by the counties of Kinross and Fife—from the latter county it is separated for a considerable distance by the Firth of Tay; further on the south its boundary are Stirlingshire and the small county of Clackmannan, which latter it embraces on both sides; on the south-west Dumbarton touches it for a short distance; on the west it is bounded by Argyllshire, and on the north-west and north by Inverness-shire and Aberdeen-shire. The contour of the county is very irregular. From the Firth of Forth at Culross, on the extreme south, to the Forest of Athole, at the source of the Tilt, on the north, it measures 68 miles; and from Meikle on the east, to Argyllshire on the west, about 77 miles. The area of Perthshire is estimated at 1,632,782 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 59,743 males and 66,441 females, total, 126,184, against 129,046 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 27,638 in 1891, and 26,729 in 1881. In size it ranks as the fourth, the three larger being Argyllshire, Inverness-shire and Ross and Cromartyshire, and in population as the eighth of the Scottish counties.

Early History.—The Romans appear to have extended their conquests into this county, though it lay north of their great wall between the Forth and Clyde; they are recorded to have settled a colony on the site where Perth now stands. One of the roads formed by the invaders, passing along the district of Strathearn towards Perth, may still be traced, and also from Perth along Strathmore, to the extremity of the county; the remains of several encampments, likewise, are at this day observable, particularly one at Ardoch, in the parish of Muthill, the largest and most conspicuous in Scotland. From 446, some 30 years after the Romans retired, until 843, when Perthshire fell under the Dalriada rule, this portion of Britain was ruled by Pictish kings, and it was in consequence of a marriage between a daughter of this race and a king of the Dalriads that these latter gained the country, and they are believed to have transferred to Scone Abbey the "Stone of Destiny," about 850; in the next century the Danes penetrated here and were defeated by Donal IV. and Constantine III. at Forteviot, early in the century, and again in 961 at Luncaerty. In the 11th century the Northumbrians who were established in the Lothians penetrated in this county and defeated Macbeth, in 1056, at Dunsinane; and until the middle of the 17th century the clan feuds kept the country in a restless state. In August, 1650, Cromwell, after his victory at Dunbar, took Perth; and on 26 July, 1689, Viscount Dundee defeated General Mackay (William III.'s general) at Killiecrankie, in the north of the county, and, in August, William's forces gained a victory at Dunkeld. In 1715 Mar gained a doubtful victory at Sherriffmuir, and in 1745 Perth was occupied by Prince Charles Edward. Before the Reformation and during the domination of episcopacy, Perthshire formed the diocese of a bishop whose seat was at Dunkeld, as well as another bishopric at Dunblane.

Soil, Surface, Climate and Produce &c.—Perthshire is subdivided into districts, which, previous to the jurisdiction established in 1748, were stewardries under the power of different great landed proprietors; the names of these various districts (or feudalities) are Menteith, Gowrie, Perth Proper, Strathearn, Stormont, Breadalbane, Rannoch, Balquhither and Athole. Little attention, however, is now paid to these divisions, and the county is arranged in the more natural divisions of Highland and Lowland, the uplands around the range of Grampians forming the line of demarcation. 18 parishes belong to the Highland portion, while that of the Lowland comprises 58, but though the latter comprise more parishes, the former covers the larger area, Blair Athol parish having 181,114 acres and Forthingal, 196,683. The soil of Perthshire comprehends all the varieties known in Scotland—the coarse and loamy being prevalent on the banks of the rivers, and the sandy and tillable classes on the sides of the hills; in many places are extensive mosses, particularly in Menteith district, but with the progress of agriculture some of these have been partially reclaimed. Five-eighths of the area of the county consists of heath land and woods. The climate on the whole is mild and salubrious, especially in the south, but in the north and west the cold is more general, in consequence of the elevated nature of the country; these districts are, nevertheless, dry and healthy, being screened by the Grampians from the northern blasts. The mountains of greatest altitude in Perthshire are: Ben Lawers, 4,015; Ben More, 3,903; Ben a' Ghlo, 3,724; Schiehallion, 3,561; Ben Doarg, 3,550; Ben Vorlich, 3,224; Ben Ledi, 2,875; Ben Venue, 2,380; Ben Chonai, 2,922; Farragon, 2,584; and Ben Tulachan, 3,099 feet above the level of the sea. Perthshire is famous for its extensive deer forests, and abounds with game of nearly every description, though the large species is now considerably diminished in numbers; the red deer inhabit the forest and mountain glades and are very wild; but the roe appears, even in the summer, in the woodlands and plantations of the valleys, down to the habitable places. The extent of deer forests in this county is about 100,000 acres, being much less than Rosshire and Inverness-shire. Athole, the largest forest in area in Perthshire, being 50,000 acres; Tealan, 14,000; Glenartney, 15,000; and Rannoch, 10,000. The shootings form a considerable item in the revenue of the proprietors, being

let for the season at large rentals to gentlemen, principally for pastime and sport; and in addition they afford employment to a number of persons in various capacities; other game besides deer comprise grouse, pheasants, woodcock, ptarmigan, capercaillie, hares &c. The lochs and rivers also provide good fishing for salmon, trout and pike. Within the last century there has been a great deal of planting in Perthshire. The late Duke of Atholl took a distinguished part in the rearing of plantations; it appears from returns published in 1830, that he planted 15,473 English acres, the plants amounting to the enormous number of 27,231,600; of these plantations, the principal portion, to the amount of about 8,600 acres, are of larch, about 1,000 of oak, the remainder being Scotch fir, spruce fir, a few acres of birch &c. The same nobleman exerted himself for the improvement of the roads of the county, which have been brought into excellent condition. During the present century a great change has been effected in the agriculture of Perthshire, the low parts of which now vie in cultivation, wealth, and beauty with any district in Scotland; the upper portion of the county is still devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, which are mostly driven southwards for sale and consumption. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes and turnips are all cultivated. The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1898," are oats, 63,985 acres; barley or bere, 14,672; wheat, 6,096 acres; vetches, 2,125; total corn crops, 87,501 acres; turnips and swedes 29,040 acres; potatoes, 12,385; cabbage &c. 352; vetches or tares, 350; total green crops, 42,217 acres; hay, 39,679 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 70,063 acres; permanent pasture, 96,396 acres; heath and mountain land, 363,107 acres; orchards, 532 acres; small fruit, 880 acres; bare fallow, 1,203 acres; woods, 88,596 acres; plantations, 5,507, and the total area of land and water, 1,632,782. The live stock in 1898 comprised 10,246 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares, unbroken horses, 2,863; cows and heifers, in milk or in calf, 18,771; other cattle, 59,894; ewes kept for breeding, 286,690; other sheep, 454,462; sows, kept for breeding, 914; other pigs, 6,411. The minerals are not of sufficient importance to be worked as a commercial venture. The only minerals raised in the county in 1897 was basalt, 48,407 tons; limestone, 1,740 tons; sandstone, 32,741 tons, and slate, 9,764 tons. Marble of a superior quality is worked near Glentworth. About Callander the species of rock called "breccia," or more familiarly, "plum pudding stone," is not uncommon; and here also, as in other parts, are various kinds of slate. A chain of sandstone runs from Gartree to the vicinity of Crieff; upon the Tay is one of the most celebrated stona quarries in this county; the principal stone of which the Grampians consist is granite. The principal industry in the towns and villages of Perthshire is the weaving of linen goods; in connection with this branch of manufacture, flax spinning mills and a considerable number of bleach fields have been established. The manufactures of the county are not, however, wholly confined to that of linen—tweeds, winceys, blankets, and other woollen goods being produced. Cotton spinning works are in operation at Stanley and Doune; and considerable dye works, distilleries, breweries and tanneries, together with iron foundries, engineering works &c. are found in several towns and villages.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—Perthshire abounds with extensive lakes and rivers. The chief rivers are the Tay, the Earn, the Garry, the Bran, the Almond, the Teath, the Allan, the Dochart, the Tummel, the Bruar, the Erich, the Ardie, the Shee, and the Isla—besides innumerable third and fourth-rate rivers and streamlets of all sizes. The Forth, from rising in Stirlingshire, is not considered a Perthshire river, though it flows along a large portion of its south-west quarter. The chief lakes of the county are Loch Katrine, Loch Achray, Loch Ard, Loch Voil, Loch Lubnaig, Loch Dochart and Loch Earn. Those are in the south-west part of the shire; Loch Tay in the centre of the mountainous district, and Loch Rannoch, Loch Erich, and Loch Lydoch, the two latter in part only, in the north-west quarter. In the lower division there are some smaller and less important lakes. The most remarkable mineral waters in this county are those of Piteachy, near the Bridge of Earn, which have long been famed for their efficacy in curing scrofula and complaints of the stomach. The railway system comprises lines belonging to the Caledonian, the North British, and the Highland railways, which all centre in the city of Perth. The Caledonian enters the county from Aberdeen at Alyth Junction (from which place is a short line to Alyth, passing through Coupar Angus and Cargill to Perth, and thence, by a line through the Carse of Gowrie, to Dundee; one, via Auchterarder and Dunblane, to Stirling (a branch from Dunblane running to Callender and Loch Tay and on to Oban) and one from Crieff Junction to Crieff, where it joins a line from Crieff to Comrie, from which place a line is now (1899) in course of construction, Lochearnhead on the Dunblane and Oban branch; another from Crieff to Methven and Almond Bank, and from Coupar Angus a line runs to Blairgowrie. The North British enters the county at Newburgh, from Ladybank Junction, and at Glenfuir, from Mawcarse Junction, both lines running to Bridge of Earn and thence to Perth. The Highland railway runs from Perth, via Luncaerty, Dunkeld, Ballinluig (whence there is a branch to Aberfeldy), Pitlochry, Blair Athole and through Glengarry to Kingussie, thence to Inverness.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Perthshire comprehends 71 entire parishes. The county is divided into 10 districts, Athole, Balquhither, Breadalbane, Glenshee, Gowrie, Menteith, Rannoch, Strathardie, Strathearn and Stormont, each under the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace court and deputy-lieutenants; it is further divided into two sheriff-substitute districts, called Eastern and Western, and controlled from Perth and Dunblane. The shire contains one royal burgh, the city of Perth, which returns one member to Parliament, and the county for parliamentary purposes is now separated into two divisions, and sends one member for each. The parliamentary constituency for 1898 was: East Division, 7,576; West Division, 8,156. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £1,094,047.

ABERFELDY is a town and police burgh in the parish of Dull, and in the poor combination of Atholl and Breadalbane, with a junction station on the Highland railway, from whence there is a branch to Ballinluig, 18 miles north-west from Dunkeld, 9 west from Logierait and 6 north-east from Kenmore; the town stands on the south bank of the beautiful river Tay, on the Great Highland road, which crosses the river by an elegant bridge of three arches, constructed by the celebrated Maj.-Gen George Wade, sometime M.P. for Hindon and Bath, and who, during the years 1725-6, superintended the formation of a number of military roads in the Scottish Highlands. The town, which is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water, was constituted a police burgh in 1887 under the Lindsay Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, who is ex-officio a justice of the peace for the county, two bailies, and eight commissioners. A sheriff small debt court is held in the Town Hall on the last Saturday of March, July and November. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a woollen factory. The principal hotels are the Breadalbane Arms and the Palace and Station hotels, all of which are much patronised in the season by visitors, more especially the "Breadalbane," on account of the facilities it affords for fishing in the Tay and Loch-na-Craig, this hotel having the privilege of the loch and a joint right with the Aberfeldy Angling Club in the river. The celebrated 42nd Highlanders, commonly known, on account of their dark tartan, as "the Black Watch," were enrolled in this district, but consisted in the first instance of armed detachments of loyal clans employed during the period 1725-39 to watch the Highlands. In 1887 a monument was erected here, in the form of a cairn, at a cost of about £500, to commemorate the formation of the regiment. In the neighbourhood are the romantic falls of Moness. Several fairs were formerly held in the course of the year; but the only one now is on the last Thursday in October (old style), for cattle and sheep; weekly cattle sales are held on Thursday. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C., D.L.,

J.P. is the principal landowner. The rateable value is £7,930; the population in 1881 was 1,260, and in 1891, 1,469.

ABERFOYLE is a parish and village, in the small debts court district of Dunblane; the parish is bounded on the north by Loch Katrine, and on the south by the Duchray water, and is remarkable for its picturesque scenery, its fine lakes and numerous streams, and the marked direction taken by the Grampians through the lower part of it, as well as for producing a great quantity of rare plants, of much interest to the botanist. The village, or "clachan," of Aberfoyle has a station on a branch from Stirling, via Buchlyvie, of the North British railway, and is about 18 miles north-west from Stirling and 27½ from Glasgow. It is the scene of some incidents in Sir Walter Scott's novel "Rob Roy," and at the head of the valley or pass lies Loch Ard, a bright and placid lake, surrounded by woods, above which rises the lofty Ben Lomond, one of whose summits is 3,192 feet above the level of the sea. A wooded promontory here jutting out into the water is said to have been the spot on which the skirmish described in "Rob Roy" occurred, and where Helen Macgregor made her first appearance. Loch Ard and Loch Chois, near Aberfoyle, are considered the earliest fly-fishing lochs in Scotland, fish taking readily early in March. In this parish is Benvenue mountain, 2,393 feet high. The well-known Baillie Nicol Jarvie hotel here, mentioned in "Rob Roy," provides excellent accommodation to tourists and visitors, and affords a good supply of boats. The old tree outside the hotel has hanging from its branches, by an old chain, the coulter of a plough, used by Baillie Nicol Jarvie. About a mile north of Loch Chois is the source of the river Forth. There is a good nine-hole golf course, a mile from the hotel. Fairs are held within the parish on the 3rd Tuesday in April, the first Friday in August, and the third Thursday in October. The Duke of Montrose K.T.; Edward Walter Joynson esq. of the Glassart; Lieut.-Col. Henry Robert Eyre

J.P. of Dundhu; Mrs. Blair; J. Russell Lindsay and James S. Mair esqs. are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Aberfoyle contains an area of 26,810 acres; rateable value, £18,940; the population in 1881 was 465, and in 1891, 1,023, and 943 in the ecclesiastical.

ABERNETHY is a parish and village and burgh of barony, formerly in the counties of Fife and Perth, but now included entirely in the latter, by order of the County Council commissioners. The parish is bounded by the river Earn on the north, on the east by Newburgh and Abdie, on the south by Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo, and on the west by Dron and Arngask, and is between 5 and 6 miles both in breadth and length. The village, said to have been the capital of the Pictish kingdom of Scotland, is scattered, and is about two-thirds of a mile south-west of the river Earn, 8 miles south-east from Perth, and 14 west from Cupar, in Fife, with a station on the Ladybank Perth branch of the North British railway. Abernethy burgh is governed by two bailies, 15 councillors, a treasurer and a town clerk; it has been constituted a police burgh for sanitary purposes, under the Lindsay Police Act, 1862. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in salmon fishing and weaving. In an angle of the burial ground of the Established church stands a circular tower, about 75 feet high and 24 feet in diameter at its base. The date of its erection is unknown, but tradition ascribes its origin to the Picts. On the outside of the tower is yet to be seen the jongs (a padlocked collar and chain), for the detention of offenders in bygone days. Aberargie is a small village about a mile and a half to the west. Glenfoot is a hamlet. A hill, a little to the north of Binn farm, commands one of the finest views in Scotland, comprising Strathmore, Strathern, the Grampians, Ochills, Sidlaws, Pentland hills, Firth of Forth, Lochleven Castle, Glen Farg &c. A fair is held on the fourth Wednesday in May. The Earl of Mansfield K.T., D.L. of Schaw Park, is the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish is 9,544 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,959; burghal, £1,729; the population in 1881 was 1,714, and in 1891, 1,550, the police burgh having 852 of this number.

ALYTH is a town and police burgh and a parish in the poor law combination of Perth and in the small debt court division of Blairgowrie. The parish formerly extended into Forfarshire, and included a portion of Mount Blair, a conspicuous hill 2,260 feet above the level of the sea, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 40 to 50), boundary order 92, the Forfarshire portion has been transferred to this county. The parish is divided into two considerable districts by the hills of Alyth, Loyal and Barry. The southern district lying in the strath is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and as well as the tract of land towards the hills, is fertile and verdant, and watered by the river Isla and several small streams. The town, pleasantly situated at the base of a range of hills on the small river Alyth, is 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 20 north-north-east from Perth, 17 north-west from Dundee, 12 west from Forfar, 5 north-east from Blairgowrie, and 4 north-west from Meikle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, completed in 1861. The town is lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with good water, and being within an easy distance of Dundee, receives a number of visitors from that neighbourhood during the summer months. A new and substantial stone bridge was erected in 1883 over the Alyth stream, at a cost of nearly £900. Alyth was created a burgh of barony by James III. but in 1862 the Lindsay Police Act was adopted and the town is now governed (according to the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892") by a police commission, consisting of a provost, two bailies and six commissionera. A police court is held when necessary. The parish church is an imposing edifice of stone in the Norman style, with tower and lofty spire. There are two mills employed in the manufacture of linen, and another for making woollens etc. and the combined factories afford work for a large number of the inhabitants. Fairs are held for hiring, cattle and sheep, the first Wednesday in November (old style) and the third Tuesday in May. Two newspapers are published here, "The Alyth Guardian," on Fridays, and "The Alyth Gazette," on Tuesdays. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Lim. and the Town and County Bank Lim. The principal hotels are the "Commercial" and the "Airlie Arms." The Public Library was erected from a bequest of £300 left by the late Hon. William Ogilvy, of Loyal, who also bequeathed the interest of a further sum of £200 for its support, and it now contains several thousand volumes. There are also several other benefactions, including the Baldoch fund, a sum of £30 per annum, bequeathed by the late Gilbert Hay esq. for the education and clothing of six boys and six girls, those of the names of Hay and Halkett being preferred; now merged, along with the Duncan, Fleming and Robertson Mortifications, into a new scheme under the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Commission, the Penton Mortification, being £900 left by Mr. John Penton, for providing coats and clothing for the poor; and the Ramsay bequest, being the interest of £418 left by the late Dowager Lady Ramsay, of Banff, to be distributed annually among the poor of the district. Banff House is the residence of Sir James Henry Ramsay bart. M.A., D.L. The Earl of Airlie K.T. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The entire civil parish contains an acreage of 23,296; rateable value, landward £18,802, burghal £8,213; and the population in 1881 numbered 3,621, and in 1891, 3,453, of which the town contained 2,322; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,275.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should be addressed R.S.O. Perthshire; William Robertson, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.45 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 2.30, 5.40 & 10 p.m. Telegraph office open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Post car is dispatched to Kirky, Glenisla & Folda at 8.30 a.m.

ARNGASK (a parish, in the small debts court district of Perth) and GLENFARG (its village), formerly considered as in the counties of Kinross, Fife and Perth, are now, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), wholly in Perthshire, except on the occasion of parliamentary elections, when the ballot is divided between the three counties. The form of the parish is nearly circular; it is about 4 miles in diameter, the church being half a mile west from Glenfarg station on the Mawcarse Junction and Perth branch of the North British railway, and about 6½ miles north from Kinross. The Farg, together with other streams in the vicinity, afford good sport to the angler, and present some beautiful scenery. The parish contains an Established church, in the churchyard of which is the grave of Major-Gen. John Agmondesham Vesey Kirkland D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. of Forde, interred here 27 March, 1896; he raised the 2nd Battalion of the 5th Foot in 1857, and commanded it for 12 years; here also is buried Gen. Robert Bruce, of Glendouglie, late Commander of Her Majesty's forces in Scotland, who died Oct. 14th, 1891. Dumcrievie and Druzie are hamlets, about a mile from Glenfarg railway station. Acreage, 6,452; rateable value, £6,070; population in 1881, 547, and in 1891, 564.

AUCHTERARDER is a town and police burgh, the head of a presbytery, and a parish, in the small debts court district of Perth, and poor law combination of Upper Strathearn. The town stands on the high road between Perth and Stirling, and on the south bank of the river Earn, 14 miles south-west from Perth and 20 north-north-east from Stirling, and has a station, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway. It was once a royal burgh, but under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," it is now governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. Under a special Act of Parliament, the town owns about 200 acres of arable land, managed by 13 commissioners, two of whom retire annually, with the exception of the proprietor of the Lower barony, whose seat at the board is permanent; power is given in the Act to fee 30 acres. The town is lighted with gas by a limited company, and an ample supply of excellent water is obtained from the Coal-bore springs, Aytoun Hall, which stands in the centre of the town, was erected in 1872, by the inhabitants as a memorial to the late Captain Aytoun, of Glenavon, who in 1832 provided the town with its first water supply. The principal manufactures are fancy shirtings and woollen tweeds. The corn market is held on Saturday, and live stock sales every alternate Saturday. Auchterarder House is the residence of Mrs. Reid, Cleanden, that of Mrs. Holdan, and Kincardine Castle, of Mrs. Johnston Bowne. The trustees of the late James Reid, of Auchterarder House; John Stevenson esq. of Aberuthven; the Earl of Camperdown; Lord Rollo D.L., J.P., F.S.A. of Dunning; and Mrs. Smeaton, of Coull, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 11,181 acres; rateable value, landward £11,578, burghal £8,259; the population in 1881 was 3,648, and in 1891, 3,494; the town possessing 2,524 of this number.

AUCHTERGAVEN is a parish, in the small debt court district of Perth, and lies on the south-west bank of the Tay, and on the south-east side of Birnam hill. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), parts of the parish were transferred to Moneydie and Monzie parishes, and a part of Methven added to Auchtergaven. In the parish arc extensive linen works. The Duke of Atholl K.T. is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 12,941; rateable value, £13,364; the population in 1881 was 2,195, and in 1891, 2,061, of which Bankfoot contained 673; of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,263.

Bankfoot village in this parish is on the road from Perth to Dunkeld, 3¼ miles north from Strathord station on the Perth and Dunkeld section of the Caledonian system, about 9 north-west from Perth and 6 south-east from Dunkeld.

BALQUHIDDER is a Highland parish, in the western extremity of the county, among the Grampians, and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The village, situated at the east end of Loch Vail, is 3 miles from Lochearnhead station, and 13 north-west from Callander, and is remarkable as the last residence of the famous Rob Roy, whose grave is pointed out in the churchyard. It was visited by Her Majesty and Princesses Louise and Beatrice in 1869. Rob Roy (Robert Macgregor Campbell), born 1660, was a highland chieftain, who became a freebooter in 1716, and died in 1735. The parish is mountainous and pastoral, and the numerous activities it contains have originated the popular reference to the "Braes of Balquhider;" among its mountain peaks Ben Chabhair and Stobinian rise in conspicuous superiority, and the lakes include Loch Doie, Loch Vail 74 miles long), part of Loch Lubnag, and part of Loch Earn, with others of minor celebrity. The rivers Lochlarig and Balvaig flow through the centre of the parish. Between Kingshoushe and Balquhider is the family vault of the McGregors, of Edinchip, James Carnegie esq. D.L. of Stronvar; John B. B. Hamilton esq. of Strathrye; Lady Helen L. MacGregor, of Edinchip; the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C.; the Earl of Moray and John Stewart M'Donald esq. of Craignie, are the principal landowners. Balquhider civil parish has an area of 54,874 acres; rateable value, £19,316; the population in 1881 was 627, and in 1891, 612, and in the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Comrie, 728.

Lochearnhead, a beautiful little village, standing at the head of Loch Earn, from which it derives its name, and has a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway, 2 miles distant from the Lochearnhead hotel. The village has been twice visited by H.M. the Queen; the first time with the Prince Consort in 1841, and again in September, 1869, in company with the Princesses Louise and Beatrice, who stayed at the hotel while on a visit to the late Rear-Admiral Sir Malcolm Macgregor, and Lady Helen Macgregor, whose seat, Edinchip, is within half a mile of the village. The loch, which lies at the foot of Glen Ogle, a wild pass, or outlet, from the Breadalbane country and the north-western Highlands, is 7 miles in length and 21 in breadth, and said to be 100 fathoms deep. The beautiful situation and quiet character of the place, with the many objects of interest, and the fine scenery, attract many visitors, tourists and private families during the summer months. The views include the fine scenery about the lake, the upper part of Strathrye, and the mountains, one of which (Benvolrich) rises from the shore to a height of 3,300 feet. There is a golf course of 9 holes in connection with the hotel, and excellent fishing, free to parties staying at the hotel, may be had in the loch. An omnibus meets the principal trains. Population returned with the parish.

Strathrye is a small village in the parish of Balquhider, 8 miles north-west from Callander, and has a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway. There is a good hotel, an inn, and a temperance hotel. Population returned with the parish. The Strathrye and Balquhider districts of the parish, as well as Lochearnhead, are favorite resorts for summer visitors. The village is well sheltered from the east wind and excellent fishing can be had in Loch Lubnag, free to those staying at the hotels. In the village is a monument, erected by the inhabitants in 1833, to Dougal Buchanan, the Gaelic poet, who was born here in 1716.

BLACKFORD is a parish and village, with a station on the main line of the Caledonian railway from Edinburgh to Aberdeen, and is 10 miles north-east from Dunblane and 5 south-west from Auchterarder. The parish extends 10 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 4 to 6 miles; it is in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Dunblane, and is bounded north by Trinity Gask, east by Auchterarder, south by Glendevon and part of Clackmannan and west by Muthill and Ardoch. Crieff Junction station on the North British and Caledonian railways, is also in this parish.

Lying at the north-west end of the Ochill hills, the southern portion of the parish is hilly; the soil north of this being of sandy nature, with a rolling surface. There are three breweries and a tannery. South of the railway are Geneagles, the seat of the Earl of Camperdown, and the ruins of old Kincardine Castle, once a stronghold of the Graham family, now Dukes of Montrose and Earls of Kincardine, while north of the railway are the ruins of Tullibardine Castle and chapel, the former a possession of the Murrays of Tullibardine, ancestors of the Dukes of Athol; the chapel was the burial place of the Murrays, but is now used by the Drummond family, Viscounts Strathallan.
Strathallan castle, about 6 miles to the north of the village, is at present the residence of Grame Whiteaw esq. Viscount Strathallan residing at Machany House in the same neighbourhood. Captain W. H.
Drummond-Moray is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 21,453 acres; rateable value, £20,237; the population in 1881 was 1,595, and in 1891, 1,522.
The population of the village was 679 in 1881 and 668 in 1891.

Tullibardine is a scattered village in this parish, 3 miles north-west of Auchterarder, with a station on the Crieff Junction and Comrie section of the Caledonian railway.

BLAIR ATHOLL,

WITH THE BRIDGE OF TILT, CALVINE AND STRUAN.

BLAIR ATHOLL is a parish and small village in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district; what is now designated the parish of Blair Atholl formerly consisted of four parishes, viz: Blair, Lude, Kilmavonaig and Strowan. The district of Atholl is 45 miles in length and 30 in breadth, and the parish is 24 miles from north-east to south-west, and 20 from north to south. It lies on the north-west Highlands of Perthshire, bounded on the south by Fortingal, Foss and Moulain, and on the north by Inverness and Aberdeenshire, and on the east by Kirkmichael and Moulain, and on the west by Rannoch, and contains a large tract of Highland territory, several of the mountains of which are covered with large and beautiful woods, interspersed with fertile vales. The valley of the Garry, from the pass of Killecrankie to the point of Strowan, may be considered the nucleus of the parish. The principal lakes and rivers are Loch Garry and Loch Tummel, and the Tummel, Tait, and Garry, all abounding with a variety of fish. The woods in the neighbourhood are very fine, some of the larches being the oldest in Scotland. Three miles to the west of the village are the Falls of Bruar, consisting of a succession of cascades in a ravine of romantic beauty. The banks are covered with woods, planted by former Dukes of Atholl. The mountains in the parish are Ben Dearg, 3,304 feet; Ben-a-Ghlo, 3,671 and Ben Udjuman, 3,306 feet in height. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" ("52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Dull and Moulain have been added to this parish. The village of Blair Atholl stands on the north side of the river Garry, and on the road from Dunkeld to Inverness, 20 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 7 north-west from Pitlochry, and has a station on the Perth and Grantown section of the Highland railway; it is lighted with gas, and there is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Lim. and two good hotels. The parish church, between the villages of Blair and Bridge of Tilt, is a plain but commodious structure. The Free church was erected 1856. The old Episcopal church of Kilmavonaig is an ancient edifice, dating from 1591, and was rebuilt in 1794. Blair Castle, the family seat of the Duke of Atholl K.T. is within a short distance of the village, and has been restored from designs by Mr. Bryce, architect, of Edinburgh. The Duke of Atholl K.T. and William M'Inroy esq. J.P. of Lude, are the principal landowners. The area is 181,114 acres; rateable value, £26,431; the population in 1881 was 1,742, and in 1891, 1,808, ecclesiastical, 1,560, of which Blair Atholl and Bridge of Tilt numbered 349.

Bridge of Tilt is a small village in this parish, separated only from Blair Atholl by the water of Tilt, which is here crossed by a bridge, as the name indicates.

Calvine is a hamlet in this parish. The scenery around is very charming, and includes Glen Tilt and the Falls of Fender. The principal heritor of the parish is the Duke of Atholl K.T. Struan railway station is half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

Struan, or Strowan is a small village in the parish of Blair Atholl, and 5 miles north, with a station on the Highland railway. In the churchyard is a remarkable stone with a Runic inscription. Population returned with the parish.

BLAIR DRUMMOND, see THORN-HILL.

BLAIRGOWRIE is a town, burgh of barony and police burgh, and a parish in the poor law combination of Perth.

The parish, about 11 miles in length and 3 miles wide, is beautifully situated, on the southern slope of the range of hills which bound the valley of Strathmore on the north, and at the mouth of the pass through which runs the great north road to Port George, and is divided by the Grampian Hills, which rise immediately north of the town. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary order 72, parts of the parishes of Bendochy and Kinloch have been added to Blairgowrie, and part of Blairgowrie annexed to Bendochy. The town is 12 miles east from Dunkeld, 5 south-west from Alyth, and 4½ north from Coupar Angus, with a terminal station on a branch from Coupar Angus, on the Caledonian railway, opened in 1855. The river Erich passes close to the town, forming the eastern boundary of the parish, and propels the machinery of several flax-spinning mills; there are also engineering works and a brewery. On account of its attractive surroundings, the salubrity of the air, and the numerous lovely walks in the environs, the town is much frequented in summer by families from a distance. Blairgowrie was created a burgh of barony in 1634, by a charter from Charles I. and is now governed by a baron bailie, 2 junior bailies and 9 councillors, and also by a board of police commissioners, consisting of a provost 2 junior bailies and 9 commissioners. A sheriff small debt court is held for the disposal of cases not exceeding £12 on the first Saturday in January, April, July and October. A police court sits when necessary. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Lim. as well as two savings banks. Two newspapers, viz. the "Blairgowrie Advertiser" and the "Blairgowrie and Rattray Free Press," are published here on Saturday. Fairs are held here as follows: March, horses and cattle, 3rd Wednesday; May, feeing, 1st Wednesday; cattle &c. Tuesday before old Whit Sunday; July, cattle &c. (Fair o' Blair), Tuesday following fourth Monday of July; October, cattle, Wednesday before Falkirk tryst (Falkirk, 2nd Tuesday); November, feeing, 1st Wednesday; hiring and cattle, 23rd market, alternate Tuesdays. In the vicinity are the remains of the Castle of Glaselne, a strikingly picturesque ruin, situated on the precipitous bank of a narrow wooded glen, about 2 miles from the town. Excellent trout and salmon fishing is obtainable in the Erich, the Tay, the Isla and the burns of the Lunan and Lornly (all within a moderate distance of the town), and capital perch and pike fishing may be had in the several lochs in the neighbourhood. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E. is the principal landowner, and Mrs. McPherson, of Blairgowrie House, is the lady of the manor and also a landowner. Craighall, the seat of Lieutenant Sir James Clerk Rattray K.C.B., D.L., J.P. is a romantic spot near here, open from Tuesday and Fridays. The civil parish has an area of 15,303 acres; rateable value, landward, £13,900; burghal, £15,154; the population in 1881 was 5,162, and in 1891, 4,739, of which the town possessed 3,714; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 1,644.

Rosemont is a village in this parish, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 2 miles south of Blairgowrie and 2½ north-west of Coupar-Angus; in the neighbourhood is a saw mill.

Carsie is a hamlet in this parish, 2 miles from Blairgowrie, which is the nearest railway station.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, High street; Miss Jana M'Hardie, postmistress. Delivery at 7.45 a.m. & 6.10 p.m.; parcels at 10 a.m. & 6.10 p.m.; dispatch, 12 noon to Edinburgh, Dundee, Fifeshire & the North; 2.30 p.m. to South; 5.20 & 11 p.m. to all parts. Post messengers are dispatched at 7.45 a.m. to Forneith, Kinloch, Clunie, Craigie, Rosemont, Carsie, Kirkmichael, Bridge of Cally, Ballinmie, Glenshee, Blackinnans & Westfields

BRACO (otherwise ARDOCH) is a village in Upper Strathern poor law combination and in the small debt court division of Dunblane; the village is on the Knaik-water and the road from Dunblane to Crieff, 1½ miles north from Greenloaning station on the Dunblane and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south from Crieff. In the parish are the remains of a Roman camp, forming an oblong of 140 yards by 125 within the lines; the Prætorium, or "general's quarters," which is a regular square of twenty yards on each side, rises above the level of the camp, and contains the foundation of a house ten yards by seven. Adjoining are two other encampments communicating with each other; various interesting relics recovered from these fortifications, including helmets, fragments of brides, and other articles, preserved for a considerable time at the house of Ardoch, were carried off by soldiers in the Duke of Argyll's army after the battle of Sheriffmuir in 1715. This place, since 1735, has afforded the title of baron to the Duff family, now represented by the Duke of Fife K.T. Braco Castle is the seat of Sir William Renny Watson D.L., J.P. Capt. William H. Drummond-Moray is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. Ardoch parish, in which Braco village is situated, was erected in 1885 from the parishes of Blackford, Dunblane and Muthill. The area of the parish comprises 22,127 acres; the population in 1891 was 959, and in 1891, 1,102.

Greenloaning is a hamlet in this parish, 5 miles south-south-west from Muthill, with a station on the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway.

CALLANDER is a modern police burgh and a parish, in Upper Strathern poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The parish extends from the banks of the Teith to the Grampians, and is about 18 miles in length by a breadth of from 4 to 8 miles. The village is situated in a beautiful valley on both sides of the Teith, here crossed by a bridge of three arches, and is 52 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 south-west from Perth, 45 north from Glasgow, 16 north-west from Stirling and 8 north-west from Doune, with a station on the Dunblane, Callander and Killin Junction branch of the Caledonian railway, and is completely sheltered on the north by a line of precipitous crags, 700 or 800 feet high, partly covered with wood. The streets are disposed on a regular plan and contain a number of buildings of some architectural merit. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and has a good supply of water brought from Loch Lubnaig, which is in the parish, and 3 miles north-west, and conveyed to the town by gravitation. By the adoption of the "Police (Scotland) Act," 1862, the place was constituted a police burgh, and is now governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners, by whom an approved system of drainage has been carried out, the sewerage being conveyed to a meadow a mile distant and there utilised. The scenery around Callander is uncommonly beautiful; immediately above the village is a lovely spot formed by the junction of two little rivers, issuing respectively from Loch Lubnaig and Loch Vennacher, and unitedly forming the Teith. Two miles west of Callander is the pass of Leny, which affords access to a delightful range of mountain prospect; the bridge of Bracklyn is another fine point in the scenery and the ride to Loch Katrine and the Trossachs, about 9 miles from the village, is extremely fine. Callander is generally a most convenient centre for a number of excursions through scenery of every variety, but owes its prosperity chiefly to the fame of the romantic scenery of the Trossachs, 9 miles distant, and reached during the season by coaches from the railway station; a great number of visitors and tourists come here during the summer. Loch Katrine is 9 miles long and nearly 1 broad, and at the east of it is Ellens Isle; Loch Veil, 6 miles long and 500 yards wide, and Loch Vennacher, 4 miles long and 1 broad, are in the parish. From Loch Katrine the city of Glasgow obtains its supply of water, which is conveyed in a tunnel 6,975 feet long, through a range of mountains south of the Loch, to Loch Chon, thence in tunnels and aqueducts 26 miles long to Murdock reservoir, wherein is stored 500,000,000 gallons of water; it is then conveyed in double pipes to Glasgow. In the parish are four mountains, viz. Ben Ledi, 2,875 feet; Stoba Chon 2,839; Ben Vane, 2,685; and Ben Ann, 1,800 feet in height. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The principal hotels are the Dreadnought, the Ancastr Arms, the Crown, and the Caledonian and Duncan's temperance hotels. About a mile from Callander, and delightfully situated, is a Hydropathic Establishment, available for 100 persons. There are four annual fairs, namely, on the third Thursday of March, May 16th, third Tuesday of July, and third Thursday of December. The Earl of Ancastr P.C. the Earl of Moray, John B. Hamilton esq. J.P. of Leny, and J. B. B. Hamilton, of Cambusmore, are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Callander has an area of 51,186 acres; rateable value, landward, £15,070; burghal, £10,772; the population in 1881 was 2,167, and in 1891, 2,279; of this number the village contained 1,538; the ecclesiastical population in 1891 was 2,012.

The Trossachs is the name given to a mountainous district in the western portion of the parish, containing some of the most magnificent lake and mountain scenery in all Scotland. It is a quad sacra parish formed from the civil parishes of Aberfoyle, Callander and Port of Monteith. The Trossachs hotel here, on the bank of Lake Achray, is an establishment well known to visitors and tourists.

The Bridge of Turk, made famous by the couplet (vide Sir Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake," "The Chase, Canto I.")—"And when the Bridge of Turk was won, The headmost horseman rode alone," is a small hamlet in this parish, and contains the ruins of a very large and handsome hotel, unfortunately burned down some time ago. The nearest railway station is at Callander, 6½ miles east. The population in 1891 was 371.

CARGILL is a parish and village, in the vale of Strathmore, and in the poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; its extent from east to west is about 6 miles, and from north to south about 4 miles, and it is bounded on the south by Collice and Saint Martins, on the west by the river Tay, on the north by the river Isla and Coupar-Angus, and on the east by Coupar-Angus and Kettine. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, a part of Scope parish has been annexed to Cargill. The rivers Tay and Isla, flowing southwards, unite in this parish at a point a short distance north of the village, which is 4½ miles south-west from Coupar-Angus, and 9 miles from Perth, and has a station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway. The parish church, erected in 1883, is a plain but substantial edifice. The Earl of Anester P.C. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The parish is purely agricultural, the soil varying from a heavy clay to a light sandy loam; it has an area of 9,495 acres; rateable value, £12,986; the population in 1881 was 1,348, and in 1891, 1,318. Burrelton is a village in this parish, adjoining Woodside, where is the nearest railway station, and is 2 miles south-west from Compar-Angus. The Public Hall here, opened in 1897, at a cost of £600, will hold 400 persons.

Woodside is a village in this parish, 2 miles south-west from Compar-Angus, on the main road from Compar-Angus to Perth, with a station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway.

Wolf Hill is a hamlet in this parish, 1 1/2 miles from Cargill, the nearest railway station, and 6 miles from Compar-Angus.

CARSIE, see BLAIRGOWRIE.

CLIFTON, see KILLIN.

CLUNIE is a parish and village, in the poor law combination of Logierait and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie. The parish includes part of the lower range of the Grampians, which are barrea, and covered with heather. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, part of Caputh parish has been transferred to this parish. The village is 5 miles west from Blairgowrie, where also is the nearest station on a branch from Compar-Angus of the Caledonian railway. The loch of Clunie, one of the most beautiful of the smaller lakes in the country, is about one mile long by 800 yards wide and contains a small island, on which stands an ancient tower, the property of W. H. Cox esq. and supposed to have been the birthplace, in 1561, of James Crichton, better known as the "Admirable Crichton," whose father, Sir Robert Crichton, Lord Advocate of Scotland, was then proprietor of the barony of Clunie. The tower is still in good repair, and partly furnished, though rarely occupied, but is open to strangers desirous of visiting it. Marlie loch is also in this parish. The parish has an area of 11,384 acres; rateable value, £6,345; the population in 1881 was 582, and in 1891, 579.

Forneth is a small and scattered village in this parish, 6 miles from Blairgowrie railway station and 8 from Dunkeld. Miss Speid is the principal landowner.

Post Office, Forneth; Miss Ann Robertson, sub-postmistress. Letters through Blairgowrie arrive from all parts at 11.30 a.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 12.30 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Spittalfield & telegraph office at Caputh, 4 miles distant.

COLLACE is a parish, surrounded by the parishes of Cargill, St. Martins, Kinnaird and Abernethy, and is 4 miles south from Woodside station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway and 8 north from Perth, and in the small debt court district of Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 31, part of Caputh parish and of Kettins parish in Forfarshire have been transferred to this parish. The parish church is a Gothic structure with a square tower, erected in 1813. Freestone of good quality abounds in the parish. The hill of Dunneane, 1,114 feet above the sea level, is in this parish. Upon this insulated site (referred famous by Shakspeare ("Maebeth," Act v.). Maebeth, the Thane of Glamis, in 1043, erected a strong and lofty castle, for the purpose of keeping the surrounding country in subjection. In 1054 an overwhelming force under Siward, Earl of Northumberland, supported by Edward the Confessor, the reigning King of England, marched upon the stronghold on behalf of Malcolm III. son of King Duncan, whom Maebeth had previously murdered. Maebeth fled northwards, but was pursued and slain, according to tradition, at Lumphannan, in Aberdeenshire, in 1056 or 1057. The fortress was razed to the ground. James Mackay Bernard esq. of Dunsinain, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 2,937 acres; rateable value, £3,385; the population in 1891 was 419.

COMRIE is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination and small debt court district of Crieff, and a village, with a terminal station on a branch from Crieff of the Caledonian line; the parish is 53 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 24 west from Perth and 6½ west from Crieff, and lies in a beautiful and romantic valley at the foot of the Grampians, and on the north bank of the Earn, at the junction of the Lednock. Loch Earn, 7 miles long and nearly 1½ broad, is on the western extremity of the parish, and from it flows the river Earn, alongside of which there is a public road through the valley of Strathearn. Ben Vorlich Mountain, 3,224 feet high, is in this parish. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, parts of Monzievaird and Strowan parish, with a population of 27, and Muthill parish, with 35, have been annexed to this parish. Fairs are held (St. Kessac's) on the 22nd of March and 4th of December for cattle. In the neighbourhood, on the plain of Dalginross, are vestiges of Roman encampments, where it is said the Roman general Agricola fought the Caledonians under Galgacus; there are also several Druidical circles, a monument of granite, 72 feet high, erected in 1815, to Henry Dundas, 1st Viscount Melville (d. 1811), and another memorial, of the same material, 80 feet high, to General the Right Hon. Sir David Baird K.C.B., P.C. a distinguished military commander (d. 1829). Glenartney Lodge is the residence of the Earl of Ancaster P.C., J.P., D.L.; Dunira, of Sir Sidney J. Dundas bart. and Drumearn House, of Spencer Shelley esq. The Earl of Ancaster P.C. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Comrie civil parish has an area of 60,593 acres; rateable value £18,131; the population in 1881 was 1,858, and in 1891, 1,591; of this number the village had 870; the population of the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Comrie, Monzievaird and Strowan and Muthill, in 1891 was 1,517.

Saint Fillans is an ecclesiastical parish in the civil parish of Crieff, 5½ miles west-north-west from the village of Comrie, its nearest railway station, and 12 miles from Crieff, pleasantly seated at the foot of Loch Earn, where boats are kept for fishing parties or other visitors attracted thither by the delightful scenery of this district. There is an excellent hotel, affording every accommodation to gentlemen during the fishing and shooting season.

COUPAR-ANGUS.

COUPAR-ANGUS is a police burgh and market town and parish, in the poor law combination of Perth and small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is pleasantly situated on the Isla, a few miles above its junction with the Tay, on the main roads from Dundee to Blairgowrie and from Perth to Forfar. A small stream, tributary to the Isla, divides the town into two parts. The town is 15 miles north-west from Dundee, 12½ east-by-north from Perth and 4½ south-south-east from Blairgowrie, on the main line of the Caledonian railway, and is the junction of a branch line from Dundee to Blairgowrie. The parish of Coupar-Angus, which is near the base of the Sidlaw Hills, extends for 5 miles along the east bank of the river Isla, and varies from one to two miles in breadth; the surface is arable and meadow land, and is well cultivated and enclosed. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 92, that part of Coupar-Angus formerly in Forfarshire, with a population of 273, has been transferred to this county for civil purposes, but remains in Forfar for parliamentary purposes. The town is governed by a police commission, consisting of a provost, two bailies, and six commissioners, and is well built and lighted with gas. A new drainage system was introduced in 1885 and completed in 1887, at a cost of about £4,600. The Police Commissioners are the local authority for sanitary affairs, and under their auspices the town is plentifully supplied with good water from the estate of Pitcur, about two miles south from Coupar-Angus. The church is an edifice in the Gothic style, erected on the old site, and has a large graveyard around it, in which are several old tombs and monuments. There are also Free, Episcopal, United Presbyterian, Evangelical Union, and Original Secession churches. A Town Hall, a substantial building in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Mr. James Smart, of Perth, was opened in August, 1887, at a cost of about £3,500, defrayed by public subscription; the public hall is 64 feet in length by 38 feet in breadth, and is capable of seating 600 persons; there are also reading and other rooms and a commissioners' hall. The venerable steeple in Queen street is used as a clock tower. The street formerly called Abbey street is now Queen street, to perpetuate the remembrance of Her Majesty passing through Coupar-Angus in 1849. The market day is Thursday, and a fair is held on the third Thursday in March for cattle and horses. Early closing day, Wednesday. There are linen factories and a preserve works. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the County and City of Perth Savings Bank. The "Royal" is the principal hotel. In ancient times this place was the seat of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Malcolm IV. in 1164, and endowed with considerable revenues by that monarch; at the Reformation, the buildings were destroyed by a mob from Perth; the remains occupy part of the site of a Roman camp, said to have been formed by the army of Agricola in his seventh expedition. Edward Collins-Wood esq. of Keithwick, William D. Graham Menzies esq. of Hallyburton, Sir John G. S. Kinloch M.P., D.L., J.P. of Kintoch, and Col. William Clark, of Princesland, are the principal landowners.

Coupar-Angus civil parish has an area of 4,699 acres; rateable value, landward, £9,280, burghal, £7,780; in 1881 the population was 2,816, and in 1891, 2,760, of which the burgh contained 2,106 and the ecclesiastical parish, 2,343.

CRIEFF.

CRIEFF is a market town and police burgh under the "General Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is a parish in the Upper Strathcrone poor law combination; a sheriff small debt court is held quarterly on the first Saturday in March, June, September and December. The town has a railway station on the Caledonian line and is 22 miles south from Stirling, 17 west from Perth and 6½ east from Comrie. In Upper Strathcrone, one of the most delightful districts in Scotland, on the declivity of a hill, forming part of the southern range of the Gramscians, having the Earn and several other streams at its foot, and behind it the Knock of Crieff and other eminences, all of a considerable altitude. Upper Strathcrone includes the mouths of several important passes, the Sma' Glen being the site of a Roman station, and according to tradition, the burial place of Ossian. It extends also into the highlands of Perthshire, having a wild mountainous region on the one side and rich, soft vales on the other. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), part of Crieff parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Fowlis-Wester, a part with 12 to Muthill, and a part to Monzie and Strowan, without population, and by the same Act, by boundary order 98, a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 134, added to Crieff. The town is governed by a police commission consisting of provost, two bailies and nine commissioners. St. Michael's church is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, with a tower on the south-west. Here is also the West parish church, a Free church, and others for United Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and Baptists. Morrison's Academy was endowed by the late Thomas Morrison, builder, Edinburgh, who bequeathed about £20,000 for this purpose, and the trustees purchased the site on which the academy is erected, and have since built a wing at the east end for the rector and for boarders. A complete education is given here to the sons and daughters of the middle classes. Taylor's Institution, now a board school, without endowment, was founded and endowed by William Taylor, of Cornton, who died in 1841, and left his whole fortune "for educating the children of the poor in the most useful branches of education." From funds left by the same benefactor, a Free Library and Reading Room was opened in 1891, and contains upwards of 4,900 volumes. The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and fairs are held on the first Tuesday in each month. There is a distillery and a preserve works in the town. The fountain, in James square, was erected in 1893, at a cost of £500, from designs by Messrs. Mossman & Co. of Glasgow, to commemorate the coming of age of Mr. William Keith Murray, of Ochertyre, and in recognition of the gift of a water supply to the town by his father, Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart.; it is 26 feet in height and 17 at the base, and is built of grey granite, relieved by red granite columns with Corinthian capitals, the whole being surmounted by four dolphins. The arms of the family and those of the burgh appear on different sides.

Grieff is a thriving and increasing town, deriving no small advantage from the resort in the summer months of invalids and others, who are attracted here by the beauty of the scenery, and the salubrity of the air. The Strathearn Hydropathic Establishment, erected in 1867, at a cost of nearly £30,000, occupies a splendid site in front of the Knock, and overlooks an extensive landscape of varied beauty. Water of the finest quality is supplied at the rate of 20,000 gallons per day. There is accommodation here for over 300 visitors.

The Old Drummond Arms, in which Prince Charles Edward Stuart passed a night in 1745, was feued by the trustees of the late Lady Willoughby de Eresby to the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and premises for the bank and a large hotel have been erected. In the town are six branch banks and a savings bank. A newspaper is published here, the "Strathearn Herald," on Saturday. The Earl of Ancastrer P.C. is the principal landowner and lord of the manor. The civil parish contained, previous to the alteration of the boundary, 20,385 acres; rateable value of present area, burghal, £29,919; landward, £11,507; in 1881 the population was 4,852, and in 1891, 5,305, and in the burgh, 4,902; in the ecclesiastical parish, 2,955.

Innerpeffray is a scattered village in the parish of Crieff, 3½ miles south-east, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Here is a library, founded in 1691, by David (Drummond), third Lord Maderty, and containing about 3,000 volumes, principally of a theological and classical nature, for the use of students. The old castle and church, built in the 16th century by James, 1st Lord Maderty, are now in ruins, and he himself was buried in the family burial place within the chapel in 1623.

CULROSS was, by an order of the Boundary-Commissioners, dated Feb. 23rd, 1891, transferred to Fifeshire, which see.

DALGUISE, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

DEANSTON, see KILMADOCK.

DOUNE is a village and police burgh in the parish of Kilmadock and district of Monteith, and poor combination of Upper Strathearn, and has a station on the Dunblane, Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway. It is 44 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 31½ south-west from Perth, 19 south-south-west from Crieff, 8 north-west from Stirling, 8 south-east from Callander and 4 west from Dunblane. The town occupies a pleasant situation on the north bank of the Teith, and consists principally of three streets, radiating from a centre, where the market cross stands. The old bridge which crosses the Teith a little above the castle was erected by Robert Spittal, a native of Stirling, who had amassed a fortune as tailor to Princess Margaret of England, widow of James IV.; this bridge was widened by three feet in 1866. The Burgh is lighted with gas, supplied by the Donne Light and Gas Company. The parish church, erected in 1822, is an edifice in the Gothic style with a tower, built by the Earl of Moray, heritor of the parish, and owner of Donne Castle. In 1897 it was remodelled and seated, and a new pulpit and reading desk provided. The Free church was built in 1867 to replace that erected in 1843. There is also an Episcopal church and a United Presbyterian church. The Roman Catholic church was built in 1875 at a cost of about £3,000 and will seat 300. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in May, the last Wednesday in July, the first Tuesday and Wednesday and the fourth Wednesday in November. There are branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and Royal Bank of Scotland. Doune Castle was formerly the family seat of the Earls of Monteith, and the ruins of this once noble castle stand in the immediate neighbourhood of Doune, upon an elevated peninsula formed by the junction of the Ardoch water with the Teith. To judge from the massiveness and extent of its remains, the castle appears to have belonged to that first-class order of Scottish fortresses of which those of Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbarton afford fine specimens; the castle buildings form a large quadrangle, the hall and domestic apartments occupying the front, north side and about half the west side; the remainder surrounding the court yard has a wall 37 feet high and 7 feet thick, with a tower 80 feet in height; this building has been partially restored by the Earl of Moray, who is hereditary keeper of the Castle; a considerable portion has been roofed in, and part of the interior, notably the baronial hall, has been restored to its original condition; the outer walls and battlements have also been repaired so as to show the original structure and extent of the edifice: James II. of Scotland, when an infant, was an inmate of this fortress, which formed part of the dowry of Margaret of Denmark, Queen of James III. and also of Margaret Tudor, Queen of James IV. who resided sometimes in the castle: Mary Queen of Scots resided here occasionally, and her son James VI. made frequent visits to the castle; the last historical episode in which Doune Castle was connected, was during the rebellion of 1745-46, when it was garrisoned by the adherents of Prince Charles Edward. The population of the burgh in 1651 was 940; rateable value, £3,617.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. Perthshire added; Miss Margaret Dewar, post-mistress. Deliveries (October to June), 7 & 9.10 a.m. & 6.15 p.m. (July to Sept.), 7.30 a.m. & 6.15 p.m.; dispatches, 7.45 a.m. & 3.30 & 7 p.m.

DRON is a parish, 5 miles south from Perth, in the south-western extremity of Perthshire, extending into the beautiful district of Strathearn, and is, divided from Abernethy on the east by the Forc rivulet. Although in some parts the surface is broken and irregular, in the lower portion the land is flat and fertile as belonging to the rich cars of the Earn. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of Dunbarney parish without population has been annexed to Dron. The Glenfarf section of the North British Railway Co. constructed in connection with the Forth Bridge, passes through the parish of Dron, and has a junction with the North British main line at Bridge of Earn, about a mile north from Dron church. In the parish is an ancient castle, formerly the seat of the Murrays, of Balmanno. At the back of the hill opposite the church is a famous rocking stone. Near the village stands a ruined chapel, and there are traces of another where Pottilmill now stands. The church, a Gothic edifice, is a fine object on the rising ground to the left, on approaching the Bridge of Earn from the south. This parish has an area of 4,188 acres; rateable value, £4,813; the population in 1881 was 335, and in 1891, 298.

DULL is a large parish, in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination, and is 30 miles long by a breadth of about 12. The river Tummel bounds the district on the north, and the Lyon and Tay on the south, these rivers abound with excellent salmon, and the lakes (of which there are fifteen, large and small) contain fine trout, pike and eels. The military road from Stirling to Inverness passes through the entire length of the parish. The mountain Schiehallion, which rises upwards of 3,500 feet, is seen on the northern border, with its brow shrouded in mist. The vil-laga is about 4 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station, on a branch from Ballinlunig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 23 north from Crieff and 20 north-west from Dunkeld, and was at one time the seat of a Roman Catholic college, of which no traces now remain. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dull parish has been added to the parishes of Blair Atholl, with 167 population, Logic, with 370, and Weem, with 156, and by boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Fortingal, with a population of 51, Kenmore, with 47, Logierait, with 583, and Weem, with 81, have been added to Dull. Sir Robert Menzies bart. D.L., J.P. of Castle Menzies, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 63,417 acres; rateable value of the present area, £18,732; the population of the civil parish in 1881 was 2,565, and in 1891, 2,462, and of the ecclesiastical, 1,584.

Foss is a quoad sacra parish in Dull civil parish. The population in 1891 was 210. Letters for Dull received through Aberfeldy Post & Telegraph Office, Camserney; Mrs. Eliza McIntosh, postmistress. DUNBARNEY parish is in the south-eastern part of the county, occupying a rich portion of the Lower Strathcan district, about 1½ miles south from Perth; it is bounded by the hill of Moreduin (or Moncreiffe) on the north, and on the west by Forganenny, and is intersected by the river Earn, here crossed by a bridge which gives its name to the village mentioned below. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of this parish, without population, has been transferred to Dron parish. The remains of a Pictish camp exist on the summit of Moreduin, and there is a very complete Druidical circle a little to the west of Moncreiffe House. Moncreiffe House, the seat of Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion, the grounds of which are very extensive, and beautifully wooded. The scenery around is beautiful and romantic. Kilgraston is the residence of Capt. Alex. H. O. Dennistoun. The principal landowners are Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. and John Patrick Grant esq. This parish has an area of 4,060 acres; rateable value, £9,338; in 1881 the population was 756, and in 1891, 829.

Bridge of Earn is a village in this parish, about 3½ miles south from Perth, with a junction station on the Glenfarg and Fife sections of the North British railway. This village, which has of late years become a great place of resort on account of the celebrity of its mineral springs, now has a Hydropathic Establishment and a golf course. Pitkeathly Wells and Spa, now leased by the Pitkeathly and Mineral Water Co. are 1 mile from the station, the waters having long been celebrated for their curative effect in cases of gout, rheumatism, affections of the stomach, liver, kidneys, &c. &c. There are tennis courts and bowling greens, and gull shooting and fishing is to be obtained in the district. Population in 1881, 304, and in 1891, 298.

The parish also contains the village of Kintillo, where in the reign of Alexander III. the king held a court for testing the national weights and measures.

DUNBLANE is an ancient city, police burgh and parish, on the banks of the river Allan, which flows through a great part of the parish, and contains trout, besides salmon and grilse in their season. The country to the south of the town is very beautiful, and is finely diversified with plantations. The ride from Dunblane to Bridge of Allan by Glen road is justly admired. The vale of Strathallan, through which the river flows, lies to the north and east of the town. The fields on the banks of the river are fertile, but as the land approaches the hills it is of the character of moor, although excellently adapted for pasture, the dairy produce of this district being in high repute. At the lower end of the town is the romantic walk of Kippencross, near to the end of which is a plane tree, supposed to be the largest in Scotland, the circumference of the trunk in the smallest part being nearly 20 feet, where the branches separate fully 27 feet, and close to the ground 42 feet 7 inches. The height of the tree is 100 feet, and it is said to have attained the age of over 470 years. Sheriff Muir, a mountain 1,175 feet high, is in this parish. The Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway passes through and has a station here, and the Dunblane, Donne and Callander branch commences in the town, which is the capital of the western district of Perthshire, and is 41 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 33 north-east from Glasgow, 28 south-west from Perth and 11 south-east from Callander. The town is governed, under the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts and for ordinary business is held every Wednesday, and justice of peace courts occasionally. The court house and prison are modern buildings. That portion of the town which adjoins the church consists chiefly of old houses, and has much the appearance of the precincts of a cathedral. The good and learned Robert Leighton, Bishop of Dunblane (1661-74), bequeathed his valuable library to the clergy of the diocese, and it is now kept in a suitable building called the Leighton Library, to which the public have access on fixed terms. The see of Dunblane was founded, it is believed, by King David I. in 1140, although St. Blane, a contemporary of St. Columba, is affirmed to have been bishop or prior of a monastery here as early as A.D. 600; this institution was afterwards occupied by the Culdees, and it was during their occupation that the establishment of the diocese by King David was carried out. After the Revolution the see was abolished, but was revived in 1731; in 1808 it was united to the temporary see of Pife, and is now held with St. Andrews. The Cathedral, dedicated to St. Blane, stands on the bank of Allan Water; it dates from about 1230-50, and is a graceful example of Early English and Decorated work, with the exception of the tower, 128 feet in height, which stands partly within and partly without the south aisle and obliquely to the line of the aisle; the first four stages of this tower are Norman (c. 1100-10) and belong to the church reared by David I.; the two upper stages date from the 16th century, and the embattled parapet was added by Bishop William Chisholm II. (1564-75); from within it rises a short octagonal spire with vane, and there is one bell, dated 1612; the cathedral, as now existing, consists of a choir of six bays, with a vaulted north aisle of five bays, and a long chamber over it, used partly as an organ loft, and nave of eight bays with aisles, the easternmost bays of which have gables, and appear like small transepts; there is no triforium, but the clerestory has an elegant traceried double arcading, with a passage way between, which is continued through the three similarly designed and graceful lights in the west front; the west doorway is recessed in five orders, and flanked by smaller blind arches, and in the western gable is a vesica window which has been specially noticed by Mr. Ruskin; the east window of the choir is of four lights, with geometric tracery in the head, and is curiously flanked by two narrow lancets of lesser height. Towards the close of the 16th century, the nave was allowed to become ruinous, and the choir alone was used for divine service, but this, at a later date, was much disfigured by the erection of galleries, one of which was built across the east window; in 1818 the galleries were for the most part removed, and an attempt was made to renew the tracery of the choir windows, but the complete restoration of the building was not effected till 1892-3, when, chiefly owing to the munificence of Mrs. Wallace, of Glassingal, the nave, so far as necessary, was rebuilt, all the old work being scrupulously respected, and the fabric generally renovated, at a cost of £25,000, under the direction of R. R. Anderson esq. LL.D. architect, of Edinburgh, and it was reopened 28 Oct. 1893, by the Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C. when a special dedicatory service was held. Although much of the ancient woodwork is lost, the choir retains some richly carved canopied oak stalls, and has now a new open traceried screen of carved oak with panelled base, in a combination of the Gothic and Renaissance styles; the new pulpit, correspondingly designed, is octagonal, and has figures at the angles, under canopies, and there is a brass lectern; the nave has now a wagon roof of dark oak, the ribs of which are relieved by emblazoned shields. On the north side of the choir, within a recessed arch, is the altar tomb, with effigy, of Bishop Clement (1233-58), to whom the erection of the cathedral is chiefly due; there is also an effigy, under a triangular recess, of Bishop Ochiltree (1430-48); figures of Malise, 5th Earl of Strathern, and his wife, ob. 1271, carved out of a monolith of griststone, and an arched tomb of Italian design, said to have belonged to the Drummonds, of Strathallan, to whom there are also some ledgers, now despoiled of their brasses, on the choir floor; in the north aisle stands a Celtic cross. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 226 feet, width of nave 67 feet, and of the choir 57 feet. The other places of worship are a Free church, a United Presbyterian, an Episcopal church, and one for Roman Catholics.

There are two public schools, and one belonging to the Episcopal church. Dunblane is a place of limited trade, and not conspicuous as one of manufactures. Worsted spinning is carried on very extensively by Messrs. Alexander Wilson & Co. at their mills, Springbank, which give employment to a number of the inhabitants. There is also a small mill for the manufacture of woollen cloth, and others for wool spinning in the parish. In High street are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The city is much resorted to in the summer season as a watering place, there being an excellent mineral spring in the vicinity, on the property of Captain the Hon. Arthur Hay-Drummond LL.N. of Cromlix. A market was held formerly; also numerous fairs, but they have all fallen into disuse. A few miles from the town is Sheriffmuir, on which a severe conflict took place in November, 1715, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Argyll, and the army of the Pretender James, commanded by the Earl of Mar. Here on the summit of the hill are some large stones inclosed by iron rails, said to be placed where the standard was erected. Prince Charles arrived in Dunblane on the 11th of September, 1745, on his way to the Low Country, and remained a night at the house of the Laird of Balhaldie. The room in which the prince held his levee, on the morning of his departure, is shown to visitors. Dunblane bestows the title of viscount on the Duke of Leeds. About half way between Dunblane and the Bridge of Allan is Keir House, the residence of Archibald Stirling esq. D.L.; the grounds are laid out with great taste, and contain fine specimens of forest trees and ornamental flower gardens; they are thrown open to visitors from 2 until 5 on Friday. Killybride Castle is the residence of Sir James Campbell bart. J.P.; Kippen Davie, of Col. Patrick Stirling D.L., J.P. and Cromlix, of Capt. the Hon. Arthur Hay-Drummond R.N., D.L., J.P. Col. Patrick Stirling, of Kippen Davie, is the principal landowner. Dunblane parish had an area of 18,543 acres before the reconstruction of the boundary; rateable value of burghal, £12,315; landward, £23,464; the population in 1881 was 3,123, and in 1891, 3,220, of which the town numbered 2,186.

On the river Allan, about 2 miles north of Dunblane, has been erected the small village of Ashfield, where are situated extensive works belonging to the well-known firm of Messrs. Robert Pullar and Sons, calico printers &c.

DUNKELD AND DOWALLY.

DUNKELD and DOWALLY form a united parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dunkeld and Dowally, with 74 persons, added to Logie-rail, and by Boundary Orders 73 and 74, a part of Caputh parish, with a population of 489, also the village of Butterstone, has been transferred to Dunkeld and Dowally.

Dunkeld is a small town and burgh of barony, with a station on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway locally in Birnam, and is 57 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh (by rail 60), 24 east from Kenmore, 15 north-north-west from Perth and 12 west from Blairgowrie; it is delightfully situated in an amphitheatre of hills, at the spot where the Highlands and Lowlands appear to meet, and on the river Tay, here spanned by a fine bridge of seven arches, with a total span of 685 feet, completed in 1809 from the plans of Telford, the famous engineer, at a cost of upwards of £30,000. The scenery around Dunkeld has long been the subject of admiration, and the town is the resort of many tourists. Dunkeld is a burgh of barony, and as such is governed by a baron bailie, who is appointed by the Duke of Atholl. A justice of the peace court is held for granting publicans' certificates, game dealers' licences &c. The town is of great antiquity and was the capital of ancient Caledonia. The see of Dunkeld may be said to have taken its rise from the Culdee monastery, founded here in or previous to the 9th century by monks from Iona, who also translated hither the relics of St. Columba, and preserved them here until their final transmission to Ireland; there are records of bishops from A.D. 849, and they then held precedence over all others in Scotland, a privilege continued to the prelates of Dunkeld until the creation of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews in 1470. In 1127, King David I. reconstituted the abbey as a house of canons regular, and appointed Gregory, then abbot, as bishop of Dunkeld, while retaining at the same time his monastic office; the abbey church of St. Columba naturally became the cathedral, and though now for the most part ruins, it is yet a very stately structure, and its attractiveness is much enhanced by the beauty of its situation amid a grove of trees within the private demesne of the Duke of Atholl, and close to the river Tay; it consists of a long aisleless choir of four bays, with a vaulted chapter house of two bays on the north side, nave of seven bays with aisles and south porch, a tall octagonal stair turret on the south side of the west doorway, and a north-west tower completed in 1501, 25 feet square and 96 feet in height, with an open square-foiled parapet, angle turret and dwarf pinnacles; the total length, measured externally, is 240 feet, the width of the choir being 39 feet and of the nave and aisles 67 feet; the earliest existing portion of the fabric is the south wall of the choir, c. 1220-50; the rest of the choir is of later date and was the work of Bishop Sinclair in the first half of the 14th century; the chapter house, begun in 1457, was finished in 1469, and has an upper chamber or monument room; in 1380 the church was burnt by the English, and probably on account of the damage thus caused, the nave was rebuilt as it now stands, during the period 1436-47; the arcades have massive but short circular piers with plain caps, carrying boldly moulded arches; the triforium openings consist in each case of a single semi-circular arch divided into two pointed arches; the clerestory is lighted by simply pointed windows with cusped tracery, but their interior splay is rudely plain; the great west window, singularly placed off the centre both of the gable and the entrance, still retains some fragments of its once elaborate tracery work; in the aisles the tracery of some of the windows is still perfect; the western doorway has its outer arch carried on square piers splayed at the base, and has within six orders of shafts and mouldings; on either side of it is a blind arch slightly recessed; in 1599 the cathedral again suffered great damage, the roof screen, stalls and many monuments being destroyed; after this the services were held only in the choir, the nave being dismantled and allowed to become ruins; in 1689, after the battle of Killiecrankie, the victorious Highlanders attacked Dunkeld, and the cathedral, into which the troops of William III. had thrown themselves, was severely injured by fire and in other ways; but the choir was repaired by the Murrays in 1691 and again in 1762 by the Government at a cost of £300, and was rebuilt in 1820 by the Duke of Athole at a cost of £5,000; the chapter house, now serving only as a vestibule to the dnal pew, contains a mural monument of the 17th century, and on the south side another in the Renaissance style displaying heraldically all the principal alliances of the Stewart-Murrays, dukes of Athole, and on the east side is a statue of John, 4th Duke K.T., F.R.S. who died 29 Sept. 1830, and is buried here; in the southeast angle of the choir is the fine tomb with recumbent effigy of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, 4th son of King Robert II. and commonly known from his rapacious character as "the wolf of Badenoch," d. 24 July, 1394; beside it lies the headless effigy of Bishop Sinclair (1309-24), and here also stands part of a Celtic cross; on the opposite side are stairs leading to a gallery which extends along that side, and there are sedilia on both sides, but the east end of the choir is now partitioned off and merely serves as a vestibule to the remaining part; the south aisle of the nave, originally vaulted, contains the tomb with recumbent effigy of Bishop de Cardeny (1407-36); the front of the tomb is ornamented with figures of angels under canopies and holding shields, and over it is a low but much enriched recessed arch with elaborately carved crockets and finial; there is a piscina at the east end of this wall; the area of the nave has long been used as a cemetery, and the base of the tower, which is vaulted, is used as a tool house. There is also a Free church, a substantial edifice, erected in 1874, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, on the site of the old one, with tower and spire; the interior is ornamented by a stained glass window in memory of the Earl of Dalhousie, the whole of the funds being raised by public subscription. James VI. made a grant for erecting a grammar school, called the Royal School of Dunkeld, which still exists. There is also a school for the females, a handsome building in the Market place, erected by the Duchess of Atholl in 1825, at a cost of £1,200. The City Hall, in Atholl street, is a stone building furnished with a gallery, and capable of holding 350 persons; the funds were raised by the assistance of the present Duke of Atholl, the gentry in the neighbourhood and the inhabitants. The weekly market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the 14th of February and the 5th of April; should any of these fall on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fairs take place on the following Tuesday; another is held on the second Tuesday in November. The manufacture of linen goods was formerly the staple trade of Dunkeld, but has now become extinct. There are branches of two banking establishments settled here, namely, the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Excellent accommodation is furnished by two very extensive and superior hotels, the Duke of Atholl's Arms and the Royal Hotel. A fountain was erected in 1866 as a mark of respect and esteem to George Augustus Frederick John, sixth Duke of Atholl, who died in 1864. Dunkeld House is a seat of the noble family of Stewart-Murray, Dukes of Atholl, the gardens and extensive pleasure ground, belonging to which present many attractive features, including Ossian's Hall, the Rumbling Bridge and several falls of the river Bran; there are also two very fine trees called "the mother larches," being the first grown in Britain; they were planted in 1737 and are 100 feet high, one of them measuring 15 feet in circumference at three feet from the ground. His Grace the Duke of Atholl K.T. is the principal landowner. The population in 1881 was 768, and in 1891, 613.

DOWALLY is a large parish, united with that of Dunkeld, 1 mile south from Guay station (which is in the parish) on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and about 5 miles north from Dunkeld. The present church was built in 1818, nearly on the site of that erected by Bishop Brown. A number of old stones have been made use of in constructing the new building, amongst which is one bearing the arms of Bishop Brown, the original founder, a tombstone to the memory of one of the Dalguise family, and a stone in the shape of a bell. The Duke of Atholl is the landowner.

Butterstone is a small village, about 4½ miles north-west from Dunkeld, formerly in the parish of Caputh, but has been transferred to Dunkeld.

Kindallaehau is a small village in this parish. Acreage of the joint parishes, 9,456; rateable value, £5,931; population in 1881, 791, and in 1891, 1,074. Letters through Ballinluig R.S.O. Registrar of Births, Deaths & Marriages, Dowally, James Douglas, Guay

LITTLE DUNKELD, contrary to its distinctive appellation, is an extensive parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, on the west or right bank of the Tay, near the confluence of the Bran with that river. The parish of Little Dunkeld is traversed by the military road from Perth to Inverness, and by the Highland railway, which intersects the parish throughout its entire length, about 14 miles. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Fowls Wester parish has been added to Little Dunkeld. The parish forms a kind of irregular triangle, and is disposed by nature into four districts. Birnam, Dalguise, Gellyburn, Inver, Meikle Trochry, Murthly, Drumorr, Strathbraan and Torwood are small villages in the parish of Little Dunkeld, from one to six miles distant. The first district is that of Murthly, extending from Kinclaven to the "Pass of Birnam." It includes the villages of Gellyburn and Murthly, where there is a station on the Highland railway, about 15 miles north from Perth. The Perth District Asylum, adjoining the station, is a fine square building, surrounded by beautiful grounds, which are kept in order by the patients. Pinel Lodge Convalescent House was opened in November, 1895, and Take Lodge, in November, 1896; both these are carried on in connection with the asylum. Murthly Castle, the seat of Walter Thomas James Scrymgeour-Stewart-Fotheringham esq. D.L., J.P. is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style, with grounds upwards of three square miles in extent, and containing avenues and terraces of the finest and rarest trees in the country. In this district is also Duplowie House, and the charming shooting lodge of Roballan. The soil of this district (all of which belongs to W. T. J. Scrymgeour-Stewart-Fotheringham esq.) is fertile and well cultivated; the surface of the country is beautifully varied, and the fields well enclosed. The second and central district of the parish is Birnam, in the midst of which Birnam Hill (rendered classic by Shakespeare in "Macbeth," Act V.), rises in rude magnificence from the edge of the river. From the summit of Birnam Hill an unrivelled view is obtained in every direction, and its slate quarries have been wrought with profit from an early period. At the base of the hill are the villages of Torwood and Birnam, while about a mile to the west is the village of Inver, the birthplace, in 1727, of the famous Scottish violinist and musical composer, Neil Gow, who died in 1807; it is pleasantly situated at the confluence of the rivers Tay and Braan. Acreage of the parish, 41,268; rateable value, £21,999; population in 1881, 2,175, and in 1891, 2,108; ecclesiastical, 1,906.

Birnam is a beautiful modern village, about three-quarters of a mile from Dunkeld, and is well drained and supplied with gas and water, and contains the Dunkeld station of the Highland railway. The Birnam Hotel, of which Mr. Edward Cesari is the proprietor, is a building with towers, and contains a public hall; surrounding it are pleasure grounds. Birnam Institute includes a reading room and library, recreation and refreshment rooms, and a public hall. The institute grounds are furnished with seats under the shade of spreading beeches. The Episcopal church of St. Mary is a building in the Gothic style, with a tower and bell. St. Mary's Tower is the residence of John Bett esq. and Erigmore, the residence of Charles Bowman Logan esq. The population of Birnam village in 1891 was 494.

The third district of the parish of Little Dunkeld extends from Inver, along the banks of the Tay, to Grandtully, a space of ten miles; here the fields are level, and the whole has the appearance of an almost continued series of beautiful gardens. It includes a stretch of fine country called "The Bishopric," and contains the village of Dalguise, where there is a station of the Highland railway, and near which are the mansions of Dalguise House and Kinnaird. Balnaguard is a village with an inn at the extreme end of the district.

The fourth district is Strathbraan, a valley about 9 miles in length, through which flows the river Braan. In the lower portion the soil is fertile and well tilled, but the upper portion is poor and unproductive. In this strath is Drumorr Lodge; the shootings attached are very extensive.

Near the centre of Strathbraan is the village of Trochry, containing a Free church and the ruins of a famous old castle, once a seat of the Earls of Gowrie. At the upper extremity of the parish lies the village of Amulree.

DUNNING is a rather extensive parish, in the Upper Strathairn poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village is near the centre of the parish, on the banks of the Dunning water (a tributary of the Earn), and on the road from Stirling to Perth and is half a mile north from the base of the Ochil hills, about 2 south from the river Earn, 9 south-west from Perth and 5 east from Auchterarder, with a station on the Crief Junction and Perth section of the Caledonian line. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 12, a part of Auchterarder, without population, has been transferred to Dunning. This place was destroyed by fire in 1715, by the Earl of Mar's army, on the retreat from Sheriffmuir to Perth. The parish church has a tower of very ancient date. A corn market is held on Wednesday. Here is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, Duncrub Park, the seat of the principal landowner and D.L. who is the principal landowner and lord of the manor, is situated here. Keltie Castle, the residence of the Hon. Bernard Francis Rollo, and Garcock House, the residence of Col. Conyngham M'Alpine, are in this parish. The civil parish comprises 14,855 acres; rateable value, £14,150; the population in 1881 was 1,635, and in 1891, 1,345; and 1,345 in the ecclesiastical, and 838 in the village.

ERROL is a parish in the Carse of Gowrie. 5½ miles in length and nearly 3 in breadth, stretching across the Carse from the foot of the hills to the banks of the Firth of Tay. The soil is rich and fertile and under most productive tillage; it is also highly favourable to the growth of fruit trees, and is intersected with small tracts of water called "pows," collected chiefly from the trenches opened for draining the grounds. The village, which is lighted with gas, has a station about one mile north on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway, and is 10 miles east from Perth, occupying a beautiful situation on a rising ground, embowered in trees, commanding a prospect of the Tay and Carse almost as far east as Dundee. A rivulet flows past to the Tay, and forms a small harbour at its mouth. This place, since 1453, has afforded the title of Earl to a branch of the Hay family, and from a date anterior to 1309, hereditary Lord High Constables of Scotland. The parish church occupies a commanding site, and its tower may be seen at a considerable distance. There is also a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. Megginch Castle is the residence of Captain Malcolm Drummond J.P., D.L.; Errol Park, of Sir William Ogilvy Dalgleish bart. D.L., J.P. and Murie House, of John B. Broun-Morrison esq. D.L., J.P. Acreage of the parish, 9,507; rateable value, £17,972; population in 1881, 2,421, and in 1891, 2,158, of which the village contained 741.

FORNETH, see CLUNIE.

FORTEVIOT is a parish, in Upper Strathern poor combination and small debt court district of Perth, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is 7 miles south-west from Perth, in the district of Strathern, the greater portion of the parish being in the vale of the Earn, that river passing through it. The middle portion is beautifully wooded and enclosed, and is intersected by the May, which joins the Earn nearly opposite Dupplin Castle, the seat of the Earl of Kinoull. The river May winds through the verdant knolls of the Ochills, and thence through the picturesque grounds of Invermay, flowing on and forming several beautiful falls, until it becomes lost for a time in the intricate course of the Humble Bumble, a cataraet at Muckersie Linn, with a perpendicular fall of 30 feet. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 39, a part of Forgandenny parish, with a population of 127, has been transferred to Forteviot. The village of Forteviot, which is on the right bank of the river Earn, is an ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom, but nothing now remains to mark a royal seat. At Bankhead, near Dupplin Castle is an ancient cross; and there is another on the opposite height of Drochnochy, both supposed to mark the approach to Hally Hill, where, in the time of Charles I. vestiges of a palace were in existence. It was on the heights here the battle of Dupplin was fought, 11 Aug. 1332, between the Scotch under the Earl of Mar and Edward Balliol, when the former were defeated, after which Balliol was crowned king of Scotland. The Earl of Kinoull is the principal landowner. The parish has an area of 7,785 acres; rateable value £8,490; the population in 1881 was 618, and in 1891, 538.

FORTINGALL is a parish, in the district of Breadalbane, Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and in Perth small debt court district. The village, situated on the left bank of the river Lyon, about 3 miles from its junction with the Tay, is about 10 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Grantown section of the Highland railway, and is 84 miles north-west from Edinburgh and 42 north-west from Perth. The parish lies in the midst of the Grampians, and the land is only useful for pasture. Including the abolished parish of Kichonan, it is 37 miles in length by 17 in breadth, occupying a large tract of highland territory in the north-west part of the county. The district abounds in lakes, rivers and woods, the chief of the former being Loch Rannoch, which is about 11 miles in length and 1 in breadth, with finey-wooded banks; the next largest in size is Loch Lydoch, about 6 miles long. In this district rises Sechealion, a mountain 3,547 feet in height, on which Dr. Nevil Maskelyne (1732-1811), astronomer royal, made observations on the attraction of gravitation: other mountains in the parish are Ben Creachan 3,540, Ben Achallader 3,399 feet, Carn Maig 3,419 feet, Ben Vennoch 3,125 feet, Creag Mhor 3,305 feet, Meall Phull 2,882 feet, Ben Pharlazani 2,886 feet, Ben Mholach 2,758 feet and Carn Dearg 3,084 feet; there is a yew tree in the burial ground said to be upwards of 2,500 years old. There are the remains of a Roman camp on the Haugh of Fortingall. Fairs are held in the village in December. Garth is the seat of Sir Donald Currie G.C.M.G., M.P., D.L.; Chesthill is the residence of Major William James E. Stewart-Menzies J.P. and Inverval Lodge of the Hon. Mrs. Stewart-Menzies, Sir Donald Currie G.C.M.G., M.P., D.L. and Major Stewart-Menzies are the principal landowners. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order 73, a part of Fortingall parish with a population of 51 has been added to that of Dull, and parts of the parishes of Kenmore, without population; Logierait with 121, and Weem with 51 population, transferred to Fortingall. The area of the civil parish is 196,683 acres; rateable value, £25,898; population in 1881, 1,690, and in 1891, 1,610, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 527.

Not far from the southern bank of Lake Rannoch are the barracks called Georgetown.

Braes of Rannoch is a small district and quad sacra parish formed from Fortingall civil parish, and is at the upper end of Loch Rannoch, about 6 miles from Rannoch station on the West Highland section of the North British railway. Sir Robert Menzies bart. and John S. O. Robertson-Luxford esq. are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 290.

Keltney Burn is a small village in the parish of Fortingall, about 6 miles from Aberfeldy station. There is a mill here engaged in the manufacture of tweeds, clan tartans &c. Population returned with the parish.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Fortingall; Miss Jessie Campbell, postmistress. Letters through Aberfeldy. Delivery, 11 a.m.; dispatch, 2.5 p.m.

Post Office, Rannoch Station (Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Perthshire added to them). Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is Kinloch Rannoch, 17 miles distant, & also the telegraph office for delivery, but the railway station is nearest for collection.

Post & Telegraph Office, Glenlyon; Christian McNaughton, sub-postmaster. Letters through Aberfeldy. Deliveries, 3 p.m.; dispatched, 9.15 a.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid; the nearest money order office is at Fortingall.

FOSS, see DULL.

FOSSWAY and TULLIEBOLE parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred wholly into Kinross-shire.

FOWLIE, or Fowlis Easter, formerly part in Perthshire, has been, by the previously named Act, transferred to Forfarshire.

FOWLIS WESTER is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Crieff, with a station at Abercainry, 2½ miles south-west, on the Perth, Crieff and Comrie branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 5 north-east from Crieff and 13 west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Crieff parish, with a population of 115, has been added to Fowlis Wester and parts of that parish transferred to the parishes of Little Dunkeld, Monzie and Monzievaired and Stronan. Cuitoquhey, the seat of James Maxtone Graham esq. D.L., J.P. and Abercainry, the seat of Capt. William H. Drummond Moray D.L., J.P. are situated here, the latter being the principal landowner and lord of the manor. Acreage, 22,803; rateable value, £13,107; population of the civil parish in 1881, 1,112, and in 1891, 968; and of the ecclesiastical, 662.

Gilmerton is a village in the parish of Fowlis Wester, on the road from Perth to Crieff, 2 miles north-east from Crieff railway station, and 3 west from Fowlis Wester. Buchanty is a hamlet in the parish of Fowlis Wester, near the river Almond, 3 miles north from Fowlis Wester and 7 east from Methven station on the Perth and Comrie branch of the Caledonian railway, and 13 east from Perth, its post town. GLENDEVON is a village and parish, in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 3½ miles north-by-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Alloa and Mawcarse junction of the North British railway, 14 miles north-east from Alloa and 15 south from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55), boundary orders 120 and 135, a part of Blackford parish, without population, and of Possoway and Tulliebole parish, with a population of 32, have been transferred to this parish. It is pleasantly situated in a glen, the Ochil hills bounding it on the north and south. The Devon runs through the village, and in the neighbourhood there are some very beautiful falls; the river also abounds in trout, and in the season anglers have good sport. The established church here is about a mile from the village. There is a mill for wool spinning in the parish, in which also are the Dunfermline and Inverkeithing waterworks. Glendevon Castle, now in a good state of preservation, was formerly an outpost of the Douglas family. The Earl of Camperdown, David G. R. Lindsay esq. of Glendevon House, William James Haig esq. of Dollarfield, William L. Lawson esq. of Richmond-on-Thames, James S. Robertson esq. of Edradyne, and Col. John B. Harvey, of Tormaukin, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,133; rateable value, £5,622; population of the parish in 1881, 147, and in 1891, 109.

Post Office; Mrs. Annie Sinclair, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 10.20 a.m.; dispatch, 4.5 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Dollar. The nearest telegraph office is at Rumbling Bridge, 5 miles distant. Letters for Glendevon should be addressed "Dollar R.S.O. Clackmannanshire."

KENMORE parish, which is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, lies in the Highland district of Breadalbane, surrounding Loch Tay, which is 16 miles in length, varying from one to two in breadth. The waters of the lake, which seldom or never freeze, abound with salmon and other fish. About midway down the Loch Tay rises Ben Lawes, a mountain 3,984 feet in height. The village of Kenmore occupies an eminence at the north-east end of the loch, close by the point where it becomes a river, over which is a bridge of five arches, and is 6 miles south-west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway, 80 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-west from Perth and 24 west from Dunkeld. This is a favourite point in a tour of the Highlands, and is much visited in summer. In the parish is Meall Ghaordic mountain, which rises to the height of 3,407 feet, and Ben Dheicach, 3,074 feet high. By the "Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of this parish have been transferred to the parishes of Dull, with 47 population, Kålin, with 61, and Fortingall, without population, and a part of Killin, with 122, and Weem, with 62 population, annexed to Kenmore. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in March and on the 2nd of November (both old style), and the 28th of June, the 28th July, the 17th of September, and the 24th December. In the vale below the village are the park and castle of Taymouth, the seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. who is the principal landowner. The mansion some years since was much enlarged and improved, and it now ranks amongst the most elegant modern castellated mansions in Scotland. The parish contains an area of 67,195 acres; rateable value, £10,160; in 1881 the population was 1,508, and in 1891, 1,401 in the civil, and 1,271 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Acharn is a small village in Kenmore parish, on the east side of Loch Tay, about 2 miles south-west from the village of Kenmore and 8 south-west from Aberfeldy railway station. Near the village, in a woody glen, are the celebrated Falls of Acharn. The Campbell family have built a grotto called the "Hermitage" opposite to the greatest fall, where the water suddenly precipitates itself over a projecting rock at a height of about 250 feet.

KILLIECRANKIE, see MOULIN.

KILLIN is a mountainous and extensive parish in the Highland district of Breadalbane, and is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district; the village, a rapidly growing one, occupies a delightful and picturesque situation at the west end of the celebrated Loch Tay, and near the confluence of the rivers Lochay and Dochart with the waters of the lake; it is 74 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-north-west from Strirling, 27 west-by-north from Crieff, 22 1/2 north from Callander, and 16 south-west from Kenmore. The Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway is connected by the Killin line, by which Kenmore is brought into nearer contact through the Loch Tay steamers. This line is one of the finest in Scotland for grandeur and scenery. Anglers residing at the hotels have trout fishing free of charge in Loch Tay, which is one of the largest and most beautiful lochs in Scotland, and in point of salmon fishing, the season for which opens on 5th February, it is surpassed by none. The Falls of Lochy are about 3 miles from Killin, and are well worth a visit. The scenery between Killin and Kenmore can be seen to best advantage from the deck of one of the Loch Tay steamers. The west, or Killin end, is grand and wild, the mountains rising to a great height, and serrated into many jagged and fantastic sky-lines. Some rare ferns and cairngorm stones are found here. In the parish are Ben More Mountain, 3,843 feet high, and Ben Laoigh, 3,708 feet in height; near the latter is the source of the river Tay. The village is noted for the picturesque beauty of its situation, and, like Kenmore, is a favourite point of tour of the central Highlands. To view the scenery to advantage, the traveller is advised to take the road on the south-east side of the lake. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Killin parish, with a population of 122, has been transferred to Kenmore, and a part of the parish of Kenmore, with 61, and Weem, with 40, population, added to Killin. In Killin village is a monument of polished granite, erected by the Gaelic Society of Perth, to the Rev. James Stewart, for 52 years minister of Killin, and the first translator of the New Testament into Scottish Gaelic. He was born in 1700, and died in 1789. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, the 6th of May, the Friday before Donne Ist of November fair, and the first Tuesday in November (old style). On a small island here, formed by two branches of the river, is the burial place of the clan M'Nab. On one of the trees of the island may be seen a branch, which, severed from its parent stem by a storm in February, 1806, attached itself to a neighbouring tree, and is now growing with its branches downwards. A small eminence in the neighbourhood of Killin is pointed out as the place of sepulture of the famed Highland hero Fingal. Auchmore House, a fine seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G. is at the head of the loch on the south side, and opposite, on the north side, is the picturesque old burying ground and mausoleum of the family. The ivy-covered ruins of Finlarig Castle, one of the oldest seats of the Barons of Breadalbane, are close to the vault. In the gardens of Auchmore is a black Hamburg vine, covering 475 square yards of glass, and growing from a single stem which measures 22 inches at a height of 3 feet from the ground, and is the largest vine in Europe. The Marquess of Breadalbane and Edward G. Place esq. of Dochart, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 96,926 acres; rateable value, £21,306; the population in 1881 was 1,277, and in 1891, 2,402, and in the ecclesiastical, 1,061.

Strathfillan, 14 miles south from Killin, is a quoad sacra parish formed from Killin parish in Perthshire, and Glenorchy and Inishail parish in Argyllshire, and includes the villages of Clifton, Crianlarich and Tyndrum. The population in 1891 was 1,934.

Clifton is a small village in the western part of the civil parish, half a mile from Tyndrum stations on the West Highland section of the North British railway, and the Oban section of the Caledonian railway.

Crianlarich and Tyndrum are stations on the Callander and Oban railway, and the West Highland section of North British railway, and each has an excellent hotel, with a billiard room and a bowling green.

KILMADOCK parish, which is in Upper Strathburn poor combination and small debt court district of Dunblane, comprises a district of great fertility, the land upon the banks of the Forth and Teith producing abundant crops of every description of grain. From the level margin of the former river the ground rises gradually to the Grampian mountains, which form the northern boundary of the parish. The parish contains the burgh of Doune and the village of Deansdon. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 69, a portion of Kilmadock parish, with a population of 135, has been transferred to Kincairdine, and a part of that parish, with 58 population, added to Kilmadock. The Earl of Moray, Lieut.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond D.L., J.P. of Rialr Drummond, Sir Robert Jardine bart. D.L. of Lanrick Castle, and J. Burn-Murdoch esq. of Gartincaber, are the principal landowners. The acreage of the civil parish of Kilmadock is 24,521; rateable value, landward £22,381, burghal (Doune) £3,617; the population in 1881 was 3,012, and in 1891, 2,760. Doune containing 940 of that number, and in Kilmadock ecclesiastical parish, 2,593.

Deansdon, a village in this parish, is 1 mile from Doune station. The extensive cotton mill of James Finlay and Co. is here. Deansdon House is the residence of Sir John Muir bart. D.L., J.P. Population in 1891, 723.

KINCARDINE is a parish, in the small debt court district of Dunblane, and is 4 miles south from Doune station on the Dunblane and Killin Junction branch of the Caledonian railway and 3 north-east from Kippen station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 45 west-by-north from Edinburgh, 39 south-west from Perth and 5 south from Callander. The parish lies between the rivers Teith and Firth, in the southern quarter of the county, in the strath of Mentelth, bounded on the east by the river Teith and the south by the Forth; it is triangular in figure, one side 12 miles in length, another 16 and a third about 7. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 63, a part of Kincardine parish has been added to Kilmadock and a part of that parish transferred to Kincardine. Adjacent to the Teith and on the road from Stirling is the estate of Blair Drummond, the seat of Lt.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond, vice-lieutenant of Perthshire. The Earl of Moray and Lt.-Col. Stirling-Home-Drummond are the landowners. The area was 10,504 acres, but now somewhat altered since the reconstruction of parish boundaries; rateable value, £14,229; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 1,277, Thornhill containing 428 of that number, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 648.

Blair Drummond is a small village in the parish.

Thornhill, a village in this parish, will be found under a separate head.

Post Office, Blair Drummond; Robt. Dow, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Stirling. Deliveries, 6 & 10 a.m.; dispatches, 10 a.m. & 7 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Doune, 2 miles distant KINNOULL is a parish, in the small debt court district of Perth, and has its western extremity on the Tay, opposite Perth, extending thence in an irregular manner for nearly 4 miles, with a general breadth of 1 mile. The surface is hilly, but romantic and exceedingly beautiful, being covered to a great extent with fine plantations. Many villas have been erected on the rising grounds to the east of the river, and now form part of the suburbs of Perth. The village is 2 miles east from Perth station. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, part of Kinfauns, with a population of 42, and of Scone parish, with a population of 39, have been transferred to this parish, and a part of Kinnoull added to the parishes of Kinfauns with 28 population, St. Madeos with 121, St. Martins 208, and Scone 46. Kinnoull Hill is above 600 feet perpendicular, and affords an enchanting prospect of the surrounding country. The ancient church of the parish was a rectory, in the proprietary of the monastery of Cambuskenneth, and was dedicated to St. Constantine. The modern church, erected in 1826, stands on a bank overhanging the Tay. Near this once stood the old castle of Kinnoull, St. Mary's, Kinnoull Hill, is a Roman Catholic establishment, consisting of the church and residence of the Redemptorist Fathers. The house serves also for the clergy and laity who come here to spend a short time in spiritual exercises. The buildings were erected from designs by Mr. Heiton, architect, of Perth, and are in the Early English style of the 12th century. The James Murray Royal Asylum, on Kinnoull hill, erected from a bequest of Mr. James Murray, a native of Perth, and opened in 1827, is a building of the Grecian-Doric order, and is intended for private insane patients only, and two wings have been added for acute cases; it is an endowed institution and Chartered Corporation, under the management of directors; attached are extensive pleasure grounds, surrounded by the fields of the Home farm.

Kincarrathie House and Seven Gables, Elie, have been acquired as Convalescent Homes. The Perth and Perthshire Hospital for Incurables is on the Dundee road, and usually contains from 40 to 50 patients. Kinnoull has given the title of earl to a branch of the family of Hay of Erroll, Sir George Hay, lord chancellor, 1622, being ennobled in 1627 as Baron Hay of Kintfauns and Viscount Dupplin, and elevated to the earldom in 1633 as Earl of Kinnoull. The Earl is the principal landowner. The parish comprised 3,646 acres previous to the alteration of the boundary; rateable value, landward £3,304, burghal (part of Perth) £19,207; the population in 1881 was 3,461, and in 1891, 3,730, of which 3,402 are included in the royal burgh of Perth.

KIPPEN parish, formerly partly in Perthshire, has been by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred entirely to Stirlingshire.

KIRKMICHAEL is an extensive parish, forming a combination poor law district with Legierait, and is in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is in the north-east corner of the county, adjoining Aberdeenshire on the north and the county of Forfar on the east. The parish, which is 17 miles in length and from 6 to 7 in breadth, comprises the greater part of Strathardle, and is intersected by the river Arde, which is crossed by a bridge of two arches, and along the left bank is an excellent road leading from Pitlochry to Blairgowrie. A military way from Coupar-Angus to Fort George traverses the northern part of the parish, by the Spittal of Glenshae. The surrounding country is hilly and very beautiful. The church stands on the high road from Coupar-Angus to Blairgowrie, 12½ miles east from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 172 north from Edinburgh, and 29 north from Perth and 18 north-west from Blairgowrie. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 72, a part of Rendochy parish, with a population of 144, of Caputh, with 21, and of Rattray, with 20, have been transferred to Kirkmichael parish. The market day is held on Friday. Arde Grave, near Dirnanean, 9 feet in length, has been preserved. There is also a rocking stone near Dalruison, a supposed Druidical altar near Balvarran, and numerous circles and cairns. Ashintully Castle is the seat of David C. Rutherford-Lindsay esq. D.L., J.P. The area is 57,283 acres; rateable value, £18,694; the population in 1881 was 849, and in 1891, 935.

EC ROPT is a parish originally partly in Perthshire and partly in Stirlingshire; this latter portion contained a part of the village of Bridge of Allan, the other part of which was in Logie parish (Stirlingshire). By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 and 127, the part of Bridge of Allan then in Lecropt was transferred into Logie parish, while the landward portion of Lecropt (Stirlingshire), then left, was transferred to this county, thus placing the parish of Lecropt wholly in Perthshire. The quad sacra parish, embracing all the original parish, retains its old boundaries. The village, in which is the parish church, a building in the Gothic style, lies about half a mile south-west of Bridge of Allan, overlooking the earse. Archibald Stirling esq. of Keir, and the Earl of Moray are the principal landowners. The area is about 2,900 acres; rateable value, £3,490; the population in 1881 was 602, and in 1891, as altered by transfers, 273. Letters received through Bridge of Allan

LOGIE, formerly partly in this county, has been by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," transferred wholly into Stirling county.

LOGIEALMOND is now a civil parish created by Order of the Secretary for Scotland, dated Nov. 4th, 1895, and includes what was formerly known as Monzie parish; it is in the poor combination of Upper Strathearn, and small debt court district of Crieff; the village is 4 miles north-by-west from Methven terminal station on a short branch from Methven Junction, on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, 11 north-east of Crieff and 10 north-west from Perth. The surrounding country is mountainous, only about one-third being arable, the remainder being heather and moss. It is watered by the Almond, the Keltie, and the Shaggy, upon which are several romantic cascades. The only inhabited portions of the district are two valleys, separated from each other by a ridge of hills 4 miles broad.

LETHENDY and KINLOCH form a united parish, in the poor combination of Perth and the small debt court district of Blairgowrie.

Lethendy parish is 3 miles south-west from Blairgowrie terminal station on a branch from Coupar-Angus of the Caledonian railway, and about 15 north from Perth. Tower of Lethendy is the seat of LOGIERAIT is a parish in the northern part of the county and in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination. The village is about half a mile from Ballinluig station on the Perth and Blair section of the Highland railway, 8 miles north-north-west from Dundee, and the like distance north-east from Aberfeldy. The principal part of the parish lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the Tay and the Tummel, extending along the banks of each for 7 miles. An iron bridge was erected in 1888 at a cost of £2,800, in place of the chain boat which previously was the only means of communication between the two sides of the river. Not far from the church is an eminence which commands a prospect of part of the parish. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Dull parish with a population of 370, of Dundee and Dowlally with 74, Moulun with 55, and Weem with 16, have been added to Logierait parish, and a part of Kenmore parish, with 583 population, added to Dull, part with 129 to Weem, part with 63 to Moulun, and part with 121 to Fortingal. The parish is noted for the distillation of whisky. A monument has been erected to the late Duke of Atholl (d. 16 Jan. 1864), by the gentlemen of the county and his tenantry. A Combination Poorhouse was built in 1864 for Logierait and ten adjoining parishes. It was at Logierait that Prince Charles kept his prisoners after the battle of Prestonpans, 21 Sept. 1745. Tullymet is the residence of William Hutt Allhusey esq. Principal landowners, the Duke of Atholl K.T.; Archibald Edward Butter esq. of Faskally; William Maxwell esq. of Donavonrd; James Blair esq. Middlehaugh; Miss Ferguson, Dunfallyland; the trustees of the late Rev. Alex. Campbell, of Eastcaryre; Capt. John Malcolm Stewart, of Ballechin; James Alexander Menzies esq. of Pittnacree; John Guthrie Lornie esq. F.S.S., M.S.A. Lond., J.P. of Pitnastie; the trustees of the late Duncan Macpherson esq. of Glendoll; Walter T. J. Scrymgeour-Stewart-Fotheringham esq. D.L., J.P. of Murthly Castle and the Marquess of Breadalbane. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary, was 37,759 acres; present rateable value, £17,915; the population of the civil parish in 1881 was 2,323, and in 1891, 3,730, and in the ecclesiastical, 2,033.

Ballinluig is a small village in the parish of Logierait, about half-way between Dundee and Pitlochry, with a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for Aberfeldy. Population returned with the parish.

LONGFORGAN is a parish in the Perth small debt court district, varying from one to 4 miles in breadth, and is 9 in length; it forms the eastern boundary of the earse of Gowrie, and extends along the Tay on its southern extremity for more than 4 miles. The village stands on a ridge at an elevation of about 130 feet above the Tay, of which, with the whole of the intermediate country to the east, and particularly to the south and south-west, it commands an uninterrupted prospect, and is 6 miles south-west from Dundee, with a station one mile south on the Dundee and Perth section of the Caledonian railway. Near here, situated in a dell, are the ruins of a chapel, said to have been erected by Malcolm IV. in 1164, for a community of Cistercian monks. A fair is held every third Saturday in June (o. s.), chiefly for the sale of cattle. Castle Huntly, now the residence of Mrs. Armitstead, was erected in 1452, by Andrew, 1st Lord Gray, of Fowls, and is said to have been named by Patrick, the 3rd lord, after his wife, a daughter of the Earl of Huntly, and who had large possessions in the earse. Its walls are 10 feet thick, and the height of the round tower is 116 feet, the view from the top commanding extensive and beautiful prospects of the Fife coast, with the Ochils and other loftier mountains. Lord Kinraid, of Rossie Priory; J. Martin Whyte esq. of Balruddery; and the trustees of James Brown esq. of Lochton, are the principal landowners. The soil of the parish varies in quality, but upon the whole is exceedingly productive. There is also an abundant supply of stone of good quality. Acreage of the parish, 8,523; rateable value, £13,732; population in 1881, 1,854, and in 1891, 1,779. Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Miss Margaret Horne, sub-postmistress. LUNDY and FOWLIS form a joint parish formerly partly in Perthshire, but by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), now entirely included in Forfarshire.

MADDERTY is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Crieff, 5 miles east from Crieff, with a station on the Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway. This place, since 1609, has afforded the title of baron to the Drummond family, now Viscounts Strathkellan. The seat of Anthony G. Murray J.P. of Dolerrie, is in the parish. Lord Abercromby is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 4,861; rateable value, £8,902; population in 1881, 527, and in 1891, 483.

St. David's is a village in the parish of Madderty, one mile therefrom and 4 miles east from Crieff.

MEIGLE, a parish in the district of Strathmore, is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village, the seat of a presbytery, is on the banks of the Isla, with a station on the Alyth branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 61 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north-by-east from Perth, 13½ north-north-west from Dundee, 5 north-east from Coupar-Angus, and 4 south from Alyth; the parish, 4½ miles in length and 2 in breadth, is fertile and well cultivated, and, besides the Isla, is watered by the Dean, which is the northern boundary of the district. The parish church, erected on the site of the old one (destroyed by fire in March, 1869), at a cost of about £2,500, was opened in July 1870. In the churchyard are some old monuments, and tradition asserts it to be the grave of Queen Vanora, the unfaithful wife of King Arthur. The figures which, it is said, once delineated the history of Vanora, are so defaced and disipated as to render all attempts at deciphering their meaning fruitless. A cattle auction is held on alternate Saturdays, and a fair on the last Wednesday in June, and last Wednesday in October for cattle. Belmont Castle is the seat of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman G.C.B., M.P., M.A., D.L., J.P.; the gardens and fine plantations render it a most delightful residence. In one of the enclosures a tumulus is pointed out, where, it is said, Macbeth was deprived of his usurped power and his life in his fatal encounter with Macduff. A number of stones and monuments, supposed to be of Pictish origin, are also to be seen in the vicinity. Kinloch is the seat of Sir John George Smyth Kinloch bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. and Cardean, of Edward Cox esq. J.P. The Earl of Wharfedale, Sir John G. S. Kinloch bart. M.P. and the Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman G.C.B., M.P. are the principal landowners, the latter being also the lord of the manor. About a mile north-east of the village, at the junction of the Isla and the Dean, are the remains of a Roman camp, called Cardean, or Cardean, and noticed by General Roy in his work on the Roman antiquities of Scotland. There is a good hotel, viz.—the Kinloch Arms, with free fishing on the Isla, and part of the Dean. Area of the civil parish, 3,980 acres; rateable value, £11,015; population in 1881, 696, and in 1891, 660.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Donald Mackenzie, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.15 a.m. daily & 7.40 p.m.; dispatches, 5.40 a.m. Mondays only, 6.30 a.m. & 2.30 & 5.45 p.m. Post messengers for Ruthven, Arlder, Barmdony, Cockston, Belmont Castle & Glamis are dispatched at 7.40 a.m.

MEIKLE TROCHRY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MEIKLEOUR is a village, in the civil parish of Capnth, poor law combination of Logierait, and small debt court district of Perth, and is 2 miles north from Cargill station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, 4 south from Blairgowrie and 1½ north-east from Perth. The surrounding country is very beautiful, and the far-famed Beech Hedge, the chief attraction to the village, comprises trees reaching an average of 90 feet in height, and the length of the hedge is estimated at 580 yards. It is believed to have been planted in 1746, one year after the battle of Culloden. In a field close to the road stands a pillar, and near to the top is a hole for receiving a beam whereon to suspend scales for weighing wool &c. and which is the "iron" of former days. In the middle of the village stands the market cross, surrounded by an iron railing, and bearing the date 1698. A Roman dyke with the remains of a camp are still visible. The population of the village in 1891 was 97.

Post Office (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Perthshire added to them); Andrew Milne, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from all parts via Perth at 8.30 a.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 2.10 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. METHVEN is a parish, in the Upper Strathern parish combination and the small debt court district of Perth, and is bounded on the north by the river Almond. The village is on the high road from Perth to Crieff, and is the terminus of short line from Methven Junction station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, 6 miles west from Perth and 11 north-east from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Methven, and a part of Methven, with a population of 53, added to Auchtergavon. Here is the grave of Bessie Bell and Mary Gray, whose beauty and acclusion from the world at the time of the plague, 1666, from which they ultimately died, have been recorded in Scottish song. About a mile from the village is Methven Castle, the property of Colonel David Murray Smythe J.P. the principal landowner, now occupied by W. L. Dunn esq.; the castle is distinguished in Scottish history as the place where King Robert was defeated by the English army, under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. Trinity College, Glenalmond, on the banks of the Almond, is 10 miles north-west from Perth and 4 north-west from the Methven railway station; it was projected in 1841, and opened in 1847, for the double purpose of supplying a proper collegiate training to candidates for holy orders in the Scottish Episcopal church, and of establishing in Scotland a public school after the general model of those in England, but the theological department has since been removed to Edinburgh; the site on which the college stands was presented by the late George Patton esq. (Lord Glenalmond) of the Cairnies; the funds for the buildings were raised by general subscription. The chapel, a building in the Decorated Gothic style, is 135 feet long by 52 wide, with a height of 70 feet, and was erected by the late Right Rev. C. Wordsworth, Bishop of St. Andrews, at a cost of over £8,000, the council consists of sixteen members, namely, the seven Scotch bishops, two deans and eight laymen; the teaching staff consists of a warden, twelve assistant masters and a medical officer; music is taught by the organist. The area is 12,911 acres; rateable value, £13,549; population in 1891 was 1,747, the village numbering 657; ecclesiastical area population in 1891, 1,734.

MONZIE parish has been absorbed in the newly-constituted parish of Logiealmond.

MONZIEVAIRD and STROWAN

form a united civil parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and Crieff small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Crieff parish, without population, and of Fowlis Wester, also without population, and of Monzie parish, with 25 inhabitants, have been transferred to Monzievaired and Strowan, a part of Monzievaired and Strowan, with a population of 27, to Comrie, and a part, with 13, added to Muthill.

Monzievaired is 3 miles north-west from Crieff, its nearest railway station. The river Earn passes through the district from west to east; and in the neighbourhood of this stream the country is beautiful, well planted and inclosed. There are several small lakes in the parish, among which is the lake of Monzievaired, situated at the bottom of a wood in the pleasure grounds of Ochertyre, and well stored with pike, perch and eels. On the bank of the lake a fine repeating echo is produced. Ben Chonzie mountain, 3,048 feet high, is in this parish. Towards the close of the 15th century, the clan Drummond, in pursuit of the Murrays, found they had taken refuge along with their wives and children in the old parish church, to which the Drummonds set fire, when every soul was burned save one, who escaped by leaping out of a window. Ochertyre, the seat of Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart.; Glenturret, of the Rt. Hon. Sir John Rigby P.C., Q.C.; Tredegar, of Col. David Robertson Williamson D.L., J.P.; Lawers, of Andrew Grant esq.; Strowan, of Carolus Home Graham-Stirling esq. J.P. and Clathich House, of Capt. William Campbell Colquhoun J.P. are all in this parish. David Robertson Williamson esq. J.P., D.L. is lord of the manor. Acreage, 26,093; rateable value, £10,612; population of the civil parish in 1881, 700, and in 1891, 593, and in the ecclesiastical, 490. MOULIN is a large parish in the highlands, extending towards the Forest of Athole, bounded on the north-east by the parish of Kirkmichael, on the south-east by Logierait, on the south-west by Dull, and on the west and north-west by Blair-Atholl. It is intersected by the Briarochan and the Fernate, which unite within the district. The latter runs through Glenfernate, and its junction with the Briarochan forms the Ardale. The several lochs are well stocked with trout, particularly Loch Broom. The greater part of the parish is mountainous, but the vales of the streams are exceedingly beautiful. The village, which is very small, is half a mile north from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair-Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 8 south from Blair-Atholl and 25 north from Perth; near to it stand the ruins of the old castle of Moulin. There is an excellent hotel in the village. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of Blair-Atholl parish, without population, and of Logierait, with a population of 63, have been added to this parish, and a part of Moulin parish, with a population of 9, added to Blair-Atholl, and with 13, to Muthill. The parish church was erected in 1832. There is a fair held at Moulin annually on the first Tuesday in March. In this parish is the pass of Killiecrankie, noted for the battle fought there on the 17th of July, 1689, between King William's army, commanded by General Mackay, and a body of Highlanders under Viscount Dundee, where, after defeating the royal troops, the gallant Claverhouse met with his death. There is a station at this place on the Perth and Blair-Atholl section of the Highland railway. Faskally is the residence of Archibald Edward Butter esq.; Baledmund, of James Grant Ferguson esq. J.P.; Kindrogan, of Miss Keir; Urrard, of Mrs. Alston Stuart, and Dunfallandy, of Miss Ferguson. The principal landowners are A. E. Butter esq. of Faskally; J. G. Ferguson esq.; Miss Alston Stuart; Miss Keir; James Small esq., D.L., J.P. of Dirnanear; Edward Wylan esq. of Tarvie; Major Alexander B. Stewart J.P. of Balnakeilly, and Lieut.-Col. George G. Sandeman, of Fonab. The parish of Moulin has an acreage of 45,900; rateable value, £27,713; in 1881 the population was 2,066, and in 1891, 2,381, ecclesiastical parish, 2,382.

MUCKHART is a village and parish in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 2 miles north-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Alloa and Mearns Junction section of the North British railway, 11 north-east from Alloa and 18 south-east from Crieff. It is triangular in shape, about 5 miles in length from east to west, its greatest breadth from north to south being about 2½ miles. The Devon forms its principal boundary, separating it from Fossaway on the south and east, while on the north and west two small streams respectively divide it from Glendevon and Dollar. A branch of the Ochil hills runs east and west along the northern boundary of the parish, terminating on the east by a conical-shaped hill called "Sea-mab," 1,442 feet above sea level. The Devon in this neighbourhood displays a number of interesting waterfalls, amongst which are the falls of Rumbling Bridge, Devil's Mill and Caldron Linn. The water passes through fissures in the rocks, which in many places present the appearance of having been rent asunder. When viewed from the parapet of the Rumbling Bridge, 120 feet above the level of the river and over 500 feet above the sea level, the scenery beneath, on both sides, is very striking, and since the opening of the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway, for which there is a station at Rumbling Bridge, this locality has become much frequented. In 1645, every house in Muckhart parish, including the church, was burnt by the Marquess of Montrose, when he sacked and destroyed Castle Campbell, at that time belonging to the Earl of Argyll. Besides the parish church, which is at the small village of Pool, there is also a United Presbyterian church. John Christie esq. of Cowden Castle; Alexander Price Haig esq. of Blairhall; John James Moubay esq. M.A., J.P. of Nae Moor; John Hutcherson Kerr esq. of Harviestoun Castle, and James McArthur Moir esq. of Lawhill, are the principal landowners. The soil of Muckhart is in general light and gravelly, but in some parts it is more retentive. The area is 4,928 acres; the rateable value, £5,547; population in 1881, 601, and in 1891, 642.

Post Office; John Young, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Dollar R.S.O. Clackmannanshire. Delivery, 10.30 a.m.; dispatch, 4.25 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Dollar & Telegraph office at Rumbling Bridge, 2 miles distant

MURTHLY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MUTHILL is an extensive parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Crieff, on the borders of the Highland district, on the right bank of the Earn. The village is on the great military road from Dunblane to Inverness by Tummel Bridge, 19 miles north from Strling, 16 south-west from Perth and 3 south from Crieff, with a station on the Crieff junction and Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway, one and a half miles east from the village. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Crieff parish, with a population of 12, and of Monzievaird and Strowan parish, with 13, have been transferred to Muthill, and a part of Muthill parish, with a population of 35, added to Comrie. There is a church, in ruins, said to have been built in 1419; the tower appears to be of an earlier date, and is doubtless of Pictish origin. Culdees Castle, finely seated on a rock at the head of the vale of Strathearn, is the seat of Robert Thomas Napier Spier esq. D.L., J.P. Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the family of Perth, is now the residence of the Earl of Ancester P.C. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Muthill parish has an area of 21,916 acres; rateable value, £21,294; the population in 1881 was 1,702, and in 1891, 2,123 in the civil, and 1,639 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Perthshire added to them); James Morrison, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.15 a.m. & 3.30 & 6.45 p.m.; dispatches, 6.50 a.m. 1.15, 4.20, 6.15 & 9.25 p.m.; sundays, 9 a.m. & 3.10 p.m.

PERTH.

PERTH (Gadh. "barr-tatha," the height on the Toy) is an ancient city, royal burgh, the seat of a synod, conjointly with Stirling, and of a presbytery, and the capital of the county to which it gives its name; it is also a civil parish and head of a peer combination and is on the river Tay, about 10 miles from the Firth, 46 north from Edinburgh, 62 north-east from Glasgow, 22 south-west from Dundee, 15 south from Dunkeld, and 16 south from Blairgowrie. Perth is a railway centre, with a station used jointly by the Caledonian, North British and Highland railways; the Perth and Dundee line crosses the Tay by a bridge and a viaduct over Moncrieff Island, and the Perth and Crieff branch connects these places; the Highland railway places Perth in communication with Inverness and the extreme north. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 70, a portion of the parish of Tibbermore has been transferred to Perth, and a part of Perth parish added to Tibbermore. The city is situated at the opening of an extensive plain, nearly surrounded by picturesque hills, with the Grampians in the distance; it is bounded on the north and south by two fine meadows, known as the North and South Inches, and used as public recreation grounds, the former covering 100, and the latter 72 acres; both are ornamented with noble trees, and watered by the Tay, which occasionally overflows them. Traces of a fortification, called Cromwell's Fort, were at one time visible on the South Inch, but the site is now occupied by modern buildings. The approach to Perth by the Edinburgh road is very picturesque, and the descent to the South Inch terminates in a fine avenue of trees, extending to the town. The city itself is large and well built and the principal streets are long and well paved. The river Tay, on which the city stands, is crossed by a fine bridge, constructed from the designs of John Smeaton F.R.S. the eminent engineer. It was originally narrow, admitting of a footpath on one side only, but in 1871 was widened at a cost of over £2,000, by the addition of cast-iron footways, with Caithness pavement and balustrades. Another bridge is now (1899) being constructed, at an estimated cost of about £20,000, from designs by Messrs. Blyth and Westland C.E. Edinburgh. Vessels of 200 tons burthen, owing to skilful dredging, can deliver and receive cargoes at the harbour; and two steamers pass frequently between Perth and Dundee. The number of fishing vessels registered under part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, on Dec. 31, 1898, was 17 of 231 tons, employing 34 men and boys. Fishing boats and their implements are marked with the letters "P. E. H."
 Perth has long been noted for its dye works and for the manufacture of inks, but it is also famous for the manufacture of gauge glasses, which are sent to all parts of the world. There are also extensive works for the manufacture of linen and jute, winceys, woollens &c.; brewing, iron founding, rope and sail making are also pursued, and the coal, corn and timber trades employ in the aggregate a large number of hands.
 The city is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from the Tay, which is purified in a filtering bed, 300 feet long, constructed in the gravel, at the upper end of Priarton Island, with a branch of the river flowing on either side, and producing, at all seasons, an unlimited quantity of pure, soft and limpid water, which is thence conveyed to a reservoir at the east end of Marshall place, in the extreme south-eastern angle of the city, designed by Dr. Anderson, formerly rector of the Academy, and erected under his immediate superintendence. The expense of the work was defrayed by an assessment or water rate on the real rents above a certain amount. By the "Perth Water Act," new in full operation, the present system has been extended to all parts of the city and suburbs.
 Perth was a burgh as early as 1106, but in 1210 was fortified, and constituted a royal burgh, with confirmation of all its former privileges, by William the Lion. Until 1482 it ranked as the capital of Scotland, although Edinburgh became the seat of government in 1437; in 1617 it was visited by James VI. (James I. of England), who accepted the office of provost of the city.

The city is now divided into four wards, and is governed by a lord provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen councillors. The council thus consists of twenty-six members, all of whom, with the exception of the dean of guild, are, since the passing of the "Reform Bill of 1867," elected by household suffrage. The dean of guild is a member of council ex-officio, and is chosen by the Guildry Incorporation; the lord provost and magistrates are elected by the councillors from amongst themselves. The council meets on the first Monday in every month; a sheriff court is held every Tuesday and Friday during session, and two courts at least in each vacation. The magistrates have also the power of inflicting summary punishment for petty offences. The police, lighting, cleansing, paving &c. are controlled by a body of Police Commissioners, acting under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892."
 Perth is in the eastern parliamentary division of the county and was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, in pursuance of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), returning one member.
 The Episcopal Cathedral of St. Ninian, in Atholl street, built in 1850, is a large and lofty structure in the Early Geometric style, and consists of choir with vestries, transepts, clerestried nave of four bays, with aisles, erected in 1890, a western tower and attached to it on the north side a spacious porch with gabled parvise: above the roof of the crossing rises an open bellcote with spirelet. The cathedral is the head of the united diocese of St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane, formed in 1844, but accounts of these as separate dioceses, together with descriptions of their cathedral churches, will be found under the respective headings.
 St. John's Episcopal church, Princes street, which stands on the site of a former chapel, is an edifice in the Early English style, and affords about 500 sittings.
 The Episcopal School church, near the station, in connection with St. John's, is used on week days as a school.
 The church of St. John the Baptist, originally cruciform, and called the Kirk of the Holy Cross of St. Johnstown, is an ancient edifice of stone, consisting of choir, nave, transepts, and a tower with singularly designed spire, the peal of bells hanging outside the tower under a kind of shed. Originally the interior formed a single church, but it is now divided by screens so as to accommodate three separate congregations; the various divisions being known as the East, Middle and West churches; the choir, or East church, was re-opened in June, 1893, after restoration and the removal of the galleries; the transepts, forming the Middle church, after being restored and renovated consequent on the fire which occurred about a year previous, were re-opened on the 15th March, 1896; the nave, three bays of which have been restored, forms the west church.
 St. Paul's church, at the end of High street, in South Methven street, is a modern building of stone, with a steeple.
 St. Leonard's church, in King street, was erected in 1835; the expense being defrayed by joint-stock shares and private subscriptions.
 St. Stephen's church, Wilson street, Craigie, was erected in 1896, and is a building of red sandstone.
 The Free church and the different bodies of Presbyterian dissenters have numerous chapels. There is a Baptist chapel in Toy street, and a Roman Catholic chapel in Melville street.
 The Perth Academy, in Rose terrace, was erected in 1805, and is a building of freestone, embellished with noble columns. Since the passing of the "Scottish Education Act, 1872," the School Board has remodelled the interior of the buildings and substantially improved the capacity and equipment of the institution, more especially for a complete scientific and technical training; the school is now arranged in two divisions—the lower, or elementary school, and the higher, or secondary school; the latter having for its object what is commonly called middle class education, as given in the best higher public schools. The sesion commences in September and ends on 30th June. Since 1891 the modern side of the school has been largely developed, and is worked as an organised science school in connection with the Science and Art Department at South Kensington.

Sharp's Institution, in South Methven street, was opened in 1860, the founder, the late Mr. John Sharp, of Barnhill, Perth, having left the residue of his estate in the hands of certain trustees, to be used by them as a fund for the promotion of education in connection with Perth and its neighbourhood. In 1882 the original scheme was extended so as to include a plan of technical instruction, and at the same time a workshop was built and suitably fitted up to carry out a scheme of manual instruction. In 1885 the course of instruction in science and art was re-organized, so as to enable the whole to satisfy the requirements for an organized science school. In 1890, under scheme of the Educational Endowments Commissioners, the Institution was placed under the management of the Perth Educational Trust, and the work of the school is now carried on in two divisions, known as the upper and lower departments. The Governors have also so enlarged the original buildings as to allow for complete courses of classical instruction, instrumental music and gymnastics. A portion of the west front, comprising class rooms for needlework and instrumental music, has been reserved and fitted up for the exclusive use of the girls' department.

The Municipal Buildings, at the east end of High street, erected in 1881, at a cost of £13,000, are in the Tudor style, from designs by Mr. Granger Heiton, architect, of Perth, and have a frontage to the river. The council chamber, or Commissioners' Hall, which occupied the principal portion of the building and was adorned with stained glass illustrative of personages in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Fair Maid of Perth," was completely destroyed by fire in January, 1895, together with its valuable contents, as well as a portion of the public offices, but was restored in 1896 from the original plans by Mr. Granger Heiton. The buildings also contain the offices of the city clerk, chamberlain, registrar, assessor, police superintendent, treasurer to the police commissioners, and gas offices. The burgh court room, which has its principal entrance from Tay street, is on the first floor above the police office, and communicates therewith.

The County Buildings, in Tay street, on the bank of the Tay, were erected from the designs of Mr. Stuart, architect, and display, in the centre, an elegant portico with twelve massive fluted columns, supporting a pediment; the county hall, a fine room, 68 feet by 40, occupies the south wing; the centre contains a judicatory hall of semi-circular form, with a spacious gallery. The remainder of the building on the same floor includes the sheriff court and room, sheriff clerk's office, and an arched fire-proof room where the records of the town are deposited; above is a spacious ball room and a card room &c. In 1886 an additional building was erected in South street.

The City Hall, at the west end of St. John's church, was erected by the town, and will seat 1,500 persons; it is open for public meetings, application to be made to the city chamberlain.

The Marshall Memorial, at the end of George street and near the bridge, is a circular structure in the Classic style, with a portico of the Ionic order and a dome, and was begun in 1822, by private subscription, as a memorial to the late Thomas Hay Marshall esq. formerly lord provost. The interior contains apartments occupied by the museum of the Perth Literary and Antiquarian Society, a library, a collection of valuable coins, medals and manuscripts, besides a great variety of natural curiosities, amongst which is a cabinet of minerals, containing upwards of twelve hundred choice specimens.

The Perthshire Natural History Museum has, exclusive of the museum halls, a large lecture room, library and laboratory. These form a single building between 200 and 300 feet in length, in the Scottish baronial style, from the designs of Messrs. J. and G. Young, architects, of Perth. In 1894 and 1895 a large addition was made to the museum, and it is now one of the most completely equipped in Scotland.

The Sandeman Public Library, Kinnoull street, was erected in 1896-8 by the Town Council, acting under the bequest of the late Archibald Sandeman, professor of Mathematics in Owen's college, Manchester; the building, declared open by the Earl of Rosebery 22 Oct. 1898, is of red sandstone, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, from designs by Messrs. Campbell Douglas and Morrison, architects, of Glasgow. On the ground floor are the leading department, reading room (open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.), juvenile reading room and librarian's room. The reference department, ladies' room and committee room are on the first floor, and a museum and picture gallery occupies the second floor. The reference department is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and contains 8,100 volumes in all departments of literature. The lending department had, in June, 1899, 13,000 volumes, and the reading room is supplied with most of the leading newspapers and periodicals of the day.

The Freemasons' Hall, in Parliament close, High street, built on the site of the old Parliament House, in 1818, is the property of the Royal Arch Lodge of Freemasons.

The Perth Boys' and Girls' Religious Society Hall, erected in 1881, at a cost of about £3,200, will hold 800 children, and contains, besides the hall, a director's room, two large class rooms, lady workers' room and offices.

The Poorhouse, an extensive pile of buildings, on the Glasgow road, was erected by the Perth Parochial Board, at a cost of £8,000.

The barracks, built in 1795, at the west end of Atholl street, were originally intended for 200 cavalry, but are now occupied by the depot of the Royal Highlanders (Black Watch).

The general prison for Scotland, near the South Inch, built by Government in 1812, for the reception of prisoners of war, was wholly rebuilt and remodelled in 1842, and is now occupied as a convict prison, more extensive buildings having been erected for the detention of criminal lunatics.

The County and City of Perth Royal Infirmary, in York place, is a structure in a plain Italian style, two storeys in height, and consisting of a long block of buildings, with a projecting centre and wings and a spacious arched portico; the first stone was laid by George William, 9th Baron Kinnaird K.T. in 1836, and it was opened in 1838. The late Marquess of Breadalbane and Dr. Brown, of Perth, left liberal bequests to this institution: the west wing, containing additional wards for the treatment of infectious diseases, was erected in 1865, at a cost of £1,200, defrayed principally by subscription, and in 1869 an east wing for surgical cases was added. Various other extensions and improvements were made in 1873-4, 1885 and 1893, and during 1898 there were 1,057 house patients and 641 accident cases, and 292 patients were visited by the district surgeon; attached to the infirmary is a dispensary, at which, in 1898, 812 patients were treated.

King James the Sixth's Hospital was founded by King James VI. in 1583, and charters were granted by that monarch in 1569 and 1587, and confirmed by Acts of Parliament in 1607 and 1692, "to provide by all honest ways and means an hospital for the poor, maimed, distressed persons, orphans, and fatherless bairns within our burgh of Perth," and for the endowment of which he gave "all the lauds, biggirs, tenements, kirks, orchards &c. which pertained to the chaplainries, altarages and prebendaries, founded in whatever kirk, chapel or college within the liberties and privileges of the said burgh of Perth; all the lands &c. which pertained to the Blackfriars, Greyfriars and Carmelite monks at the Reformation—the profits of the same to be applied, in all time coming, to the hospital and sustenance of the poor." Instead of residing in the hospital the pensioners live out, and receive an equivalent of £6 and £12 a year; the hospital building is now for the most part converted into dwelling houses for the working classes.

A statue of H.R.H. the Prince Consort, executed by Mr. Brodie, sculptor, of Edinburgh, was erected in 1864 on the North Inch, and inaugurated by Her Majesty on the 30th of August of that year, on which occasion the late Sir David Ross, then lord provost, was knighted.

On the North Inch is also a statue, erected in 1895 by the County and City of Perth and officers, past and present, in honour of the 90th Light Infantry (Perthshire Volunteers), originally raised in May, 1794, by Thomas Graham, of Balgowan, who was promoted to the rank of General in 1809 for his services in Italy, Spain and Holland, made a G.C.B. in 1812, and created Baron Lynedoch in 1814. This regiment, in July, 1881, was constituted the second bat. Cameronians.

A band stand has been erected on the North Inch at the cost of J. F. Pullar esq. of Rosebank.

A theatre and opera house is now (1899) in course of erection near the High street, from plans by Mr. William Alexander, architect, of Dundee.

There are public swimming baths in Dunkeld road, where every description of baths may be had.

The principal hotels are the Station, at the General Railway station; the Salutation, in South street, and the Waverley, in York place.

The Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Company's Bank, have each two branches in the city, and there are also branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited, and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, as well as a savings bank.

The Royal Perth Golfing Society includes in its roll of members a great many of the nobility and gentry of the locality.

The weekly market day is Friday. The fairs, since the year 1822, have been altered by the magistrates and town council, on account of the general inconvenience resulting from the dates formerly appointed falling on the same days, or at the same time, with the fairs of Falkirk and other places; they are now, therefore, held on the first Friday in March, April, July and September, on the third Friday in October, the second Friday in December, and a sheep and wool fair the first Tuesday after Liverpool wool fair, and a horse market takes place on the first Friday in May. There are now two great cattle and sheep markets in Perth, sales taking place on Monday and Friday.

Three newspapers are published here, viz.: the "Perthshire Advertiser" (Liberal Unionist), established in 1829, and published three times a week; the "Perthshire Constitutional and Journal" (Conservative), established in 1832, and the "Perthshire Courier and Farmers' Journal," established in 1869, and Liberal in politics.

The population of Perth civil parish in 1881 was 28,948, and in 1891, 26,744. The population of the parliamentary and police burgh, 1891, was 23,899, viz.: first ward, 7,055; second ward, 7,622; third ward, 6,121 and fourth ward, 9,151, and of the royal burgh, 30,100, which comprises parts of the civil parishes of Perth, Kinnoull, Scone and Tibbermore. The area of Perth parish comprises 3,658 acres. The rateable value is, burghal (including part of Kinnoull), £171,290; landward, £2,760.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 4,756.

Immediately adjoining the bridge is the suburb of Bridgend, leading to Kinnoull Hill, at the distance of a mile and a half, which can be ascended by various pleasant walks.

Craigend is a small hamlet on the Eddinburgh road, 2 miles from and in the parish of Perth. There is a United Presbyterian church and a school here.

PITLOCHRY is a thriving village in the parish of Monlin, parliamentary division of West Perthshire, Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district, and has a station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway; it is 13 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 28 north from Perth, on the banks of the Tummel, and surrounded by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery to be found in the Highlands of Perthshire; it is also largely resorted to by tourists and anglers for the fishing in the river and Loch Tummel. Spout Dhu, or the black waterfall, Ben Vracky, one of the Gram-pans, the falls of Tummel and the Pass of Killiecrankie are all in the immediate neighbourhood. There are two hydropathic establishments—the Atholl and the Pitlochry, the first-named, erected at a cost of over £100,000, occupies a commanding position in the Vale of Atholl, and its public rooms are large and richly furnished; the latter was opened in 1890, and commands an extensive view of the surrounding country. The Barbour Institute is a very fine building, erected in 1895, by the Barbour family, in memory of the late Rev. R. W. Barbour. The Established church is a structure in the Gothic style, erected in 1884, on an elevated site, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. There is also a Free church. Holy Trinity Episcopal church, built in 1858, and enlarged in 1891, is an edifice in the Gothic style, about half a mile east of the village. There is also a Baptist church. Fairs are held annually on the Saturday before Amalree, in May; on the Friday after Falkirk tryst, in August (for lambs), and on the third Wednesday in October (old style). Messrs. MacNaughton's factory here is noted for the excellence of its Highland tweeds and plaids. Whisky is extensively distilled in this place and neighbourhood. There are several good hotels, and branches of the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a branch of the Perth Savings Bank. Clachnafaire is the seat of Sir Francis Boyd Outram bart. Population in 1881, 777, and in 1891, 1,230.

PORT OF MENTEITH (or Monteith) is a parish in the ancient district of Monteith, in Dumbarton poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district, and is bounded on the south by the river Forth, which separates this county from Stirlingshire. The Goodie water, a tributary of the Forth, rises in the Lake of Monteith and flows through the eastern portion of the parish. The church stands on the high road from Dunblane to Dumbarton, 4 miles north from the Port of Monteith station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 3 north-east from Gartmore terminal station on a branch from Buchlyvie on the same section, and 15 north-west from Stirling. The Lake of Monteith is a beautiful sheet of water near the centre of the district, adjoining the church and manse. It is about 9 miles in circumference, and contains the small island of Inchmaholme, where stand the fine remains of a priory, or monastery, founded in 1238, including the ruins of the church and the cloisters, and a portion of the structure has been for ages the place of sepulture of many noble and ancient families. These ruins are sequestered in overhanging woods of considerable age and growth, and some of the trees are said to be upwards of three centuries old. In this vicinity, on a gentle eminence, are the remains of what is still known as "Queen Mary's Bower," where, after the disastrous battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, the young princess found a safe asylum till her departure for France. On a smaller islet, called Tala, a little distance from Inchmaholme, stand the remains of the principal residence of the Earls of Monteith. Dog Island, another islet, is the place where the Grahams had their kennels. The church contains a very fine peal of 8 bells, presented by the Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard, of Rednock. The Monteith Hotel adjoins the loch, and affords excellent accommodation. There is a steam launch on the lake, belonging to the Hotel, for visitors and others wishing to visit the island. Robert Bontine Cunningham-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore House; Henry David Erskine esq. D.L., J.P. of Cardross; the Duke of Montrose K.P.; the Rev. Henry Alexander Graham Sheppard M.A. of Rednock; George Crabbe esq. of Blairhoyle; John Graham esq. (sheriff), of Perth, and James Carnegie esq. D.L. of Stronvar, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 22,238; rateable value, £11,048; population in 1881, 1,176, and in 1891, 1,092 in the civil and 562 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Gartmore is a village in this parish, 6 miles distant, but is given under a separate heading.

Ruskie is a small hamlet in the parish of Port of Monteith. Kippen is the nearest railway station, 4 miles south-west. Population returned with the parish.

RATTRAY—NEW and OLD form a police burgh and parish, adjoining Blairgowrie, its nearest railway station on a branch of the Caledonian railway, and approached by a bridge of four arches which spans the river Erich. The surface is hilly and the land on the banks of the river arable and fertile, while the higher grounds are only suitable for pasture. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55), boundary order 72, a portion of Rattray parish, containing a population of 572, has been transferred to Libberton. The burgh is in the poor combination of Perth and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie, and is governed by a police commission, consisting of one baillie, two junior bailies and six commissioners. On the banks of the river Erich are flax and jute mills, which give employment to a large number of persons. Within the parish is Craighall, the seat of Lieut.-Gen. Sir James C. Rattray K.C.B., J.P., D.L. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner; the mansion is said to have been visited by Scott in 1793, and was one of the prototypes of "Tullyveolan" in Waverley; it is of modern construction and stands upon a summit of a perpendicular rock about 250 feet above the bed of the river and is open free on Tuesdays and Fridays. To the south-east of the burgh is an oblong mound called the Castlehill, surmounted by vestiges of the ancient castle of Rattray. From Hatton Hill, on a clear day, Perth can be seen, and it was at the Hatton of Rattray that the Scottish martyr, Donald Cargill, a Scotch covenanting divine, was executed in 1681. Acreage, 5,382; rateable value, 69,846; £6,496; landward, £4,451; population in 1881, 3,051, and in 1891, 2,667 in the civil parish and 2,225 in the police burgh.

Post Office, Old Rattray; Alexander Robertson, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Blairgowrie at 8.45 a.m. & 8 p.m. and are dispatched to all parts at 6.30 & 11.15 a.m. & 1.50 & 4.40 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Blairgowrie, 1 mile distant.

Post Office, New Rattray; John F. Grant, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Blairgowrie at 8 a.m. & 6.30 p.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 11.20 a.m. 2, 4.50 & 9 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Blairgowrie.

RHYND is a small parish, in the small debt court district of Perth, about 3 miles east from Bridge of Earn station on the Kirkcaldy and Perth section of the North British railway, and the same distance southeast from Perth. It is 4 miles in length, and one in breadth, bounded on the west by the parishes of Dunbarney and Perth, on the north and east by Kintanns and St.
Madoes, from which it is separated by the Tay, and on the south by the parish of Abernethy, from which it is divided by the Earn,
and is locally at the confluence of those two rivers. The church stands on an eminence, nearly in the middle of the parish, and commands an extensive view of the course of Gowrie and Lower Strathearn. The Castle of Elcho, now in ruins, was originally of great strength. The Earl of Wemyss V.D. is chief landowner. The parish has an area of 2,457 acres: rateable value, £4,262: the population in 1881 was 297,
and in 1891, 270.

ST. MARTINS is a parish and village, 5½ miles north-east of Perth and 2½ southwest from Stanley station on the Airth and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and in the small debt court district of Perth.
The parish is of an irregular shape, being about 5 miles in length from east to west and 2½ broad. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order 71, a portion of Kinnoull parish (Balbeggie), containing a population of 208, has been transferred to this parish. The soil is black moorland. Guildtown is a small village in this parish. At Cairnbeddie are the remains of a castle, once occupied by Maebeth, and from which, as tradition states, he removed to the celebrated hill of Dunsinane, where he fortified another castle. About a mile from his old residence, a place called "The Witch Stane" (where a remarkable stone still stands), is pointed out the spot where he was met by the witches. ("Maebeth," Act I, Scene iii.). Dunsinane is the residence of Robert Holms-Kier esq. William Montague Macdonald esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,565 acres;

rateable value, £8,112; the population in 1891 was 871, and in 1881, 741.

SCONE is a parish and small village, 2½ miles north-east from Perth; the parish, which extends 5 miles from east to west by 2½ broad, is in the small debt court district of Perth, the nearest railway station being in that city. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order No. 71, a part of Kinnoull, with a population of 46, has been transferred to Scone, and a part of Scone, containing a population of 80, transferred to Cargill and to Kinnoull, with 39 population. A little westward of the village is the site of the Royal Palace, founded here by Kenneth II. when he removed the seat of the Scottish monarchy from Dunstaffnage Castle about A.D. 850, and deposited here the Stone of Destiny, which subsequently rested in the abbey until its removal to Westminster, London, by Edward I.; the abbey, which stood close to the palace, was founded by Alexander I. III: John (Ruthven) 2nd Earl of Gowrie, who lost his life at Perth Castle, 5 Aug. 1600, for the alleged attempt to imprison King James VI. (known as the "Gowrie Conspiracy"), began the palace which preceded the present fabric on the site of the old palace of the Kings of Scotland, and it was completed in 1606 by Sir David Murray, of Gospertie, cup-bearer of the king, who received the grant of these estates, together with the titles of Baron Scone and Viscount Stormont, for the effective support he rendered to James VI. in the conspiracy above mentioned; it was in a church on the Mote Hill, hard by, that King Charles II. was crowned King of Scotland in 1651; the present mansion, which is mostly modern, occupies the same site overhanging the Tay, and contains a little of the old furniture, including some bedchambers embroidered by Queen Mary: the old gallery, 160 feet in length, is included in the modern palace, now the seat of the 9th Earl of Mansfield, J.P. who is also 10th Viscount Stormont and Baron Scone in the Peerage of Scotland. Near the house stands the old market cross of Scone, surrounded by a wilderness of pleasure grounds, which have usurped the site of the ancient village; it has been aptly observed that "there are many instances of towns losing their market crosses, but this is the only cross which has lost its town." The Earl of Mansfield is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 7,815 acres; rateable value, £13,531; the population in 1891 was 2,150, of whom 50 were included in the royal burgh of Perth, and in 1881, was 2,402, with 41 in the burgh of Perth. Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Miss Mary Ann Garvie, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Perth. Deliveries, 7.45 a.m. & 5.55 p.m.; dispatches, 8.30 a.m. & 1.30 & 6.30 p.m.

TIBBERMORE (or Tibbermuir) is a parish in the small debt court district of Perth, bounded on the north by the river Almond, and is 3 miles south from Almondbank station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, and about 5 west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Tibbermore parish, with a population of 853, has been transferred to Perth, and part of the latter parish, with 572 population, added to Tibbermore. The parish contains two extensive bleach fields belonging to Messrs. Lumsden and Mackenzie. Tibbermore has given its name to the first battle that was fought here, 1st Sept. 1644, between the Marquess of Montrose and the Covenanters, though the conflict occurred more within the parish of Aberdalgie; in this sanguinary engagement the covenanting forces were totally routed. The ancient castle of Huntingtower, formerly known as Ruthven Castle, is in Tibbermore, and is worthy of notice as being formerly the seat of the Gowrie family, and the place where James VI. was confined by William Ruthven, Earl of Gowrie, and other conspirators, after the "Raid of Ruthven," in the year 1582; it is the property of Capt. Lindsay Mercer. The area of the parish is 6,140 acres; rateable value, £17,731; the population in 1881 was 1,983, and 1891,

1,692, of which 863 are included in the royal burgh of Perth.

WEEM is an extensive Highland parish in the district of Breadalbane, and is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination. It is bounded on the north and west by the parish of Dull, on the east by Logierait and on the south by the river Tay. The church of Weem is about 2 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch from Ballinlunig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 74 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 34 north-west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 60, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, part of the parish of Dull, with a population of 156 and of Logierait, with 129, have been added to Weem, and a part of Weem, with a population of 81, transferred to Dull, a part with 55 to Fortingall, a part with 62 to Kenmore, a part with 40 to Kilmartin and a part with 16 population to Logierait parishes. The Episcopal church of St. David, an edifice in the Norman style, was erected by Sir Robert Menzies bart. and friends, at a cost of £2,000. Amongst the objects of interest in the immediate vicinity are Thymouth Castle, the ruins of Garth Castle, Muggernie Castle, the Birks of Aberfeldy, the Falls of Moness, Acharn, Keltney Burn, and Glenlyon and its pass. Castle Menzies, the seat of Sir Robert Menzies bart. D.L., J.P. is a handsome mansion with lofty turrets, and is surrounded by fine plantations, pleasure grounds and orchards. Near the castle is the Weem Hotel, an establishment admirably adapted for the reception of families and other visitors. Sir Robert Menzies bart. V.D., D.L., J.P.; J. S. Robertson J.P. esq. of Edradyne; Mrs. Douglas, of Killiechassie and D. F. Dempster esq. Derculich, are the principal landowners. The parish had an acreage of 41,887 previous to the alteration of the boundary: rateable value of present area, £5,009; the population in 1881 was 474, and in 1891, 437.

RENFREWSHIRE.

THIS county lies south of the Clyde, opposite to Dumbartonshire, and divided from Argyllshire by the Firth of Clyde, being bounded on the south by Ayrshire and east by Lanarkshire; it extends from north-west to south-east about 30 miles, by 10 to 15 broad, and comprises 155,965 acres, or 243 square miles; it is a large trading and manufacturing centre, and contained in 1831 a population of 138,261 males and 152,537 females; total, 290,798, since which 59,959 persons have been transferred to Lanark county and 103 to Ayrshire, also 76 transferred from Lanarkshire to Renfrewshire, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889." The county in size is the twenty-seventh, and in population the third, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—When the Roman invaders advanced in A.D. 80 from the Solway Firth, this district was occupied by the "Damni," a British tribe; the principal Roman station was established near where Paisley now stands, and called Vanduara, which was an outwork to the left flank of the great wall of Antonine. After the retreat of the Romans in 410, the Cumbrian Britons, with a capital city at Alclyde (Dumbarton), retained a hold on all the country west of the Lothians, which they held until 756, and in 1097 this part was regularly incorporated with the Scottish kingdom under Edgar. In the reign of David I. Walter, the son of Alan, fled from Shropshire during the troublous conflicts of Mand and Stephen, and settled in the district, where David I. made him steward and gave him lands to support the dignity of his office. Besides these possessions, he subsequently acquired the whole district of Strathgrye and the western half of Kyle, in Ayrshire, which hence was called Kyle Stewart. Such was the manner in which the first of the royal family of Stewart settled in Scotland. At this period the country in this quarter was in a semi-barbarous state, but Walter the Stewart introduced new and civilised usages. He settled many of his military followers on his lands, and by founding the abbey of Paisley, introduced a body of instructed men, who taught the ancient people domestic arts and foreign manners. For several centuries this district formed a portion of Lanarkshire. In 1404 Robert III. created a principality, consisting of the barony of Renfrew and the whole of the Stewart's estates, with the earldom of Carrick and the barony of King's Kyle, all of which he granted, in a free regality, as a provision for his son James; and this principality continued, in after times, the appropriate appanage of the eldest sons of the Scottish monarchs. In consequence of these arrangements, the identity of the barony of Renfrew and the shire of Lanark was dissolved, and the former placed under the jurisdiction of a separate sheriff. Baron Renfrew is at the present time one of the titles of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. At Langside, in the extreme east of the county, was fought, 1568, the battle so fatal to Queen Mary, and ending in her flight to England.

Soil, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is very much diversified. In those parts of the high grounds which are not covered by heath and moss, a fine light soil on a gravelly substratum is generally found. In the portion composed of detached hills the surface is a thin earth, based on gravel; and in the level districts the plough or spade sinks through a deep, rich brown loam. More than one-half of the shire, comprehending the west and south-east portions, is hilly, and devoted to pasture. The cultivated districts comprise the north, the north-east, and the centre of the county, and consist partly of low elevations, and partly of a level tract of rich loam between Paisley and the river Clyde. The hilly part varies in elevation from 500 to 1,250 feet; Misty Law, the hill of greatest altitude in the shire, is 1,663 feet high. Owing to the great demand in this county for dairy produce, and that also of the garden and the fold (arising from the vicinity of large and populous towns), nearly one-half of the land in the shire is kept under grass. Nevertheless the system of agriculture is of the most advanced kind, the crops in general being excellent, and comprising wheat, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes, of which latter great quantities are grown for Glasgow and the markets of other large towns.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1898," was, oats, 11,330 acres; wheat, 1,879; the total corn crops being 13,646 acres; potatoes, 2,946 acres; cabbage &c. 458; turnips and swedes, 2,325; the total green crops being 5,850 acres; hay, 19,470 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (not for hay), 12,301; permanent pasture, 40,982 acres; total area of land and water, 155,965 acres; mountain and heath land, 34,800 acres; woods, 6,504 acres; plantations (1881 to 1885), 157 acres. The live stock in 1898 comprised, 2,711 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 672; cows and heifers, in milk or in calf, 17,463; other cattle, 9,316; ewes kept for breeding, 17,417; other sheep, 24,789; sows kept for breeding, 120; other pigs, 1,281.

The minerals are of considerable value, coal, limestone, ironstone and sandstone abounding in various parts of it; the first-named being wrought principally in the neighbourhoods of Renfrew, Bishopton, Quarrelton, Nithill, Neilston, and other places. The production of fire-clay in 1897 was 71,940 tons, value, £10,791; of coal, 42,056 tons, value, £9,463; of iron ore, 167,579 tons, value, £58,653; of oil shale, 4,208 tons; other minerals raised in 1897 was, basalt, 37,888 tons; limestone, 38,406 tons; sandstone, 58,616 tons. In point of commercial and manufacturing importance this county is second only to that of Lanark, and with it unites in constituting the great manufacturing districts of Scotland. The goods produced are chiefly of cotton and silk, including, amongst various articles and fabrics, shawls of infinite diversity in texture and price. Whilst Paisley is the head-quarters of the trade in these articles, the business of weaving is pursued, to a greater or less extent, in almost every town, village and hamlet. Another important branch is the manufacture of sewing cotton, which is carried on very extensively at Paisley. Besides those already mentioned, there are numerous bleachfields, calico and shawl printing works, dyeworks, immense flax-spinning mills, linen thread, sailcloth, paper, starch, and earthenware manufactories, large iron foundries, engineering, ship and boat building works, distilleries, breweries, sugar refineries, and many other branches of commerce of a varied and important character. The free export of manufactured goods is promoted by the different seaports on the Clyde, especially Greenock, by which also foreign produce is imported. The Forth and Clyde canal connects this county with many other shires. The fishing and general shipping trade is centred at Greenock, under which place particulars are given.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal streams are the White Cart, the Black Cart, and the Gryffe, all of which ultimately unite and fall into the Clyde below Inchinnan Bridge: that is, about half-way down the river between Glasgow and Port Glasgow. The White Cart (which, by way of distinction, is generally denominated the Cart) rises at Eaglesham, in this county, and in the high grounds of East Kibride, in Lanarkshire; and, passing Paisley in its course, joins the Gryffe at Inchinnan Bridge. The Black Cart issues from the loch of Castle Sempie, in Lochwinnoch parish, and flowing northward falls in with the Gryffe at Walkinshaw. The Gryffe rises in the high grounds above Largs, and flows eastward until it meets the Black Cart; the Gryffe bestows the name of Strathgrye upon the vale through which it flows. The lakes are Castle Sempie Loch, Queenside Loch (in the parish of Lochwinnoch), two lochs in Neilston parish, and several smaller ones. The first-named (Castle Sempie) is situate in the southern border of the county; its banks are beautifully wooded in some places, and it contains a small island, on which stand the ruins of a castle. The Glasgow and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway runs through the eastern portion of the county, leaving it at Lugton, the Caledonian railway running a line over the same ground, as far as Pollockshaws and thence trending eastward to East Kibride, while through the centre of the county, by Paisley, Johnstone and Beith to Ayr, runs the main line of the Glasgow and South Western, with a branch from Paisley northward to Renfrew, and one from Johnstone by Bridge of Weir to Greenock. The Caledonian railway runs a line through Paisley and along the south bank of the Clyde, to Port Glasgow and Greenock, with a branch via Upper Greenock to Wemyss Bay, and the line from Glasgow to Yoker cuts through the north-east angle of the county.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Renfrewshire comprehends 21 civil parishes and 41 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 15 others. It contains two representative burghs—Port Glasgow and Renfrew—which join with Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock in returning one member to Parliament. Greenock and Paisley each send a representative, and the county, under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, is separated into the East and West Divisions, and returns two members, instead of one as formerly. The Parliamentary constituency in 1898 was:—East Division, 11,821; West Division, 9,219. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £1,342,958.

ABBAY OF PAISLEY is a civil parish, a part of which is now included in the burgh of Paisley, the remainder comprising Elmerslie and Levern, quoad sacra parishes.

BARRHEAD is a town, police burgh and quoad sacra parish in the parishes of Neilston, and Paisley, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway, 4 miles south-south-east from Paisley and 7 south-west from Glasgow. The town consists chiefly of one principal street, with several smaller ones diverging from it; it is lighted with gas by a limited company, and, together with the suburbs of Grahams-ton and Dunterlie, is the centre of a manufacturing and thickly populated neighbourhood. It was constituted a police burgh in 1892, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. In the district are several large bleach fields, a number of extensive calico printing establishments and mills for cotton spinning and power loom weaving, besides collieries, engineering works and iron foundries. Here also are the sanitary engineering works of Messrs. Shanks and Co. Limited. There are branches in the town of the Bank of Scotland, and also of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. There is a Mechanics' Institute, with an extensive library attached. The trustees of Z. Heys, South Arthurlie, Mrs. Glen, Carlibar, Matthew Locke, Barshagra and Henry Barclay Dunlop esq. J.P., D.L. of Arthurlie, are the chief landowners. The area is 12,483 acres; rateable value, £26,121; the population of the town in 1881 was 7,495, and in 1891, 8,215; of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 7,359.

BETH, a parish, formerly part in this county, has, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," been entirely transferred to Ayrshire.

BISHOPTON, see ERSKINE.

BLACKHALL now forms part of the newly-constituted civil parish of Paisley.

BRIDGE OF WEIR is a village and is a quoad sacra parish, formed from the civil parishes of Honston and Kibbarchan, 1 mile from Houston and 3 from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The old part of the village is situate in the parish of Honston, and the new part in the parish of Kibbarchan, through which flows the river Gryffe. The New Orphan Homes of Scotland, erected under the superintendence of William Quarrier esq. at a cost of about £90,000, are about a mile and a half from the village. The Established church here was erected at a cost of £3,000, and will seat 500 persons. The population of the village in 1881 was 1,267, and in 1891, 1,646; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,760.

BUSBY, see MEARNS.

CATHCART is a town and parish, in the small debt court district of Paisley, 3 miles south from Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Its original designation was Caer-Cart, i.e., the Castle on the river Cart; and the White Cart flows through the parish, which is of some extent, and though now wholly in this county, was formerly partly in Lanarkshire, its boundaries having been considerably modified by transfers made under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," by boundary orders 137 and 140, by which the town (and police burgh) of Cross-hills, now included in Glasgow, and a large portion of suburban Glasgow, was transferred to Lanarkshire. Here are the engineering works of Messrs. George and James Weir Limited. Margarine, paper, pasteboard, snuff and gelatine dry plates for photographic purposes are also manufactured, and a great proportion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture.
 The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style and will seat 850 persons. The Free church seats 650 persons. The Couper Institute, a stone building erected in 1887, at a cost of about £6,000, was presented to the parish by the late Robert Couper, of Mill-holm. The field of Langside, in this parish, is remarkable for being the scene of the last fruitless effort of the unfortunate Mary to regain her crown, 13th May, 1568; on the defeat of her army by the troops of the Regent Murray, she took to flight, and crossing the Solway Firth, landed at Workington, in Cumberland, on the 18th of the same month. An eminence is still pointed out where the queen stood during the engagement. The old castle of Cathcart, a conspicuous ruin, occupies a commanding position, defended on two sides by the Cart, to which there is a deep and almost perpendicular descent; it belonged to the Lords of Cathcart, and has been dismantled over a century. Henry B. Gordon, Jas. Stewart, of Williamwood, and Sir John Stirling Maxwell bart. of Pollock, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish before the transfers to Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, comprised 2,667 acres, and as the portions transferred were parts of towns, it is not much reduced in size; rateable value is £154,463;
 the population after the transfers in 1891 was 4,552, of which the town of Old Cathcart contained 2,511.

Clarkston is a village in this parish, 2 miles south from Cathcart, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway. The population in 1891 was 825.

Newlands, a new residential neighbourhood, adjoining the station of Langside, is also in this parish.

Sheddans is a small hamlet adjoining Clarkston.

CROSSLEE, see HOUSTON.

DUNLOP is a parish, formerly partly in this county, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" it is now entirely included in the county of Ayr.

EAGLESHAM is a parish and modern village in Paisley small debt court district and poor law combination, 9 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, and 11 south-south-east from Paisley, about a mile to the north-west of the old castle of Polnoon and 2½ miles from Thornton Hall station on the Glasgow and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway. A tributary of the river White Cart runs through the village, that river forming the eastern boundary of the parish, which is bounded on the north-west by the Earn water. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. sections 44 to 50), boundary order 75, a part of East Kilbride parish in Renfrew county, without population, has been added to this parish. The old village was demolished in 1769, but was shortly afterwards rebuilt under the direction of Archibald, 11th Earl of Eglinton, who also, in 1790, erected the church, an octagonal structure, with an elegant steeple, containing a good clock and a fine-toned bell. The old castle of Polnoon was built with money received by Sir John Montgomerie from the Percy family, in ransom for Sir Henry Percy, better known as "Hotspur," who was taken prisoner by Sir John at the battle of Oterburn or Chevy Chase, 10 Aug. 1388, hence the name Polnoon, "Polno Money." Ballagiech, one of the highest points in Renfrewshire, 1,084 feet high, is in this parish, and on the side of the Ballagiech Hill is the spot called "The Queen's Seat," the tradition being that Mary Queen of Scots rested there on her flight after the battle of Langside, 13 May 1568. Blackwood Hill, 1,000 feet in height, is in this parish, which also contains three small lochs. Eaglesham House is the seat of Allan Gilmour esq. D.L., J.P. A flower show is held in place of the old fair on the third Thursday of August. The barony of Eaglesham was in the Montgomerie family, Earls of Eglinton, from the year 1250, but is now the property of Allan Gilmour esq. D.L., J.P. who is the chief landowner. The area of the parish is 15,666 acres; rateable value, £14,897; the population in 1881 was 1,385, and in 1891, 1,207, of which the village contained 786.

EASTWOOD is a parish, to the south of Govan, and contains the towns of Pollokshaws and Thornliebank, particulars of which are contained in the Glasgow section; it also contained a portion of suburbium (Glasgow), but this, with a population of 2,293, was, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," and by boundary order 140, transferred to the county of Lanark. The kirktown of Eastwood lies about a mile south of Pollokshaws, and through the parish, the extent of which is 3 miles from north to south by 2 to 3 broad, runs the Kilmarnock and Beith section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway, with stations at Cressmyloof, Pollokshaws and Nitshill.

Giffnock is a village in Eastwood parish and has a station on the Glasgow, Kilbride and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway.

The original area of the parish was 5,596 acres, and the population after the transfer in 1891 was 13,744, of which 10,405 were in Pollokshaws and 2,097 in Thornliebank; rateable value of Renfrewshire portion, landward £36,037; burghal (Pollokshaws) £34,896. The Glasgow portion (Lanarkshire) population, 2,293.

ELDERSLIE is a quad sacra parish and village in the civil parish of Paisley, about half a mile distant from Johnstone, and 2½ miles west from Paisley, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Cotton spinning and the manufacturing of carpets is carried on here. The village has acquired considerable interest, from the fact of its having at one time been the residence of the renowned Wallace. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 2,353, and in the village, 1,468.

Inkerman is a mining village in Paisley parish, between 2 and 3 miles west from Paisley, which sprung into existence about the time of the Crimean war, and was named in commemoration of a noted battle of that campaign. The population has decreased because of the decline in the mining industry; the population of Inkerman village in 1891 was 690.

ERSKINE is a parish, 6 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and is situate on the Clyde, about 6 miles north-west from Paisley, in the small debt court district of Paisley. The ground rises gently from the river, and is laid out in rich plantations, orchards and corn fields. At this point is a ferry, said to be the oldest on the Clyde. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish. The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a fine square tower, and has sittings for about 750 persons. A very fine memorial has been erected here to Lieut.-Gen. Robert Walter, 11th Lord Blantyre C.B. who died Sept.
23rd, 1830. Erskine House, the seat of Lord Blantyre D.L. is a beautiful mansion seated amidst tasteful pleasure grounds facing the Clyde. Lord Blantyre, the Earl of Home A.D.C., V.D. George Jardine Kitson esq. of Pinlayston, and William Houston
esq. of Rossland, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,535 acres;
rateable value, £20,012; the population in 1891 was 1,691, and in 1881, 1,653.

Bishopton is a small village in this parish,
on the Glasgow and Greenock road, 12 miles west-south-west from the former place and 10½ east-south-east from the latter, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Brick making is carried on here.

GIFNOCK, see EASTWOOD.

GLENFIELD now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.

GOUROCK is a seaport town and burgh of barony, in Inverkip and Gourcock parish and small debt court district of Greenock, 3 miles west from Greenock, 25 west from Glasgow and 69 west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and there is a tramway from Greenock, opened in July, 1873. The town is beautifully situated on the south side of a fine bay of the river Clyde, and is lighted with gas.
The haven affords excellent anchorage ground, and vessels to and from Glasgow, Port Glasgow and Greenock frequently put in here; the quay was constructed at a cost of about £5,000, and has a depth of nine feet at low water. The town, which is upwards of a mile in length,
has become a fashionable resort for families from Glasgow and other places during the summer. Gourcock was incorporated as a burgh of barony by a charter from William and Mary, dated the 24th of April, 1694, the privileges of which are very extensive and include the right to hold a weekly market and two annual fairs. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. The original chapel; built in 1773, was replaced in 1832 by a new structure, with a handsome tower and steeple. The Gamble Institute, opened in 1876, was built and endowed by Mrs.

Gamble, of Ashburn, at a cost of about £8,000, and contains a public hall, reading room and library, bath rooms &c. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A new Drill Hall, in Binnie street, was opened in May, 1899.
Duncan Darroch esq. J.P., D.L. of Torridon, is lord of the manor of Gourcock and the principal landowner. Rateable value, of burgh, £36,260; the population in 1891
was 4,431, and in 1881, 3,336.

GREENOCK.

GREENOCK is a seaport and municipal and parliamentary borough, and the head of a poor combination, in the western division of the county, 22 miles west from Glasgow, 15 west from Paisley, 66 west from Edinburgh and 419 from London. Greenock is the terminus of a branch line from Glasgow via Paisley of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has also a station on the Gourock section of the Caledonian line; from Upper Greenock on this branch is another branch to Wemyss Bay.
The town stands on the south bank of the Clyde, and comprehends three parishes, respectively called the West parish, the Mid parish, and the East parish, all formed out of, and separated from, the original parish of Inverkip. The first, which may be styled the mother parish of the three, includes the western part of the town and the greater proportion of the country district, and the east includes part of the town of Port Glasgow. Under the Improvement Act, considerable parts of the older districts of the town were cleared and rebuilt at a cost of £150,000.

The wide thoroughfare leading up to the "Benians," a hill at the west end of the town, overlooking the river, and known as Lyle road, was formed in 1878, at a cost of about £17,000.
From the top of this road a very extensive view of the Clyde is afforded from Bowling to Dunoon.

The Esplanade, constructed at a cost of about £20,000, extends from the foot of Campbell street, in a noble sweep, of about a mile and a quarter, along the shore of the Firth of Clyde, and is protected by a substantial sea wall, with palisades, and provided with numerous landing places and seats, and is ornamented with a fountain, erected as a memorial to Galt, the novelist.

The burgh is divided for municipal purposes into 8 wards, and the government is vested in a provost, 6 bailies, a town treasurer, a dean of guild and 16 councillors.

Greenock was constituted a parliamentary burgh in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

The town is lighted with gas, from works the property of the Corporation, erected on Inch Green Island, at the east end of the burgh.

The water supply is derived from an artificial lake, 2 miles long and half a mile wide, with a depth of 60 feet, and an elevation of 500 feet above the level of the sea, and formed by constructing an immense dam across a valley, through which a small stream originally ran; this great undertaking was completed in 1827 by the Shaws Water Company, but is now the property of the Corporation, by whom it was acquired in 1864, and since then the Goyfe reservoir, the water from which is chiefly used for domestic purposes, has been added. The water from the lake is also available for a large number of mills.

Greenock, in the early part of the 18th century, was a small village, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, and without quay or harbour; it now, however, possesses several harbours, and in the Clyde, just off the port, is a large sandbank, extending to half a mile above Port Glasgow, the west end of which, known as the Tail of the Bank, affords the best anchorage ground in the Firth, and is the regular station of the port guardship.

The various harbours and docks are as follows:—

1. The Mid harbour, the original harbour of the port, constructed during the last century, and about 8 acres in extent.
2. The East India harbour, formed early in the present century, and covering about 5 acres.
3. The Victoria harbour, extending over 6 acres, constructed at a cost of £120,000, and opened in 1850. This harbour is particularly well suited for vessels of large tonnage, and has a crane capable of lifting 80 tons, so that steamers of the largest class may have their engines fitted without touching the ground.
4. The Albert harbour, about 11 acres in extent, constructed at a cost, including quays, of £200,000, and opened in 1867. The Prince's pier, west of this harbour, about 1,000 feet long, was erected at a cost of £70,000, and opened in 1870, and has direct communication with the Glasgow and South-Western railway.
5. The James Watt wet dock, opened in 1886; it was designed by Mr. Walter R.

Kinipple C.E. of Greenock and Westminster, and is upwards of 2,000 feet in length, 32 feet in depth, and 400 feet in width, and is capable of receiving the largest vessels afloat.
There are large warehouses on the margin of the quays for grain and other merchandise, with elevators and hoists of the most improved description worked by hydraulic power. 6. The Tidal harbour, outside the wet dock, where timber vessels can be discharged, and coal and pig iron shipped, is 50 acres in extent. 7. The oldest of the public graving docks, at the Mid harbour, built in 1780, and adapted for vessels 150 feet in length, and drawing 10 feet. 8. Another graving dock, at the East India harbour, 300 feet in length, 16 feet in depth and 40 feet wide on the sill. 9. The third, or Garvel dock, a recent work, constructed at a cost of £120,000; it is 600 feet in length, 20 feet in depth, and 60 feet in width on the sill. The water space occupied by the wet docks is 90 acres; the quays extend for a distance of 3 miles, covering an area of 100 acres, and there are three other smaller graving docks. There are also two private docks, belonging to Messrs. Caird & Co. Limited, and Scott & Co. shipbuilders. The various docks and warehouses being connected both with the Caledonian and Glasgow and South-Western railways, ample means are afforded of receiving and distributing goods to all parts of the country.

Trade of the Port.—Exports in 1898.

The following is a statement of the principal articles of foreign and colonial merchandise, with their respective values:—Unrefined sugar, £21,201; undressed goat skins, £6,810; gum, £880; rum, £901; machinery, £1,000; almonds, £500; raw hides, £340; total value of exports, £422,333.

Imports in 1898.

Principal articles of foreign and colonial produce, with their respective values:—Unrefined sugar, £683,691; refined sugar, £35,130; hewn wood of all sorts, £268,826; sawn wood of all sorts, £194,686; cotton seed, £42,580; wheatmeal or flour, £27,871; maize or Indian corn, £19,184; barley, £11,900; paper making materials, £13,248; caoutchouc, £7,923; furs of all sorts, £6,500; iron ore, £2,766; manufactured iron, £2,520;
total value of imports, £1,341,908.

The amount of Customs revenue for 1898 was £23,992.

In 1838 the number of sailing vessels entering the port of Greenock, including their repeated voyages, from foreign countries, was 36, with a tonnage of 30,349, and from British possessions 424, with a tonnage of 29,541. Of steam vessels there were 13 from the former, of 8,848 tons, and 9,060, with a tonnage of 1,616,497, from the latter. The number of British sailing vessels cleared was 348, of 26,545 tons; foreign, 31, of 23,558 tons. Steam vessels, British, 9,229, of 1,808,551 tons; foreign, 19, of 18,911 tons.

Of vessels entering and clearing coastwise with cargoes, including their repeated voyages, there were 6,669, with a tonnage of 949,958, in the general coasting trade, and 1,601, of 464,401, in the trade between Great Britain and Ireland. In 1898 the number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," belonging to the port was 149 sailing and 118 steam, with a total tonnage of 273,954. In 1898, 224 fishing boats, of an average tonnage of 633 tons, and employing 585 men and boys, with 350 additional hands, registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894." One sailing and 25 steam ships, of 22,260 tonnage, were built here during the same year. Of the steam ships three were built for foreigners. The boundaries of the port, as fixed in 1861, include part of the Clyde, and Mull, Tree, Coil, Muck, Egg, Rum, Cana and others of the western islands. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters G. K.

Among the most important industrial works here are four large shipbuilding establishments, some of the yards being so complete as to rank second only to those belonging to the Crown. Most of the fine steamers belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company have been built here. Since the opening of commercial intercourse with India and China, the merchants of this port have prosecuted the trade to these countries with great spirit, the Clyde steamers, from the superiority of their construction, never failing to secure a preference of engagements. Large and elegant steamboats leave this port for London, Liverpool, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, the Isle of Man, Campbelltown, Ayr, Inverness and other places in the Highlands, at stated periods, and there are many others plying on the Clyde only. The steamers carrying the Irish mails are also dispatched from this port. There are several extensive engine works, marine and otherwise, and iron foundries, ropewalks, tan yards, and extensive sugar and glucose refineries, manufactories for woollen and sail cloth, and large mills for spinning wool and flax and for making paper.

About a mile west from Greenock, and on the Clyde, is a pier and also a torpedo battery, constructed for protecting the river and its traffic. In the vicinity are several very agreeable bathing villages, one of which is seated under the mountains on the opposite side of the Firth, at this point several miles across. Steamboats ply to and from the different villages during the bathing season.

The old town offices, taken down to make way for the new buildings, were designed in 1760 by the father of James Watt, the famous engineer, who was at that time one of the bailies of the town.

The present municipal buildings, which stand in the centre of the town, were erected from designs by Messrs. Barclay, architects, of Glasgow, at a cost of £120,000, and opened in 1882, and contain a spacious town hall, seating 2,000 persons, and the various departments connected with the Corporation and Harbour Trust.

The County Buildings, in Nelson street, contain the sheriff and other courts, and apartments for the necessary officers connected therewith, and a further portion serves as a gaol.

The Custom House, the north front of which faces the water, with a fine open space extending to the quay, is a building in the Classic style, from designs by Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh, and in it the business of the customs and inland revenue is transacted.

The Greenock Library (Watt Monument), in Union street, occupies a site given for the purpose of a library by the late James Watt esq. to contain the statue of his father, and was erected from a design by Mr. Biore, architect, of London, at a cost of upwards of £7,000. Within the entrance is a statue of Watt, executed by Chantry, at a cost of £2,000, subscribed by the townspeople.

The Mechanics' Institute, in Sir Michael street, has also a good library and news room.

The McLean Museum, in Kelly street, presented to the town by the late James McLean, saw miller, of Greenock, was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and besides a large collection of objects of interest from all parts of the world, it contains some fine models of the large steamships built at Greenock, and other models of steam engines and sugar making machinery.

The News Room, in William street, is well supplied with papers and magazines, and is also used for the meetings of the Greenock Chamber of Commerce.

The Theatre Royal in West Blackhall street, a comfortable and well-appointed place of amusement, was opened in 1858.

The Post Office, in Cathcart street, erected by the Government from designs by W. Robertson esq. of H.M. Office of Works, Edinburgh, at a cost of £20,000, was opened in May, 1899.

The Public Baths are in the same building as the Mechanics' Institute, the entrance being in Tobago street.

The Masonic Temple, in West Stewart street, was opened in 1898.

A Poor House and Lunatic Asylum, at Smithston, about a mile out of the town, was erected at a cost of over £80,000.

There are several charitable institutions, the finest of which, as a building, is Sir Gabriel Wood's Mariners' Asylum, an institution founded by the late Commissary General Sir Gabriel Wood K.T. a native of Greenock, for the relief and comfort of aged and decayed master mariners and merchant seamen.

The Greenock Hospital and Infirmary, in Inverkip street, originally erected in 1809, has since been considerably enlarged.

The Eye and Ear Infirmary, in Nelson street west, was opened in August, 1894.

The Buchanan Night Asylum, built at the cost of the late J. C. Buchanan, merchant, of Greenock, affords both food and shelter to poor persons, and there is also a Sailors' Home.

The West parish church, in Nelson street, is a modern structure. The old church, which stands within its burial ground near the shore, was for some years in a ruinous condition, but has been repaired; the churchyard is the resting place of Burns's "Highland Mary," over whose grave a monument has been erected.

The Mid parish comprehends the central part of the town; the church, in Cathcart square, is an elegant structure, with a lofty steeple.

The East parish church is in Regent street.

The Cemetery, which belongs to the Corporation, is about 100 acres in extent, and is beautifully laid out.

Greenock Academy is a large establishment for both sexes, under the supervision of a rector, and together with 11 public elementary schools, is under the control of the Burgh School Board.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Company Bank and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited; also the Greenock Provident Savings Bank.

Two newspapers are published here, the "Greenock Herald" and the "Greenock Telegraph and Clyde Shipping Gazette."

The Well Park, in Regent street, is a small but well laid out recreation ground, overlooking the town, and approached from Cathcart street by a series of terraces, and on a clear day fine views of the Clyde and the Argyleshire hills may be obtained.

Wellington Park, situated near the Drumfrochar road, was formally opened June, 1872, the ground, presented to the town by Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. is of considerable extent; the lower and more level portion contains bowling, cricket and playing grounds, while the more elevated parts afford space for pleasant rambles, and very fine views are also here presented of the town, the Firth, and surrounding scenery.

Connected with the town are various rowing, cricket and bowling clubs, all of which are well supported, and the grounds and bowling greens are kept in excellent order.

Greenock is the birthplace of the illustrious James Watt L.L.D., F.R.S. the perfecter of the steam engine, who was born here 19 January, 1736, and died at Heathfield, Birmingham, 25 August, 1819.

John Galt, the biographer and novelist, who was born at Irvine, in Ayrshire, 2 May, 1779, lived for several years in Greenock, and dying 11 April, 1839, was buried here.

The weekly market is held on Friday, and there are two annual fairs, one taking place on the first Thursday in July, the other on the fourth Tuesday of November, and horse and cattle markets twice a year—on the Friday before Glasgow Whit-Morday fair, and on the Friday immediately preceding Kilturban fair.

The area comprises 2,401 acres; gross valuation of the borough (1899), £379,159; the population of the town in 1891 was 63,423, and in 1881, 63,902; the population of 1891 was made up of 18,168 in the East parish, 5,311 in the Middle and 39,935 in the West; 2,735 in the East parish forms part of the population of the town of Port Glasgow, and the total for 1881 was 63,902, less 2,422 in Port Glasgow.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 7,433.
