HOUSTON and KILLELAN form a united parish in the Paisley small debt court district, and is about 6 miles in length by 3 in breadth. The low grounds are in general fertile and beautified by some fine natural tracts of wood. It is bounded on the east and north by the Dargavel brook, and south by the river Gryfe.

Houston (or Houstoun) village is on the Houston burn, 14 miles west from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Paisley, and the like distance south-east from Port Glasgow, with a station 3½ miles east on the Paisley and Greenock section of the Caledonian railway, and another at Houston-Crosslee, about 2 south, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It consists of two long streets, one on each side of the rivulet. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving and embroidering. The parish church, originally of very early date, was rebuilt in 1874 by the Speirs family, and is now an edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower containing one bell; the interior contains an effigy to John Houston, dated 1456; there are sittings for 400 persons. Houston Castle, an ancient mansion, now no longer extant, stood to the east of the town, and was the residence of the knights of Houston, and demolished in 1780 by a proprietor of the estate. Houston House, which has been considerably enlarged, is the seat of Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P., and stands in a large park. The principal landowners are Charles Bine Renshaw M.P. of Barochan, and A. A. Speirs esq. The area of the united parish is 7,584 acres; rateable value, £14,570; the population in 1881 was 2,191, and in 1891, 1,946; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,389, and of the village of Houston, 498.

About a mile hence is Crosslee, the prosperity of which has greatly suffered owing to the destruction by fire of a large cotton mill, in which many hands were employed. The population in 1891 was 379.

HOWWOOD, see LOCHWINNOCH.HURLET, see LEVERN.

INCHINNAN is a parish to the north-west of Renfrew, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is watered by the rivers Clyde, Black Cart and Gryffe. At the confluence of the two latter streams is a fine bridge of ten arches, forming a communication with Renfrew; vessels navigating between Paisley and the Clyde pass this bridge by means of a canal, which is spanned by an iron swing bridge. The road from Glasgow to Greenock passes through the whole length of this parish. The parish church, built in 1828, on the site of a church of the Knights Templars, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, and has a tower containing one bell; the organ was presented by Lord Blythswood in 1886; there are marble tablets to the late Mr. Campbell, of Blythswood, and a younger brother, and to the late William Fulton, of Park Inchinnan: the church affords sittings for 320 persons. In the churchyard is the burying-place of the Campbells, of Blythswood. Lord Blythswood, of Blythswood, is the chief landowner. Acreage, 3,330; rateable value, £6,223; population in 1881, 508, and in 1891, 567. Letters for Inchinnan through Renfrew R.S.O.

INVERKIP is a village and with Gourcock forms a parish in the small debt court district of Greenock, from which it is 6 miles south-west, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is situated on the Kipp water, which intersects the parish from east to west, and falls into the Clyde, and the Daff and other rivulets flow through the district, and at some points form small cascades. Ardgowan House, the seat of Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. pleasantly situated on a kind of peninsula, a little north of the village, is a fine modern building, surrounded with beautiful and romantic pleasure grounds. The parish church is a neat edifice, and has a tower with spire containing a clock. Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart bart.
D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner.
Acreage of the parish, 12,549; rateable value, landward, £24,472; burghal (Gourcock), £36,260; the population in 1891 was 6,541 in the civil parish (which includes 4,475 in Gourcock town); of the ecclesiastical parish, 885, and of the village, 826.

JOHNSTONE is a town and police burgh, in the new parish of Paisley and in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 3½ miles west from Paisley, 10 west-south-west from Glasgow, 8 north-north-east from Beith and 14 south-east from Greenock, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The Glasgow, Paisley and Johnstone canal, 11 miles in length, was opened in 1810. In the neighbourhood are two large cotton mills, a large paper mill, iron foundries, engineering, machine and tool manufactories &c. The extensive linen thread mills of Messrs. Finlayson, Bousfield and Co. Limited here, give employment to about 2,000 hands, and near the town are valuable iron, coal and shale mines. The town, which is lighted with gas and well supplied with water, is very regularly laid out, and has two spacious squares, one of which forms a market place. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven commissioners. The burgh buildings, in Collier street, erected at a cost of £2,000, and opened 28th September, 1888, include a spacious court room, well fitted and ornamented with the coat of arms of the burgh in relief: in the Commissioners' room is a full-length portrait of Sir William Milliken Napier bart. (d. 4 Feb. 1852), presented to him by his tenants, and given to the burgh by Sir Archibald Lennox Napier bart. in November, 1887: there is also a portrait of Mr. James Reid, the first town clerk of the burgh, 1857-93. The Johnstone Working Men's Institute includes a news room and a public hall holding 1,000 people and containing an organ, the gift of Mr. Bousfield, of this place; there is also a Mechanics' Institute, and various friendly societies.
There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Horse fairs are held on the Thursday after the second Monday of July and first Friday in January, and a cattle and pleasure fair in the middle of July, which lasts for three days. George Ludovic Houston esq. D.L., J.P. of the Castle, and Alexander Archibald Speirs esq.
D.L., J.P. Elderslie House, are the chief landowners. Acreage of the burgh, 300; rateable value, £35,867; the population in 1891 was 9,668, and was in 1853, 10,127, in accordance with a deliverance of the sheriff of the county in terms of "The Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892."

KILBARCHAN is a parish, town and burgh of barony, in the small debt court district of Paisley, 1 1/2 miles west from Johnstone, and about 5 west from Paisley, with a station at Milliken Park on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The manufacture of silk, cotton, shawls, robes &c. is carried on here. The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1846. The parish church, built in 1720, is a plain edifice of stone, with a belfry tower at the north-east angle, containing a clock; there are sittings for 900 persons. There is a public library containing several thousand volumes, and a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. A horse fair is held annually on the first Tuesday in December (old style). On the tower of the School-house is a statue, executed by Archibald Robertson, sculptor, of Greenock, of Habbie Simpson, the well-known Scotch piper, who was born in this parish. Ranfurly Castle, now in ruins, is 1 1/2 miles west of Kilbarchan village. Milliken House, formerly the seat of the late Sir Robert Napier, is the property of Daniel Mackenzie esq. Craighends, on the bank of the river Gryfe, 3 miles north-west of Johnstone, is the seat of John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. and Merchiston House, 1 mile north-west of Johnstone, is the seat of James Finlayson esq. D.L., J.P. John C. Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P.; Robert Thomas Napier Speir esq. D.L., J.P. of Blackstoun, and James Widdington Shand-Harvey esq. D.L., J.P. of Castle Semple, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,006 acres; rateable value, £45,395; the population in 1891 was 7,111, including 2,747 in the town, and in 1881, 6,368, with 2,548 in the town.
 Clippens is a village in Kilbarchan parish, about 3 miles west from Paisley.
 Balacava is a small village in this parish. Sub-Post, Telegraph & Money Order Offices

KILMALCOLM is a parish and village, on the road from the Bridge of Weir to Port Glasgow, in Greenock small debt court district and Paisley poor combination, 10 miles north-west from Paisley, 7 south-east from Greenock and rather more than that distance in the same direction from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The district is intersected by the Gryffe and Duchal streams. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and extends from the Clyde into the hilly country south of Port Glasgow, and takes its name from the cell founded here by St. Columba; in later times it was the burying place of the Earls of Glencairn. The hills rise to a considerable height; one known as the Laird's Seat is 1,084 feet high, and Hyndal Hill, 1,244 feet. The parish church, built about 1826, is a plain edifice of stone, with clock tower, and has sittings for 500 persons: in the church is a memorial to the Rev. Alexander Leck, a former minister, and a brass inscribed to the Cun-ninghames, Earls of Glencairn, a title which became dormant on the death of John, 15th earl, 24th September, 1796; they were for many generations owners of the lands of Finlaystone in this parish, and this memorial was erected in August, 1892, by their descendant Robert Bontine Cunninghame-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore.
There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited. The Kilmalcolm Hydropathic Establishment and Sanatorium is a fine building, standing 450 feet above the sea level, and commands an extensive view: from the tower, Ben Lomond, Ben Ledi and the whole range of Cowal hills from the Gareloch on the Clyde to Goat-fell in Arran are visible: the grounds extend to upwards of 22 acres. Duchal House, 2 miles south of the village, is the seat of Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. lord-lieutenant of Renfrewshire, and near it are the ruins of Duchal Castle: in the neighbourhood is Divots or the Devil's Glen, containing some fine scenery and noted as being the place across which Sir William Wallace forced his horse to leap when escaping from the English. Finlay-stone House is the seat of George Jardine Kidston esq. Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. of Ardgowan, George Jardine Kidston esq. of Finlaystone, and Henry Macdowall esq. of Gartland and Carruth, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,665 acres; rateable value, £42,135; the population in 1891 was 3,649, and in 1881, 2,708; the village having 1,634 in 1891 and 1,170 in 1881.

Post, Money Order & Telegraph Office & Savings Bank, Insurance & Annuity Office (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O.
Renfrewshire added); Miss Jane Sinclair, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 3

LOCHWINNOCH is a parish and large village in the Paisley small debt court district, 15½ miles south-west from Glasgow, 8½ south-south-west from Paisley, 6½ south-south-west from Johnstone and 3½ north from Beith, with a station, about a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The village is situated on the north-west bank of the beautiful lake from which it derives its name, and is surrounded by scenery of a most interesting and romantic character, including the banks of the Calder, the cataraet of Reekan Linn, Gurratt's Linn, the Calder Glen, and the remains of several ancient castles. The lake, which stretches north and south, lies in the eastern part of the parish; it receives the Calder water on its west side, and its issue forms the Black Cart river; it is now about 2 miles in length by 1 in breadth though formerly much more extensive, but has been divided by an embankment whereby several hundred acres of land have been reclaimed and brought into cultivation. The village is lighted with gas by a company. There are three extensive cabinet and chair manufactories, which together give employment to a large number of hands, a bleach-field &c. There is also a branch here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The parish church, built about 1825, is a plain edifice of stone with a tower and spire, and affords sittings for about 750 persons. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Friday of each month. An annual fair, called the "Fair of Hill," is held on the first Tuesday in November (old style). Castle Semple House, the seat of James Widdrington Shand-Harvey esq. on the north-west shore of the loch, occupies the site of the ancient castle of Semple, founded by Lord John Semple about 1500; it was demolished in 1735. Garthland, is the residence of Henry MacDowall esq. D.L., J.P. On a small island in the lake is the "Peel," the remains of some forgotten stronghold of which nothing but a vault now exists. James W. Shand-Harvey esq. Henry MacDowall esq. Ned J. Kennedy Cochran-Patrick esq. of Beith, and David Tod esq. of Hartfield, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,607 acres; rateable value, £32,074; the parish in 1891 contained a population of 3,477, of whom 1,413 were in the village, and in 1881, 3,369, with 1,192 in the village.

How-wood is a small village in the parish of Lochwinnoch and 3½ miles north-east from the village, on the high road between Beith and Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the neighbourhood are two bleach works. About a mile and a half nearer to Lochwinnoch, and in that parish, is the small village of New Town of Beltrees. In 1831, How-wood had a population of 333, and in 1891, 420.

MEARNS is a parish and village, in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 7 miles south from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Paisley, and about 3½ north-west from Clarkston station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway. The parish lies in the south-eastern part of the county, and is 7 miles in length by about three in breadth.
 The surface of the land is finely diversified by undulations, rising gradually from east to west; it is generally fertile. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the whole length of the parish; and a road has also been opened from Glasgow, which, passing Newton Mearns, joins the former one, near the Logans Well. The parish is irrigated by the waters of three lakes, one of which, named Black Loch, is nearly 2½ miles in circumference. In the parish are several bleachfields and calico printing works.
 Mearns Castle, which stands on a rocky height near the village, now consists chiefly of a large square tower in a dismantled condition, but commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect; it is encompassed by a strong wall, and the entrance appears to have been once secured by a drawbridge.
 It belongs to Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart bart.
 Pollok Castle stands about 2 miles northwest of the village on the road to Pollok-shaws. James Crawford Fergusson Pollok esq. of Pollok Castle, and Sir Michael R.
 Shaw-Stewart bart. of Ardgowan, are the principal landowners. The parish, which embraces 10,261 acres; rateable value, £25,536; in 1881 contained a population of 3,965, and in 1891, 3,426.

Newton Mearns (or Newton) is a village in Mearns parish, 3 miles south-west from Giffnock. Here is the parish church, an edifice of stone with a tower and spire containing a clock. The church affords 700 sittings. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and a good inn.

Busby is a small village in this parish, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway, and is 6 miles south from Glasgow. Calico printing and bleaching are carried on here, and there is a chemical manufactory.

MILLIKEN PARK, see KILBARCHAN.

NEILSTON is a parish and village, in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, 9 miles south-west from Glasgow, 9 north-north-east from Stewarton, 5 south from Paisley and 2 south-west from Barrhead, with a station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and Kilmarnock joint railways. The village is situated on the river Leven, on the road to Irvine. The parish is 8 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth, and is traversed by a ridge of hills extending through its entire length. There are two small lakes, called Loch Lebo and Loch Long. From the former issues the Lugton, a tributary of the Garnock. The parish contains part of the town of Barrhead. In or near the village are bleachfields and print-works, and a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The parish church, built in 1785, has a tower with clock, and will seat 889 persons. Arthuree is the seat of Henry Barclay Dunlop esq. J.P., D.L. and Caldwell House, of Capt. William Mure D.L. Alex. Archibald Speira esq. D.L., J.P. of Houston; William Mure esq. and H. B. Dunlop esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,481 acres; rateable value, landward £34,415, burghal (part of Barrhead) £23,338; the population in 1891 was 11,374, of whom 7,053 were in Barrhead and 2,113 in the village, and in 1881 the total was 11,359, including 6,443 in Barrhead and 2,311 in the village.

PAISLEY.

PAISLEY, generally supposed to have been the "Vandnara" of Ptolemy, is a town, burgh of barony and parliamentary burgh, parish, the head of a poor combination and the seat of a presbytery, in the Western division of the county. This parish was constituted, May 15, 1895, from the old parish of the Abbey of Paisley; the burgh is 53 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, about 7 south-by-west from Glasgow and 17 south-east from Greenock, with a station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways and on the Glasgow and Paisley joint railway, built at a cost of £150,000. The country around Paisley (except on the north, where a wide and fertile plain, known by the name of the "Carse of Renfrewshire," extends itself) is agreeably diversified. The town occupies a healthy and picturesque situation on the banks of the White Cart, about 3 miles above the confluence of that river with the Clyde, and consists of two portions: the burgh, or Old Town of Paisley, on the western side of the river, and the New Town on the eastern side. The portion called the Old Town is considerably more extensive than the New, and contains all the chief warehouses of the manufacturers. Many of its streets are well built, and three of these running parallel to each other, from east to west, are of great length. The New Town occupies a level site on the eastern side of the Cart, and the entire length of both divisions can scarcely be less than 2 miles; the extreme breadth from north to south being at least 1½ miles. A ridge, forming a natural terrace, runs through the town westward from the river for nearly half a mile, terminating abruptly at a point where the Romans had a fortified camp, with which several minor stations on neighboring eminences are believed to have had communication, these including Woodside, the Knock and Castlehead. Cansayside, one of the streets of the burgh, is also thought to indicate the former existence of a Roman road, leading to or by the principal station.

Three bridges connect the Old Town with the New; the old stone bridge at the foot of High street has been widened and made to harmonise with its new neighbour; the other two, one of which is known as "Abercorn Bridge," are modern structures, and there is a single large arch carrying the railway across the river.

Between 1786 and 1791 the White Cart river was made navigable from the Clyde to the town for sloops of 40 to 50 tons burthen, at an expense of £4,000, and in 1842 attempts were made to deepen it by means of dredging machines, but it was then found impracticable. This work has, however, since been accomplished, borrowing powers for the purpose up to £100,000 having been obtained from Parliament in 1835. Commodious quays have also been erected and the river is now navigable for vessels drawing 15 feet of water.

As a manufacturing town, Paisley is chiefly distinguished for the beauty of its shawls and muslins, and its extensive production of thread. The earliest fabrics made here were coarse linen checks; to these succeeded textiles of a lighter kind, such as lawns, both figured and plain. About 1760, silk gauze then took the lead, and such was the celebrity of Paisley gauze that warehouses were engaged for its sale in London, Dublin and Paris. The demand for gauze subsequently decreased, and mnsin, cambric and cotton thread were made instead; the manufacture of silk and cotton shawls, scarfs and plaids composed of silk and merino wool began in 1805, and these still continue to exhibit in great perfection the ingenuity and taste of the Paisley weavers. In Paisley and its neighbourhood there are also numerous thread and cotton spinning mills, bleaching and printing works, dyehouses, power loom factories, iron and brass foundries, engineers' and millwrights' shops, timber yards, a brewery, a distillery, soap, starch and corn flour manufactories, and a very extensive tannery.

By a charter granted by James IV. in 1438, in favour of Abbot George Schaw, Paisley was created a burgh of barony. The fourth centenary of Paisley as a burgh was celebrated in August, 1888. Her Majesty the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and the late Prince Henry of Battenberg, graced the ceremony by her presence. This was the first visit of royalty to the town during the long period of 271 years.

By a proclamation under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts, 1833" (3 and 4 William IV. c. 76-7) the town was divided into five wards, and in 1895 was again divided into eight.

The present municipal body consists of a provost, six bailies, a treasurer and sixteen councillors, with a town clerk, procurator fiscal, and chamberlain. The provost and bailies act as justices of the peace.

Paisley was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

Gas was first introduced in 1824, and the works, in Blackston road, are now the property of the Corporation; the town is also well supplied with water.

The Town Hall, standing close to the river Cart, was erected at a cost of £100,000, wholly defrayed by Messrs. George A., James, William, and Stewart Clark, brothers, and was opened on the 30th January, 1882; the building includes a tower, containing a chime of bells playing 35 tunes, which are varied each day of the month. The fine organ was presented by Mrs. Clark, mother of the above, at a cost of about £5,000.

The Municipal Buildings, formerly the County Buildings, form an embattled structure, with towers and turrets.

The county gaol, now used as a bridewell, and including a chapel erected in 1820, stands in rear of the municipal buildings, from which it is separated by two courtyards.

The County Buildings, in St. James street, next the Sheriff Court House, were opened in 1880, and are in the Classic style, from designs by Messrs. Clark & Bell, architects, of Glasgow. The edifice is two storeys in height, and has a central pedimented portico supported on columns of the Ionic order, and adorned with a frieze executed by F. W. Pomeroy esq. of London. The building contains the county hall, with committee rooms, offices for the county clerk, county road clerk, medical officer for the county, sanitary inspectors, county assessor and chief constable and head quarters for the county police, with cells; there is also a justice of the peace court hall and offices for the clerk.

The Sheriff Court House, in St. James street, erected at a cost of £15,000, and opened June 30, 1885, is an edifice in the Italian style, and includes a court hall holding about 300 persons, and rooms for the magistrates, jurors, reporters &c. There is also special accommodation for witnesses, and retiring rooms for both judge and jury, besides offices &c. for the sheriff clerk and procurator fiscal.

The Free Library and Museum was the gift to the town of the late Sir Peter Coats kt. J.P., F.R.S.E. of Woodside (d. 1890).

The Coats Observatory is in Oakshaw street.

The Government School of Design, in Gilmour street, was erected in 1847.

Public reading rooms for the working classes have been established by some of the principal manufacturers in different parts of the town.

The Infirmary is in Bridge street, and adjoining it is a Fever Hospital belonging to the Corporation, and under the supervision of the medical officers of the Infirmary, with a special staff of nurses.

The Lunatic Asylum is arranged to hold 98 patients. The Burgh or Riccarton Asylum is a large building occupying an elevated position on the south side of the town.

The Workhouse, erected in 1850, in the upper part of the town, is in the Elizabethan style, and available for 635 inmates.

The Abbey Church of St. James, St. Milburga and St. Mirin, is the parish church of an extensive rural district lying around the town, and called the "parish of the abbey of Paisley." The church was originally 251 feet in length, with a central tower 90 feet high, and an elegant choir, without aisles, 123 feet long and 23 feet wide; as now existing, it consists only of the nave, with aisles, north transept, north porch, with parvise, and a small but lofty chapel on the south side: the choir has almost entirely disappeared, only a few feet of the height of its walls remaining above ground: within the choir lie the remains of King Robert III. d. 4 April, 1406, and also of Margaret, his daughter, wife of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas, over which a slab of Sicilian marble has been placed by Her Majesty Queen Victoria in commemoration of her visit to Paisley in 1888. The extant portion of the church is almost entirely Early English; the nave, of six bays, 93 by about 60 feet, has triforium and clerestory, and the west front is arranged in three stages; the lowermost has a recessed doorway of seven orders, flanked by blind lancets, all the arch mouldings being relieved with dog-tooth ornament; in the second stage are two lofty Decorated windows, of three lights each, with Geometrical tracery; the gable is lighted by a similar window of five lights, and over it is a quatrefoil; the whole is flanked by tall and narrow buttresses and square turrets, and at the western angles of the aisles are other turrets, with spired caps: the groined roof, 82 feet high, is now concealed by a coved ceiling: the transept is roofless, but retains its window tracery: the chapel on the south side, built in 1499, and dedicated to Saints Columba and Mirin, is perpendicular and is now used as a place of sepulture for the Hamilton family, Dukes of Abercorn. The remarkable degree of resonance possessed by this little building, and which is still, on this account, called the sounding aisle, has been magnified by most writers. Much of the effect which it formerly produced is now, however, lost, from the re-construction within the chapel in 1820 of a large altar tomb, with recumbent female effigy, believed to represent Marjory, daughter of Robert the Bruce, wife of Walter, 6th High Steward of Scotland, and mother of Robert II.; she died in 1316. The aperture in the brickwork formed to close up the interstices of a once beautiful eastern window, likewise contributed to weaken the echo. The nave, which is the only portion now in use, is neatly fitted up, and contains some curious monuments and sepulchral inscriptions, and on the south side are four Decorated sedilia and a piscina; a number of stained windows have also been erected as memorials by families in the town and district.

The High church, which stands on a fine eminence, called Church hill, laid out on its northern slope in gardens, was built in 1754 at a cost of £1,600, and renovated in 1877 at an expense of £4,000: an organ was provided in 1898, at a cost of about £1,150: it will seat 1,313 persons.

St. George's church, built in 1820 at a cost of £6,183, was renovated in 1894 and has sittings for 1,300 persons.

The North church, in Love street, built in 1634, and rebuilt in 1883, is a plain building of stone in the Gothic style, and has sittings for 725 persons.

The Middle Parish church, on Church hill, built in 1781, was renovated in 1885 and affords 924 sittings.

St. Columba's or the Gaelic church, in Oakshaw street, is a very plain stone building erected in 1793, and will seat 1,100 persons.

The Coats Memorial Baptist church was erected in memory of Thomas Coats esq. a local philanthropist.

The John Neilson Educational Institution, Oakshawhead, richly endowed by the late John Neilson esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1852, and is a massive structure, occupying an elevated site, and surmounted by a lofty dome.

The Technical School, now (1899) being erected in George street, at an estimated cost of £17,000, has been designed by Mr. T. G. Abercrombie, architect, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, and exhibits a facade 120 feet in length, and three storeys high, arranged as a central block with slightly advanced wings, and an open lantern of several stages, rising from the ridge of the roof. On the ground floor will be a large vestibule, board room, principal's rooms and offices, as well as a lecture hall for 300 students, and the various rooms belonging to the drawing school. The first floor will be assigned to the science department, and include a lecture hall for 200 students, with another suite of rooms, and the upper floor will be devoted to chemistry, physics and other subjects.

The Camphill Public School, situated on an eminence, is the largest elementary school in Scotland, and will hold 2,000 scholars.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. There is also a Savings Bank, which occupies premises in High street.

The Fountain Gardens, the gift of Thomas Coats esq. of Ferguslie House, extending between Love street and Caledonia street, comprise six acres of ground, tastefully laid out, with a large and ornamental fountain in the centre, and a smaller one at each of the four angles of the gardens.

Brodie Park was originally a farm of 26 acres, bequeathed to the town council of Paisley many years ago by the late Mr. Brodie.

Races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. This ground, comprising 40 acres, has, by Act of Parliament, become the property of the community, and is now named St. James's Park.

The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays in February and May, and the second Thursday in August and November respectively. February and August are the principal for cattle; August fair and races take place at the same date, and last for three days. Those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants.

Two newspapers are published in Paisley, viz.: the "Express," daily, and the "Paisley and Renfrewshire Gazette," weekly.

Alexander Wilson, the celebrated writer on American ornithology, was born here in 1766, and died 23 August, 1813; Robert Tannahill, a weaver and lyric poet, was also a native of Paisley, where he was born 3 June, 1774; he was the author of several still popular ballads, but died by his own act, 17 May, 1810. Here also, 19 May, 1785, was born the celebrated John Wilson, best known as Christopher North, and famous both as a critic, essayist and wit; he was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he took his degree, and also carried off various University honours, including, in 1806, the Newdigate prize for English verse, besides highly distinguishing himself in athletic contests. In 1820 he became professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, but his chief reputation rests on the "Noctes Ambrosianae," a series of papers contributed to Blackwood's Magazine (1822-25); he died at Edinburgh, 3 April, 1854. Dr. John Witherspoon, long the minister of one of the parishes here, wrote several of his best theological works in Paisley, prior to his emigration in 1783 to America, where he became president of the college at Princeton, where he died 15 November, 1794.

The mitred abbey of Paisley was founded in the year 1164, by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Alan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum. It was originally a Clunian priory, colonised from the abbey of Munch or Great Wenlock, in Shropshire, and dedicated to St. James, Milburga and Mirinus, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey, and its lands erected into a regality by James II. the abbot being constituted lord thereof. Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, surrounded the abbey precincts with a lofty wall of hewn stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished, but a portion still remains, and a rhyming inscription, setting forth Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription, once on a tablet in the wall, is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. The monastic church is now that of the abbey; there were cloisters on the south side 60 feet square, but the domestic buildings have largely disappeared.

In 1560, after the Reformation, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claud Hamilton, third son of James, 2nd Earl of Arran, and Duke of Chateherault, in France, on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley in 1652. The abbey lands were transferred from James, 2nd Earl of Abercorn and grandson of Claud, Baron Paisley, to the Earl of Angus, and from him passed in 1653 to Lord Dundonald, but the greater portion became the property, by purchase in 1764, of the Marquess of Abercorn, who eventually let it on building leases; so that the park, orchard, and gardens of the abbey subsequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the materials of the monastery were used in the erection of the houses.

Ferguallie Park, the seat of Sir Thomas Glen Glen-Coats bart. D.L. and Hawkhead house, the property of the Earl of Glasgow, but now occupied by William Stevenson esq. are in this parish.

The area of the newly constituted parish is 17,057 acres, but the area of the burgh is 3,588 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £309,176; in 1891 the population was, in Abbey parish 25,312; High church, 20,342; Low church, 7,036 and Middle church, 13,704; total, 66,425, against 55,638 in 1881, but is now (1899) estimated at 80,000.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 9,934.

POLLOKSHAW, see GLASGOW.

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport, and parish, town, police and parliamentary burgh, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, 20 miles north-west from Glasgow and 3 east from Greenock, with a station on the Greenock section of the Caledonian railway. It formerly belonged to the parish of Kilmalcolm, but in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district. The town, which partly stands on the old barony of Newark, is neatly and regularly built; the streets run at right angles to each other and are lighted with gas. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and the lower grounds in the vicinity of the town have many good houses. The harbours are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress, and are accessible to vessels at all times of the tide. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, which has been extended and improved at a very considerable cost, and there is also a wet dock. During the year 1898, 43 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 23,388 were registered here, besides which, 47 steamers, net tonnage 68,421 and 1 sailing ship equal to 1,516 tons were built at this port. Connected with the town are seven shipbuilding establishments, some of which are upon an extensive scale and employ many hands. There are also saw mills, roperies, sail cloth factories and engineering and sail making works. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and five councillors, with a town clerk and other officers. A burgh police court sits every Thursday and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Port Glasgow, together with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The Town House, erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000, is a structure in the Classic style, and has a tower with spire 150 feet in height, and containing a clock; the interior includes a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the town clerk and other public officers. The Town Hall, in Princes street, is a large stone building, used for public meetings &c. The Moffat Library is an elegant building at the north end of King street, erected in 1887 from part of a bequest left by the late James Moffat, merchant, Port Glasgow, and comprises, besides the library, reading, billiard and smoking rooms. The Carnegie Park Orphan Homes, at the east end of the town, and erected from the same bequest, were built at a cost of about £7,000.

Newark is a quoad sacra parish erected out of that of Port Glasgow. The ancient castle of Newark, formerly occupied by the Maxwells of Pollock, is now the property of Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart., D.L., J.P. as representative of the Maxwells of Pollock and Springkell; the ruins are well preserved, and from the site a fine view is obtained of the Clyde and its adjacent scenery, particularly the wild and singularly-formed rocky eminence on which stands the castle of Dumbarton. Port Glasgow parish church, erected upon the site of the old one, is a purely modern structure. There is an annual fair, which takes place on the first Thursday in July, and continues for three days. Birkmyre Park, consisting of 9 acres, presented to the town by William Birkmyre esq. ex-M.P. and situated at Glen Hantly, was opened in July, 1835, and includes two bowling greens, a football field and a quoit pitch. Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. of Ardgowan, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 944 acres; rateable value of the whole parish, £57,640; the population of the parish in 1891 was 14,624, and in 1881 the total was 10,913 and burgh 10,872.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 1,654.

QUARRELTON, see ELDERSLIE.

RALSTON now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.

RANFURLY, see KILBARCHAN.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh and the capital of the county, and a parish in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is 50 miles west from Edinburgh, 13 east-by-south from Pert Glasgow, 6 west from Glasgow, and 3 north from Paisley; a short distance from the Clyde, and 1 mile east from the White Cart; the parish lying on both banks of the Clyde. The town, which has a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, consists of three good streets, from which several smaller ones issue, and it is well lighted with gas. There are two extensive shipbuilding yards, with a dock capable of accommodating vessels of large burthen, and also a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels frequenting the river may discharge and load with as great facility as at Glasgow.
The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew railway is connected with this wharf, at which passengers to and from the steam boats navigating the Clyde arrive, and here goods are also shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish and other boats. Renfrew received its first charter from Robert III. in 1396, and in 1614 James VI. granted a charter for a school. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two baillies and seven councillors. A magistrate's court sits every alternate Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Renfrew, together with Port Glasgow, Dumbarton, Kilmarnock and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The parish church, built in 1862, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, erected in the form of a Gæck cross, and has a tower with a tall and graceful spire.

Within the church lie two stone figures of Sir John Ross, of Hawkhead, and his wife, and on one of the walls is a marble tablet to the late Archibald Douglas Campbell esq. of Blythwood (d. 1868), father of the present Lord Blythwood. The church affords sittings for 1,050 persons. Walter Stewart built a castle here, on an eminence called Castle-hill, by the margin of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewart family, long ere they ascended the Scottish throne.
Blythwood, the seat of Lord Blythwood D.L., J.P. is situated on the banks of the Clyde in this parish. Lord Blythwood, Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. of Heuston House, and the Earl of Home A.D.C., V.D. are the chief landowners. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in May and the last Friday in June. The area of the parish comprises 4,311 acres; rateable value, £66,814; the population in 1891 was 9,338, including 6,777 in the burgh, 325 in Yoker, and in 1881 was 7,439, including 5,553 in the burgh, and 303 in Yoker; the population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 6,254.
The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 1,137.

THE COUNTY OF ROSS AND CROMARTY.

THIS is a large county in the north of Scotland, and includes the districts of Easter and Wester Ross, Ardmanach or the Black Isle, and four-fifths of the Island of Lewis, and the former county of Cromarty; this last, being formed of scattered portions within and adjoining Ross, was, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, united for all purposes with the county of Ross. The present outline is irregular and the boundaries on the east and west sides touch the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean; the west coast of the Mainland is much indented with bays and lochs, and its actual water boundary is the North Minch, the strait which divides it from the Isle of Lewis. On the north and north-east the county of Sutherland forms the boundary as far as Dornoch Firth, from there southwards to the Beaully basin the North Sea and Moray Firth constitute the eastern boundary, and thence Inverness with the Isle of Skye extend around the south and south-west borders: the Ross portion of the Isle of Lewis being bounded by Harris, the portion of the island belonging to Inverness on the south, the North Minch on the east and the Atlantic on the north and west: the portion of the Isle of Lewis belonging to the county measures 40 miles from north to south by 25 in breadth, while the part belonging to the Mainland extends from east to west 67 miles and from north to south 58 miles. It comprises an area of 3,202 square miles, or 2,049,423 acres, and in point of size ranks as the third, and in population as the twelfth of the counties of Scotland. In 1891 the population was 36,862 males and 40,948 females; total, 77,810, against 78,547 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 15,848 in 1891 and 15,665 in 1881.

Of the early history of this county but little is known: it was at the time the Romans came to these parts inhabited by three tribes, the principal of which, the Caledonii, must have been a part of a larger Sept, as the name occurs in other districts in 1135. There was an Earl of Ross, but this title early became extinct.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western: a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall, is loamy clay, the rest being light soil of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation, where they appear in continuous chains from north-west to south-east, and the lochs necessarily follow the same direction. The most lofty mountains are Ben Dearg, 3,547 feet; More, 3,509; Teallach, 3,474; Wyviss, 3,429; Alton, 3,383; Slioch, 3,217; Eag, 3,160; Fin, 3,060 and Ben Alligin, 3,015, besides which, on the confines of Ross and Inverness, is Main Soul, 3,862. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long, dreary, cold winters and some very hot summer weather, and the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of firwood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted, and large additions have been in progress for many years. The deer forests of Ross extend over about 750,000 acres, and the shootings are a source of profit to the proprietors. Inverness-shire has rather less area for this purpose. The improvements effected in farming have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," 1898, are—oats, 29,510 acres; barley or bere, 13,200; wheat, 1,990; rye, 703, the total corn crops being 44,563 acres; turnips and swedes, 16,146 acres; potatoes, 7,523; total green crops, 24,186 acres; hay, 16,094 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 29,342; permanent pasture, 26,831; total area of land and water, 2,049,423 acres, the mountain and heath land being 988,493; woods, 50,573, and plantation, 10,907 acres.

The live stock in 1898 comprised 6,266 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 2,035; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 18,102; other cattle, 26,884; ewes kept for breeding, 129,718; other sheep, 193,282; sows kept for breeding, 810; other pigs, 1,380. The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little commercial value. Sandstone occurs in several localities, 19,754 tons being raised in 1897. The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings has of late years become uncertain. At Ullapool in 1898 there were only 99 boats registered under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, employing 375 regular and 440 occasional hands. There are no manufactures of any importance, but in the neighbourhood of Dingwall, Invergordon and Tain several extensive distilleries are established.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conae, fed by the Orrin, Meig, Sheen, Farnich and Blackwater, which flows into the Cromarty Firth, and the Aultgraat and Alness, which have the same outlet, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Firth. The river Ewe, on the west coast, has a short course from Loch Marce, on the west coast, and the Broom river falls into Loch Broom. The Conae and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some falls of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Grienord, Loch Ewe, Gair Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keeshorn, Loch Carron and Loch Alsh, with its inner southerly arm, Loch Duich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them save Loch Marce, near the west coast, are of much magnitude or beauty. The Highland railway enters the county at Beaully in the south-east, runs north to Dingwall, whence a branch passes west-by-south round the north of Loch Luichart, up the Sheen water and along Glen Carron to the south part of Loch Carron, where Kyle of Lochalsh is the terminus, and from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis; the main line continues from Dingwall along the north side of the Cromarty Firth to Invergordon, whence it turns north to Tain and by the south of Dornoch Firth to Culrain, where it leaves the county and proceeds to Golspie &c.; from the Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh section is a short line to Stantpeffer, and from Muir of Ord on the main line is a branch to Fortrose; the scenery through which the line passes is very fine and varied; there is also a short branch from Dingwall to Strathpeffer Spa.

Lewis has some mountains, 1,200 to 1,700 feet, in the south and south-west portion of that section of the island, also an inland loch, Langabhat, about 8 miles long, and numerous inlets or "sen" lochs, the largest being Loch Boag on the west coast. There is a good harbour at Stornoway, sheltered from the north-east by the Eyr peninsula. The population in 1891 was 27,045. The principal industry is sheep breeding.

Divisions, Representations &c.—The county contains 33 parishes; it has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain and Fortrose. The two former, with the town of Cromarty, join with Kirkwall, Wick and Dornoch in returning one member to Parliament, and the shire of Ross and Cromarty sends another. The parliamentary constituency numbered in 1898, 7,877. The burgh of Fortrose is associated with Inverness, Nairn and Forres in parliamentary representation. The valuation of the county in 1897-8 was £298,065.

ALNESS is a parish in the eastern half of the county, and a small village, partly in this parish and partly in that of Rosskeen, 3 miles south-west from Invergordon and about 10 from Dingwall, situated on both sides of the Averon (which river separates the two parishes), the part of the village lying in Rosskeen parish being known as Brig End of Aloess. The parish is bounded on the east by Cromarty Firth and Rosskeen, on the south and west by Kiltearn and Fodderty and on the north by Kincardina and Rosskeen, extending in length some 20 miles, and having a mean breadth of about 5. Alness has a station on the Inverness and Wick section of the Highland railway. Alness is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and Alness Brig End in that of Invergordon or Tain. The production of whisky is carried on extensively in two distilleries. Iron and silver ores have been found in this neighbourhood. The Established and Free Churches are about half a mile west of the village, and the latter church has lately been rebuilt at a cost of £1,100. Teaninich House, the seat of Stuart Caradoc Munro esq. is situated about a mile west of the village. Formerly fairs were held here, but they are now discontinued. Ronald Craufurd Munro Ferguson esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Raith and Novar; Stuart Caradoc Munro esq. and Walter Shoolbred esq. V.D. of Wyvis, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 44,041 acres; rateable value, £7,582; the population of the parish in 1881 was 1,033, and in 1891, 1,039; the population of the village in 1891 was 1,039, which includes Brig End.

APPLECROSS is a parish and small village about 16 miles north-west from Stroma Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and about the same distance from Lochcarron. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, and measures about 25 miles by 23, lies between Loch Torridon on the north, and Lochcarron on the south, and is bounded on the west by the Inner Sound, dividing it from Raasay Island, and on the east by the parishes of Gairloch and Lochcarron; its largest loch is Loch Damp, 4 miles in length; there are several detached hills varying from 2,000 to 2,900 feet above sea level, and it is well watered by some small streams. The climate is very moist, torrents of rain being frequent all the year round. There is a good limestone quarry on Applecross Bay, but the population is chiefly engaged in fishing. The greater part of the parish is occupied as a deer forest by Lord Middleton, Captain the Hon. Lionel F. King-Noel, Duncan Darroch esq. and Charles James Murray esq. Milntown, Shieldaig and Torridon are villages in this parish, Anuat and Fasag are townships in the latter, and Cronlin Island is also included in it, but part of the original parish has been transferred under boundary order 129 to Lochcarron parish, and part of Lochcarron to Applecross. Charles James Murray esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Courthill, Lochcarron; Lord Middleton, of Applecross House; Duncan Darroch esq. B.A., D.L., J.P. of Gourock and Torridon, and Capt. the Hon. Lionel Fortescue King-Noel, of Ben Damp Forest, Torridon, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 112,895 acres; rateable value, £4,470 16s.; the population in 1891 was 2,239, and in 1891, 1,786.

CONTIN is a parish and village, about 7 miles south-west from Dingwall and 3 miles west from Strathpeffer station on the Dingwall and Strathpeffer section of the Highland railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, extends 20 miles from north-west to south-east, by the same in breadth at its widest part, diminishing to 5 in the north, and is bounded on the north by Lochcarron, on the south by Urray, on the east by Fodderty and on the west by Lochbroom and Gairloch. Sir Arthur George Ramsay Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. of Coull; Richard A. Combe, of Strathconon, and Lady Ashburton, of Kinlochluichart, are the principal landowners. The area previous to the alteration of the boundary was 179,276 acres; rateable value of present area £13,076; the population in 1881 was 1,422, and in 1891, 1,436.

Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, parts of Foddery and Urray parishes have been transferred to Contin.

CROMARTY.

CROMARTY is a parliamentary burgh and seaport, and a small parish at the entrance to the Cromarty Firth, an inlet of Moray Firth, and is in the poor combination of Black Isle. The town, which stands on a promontory on the south side of the strait leading into the fine harbour formed by Cromarty Firth, is situated 1 1/2 miles north-east from Inverness, 17 north-west from Nairn, 11 south from Tain, 9 north-by-east from Fortrose, 7 east, by water, from Invergordon, a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway, and 10 from the terminus of the Inverness, Muir of Ord and Fortrose railway. The harbour, formed by the Cromarty Firth, is one of the safest on the East Coast, the entrance being well protected by two headlands, known as the North and South Souters; it was known to the Romans as the "Portus Salutis," and is capable of holding a large fleet, and the hay presents good facilities for bathing. The herring and white fishery is carried on to some extent in this quarter. The burgh is controlled by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The Town Hall, an ancient building, in Church street, contains an old bell with the inscription "S Dimas Carrae Ano Dizzi"; this bell, it is thought, is one of the many captured by Sir Charles L. Ross, of Balmagown, during the French war, and presented to several northern towns. The parish church, built in pre-Reformation days, stands at the east of the town; the records of the Kirk session date from 1671. A chapel for the Gaelic portion of the community is situated on the hill south of the town, and a Free church is the only other place of worship. In the burgh is a good public hall, erected by the artillery volunteers as a drill hall and place for entertainments. There are branches of the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Beneath the South Souter is a chasm, called "Charlie's Seat," and a petrifying stream called the "Dropping Cave." Near the North Souter are seven sunken rocks termed the "Kings' Souts," so named from the tradition of three King's sons having been drowned near these rocks when on their way from Denmark, and to their memory were erected three obelisks, one in the parish of Nigg, and two in the parish of Fearu. On an eminence immediately behind the town is a column 40 feet high, surmounted by a full-sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller (d. 1856), the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," who was a native of Cromarty. Mr. Haundyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh, was the sculptor, and the monument was erected by public subscription in 1860, at a cost of £1,500. In the house in which Hugh Miller was born, 1802, is a small museum of fossils &c. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an Act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitation of Sir John Urquhart, a former proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; it now joins with Kirkwall, Wick, Dornoch, Tain and Dingwall in returning one member to Parliament. The present proprietor is Maj. Walter Charteris Ross, of Cromarty House. The area of the parish comprises 8,017 acres; rateable value, landward £4,973, burghal £2,505; the population in 1881 was 2,009, with 1,360 in the burgh, and in 1891 was 2,007, including 1,338 in the burgh.

 Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office & Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. DINGWALL.

DINGWALL is the county town of Ross and Cromarty, and a parish, royal burgh and market town, 178 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh, 21 north-west from Inverness, 20 south-west from Cromarty, 13 south-west from Invergordon and 9 north from Beaulieu, with a station at the junction of the Inverness and Thurso and Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh sections of the Highland railway. The town consists chiefly of one main street and several smaller ones, and is situated in the eastern part of Ross-shire, on a fertile plain near the western extremity of the Firth of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town, and about three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier or jetty, for vessels discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II. and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors, and joins with Cromarty, Tain, Dornoch, Wick and Kirkwall in returning one member to parliament. Water is supplied from springs above the town and gas from works in Tulloch street. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than at present, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. With the exception of a distillery, there are no manufactories or large works. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, is a curious old building with a spire and clock. In the High street are three hotels. In the same street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the Town and County Banking Co. Ltd. The Established church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. Near the church is an obelisk, 57 feet in height, erected to Sir George Mackenzie, first Earl of Cromarty, erected 1703, who, in accordance with his last injunction, was buried here, 1714. In Castle street is the Episcopal church, rebuilt in 1872, after being destroyed by fire; the church contains several fine stained windows and a handsome organ. The Free church, in High street, is a modern edifice. The Ross Memorial Hospital, in Ferry road, is a small stone building, erected in 1873. A little to the east of the town stand the County Buildings, completed in 1845, at a cost of £5,000, and containing a county room, a sheriff court room and county clerk's and other offices, together with a prison; the County Council meets in these County buildings. In the same direction is an extensive distillery, known as the Ben Wyvis Distillery, owned by the Forintosh Distillery Co. Limited. Near the town stands the mansion of the Ross family, the walls being complete and the building lately repaired. Tulloch Castle is the seat of Duncan Davidson esq. D.L., J.P. The market is held every Wednesday, and the fairs on the third Wednesday in January, the third Wednesday in February, the first Wednesday in June, the first Tuesday in July, the first Wednesday in September and in November, and the Tuesday next before Christmas (new style).

The trustees of the late D. H. C. Davidson D.L., J.P. of Tulloch; Col. James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Brahan Castle, and William Dalziel Mackenzie M.A., D.L., J.P. of Farley Court, Henley-on-Thames, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 6,644 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £11,478 7s. 3d. and of the landward portion of the parish, £4,149 3s. 11d.; total, £15,627 11s. 2d.; the population of the parish in 1881 was 2,220, with 1,932 in the burgh, and in 1891 was 2,576, including 2,300 in the burgh. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish has been transferred to Fodderty.

FODDERTY parish is a very long one, being 20 miles in length by a breadth varying from 1 to 5, bounded by Edderton on the north, Dingwall, Kiltarn and Ainess on the east, Dingwall on the south, and Contin on the west, and is intersected by part of the river Blackwater; it is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and is 4 miles west from Dingwall, and about 1 west from Auchterness station on the Strone branch, and 2 north-west from Strathpeffer terminal station, also on a branch of the Highland railway, both being in the parish. The Dingwall and Skye railway traverses part of the parish. Loch Uss'e, about 1½ miles square, and Ben Wyvis Mountain, 3,429 feet in height, are in the parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish has been transferred to Fodderty. Coull, situated in this parish, is the property of Sir Arthur G. B. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. Near Strathpeffer Mineral Spa is Brahan Castle, the ancient and princely residence of the Seaforth family, and now the property of Colonel James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth. This beautiful seat is situated below the southern slope of Knock-Farrel, and commands an extensive and varied prospect, comprehending the partially wooded and cultivated courses of the river Conon and Orrin. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Earl of Cromarty; Colonel James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth, and William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. of Fawley Court, Henley-on-Thames. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 64,230 acres; rateable value of present area, £14,474; population in 1881, 2,047, and in 1891, 1,837.

Strathpeffer (which see) and Maryburgh are villages, and Anchtarneed is a hamlet in this parish. The population of Maryburgh in 1891 was 390.

Post & Telegraph Office, Anchtarneed; Donald McLennan, sub-postmaster. Letters through Dingwall. Delivery, 11.5 a.m.; dispatch, 7.10 a.m. The nearest money order office is at Strathpeffer FORTROSE is a small town and royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and quoad sacra parish out of the civil parish of Rosemarkie; it is 10 miles north from Inverness, 21 south from Tain and 18 north-north-east from Beany, situated on the southern slopes of the Black Isle, on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Firth, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant 2½ miles. In November, 1893, a branch line of the Highland railway was opened, commencing at Muir of Ord, and having its terminus at Fortrose, which has advantages for sea-bathing; and there is an excellent hotel (the Royal), which is also a posting establishment. James II. in 1445 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighbouring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. It reverted to the crown at the Reformation, and was in consequence enfranchised and erected into an independent royal burgh in 1590, and again annexed to Rosemarkie in 1592 under the name of the Royal Burgh of Fortrose. The burgh is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and nine councillors, and it joins with Inverness, Fortree and Nairn in sending one member to Parliament. The Bishopric of Ross was formed by King David I. between the years 1124 and 1128, but in 1762 was united to Caithness, and in 1769 to Moray, and is now part of the consolidated diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness, formed in 1864. The cathedral here, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Boniface, is an edifice of red sandstone, in the purest form of the Decorated style, and consisted, when entire, of choir with aisles, nave of four bays with aisles, western tower, quadrants, lady chapel, crypt and chapter house, but the only portions now standing are the south aisle of the chancel and nave and the detached chapter house: in the aisle are several ancient tombs of the 14th century, and a piscina. The town has an excellent harbour, built by the parliamentary commissioners, and a jetty about 250 yards in length, erected at a cost of £3,000. There is a branch of the Caledonian Bank in the town, which depends for its prosperity on agriculture and fishing, and its advantages as a summer and seaside resort. Rateable value of the burgh, £4,468; the population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 988; police burgh, 871, and ecclesiastical parish, 840.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. Ross-shire added; John Smith, postmaster. Deliveries, 9.40 a.m. & noon & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 7.30 a.m. & 2, 10, & 8 p.m.

GAIRLOCH is a large parish, in the small debt court district of Dingwall, 28 miles north-west from Achnasheen station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, 52 north-west from Dingwall, 30 north-east from Portree and 45 south-east from Stornoway. It is about 40 miles in length by from 15 to 20 in breadth, on the west coast of Ross-shire, having about 20 miles of coast line on the east of the Minch, between the hills of Dundonnell and Torridon; bounded on the north-east by Lochbroom, on the east by Contin and on the south by Applecross and Lochcarron, and is intersected for 12½ miles by Loch Maree (a description of which is given under "Poolewe") and by some smaller lochs, also by the rivers Grudie, Relugan, Kerry and Lungard and some rivulets. The soil is fertile and mostly in cultivation, with some good plantations and deer forests. The parish abounds in mountains, lochs and heaths, and has some beautiful scenery, and an abundance of game of all description. The three highest mountains are Ben Slioch, 3,217 feet, Ben Eay, 3,160 feet, and Ben Alligin, 3,105 feet high. There is a branch of the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited in the village. The principal landowners are Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie bart. J.P. of Gairloch; Mrs. Maria Ann Liot Bankes, of Ardrirk; and Osgood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. of Inverewe. Acreage, 200,646; rateable value, £11,539; population of the civil parish in 1881 was 4,594, and in 1891, 4,181, and in the ecclesiastical 2,071.

Aultbae, Strath, Badachro and Kinlochewe are small villages in this parish.

INVERGORDON.

INVERGORDON is a police burgh and seaport town in the parish of Kosskeen and Easter Ross poor combination, 12 miles south-south-west from Tain, 13 north-north-east from Dingwall and 8 west from Cromarty, with a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway; it lies on the northern point of the entrance to the inner or narrower portion of Cromarty Firth. There is a ferry from the town to Cromarty and a small pier was erected in 1821 at the expense of the county and the Government, so that boats could land their passengers at any time of the tide. The late proprietor, R. B. E. McLeod esq. of Cadboll, at his own expense constructed a harbour in 1828. In 1857, large wooden piers were built extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London &c. coming alongside; the extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863 has diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is very commodious and safe, and has good anchorage. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The Free church is a handsome cruciform edifice, with a tower and spire about 140 feet in height. In High street there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. The Town Hall, also in the High street, opened in April, 1871, is a building in the Italian style with a pediment containing a beautifully sculptured group representing the god Neptune, with the "horn of plenty" on one side and aquatic plants on the other. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town, but the principal industry at present is a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, carried on in buildings covering over an acre of ground, which together with the timber yards give employment to a number of workpeople. The principal inn is the "Commercial," in High street. A justice of peace court is held when necessary, and a sheriff court quarterly. In 1864 the town was taken under the provisions of Provost Lindsay's Police Act. The population of the burgh in 1881 was 1,119, and in 1891, 1,117; rateable value, £3,817.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, High street. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Ross-shire added); Donald Ross, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.45 & 11.30 a.m. & 6.25 p.m.; dispatches, 6.50, 8.45 & 10.50 a.m., 1.45, 3.40 & 7.40 p.m. No delivery on sundays

KILTEARN is a large parish, in Dingwall small debt court district, about 18 miles long by 5 wide, and has for the whole of its northern boundary the Ault Grast water, extending on the south to Cromarty Firth. The church stands on the road from Dingwall to Tain, about 2 miles north from Foulis station and 1 south from Nova station, both in the parish, on the Tain and Dingwall section of the Highland railway, 6 north from Dingwall and 7 south-west from Invergordon. Loch Glasa, about 4½ miles long and 1 broad, is in the parish, through the southern part of which runs the Skieich water, which flows into Cromarty Firth near the village. Amongst the objects of interest in the neighbourhood are the Falls of Coneas, and the grave of the Rev. Thomas Hogg, of Kiltearn, a distinguished northern Covenanter. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. Sir Hector Munro bart. D.L., J.P. of Foulis Castle; Ronald Craufurd Munro-Ferguson esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Novar House, Evanton; Walter Shoobred esq. of Wyvis, and Major Randle Jackson D.L., J.P. of Swardale. The area of the parish is 27,792 acres; rateable value, £9,459; in 1881 it contained a population of 1,182, and in 1891, 1,301, of which number 493 were returned as belonging to the village of Evanton.

Evanton is a rural village in this parish, about a mile from the parish church, on the north side of Cromarty Bay, and sheltered by a row of trees from the sea breeze. A Mission Hall in connection with the parish church was erected here in 1894. About 2 miles to the westward is Foulia-Ferry, used for loading grain, timber and cattle, and a mile north-east of the village is a deep ravine called "The Black Rock of Kiltearn," supposed to have been formed at some very early period by a mighty convulsion of nature.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Evanton (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. Ross-shire added; William Cunningham, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.25 & 11.15 a.m.; dispatches, 6.30, 8.50 & 10.25 a.m. & 2 & 7.45 p.m.

KINCARDINE is a large parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and Tain small debt court district, about 13 miles north-west from Tain and 13 west from Dornoch. There are stations on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway at Bonar Bridge, 1 mile west, and Culrain, 4 miles north-west from the church, both within the parish, which is about 25 miles in length; the breadth varies from 6 miles in the east to 15 in the west; it is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth and rivers Oykel and Kyle, on the south by Contin, Alness, Fodderty and Rosskeen, and on the west by Lochbann and Assynt. It contains several small lochs, and the Carron water runs through the centre of the parish, flowing into the Kyle near Bonar Bridge. There are also several small rivers in the parish. The principal landowners are Sir Charles Henry Augustus Frederick Ross bart. D.L. of Balmagown; Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of DunCraig Castle, Alexander Littlejohn esq. D.L., J.P. of Inverclarron, Messrs. Francis T. Gervens, of Armat, Richard T. Coupland, of Grunards, M. B. Gilmour, of Glenveraykel, William Allis Smith, of Glenveray, and Mrs. Simpson, of Culrain. The area is 133,050 acres; rateable value, £12,806; and in 1881 the population of the civil parish was 1,472, and in 1891, 1,417, and of the ecclesiastical, 1,235.

Ardgay is a village in the parish of Kincardine, and quarter of a mile from Bonar Bridge station on the Highland line, situated on the north border of Ross-shire. It has a good hotel. A deed was granted in the year 1686 to erect the village into a burgh of barony, but this was never carried into effect.

Culrain, Gledfield, Oykel, Donne and Brae are small hamlets in this parish.

Croick is a quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Kincardine. The population in 1891 was 192.

KINTAIL is a parish and small village, in the southern portion of the county, about 16 miles south-east from Strone Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and Strath-carron station, on the same line, lies 7 miles east from the northern border of the parish.
The boundaries of the parish are Lochalsh parish on the west and north-west, Urray on the north-east, Inverness-shire on the east and south-east, and Glenshiel on the south, and its extent is 20 miles from northeast to south-west by 15 in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Dingwall.
Loch Duich, on the south-western border of the parish, and opening into Loch Alsh, has some very picturesque surroundings, and on an island at the entrance to the loch are the ruins of Bilean Donan Castle, a former seat of the Mackenzies of Kintail. In the village of Dornie, in this parish, the late Duchess of Leeds erected a Roman Catholic chapel, with schools attached. Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Dunragit Castle, Mrs. Chisholm, of Erchless Castle, near Beaulie, and the trustees of the late Sir James Thompson Mackenzie bart. (d.
1890), are the principal landowners. The area comprises 77,441 acres; rateable value, £5,078 2s. 4d.; the population in 1881 was 688, and in 1891, 588.

Post Office, Dornie; Mrs. Ellen Macmillan, sub-postmistress. Letters through Strone Ferry R.S.O. Delivery, about 4.30 p.m.; LEWIS-ISLAND OF, see OUTER HEBRIDES OF WESTERN ISLANDS, p. 816.

LOCHALSH is a parish, in the Dingwall small debt court district, containing four stations on the extended line of the Highland railway, 53 south-west from Dingwall and 30 south-east from Portree. It is a large parish, being 23 miles in length and 8 in breadth, on the west coast of Ross-shire and on the shores of Loch Carron, Loch Alsh and Loch Long, intersected by the river Aven Lurgie for about 12 miles and by the river Attadale for 6 miles, and contains numerous small streams and trout lochs, the two principal being Scavan and Doule, both being about 1½ miles long. It is bounded on the north by Contin, on the south by Loch Alsh and east by Urray and Kintail. There are two branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited in the parish, one at Balmacrae and one at Kyle, and three good hotels at Strome Ferry station, Kyle and Balmacrae respectively. The occupation of the inhabitants is chiefly fishing. The soil in the east end of the parish is fertile, whilst the west end is mountainous, but covered in some parts by deer forests and plantations, the former abounding in red deer and game. Near Plockton, which is about 4 miles from Strome, is Duncraig Castle, one of the seats of Sir Kenneth J. Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh, the sole landowner. Acreage, 49,532; rateable value, £5,784; this parish in 1881 possessed a population of 2,050, and in 1891, 1,888.

Kyle, in this parish, on the shore of Loch Alsh, is the terminus of the Dingwall and Skye railway, which has been extended to this place from Strome Ferry, and is now the most direct route to Portree, to which place steamers ply regularly, and from thence there is communication by MacBrayne's steamers with Stornoway, Glasgow &c. The Established church, a building of stone, was erected in 1890, at a cost of £650.

Balmacrae and Plockton are villages, and Strome Ferry, Ardeve, Reraig, Duirinish, and Auchtertyre hamlets in this parish. The population of Plockton village in 1891 was 422.

LOCHBROOM is a large parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and small debt court district of Dingwall, 25 miles north-west from Garve station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland line, and 38 north-west from Dingwall; it is about 50 miles in length and from 8 to 22 in breadth, and lies on the shore of Loch Broom, an inlet of the sea from which it takes its name, and in a picturesque and mountainous district. It is bounded by Assynt in Sutherlandshire on the north, Kincardine and Contin on the east, Gairloch on the south, and the Minch on the west, and is intersected by the rivers Achall and Ullapool and some smaller streams; Loch Broom extends inland for about 8 miles, and Little Loch Broom about the same distance, and in the parish are several smaller lochs, including Loch Lurgan, Loch Anchall, 2 miles long and 1 broad, and Loch Skinaskink, and the mountain peaks known as An Teallach, 3,474 feet high, Ben Deargmoir, 2,974 feet, the Dundonnell Hills and other ranges. The Summer Isles, Isle Tanera, Isle Martin, Priest Isle and numerous islets form part of this parish. The parish church stands at the head of Loch Broom, and was built in 1844. Four miles north-west of the parish church is Leckmelm, the pleasantly situated estate of Alexander G. Pirie esq. and to the south-east is Braemore House, overlooking Loch Broom, and situated on the spur of a hill, 600 feet above sea level. Deer forests cover a considerable portion of the parish. The principal landowners are Sibell, Countess of Cromartie; Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Dundonnell; the trustees of the late Sir John Fowler bart. K.C.M.G. of Braemore (d. 1898); Mrs. Lot Bankes, of Ardrair; Wm. E. Gilmuir esq. Woodbank, Alexandria, Dumbartonshire; Alfred Hugh M. Calton esq. of Grunard; Alexander George Pirie esq. and Donald Mathieson esq. of Lews. The area of the civil parish is 261,021 acres; rateable value, £14,079; the population in 1881 was 4,191, and in 1891, 3,910, and 1,487 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Ullapool is a village on the north shore of Loch Broom and a quad sacra parish formed from Lochbroom. See page 1179.

NIGG is a parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and small debt court district of Tain, about 9 miles south from Tain and 4 south from Nigg station on the Highland railway. It is bounded on the north by Fearn, south by Cromarty Firth, east by Moray Firth, and on the west by Nigg Bay and Logie Easter, measuring in length 5 miles, with a breadth of 3½. A third of the parish consists of its most interesting physical feature, the Hill of Nigg, rising to a height of 500 feet; from the highest point nine counties may be seen by the naked eye. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Ross Duncan, of Shandwick; the trustees of the late Captain Andrew G. Reid; Sir Charles Hy. Ang. Frederick Ross bart. D.L. of Balmagown Castle and Maj. Wm. Hugh Eric Murray J.P. of Geanies. The area is 7,818 acres; rateable value, £5,767; and in 1881 had a population of 1,000, and in 1891, 930.

Nigg includes the fishing villages of Shandwick and Balmagown.

POOLEWE is a small fishing village and quoad sacra parish, the latter formed from that of Gairloch, 64 miles west from Dingwall, and about the same distance south-east from Stornoway and 30 north-west from Achnasheen on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, its nearest railway station, and at the head of a fine bay called Loch Ewe. According to an inventory from the title deeds in the possession of the Gairloch family, the old name for the village of Poolewe was Clive. In 1619, a charter of registration in favour of the then proprietor was granted under the great seal, erecting Clive, on the water of Ewe, into a burgh of barony, and the harbour of Ewe into a free port, with power from year to year of electing a provost, bailies, besides other privileges, but it does not appear that any use was ever made of this charter. Since the opening of the Dingwall and Skye railway, there is regular communication by coach from the hotel at Achnasheen station to Kinlochewe, Gairloch, Poolewe and Aultbae.

Poolewe is part of the estate of Gairloch, the present proprietor being Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie bart. J.P. At Bualnabub is a school, erected and endowed by Francis Harford Mackenzie esq. and now a board school. A justice of the peace court is held here at times fixed by the resident magistrates. Loch Maree, about 2 miles distant, is about 18 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and abounds with fish: this lake contains about thirty islands, from one of which, called Maree, the water takes its name; some of these are but little raised above water level and are covered with scattered firs and with thickets of birch, alder and holly, while they are separated by narrow sinuous channels: the northern margin of the loch presents a variety of scenery, consisting of rocky and wooded bays and creeks, crowned by overhanging cliffs and mountains. A fine view of the loch, embracing nearly its whole length, is obtained at Tollie, about a mile from Poolewe. Loch Maree is the property of Sir Kenneth S. Mackenzie bart. of Gairloch. The river Ewe, which is scarcely 2 miles in length, falls into Loch Ewe, and is the natural outlet from Loch Maree; the river has a rapid and turbulent course, and is noted for the abundance of its salmon. On the west shore of the lake are the ruins of a chapel, which is believed to have given name to the isle and loch, and said to date from the 8th century; there are also some old tombstones on which are crosses and other carvings. Inverewe is the residence of Osgood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. There are large hotels at Kinlochewe, Loch Maree and Gairloch, for the accommodation of tourists. Area, 200,646 acres; the population of the quoad sacra parish in 1891 was 2,110.

ROSEMARKIE, in Black Isle poor combination and small debt court of Dingwall, is one mile from Fortrose terminal station on a branch from Muir of Ord on the Highland railway and about 18 east from Dingwall. Rosemarkie and Fort George in Inverness-shire are connected by a ferry. The parish extends 9 miles in length along the coast of Moray Firth, and is 3 in breadth. The hills both on the north and south are for the most part arable, being in summer covered with verdure, and producing early and abundant crops. The coast all along between Rosemarkie and Cromarty is romantic, being bold and rocky, and as the country lies dry and has the benefit of fine sea breezes, the air is pure and salubrious. The parish church was completed in 1821, and is in the Late Gothic style. James Douglas Fletcher esq. D.L., J.P. of Rosehaugh and Ethie Avoch; Robert Sinclair Oliver esq. of Raddery House, and Mrs. Mackenzie, of Flowerburn, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,675 acres; rateable value, landward, £4,033; burghal (Fortrose) £4,468; the population in 1881 was 1,357, and in 1891, 1,343; of this number, 363 were returned as belonging to the village of Rosemarkie, the remainder being in the Fortrose burgh; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 840.

ROSSKEEN is a parish in Easter Ross poor combination, and is in the eastern part of the county, bounded on the north by Kincardine and Edderton, on the east by Kilmuir Easter, on the south by the Firth of Cromarty, and on the west by Alness; the length of the entire parish is about 20 miles with a breadth varying from 3 to 5 miles. The lower part of the parish, which runs along the Firth, and for about 2 miles back, forms a gentle and easy access to the hills. A hill called Knock-Navie, or Coldhill, divides the lower from the higher part of the parish. Beyond the upper arable ground and inhabited glens is a very considerable range of mountains, applicable to no other purpose than that of pasturing black cattle or sheep. The parish possesses some fine plantations, the chief of these belonging to Invergordon Castle. The town was supplied with gas in 1872. The parish church, situated one mile west of the town of Invergordon, is a substantial building, erected in 1827, with 1,200 sittings. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in April, the first Tuesday in August, the second Tuesday in October and the third Tuesday in December. About one mile from the town of Invergordon is Invergordon Castle, the seat of Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. of Cadboll. In November, 1801, the centre of the mansion was accidentally destroyed by fire, but was rebuilt in 1873-4 on the old site in the Elizabethan style; in the park are some fine plantations. Ardross Castle is the property and residence of C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. J.P. Sir K. J. Matheson bart. of Duncaraig Castle; Capt. R. W. Macleod, of Invergordon Castle; George Inglis esq. of Newmore; the trustees of the late Roderick Mackenzie, of Kincairg; C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. and Andrew Mackenzie esq. of Dalmore, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 33,725; rateable value, landward, £11,260; burghal (Invergordon) £3,817; population in 1881, 3,733, and in 1891, 3,480; of this number 1,122 were returned for Invergordon; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 840. Saltburn, one mile east from Invergordon, is a hamlet in this parish.

STRATHPEPPER is a modern village, 4½ miles west from Dingwall, in the parish of Podderty, and is the terminus of the Strathpeffer branch of the Highland railway. There is also a station at Auchterneed, 2 miles north, on the Strone branch of the same line. The village has a branch of the Caledonian Bank. Strathpeffer Mineral Wells are at the upper extremity of a fertile valley of that name, which stretches about three miles due west from Dingwall; several villas for invalid visitors have been erected near them, and there are three good hotels and three temperance hotels, and many of the adjacent farmhouses likewise furnish lodgings during the season from May to September. The springs rise through the shaly sandstone which is prevalent in the district, and at no great distance from the lofty mountain Ben Wyvis, one of the most conspicuous eminences in the North of Scotland, having an altitude of 3,429 feet. From the summit views may be obtained of the counties of Ross, Sutherland, Caithness and Inverness. The waters have long been known as medicinal, and an analysis of their composition was published by Mr. Donald Munro in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1772. They were brought into considerable celebrity by Dr. Morrison, of Aberdeenshire, who affirmed that they were the strongest and most salubrious in Great Britain. They have subsequently been visited by Dr. T. Thompson, in May, 1828, who analysed the water, which is strongly charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. Large additions have been made to the spa establishment, which consists of a pump room, hot and cold baths, a pavilion and reading room. Strathpeffer is bounded on the north by a high sandstone ridge, and on the south it is skirted by the steep green wooded acclivities of Knock-Farrel, one of the most extensive and best preserved vitrified forts (or ancient beacon hills) in the country. The public road bounds the grounds of the ancient seat of the Cromartie family, Castle Leod, a castellated mansion. The same road, on quitting the strath, runs by the wooded knolls of Coul, the property of Sir Arthur G. R. Mackenzie bart. and the manse, village and island plain of Contin, beyond which are the shores of Loch Achilty and the sheepwalks of Comrie to the cascades of the Conon, or, holding more to the north, the falls of Rogie, on the Blackwater, which flows from the upland lake and moors of Strathgarve. Nearer to the mineral spa is a walk through the lawns and pleasure grounds of Braham Castle. The population of the village in 1891 was 350.

STROME FERRY, see LOCHALS.

TAIN, a royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and a market town, is a parish in Easter Ross poor combination, with a station on the Highland railway, and is 46 miles north from Inverness and 26 north-by-east from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Firth of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea ferries have been established. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Bailie Dhuthach bood beach, signifying "the town of St.
 Duthie" (or Duthus) to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built, but of late years has received improvements and additions. The parish extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Firth, by a breadth of 4 miles inland, and is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth, on the south by Logie Easter, on the east by Fearu and on the west by Edderton and Kilmir Easter. The ground in general is flat, but towards the west is rather hilly: the district is tolerably well wooded and much improved by agricultural operations. The sea shore is flat and sandy. As a royal burgh, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and nine councillors, and unites with the northern district of burghs in returning one member to Parliament. A sheriff small debt court is held every Wednesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The church of the Establishment is a quadrangular structure, with an embattled tower at each angle; it was renovated and reseated in 1896, at a cost of £700. The Free church was erected in 1822, at a cost of £6,000. The old chapel of St. Duthie, standing below the town near the railway station was built about 1200; to this edifice Robert the Bruce's queen and her retinue fled for refuge, but were taken captive by the Earl of Ross and delivered up to the English. The chapel, founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1428, is an elegant structure, and was used as a parish church until 1815, but was afterwards left unprotected for upwards of 40 years, and remained in a dismantled condition until its restoration in 1877 by Mr. John McLeod, then provost of Tain, and afterwards by his son, George McLeod, in 1882: it contains some stained windows in memory of families in the district, and monuments to Thomas Flogg and Patrick Hamilton, the Scottish martyrs, and likewise a replica of a finely carved oaken pulpit, presented to the people of Tain by the "good regent" Murray. St. Duthie enjoyed a considerable reputation as a saint in the 15th century, and James IV. once made a pilgrimage on foot from Falkland palace, in Fife, to the shrine of this saint, in the church of Tain, for the expiation of some offence; he travelled with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land with other immunities: the inhabitants, hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss within a few miles of the town, which is still called "the King's Causeway." The Royal Academy, in an open park at the west end of the town, was founded by royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1812, the cost of its erection having been raised by subscription: the course of education is conducted by a rector, with a classical master and assistants. The Court House, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors; in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames: the present Court House, erected on the old site, is a building surmounted by pinnacles; but retains the ancient tower and bartizan.

 In the town is a large hall for assemblies and public meetings and a good hotel called "the Royal." The Masonic Hall in Manse street, was opened in March, 1896, and cost about £600. The trade here consists principally in the woollen manufacture and in distilling, carried on extensively by the Glenmorangie Distillery Co. Limited.
 There are branches respectively of the British Linen Company Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and North of Scotland Bank Limited and a savings bank. The principal markets are held on the Wednesday after the second Tuesday in July, on the Wednesday after the third Tuesday in August and on the third Tuesday in October and corn markets are held every other Friday. In the year 1895, the ancient "Mercat cross" was restored by ex-provost James Vass M.D. now of Edinburgh.
 Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L.
 J.P. of Cadboll and Invergordon, Provost Fowler and Count De Serra Largo are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 16,668 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £6,372, and of the burgh, £6,830, in 1881 the population was 3,009, and in 1891, 2,818; of this number the town possessed 2,080; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 1,632.

The number of electors on the parla-mentary register in 1898 was 263.
 Inver and Inver-Skinnerston form a village principally in Tain parish but partly in that of Tarbat; the population in 1891 was 352.

TARBAT is a small parish and village, in the extreme north-easterly part of the county, forming a peninsula 7 miles by 3 between the Moray and Dornoch Firths, and contains, besides its own kirktown, the village of Portmahomack and part of that of Inver; it is in the poor combination of Easter Ross and the small debt court district of Tain. The extreme northerly point of the peninsula is Tarbat Ness, on which there is a lighthouse. Fearn station on the Dingwall and Thurso section of the Highland railway is 8 miles south-west of the kirktown. The trustees of the late R. B. E. Macleod, of Cadboll (d. 1888), and Maj. William Hugh Eric Murray J.P. of Geanies, are the principal landowners. The area is 5,787 acres; rateable value £6,511; the population in 1881 was 1,878, and in 1891, 1763.

ULLAPOOL, a seaport and fishing village on the west of the county, is also a quoad sacra and parliamentary parish, erected from the civil parish of Lochbroom; it is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, but justice of the peace courts are held in the village, which is 61 miles west-by-north from Inverness, 45 north-west from Dingwall and 30 north-east from Poolewe; it is situated on the north shore of Loch Broom, about 5 miles from the mouth, and is 32 miles north-west from Garve station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway. It was begun under the auspices of the British Fishery Society in 1788, and has gradually increased since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay. Steamers sail regularly to Stornoway, in Lewis, and to Glasgow. There is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited in the village. The herring fishery is the main dependence of its inhabitants: shoals of this fish appear on the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they do not enter the lochs and arms of the sea as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for and great preparations made to profit by them; when the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season, is attended from all parts of the east and west coast by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance. The number of fishing boats registered in 1898 as belonging to this port was 99, aggregating 375 tons and employing 357 hands. The late Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of Donald Matheson esq. of Lews Castle, Stornoway, and is visited in summer by sportsmen from all parts to enjoy the fishing and shooting. There are two hotels, the "Royal" and "Caledonian," the former having a small grouse shooting box attached, and visitors have the privilege of free trout fishing on the river Ullapool. The Drill Hall is also used for meetings. The population of the village was 868 in 1891, and 897 in 1881, and that of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 2,423.

court district of Dingwall, and is 2 miles east from Dingwall; there is a station at Conon in the parish, about 5 miles south from the church, on the Highland line. The parish, which is 10 miles long by 3 broad, is on the south-east shore of the Cromarty Firth, and is bounded on the east by Knockbain and Rosolis, on the north-east by Fodderty and the Cromarty Firth, and on the south by Killearnan. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 28, that part of Urquhart formerly in Nairnshire has been transferred to this county. Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie bart. J.P. of Gairloch, of Culloden, James A. Jamieson esq., and George Dalziel esq. of Edinburgh, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 13,581 acres; rateable value, £9,528; the population in 1881 was 2,525, and in 1891 was 2,328.

Conon Bridge, Alcaig, Culbokie, Duncans-town and Newton-of-Perintosh are small villages in this parish. The population of Conon Bridge in 1891 was 358.

URRAY is an extensive parish, in the small debt court district of Dingwall; it is 15 miles in length and 9 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by Inverness-shire, on the west by Kintail and Lochalsh, north by Contin and Fodderty, and east by Urquhart and Killearnan. The church stands on the road from Inverness and Beauly to Dingwall, and is about 3 miles west from Muir-of-Ord station on the Highland railway, about 5 south from Dingwall and $\frac{3}{4}$ north from Beauly. The rivers Orrin and Meig both have their source in the western part of the parish, and are confluent with the Strath Gairne at its eastern extremity. Scour Raddh Mountain, 3,254 feet high, is on the Inverness-shire border, and Scour Vullin in the northern part of the parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 63, parts of Contin and Fodderty in this county and of Kilmorack parish in Inverness-shire have been transferred to Urray. John Stirling esq. D.L., J.P. of Fairburn; Col. James Alexander Francis H. Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seafort; James Evan Bruce Baillie esq. M.P., J.P. of Dochfour, and the trustees of the late George A. Gillanders, of Highfield, are the principal landowners. The area previous to the alteration of the boundary was 72,640 acres; rateable value of present area, £13,557; in 1891 the population was 2,283.

Muir-of-Ord is a considerable village in this parish, with a station on the Highland railway, from which is a branch line to Fortrose.

ROXBURGHSHIRE.

THIS county, lying on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded on the north-east, east and south-east by the county of Northumberland and by a small corner of Cumberland, south and south-west by Dumfriesshire, west by Selkirk and Edinburghshire and north by Berwickshire; the shape of the county is extremely irregular, and it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh upwards of 40 miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about 30 miles. The area of the shire contains 669 square miles, or 428,527 acres, about one half of which is brought into cultivation. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviotdale, being that division drained by the Teviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 500 square miles. Liddesdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the Alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles. The population in 1891 consisted of 25,010 males and 28,731 females; total, 53,741, and in 1881 a total of 53,442. The inhabited houses in 1891 were 10,906, and in 1881, 10,389. In size Roxburgh is the thirteenth, and in population the sixteenth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History &c.—The earlier traditions assign this part of Calcedonia to the Gadeni and Ottadini, and after being occupied by the Romans, as remains of forts, camps and roads show, from A.D. 79 to 410, it fell into the joint possession of the Strathclyde Britons, on the west, and the Bernicians on the east, to whom succeeded in 573 the kings of Northumbria, then embracing the country between the Forth and Humber and across from the German Ocean to the Wigtownshire coast; to this period belongs St. Basil, the head of the monastery at Old Melrose, after whom the town of St. Boswells is named. This county shared the shifting fate of the Northumbrian kingdom up to 954, when it was reduced to an earldom, and in the next century Malcolm Canannor got back the present border counties for Scotland, and in or about 1157, under Malcolm IV. the border line was definitely settled, and from that time forward this border county had to bear the burden of the various disputes between the sovereigns of the two kingdoms. In 1215 John burnt Roxburgh, and in 1292 the English court of King's Bench sat at Roxburgh, and early in the 13th century, Edward II. held court in the same town and a little later the English burnt Dryburgh abbey; in 1460 Roxburgh, which had been held by the English for 50 years, was captured by the Scots and dismantled. In 1566 Queen Mary held a court at Jedburgh and rode thence to Hermitage Castle to see her favourite, Earl Bothwell. In 1715 the Highlanders held Kelso for a few days on their way into England, and in 1746 Prince Charles stayed a night at Kelso. The district is intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and another class of antiquities belonging to the county are towers or castles; among them the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh and Hermitage Castle (in Liddesdale). The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose and Kelso.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The southern part of Roxburghshire is very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat. The following are the principal hills, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea:—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Auchopocairn, 2,382; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Tudhope Fell, 1,830; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruberslaw, 1,392; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnan, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the county is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile; in some parts a rich loam, in others, gravel and clay; the heavy clayey soil occupying the higher grounds, while loam occurs near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddesdale there is much mossy land. It has been ascertained that so early as the 12th century the district produced great quantities of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress made in this branch of commerce. Under the intelligent monks the agriculture of the county arrived at considerable perfection; and they introduced the knowledge of horticulture. Apples and pears are now extensively cultivated in the orchards of Melrose, Jedburgh and Kelso. Excellent crops of wheat, barley and oats are now grown, as are also potatoes, peas, beans and turnips, the latter serving as food for the great numbers of sheep and cattle that are reared, and for the disposal of which large stock sales are held at Hawick, Kelso and Newtown St. Boswells. The chief crops in 1898, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain" are: oats, 29,540 acres; barley or bere, 12,379; wheat, 779, the total corn crops being 42,911 acres; turnips and swedes, 21,782 acres; potatoes, 1,295; cabbage &c, 665; total green crops, 24,104; hay, 15,206 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 45,388 acres; permanent pasture, 52,010 acres, the total area of land and water being 428,527 acres; heath and mountain land, 219,716 acres; woods, 15,528, and plantations, 757. The live stock comprised 3,740 horses, used solely for agriculture, and brood mares; unbroken horses, 545; cows and heifers, in milk or in calf, 4,582; other cattle, 13,518; ewes kept for breeding, 208,073; other sheep, 329,834; sows kept for breeding, 559; other pigs, 2,805.

The mineralogy is neither valuable nor varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770 coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the borders of Northumberland, but though wrought for some time it was ultimately abandoned; another seam was subsequently found near the south-eastern portion of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district. Various attempts have been made to find coal in different places in the county, but the inhabitants are still supplied from Dumfriesshire, Edinburghshire, or Northumberland. The only minerals raised in 1897 were basalt (11,142 tons) and sandstone (1,485 tons). The manufactures of Roxburghshire do not vary much. The staple of the county is the woollen trade, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh and Kelso, where blankets, blanket, tartans, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn, and hosiery are extensively produced. The salmon fisheries of the Tweed are of consequence, and yield handsome rents.

Rivers and Railways.—The principal streams of Roxburghshire are as follows:—the Tweed, which enters the county near the influx of the Etrick and winds through the vales of Melrose and Kelso, and in a course of 30 miles receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Teviot, and the Eden. The Teviot, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelso, after passing through a vale to which it gives name, and in a course of from 30 to 40 miles receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam, and the Kealie waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddle rises in and runs through the parish of Castletown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of 4 or 5 miles forms the boundary with England. The streams tributary to the Liddle are the Hermitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope, and the Blackburn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers rise in this county, and entering England, fall into the sea at Tyne-mouth and Coquet Isle. The lochs are small and few in number, the principal being Yetholm Loch, which is about a mile and a half in circumference. The railway system is in the hands of the North British company, and comprises a line from Carlisle, which entering the county at Kershopefoot station, passes through Hawick and St. Boswells, and leaves the county at Bowland station, a little south-west of Lauder, on the Waverley route to Edinburgh; this has branches from Riccarton Junction to Sangulfre, and thence to Hexham and Newcastle; from St. Boswells to Kelso, via Roxburgh, from which place a branch goes to Jedburgh; a second branch goes from St. Boswells to Earliston, Duns and Berwick, and a line from Melrose to Falkirk; and the North-Eastern railway has a branch from Berwick-on-Tweed, via Coldstream, to join the North British at Kelso.

Division, Representation &c.—The county comprises 30 civil parishes, and has 35 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of 2 others, all contained in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale and presbyteries of Kelso, Jedburgh, Earliston and Selkirk, except Castletown, which is in Langholm presbytery synod of Dumfriesshire; it contains only one royal burgh—Jedburgh—which, previous to the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder in returning a member to Parliament, but was then merged in the county. The parliamentary constituency for 1898 numbered (including Jedburgh) 6,001. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £440,946.

ANCRUM is a parish, in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district, 5 miles in length by 5 broad, and bounded on the south-east for about 5 miles by the river Teviot, west by Minto and Lilliesleaf, north by St. Boswells and north-east by Maxton and Roxburgh. The village is pleasantly seated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Jedfoot Bridge station on the Roxburgh and Jedburgh branch, 4 east from Belses station on the St. Boswells and Hawick section of the North British railway, 11 south-west from Kelso, 11 north-east from Hawick and 4 north-west from Jedburgh, at a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of poet Thomson, author of "The Seasons;" one of the caves just mentioned is still pointed out, in which, it is said, he frequently retired to indulge in his reveries, and on that account is called "Thomson's Cave." Wm. Buchan M.D. the celebrated author of "Domestic Medicine," issued in 1770, and other medical works, was born in this village in 1729, and died 25 Feb. 1805. Part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are discernible. Monteviot House, situated in a large park, is the residence of the Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C., LL.D. Chesters is the residence of Mrs. T. E. Ogilvie; Kirklands, of Mrs. A. Gordon Ogilvie. Ancrum House, the residence of Mr. William Monteath Scott hart, D.L., J.P. stands in a delightful position, and commands some picturesque prospects. Sir William M. Scott hart is lord of the manor, and Sir George Brisbane Douglas D.L., J.P. of Springwood park, Kelso, and the Marquess of Lothian are the principal landowners. The population of the parish in 1891 was 1,241; acreage, 10,295; rateable value, £10,856.

Longnewton is a hamlet in this parish. Post, M. O., T. O., T. M. O., Express Delivery, Parcel Post, S. B. & Annuity & Insurance Office (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Roxburghshire added); Miss Jane Black, post-mistress. Deliveries, 7.20 & 10.20 a.m.; dispatches, 6.50 a.m. & 2.30 & 4.30 p.m.

BOWDEN is a parish, in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district of Melrose; it is about 5 miles from north to south and from $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 from east to west, and is bounded on the west by Selkirkshire, north by Melrose, east by St. Roxwells and south by Lilliesleaf. The village stands in a low situation, through which a rivulet passes to the Tweed, and is a mile and a half from St. Boswells Railway station on the North British railway and 3 south from Melrose. The parish comprises a portion of the Eldon hills, from which the land gently declines in well cultivated and enclosed fields. Vestiges of a Roman military road, and of some stations or encampments, may be traced in this district, and at Holydean are remains of the ancient fortified residence of the Dukes of Roxburgh. A Public Hall was erected here in 1896 for meetings, concerts, &c. Midholm, or Midlem, is a small village in Bowden parish, pleasantly situated on rising ground, 4 miles south-east from Selkirk. Acreage of Bowden parish, 7,668; rateable value, £6,961; population in 1881, 769, and in 1891, 694.

NEW CASTLETON is a modern village in a large and mountainous parish formerly known by the name of 'Castletown,' but more generally by the popular title of 'Liddesdale,' being in the vale of the Liddle water, and in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district. The village owes its rise to Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.P. 1746-1812, and has superseded the old village which remains a little further up the vale; it consists principally of two long streets of houses, occupying a haugh on the right bank of the Liddle in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district and on the road which proceeds up Liddesdale; the station here, on the Riddings Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway, is 2½ miles south-west from Jedburgh, 20 south from Hawick, and 10 north-east from Canonbie. In the parish there are so three stations on the North British railway, one at Steele, Road, 5 miles north from New Castleton, another at Riccarton Junction, 7 miles north, where the line from Newcastle-on-Tyne joins the Edinburgh section, and a third at Saughtree. The parish is upwards of 18 miles in length by 14 in breadth in the north, but only 3 miles at its extreme south point; it is bounded on the west by Dumfriesshire, east by Cumberland and Northumberland, and north by Southdean, Hobbkirk, Cavers and Teviothead. The northern part is mountainous and bleak, but affords good pasture for sheep. On the east, near the head of the parish, rise the rivers Tyne and Liddle, in the midst of a vast bog, called 'Dead Water,' on account of its stagnant appearance. Through the centre runs the Hermitage, a feeder of the Liddle. Mineral springs, which are of considerable repute for their medicinal properties, exist at Flat, Lawston, Thorles Hope and Tweeden, the last of which exhibits the various stages of the petrifying process. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. In the parish are four mountains, viz:—Roan Fell, 1,862 feet, Din Fell, 1,735 feet, Cooms Fell, 1,609 feet, and Tinnis Hill, 1,326 feet high. Besides the places of worship, a mission hall was built in 1888, at a cost of about £1 100, raised by public subscription. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and many castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the 13th century, by Comyn, Earl of Monteith, and one of the largest fortresses on the border. It has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch, and during this operation several small pieces of cannon were found, and a gold ring evidently of very old manufacture, bearing the inscription 'In Broodrie Lin Amite.' There is a branch of the British Linen Co. Bank in the village. The Liddesdale Unionist Club, in South Hermitage street is a fine building of stone, erected in 1898 by the Duke of Buccleuch, and comprises reading, card and billiard rooms (John Brown, sec.). Fairs are held in April, May, September and November; some of them are for hiring servants. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 67,858; rateable value, £23,518, and in 1881 it had a population of 2,256, and in 1891, 2,023, of which the village contained 820.

CAVERS is a parish in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district; it is of very irregular figure, and is about 13 miles long by about 2½ to 3½ broad, bounded on the west by Teviothead and Hawick, north-west by Minto, east by Jedburgh and Hobbkirk, and south by Castleton. The church is about 5 miles east from Hawick station on the North British railway. Shankend station on the Riccarton Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway is in the southern part of the parish, near the station the line crossing the Longside brook by a viaduct. Maiden Paps Mountain, 1,677 feet high, is at the southern extremity of the parish. Cavers House, situated in a small park, is the property of Captain Edward Palmer Douglas J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner, but is now the residence of John Fyfe Jameson esq. The area of Cavers with Kirkton is 25,056; rateable value of Cavers, including Kirkton and Denholm, £19,019; the population in 1881 was 1,318, and in 1891, 920.

Denholm is a small village in the parish of Cavers, 1¼ miles south-west from Hassenden station on the Hawick and Melrose and Kelso sections of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Jedburgh, and 5 north-east from Hawick, pleasantly seated on a small plateau, shelving abruptly to the right bank of the Teviot, which is here crossed by a stone bridge erected in 1861. The village was much improved some years since, at a considerable expense, by the late James Douglas esq. of Cavers. There is a subscription library in the village, and a horticultural society was formed in 1849. John Leyden M.D. physician and poet, was born here in 1775, and a monument has been erected to him in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower declines into rich arable fields. In 1881 the population of Denholm was 592, and in 1891, 475.

Kirkton or Kirktown, formerly a parish, has been, under the provisions of the 'Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894 (57 and 58 Vict. c. 53), added for civil purposes to Cavers, but still remains a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes. It is 3 miles south-east from Hawick, and is in Hawick small debt court district. Sir William F. A. Elliott bart. of Stobs Castle and Capt. Edward P. Douglas are the principal landowners.

EDNAM (or Edeuham) is a parish, in Kelso poor combination, in the small debt court district of Kelso, bounded on the north-east by Berwickshire, south-east by Sprouston, south-west by Kelso and north-west by Stichill. The village is pleasantly seated on the small river Eden, about 3 miles north-east from Kelso station on the North British railway. It is celebrated as the birthplace, 11 Sept. 1700, of the poet

James Thomson, author of "The Seasons," his father having been incumbent of the parish; he was educated in Jedburgh for the church, but came to London in 1725 and published the poem "Winter," which was succeeded by "Sommer" in 1727, by "Spring" in 1728, and in 1730 by "Autumn," and among other works was the "Castle of Indolence;" he died in 1748; a monument erected to the poet stands on an eminence near the village, and there is also one in Westminster-Abbey. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is exceedingly well cultivated and enclosed. Hendersyde Park is the residence of Sir Richard John Waldie-Griffith bart. D.L., J.P. The Earl of Dudley, who is lord of the manor, and Sir Richard W. A. Macfarlane-Grieve are the principal landowners. The area is 3,849 acres; rateable value, £6,229; population in 1881, 613, and in 1891, 581.

GALASHIELLS, a parliamentary burgh and parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred wholly into Selkirkshire.

HAWICK.

HAWICK is a manufacturing town, a free burgh of barony, police and parliamentary burgh, head of a poor combination and parish, 50 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Kelso, 11 south from Selkirk and 45 north from Carlisle, on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley route of the North British railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. This burgh, together with Galashiels and Selkirk, forms the Hawick parliamentary district, constituted in 1868, and returning one member. The town is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot rivers; by the former stream it is divided into two parts, which are connected by three stone bridges. The village of Wilton, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included within the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one re-erected in 1865, and several foot bridges. From its approximate position to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt; one of the most destructive occurred in 1570, when it was set fire to by the English under Sir Thomas Ratcliffe K.G. 3rd Earl of Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets and minor thoroughfares extending from it.

The environs of Hawick are much admired, the banks of the Teviot being extremely picturesque and delightful. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conduced to the increase of the population.

The town is generally well paved and lighted; the water supply was in 1865 considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot 5 miles above the town, and this was supplemented in 1881 by a supply from Dodburn in the same locality, at a total cost of about £32,000. A thorough system of drainage has since been carried out at a cost of £28,000. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period; but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1537 by James Douglas, 7th baron of Drumlanrig, confirming to the burghesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed; and in the month of May, 1545, this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary. Under these grants the burghesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two bailies and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all the municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing town council, made application to Parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property. The town is now divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, 4 bailies, a chamberlain, a treasurer and town clerk, and besides acting as custodiers of the burgh property, exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and bailies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient police force is established, and a court for petty offences is held daily; the justice of peace court being held as required, and a sheriff's court is held weekly for the disposal of civil and criminal cases. The Town Hall and Municipal Buildings were rebuilt in 1885-7, at a cost of £15,000, and include a Free Library and Reading Room, supplied with London and provincial papers, the Free Libraries Act having been adopted here in 1878. The Buccleuch Memorial Science and Art Institute was built by public subscription in 1886, at a cost of about £3,000, including a grant of £800 from the Science and Art Department; it includes one Museum of the Archaeological Society, containing memorials of the ancient history of the borders and other antiquarian relics and curiosities. The Exchange is a large and handsome building, erected in 1865. A combination poorhouse was built in 1857, at a cost of £4,000, to hold about 130 inmates. There are two Masonic Halls in the burgh: Lodge St. John's, No. 111, which received its charter in 1763, and Lodge St. James's, No. 424, which had its charter granted in 1863, and occupies a new hall in Union street. The Teviotdale farmers' club, or agricultural society, was established in 1859. There is also the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1835, which holds an annual exhibition of live stock. Four banking agencies are in the town, namely, the British Linen Company Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. One of the principal hotels here, called "The Tower," in the Market place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not destroyed by the forces of Lord Sussex; at a later period it was the frequent residence of Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and wife of James, Duke of Monmouth K.G. executed in 1685.

Hawick ranks as one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the production of both the town enjoys a fair reputation. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock every Monday, and at the special sales during the summer as many as 200,000 to 250,000 lambs are occasionally sold. The fairs are held on the first Thursday in March, the 17th of May, the 21st of September and the 8th of November; any of these days happening on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday. A tryst is likewise held in October, at which horses are exposed for sale; and there is a wool fair held on the first Thursday after St. Boswell's fair in July. The town is noted for its great annual festival known as "the common riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries; according to tradition, some young men of the town, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), having surprised a party of morraguing English during the night, about 2 miles below the town, and slain the greater part of them, took possession of their colour. A facsimile of this colour or ensign is now borne by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the occasion and dubbed with the title of "cornet," who accompanies the authorities in process on round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for the valour displayed in obtaining the standard. The estate known as Wilton Lodge was purchased by the town council and laid out as a public park at a cost of £14,000; it was opened in May, 1890. Stobs Castle is the property of Sir William Francis Augustus Elliott bart. D.L., J.P. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Hawick parish, now including Wilton parish, comprises an area of 14,873 acres; rateable value: burgh, £75,197; landward, £15,543; the population of the civil parish, including Wilton, in 1891 was 20,546, and of the ecclesiastical, 5,619; of the wards—first or North High street, 4,056; second or South High street, 4,731; third or Slitrig, 1,835; fourth or Teviot, 4,954; and fifth or Wilton, 3,623; total, 19,204; of the parliamentary group of boroughs—Galashiels, 17,252; Hawick, 19,204, and Selkirk, 5,788; total, 42,244.

The number of electors on the Hawick parliamentary register in 1893 was 2,818, and Hawick District of Burghs, 6,253.

Wilton, which forms part of the burgh, has now, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," been amalgamated for civil purposes with Hawick.

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the county town, the seat of a presbytery, the head of a poor combination and a parish, 53 miles south-east from Edinburgh (by Lander), 10 south-by-west from Kelso, the same distance north-east from Hawick and 12 north from the English border: a branch of the North British railway from Roxburgh terminates here after crossing the Jed, and has two stations, one near the river called Jedfoot Bridge, and the other in Jedburgh, which is situated on the left bank of the Jed, the name of which river, with "werth," the Saxon name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of "Jedeworth," or "Jedworth"; in the course of time it became perverted to its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained by pronouncing it "Jeddart," or "Jethart," which are almost exclusively used by the common people. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 123, a part of Oxnam parish has been transferred to Jedburgh and part of the latter parish annexed to Oxnam. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with excellent water. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved, and many buildings have been erected. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedence, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a HOWNAM is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and Jedburgh small debt court district, and is situate amongst the Cheviot hills, bounded on the south by the county of Northumberland, on the east and north by Morebattle, and on the west by Eckford, Jedburgh and Oxnam. The Roman road, Watling street, passes along the western extremity of the parish. Hownam village is 10 miles south-east from Jedburgh terminal station on a branch from Roxburgh, on the North British railway, and 12 south-south-east from Kelso. Capt. Bobt. Scott-Kerr, of Chatto, is the lord of the manor. The Duke of Roxburghe, Mrs. A. F. S.

Dixon, of Chatto, and Alexander Sholto Douglas esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 15,074; rateable value, £5,971; population in 1881, 263, and in 1891, 223. Post Office; James Cuthbert, postmaster. Letters received through Kelso. Delivery, 1.25 p.m.; dispatch, 2.40 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest telegraph & money order office is at Morebattle, 4 miles distant. Parish Council, Jas. council elected by the constituents resident within the royalty. The lords justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk), generally in April and September, and the sheriff holds a court on Thursday for the dispatch of civil business, and a small debt court and the ordinary sheriff court is held on the same day; the justices of the peace hold their court on the first Tuesday in every month, and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh formerly joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lander in returning one member to Parliament, but under the "Redistribution Act, 1885," it is now merged in the county. The Town Hall, a commodious edifice, built in 1811, was destroyed by fire Oct. 17, 1898. The Gaol and Bridewell, designated the "Castle," from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress, though no longer used as a prison, is a good embattled structure, and from its elevated situation affords a delightful view. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings &c. is carried on to a large extent, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. Considerable trade is derived from the orchards and gardens that surround the town. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March, 16th May if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, first Tuesday after 26th May, 20th July (or two days after St. Boswell's), 20th August if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, 25th September, and servants' hiring first Tuesday in November. Golf links were opened near the town in October, 1893; the course is a nine-hole one and extends over a mile and a half.

Jedburgh Abbey, the principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town, standing between the houses and the river, was founded for canons regular by David I. about the year 1118 or 1147; although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnitude and magnificence; the principal parts now remaining are the nave of nine bays, 130 feet long, nearly the whole of the choir, with the tower on the south aisle, the centre tower 90 feet in height, and the north transept, which is the burial place for the Kerr family, Barons Jedburgh and Marquesses of Lothian; the west front is very lofty, divided into three by pilaster buttresses, the great door being round-headed and deeply recessed; above is a two-light Pointed window, a marigold window being in the gable; in February, 1286, Alexander III. was married here to his 2nd wife, Yolande, daughter of the Count de Dreux; at various periods the buildings have suffered by fire in the many conflicts of early times, and in 1551 they were reduced entirely to ruin; several years since the structure received considerable repairs, judiciously conducted as not to interfere with or alter the original design of the structure, which is of Gothic and Norman order. Harttrigg House, in a large park, is the seat of Lord Stratheden and Campbell J.P. The Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C. is the principal landowner in the parish. Jedburgh parish comprises an area of 22,535 acres; rateable value, landward, £19,430; burghal, £15,060; the population in 1881 was returned at 5,147, and in 1891, 4,814, and the town 3,406 of that number.

KELSO is a burgh of barony, police burgh, market town, the head of a poor combination and parish, 52 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 10 north-north-east from Jedburgh, 23 south-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 north-by-east from Carlisle and 6 west from the English border; it is connected with the North British railway from Hawick and Melrose and the North-Eastern railway from Newcastle and Berwick, by branches which approach within a mile of the town; it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed and opposite to the confluence of that river with the Teviot, and is surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is a place of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history; its border situation subjected it to the almost continual incursions of enemies, resulting in several desolating conflagrations: the town consists of a spacious central square, from which diverge four principal streets. The bridge which crosses the Tweed was built in the beginning of the present century, at a cost of about £18,000, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo Bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a copy; it consists of five arches of equal span. About 200 yards above it occurs the confluence of the Tweed and Teviot. The town is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with spring and river water. The government is vested in a senior and two junior magistrates and a body of commissioners of police, who derive their powers from the Scotch Burgh Police Act. The Town Hall, on the east side of the square, erected in 1816, contains a portrait of an ancestor of the Duke of Roxburgh: in this hall periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace and magistrates, as are also the meetings of the commissioners of police: on the ground floor is a large enclosed piazza, which on market days is used by the farmers and others attending the market. In the Wood market a Corn Exchange has been erected, which has proved of service to the farmers and merchants. The literary institutions include several libraries and two news and reading rooms, an association entitled the Tweedside Physical and Antiquarian Society, and several benefit societies. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive manure and olea factory, an iron foundry, and carriage building and fishing tackle works; there are also many corn mills in the neighbourhood. The domestic trade of Kelso is well supported, and many of the shops are well stocked. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, and in the winter months for store cattle, is held on Friday, and a market for fat cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight, on Monday. An annual fair and also the annual show of the Border Union Agricultural Society takes place on the 5th of August. There are four banks, branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Company Bank. The principal hotel is the "Cross Keys." Two newspapers are published in Kelso, under the titles of the "Kelso Mail" (established in 1797), and the "Kelso Chronicle" (in 1832). Among the several benevolent institutions supported by the inhabitants is the Dispensary, founded in 1777, which has been reorganised, the scheme for extending its usefulness including the employment of a staff of nurses for the treatment of poor persons either within the institution or at their own homes; there is also a society for educating poor children. At the east end of the town s Sheddin Park, presented to the inhabitants by Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House, in memory of her nephew, who perished in the search for Sir John Franklin. Steeplechases are held in the spring, they being superior to any meetings of the kind in Scotland: the course is about a mile to the northward: on it s a stand on the model of that at Doncaster. On the north bank of the Tweed is Floors Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburgh, originally erected in 1718, and surrounded by a noble park. On the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park, the beautiful seat of Sir George Brisbane Douglas bart. D.L., J.P. In the centre may be seen the ancient border castle of Roxburgh, with the Eldon Hills in the distance. Eden Hall is the seat of Col. Thomas Alford Houstoun-Boswall-Preston.

The venerable remains of Kelso Abbey are entirely of the Transition Norman style, of which it is a splendid specimen: the mitred abbey of S.S. Mary and John the Evangelist, was founded by David I. in 1128, and exhibits the massiveness of Norman construction: the existing portion consists of the northern part of the west front, the transept, in more perfect condition, 76 feet by 23 feet, two bays of the choir and two sides of the central tower, which is 91 feet high and 23 feet square: the triforium and clerestory form continuous Norman arcades, supported by arches, these resting on heavy, low pillars, 7 feet in diameter: during the repairs of this monument of an ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been, when perfect, about 3 feet in diameter and one ton and a half in weight: Earl Henry of Northumberland, the founder's son, was buried here in 1152; James III. was crowned in the abbey 10 Aug. 1460, but in 1545 it was burnt by Sir Edw. Seymour, Earl of Hertford, and again burnt by Lord Hunsdon in 1570. The Highlanders under Macintosh spent a night in Kelso, and here proclaimed King James in 1715. Prince Charles Edward passed through the town in 1745. The Duke of Roxburgh is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 5,384; rateable value, landward, £9,170; burghal, £24,348; population in 1881, 5,235, and in 1891, 4,730, of which the burgh contained 4,184; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 4,662.

LINTON is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, extending 9 miles in length by 3 in breadth, bounded by Sprouston on the north, Northumberland on the east, Eckford on the west and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south. It is separated from the latter parish by the Knie. Besides that stream it has a small loch, which abounds with trout and eels. The village is about 5 miles east from Kirkbank railway station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, about the same distance from Kelso station, and 10 north-east from Jedburgh. The church, beautifully seated on a high sand mound, is an ancient edifice, remodelled internally; above the door is an old carving of the legend of the "Worm of Wormington." Robt. Hy. Elliot esq. D.L., J.P. of Clifton Park, is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 6,393; rateable value, £5,389; population in 1881, 643, and in 1891, 468.

MAXTON is a parish on the road between Roxburgh and St. Boswells, in Jedburgh poor combination and Duns small debt court district; it is about 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and lies in a rich agricultural district, well enclosed and planted, and is bounded on the south-west by the Roman road Watling, which separates it from Ancrum, north by the river Tweed, which divides it from Berwickshire, and east and south-east by Roxburgh. In the village is a station on the Roxburgh and St. Boswells section of the North British railway, 6 miles west from Roxburgh and about 1 from St. Boswells church. At Rutherford, a small hamlet in the parish, is also a station on the same branch, 3 miles east from Maxton. The parish church, which is the burial place of the Kers, of Littledean, has a Norman doorway at the west end. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile distant, are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kers. At Lilliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought the famous battle between the Scots under Angus Arran and Scott of Buccleuch, and the English under Sir Ralph Evers and Sir Brian Labour, early in 1545, when the latter were totally routed with the loss of a thousand men slain and made prisoners. About ½ a mile north-east from Rutherford station is a rocky height overhanging the Tweed, and known as "Ringley Hall," which was often used as a camp in the time of border feuds, by the hostile parties on both sides. Lieut.-Col. Sir William George Herbert Taylor Ramsay Fairfax bart. D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 4,422; rateable value, £8,124; population in 1881, 426, and in 1891, 473. Letters received through Newtown St. Boswells at 9 a.m. Wall Letter Box cleared at 10.50 a.m.

MELROSE.

MELROSE is a police burgh and parish in Galashiels poor combination, bounded on the east by the Leader water, a feeder of the river Tweed; the town, a small and ancient place, is 36 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Jedburgh, 7 north-east from Selkirk and 4 south-east from Galashiels, delightfully situated at the foot of the Eildon Hills, with a station on the North British railway. The town is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets leading from the corners: in the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey; some of the older houses have incorporated in their walls portions of stone carving, that once undoubtedly formed part of the superb abbey for which the place is so celebrated. The town is on the wooded south bank of the Tweed, and about 2 miles west receives the Allan and Gala waters. Buckholm Hill, 1,064 feet high, is in the parish. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality, and afterwards a free burgh of barony. In the beginning of 1895 it was formed into a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," including the village of Darnick, which joins Melrose on the west. It is governed by nine commissioners, including a provost and two bailies. A sheriff's small debt court is held four times a year, on the last Fridays of March, June, September and December. A justice of peace court is held as occasion demands. The Corn Exchange, in the Market place, contains an elegant hall, holding 500 people. There are four hotels and posting houses in the town, namely, the Abbey, the George, the Station and the King's Arms. A large pond for skating has been constructed at the west end of the town. The Ormiston Institute, erected out of a sum of £4,000 bequeathed by Mr. Charles W. Ormiston, of Melrose, comprises a library, containing about 600 volumes, reading and smoking rooms and a billiard room; the cost, including the furniture, amounted to £1,700; the remainder of the capital sum is held as an endowment fund. The Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk District Lunatic Asylum, about three-quarters of a mile from the town, at the foot of the Eildon Hills, and opened in May, 1872, was erected at a cost of £67,000, and will hold between 200 and 300 patients; the building is beautifully situated, and with the grounds occupies an area of nearly 35 acres. About a mile north of Melrose, on a dry and airy site, and well sheltered from the prevailing westerly winds, is the Waverley Hydropathic Establishment: it commands a fine view to the south and east, including the three-peaked Eildon Hills, some beautiful stretches of the river Tweed, the valley of which lies open as far as Leaderfoot, and the heights of Bemersyde; Skirmish hill, on which this building stands, was the scene of one of the last border frays of the district.

Melrose Abbey, the finest and largest of the great border abbeys, was founded by King David I. in 1136, and colonised by Cistercians from Rievaulx, in Yorkshire: it was not consecrated until 1246, and lasted until 1544, when it was ruined by the Earl of Herford: after having been frequently burnt and pillaged in the many border forays, it suffered so much in 1322, when Edward II. gave it up to fire and sword, that it had to be almost rebuilt, and it is from this period that the present remains mostly date. The Great church, standing in a meadow on the south side of the Tweed, between which and the church were the cloisters and conventual buildings, was 268 feet in length, the breadth of the nave being 69 feet, including the south chapels, and the choir was 28 feet in breadth, while the transept extended 137 feet from north to south, and it had eastern aisles, but none on the west side: the principal entrance to the church seems to have been in the south transept: the existing remains consist of the south wall of the nave, or rather of the eight lateral chapels, each lighted by a fine four-light window, of which much of the tracery remains; indeed, the windows, elegant with good tracery still extant, are a feature of the ruins, which, though now roofless, have a more perfect appearance than many of their contemporaries; on the north of the nave, the wall of the aisle adjoining to the cloisters still remains, and is about half the original length of that side of the nave, and across the fourth bay, from the tower, extends the roof loft, on a somewhat heavy screen; more eastward is the western wall of the great central tower, which was 84 feet in height, rising one story above the roof, and 44 feet square, machicolated and having angle turrets: the walls of the transepts with its southern gable remain, and the great five-light window over the south doorway retains its tracery, while the doorway itself is a fine specimen of a recessed pointed arch: of the chancel of two bays a great portion of the walls remain, as well as much of the window tracery; that of the great east window being entire and a good instance of Perpendicular work: two of the flying buttresses also exist: the domestic buildings, however, have disappeared: two of the nave chapels retain their vaulting, and there is some over the altar: the clerestory is Perpendicular. The heart of Robert Bruce, and the bodies of Kings Alexander II. (1249) and Alexander III. (1286), rest here, and here likewise were buried the remains of Earl William Douglas, "the dark knght of Liddesdale" (1353), and William Douglas, who died from wounds received at Poitiers, in 1384. There is a slab of black marble over the grave of St. Waldare, the second abbot (1158). About 2 miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey of the Culdees settled in this part of the kingdom: all that remains, however, of this structure is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks around it are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river like buttresses; the situation commands a fine view of the valley of the Tweed.

Abbotsford, for many years the residence of Sir Walter Scott, and in fact created by him, lies 3 miles west from Melrose, on the south bank of the Tweed, just below its junction with the Etrick, and is now very much as Scott left it; he bought the property in 1811, probably influenced in his selection by the fact that he was himself descended from the Hallourts, of New Mains, on the same river at the other side of the parish. The house consists of a square tower (a feature which appears in so many Scottish baronial residences), to which is added a series of gable-fronted buildings, the whole presenting a fine appearance from the river: on entering by a Gothic porch, the hall, panelled with oak, is reached, and from it the broad corridor or armoury, hung round with arms, targets and trophies, collected by Sir Walter, and including many Highland relics: on either side of this corridor are the drawing and dining rooms; the former, a fine saloon, containing many cabinets and specimens of old furniture, and the latter having on its walls a good collection of pictures, including several fine portraits: the chief remaining rooms are the breakfast parlour, in an angle overlooking the Tweed and the Yarrow, having a collection of water-colour drawings; the study, a small room, with a light gallery running round it, and opening from it, the closet on one side, and on the other the library, a room 60 feet long by 50 broad, with a carved oak ceiling, and containing about 20,000 volumes. Around the house and grounds are many specimens of carved stonework, including the gate of the old Tolbooth of Edinburgh: the grounds were laid out by Sir Walter Scott, and comprise many seats placed so as to command the best views. Sir Walter died here 21 September, 1832, and was buried in the Haliiburton vault. The nearest railway station to the house is Abbotsford Ferry, on the Selkirk and Galashiels line, and the house can be viewed by permission of the present owner, the Hon. Joseph Constable-Maxwell Scott D.L., J.P. Huntlyburn House is the residence of Mrs. Sprut; Wooplax of John Murray esq. J.P.; Eildon Hall, in this parish, is the seat of the Earl of Dalkeith. Acreage of the parish, previous to alteration of the boundary, 25,794; rateable value landward, £20,846; burghal, £13,611; population of the civil parish in 1881, 4,519, and in 1891, 4,882, of which the town contained 1,432; population of ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 4,366. Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 126, parts of the parishes of Earlston and Lauder, in Berwickshire, have been transferred to Melrose.

Mattonside is a rural village, standing on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, situated 1 mile north therefrom, and with which town a communication is maintained by means of a suspension bridge, which was opened on the 26th of October, 1826: for each passenger a charge of a halfpenny was made until Whit Sunday, 1885, when the bridge was made free. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed. There is a board school in the village. Population in 1891, 288.

Darnick, a small village in Melrose parish, on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town, was made part of the burgh of Melrose in 1895. In the centre of the village stands Darnick Tower, the ancient stronghold of the lairds of Darnick, and now the residence of Andrew Grainger Heiton esq. Population in 1881, 448, and in 1891, 307.

Newstead is a small village in Melrose parish, 1 mile east therefrom, near which once stood the "Red Abbey;" population in 1891, 252.

Blainslie is a small rural village in the parish of Melrose, at its northern extremity, on the Berwickshire border, and on the road from Earlston to Lauder, 4 miles north-by-west from Earlston station on the St. Boswells and Greenlaw section of the North British railway, and about 7 miles north from the town of Melrose.

MOREBATTLE is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, about 9 miles in length with a mean breadth of 4 miles, and bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south-west, and the county of Northumberland on the south and east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kale and Bowmont run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. The village, which is becoming a summer resort, and stands near the Kale river, is 5 miles east from Kirkbank station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, 7½ south-east from Kelso, and 10 east-northeast from Jedburgh. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is "Merebotle," which signifies "the dwelling place at the marsh." The remains of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet Tower,

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, in Kello poor combination and small debt court district, and is bounded by Makerstoun and Kello on the north, Maxton on the west, by the Roman road, Watling Street on the south, and by Crailing and Eckford on the east. The village is a short distance west from Roxburgh station, on the North British railway, which is the junction of the line to Jedburgh, and 3 south from Kello. The ruins of the once famous castle of Roxburgh crown a high mound, picturesquely situated in the narrow space between the Tweed and Teviot and about 2 miles from the site of the present village. Near the castle, and between it and the Tweed, stood the old burgh of Roxburgh, which has entirely disappeared; the castle was demolished by the Scots in 1460, after they had retaken it from the English, and the burgh having lost its protection gradually decayed. In a field near the tower church are the remains of a border tower, called "Wallace's Tower," but only the lower part, consisting of a stone vaulted chamber, is now intact. This fort was burned by the Earl of Hertford in his marauding expedition of 1545. The ancient fair of St. James of Roxburgh is still held annually, on Aug. 5th, on St. James's green, close to the site of the old burgh; it is mentioned in a charter of William the Lion to the monks of Kello, and was for long the best known fair in the south of Scotland. Sunlaws, the seat of Major Robt. Scott-Kerr, is in this parish. His Grace the Duke of Roxburgh is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 7,781; rateable value, £10,822; population in 1881, 1,012, and in 1891, 954.

Heiton is a village in the parish, and is on the road from Kello to Jedburgh.

Fairnington is a district adjoining the Roman Causeway, and is owned by Henry Rutherford esq.

ST. BOSWELLS (or Lessudden) is a parish, in Melrose small debt court district, bounded on the north by the river Tweed, west by Melrose and Bowden and southeast by Ancrum and Maxton, and is 3 miles in length by from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 in breadth, beautifully enclosed, planted and cultivated. On the west rise the Eldon hills, and on the east and north the ground is undulating, the latter quarter ornamented by the fine woods of Dryburgh, separated from the village by the Tweed, which is here a beautiful river, enclosed within high banks. The village of St. Boswells, nearly in the centre of the parish, consists of one long street, running east and west from the green, and is 1 mile west from the St. Boswells station on the North British railway, 10 south-west from Kello, 9 north-north-west from Jedburgh, and 4 south-east from Melrose. Some years ago great improvements were effected in the village, and an ample supply of water is now obtained from Whiterigg Bog. The Buccleuch Arms hotel, much frequented during the hunting season, is situated on the green. Here, too, are the kennels belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch's foxhounds, which pack is the largest in the south of Scotland, and hunts the three counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk and Berwick. On the green at St. Boswells is held on the 18th of July one of the most important horse fairs in Scotland. This fair also attracts a large number of salesmen of miscellaneous goods, and it is still frequented by the direct descendants of the gipsies for the disposal of earthen, horn and tin wares. There are several seats in the parish, Maxpoffie, the seat of Lady Boyd; Benrig, of William Brownrigg Elliot esq. J.P.; Elliot House, of the Hon. George Grey Dalrymple D.L., J.P.; Maxton House, of Lt. Col. Sir William George Herbert Taylor Ramsay-Fairfax bart. D.L., J.P.; Holmes, of Daniel Norman Ritchie esq. J.P.; Lessudden House, of Mrs. Scott. Lord Polwarth, the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. Col. Sir William G. H. Taylor Ramsay-Fairfax bart. and the Hon. George Grey Dalrymple, are the chief landowners.

Acreage of the parish 3,155; rateable value, £10,184; the population in 1881 was 959, and in 1891, 962, and 564 in the village. Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; Mrs. Isabella Turnbull, postmistress. TEVIOTHEAD is a parish, in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district, 10 miles long and 8 miles broad, bounded on the north by Robertson and Hawick, Dumfriesshire on the south, on the south-east by Castleton and Cavers. The parish church is about 9 miles south-west of Hawick station on the North British railway. This is a mountainous district, and famous for its breed of Cheviot sheep. As its name implies, the source of the Teviot is here, and the Allan water, one of its tributaries, runs through the eastern part of the parish. Cauldcleugh Head mountain, 1,996 feet, and Wisp hill, 195 feet high, are in the parish, and on one of the hills stands a monument to Henry Scott Riddle, a former minister, and author of "Scotland Yet." In the churchyard here Johnnie Armstrong (mentioned in the "Tales of the Borders") and his band were hanged by James V., and about 1898 a mural tablet was erected in the churchyard to commemorate this tragedy. The parish also contains the "Fair Dodhead," the scene of the Border Ballad of that title. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. is principal landowner. Acreage, 31,458; rateable value, £7,414; the population in 1891 was 453.
Post Office; James Moodie, sub-postmaster. Delivery, 9.30 a.m.; dispatch, 1.35 p.m. Letters received through Hawick, the nearest money order & telegraph office, 9 miles distant. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid

WILTON, see HAWICK.

YETHOLM parish, in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court district of Jedburgh, is bounded on the north-east and east by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trout stream. The surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep. Situated on the western boundary is Yetholm or Primside Loch, measuring nearly a mile and a half in circumference. There are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situate on either side of the Bowmont; that on one side, called Yetholm, is 4½ miles west from Mindrum station on the Coldstream and Alnwick branch of the North Eastern railway, and about 8 south from Kelso; the other, designated Kirk-Yetholm, which is an improving place, is about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream. Yetholm is acquiring a reputation as a resort for invalids in the summer. A fine view of the vale of Bowmont is afforded from the street which runs up the hill, called "Staeorough." The fairs formerly held at the villages are now discontinued, but an annual sheep show for shepherds' packs is held in September. The parish church, an elegant edifice of black stone, with dressings of white, replaces an ancient thatched church. Colonel Andrew Gilbert Wauchope C.B., C.M.G., LL.D. of Niddrie, and the Marquess of Tweeddale K.T. of Yester House, Haddington, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,960; rateable value, £5,220; population in 1881, 1,045, and in 1891, 884, and Yetholm and Kirk-Yetholm village, 590.

SELKIRKSHIRE

IS a small county in the south of the kingdom and considered one of the border counties; it is bounded on the north by Edinburghshire and the northern part of Roxburghshire, east by this latter county, south by Dumfriesshire and west by Peeblesshire; its form is irregular and its extent is 27 miles from southwest to north-east, and 17 in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east. Its area comprehends 269 square miles, or 172,426 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 12,743 males, and 14,610 females, total, 27,353, and in 1881 a total of 25,564; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 5,385, and in 1881, 5,082. In size Selkirk stands as the twenty-sixth, and in population the twenty-eighth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This border county was formerly designated the "Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest," from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many royal charters it is entitled "The Forest," and before regular sheriffs were appointed it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. Placed as it is between the eastern portion of the kingdom, where the influence of the Earls of Northumberland prevailed, and before them of the East Anglians and kindred tribes, and the western shires, where the Dalriadans and Strathclyde Britons held sway, it was much under the control of its stronger neighbours, and has less of a history of its own than a share of that of other shires; the Romans occupied it during their stay of 350 years, but have left few traces of their presence. A stupendous work of the Romanised Britons called the "Catrail," once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the 5th century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons, belongs to a rather later period and the central position of the county placed it beyond the direct routes of armies proceeding to either the east or west coast. About 1120 David I. at that time an Earl and not having yet succeeded to the throne, founded a monastery at Selkirk, afterwards transferred to Kelso, but unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments, though it possesses a number of ruined "keeps," the seats of feudal strength.

Surface, Produce, Manufactures &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continual alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these valleys there shoot out many "cleughs" and "hopes," that run up for some distance between the heights. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now under cultivation and wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitudes, are—Ettrick Pen, 2,269; the Wisp, 1,932; Eilbank Law, 1,715; Brown Knowe, 1,718; Sauchie Law, 1,449; Hopehead, 1,897 and Black Knowe, 1,808. Great attention is paid to sheep farming and the improvement in the breed of sheep; this was stimulated by a Lord Napier, who took himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope, on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope, on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. The chief crops in 1898, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," are—oats, 5,050 acres; barley, 480; the total corn crops being 5,552 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,824 acres; potatoes, 188; total green crops, 3,164 acres; hay, 2,548 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 7,628 acres; permanent pasture, 11,131 acres; total area of land and water, 172,426 acres; mountain and heath land, 136,065; woods, 4,777; plantations, 165 acres. The live stock comprised in 1898—horses, 722; cattle, 3,428; ewes kept for breeding, 83,782; other sheep, 103,326 and pigs, 438. According to the "Mine and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1897, the only mineral raised in that year was 1,815 tons of basalt. The manufactures, for which see Selkirk and Galashiels, consist in both towns of woollens, tweeds, tartans, shawls and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins. There are also several engineering and machine making establishments.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed. The latter river, after draining Peeblesshire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, running in a deep channel of 9 miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean. The Gala cannot be counted as a river of this county; it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat Water, in Dumfriesshire, and falls into the Ettrick 2 miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being St. Mary's Loch, 13 miles southwest from Selkirk, about 3 miles long, and less than 1 in breadth, and the Loch of the Lowes, about a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile broad, lying at the head of St. Mary's Loch. The mileage of railway actually within this county is very small, consisting as it does of about 12 miles of the Edinburgh and Peebles section of the North British line from Galashiels, through the northern extremity of the county, leaving it near Hoyie, and a shore branch from Galashiels to Selkirk; this extent of railway being, however, in the centre of a system gives easy access to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Berwick-on-Tweed, Newcastle and Carlisle.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The county of Selkirk contains only six complete parishes, and a portion of one other. There is a combination poor house at Galashiels, for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh, and these two join with Hawick in sending one member to Parliament. This county joins with Peeblesshire in returning a member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1898 was 848. The valuation of the county in 1897-8 was £160,479.

CADDONFOOT is a parish in the Galashiels poor combination and presbytery and in the small debt court district of Selkirk. It was originally a quoad sacra parish, but in 1898 was formed into a civil parish by Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 33, dated Dec. 17, 1897, and emb races parts of the civil parishes of Yarrow, Galashiels, Stow, Innerleithen and Selkirk, in the North Eastern division of the county. The village is 1 mile from Clovenfords station on the Peebles branch of the North British railway, and about 4 miles south from Galashiels station on the same line. The church is a small stone building. Torwoodlee House, which stands in a small park, is the seat of Capt. James T. Pringle R.N., D.L., J.P.

who is lord of the manor. There is also a fine golf course here. Clovenfords is a small village transferred to Caddonfoot parish in 1898; here are the vineries and the orchid nurseries of Messrs. William Thomson and Sons Limited, and close by is Meikle hill, 1,387 feet in height. The population in 1891 was 723; rateable value, about £10,000.

ETTRICK is a large parish in the south-west part of the county, and in Hawick poor combination and Selkirk small debt court district; it is 13 miles long by from 2½ to 10 broad, and is bounded on the west by Peebles-shire, south by the county of Dumfriesshire, west by Roxburghshire and Kirkhope, and north by Yarrow. The Established church, which stands near the centre of the parish, on the road from Selkirk to Moffat, and near the Ettrick water, is 20 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway from Gaashiels, and 18 north-east from Moffat terminal station on a branch from Beattock on the Lockerbie line of the Caledonian railway. Francis, 10th Baron Napier and 1st Baron Ettrick was interred in the churchyard, in 1899. There is also a Free church, serving for the two parishes of Ettrick and Kirkhope. The Loch of the Lowes, about 1 mile long by about half a mile wide, is in the parish, which is also watered by several streams, the principal being the Ettrick water, a tributary of the Tweed, rising in the south-western extremity of the parish, near Ettrick Pen, and running through the centre, receiving in its course the Tema water, the Rinkle, the Tushielaw, and several other burns. The Yarrow water, in the north-west of the parish, falls into St. Mary's Loch at the northern boundary. The parish is very mountainous. The highest peaks being: Ettrick Pen, 2,263 feet; Capel Fell, 2,223; Andrewhinney Hill, 2,220; Wind Fell, 2,180; Bodesbeck Law, 2,173; Bellis Craig, 2,046; Herman Law, 2,014; Ward Law, 1,991, and Muckle Knees, 1,929. Thirlstane Castle, which stands in a park over 1 mile long by a quarter of a mile wide, and near the Ettrick water, is the seat of Lord Napier. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. who is also lord of the manor, Lord Napier and Ettrick, Lieut.-Col. B. T. G. Anderson and George Pott, esq. of Potburn, are the principal landowners.

In the northern part of this parish, at Chapelhope, a small hamlet at the head of the Loch of the Lowes, is a monument, erected to James Hogg, known as the "Ettrick Shepherd," who was born in Ettrick forest either in December, 1770, or January, 1772, and died at Altrive in the adjoining parish of Yarrow in 1835; he was first brought to notice about 1801 by Sir Walter Scott, who, in 1807, encouraged him to print a volume of his poems; this, and a prize gained from the Highland Society for an Essay on Sheep, induced him in 1810 to take up the role of author, and he published a good many poetical and prose pieces, the best being "The Queen's Wake" and "The Brownie of Bodesbeck"; this memorial consists of the figure of a border shepherd standing on a high pedestal, and at Ettrick Hall farm is another memorial, erected in 1898 by public subscription. Acreage, 42,387, rateable value, £9,053; population in 1881, 397, and in 1891, 414.

GALASHIELS.

GALASHIELS is a parliamentary burgh, market town and parish, and head of a poor combination, 31 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 18 east from Peebles, 6 north from Selkirk, 4 north-west from Melrose and 34 south-by-west from Berwick, with a station on the main line of the North British railway (Waverley route); there is also a branch line to Selkirk, and one to Inner-leithen and Peebles. It is on a kind of tableland on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. The Gala is crossed by six bridges, two being for foot passengers only. The parish of Galashiels was formed, in the early part of the 17th century, out of the two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, and was in both counties until, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), it has been placed wholly in Selkirkshire. This burgh, together with Hawick and Selkirk, forms the Hawick parliamentary district, constituted in 1868, and returning one member. It is governed by a provost, four bailies and ten councillors. The town is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than 50 years. It is composed of several streets, most of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of villas in the immediate neighbourhood, these being the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, contains the parish church manse and a few of the original dwellings, and has been much improved and enlarged by new erections. A small debt court is held in the town on the second Mondays of February, April and June, the last Monday of July, the first Monday of October and second Monday of December. The town is supplied with water by gravitation from Cadden Waters. St. Paul's Established church, in Scott crescent, is a fine edifice of red freestone, erected at a cost of £15,000, in the Gothic style, from designs by Messrs. Hay and Henderson. The Free church, erected in 1885, at a cost of about £5,000, is a building in the Early English Pointed style, with a tower and spire, from the designs of Messrs. McKissack and Rowan, architects, of Glasgow, of whinstone. The Public Hall, erected by a joint-stock company, is a handsome building in High street, with a large hall on the upper storey used for public meetings and concerts. The Drill hall of the F, G and H Companies of the 1st Roxburgh and Selkirk (The Border) Rifle Volunteers, is also well adapted for public purposes, and there are, besides, four other halls which will hold from 300 to 500 persons. The Free Library, opened October, 1874, and maintained by the rates under the "Free Libraries Act," contains at present upwards of 7,600 volumes in almost every department of literature; the reading rooms are supplied with daily, weekly and monthly newspapers and magazines, and a new reading room was opened in 1899, at a cost of £1,400, in commemoration of Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee. The principal trade of Galashiels is the manufacture of tweeds, and there are many houses engaged in it. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the Friday nearest the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trade, and conferring on matters therewith connected. Other trades are those in connection with coal, corn, timber and leather tanning. A fair is held on the third Wednesday of March and a live stock sale every alternate Wednesday. In the town are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank Limited and the British Linen Company Bank. There are three hotels and posting houses in the town, namely: "The Douglas," "Maxwell's," and "Royal." Three newspapers are published here, the "Border Advertiser," "Galashiel's Telegraph," and the "Scottish Border Record," which have a large circulation in the border counties. The Combination Poor House is at Windyknave, and contains 65 beds. A Cottage Hospital, the funds for which were raised by public subscription, was erected at Eastlands in 1894, at a cost of £2,813; it contains 14 beds and is attended by the medical men of the town. The Hospital for Contagious Diseases is also at Eastlands and contains 10 beds. The Public Park, Abbotsford road, was presented to the town by J. H. F. K. Scott esq. in 1882. Gala House, in a small park, is the seat of John Henry Francis Kinnaird Scott esq. D.L., J.P. The civil parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 8,439; gross rateable value of the parish, £75,437; the burgh, £67,392; the population in 1891 was 17,941; ecclesiastical, 7,460; in 1881 the town contained a population of 15,330, and in 1891, 11,033; police burgh, 17,252.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register, in 1898, was 2,434. Clovenfords, originally a hamlet in this parish, was transferred in 1898 to Caddofoot parish, and will be found under that heading.

INNERLEITHEN, a parish, formerly partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Peebles, has now been transferred entirely to Peebles-shire under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50).

KIRKHOPE parish, formerly part of the parish of Yarrow, from which it was disjoined in 1851, is in the presbytery of Selkirk, and in Hawick poor combination and Selkirk small debt court district; it is 9 miles long by 5 broad, and is bounded on the north-west by Yarrow, north-east by Selkirk, east by Ashkirk and Roxburghshire, and south-west by Ettrick. The Ettrick water, which in its course is fed by several burns, flows through the north-west part of the parish, which is very hilly, there being 3 eminences in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school of Ettrick Bridge End, a small village in Kirkhope, 7 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on the branch of the North British railway. Acreage, 22,724; rateable value, £6,650; population in 1881, 547, and in 1891, 500. Post & Telegraph Office, Ettrick Bridge; Miss Isabella Cleghorn, sub-postmistress. Postal orders issued here, but not paid. Delivery, 10.55 a.m.; dispatch, 11.30 a.m.

SELKIRK is an ancient town, a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish. In Galashiels poor combination, 38 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 22 east-by-south from Peebles, 12 north-north-west from Hawick, 8 south-west from Melrose, and 6 south from Galashiels, occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick. The place derives its name from a kirk established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting seat of the kings. In the oldest charter it is called "Scheleschirche," which signifies the Kirk of the Shiels or Shiellings. After the transfer to Kelso of a monastery founded here by David I. about 1113, the town around the old castle received the dignified title of "Selkirk Regis," while the village of the monks was denominated "Selkirk Abbatis." Of the Castle of Selkirk, at which David occasionally resided, little is known, and its size cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. There is a terminal station here on the branch to Galashiels, where it joins the Waverley line of the North British system. The rivers Ettrick and Yarrow form a junction about a mile and a half south-west from Selkirk, and empty their waters into the Tweed, about 2 miles north of the town. As a royal burgh, Selkirk is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, and eleven councillors, one-third of whom retire annually. The sheriff court is held on Friday. The magistrates hold criminal courts as occasion requires. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday of October, and special justice of peace courts when found necessary. The town is at present supplied with water from a well in the Mill Hough. The old Town Hall in the Market place contains the court room in which Sir Walter Scott once presided as sheriff of the county; it is now used for burgh courts, meetings of town council, police commissioners, and other public bodies. In 1870 buildings were completed for the business of the county, including a sheriff court room, and offices for sheriff clerk, procurator fiscal, and other officials. The Victoria Hall, built by public subscription at a cost of £7,400, in commemoration of Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee, and opened in 1897, is used for public meetings, concerts, &c. The old Pant and Mercat Cross, standing in the market place, was rebuilt in 1898, by public subscription, as a similar memorial. Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogues (a description of single-soled shoes); tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1745, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish 6,000 pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods—tweeds, tartans, plaids and shawls—and wool spinning and tanning. A hospital for contagious diseases was built and opened in 1899. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April and 31st October. There is also an auction mart, where sales are held for cattle &c. fortnightly on Wednesday. There are branches in the town of the British Linen Company's Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Ltd. and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is a Savings Bank. The principal inns are the "County," the "Fleece," and the "Station hotel." Three weekly newspapers are published in the town:—the "Southern Reporter," the "Saturday Advertiser," and the "Selkirk Advertiser." In the Market place is a fine monument to Sir Walter Scott, and, in High street, is another, by Andrew Currie, a native artist, to Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Poulshields, in this county, born 1771 and drowned in the Niger, 1805. Bowhill, the beautiful mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., D.L. stands near the junction of the Yarrow and Ettrick waters, in a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a small lake. Philiphaugh, an ancient estate, an existing charter of which dates from the time of Robert the Bruce, was the scene of the disastrous battle in 1645, and now the residence of William Strang Steel esq. is a beautiful castellated mansion, in a park, on the north bank of the Yarrow. The Haining, the seat of Professor A. Seth Pringle-Pattison LL.D., has a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a lake about a quarter of a mile in length. Broadmeadows, on the north bank of the Yarrow water, in a small park, is the seat of Hugh Morris Lang esq. Sunderland Hall, on the south bank of the Tweed, surrounded by grounds, is the seat of Charles Henry Scott-Plummer esq. D.L., J.P. Whitnair Hall is another seat in the parish. Newark Castle, standing near the Yarrow water, but now in ruins, was built by James II. and the royal arms, with the unicorn, are engraved on a stone in the western side. The office of keeper was latterly held by the Douglas-Scott family, dukes of Buccleuch, and when the forest of Ettrick was disparted, they obtained a grant of the castle in perpetuity. The area of the civil parish is 22,559; gross rateable value of the landward, £13,890; of the burgh, £22,714; population in 1881, 7,432, and in 1891, 7,298; of the town, 6,397; royal burgh, 5,788; police burgh, 5,662; ecclesiastical parish, 4,999.

Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), that part of Selkirk parish formerly in Roxburghshire has been added to this county.

Heatherlie is a quoad sacra parish, constituted in January, 1885, and comprises about one-third of the area of the lower part of the parish. The population in 1891 was 2,252.

STOW is an extensive parish and village partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Edinburgh, where particulars will be found.

YARROW is a large parish, in the Galashiels poor combination, and presbytery and in the small debt court district of Selkirk; it is 15 miles long by from 1½ to 7 broad, and is bounded on the west and north by Peebleshire, north-east by the river Tweed, south-east by Selkirk and Kirkhope and south by Ettrick. The established church, standing near the centre of the parish, on the road from Selkirk to Moffat and the Yarrow water, is 9 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and about the same distance south from Innerleithen station on the Galashiels and Peebles section of the same line. The parish is very picturesque, and its praises have been well sung by the "Ettrick Shepherd." St. Mary's Loch, which is about 3 miles long by half a mile broad, on the borders of Peebleshire, is a great resort for visitors in summer, and excellent accommodation can be had at the Rodono Hotel and at "Tibbie Shiels," a favourite "hoof" of Christopher North, who has immortalised it in his "Noctes Ambrosianae." The Yarrow water, which flows from St. Mary's Loch, and in its course receives several burns, runs through part of the parish, and after forming part of its south-eastern boundary, traverses the parish of Selkirk, and joins the Ettrick about 2 miles south of that town. The highest mountains in the parish are, Black Law, 2,285 feet; Blackhouse Heights, 2,213; Deer Law, 2,065; The Wias, 1,932; Minch Moor, 1,856, and Black Knoe, 1,806. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. James Henry L'Estrange Johnstone, of Alva, and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. of Traquair, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 41,046 acres; rateable value, £9,450; population in 1881, 620, and in 1891, 638. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 56 and 59, a part of Lyne and Megget parish in Peebles county has been transferred to this parish.

Megget, originally united with the parish of Lyne in Peebles-shire, was transferred by boundary order 56, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," to this parish, but was left united to its former co-parish for ecclesiastical purposes; it lies north-west of St. Mary's Loch, and had in 1891 a population of 86.

THE SHETLAND ISLES

(OR COUNTY OF SHETLAND).

THE SHETLAND, or Zetland Isles, which form a county of Scotland, are above 100 in number, twenty-eight of which only are inhabited, forming a group or islands, islets and rocks, in the Northern Ocean, 44 miles west of Bergen, in Norway, lying between 50 degs. 48 mins. 30 secs. and 60 degs. 52 mins. north latitude, and between 1 deg. 52 secs. and 1 deg. 57 mins. west longitude from London. Fair Island, one of the Shetland group, lies 25 miles south of the other islands and half way to Orkney, Sumburgh Head, the southern point of Shetland, being 100 miles north-east from Duncansbay Head, the northern point of Caithness, and 52 north-east of Dehnis Head, North Ronaldshay, the extreme north point of the Orkneys. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell (on the north), and (still further north-east) Unst; on the east of Yell lies Fetlar, which is the largest of the inferior islands, the lochs of which are famous for trout, and several of the other islands abound with seal, otter and wild fowl. The next island in point of size is Bressay; the smaller ones are Whalsay, Out Skerries, Samphray, Big Island, Mickla Roe, Papa Stour, House, Barray, Trondray, besides a great number of islets, holms and skerries. The highest land in these islands is Roeness Hill, which attains an elevation of 1,447 feet. The Hill of Voola is next in altitude, being about 1,300 feet above the level of the sea. The aggregate area is 566 square miles, or 362,615 acres. The population in 1891 was 12,190 males and 16,521 females, total, 28,711, against 29,705 in 1881, and the inhabited houses were 5,564 in 1891 and 5,544 in 1881.

Early History.—It seems probable that the Romans visited the coasts of Shetland, from the coins of that people which have been discovered—those of Galba, Vespasian, Trajan and Ailius Cæsar; and the remains of a small Roman camp are to be traced on the island of Fetlar. There seems to be little doubt these islands were first inhabited by the Scandinavians, the laws having been administered by "Udallers," who acted as a sort of petty princes, and under these chiefs and the Udal laws cultivated land was free of tax. In the year 875, Harold Harfager, or "The Fair-haired," subdued these islands, and gave them to Connt Sigurd, who was the first Earl of Orkney, from whom sprang the true Norwegian dynasties of the Earls of Orkney and Shetland—the latter county being at first too insignificant to be included in the title, although it was included in the grant. On the cession of the Shetland Isles to the Scottish crown, the laws of the former were gradually encroached upon by the endeavours of the Scotch earls to introduce feudal subjection and seniorage in place of the ancient uld tenures. From 1468, when a marriage was concerted between the Scottish monarch, James III. and the Princess of Norway (when Orkney and Shetland were pledged to the royal husband), to the time when the two countries passed to the English crown, in the persons of Charles I. and II. and afterwards to the Earl of Morton (who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas), nothing occurs relating to the possession of Shetland that calls for any particular notice. Lord Robert Stuart, natural brother to Queen Mary, had a grant of the islands in 1565 and in 1581 was made justiciar, and in 1612 the islands were erected into a stewartry as Crown property.

Soil, Produce &c.—The general aspect is bleak and barren; and although there is but little to attract in the form of landscape in what may be called the interior of the islands—the whole of them being destitute of wood—their coast scenery presents views of a highly interesting character; and the tourist may here see wild scenery of diversified appearance and picturesque grandeur in the coast of Shetland. The peculiar breed of Shetland ponies are bred for exportation, and these small ponies, or "shelties" as they are called, traverse their way across the wastes without much difficulty. The cattle of Shetland are of a very diminutive breed, a cow weighing from two to three hundred weight upon an average; an ox from three to four, but seldom exceeding five hundred weight. A great abundance of poultry is kept on almost every farm, and small swine are numerous. The sheep are very small, but produce wool of an excellent quality, which is knitted into shawls, veils, stockings, gloves and mitts. Little attention is paid to agriculture, and the system of cultivation adopted is poor, the principal crops grown being oats, potatoes and turnips, the latter introduced early in the present century. The chief crops in 1898 as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain" are, oats, 7,387 acres; barley or bere, 1,982; the total corn crop being 9,369 acres; potatoes, 3,121 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,305; cabbage &c. 490; green crops, 4,920 acres; hay, 2,270 acres; clover, sanfoin and grasses, not for hay, 583; permanent pasture, 42,182 acres; total area of land and water, 362,615, of which 282,938 acres are mountain and heath land; there are no woods or plantations. The live stock in 1898 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 3,030; other horses, 2,682; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 7,863; other cattle, 11,330; ewes kept for breeding, 49,884; other sheep, 48,266; sows kept for breeding, 422; other pigs, 2,473. The fuel in general use is peat, the cutting and drying of which occupies diligent attention. The chief support of the Shetlander is dependent on the white fishery—herring, cod and ling abounding on the coasts; besides which many men and boys are employed every season in the Davis Straits whale fishing. Persons are also engaged in angling for the small fry of the coal fish or "gadus carbonarius"—known in Shetland by the name of "setbe." These, which swarm in myriads within the numerous creeks and sounds of this northern archipelago, first appear in May scarcely more than an inch long, and about August they become more abundant, measuring about eight inches in length, and in the early part of the following year they attain the ordinary size of the cod-fish. A profitable fishery then takes place in deep tideways, supplying the inhabitants with a portion of food and oil from the livers for light and other purposes. In 1898 there were 802 fishing boats registered at Lerwick under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, with an aggregate tonnage of 7,497, and employing 3,874 men and boys and 3,043 occasional hands, besides 42 sailing vessels of 2,466 tons (aggregate).

The Shetland Isles, or county of Shetland, comprise 12 civil parishes, comprising 17 ecclesiastical parishes in two presbyteries and one synod. The only town in this northern group is Lerwick; besides it, there are only a few villages and hamlets on the shores, of which Scalloway is the largest. The islands now pay their proportion of the land tax, and in every other respect have become subject to British laws. They are represented in Parliament as in connection with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 3,634. The valuation of the Isles in 1897-8 was £45,143.

BRESSAY is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, separated from Lerwick, the capital of the islands, by the Sound of Bressay, which is 6 miles in length, with a breadth of from 1 to 3 miles. The original parish comprised Bressay, Burru and Quarff, but in 1830, Burru and Quarff were erected into a separate parish. Previous to the Reformation, there were in Bressay three small churches or chapels, viz: St. Olla's at Gunnista, St. Mary's at Cullensbough, and St. John's at Kirkabister; the ruins of St. Olla's and St. Mary's still remain. The parish church, an ancient structure, contains two marble tablets to members of the Cameron Mouat family; the church has been enlarged, and in 1895-6 was repaired and restored, and two stained windows inserted; there are sittings for 500 persons. Bressay is well known for its bold and beautiful rock scenery, the most striking feature being the Isle of Noss, which lies due east of Bressay and is separated from it by a narrow and dangerous sound. The Noup of Noss is nearly 600 feet in height, and here innumerable birds of various kinds may be seen during the summer months, and grey eagles are occasionally found. The "Holm of Noss," a small table-land lying on the south-west is detached from the main island by a sheer gulf of 65 feet. The island belongs to Miss A. Cameron Mouat, of Gardie House. Part is rented by the Marquess of Londonderry, K.G. P.C. The area is 7,403 acres; rateable value, £1,249; the population in 1891 was 892.

Noss Island is included within this parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 94, East Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal, Papa, Quarff, Mainland and West Burra Islands have been transferred to Lerwick.

DUNROSSNESS is a parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, and embraces the quoad sacra parish of Cunningburgh with Sandwick, also Fair Isle, for which see separate headings. It forms the southern extremity of the Shetland Archipelago, and extends about 20 miles south-south-west from Lerwick. Fitful Head, 928 feet, and Sumburgh Head, 900 feet, are in this parish; the latter, 25 miles from Lerwick, is surmounted by a lighthouse, erected in 1820, by George Stevenson, at a cost of nearly £40,000; this headland is the southernmost portion of the islands, being about 100 miles north from Caithness-shire. Sumburgh House is the seat of John Bruce esq. J.P. Area, 32,131 acres; rateable value (including the above quoad sacra parishes), £4,017; population of the whole parish of Dunrossness in 1891, 3,752; population of Dunrossness ecclesiastical district in 1891, 1,638.

FAIR ISLAND, situated midway between the Orkney and Shetland Isles, 26 miles north of North Ronaldshay (Orkney) and 24 south of Sumburgh Head, the southernmost point of Shetland, has a chapel of ease in and forms part of the civil parish of Dunrossness and is in the poor combination of Zetland and the small debt court district of Lerwick. The island is about 4 miles long and 2 broad, and is the property of John Bruce esq. J.P. of Sumburgh. The area is 1,939 acres; valuation included in that of Dunrossness; the population in 1891 was 223, and in 1881, 214. The admiral's ship of the Spanish Armada, 1588, is said to have been wrecked here.

LERWICK.

LERWICK, the principal town in Shetland and the head of a poor combination, is (by steamer) 272 miles from Edinburgh 200 from Aberdeen 165 from Peterhead (Aberdeenshire), 126 from Wick, and 95 from Kirkwall, and is situated on the east coast of Mainland, the largest island of the group. It bears the name of the bay upon whose margin it is built; and that, in its turn, derives its name from a long, narrow inlet on the opposite shore of the island of Bressay, called "Lera-Voe," and remarkable for its extensive deposit of clay and sand; a projecting point at the entrance to "Lera Voe" is called "Lera-ness;" and the whole bay, including the roadstead of Bressay sound, is named "Lerwick," which signifies the "bay of clay," or "mud"—compounded of Icelandic, leir, Danish, leir (clay mud), and the Scandinavian "wick," or "vig" (an arm of the sea, an anchorage). The site of the town, comprising a lunated segment of the sea shore of nearly half a mile in length, and becoming gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coast line, presents the appearance of a perfect amphitheatre, and, when viewed from the opposite anchorage, the effect is singularly picturesque. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea shore, and numerous lanes and closes, laid out at right angles to it, lead to a spacious road on the eminence above the town. FETLAR is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, east of Yell and distant about 34 miles north-north-east of Lerwick. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 33, Yell Island has been transferred from this parish to Yell. Brough Lodge, in this parish, is the residence of Sir Arthur Thomas Bennet Robert Nicolson bart. D.L. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 9,904 acres; rateable value of present area, £768; the population in 1891 was 363.

Post Office, Mrs. Jessie C. Thomason, sub-postmistress. Letters through Lerwick. Deliveries & dispatches, three times weekly in summer & twice in winter. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Mid Yell is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 6 miles by boat 1877," an Esplanade was made along the shore, extending nearly to the whole length of the town, and a pier, 350 feet in length, constructed; both were completed in June, 1886; the total cost being £23,089. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, which abounds in the immediate vicinity, and is of great durability. The town is well supplied with water brought from Sandv Loch, about 2 miles above the town, in 1871, at a cost of £4,140, and at the same time sewerage works were constructed at a cost of £2,365. The harbour of Lerwick (or Bressay sound, as it is frequently called) is very spacious, and is bounded on the east by the island of Bressay, and on the west by Mainland, having an entrance from the south and another from the north. Its extent may be inferred from the fact that a fleet of upwards of 90 war ships has anchored in it. In the general coasting trade 452 vessels of 91,391 tons and 393 of 80,359 tons cleared. In the British trade, 426 entered of 83,708 tons and 408 cleared of 80,650 tons. In the Foreign trade 162 entered of 23,245 tons and 158 of 22,335 tonnage.

The herring fishery carried on here has boats coming from the chief ports on the east coast of Scotland as well as from the Isle of Man; the bulk of the herrings are salted and exported to the continental markets. The number of fishing boats registered in 1898 belonging to the port was 802, with a tonnage of 7,497, employing 3,874 men and boys. The number of vessels registered in the same year was 42, of 2,466 tons. Fort Charlotte stands on a rocky eminence at the northern extremity of the town, and commands the whole range of the anchorage, from the south to the north entrance of the harbour. It was originally built in the reign of Charles II.; but having been dismantled and allowed to fall into a state of dilapidation, it was rebuilt in 1781, and received the name it now bears in honour of the consort of George III. It is at present used as a training establishment for the Royal Naval Reserve. Lerwick is a burgh of barony, by charter dated 1818, and is now, under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," governed by twelve commissioners, including a provost and two bailies; by special provision of the Act, it has power to appoint its own police, separate from the county. The sheriff ordinary, debt recovery and small debt courts are held every Wednesday during the session. The justice of peace small debt court is held as occasion requires. The commissioners of supply and the provincial synod of Shetland also hold their meetings in Lerwick. The Town Hall was erected at a cost of about £5,500, the foundation stone being laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, 24th Jan. 1882. It is an edifice of Orkney freestone, in the Scottish Gothic style, from designs by Mr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and was opened on the 12th of August, 1883. In 1887, on the occasion of the Queen's jubilee, a clock and a fine peal of 8 bells, provided by subscription, were placed in the building, at a cost of about £600. Near the Town Hall are the County buildings, erected in 1875, containing a sheriff court house and offices and a county hall, and attached to these is the prison. The parish church, standing above the town, towards its southern extremity, is a building of stone, with columns of the Doric order, hewn stone; but in consequence of the flatness of its roof, and the want of a spire, its external appearance is somewhat ponderous. The Shetland Literary and Scientific Society have a library and news room in Commercial street, which is open to the public; the library contains about 4,000 volumes. The Anderson Institute and the Widows' Asylum, the former erected in 1862 and the latter in 1865, are at the south end of the town. Both were founded by the late Arthur Anderson esq. a native of Shetland and founder of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, who represented Orkney and Shetland in parliament during the session of 1847. The Institute, which consists of a higher school or academy and an elementary school, is now under the Lerwick school board. The Widows' Asylum, erected for the indigent widows of fishermen, for whom a pension fund has also been provided, consists of 12 houses, containing from three to six rooms each. The poorhouse, erected outside the town at a cost of £5,000, contains 55 beds, and is for the poor of the whole of the county. Adjacent is the hospital, built at an expenditure of £2,000, and containing 10 beds. Branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited are established here. Two newspapers are published here weekly, the "Shetland News" and the "Shetland Times." There are two first-class hotels, namely, the "Grand" and the "Queen's." A considerable portion of the produce of Shetland, consisting of fresh and salted fish, beef, oil, butter and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick, who, in turn, import nearly all the groceries, spirits and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. Sheep and cattle sales are held every Monday during September, October and November, and the Shetland Agricultural Society hold their annual show here in August. The area of the civil parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 5,653 acres; rateable value of landward, £3,066; burghal, £13,632; the population in 1881 was 4,581, and in 1891 was 5,757 in the civil, 4,770 in the ecclesiastical, 3,783 in the police burgh and 3,930 in the town.

A public park was presented to the town in 1895 by Robert P. Gilhertson esq. and bears his name.

Quarff, Mainland, East and West Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal and Papa Island, forming together the quoad sacra parish of Quarff, were on May 15, 1891, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," transferred from Bressay parish to Lerwick. Quarff is situated on Mainland, about 6 miles south-west from Lerwick. East and West Burra are small islands situated to the west of the mainland, from which they are separated by Cliff sound, and are distant about 4 miles south from Scalloway. The area is 5,255 acres; rateable value included with Lerwick. The population in 1891 was, Quarff, 243; East Burra, 207; West Burra, 488; Hevera, 24; Holm of Papal, 2; Papa, 23; total, 957.

LUNNASTING, see NESTING.

MAINLAND (sometimes called Shetland) is the largest island, and consists of the parishes of Delting, Dunrossness, Lerwick, Nesting, Northmavine, Sandsting, Tingwall and Walls; its length from Fethaland Point at the northern extremity to Sumburgh Head at the southern, is 55 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; the total area comprises about 240,000 acres; its form is irregular and the coast much indented; the narrow portion of the island begins on the south and runs northward for 20 miles, it then projects westward, containing the parishes of Walls and Sandsting, the breadth at this point being about 13 miles, subsequently the width is reduced to 10 miles, and trends to the east, here containing the parish of Northmavine, which projects to the west, and is 15 miles in extreme length; between the two westerly projections lies St. Magnus Bay, and to the east of the northern parish is Yell Sound, which divides it from the island of that name. Mainland contains the two principal towns of the group, Lerwick and Scalloway.

MID YELL, see Y.E.L.

MOSSBANK, see DELTING.

NESTING is a parish on the eastern side of Mainland Island, in Zetland poor combination and the small debt court district of Lerwick; it includes the quad sacra parish and island of Whalsay, and the islands of Bound Skerries, Brurie Skerries, Gruna Skerries and House Skerries, as well as the kirktowns of Lunna and Nesting, which contain the two churches of the Mainland portion of the parish.

SCALLOWAY is a village and a part in the parish of Tingwall, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Lerwick, on the north side of a fine bay on the west side of Mainland. Anciently this was the capital of Shetland. Near the village are the ruins of Scalloway Castle, erected in 1800, by Patrick Stewart, 2nd Earl of Orkney (of that family), and Lord Zetland. Fishing is the chief industry, the hauls consisting principally of cod, ling, haddock and herring, and for facilitating this trade there are several quays, warehouses and coepages. Some of the inhabitants possess fenced ground, and have erected houses for themselves. The village is well supplied with water, which is conveyed in pipes from the meadows above. On the west shore is a spring of excellent water, the flow from which is influenced by the seasons, being constant and abundant; but it is covered by the sea at high water. There is now a pier here at which steamers call. The chapel of ease in the village was erected during the incumbency of the late Rev. John Turnbull. The population of the village in 1891 was 732.

TINGWALL is a parish, comprising the islands of Hildesay, Langa, Linga, Oxna and Trondra, and the districts of Tingwall, Whiteness and Weisdale on Mainland, and in this portion is situated the large village of Scalloway; the parish is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland. There are established churches in the villages of Tingwall and Whiteness; that at Tingwall was rebuilt in 1805 on an ancient site at the head of a fresh water loch about 4 miles north of Scalloway. This locality, as its name implies, was at one time the place of meeting for the folkthing or great assembly of the people for legislative purposes. "Gallows Hill" is so called from its having formerly been the place of execution; the last who suffered on the spot are said to have been two females, who fell a sacrifice to superstition in the 17th century for the alleged crime of witchcraft. The area of the entire parish is 29,206 acres; rateable value, £4,982; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,229, viz.: 230 on the islands and 2,099 on Mainland, of which the village of Scalloway contained 732; in 1881 the total was 2,385; 2,164 being on Mainland, including 648 in Scalloway.

UNST, the most northerly of the large islands, and separated from that of Yell by the Blue Mull Sound, is also a parish which includes the islands of Balta, Muckle Flugga and Uyea, and is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland; the extent of the larger island is 13 miles from north to south by 5 broad. At Cowiefield the juridical assemblies or folkthings were once held; but these were afterwards removed to Tingwall on Mainland. Balta Sound, about the middle of the island, is, after Lerwick, the second chief station of the herring fishing in these islands; at the head of the Sound is the House of Bunes, the residence of Mrs. Edmonston; here, in 1817-8, Jean Baptista Biot, the French chemist and philosopher, and Capt. Henry Kater carried out their experiments in order to determine the variations in the length of the seconds pendulum, and there still exists in the grounds of Bunes two stones used by Biot in his measurements. A rock on the coast has a natural arch or tunnel nearly 300 feet long, through which boats can pass. Haroldswick is a village a little north of Balta Sound. In 1817 chromate of iron was found in the vicinity of Bunes. The island is well stocked with wild fowl. The area comprises 29,856 acres; rateable value, £4,053; the population of the entire parish was, in 1891, 2,280, and in 1881, 2,181, the smaller islands having only 11 inhabitants in 1891, and 8 in 1881.

WALLS is a parish comprising the islands of Foula, Linga, Papa Stour and Vaila and the districts of Walls and Sandness on Mainland, the distance from Walls to Lerwick being 24 miles by road. The parish is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and poor combination of Zetland, and occupies the western extremity of Mainland to the south of St. Magnus Bay, the southern part of the parish containing the village or kirktown of Walls. Foula Island, in this parish, lies 27 miles west from Scalloway. Papa Stour Island lies about 2 miles off the north coast of the parish, and is noted for its granite precipices and caves, in which seals are found at certain seasons. This island was visited by the Irish missionaries, who also settled at Iona. The area of the entire parish comprises 24,498 acres; that of Foula, 3,299, and Papa Stour, 2,107 acres; total rateable value, £1,737; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,057, which included 239 in Foula Island and 244 on Papa Stour Island and 27 on the smaller islands, while in 1881 the total was 2,262, including 267 on Foula and 254 on Papa Stour.

YELL is an island lying between the islands of Mainland and Unst, about 2 miles south-west of the latter, and separated from it by Blue Mull Sound and from Mainland (North-mina parish) by Yell Sound; it formerly comprised the parish of Mid and South Yell and part of that of Fellar and North Yell, but, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," and by boundary order No. 93, the whole of the first-named parish and that part of the parish of Fetlar and North Yell which appertained to Yell Island were united into one parish under the name of Yell; the ecclesiastical divisions consist of the Old Mid and South Yell parishes and the quoad sacra parishes of North Yell and South Yell, and the whole is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland. The village of Mid Yell lies about 35 miles north from Lerwick, and that of Kirktown of North Yell 10 miles further north. STIRLINGSHIRE.

THIS is a midland county, marking the commencement of the Highlands, and is bounded on the south-west by Dumbartonshire, south by Lanarkshire and Linlithgowshire, on the west by Dumbartonshire, north by Perthshire and on the east by the very small county of Clackmannan and that of Linlithgowshire; from its position at the head of the Firth of Forth it is to some extent a seaboard county, Grangemouth having an extensive trade; its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north being the river Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water in the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely irregular; its length from east to west is 36 miles, but following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of 45 miles; its breadth varies from 12 to 20 miles, except where it turns towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of 463 square miles, or 296,928 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 63,060 males and 62,548 females, total, 125,608, and in 1881 the total was 112,443; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 24,689, and in 1881, 22,361. In size Stirling stands as twentieth, and in population as the ninth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—Originally part of the Pictish possessions, it appears to have passed under the Roman rule about A.D. 80, and they have left traces of their long occupation in camps &c. while the wall of Antoninus, which extends from the Clyde to the Forth, runs across the southern portion of the county. Abandoned by the Romans in 410 it again fell under the Pictish rule until they were expelled by the Saxons and Scots, and about 1060 it became more settled under Malcolm (Ceannmohr), though even then subject to Norman raids, while two centuries later Edward I. extended his forays thus far, capturing the castle of Stirling in 1296. The victory of Stirling Bridge by Wallace over the English in 1297, and a similar victory by Bruce, at Bannockburn, 24th June, 1314, checked the English for a time. James II. was born in Stirling castle, and in 1452 he stabbed the 8th Earl of Douglas in a small room in the same castle. In June, 1488, James fought his rebel nobles at Sauchiehall. In 1528 James V. having escaped from the dominion of Angus, the Regent, assumed control of affairs at Stirling, where he subsequently built the palace still existing in the castle. On 29 July, 1567, James VI. still an infant, was crowned at Stirling, and Murray (who was shot in 1570) assumed the regency; the noble who succeeded him in this office was killed in September, 1571, by a band of Mary's adherents who surprised the town, and in 1651 Charles II. started from Stirling on his expedition to England which terminated so disastrously at Worcester. In the 12th century David I. erected several religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, and these communities tended to civilize the rude manners of the inhabitants.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—The part of the county which is adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than 3,192 feet. East from this the land becomes flat, or gently inclining towards the Forth, or the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of the greatest altitude are from 1,300 to 1,500 feet high; from one of these, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained a view computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine grass sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich valley of the Forth. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile is the alluvial, or carse land, which occupies many thousand acres on the banks of the Forth. In this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam form the surface in other parts of the county. Large crops of oats, barley, beans, turnips, potatoes &c. are raised, and the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of sheep, which are of the old black-faced, or Highland breed; there are comparatively few cattle reared, the county being supplied from the Highlands. The chief crops in 1895, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," were—oats, 18,296 acres; barley or bere, 3,093; beans, 2,919; wheat, 2,109; the total corn crops being 26,449 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,510 acres; potatoes, 2,989; total of green crops, 8,073; hay, 16,103 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 18,741; permanent pasture, 48,067; total area of land and water, 296,928 acres, of which there was—mountain and heath land, 136,065; woods, 4,777; plantations, 165. The live stock in 1898 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 3,827; unbroken horses, 1,193; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 12,091; other cattle, 22,832; ewes kept for breeding, 53,766; other sheep 74,897; sows kept for breeding, 208; other pigs, 2,034. The mineral productions, as appears from the Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics for 1897, include basalt, fire clay, coal, gravel and sand, iron ore, limestone, oil shale and sandstone. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox Hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde canal, and in such quantities as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but to admit of exportation. The production of coal in 1897 was—East Stirling, 1,251,088 tons; value, £359,688; West Stirling, 892,198 tons; value, £245,354; basalt, 42,413 tons; fire clay, 52,928 tons, value £7,940; iron ore, 9,360 tons. There are four blast furnaces, but the production is not separately returned. The production of oil shale was 7,178 tons; gravel and sand, 25,375 tons; limestone, 23,918; sandstone, 55,040. The staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians); at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, carpets, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn tweeds are produced, while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries, chemical and other establishments at Grangemouth 3 steamers, of 1,882 net tonnage, were built, and 4, of 2,199 net tonnage, built for foreigners.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire. It takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into the estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only 7 miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than 20 by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings, which are termed "the links of the Forth." The next river in magnitude is the Carron, which has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burthen for about 2 miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blank, and the Kelvin. Loch Lomond, a fine inland lake 23 miles in length by 5 in breadth at the widest part, to a little over 1 at the narrowest, extends from Balloch, 5 miles north of Dumbaron, to Ardlui, 2 miles south of Inverarnan, and contains several considerable islands, of which three principal ones, Inch Cruin, Inchfad, and Incheaelloch, belong to this county, and a line drawn from the lake shore 1 mile west of Buchanan Kirk, to the centre of the Loch, and thence continued northward, passing to the east of Inchlochnaig, up the middle of the Loch to a point just east of Inchow, above Inverarnan, forms the western boundary of the county; there is some fishing and the Loch is much frequented by tourists in search of scenery. Ben Lomond lies to the east, about half way up the Loch, and the western side is skirted by large mountains for most of its length. The Forth and Clyde canal and the Union canal pass through the county; the first named debouching at Grangemouth and the Union joining it from Edinburgh, at Falkirk. There are also numerous springs, but the most noted are the Airthrey Wells, at Bridge of Allan, the waters of which contain saline and other properties. The eminences of great altitude above the level of the sea are: Ben Lomond, 3,262 feet; Ben a Choin, 2,524; Maol Mohr, 2,200; Ben Bhearc, 1,922; Ben Uird, 1,957; and Earls Seat, Campsie Fells, 1,894 feet. The railways running from Glasgow into the south of the county are the Alloa, Stirling and Perth branch of the North British line, which enters the county at Castlecary, and passing by Larbert and St. Ninians to Stirling, throws out a branch to Alloa, where it joins the line of the same railway from Stirling, via Dunfermline, to Edinburgh; there is another line from Glasgow and Yoker, entering the county at Summerston and runs, via Kirkintilloch, to Kilsyth, from whence a branch goes to Bonnybridge, and over this the Caledonian line runs to Larbert; the North British railway has also a branch from Kirkintilloch running north-west, by Strathblane, to Gartness, where it joins the line from Stirling to Balloch and from this latter line nearer to Stirling runs a branch to Aberfoyle; the only other line is that running north and north-west from Stirling to Doune and Callander, by Bridge of Allan; this belongs to the Caledonian railway.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Stirlingshire comprises 23 complete parishes and 40 ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Perth and Stirling. It contains two parliamentary burghs—Stirling (which is the only royal burgh in the county), and Falkirk; the former joins with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline and Inverkeithing in returning a member to Parliament, and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie and Hamilton. The county sends one representative. The parliamentary constituency in 1898 was 15,326. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £752,895.

AIRTH is a parish in the small debt court district of Falkirk, about 5 miles in length by about 1½ to 3 in breadth. The ancient village stands on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennetpans, and has a station, 2 miles east, on the Larbert and Alloa branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 27 miles west from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 south-west from Stirling and 6 north-west from Falkirk. It was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed. The Pow burn, a tributary of the Forth, runs through the centre of the parish. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages &c. to Alloa and other places on the Fife side. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success. In the parish is an ancient tower, of very early date, called "Wallace's Tower," from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slain the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle who was a prisoner; the tower is still in tolerable preservation. At Dunmore is another tower, and at Dunmore Hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river, an anchor was found some years since. This place, in 1633, conferred the title of Earl on the Grahams, Earls of Menteith, but it became extinct in the male line on the death of the 2nd Earl, in 1694, but the Earldom of Menteith has several times been claimed, though unsuccessfully. Airth Castle, the property of the Misses Graham, but now (1899) occupied by Frederick Graham esq. is an elegant mansion in the Gothic style, standing in a park about one mile long by half a mile wide. Powfoulis, the seat of Miss Dawson, is also in this parish. Dunmore Park, about one mile long by half a mile wide, is the seat of Claud H. Hamilton esq. D.L., J.P. Claud H. Hamilton esq. D.L., J.P. of Larbert, Miss Dawson, George Sherriff esq. of Carrouval, The Carron Co., G. W. Stinton esq. of Belsdyke and C. E. Walker Ogilvie esq. of Pocknave, are the principal landowners. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills of Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil rich and well cultivated. Acreage of parish, 5,477; rateable value, £12,061; population in 1881, 1,362, and in 1891, 1,325, of which the village contained 440.

BALDERNOCK (anciently Bather-nock, is a parish in the southern extremity of the county and in the small debt court district of Lennoxton. It is about 3½ miles long by 2½ broad, and is bounded by the river Kelvin and Allander on the side fronting north-east and by Campsie, and on the south-west lies the loch of Baldowie. The church is about 2 miles north-west from Balmore station, which is in the parish, on the Glasgow and Bonybridge section of the North British railway, and 7 north from Glasgow. The parish abounds with cairns and similar memorials; the most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated "the ald wife's lift," consisting of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and on the top of this the third is placed in the same direction, the ends in each case pointing north and south; the whole is 18 feet in length by 1½ in breadth and 7 in height. In the surrounding grounds the roots and stumps of oak trees have been dug up, and there can be no doubt of this spot having once been a Druidic grove and place of sacrifice. Acreage of the parish, 4,322; rateable value, £10,590; population in 1881, 569, and in 1891, 553. Letters received through Glasgow about 11 miles in length and 3 in breadth, and bounded on the east and south-east by Gargunnoch and Fintry, on the south by the Endrick water, which separates it from Killearn, west by Drymen, and on the north by Buchlyvi and Kppen. The village stands on the declivity of a hill, and has a station 2 miles west on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway. The village is supplied with water from a spring on Spittal farm, the works of which cost £800. A Board school now stands on the site of the old parish school, with a dwelling house for the master; the school will hold about 250 children, and is under the charge of one of the few remaining schoolmasters appointed by the heritors prior to the passing of the Education Act. There is a branch of the British Linen Co.'s Bank in the village. The annual fair is held on the last Tuesday in May. Acreage of the parish, 7,820; rateable value, £7,105; population in 1881, 1,327, and in 1891, 1,203, of which the village contained 885.

BANNOCKBURN is a manufacturing town and quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile from that place, on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and on both sides, but chiefly on the east bank of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles falls into the Forth. It has a station half a mile east on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, and is 3 miles south from Stirling and 8 north from Falkirk. The manufacture of tweeds, tartans, and carpets is carried on to a considerable extent. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance, and a tannery has been established in the village for a long period. In this district the country is characterised by its long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Firth of Forth, and it was on one of these uplands, between this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought, on the 24th June, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn; the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland. In this conflict the army of the English, under Edward II. and the Earls of Pembroke and Gloucester, numbering about 100,000 men, attempted to relieve Stirling Castle, then besieged by Robert Bruce, but was defeated with heavy loss, although the Scots numbered considerably less. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greystell and the village of St. Ninians. About half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Calden Hill, is a large stone, termed the "Bored Stone," having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. The height called the Cat Craig Hill, from which the English king watched the progress of the battle, has been almost quarried away. At Milton, about half a mile from the town of Bannockburn, are the remains of "Beaton's Mill," to which James III. retreated after the battle of Sauchieburn, fought in June, 1488, about 2 miles further to the south-west. There is a Public Hall in the village, erected at a cost of £1,700. A fair is held in Bannockburn on the third Tuesday in June (old style). Bannockburn contained a population in 1881 of 4,331, and in 1891, 2,705, of which the town contained 2,000. Post, T. M. O., T. M. O. Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, S. BONNYBRIDGE is a modern town of considerable importance, on the Bonny water and the Firth and Clyde canal, and has two railway stations, one belonging to the Caledonian, the other to the Caledonian and North British Companies jointly, and within a radius of a mile are the High station and Greenhill Junction station, also on the Caledonian system. The village is 4 miles west from Falkirk, 9 south from Stirling and 17 north-west from Glasgow. Bonnybridge was formed into a quoad sacra parish in 1878, from Denny, Dunipace and Falkirk civil parishes. The foundry of Smith and Wellstood Limited, on the banks of the Forth and Clyde canal, is celebrated for the manufacture of light and ornamental castings and American stoves; there are also Oswald and Hall's paper mills, five brick works, two saw mills, grain mills, chemical works and collieries. The Established church is a plain stone edifice, erected in 1878, and has about 600 sittings. In the village is a large public hall. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,111, and of the town, 1,243.

BOTHKENNAR is a parish, in Falkirk small debt court district, and is about 2 miles long by an equal breadth, bounded on the north by the parish of Airth, on the west by the parish of Larbert, on the south by the parishes of Falkirk and Polmont, and on the east by the river Forth. The church is about 2 miles north-west from Grangemouth station on the Caledonian and North British railways, and 3 north from Falkirk. The parish is a rich and fertile district, and there is abundance of coal, which is worked to supply the Carron Co. The Marquess of Zetland P.C.; the Carron Co.; the trustees of the late George Dundas esq. of Carron Hall; the trustees of the late William Dawson esq. of Powfoulis; Henry Callander esq. of Preston Hall, Dalkeith; Charles E. Walker Ogilvie, of Orchard Head, and Alexander Nimmo esq. West Bank, Falkirk, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 2,646; rateable value, landward £8,943, burghal (Grangemouth) £18,187; population in 1881, 3,271, and in 1891, 4,134; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 2,025.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN is a popular watering place on the river Allan, about 1½ miles from its confluence with the Forth, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochill hills. It is a police burgh and quoad sacra parish erected from Logie civil parish, with a station on the Oban and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, and is 1½ miles north from Causewayhead station, which is in the parish, on the Stirling and Edinburgh line of the North British railway, and is 3 north from Stirling, 13 north-west from Falkirk, and about 8 north-west from Alloa. The bridge from which the town takes its name crosses the river Allan near the entrance to the burgh. In 1871, Bridge of Allan was made a burgh under the provisions of the Lindsay Act; its municipal affairs are managed by nine commissioners, who elect a provost and two bailies under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. The higher part of the town in the neighbourhood of the wells and Coneyhill is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many villas are erected, the sloping sides of the hill, adorned with trees, commanding a series of views, including Stirling, its castle and caise, watered by the Forth, Teith and Allan, with other objects. This place is resorted to as well for pleasure as on account of the mildness and salubrity of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its saline mineral waters, which are in the higher village, within a few minutes' walk from the centre of the town; these springs, regarded as the chief saline waters in Scotland, contain 47½ grains of common salt in 16oz. and a nearly similar amount of muriate of lime. Prior to the discovery of the springs, the place was comparatively little known, but there are now many well-built houses and villas, and several hotels, including the Hydropathic Establishment, the Royal Hotel, the Queen's Hotel and Carmichael's Temperance Hotel. In the burgh are reading rooms, a library, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures and two bowling greens. Airtrey Castle is the seat of Donald Graham esq. C.I.E., D.L., J.P. Keir Gardens was the seat of the late Sir William Stirling Maxwell. Both these are open once a week to the public, and there are also several miles of good angling, a good golf course and public tennis courts. The "Strathallan Meeting" is held annually on the first Saturday of August, in the public park, at the east end of the village. The above meeting for Scottish athletic games is pre-eminently the first in Scotland. Among the business establishments are large bleaching and dye works, and a paper manufactory. The lords of the manor are the trustees of the late Sir James E. Alexander and Donald Graham esq. C.I.E. of Airthrey Castle. Rateable value of the burgh, £23,314; population of Bridge of Allan in 1881, 3,005, and in 1891, 3,207; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 2,690.

BUCHANAN is a parish, in the western extremity of the county, in Dumbarton poor combination and the small debt court district of Stirling, about 19 miles in length by 2 to 5 in breadth, and bounded by Dumbartonshire and Perthshire and Drymen parish on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Drymen on the east. The river Forth rises in the district, at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. Lake Arket, about one mile long by half a mile wide, is in the northern extremity of the parish, and from it flows the Arket water into Loch Lomond. The church is about 4 miles north-west from Drymen station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 12 north from Dumbarton and 24 west-by-south from Stirling.
Loch Lomond is a large inland lake, 23 miles long by 5 broad at its widest part, and one at its narrowest point. The boundary line between the counties of Stirling and Dumbarton commences at the lake shore about one mile west of Buchanan kirk to the centre of the loch, and thence continues northwards to the west of Inchruin Island, up the centre of the loch to a point just east of Vow Island. There are several islands in the lake, of which Incheilloch, Inchfad and Inchruin are included in Stirlingshire boundary. At Rowardennan is a ferry to Inverglas, in Dumbartonshire.
There are several mountains in the parish, including Ben Lomond, 3,192 feet high.
Ben a Choin, 2,524 feet, Ptarmigan, 2,398 feet, Mael Mor, 2,249 feet, Cruinn a Bheinn, 2,077 feet, and Ben Uird, 1,957 feet. Rob-Roy's cave and prison are both in this parish. The Montrose May, opened by the Duchess of Montrose in May, 1831, is at Balmaha, on the borders of Loch Lomond; the institution, the cost of which was entirely defrayed by the duchess, is in connection with the Evangelical Institute of Glasgow, and will hold 30 poor children, who are boarded for two weeks. Buchanan Castle, which occupies the site of the old residence destroyed by fire in 1850, is the seat of His Grace the Duke of Montrose, K.T. lord lieutenant of the county; it stands on the margin of Loch Lomond and the Fort of Inversnaid, near the head of the loch, and is surrounded by a large park.

The castle obtained its present name from having, prior to 1682, when it was purchased by the Montrose family, belonged to the Buchanans, and the place has, since 1707, conferred the title of Marquess on the Dukes of Montrose. Acreage of the parish, 11,598; rateable value, £7,719;
population in 1881, 550, and in 1891, 658.

BUCHLYVIE is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed from Kippen and Drymen civil parishes, and is in Stirling small debt court district. The village is on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, and has a station, 1 mile north, on the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway, which is also the junction of the Aberfoyle branch, and is 14 miles west from Stirling and 19 north from Glasgow. From Port of Menteith station, which is in Kippen parish and on the same railway, the tourist may proceed to the lake of Menteith, in Perthshire, in which are situated the islands of Inchmalhorne and Pulla, and on the former of these are the ruins of a large monastery, founded by King Egbert, in 825. Many historical associations are connected with the place, among which may be mentioned that Queen Mary retired thither after the battle of Pinkie, 10 Aug.

1547, and planted a box-wood bower, a part of which still remains. It was here that Sir Walter Scott conceived the idea of writing his "Lady of the Lake." Argibbon Glen, much frequented for the grandeur of the scenery, is in the neighbourhood. Population in 1881, 319, and in 1891, 806 in the ecclesiastical parish and 313 in the village.

CAMBUSKENNETH, see LOGIE.

CAMELON is a quoad sacra parish, formed in 1852, from Falkirk civil parish, and is in Falkirk small debt cent district.
It lies on the road from Falkirk to Stirling and the Forth and Clyde canal, and consists principally of one street, about 1 mile west from Falkirk station on the Glasgow and Lithgow section of the North British railway, and 2 west from Grahamston station on the Larbert and Grangemouth branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish church is a plain stone edifice, built in 1839, and has about 600 sittings. In the vicinity there are several foundries and extensive chemical works. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquary, having been represented by the early writers as a maritime city, in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian (A.D. 69-79), and when subsequently possessed by the Picts, had twelve brazen gates; no vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains except one portion of a wall visible from the Glasgow road. The sea is now about 4 miles distant. The population in 1891 was 3,332.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph M. O., Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, S. B. & Annuity & Annuity Office, Camelon; Mrs. Annie M. Forsyth, sub-postmistress. Letters received from Falkirk. Cleared at 11 a.m. & 3.40, 7.10 & 9.30 p.m.; arrive at 7.30 a.m. & 2 & 7 p.m.

CAUSEWAYHEAD is a small village with a station on the central section of the North British railway; it is in the parish of Logie, about midway between Bridge of Allan and Stirling, at the foot of Abbey Craig—a detached portion of the Ochil range—which presents a precipitous front with a height of about 560 feet above the level of the Forth. On its most elevated ridge, and almost perpendicularly over the village, stands the Wallace monument, a structure 220 feet in height, in the form of a Scottish tower, surmounted by flying crocketed arches converging to a centre and forming a crown, from designs by Mr.
 Rothead, of Glasgow. The foundation stone was laid June 24th, 1861 (the anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn), with masonic honours, by the Duke of Atholl.
 From the summit, which is reached by a spiral stair, the view obtained is rich in natural beauty and full of historic associations. Population in 1881, 370.

DENNY is a police burgh, thriving town and parish in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The parish is about 6 miles long, by an average of 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the southwest by the parish of Kilsyth, on the west and north by the Carron, and south-east by Falkirk. The town is on the road directly west from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through, and is 29 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 northeast from Glasgow, 7 south from Stirling, and 5 west from Falkirk. Denny and Dunipace are controlled by a provost, with bailies and several commissioners. The Denny railway, opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly 4 miles distant. The terminus is close to the town and from it run two sub-branches extending to the iron mines in the neighbourhood, by which the ironstone is conveyed to works near Coat-bridge, and the coal to Glasgow and Grangemouth for shipment over the country generally, and near here is the Forth

DRYMEN is a parish in Dumbarton poor combination and Stirling small debt court district. It is 12 miles long, 3 miles broad towards the south and 12 in the north, and is bounded on the north by Aberfoyle, in Perthshire, on the east by Kippen, Balfour and Killearn, south by Dumbartonshire, and on the west by Buchanan. The village, which stands on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, is about 1 mile north from the Endrick water, which flows into Loch Lomond, and is 17 miles north-north-west from Glasgow. Drymen station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, is 1½ miles south of the village, in Dumbartonshire. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is located in the village.
Fairs for cattle are held on the last Wednesday in April (old style) and 17th May (new style). On the side of Loch Lomond, near Drymen, John Napier, lord of the free barony of Merchiston and the inventor of logarithms, resided for a considerable time; he died 6 April, 1617. Duchry Castle is the residence of J. C. Bolton esq.
Acreeage of the parish, 30,850; rateable value, £31,683; population in 1881, 1,431, and in 1891, 1,512, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 789.

At Gartness, about 2½ miles south-east from Drymen, is a waterfall about 12 feet in height, which the salmon, when going up the river, clear by a leap. Near the village are two factories for woollen cloth and felting. There is a station here on the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway. Population returned with Drymen.

DUNIPACE is a parish, divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace and Torwood, in Stirling small debt court district and Larbert ecclesiastical parish, and bounded on the north and west by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert and on the south by the river Carron, which divides it from Denny. The town is on the road from Stirling to Glasgow and Falkirk, about 1 mile north from Denny terminal station from Larbert on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, 7 south from Stirling and 6 north-west from Falkirk. Dunipace is included in the police burgh of Denny. This parish is rich in minerals, and has an extension line to the mines of the Denny branch mineral railway, crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny; the mines, with other works, afford employment to the inhabitants of this district. In this locality are two eminences called "the Hills of Dunipace," presumed to be sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots as no indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. John C. Bolton esq. of Carbrook and John A. Harvie-Brown esq. of Dunipace, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,586; rateable value, landward, £9,372; burghal, £1,858; population in 1881, 1,874, and in 1891, 1,716, and of the town, 1,078.

FALKIRK.

FALKIRK is an ancient town, parliamentary and police burgh, the principal town of the eastern district of the county, and a parish and the head of a poor combination; the extreme length of the parish is 9 miles, and its breadth from 2 to 5½; it is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamanoan and Muiravonside, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumbartonshire. Falkirk has a station on the Edinborough and Glasgow section of the North British railway, another at Grahamston on the same line, which is also used for the town, and a third on the Caledonian railway. The town is 24 miles west-by-north from Edinborough, 22 north-east from Glasgow, 11 south-south-east from Stirling and 3 south-west from Grangemouth, and is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called "the Carse (or Kerse) of Fulkirk," and commanding a most extensive prospect. Besides the rich and fertile "carse," the prospect includes the river Forth, the great canal, which intersects the county about half a mile north of the town; and to the south Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town.

The port of Grangemouth, about 3 miles to the north-east of Falkirk, is connected with the burgh by a branch of the Caledonian Railway.

The Union canal joins the Forth and Clyde canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Company. About half a mile south of the town it passes through a tunnel 796 yards in length.

The Falkirk and Larbert Water Trust introduced in 1890 a supply of water from the Denny Hills, at a cost of about £80,000.

The town is lighted with gas supplied by the Gas Commission, who purchased the works in February, 1895, from a private company.

Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I. and a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I. but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years. A body of "stent masters," chosen by the different trades of the town, formerly managed its affairs, but that body being abolished by Act of Parliament, their powers and property were transferred to the magistrates. The town is governed by a provost, three bailies, and eight councillors. This body first came into existence in 1833, and under the "Falkirk Police and Improvement Act," the magistrates assess the inhabitants for police and improvement purposes.

Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held as occasion requires. A sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, Muiravonside, Slamanoan, Larbert, Bothkenar and Airth.

The old church of Falkirk, mostly taken down in 1810, is believed to have been founded by St. Modan. The name of the town owes its origin to the church, and the Highlanders still call it by the old Celtic name of "Eglaise Bhrac," or spotted church, which is synonymous with the old Saxon name "Faw-kirk," bearing the same meaning. The present church, erected under the superintendance of Mr. George Watson and the Rev. Dr. Anderson, Edinburgh, incorporates the tower of the ancient fabric; the old south aisle, formerly in the possession of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and endowed by them, has also been rebuilt. The total cost of these alterations, including a new organ, was about £4,000. The Kirk Session Records, which extend as far back as 1617, mention the fact that a marble tablet, which is now inserted in the tower, was found when the old church was taken down. It bears the following inscription:

FVN DATVM MALCOLMO III.
 REGE SCOTIÆ.
 AM † 1057.

In the churchyard lie the remains of Sir John de Grathame (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298; a plain coffin-shaped stone marks the grave of the latter, and the Marquess of Bute has erected a granite cross to the west of the church, to the memory of the men of Bute who were slain with their chief, Sir John Stuart. There is also a monument to Sir John de Græme, surrounded by a railing, surmounted by a Gothic cupola. A bronze casting of the two-handed sword used by this hero has been affixed to the tomb. In the same cemetery stands a monument to Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, between the forces of the Pretender and the Duke of Cumberland, January 17th, 1746, and erected by Robert Dollar esq. of Sao Francisco, and a native of Falkirk, and a memorial has also been erected to William Edmondston, of Cambus Wallace, Captain-Lieutenant of the 17th Regiment of Foot, who fell in battle near Falkirk, 27th January, 1746, and there is another in memory of Mr. Dollar's mother, who was buried in the same grave.

The Free church, in Newmarket street, erected about 1896, at a cost of £7,200, is a building of red freestone, in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire, and will seat 950 persons.

All the burial grounds being closed by order of the sheriff, a cemetery has been provided, about a mile west of the town, for the entire parish; it embraces an area of 14 acres, and is now (1899) being enlarged by an addition of 22 acres.

The County Buildings, erected in 1868, in lieu of the old court house, are in Hope street; the building includes court rooms for the sheriff and justices, and a procurator's hall, in which the County Council for the Eastern Division of Stirlingshire hold their meetings. At the same time a prison and county police office were built, and Burgh buildings were erected in Newmarket street in 1878.

The Exchange, or Corn Market, originally built in 1859, was replaced by the present hall in 1878. The Corn Market is now held in the Town Hall.

Falkirk derives its chief importance from being the seat of an extensive iron trade, which is still rapidly increasing. The number of foundries in the burgh has increased from 1 in 1848 to 11 in 1898, and in the immediate neighbourhood there are nearly a dozen others. In addition to these there are many collieries in the district, several large chemical works and other industries.

Falkirk is within a very populous district, with no large town in the immediate neighbourhood, and commands an extensive inland trade, and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between 50 and 60 thousand people.

In the parish there are the Falkirk Iron Works, the Gowan Bank Iron Works, the Grahamston Iron Company's Works, the Burnbank Iron Works, the Etna Iron Works, the Parkhouse Iron Works, Camelon Iron Works, Saiton Iron Works, the Callendar Iron Works, Abbots Iron Works, the Springfield Iron Works, and about 1 mile to the west are the Port Downie Iron Works, the Forth and Clyde and the Sunnyside Iron Works, the Grangemouth Iron Co. the Dorrator Iron Co. the B. and A. Main Limited, the Carnmuirs Iron Co. and the Laurieston Iron Works. There are various coal mines in the vicinity, and extensive timber yards, likewise tanning and currying establishments, the making of fire bricks and tiles, with a distillery, a brewery, and several chemical works.

The market for grain is held on Thursday. Seven fairs are annually held for cattle and horses, namely—the last Thursday in January, the first Thursday in March, the third Thursday in May, the second Thursday in June, the second Thursday in July, the third Thursday in August, and the first Thursday in November; besides two days for hiring servants (the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October), called feiring Thursdays, which are numerous attended.

The three Falkirk trysts, which are large cattle markets, are held at Stenhousemuir on the second Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in August, September and October.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Company's Bank, as well as a Savings Bank.

In the town is a tower 146 feet high, containing a clock and 2 bells, and near it is an equestrian statue of the great Duke of Wellington, erected in 1854 by public subscription.

Falkirk is historically famous as being the scene of two memorable battles, the first, between Edward I. of England and the Scots, under Sir William Wallace, was fought July 22, 1298, on the level ground to the north of the town, and, mainly through the havoc created by the English archers, resulted in the total defeat of the Scots, and sealed the fate of Wallace, who never recovered his position, and was ultimately executed (1305); the second conflict took place Jan. 17, 1746, on high ground southwest of the town, between the young Pretender, Prince Charles Edward, and the English forces under General Hawley, who was defeated with the loss of guns and baggage and retreated into Falkirk, thence to Linlithgow and Edinburgh.

Near the canal, standing in a small park, is Kerse House, the seat of the Marquess of Zetland P.C., D.L., J.P. William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. of Colledar, James Wilson esq. of Bantaskine, representatives of the late John Wilson, of South Bantaskine, and the Marquess of Zetland are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire civil parish is 19,551 acres; rateable value, landward, £63,978; burghal (including part of Grangemouth parish), £88,730; the population of the parish in 1881 was 25,143, and in 1891, as follows:—

Bonybridge Town (part of).....	1,243
Falkirk Burgh (Parliamentary, not Royal).....	16,620
Falkirk Burgh (Municipal, beyond Parliamentary).....	692
Falkirk Suburban.....	2,456
Falkirk Shipping.....	1
Grangemouth Town (part of).....	3,976
Grangemouth Shipping.....	27
Landward.....	5,716
Total.....	30,731

In 1891 the populations were: town, 19,769; police burgh, 17,312; ecclesiastical parish, 14,506.

The estimated population of the burgh in 1899 was 36,000.

The number of electors on the Falkirk parliamentary register in 1898 was 2,123, and of the district, 9,629.

Grahamston is a quadra sacra parish in the burgh of Falkirk, and separated therefrom only by the line of the Caledonian railway. The population in 1891 was 6,624.

Bainsford is small village in Falkirk parish, 1 mile from the town hall, on the Larbert high road.

Laurieston (or Lawrieston) is a village in the parish of Falkirk, about 1 mile east from that town. Nail making, formerly carried on to a considerable extent, is now almost extinct. The place was originally called Langtoun, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Laurieston, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it. The population in 1891 was 1,725.

FINTRY is a parish pleasantly situated to the north of the Campsie Fells, in the small debt court district of Stirling, extending from east to west 6 miles, and in breadth, from north to south, averages about 5 miles; it is bounded on the north by Balfron and Gargunnoch, on the east by St. Ninians and Kilsyth, on the south by Campsie and on the west by Killearn. The village is 7 miles west from Balfron station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 8 north from the Lennoxton station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle line of the same railway, and is 41 miles west from Edinburgh, 16 west-south-west from Stirling and 18 north from Glasgow. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which is the Loup of Fintry, a cataract of the Endrick descending 91 feet; and on the Carron is another of about 112 feet, called the "Auchinlily Linn Spout." Near the village of Fintry is a hill called the "Doon," on which is a range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some 50 feet in length. Bin Mountain, 1,870 feet high, and Strone, 1,676 feet, are in the parish. Culreoch and Craighton are the seats of James Cameron Dun Waters esq. The Duke of Montrose K.T. and James Cameron Dun Waters esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 13,772; rateable value, £4,187; population in 1881, 414, and in 1891, 367.

GARGUNNOCK is a parish in Stirling small debt court district, 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the east and south by St. Ninians, on the west by Fintry, Balfron and Kippen, and on the north by Kincairdine and Kilmadock. The river Forth divides the parish on the north from Perthshire. As regards its agricultural features and capabilities, it is divided into two districts; one of which, on the south, is hilly and pastoral, and the other is a flat carse land which spreads from the town of Stirling in a south-westerly direction towards the county of Dumbarton. The chief business here is basket making; and there is also a distillery. Gargunnoch Hill, 1,591 feet, and Lees Hill, 1,349 feet high, are in the parish. The village stands on the side of a hill on the south edge of the carse, and on the road from Stirling to Lennoxton, with a station about 1 mile north on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 6 miles west from Stirling. Gargunnoch House is the residence of Col. John S. Stirling J.P. Boquhan House is the seat of Rear-Admiral Henry John Fletcher-Campbell C.B., D.L., J.P. Alastair Erskine Graham Moir esq. J.P. of Leckie House, Stirling; Rear-Admiral H. J. Fletcher-Campbell C.B.; Col. John S. Stirling J.P.; James D. Duncan esq.; Sir Alan Henry Seton-Steuart bart. D.L., J.P. of Touch, and John Kerr esq. of baster Culmore, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,859; rateable value, £8,099; population in 1881, 698, and in 1891, 674.
 Post & Telegraph Office, Gargunnoch; Thomas Philp, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Stirling. Deliveries, 7.10 & 10.30 a.m.; dispatch, 2 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Kippen, 4 miles distant GARTNESS, see DRYMEN.

THIS is a police burgh and seaport, 3 miles north from Falkirk, 27 north-north-west from Edinburgh and 25 north-east from Glasgow, situated on the Frith of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Clyde and Forth canal, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. The ecclesiastical parish was formed port was commenced in 1777 by Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the shipping passing through the canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port; its growth is attributable to the moderate rate of charges, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage; the canal rates of toll are also low; the wet dock, opened in 1843, affords room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping. Docks of nearly 60 acres in extent were opened on the 3rd of June, 1882, and of this area, 19½ acres represents the water area of the docks and timber basins, the actual dockage area being about 10½ acres. New docks of 30 acres are now (1899) in course of construction, at an estimated cost of £1,500,000. The amount of Customs duty collected in 1898, was £5,142.

In 1898 the number of vessels that entered the port with cargoes, and in ballast, was:—British, 1,438, of 638,393 tons; Foreign, 905, of 450,733 tons. The number cleared was:—British, 1,530, of 660,195 tons; Foreign, 942, of 463,597 tonnage. In the general coasting trade, 1,138 entered, of 407,599 tons, and 947, of 323,042 tons cleared. The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port in 1898, was 55, with a tonnage of 15,589. There are commodious quays, granaries and warehouses; also shipbuilding yards, a graving dock and timber yards. Rope and sail making is extensively carried on, and there are saw mills and large collieries adjacent. The imports from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, America, Germany, and the Baltic in general, are timber, grain &c. The total value of the imports in 1898, was £2,416,452; the principal with their values being:—chemical manufactures and products, £25,486; cotton goods, £26,480; farinaceous substances, £33,608; fruit (raw), £20,468; manufactured glass, £25,573; iron ore, £24,922; manufactured iron, £66,592; margarine, £154,383; oil (fish), £124,453; painters' colors, £55,324; paper (including strawboard), £70,744; paper making materials, £145,151; sugar (refined), £22,816; (unrefined), £173,439; timber (sawn), £316,053; timber (stems), £45,304; zinc (crude), £64,604. Steamers ply regularly to and from London, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Stettin, Dunkirk, Copenhagen, Middlesbrough &c. The advantages and cheapness of the port, and the readiness of communication by canal and railway with the populous manufacturing districts, and with inexhaustible supplies of iron and coal, combine to invest Grangemouth with great advantages for the above imports and of other continental produce, as well as for the export of the mineral and other productions of the west of Scotland. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £5,500, has a large hall capable of seating 900 persons: there are also included in the building town clerk's chambers, a council room and small halls for meetings of committees. The town having adopted the Free Libraries Act, the Victoria Library was erected in 1887, at a cost of about £1,800, including site, one half of the sum being presented by Mrs. Carnegie, the other being raised by voluntary contributions and assessment. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. A public park of 8½ acres, granted by the Marquess of Zetland, was opened in 1882. The population of Grangemouth town and ecclesiastical parish in 1881 was 4,424, and in 1891, 6,354, and of the police burgh, 5,833; rateable value of burgh, £47,096.

KILLEARN is a parish in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district, and is 12 miles long by an average breadth of 2½, the river Endrick, with the parish of Balfron, forming its northern boundary. It is bounded on the east by Dumfri, on the south by Strathblane and Dumbartonshire, and on the west by Drymen, in Dumbartonshire. The land is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The village is almost in the centre of the parish. In a pleasant part of the country, and has two stations, the Old station, about 1 mile south-west, and the New, 2 miles west, on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway, 30 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Stirling, and nearly 17 north-by-west from Glasgow. The village is supplied with water by Alexander Buchanan esq. The church, a handsome structure, was built by the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing bart. of Ballikrain, in memory of his daughter, at a cost of £8,000, and presented to the parish. The old church is now used as a public hall. The minerals in the district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here. The woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. Considerable interest is attached to this part of the country as having been the birthplace or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland. In its more secluded recesses, Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat, and it was the birthplace, in 1506, of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, tutor to James VI. and principal of St. Leonard's College, St. Andrews, who died in Dec. 1582; he was born at a place called The Moss, a small farmhouse on the bank of the Water of Blane, about two miles from the village of Killearn. In the village is an obelisk of freestone, 19 feet square at the base and 103 feet in height, erected to his memory in 1788. Ballikrain Castle is the seat of Archibald Ernest Orr-Ewing esq. D.L., J.P., and Killearn House, the seat of Lt.-Col. Peter Blackburn. Acreage of the parish, 15,370; rateable value, £17,466; population in 1881, 1,131, and in 1891, 1,182, the village containing 354 of that number. Post, M & T. O. T. M. NEW KILPATRICK, a parish, formerly partly included in this county, was, in 1831, wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton, which see.

KILSYTH is a town, police burgh and parish in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Lennoxtown. The parish is about 7 miles in length, and 4½ in breadth. In form it is an irregular oblong, bounded by the river Carron on the north, which separates it from St. Ninians, Firky on the north-west, Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire, on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kilvin rivers, and also contains two of the reservoirs of the Forth and Clyde canal. Railway communication with Glasgow was opened here in 1875, through the Blae Valley section of the North British line, and there is a line from Larbert on the Caledonian railway. The town is on the main road from Stirling to Glasgow, 35 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 south-south- west from Stirling, between 12 and 13 north- north-east from Glasgow, and nearly 12 west-by-south from Falkirk, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commis- sioners. A police and justice of the peace court is held every Monday. About the middle of the parish is a hill, 1,393 feet high, which exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. Some of the inhabitants are still employed in weaving for Glasgow houses and resident manufacturers. The parish is stocked with coal and ironstone, quantities of the latter being supplied to the Carron Iron Works, near Falkirk, and to the Gartsherrie Iron Works, Con- tbridge. The production of coke is carried on by Messrs. William Baird and Co. Lim. and whinstone and freestone quarrying at Barwood, Auchinsterry, Colzium and the Glen quarries. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, are established in the town, and there is also a savings bank. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingston, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in the burial place of this family, the bodies of Jean, Lady Kil- syth and her infant son lay embalmed for many years; the last viscount died an exile at Rome, 12 Jan. 1733. In 1637, near the village, the Covenanters, commanded by General Baillie, were defeated by Montrose, Colzium House, at present unoccupied, is the property of Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. Sir Archibald Edmonstone, Robert Duntreath Castle, Strathblane, Robert Glen esq. Thomas B. Provan esq. James J. Caddell esq. the Carron Co. Messrs. William Baird and Co. Hamilton Brown esq. and Alexander Provan esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage of the civil parish, 13,121; rateable value, landward, £26,788; barghial, £24,580; population in 1881, 6,840, and in 1891, 7,424, the town numbering 6,073; ecclesiastical parish, population in 1891, 6,653.

Gavell, 2 miles west, and Colzium, about 1 east, are hamlets in this parish, and both have a station, the former on the Glasgow and Kilsyth section of the North British railway, and the latter on the Lar- bert and Kilsyth line of the Kilsyth and Bonnybridge railway. Chapel Green is also a hamlet.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Archibald Chalmers, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Glasgow, Deliveries, 8.30 a.m. & 2.30 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 9.30 a.m. & 12 noon. 1.20, 3.15, 5.30, 9 & 10.10 p.m. Post Box, Old station, cleared 10.20 p.m.

KIPPEN is a parish in Dumfries poor combination and small debt court district of Stirling, 8 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth, and bounded on the north by the river Forth, which separates the county from Perthshire, on the east by Gartnock, on the south by Balfron and Fintry, and on the west by the parish of Drymen; it is well watered, and from some of the higher grounds an extensive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 13, the part of Kippen parish formerly in Perthshire has been transferred to Stirlingshire. The village is in the eastern part of the parish, on the road from Doune to Glasgow, and has a station $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and is 10 miles west from Stirling. Mineral wells are in the neighbourhood. A quarry of red stone is also near the village. Fairs are held at Kippen on the second Wednesday in December, and at Balgair, a moor about 2 miles from Kippen, for horses, cattle and sheep, on the Friday before the 26th June. Near the railway station is the Ford of Frew, where, in 1746, Prince Charles lost his cannon, while retreating before the Campbells. James Stirling esq. of Garden; Robert Cunningham-Grabam esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore; Rear-Admiral Henry John Fletcher-Campbell C.B. of Boquhan; Lady Connal, of Killearn; Thomas L. Galbraith esq. of Blackhouse; Daniel Fisher esq. of Ballamenoch; Mrs. Monteith, of Wright's Park, Henry David Erskine esq. D.L. J.P. of Cardross, and Wm.

Forrester, of Arngibbon, are the principal proprietors. The area of the civil parish is 11,256 acres; rateable value, £9,150; the population in 1881 was 1,500, and in 1891, 1,486, and of the village, including Caidhume and Shurgarton, 411; of the ecclesiastical parish, 990.

LARBERT (or Larbet) is a parish, in Falkirk small debt court district, and is 3½ miles broad by 3 long, and bounded on the north by St. Ninians, north-east by Arth, east by Bothkennar, south by the river Carron, which divides it from Falkirk, and west by Dunipace. The village is situated on the side of a hill, on the northern bank of the Carron, and on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and has a station on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway; it is 3 miles west from Falkirk and 8 south-south-east from Stirling. The civil parish of Dunipace is included in Larbert ecclesiastical parish. The present established church, erected in 1822, from designs of Mr. Hamilton, of Glasgow, is an edifice of stone in the Tudor Gothic style, with a square tower, containing one bell, and has upwards of 1,000 sittings. The Falkirk cattle trysts are held on Stehousen moor in this parish in August, September and October, when 20,000 to 30,000 head of cattle and great numbers of sheep are exposed for sale. Close to Larbert station are the works of Messrs. Dobbie, Forbes & Co. and Messrs. Jones & Campbell, for the manufacture of stoves, grates and ranges. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. Kinraid House, standing in a park of 120 acres, is now the residence and property of Robert Orr esq.; it formerly belonged to James Bruce, the celebrated traveller, who was born in this house in 1730, and died here in 1794; his remains are interred in the parish churchyard, and a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. Carron Hall is the seat of Walter Easton esq. J.P.; Stehousen, the property of the Dundas family, is now occupied by John Bisset Verel esq. and Dunipace House, is the property and residence of John A. Harvie-Brown esq. George Sheriff esq. of Carnvale, John H. N. Graham esq. of Larbert House and Robert Orr esq. of Kinraid, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 3,963; rateable value, £36,296; population in 1881, 6,346, in 1891, 8,340, and in 1899, about 1,100; the village having 904 of that number.

Stenhousemuir is a small town about half a mile east of Larbert, in the same parish. Another half mile distant is the hamlet of North Broomage, near which is the Scottish National Institution for the Education of Imbecile Children. In this locality is also the Stirling District Lunatic Asylum for the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, Linlithgow and Clackmannan. In July, 1893, a new hospital block was opened, at a cost of £20,000, from designs by Messrs. A. & W. Black, architects, of Falkirk. Population of Stenhousemuir in 1891, 3,718, and in 1899, about 5,000.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Larbert; Mrs. Janet McLachlan, postmistress. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 1.45 & 5.45 p.m.; dispatches, 4.40 & 8.30 a.m. & 12 noon & 5.8 & 8 p.m.

Post, T. & M. O. T. M. O., Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, S. B. & Annuity & Insurance Office, Stenhousemuir; Mrs. Janet M. Walker, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Larbert. Deliveries, 8 a.m. & 2.30 & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 8 & 11.20 a.m. & 4.15 & 7.15 p.m.

LIMERIGG, see SLAMANNAN.

LOGIE is a parish, in the small debt court district of Stirling, and is bounded on the north-west by Perthshire, east by Clackmannanshire and south by the river Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 & 127, a part of Leacroft parish in Stirlingshire and part of Alloa in Perthshire, have been transferred to Logie, and those portions of Logie parish formerly in the counties of Clackmannan and Perth have been added to Stirlingshire, the whole parish of Logie therefore now being in the latter county. The kirk is about 3 miles from Stirling station on the North British and Caledonian railway, and the same distance from Bridge of Allan station on the Caledonian railway. The village of Blair Logie is very agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, at the entrance to Sheriff Muir and the mouth of Glendevon; it presents a singularly pleasing scene of natural beauty, and is a favourite resort in summer for visitors from the large towns. The remains of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded in 1147, by King David I. for Augustine canons, stand on the north of the Forth, about 1 mile east of Stirling; some of the materials were used in the building of the structure called "Mar's Work," in Stirling, James VI. having given the abbey to the Earl of Mar at the Reformation; the massive detached tower still remains nearly perfect, and the foundations of the church have been excavated so as to disclose the plan and extent of the buildings, and during the progress of this work the body of James III. killed at Sanchburn, was discovered and reinterred in a new tomb near the site of the high altar, the expense being borne by H.M. the Queen, who had an inscription detailing the particulars placed on the tomb. About 1 mile north of the abbey stands the Wallace Monument, a lofty stone tower of 4 rooms, which contain relics of the hero, including his sword from Dumbarton, busts of other Scottish worthies, and various curiosities; on the outside, in front, is a bronze statue of Wallace, who, in 1297, defeated the English at the battle of Stirling Bridge, near this spot. The principal landowners are Donald Graham esq. C.I.E. of Airthrey Castle; J. M. Morris Stirling esq. of Gogar House; Lieut.-Col. James Hare, of Blair Logie; and the trustees of the late Gen. J. E. Alexander. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 11,814 acres; rateable value of present area, landward £12,217; burghal (Bridge of Allan) £23,314; the population in 1881 was 4,636, and in 1891, 4,252, of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 2,286.

 Post Office, Blair Logie; John Dawson, postmaster. Letters received through Stirling. Deliveries, 7 & 9 a.m.; dispatches, 9 a.m. & 3 & 7.15 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Menstrie, 1 mile distant

MENSTRIE, a village, has been transferred by boundary order No. 124 from Stirlingshire to Clackmannanshire

MILNGAVIE, a town and police burgh (generally called Millgay), is a quad sacra parish, erected out of that of New (or East) Kilpatrick, in the small debt court district of Dumbarton, and in the counties of Dumbarton and Stirling, in which latter county the larger portion of the parish is situated, and which also contains the burgh, with a station, the terminus of a branch line of the North British railway. The town is 12 miles east from Dumbarton, 5 north-east from Duntocher, 21 south-west from Stirling, 7 north from Glasgow, 51 west from Edinburgh and 2 north-east from New Kilpatrick, and is governed by a provost and commissioners. In the town is a paper mill, and in the neighbourhood are two bleach fields, dye works and a distillery. Mains House is the residence of Archibald C. Douglas esq. D.L., J.P. and the principal landowner. The rateable value of the burgh is £10,761; the population of the ecclesiastical parish was, in 1891, 3,527; 3,380 in Stirlingshire and 147 only in Dumbartonshire; these figures include the population of the town, which contained in 1891, 3,103.

MUIRAVONDSIDE is a parish, in Linlithgow poor combination and Falkirk small debt court district; it is 6 miles in length by 2 in breadth, bounded by Polmont on the north-west, the river Avon on the east and south-east, which divides it from Linlithgowshire, Falkirk on the west and Polmont on the north. The village is on the left bank of the Avon, and on the west bank of the Union canal, and is about 2 miles from Linlithgow and about 4 south-east from Falkirk. On the Avon in this parish are the ruins of a nunnery, founded by Malcolm IV. and half a mile west are the remains of the ancient castle of Almond, for several generations the favourite seat of the Livingstons, Earls of Callendar. Muiravonside House is the residence of John Stirling esq. J.P. William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. of Callendar; John Stirling esq. J.P.; T. Livingstone Learmonth esq. Park Hall, are the principal landowners. The land is nearly all arable and enclosed, and beneath the surface there is an abundance of coal. The parish of Muiravonside covers an area of 7,963 acres; rateable value, £29,811; in 1881 the population was 2,713, and in 1891, 3,671, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 2,208.

Maddiston, 1 mile south from the church, is a village in this parish. The population with City Hill in 1891 was 311.

At Causewayend, about 1 mile east from the church, are the works of the Linlithgow Foundry Co. iron founders, and a station on the Coatbridge and Mannel branch of the North British railway.

At Blackston, in this parish, 3½ miles south from the church, is a station on the same branch, from which place is a line to Bathgate and Westfield. Bowhouse station, also on the Mannel branch, is about 2 miles south of the church. Mannel station is also on the line from Edinburgh to Larbert.

Post Office, Maddiston; Mrs. Janet Cunningham, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Polmont Station S.O. Stirlingshire. Delivery, 10.20 a.m.; dispatches, 9.40 a.m. & 1.30 & 7.45 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Polmont Station, 2 miles distant

PLEAN is a quoad sacra parish, formed from St. Ninians. East Plean village is on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, about 3 miles south from Bannockburn station on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, 5 north from Falkirk and 5 south from Stirling. In the village is a hospital for old and indigent men, more especially soldiers and sailors, founded by Colonel Francis Simpson, of East Plean, who died in 1831, having bequeathed upwards of £30,000 and an estate for the purpose. The establishment contains 48 inmates, who are boarded, clothed, and have a small allowance of pocket-money; the trustees granted the land on which a church has been erected in connection with the Church of Scotland. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 845.

POLMONT is a parish and village, in Falkirk small debt court district; the parish extends 5 miles inland from the Forth, and is about 2 miles in breadth and 6 in length; it is intersected by the main road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, and is bounded by the river on the east, the Union canal on the south, and the Firth of Forth on the north. The village lies on the road from Linlithgow to Falkirk, from which it is 3½ miles east, and has a station half a mile south on the North British railway. Blairlodge, a large private school here, conducted on public principles, has about 200 boarders, and stands in its own grounds of 30 acres; in connection with the school is a chapel, seating 500, and a hospital. Polmont Park is the residence of James McKillop esq. M.P., D.L.; Mill-field, of David Mitchell esq. J.P.; Park Hall, of Thomas L. Learmonth esq. J.P. and Park Hill, of Alexander W. Gray Buchanan esq. The Duke of Hamilton; the Marquess of Zetland P.C.; David Mitchell esq.; T. L. Learmonth esq. J.P. and A. W. Gray Buchanan esq. are the principal landowners. The parish has within its limits several coal mines, and abounds in iron and freestone. Area of the parish, 5,512 acres; rateable value, landward £23,644; burghal (Grangemonth) £12,770;
population in 1881, 3,955, and in 1891, 4,949, of which the village contained 485; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 2,901.

The small village of Nether Polmont is on the coast from Falkirk to Bo'ness, from which it is 4 miles distant.

Redding is a village in the parish of Polmont, abounding in coal mines, worked by James Nimmo & Co. Limited. Nobel's Explosive Co. Limited, have large works here for the manufacture of detonators for their dynamite. Population in 1891 was 643.

ST. NINIANS is a town and parish, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The form of the parish is irregular; in extent, it may be computed at about 12 miles from east to west and about 6 from north to south, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Airth, on the south by Dunipace and the river Carron, which separates it from Denny and Kilsyth, on the west by Fintry and Garguonock, and on the north by the river Forth, which separates it from Kincardine, Leacroft, Logie and Alva (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted).
 Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 118, a part of St. Ninians parish has been transferred to Stirling, and a part of that parish added to St. Ninians. Subsequently, by an order of the Secretary for Scotland, the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894" the town is now incorporated with Stirling burgh, on the road from that place to Falkirk and Glasgow; also 2 miles south from Stirling, and consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned, and many of which retain the dates of their erection, and some are rudely and grotesquely carved. Well-cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. The parish derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient church, the steeple of which still remains, but the rest of the fabric being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was blown up immediately before their retreat to the north. The manufacture of nails has for a long time been carried on at St. Ninians; other staples are the tanning of leather and the manufacture of screw bolts. Earls Burn, a feeder of the Carron, and Bannock Burn, a tributary of the Forth, both rise in the western part of the parish, in which are also Earls Hill, 1,443 feet high, and Hart Hill, 1,428 feet. Polmaise Castle, the seat of Lieut.-Col. John Murray D.L., J.P.; Sanchie-Burn House, of Miss Ramsay-Gibson Maitland; Touch House, of Sir Alan Henry Seton-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. and Craigforth House, of James Conper esq. are in this parish. Lieut.-Col. John Murray, Miss Ramsay-Gibson Maitland, Sir Alan Henry Seton-Stewart bart. Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart esq. M.P. of Carnock, Joseph Cheezy Bolton esq. of Plean, Col.

 Alex. Wilson, of Bannockburn, and the Duke of Montrose K.T. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 38,047 acres; rateable value of present area, £61,688; the population in 1881 was 10,423, and in 1891, 9,571, viz.:— Bannockburn, 2,000; Stirling burgh, 2,908, and landward, 4,663.

Cambusbarron is a village in the parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile north-west from that place. A number of the inhabitants are employed in connection with the Murrays-hall Lime Stone Mines. Board schools were erected in 1875, at a cost of £4,000.
 Population in 1891, 1,121.

Carnock is a small district in the parish of St. Ninians, but in the postal delivery of Larbert.

SHIELDHILL and BLACK-BRAES form a quadra parish, formed from Polmont and Muiravonside civil parishes, and is equi-distant 2½ miles from Falkirk and Polmont stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and from Avonbridge station on the Coatbridge and Manuel line of the North British railway. The Established church at California, in the centre of the parish, is a plain edifice of stone, and has upwards of 150 sittings. In the parish are collieries of the Carron Co. which give employment to the majority of the inhabitants. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,269.

The population of Blackbraes village in 1891 was 510, and of East Shieldhill, 566.

SLAMANNAN is a parish, lying on the south bank of the river Avon, and extending along the margin of that stream for about 5 miles, its breadth being from 3 to 4 miles; it is in the small debt court district of Falkirk; there has been added in 1895 a portion taken from the parish of Falkirk extending along the north bank of the Avon. Near the north-west end of the parish there is a point where the shires of Stirling, Dumbarton and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet that of Linlithgow. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which in part supplies the great reservoir for the Forth and Clyde canal. The village is on the road from Linlithgow to Glasgow, with a station close to it on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway, 7 miles south-west from Falkirk and 10 south-west from Linlithgow. The Established church, erected about the beginning of the 19th century, is a plain edifice of stone, with a small tower containing one bell, and has about 800 sittings. In the village is a branch of the Bank of Scotland. The whole neighbourhood abounds in collieries, and there are a few dairy farms in the parish. A considerable portion of the land is arable; the remainder consists of bog and moss. Alexander Peddie-Waddell esq. J.P. of Balquhatstone; John Motherwell Alston esq. of Coatbridge; Messrs. Aitken Brothers, of Falkirk, and James Paton esq. of Avonhill, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 7,062; rateable value, £23,412; the population in 1881, 5,850, and in 1891, 6,731, the village containing 1,727 of that number; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 7,221.

Avonbridge is a small village partly in the parish of Slamannan and partly in that of Muiravonside, about 7 miles south-east from Falkirk, with a station on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway. Here is a woollen and yarn spinning mill. Population and acreage returned with Slamannan.

STIRLING.

STIRLING is an ancient royal burgh, also a parliamentary burgh and head of small debt court district and poor combination, as well as the capital of the county, and a parish, and possesses a railway station on the Caledonian and North British lines, 36 miles west from Edinburgh, 23 north-east from Glasgow, 33 south-west from Perth, 11 north-west from Falkirk and 6 south from Dunblane, about 7 miles above Alloa. During the Roman occupation (A.D. 79 to 410) the town was styled by them, Binobara. The strath through which the Forth flows expands into a broad flat plain, through which the river winds until it merges into the Firth; just at the widening of this strath, which at this point has a breadth of about 2 miles, stands a detached mass of rock, to the south of the river, sloping upwards from the south-east and terminating on the north in an abrupt precipice 230 feet in height; the town occupies the slope of the rock and also the level summit, on which are the Grey Friars church, Mar's Work, Argyll's Lodging, and lastly, occupying the extremity and highest point of the hill, stands the castle.

The old bridge, erected at the beginning of the 15th century, is a graceful structure, and still retains its four original arches; it rises to a point in the centre, and at each end is a gateway tower. The new bridge was erected in 1831, from plans by Robert Stephenson, the eminent engineer, and the railway viaduct crosses near them. Kildean Bridge, which gave the name to the battle of "Stirling Bridge," 11 September, 1297, was an old wooden bridge further up the stream, of which there is now scarcely any trace.

The streets of the burgh are well paved and lighted with gas, and the town is well supplied with water, brought from reservoirs on the Touch Hills, a distance of about 5 miles.

Stirling, as a burgh, dates from the time of Alexander I. King of Scotland (1107-1124), who granted the first charter in 1119; it is now governed by a provost, who is also high sheriff, the only provost in Scotland holding this important office, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 14 councillors, who are elected according to the terms of the "Scottish Burgh Reform Act." The limits of the burgh have been enlarged and now include St. Ninians and other small villages and hamlets.

The sheriff courts for the Stirling, or Western, district of the county are held here.

The burgh, in conjunction with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, returns one member to Parliament. There are four Established churches, four Free, three United Presbyterian, one Episcopal, and Wesleyan, Baptist, Congregational and Roman Catholic chapels. The high, or parish, church of the Holy Rood, existing in the 12th century, was in 1494 attached to the monastery of Grey Friars here, and is hence known as the Grey Friars church; it consists of a lofty choir, built about 1507, transept, clerestoried nave with aisles, dating from 1414, and an embattled tower, 90 feet in height, with a miniature spire, and containing 4 bells; in 1656 it was divided into east and west churches, and is still thus used by two congregations; the choir, or east church, is of four bays, with aisles of three bays, and contains a number of stained windows, the east window being a memorial to John Cowane, the founder of the hospital of that name; the nave, or west church, is also adorned with stained glass, and has a number of mural tablets to benefactors of the town and others; adjoining the church is the old churchyard, in which are some monuments of ancient date.

The North church, in the Norman style, is in Murray place, where also is the Free North church, which has a fine spire.

Holy Trinity church, in Albert place, is another handsome edifice. In St. John street is a statue, erected at a cost of over £500, in memory of Ebenezer Erskine, the founder, in 1740, of the United Presbyterian body.

The Municipal Buildings, King street, comprise a tower with a lofty spire, containing a clock with four dials; the council chamber and town clerk's offices are in the upper portion of the building, and over the entrance portico is a statue of Sir William Wallace, presented by the late W. Drummond esq.

The Corn Exchange is near the head of King street. The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in Stirling in Sept. 1898, following upon an offer made by Mr. Andrew Carnegie to provide a suitable building at a cost of £6,000. The Town Council has provided a suitable site in the Exchange area, and the building is now (1899) about to be erected.

The Arcade, a glass-roofed thoroughfare, between Murray place and King street, was built in 1892, and, besides shops, it contains the Douglas hotel and two halls, the larger of which seats 1,100 persons, and is licensed for stage plays.

The Public Hall, in Albert place, was erected in 1833, by a Limited Company, from designs by Mr. William Simpson, jun. architect, of Stirling, at a cost of about £12,000, and contains a large hall fitted for dramatic performances, for which there is a licence, and seating 1,400 persons; and a smaller hall, seated for 300, with retiring and cloak rooms and keeper's apartments. In the large hall is an organ, which cost £2,300.

The old Town House, in Broad street, is a plain building of three storeys, with a lofty square tower, finished with a balustrading and lantern, and containing a clock with chiming; in front of the building stands the Heriot cross, restored in 1891, and consisting of a shaft raised on four steps and surmounted by the figure of a unicorn; behind it, in St. John street, is a military prison. The County Buildings, in Barnton street, erected in 1874, comprise a judicatory court room, where the lords of session sit twice a year, sheriff and justice of peace court rooms, county council offices, law library, and the offices and cells of the county constabulary, opposite to which is a fountain of granite erected in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee.

The Smith Institute, in Dumbarton road, erected in 1873, was founded by the late Thomas Stuart Smith esq. of Glassingall, at a cost of £5,000, who also left funds for its future maintenance; the town council gave the site, and the building embraces a reading room, library of about 7,000 volumes, museum and picture gallery, all of which are open to the public free, the provost and others being appointed trustees.

The Stirling Tract Depot is in Dumbarton road. The Stirling Royal Infirmary, founded about 1873, is a building of two storeys, in the Italian style, with a lofty pedimented portico, and circular spired turrets at the angles. During the year 1897-8 the number of in-patients treated in the wards was 262, and of out-patients treated at the Dispensary, 2,205; of the total number, 659 were cases of accident.

The Poor House was erected in 1856, at a cost of £7,000. Cowane's Hospital for decayed Guild Brethren was founded in 1639 by John Cowane, merchant, and sometime dean of Guild, and consists of a central block with stepped gabled wings and a square tower with ogee roof; over the tower entrance is a statue of the founder; in 1852 the interior was re-modelled, and is now used as a Guild hall, and the almshouse are treated as pensioners. Here is preserved the founder's oak chest, richly carved and inscribed, and bearing the date 1636, besides other objects of interest.

The newspapers published here are the "Stirling Observer," the "Stirling Journal and Advertiser," the "Bridge of Allan Gazette," the "Bridge of Allan Reporter," the "Stirling Scotchman," the "Visitor," and the "Callander Advertiser," all of which circulate throughout the district.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Co.'s Bank and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, besides the Stirling Savings Bank.

The principal hotels are the Golden Lion, in King street, the Royal hotel, in Barnton place, Lennox's Station hotel, and the Douglas hotel, in Murray place.

Some shipping trade is carried on, and during the summer river steamers from Leith afford a cheap and agreeable communication with Edinburgh.

The manufactures of Stirling, although not extensive, comprise carpet weaving, worsted spinning, and woollen waste and flock making; there are also india rubber works, a large cooperage, an iron foundry, agricultural implements factory, perambulator and folding bedstead factories, carriage works, cabinet making works and a tannery.

A weekly market is held on Friday, and stock sales are held on Thursday.

The fairs are held on the first Friday in February, for horses; the last Friday in May, for cattle and horses; the first Friday in March, April and May, for cattle; the third Friday in October and the last Friday in May, for hiring servants.

Stirling Castle, which stands at the end of a steep ridge of rock, is one of the fortresses appointed by the "Act of Union" to be kept in a state of repair; it is entered from the town across an esplanade and over a drawbridge, by which the inner courtyard is reached, around which are the royal buildings, consisting of the palace built by James V. a building of stone ornamented with grotesque carving; the Parliament House, erected by James III. and the chapel, built by James VI.; in the palace is the Douglas room, in which James II. who was born in this building, stabbed the 8th Earl of Douglas; the other royal personages connected with this fortress were Alexander I. of Scotland, who died here 1124, James VI. who was crowned here at the age of 13 months, and Charles II. crowned at Scoce 1651, who occupied Stirling on his way to Worcester. The Regent Lennox was killed during an attack made on the town by Mary's adherents in 1571. James VI.'s eldest son, Prince Henry, was baptized in the castle chapel. There is a walk round the castle rock entered from the town. Between the castle and the church are "The Valley," where tournaments took place, and the gardens, in which is a curious mound known as the King's Knot; here also is the King's Park of about 100 acres and the New Cemetery.

Argyll's Lodging, east side of the Castle wynd, is a fine house, erected in 1632 by the Earl of Stirling, but now used as a military hospital; in it King Charles II. lodged in 1651. Mar's Work, in Broad street, erected by John, Earl of Mar, in 1570, includes the lower portion of a gatehouse, flanked by octagonal towers, and some adjacent walls, all which are adorned with panelling, heraldic devices and inscriptions; much of the work is ecclesiastical in its character, and is said to have been taken from Cambuskenneth Abbey.

The town, in 1147, was given to the English to secure the terms of the treaty of Falaise and restored to the Scotch by Richard I. in 1186, but in 1297 the English, in an attempt to regain it, were defeated by Wallace at Stirling Bridge and their army, under the Earl of Surrey, was cut to pieces; in 1304, Edward I. after a severe siege took the castle and town. In 1314 Robert Bruce besieged it, and a relieving army under Edward II. having been destroyed at Bannockburn, the fortress surrendered, but Edward III. having extorted from Baliol in 1333 a surrender of all the principal fortresses of Scotland, in 1339 the Scotch again took it, and then for two centuries it remained in their possession undisturbed, until Queen Mary's adherents made an attempt on it in 1571, and the Earl of Ruthven and his brother took it in 1583. The Covenanters held it in 1639, and the Duke of Argyll occupied it in 1715 for the Hanoverian Government. In 1745 Prince Charles Edward unsuccessfully attempted its capture, and this ended its vicissitudes and it is now a military depot.

On the esplanade of the castle stands a statue of King Robert Bruce, nearly 11 feet in height, overlooking the battle fields of Stirling and Bannockburn; the figure, modelled by Mr. Andrew Currie, was unveiled in Nov. 1877. The monument was unveiled by Lady Alexander, on the 24th November, 1877. The Wallace monument, erected to commemorate the victory of Stirling Bridge, is at Abbey Craig, Causewayhead.

The area of the parish, previous to the alteration of the boundary in May, 1895, was 1,378 acres; the assessable value of the altered area, £77,998; in 1891 the population of the entire parish, after alterations made under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," was 14,170, and of the royal burgh, 16,974; the population of the whole parliamentary burgh in 1891 was: Stirling, 16,776; Culross, 370; Dunfermline, 19,647; Inverkeithing, 1,663, and Queensferry, 1,531; total, 39,987.

The number of electors on the Stirling parliamentary register in 1898 was 2,575, and on the district burghs, 6,253.

Mary Kirk is a quoad sacra parish taken from that of Stirling; population in 1891, 4,759.

STRATHBLANE parish derives its name from the vale of the river Blane, which pursues a north-western course through it; the land of this valley is exceedingly fertile, and the hills are clothed with natural woods; the parish lies in the south-western part of the county and is 5 miles in length from north to south and about 4 wide, and bounded on the east by the parish of Campsie, on the south by Baldercreek, south-west by the Allander river, which separates it from East Kilpatrick in Dumbartonshire, and on the west and north by Killearn, and is in the small debt court district of Lenoxtown. The village stands at the junction of the roads from Glasgow and Kirkiotilloch through Aberfoyle to Loch Katrine, and has a station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle branch of the North British railway, and is 8 miles north from Glasgow, 20 west from Falkirk and 7 north-west from Kirkiotilloch. About 1 mile to the west is Duntreath Castle, the seat of Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. D.L. and 2 miles south-east is Mugdock Castle, the property of the Duke of Montrose K.T. but now occupied by J. Reid esq.; Craigend Castle, in a small park, is the seat of Sir James Buchanan bart. D.L., J.P. Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. D.L. Sir James Buchanan bart. D.L., J.P. Allan Graham-Barns-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Craighallan, Milngavie, the Duke of Montrose K.T. John C. Graham esq. Andrew Jameson esq. and William B. Craig esq. Ballagan, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,068; rateable value, £17,000; population in 1881, 1,343, and in 1891, 1,871.

Blanehead is a village, about 1 mile west from Strathblane, with a station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle branch of the North British railway. The population in 1891 was 555.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

THIS is the most northerly but one of the counties of Scotland, and is bordered on the north and west by the Atlantic Ocean, which accounts for the rugged and deeply indented coasts on those two faces; it also has a coast line of 26 miles on the Moray Firth on the south-east, and 18 miles along the Dornoch Firth on the south, its remaining boundaries on the east and south being the counties of Caithness and Ross respectively, but though it possesses this extensive sea coast it has only one port of any importance, viz. Dornoch, on the south-east coast; from east to west it extends 62 miles, and from north to south 49 miles. It has an area of 2,027 square miles, or 1,297,849 acres, exclusive of 47,633 acres of water, 12,812 of foreshore, and 1,553 of tidal water. The population in 1891 comprised 10,395 males and 11,501 females; total, 21,896, and in 1881 was 23,370; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 4,713, and in 1881, 4,840. In size it ranks as the fifth, and in population as the twenty-ninth, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This northern county appears to have been held by the Picts, and though the Romans penetrated here, there seems to be no record of any permanent occupation by them. The Dalriads in 767 fought the Picts at Forteviot, Perthshire, but did not succeed in penetrating further, though in 843 their king succeeded to the Pictish throne, and these northern tribes had to turn their attention to resisting the constant invasions of the Danes, and were also frequently engaged in clan feuds. King James I. made several expeditions to the north to control the clans, but these feuds continued; early in the 15th century the Lord of the Isles invaded this county, but was defeated at the Sands of Fleet, and in 1517 the Mackays made an incursion, but were repulsed. These feuds continued up to the early part of the 17th century, and in 1650 Montrose ravaged these parts.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of an uninterrupted succession of mountains, valleys and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets and bays, and with many large promontories, among which Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt and Sutherland, the first-named including the northern part, and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided naturally into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle and the Western. The first is a level narrow strip of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from 300 to 800 feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oykel; and the Western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountains of greatest altitude in the shire are Ben More, 3,235; Ben Clebrig, 3,157 and Ben Hope, 3,040 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the last century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of civilisation. The great barrier to improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement. The first was the exertions made by the noble family of Gower, and the second was by Parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. Breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and swelling hills, as well as its climate, eminently adapt it. The county rears many thousands of sheep, mostly of the Cheviot breed, of which a great number are annually exported. The soil, being of a sandy, open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of oats, barley, turnips and clover. The chief crops in 1898, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," are—oats, 7,887 acres; barley or bere, 1,476; the total corn crops being 9,474; turnips and swedes, 3,035 acres; potatoes, 1,677; total green crops, 4,779; hay, 5,195 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 4,897 acres; permanent pasture, 7,847 acres; the total area of land and water being 1,345,480 acres, of which 925,311 acres are mountain and heath, 19,339 woods and 302 plantations. The live stock in 1898 comprised—horses—used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 2,283; other horses, 488; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 5,769; other cattle, 6,950; ewes kept for breeding, 74,822; other sheep, 132,253; sows kept for breeding, 143; other pigs, 737. The exports of farm produce have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland. Coal has for many years been wrought at Brora, and the production of coal in the county in 1897 was 4,122 tons, value £1,237. From the fishing stations on the coast there are annually exported immense quantities of herrings, besides cod and ling. This county is almost devoid of manufactures, the only works being at Brora and Rogart, at which places tweeds, blankets &c. are made. Hand looms are, however, still worked in many of the crofters' houses.

The chief rivers are the Brora, Borgia, Naver, Helmsdale, Halladale, Laxford, Inchard, Inver, Shin, Fleet, Strathmore and Gruke; the chief sea lochs, the Fleet, Glenoel, Glendhu, Inver and Laxford, and the principal fresh water lochs are the Assynt, Cama, Garbetbeg, Hope, Loyal, Meadie, Merkland, More, Naver, Shin (17 miles long) and the Vevatie. The railway system belongs to the Highland Railway Company and comprises a line which, coming north from Inverness, turns to the west when it reaches the Dornoch Firth and enters this county at Invershin, runs due north to Lairg, when it turns eastward to Golspie, runs up the coast to Helmsdale, where it turns again to the west and north-west, quitting the county near Forsinard station and proceeding to Wick and Thurso; from the latter place steamers run to the Orkney Islands.

Division, Representation &c.—Sutherlandshire comprises 13 parishes and 16 ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Sutherland and Caithness. It contains only one town, Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty in returning one representative, and the county at large sends another. The parliamentary constituency in 1898 numbered 2,557. The valuation for 1897-8 was £95,793.

ASSYNT is a large parish, on the Minch Channel, between Kyle Sku and Loch Enard, and is in Sutherland poor combination; it is 23 miles long from Stoir Point to the Cromalt Hills, and about 13 broad, bounded on the east by Eddrachillis, south-east by Ross-shire, south-west by Lake Veyatie and the river Kirkaig, which divide it from Cromarty, and west by the Minch. Assynt kirk, which is on the southern extremity of the lake of that name, is 20 miles north-west from Lairg station on the Tain and Golspie section of the Highland railway. In the parish there are nearly thirty lakes, the largest being Assyn, about 8 miles in length by 1 in breadth, Cama 4 miles long, with a breadth of nearly 1 mile; and Urganl 2 miles long and 1 broad. The Assynt contains salmon and trout. Inver is a sea loch on the shore of the village of the same name. The mountains in the parish are Ben More, 3,273 feet in height, Canisp, 2,779 feet, Quinag, 2,653 feet and Suliven, 2,403 feet. Oidany Island, which is included in the parish, is in the southern part of Eddrachillis Bay, and is about 1½ miles long by 1 broad. In 1891 it was uninhabited. About 5 miles west of this island is Stoir Point, a prominent headland. Sithean Mor on this headland rises to a height of 530 feet. Slate, spat and marble are found in this parish. The area of the parish is 110,111 acres; rateable value, £5,646; the population in 1881 was 2,781, and in 1891, 2,551.

BRORA is a thriving village, in the parish of Clyne and small debt court district of Dornoch; it is on the south-east coast, at the point where the river Brora falls into the Moray Firth, and is about 12 miles south-south-west from Helmsdale, and 6 north-north-east from Golspie, and has a station on the Tain and Helmsdale section of the Highland railway. The climate is very dry and the temperature warm, and the sands here attract a large number of bathers. The links have long been famous for golf. There is excellent fishing in the Brora water, and at Strathbrora, both which places abound with salmon. About a mile of free sea trout fishing is also to be had. The curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood, and a coal pit which has been worked for 300 years. Bricks and tiles are made here, and there is a large tweed mill. In the village is a branch of the Town and County Bank. The population in 1891 was 580.

CLYNE is a large parish, in the Sutherland poor combination and Dornoch small debt court district, 20 miles in length by from 4 to 8 in breadth, and bounded on the north by Loth and Kildonan, on the south by Golspie and Creich, on the west it extends as far as the Strathbrora, and on the east by the Moray Firth coast line, including Brora. Clyne kirk is about 2 miles north from Brora station, which is in the parish, on the Tain and Helmsdale section of the Highland railway, about 12 miles south-south-west from Helmsdale and 6 north-north-east from Golspie. Loch Brora, about 4 miles long and 1 broad, is in the parish, and after receiving, at its northern extremity, the waters of the Strathbrora, the Blackwater and Skinsdale, all of which rise in the parish, forms the Brora river, which falls into the Moray Firth at the village of Brora. The Duke of Sutherland is the principal landowner. The area, including Brora, is 74,504 acres; the rateable value is £7,346; the population in 1891 was 1,713, of which Brora possessed 580.

COLABOLL, see LAIRG.

CREICH is a parish, in Sutherland poor combination and Dornoch small debt court district; it is a large parish, being about 35 miles long by a breadth varying from 2 to 3, bounded on the north by Lairg, on the south by Kincardine and Eldertown, in Ross-shire, on the east by Dornoch and Rogart, and on the west by Kincardine (in Ross-shire) and Assynt. The village is on the north side of the Dornoch Firth, 4½ miles south from Bonar Bridge station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway, 10 north-west from Tain and 9½ west from Dornoch. The river Oykel, which rises in the northern extremity of the parish, near Ben More, a mountain, 3,273 feet high, forms the western boundary of the parish for about 20 miles and separates it from Ross-shire; the river in its course receives the Casely, which also rises in the parish. Evaan Charles Sutherland esq. D.L., J.P. of Skibo; the Duke of Sutherland; Sir Charles Henry Augustus Frederick Ross bart. D.L. of Balaigown, and Robert Lockhart Alston esq. of Newfield, Kilnann, Argyle, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 107,652 acres; rateable value, £10,338; the population in 1891 was 2,013.

Bonar Bridge is a considerable village in the parish of Creich, on the great north mail road, and on the north side of the Firth of Dornoch, with a station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway, and is 15 miles north-west from Tain and 13 west from Dornoch. Dornoch Loch is here crossed by a viaduct, completed in 1893, at a cost of £13,000, from designs by Messrs. Crouch & Hogg, engineers, of Glasgow; it has three spans of 70 feet, 105 feet and 140 feet respectively, and a roadway of 25 feet. Here are two hotels, a branch of the Caledonian Banking Company Limited, and a Drill hall for the volunteers. Fairs are held in the village on the second Monday in April, June, July, August, September and October. Population in 1881, 319, and in 1891, 366.

Altass, Spinningdale, Rosehall, Inveran and Invershin are also small villages in Creich parish. At Invershin is a station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway, 4 miles north from Bonar Bridge.

DORNOCH, a parish on the south-east coast, to the north of Dornoch Firth, is also a small seaport and a royal and parliamentary burgh, the capital of the county and head of a sheriff court, and is the Sutherland poor combination; it is 9 miles north from Tain, 7 south from Golspie and 15 north from Cromarty. The parish, which is bounded north by Golspie, south by Creich and west by Rogart, is 10 miles in length from east to west, by 6 in breadth. There are no railways in the parish, but Mound station, on the Highland line, is close to the Northern boundary, across the Fleet, and 6 miles from Dornoch city. Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1623, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with four councillors. In conjunction with Wick, Kirkwall, Dingwall, Cromarty and Tain, it forms the Wick parliamentary district, returning one member. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county and the free navigation of the firth being obstructed by the bar of dangerous sand banks extending between Dornoch and Tain. Some compensation has been found of late years, in the increased number of summer visitors for golf and sea bathing. The water supply and drainage are both good, and several new villas have been erected. The cathedral, now serving only as the parish church, was originally the head of the diocese of Caithness, founded, it is said, by King David I. (1124-53), but at present, for the purposes of the Episcopal Church in Scotland, is united to those of Moray and Ross, with a cathedral church at Inverness. The cathedral of Dornoch was first erected by Gilbert de Moray, bishop of Caithness (1223-60), and is in the Early English and Early Geometric styles, consisting of choir, aisleless nave, transepts and a low central tower with stunted spire: the church, with the exception of the tower, was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1570, during an incursion of hostile tribes, and on 5 November, 1605, one of the arcades was blown down by a violent gale: John, 12th Earl of Sutherland, in 1614 began the repair of the fabric, which was subsequently completed in a plain style. In 1836-7, the Duchess and Countess of Sutherland (d. 1839) restored the church to its original dimensions and added the groined roof; at the east end is a memorial with marble effigy by Chantrey, to George, 2nd Marquess and 1st Duke of Sutherland K.G., P.C. d. 15 July, 1833. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains, but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its ecclesiastical importance since the triumph of the Reformation. Within half a mile from the village of Clashmore is Skibo Castle, the seat of Andrew Carnegie esq.: this castle, at one time a residence and grange of the Bishops of Sutherland and Caithness, was for a long time a fortress, and the celebrated Marquess of Montrose, in the year 1650, spent two nights as a prisoner in the castle, after his defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who delivered him up to his enemies: subsequently the castle was dismantled and allowed to go to ruin, until early in this century, when it was demolished and the present castle erected on its site. Large additions are now (1899) being made to the castle. An extensive fair is held on the first Monday of May, at Clashmore. The Mound is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant. Population in 1891, 204.

Embo, a fishing village and life boat station in this parish, is 2 miles north-east from Dornoch. Here is a new harbour for fishermen, constructed to a great extent by government aid. The Mound is the nearest railway station, 5 miles distant. Population in 1891, 664.

There are two public fairs or markets held annually in the town, on the first Tuesday in November and the other on the first Wednesday in December: these fairs were formerly wont to be thronged by persons from distant parts of the country, but now, in consequence of the rise of small villages in different places and the establishment of cattle markets elsewhere, they are but thinly attended. The Duke of Sutherland K.G. and Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 30,189 acres; arable value of the landward, £6,706 13s. 1d. and of the burgh, £2,945 6s. 6d.; in 1891 the population of the parish was 2,404, which included 514 in the royal burgh, and in 1881, 2,525, including 497 in the burgh.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register, in 1898, was 87.

Clashmore is a modern village, about 5 miles west from Dornoch, and on the estate of Skibo, now the property of Andrew Carnegie esq. There is a comfortable inn, the Sutherland Arms, erected some years since by the late Duchess-Countess of Sutherland.

 poor combination, and in the north-west part of the county, between Whiteu Head and Cape Wrath; it is 20 miles in length, and in breadth 13 miles, and consists principally of hilly pasture; it is bounded on the west by Eddrachillis parish, and east by Tongue, its northern boundary of about 17 miles facing the Atlantic Ocean. Cape Wrath, the most northerly promontory on the western coast, rises perpendicularly from the sea to a height of 523 feet, and presents a series of rugged rocks with a sunken reef in front; on this promontory is a large lighthouse. Whiten Head is another promontory, 500 feet high, in the easter part of the parish. Durness Kirk stands on the east side of the Kyle of Durness, and is about 45 miles north-by-west from Lairg station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway. Loch Erriboll is a sea loch, extending about 8 miles inland. Hope loch an inland loch, is about 6 miles long by about 1 broad.

 The parish is watered by several small streams. The mountains are—Ben Hope, 3,940 feet in height, the loftest in the county; Fornaven, 2,980 feet; Ben Spron-uan, 2,636 feet, and Saval More, 2,547 feet.
 Lima is quarried here. The note cave of "Smoo" is about a mile from Durness In-Acreage, 140,812; rateable value, £1,314; in 1881 the population was 987, and in

EDDRACHILLIS (or Eddrachylis) a large parish on the west coast of the county, in the Sutherland poor combination and small debt court district of Tarvie, containing the villages of Scourie and Kinlochberrie, but no town or village of its own name; it is 28 miles in extent from north to south by 14 broad at the widest part, and is bounded on the north and east by Durness parish, south-east by Lairg, south by Creich and west by Assynt and the Atlantic Ocean, and is watered by Lochs More and Stack, and several smaller lakes; it is indented about half-way down its western coast by Loch Laxford, which is studded with small islands, and at the southern boundary lies the fine sea loch formed by Kyle Skeu, which is the entrance to the two large inner Lochs of Glendhu and Glencoul, lying among the mountains.

Kinlochberrie is a quoad sacra parish erected out of Eddrachillis, and had a population in 1891 of 893.

The area of the parish comprises 135,555 acres; rateable value, £4,628; the population in 1891 was 1,409, and in 1881 it was 1,525.

FARR is a large parish, extending for 32 miles from the north coast at Strathy Point to the centre of the county, by 14 miles broad, and containing, besides the kirktown of Farr on the north coast, the villages of Armadale (also on the north coast) and Altnaharra; the latter, at the head of Loch Naver, being 14 miles south of Tongue; the parish, which is in the poor combination of Sutherland and small debt court district of Tongue, is intersected by the river Naver, and has in its south portion the Lochs Naver and Chaire, the former about 6 miles and the latter 5 miles long; these lochs are surrounded by high hills, extending down the sides of Strath Naver. Strathy is a quoad sacra parish erected out of Farr and Reay parishes. The area comprises 188,355 acres; rateable value, £11,693; the population in 1891 was 1,857, and in 1881, GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter, situated on the Moray Firth, 8 miles north of Dornoch, 16 north from Tain and 15 east of Lairg, has a station on the main line of the Highland railway, and there is another station at Monod on the south boundary of the county; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dornoch and poor combination of Sutherland, is 8 miles from east to west by 6 deep, and is bounded north by Clyne, west by Rogart and south by Dornoch. The great parliamentary road passes through the village, in which there are branches of the Town and County Bank Limited, and the British Linen Company's Bank. The pier was constructed at a cost of £2,000, defrayed by the County Council. The parish church, a small building, erected in 1619, stands within a well enclosed burial ground, surrounded by trees; and at the west end of the village is the Free church. To the north of the village stands Dunrobin Castle, the seat of the Duke of Sutherland; it is known to have existed in the 12th century, and, according to old historians, it was even long before that period the family fortalice of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland, tradition fixing the date of erection as 1098. Malcolm Coenmore (1057-1093) bestowed the title of earl on the then Thane of Sutherland, and William the 4th earl married the lady Margaret, daughter of King Robert Bruce; the castle is a massive edifice of freestone, with turrets, in the Scottish style; its high-pitched roofs and turret caps giving it the appearance of a French chateau: at one angle is a tower over 100 feet in height, with an arched gateway leading into the courtyard: the grand staircase of polished Caen stone is very fine, and there are some good rooms, including the state rooms on the sea front, appropriated to Her Majesty's use during her visit in 1842, and a good collection of pictures and a museum; the gardens are large and well laid out: the mountain called Ben-Bhraggie, towers over all to the height of 1,300 feet, and upon its summit is a lofty monument to a former Duke of Sutherland, and near the village a memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription. The Duke of Sutherland K.G. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 19,630 acres; rateable value, £6,863 15s. 6d. including £1,550 15s. for village of Golspie; the population in 1891 was 1,451, including 335 in the village, and in 1881, 1,556, with 356 in the village.

HELMSDALE is a modern village, in the parish of Kildonan, and in the Sutherland poor combination; a small debt court district is held here twice a year. There is a station here on the Golspie and Wick section of the Highland railway. The village is 60 miles south-by-west from Wick and 17 north-north-east from Golspie, at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward to Wick. A harbour was constructed in 1896 at a cost of £14,000. During the herring fishing season large fleets of boats resort here. The river that flows through the extensive strath to Kildonan abounds with salmon, and fish curing is carried on here. In the village is a branch of the British Linen Company's Bank. Just opposite the village stand the ruins of a castle, built by Margaret Baillie, Countess of Sutherland, after the death of her husband, John 7th Earl of Sutherland, in 1460; her son, with whom she had some differences, damaged it, but it was restored in July, 1567; these ruins serve as a landmark to mariners. The principal landowner is the Duke of Sutherland K.G., LL. The population in 1891, including East Helmsdale, was 743.

West Helmsdale is a village on the west bank of the river Helmsdale. The population, including Marrel and Gartymore, in 1891 was 580.

KILDONAN is a parish, having a narrow sea border of about 5 miles along the Moray Firth, and extending inland towards the north-west for a distance of 24 miles, with an average width of 11 miles; it is in the small debt court district of Helmsdale and poor combination of Sutherland, and is bounded on the east by Caitness-shire, north by Beay and Farr, west by Clyne and Loth, and includes the villages of Helmsdale and East Helmsdale, to the east of the river of same name, West Helmsdale, and on its western bank, and the hamlet of Kildonan. The parish church stands in the village of Helmsdale. The Highland railway passes through the entire length of the parish, having stations at Helmsdale, Kildonan, Borrobol and Kibraec. The land is mostly heath on each side of the vale of the Helmsdale. Ben Griam Mhor is 1,936 feet in height, and Ben Dobhrain, on the south border, 2,060 feet; in the northern part of the parish are three large lochs—Nun Cuinne, 5 miles in length, Nun Ruathuir and Lewn. A small debt court is held at Helmsdale, in this parish, twice yearly. The principal landowner is the Duke of Sutherland. The parish area comprises 134,550 acres; rateable value, £11,401; the population in 1801 was 1,828, including 743 in Helmsdale and East Helmsdale and 580 in West Helmsdale, and in 1881 the figures were 1,942, 675 and 659 respectively.

KINLOCHBERVIE, see EDDRACHILLIS.

LAIRG is a parish, in Sutherland poor combination and the small debt court district of Dornoch, and is 25 miles in length by a breadth of from 7 to 10 miles; it is bounded on the north by Farr, south-west by Creich, east by Rogart and west by Eddrachillis. The village, which is at the head of Loch Shin, is about 1½ miles north from Lairg station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway, and 20 north from Dornoch. Loch Shin, one of the largest lakes in Scotland, is in this parish, and is about 16 miles long by 1 broad, being fed by several rivers, chiefly the Fiag and the Tirry; the loch contains salmon-ferox and trout. Loch Merkland, a feeder of the Shin, is about 3 miles in length by 1 in breadth; Grian Loch, about 2 miles long by 1 broad, is the source of the river Garvie, which empties itself into Loch Shin. There are eight other smaller lochs in the parish. Ben Hee mountain is 2,864 feet high. The Duke of Sutherland and the trustees of the late Lady Matheson are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 121,359; rateable value, £6,728; population in 1881, 1,355, and in 1891, 1,169.

Achany is 2 miles south of Loch Shin, in South Sutherland.

TONGUE is a parish, in the north central part of the county, and divided into two for about half its length by the Kyle of Tongue, a deep inlet of the sea on the north coast, off which lies the Island of Roan, which is also included in this parish. The parish is 18 miles in length from north to south by about 9 broad, and has on its eastern side the large loch of Laoghal, 5 miles long; the parish is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on the north, the parish of Farr on the east and south, and Durness on the west; it is in the small debt court district of Tongue and the poor combination of Sutherland. The parish is watered by the rivers Borgia and Kluoch, together with lochs Laoghal, Derry, Meadie, and many small lakes; it is also very mountainous, Ben Hutick being 1,340 feet, and Laoghal 2,504 feet above the sea level. The village of Tongue lies on the east side of loch Laoghal, 5 miles from its mouth, and has a comfortable hotel. A small debt court is held at Tongue village three times a year. The area comprises 81,037 acres; rateable value, £3,806; the population in 1891 was 1,323, including 63 on Roan Island, and in 1881 was 1,791.

WIGTOWNSHIRE.

THIS, the extreme south-western county of Scotland, formed part of the ancient district of Galloway; it is extremely irregular in shape, caused by the indentation of Luce Bay on the south, an open space of water 13 miles wide by 16 from north to south, its western head forming the Mull of Galloway, and the eastern one Burrowhead; these two headlands are known by the Celtic name of the Rhinns (Rhyms or Rhysons) of Galloway. On the eastern boundary of the county Wigtown Bay extends from Grange of Cree, on the north to Eggerness, just north of Garieston Bay, a distance of 8 miles; and on the north of the county Loch Ryan indents for a like distance. Its boundaries are the Irish Channel on the west and south, Wigtown Bay and Kirkcudbrightshire on the east, and Ayrshire on the north, its length being 32 miles, and extreme breadth from east to west 28, and contains about 491 square miles, or 314,405 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 16,976 males and 19,086 females; total, 36,062, and in 1881 a total of 38,611; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 7,001, and in 1881, 7,440. Wigtownshire stands seventeenth in point of size and the twenty-second in population of Scottish counties.

Early History.—When in 79 A.D. the Romans crossed the Solway into North Britain, the ancient British tribes of the "Novantes" inhabited the whole of Western Galloway, having "Leucophibia" (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and "Rerigonium" (Loch Ryan) for their principal port, and during the Roman occupation, 397, St. Ninian introduced christianity and founded a monastery at Whithorn; after the Romans had evacuated the kingdom in 410, the Strathclyde Britons gained the upper hand, but the Anglo-Saxons overran the district in the 6th century, and Osway, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the 9th and 10th centuries the county on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man, and hence the name of Galloway, or "the country of the Gael," was conferred on the territory. About the 12th century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary conflicts between Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct. It was revived, however, in 1623, and now bestows an earldom on the Stewarts, Lord Garlies, but the Maxwells of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners and language lingered here long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Their chiefs derived their authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftains or their vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours. The position of the shire so much to the west preserved it from many of the border raids, nor was it associated to any extent in the movements of 1715 and 1745, and Queen Mary's progress from Langside to cross to England led her through Kirkcudbrightshire.

Soil, Climate, Produce &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from rocks; the best lands lie near the shores, the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively, and the salutary improvements that have been effected in this county have been ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool. The chief crops in 1898, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," are—oats, 33,519 acres; barley or bere, 886; wheat, 560; the total corn crops being 35,198 acres; turnips and swedes, 15,789 acres; potatoes, 1,342; cabbage &c. 420; total green crops, 17,825; hay, 8,635 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, not for hay, 60,384; permanent pasture, 31,556. The total area of land and water is 314,405 acres, of which 109,150 are mountain and heath land, 7,372 woods, and 220 plantations. The live stock in 1898 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 4,281; unbroken horses, 2,666; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 23,509; other cattle, 26,344; ewes kept for breeding, 50,751; other sheep, 80,669; sows kept for breeding, 579; other pigs, 9,567. The only mineral raised, as shown by the Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics for 1897, was 1,604 tons of basalt. The shipping trade of Wigtownshire has felt the impetus of steam navigation, the ports of Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn deriving considerable benefit. The coasting trade of the county is considerable. There is considerable activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs, and this industry is carried on at Stranraer and Wigtown, under which places full particulars will be found. There is an almost entire absence of manufactures in this shire, if we except milla at Kirkcowan and Minnigaff, at which blankets, tweeds &c. are made. The great industry of Wigtownshire is, however, the production of cheese by the farmers of the Rhinns district of the county, who have been for many years the principal prize takers for the celebrated Cheddar cheese made by them.

Rivers and Mountains.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladenoch, and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewardry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtownshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigtown Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of 24 miles, falls into Wigtown Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake in Ayrshire, and, after a course of 21 miles, joins with the Bladenoch. The mountains, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are—Lang, 1,08 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020 feet; Knock of Luce, 1,014 feet and Barhullion, 814 feet. The railway system belongs to the Glasgow and South-Western and the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire lines; the former running south from Ayr and Girvan enters the county 3 miles north of Glenwhilly station and running through New Luce to Durragit station, where it joins the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is an independent line leaving Newton Stewart and running westward through Glenluce to Stranraer, from whence it sends a branch to Portpatrick and also sending a branch from Newton Stewart southward to Wigtown and Whithorn.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Wigtownshire comprehends 17 parishes and the small islands called The Scares, not attached to any parish, and has three royal burghs, namely, Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn. Prior to the "Redistribution of Seats Bill, 1885," these three last-mentioned towns, in conjunction with New Galloway, returned one member to Parliament; but on the passing of that Bill the representation was merged in the counties. The county sends one member. The parliamentary constituency in 1898 numbered 5,602. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton Stewart, Garieston, Kirkcowan, Glenluce and Portpatrick; it has several thriving villages, and a number of small seaports, or natural harbours, and many mansions and seats. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £246,140.

GARLIESTON is a seaport, village and burgh of barony in the parish of Sorbie, at the head of Garlieston Bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigtown Bay). The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour, capable of receiving a large number of vessels. From the pier-head the Ross light bears south-east-by-east. The tide at the spring flow rises 18 feet. The Broughton and Pontenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Garlieston is the terminal station of a short line from Millisle on the Newton Stewart and Whithorn branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway, and is about 8 miles south from Wigtown. Population in 1881, 699, and in 1891, 632.

GLENLUCE, see OLD LUCE.

INCH is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, about 8 miles in length, and extending for 6 miles along the eastern shore of Loch Ryan; it is also about 6 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ayrshire, east by the water of Luce, which separates it from New Luce, south-east by Old Luce, and south by the Pittanton Burn, which divides it from Stoneykirk, and west by Portpatrick and Leswalt. A portion of the burgh of Stranraer is in this parish. The kirk is 1½ miles north from Castle Kennedy station, which is in the parish, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, 3 east from Stranraer and 21 west from Newton Stewart. The highest mountains in the parish are—Mid Moile, 844 feet high; Brockloch Fell, 769 feet, and Drummuckloch Boebh, 700 feet. The parish church stands on the margin of the lake, in which there is a small and beautifully wooded island: the lake is nearly divided by a neck of land, on which are the ruins of Castle Kennedy, the property of the Earl of Stair. The castle was formerly the seat of the family of the Earls of Cassilis, who for 300 years took a leading part in Galloway affairs; it was accidentally burnt down in 1715, during the absence of the family, and has ever since remained a ruin: in an island on the loch is a herony; the grounds are open to the public every Wednesday and Saturday, and contains a collection of araucarias, said to be the finest collection in Great Britain. At a short distance south of Inch church, on a peninsula in a small lake, are the remains of Soulesat Monastery, founded about 1160, by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, for monks of the Premonstratensian order; its abbot was the head of his order in Scotland. Loch Inch Castle is the residence of the Earl of Stair K.T., LL.D. lord lieutenant of the county. Acreage, 30,844; rateable value, landward, £17,733; burghal (part of Stranraer), £5,508; population in 1881, 3,766, in 1891, 3,981, of which 1,820 were in the burgh of Stranraer.

Cairnryan is a small village in this parish, on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan and on Cairn Point, 6 miles north-north-east from Stranraer, which is the nearest railway station. The harbour here affords safe anchorage for vessels, which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lofty lighthouse for their guidance. Loch Ryan House, close to the village, is the residence of John Alex. Agnew Wallace esq. At Castle Kennedy is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway.

Post, T. & M.O., T.M.O. Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, S.B. & Annuity & Insurance Office, Cairnryan; Miss Agnes Blain, postmistress. Letters through Stranraer. Delivery, 9.40 a.m.; dispatch, 3.45 p.m.

Post Office, Castle Kennedy (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Wigtownshire added). Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Stranraer is the nearest money order office. The telegraph office is at Castle Kennedy station.

KIRKOWAN is a parish, village and burgh of barony, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district. It extends from north to south 15 miles, by a general breadth of about 5, bounded on the west by the Tarf water, which divides it from the parishes of New Luce and Old Luce, south by Mechrom and Kirkinner, east by the Baldenach river, which separates it from Penninghame, and north by Ayrshire. The village is on the Tarf water, near its junction with the Bal-denach, 10 miles north-east from Glenince, 8 north-west from Wigtown and 7 southeast from Newton Stewart. The Per-patrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway has a station a quarter of a mile from the village. Loch Ronald, about 1 mile long by three-quarters of a mile broad, is in the parish. The church was erected in 1829; its site, as well as the churchyard, was given by the late Captain W. C. Hamilton, of Craiglaw. There are woollen factories adjoining the village, belonging respectively to Messrs. William Armstrong and Soo Limited and Mr. William Milroy, which furnish employment to many of the inhabitants. The principal hotel is the "Commercial." The surface of this district is various, consisting of moorland interspersed with pieces of arable land. Acreage of the parish, 35,864; rateable value, £9,305;
population in 1881, 1,307, and in 1891, 1,263, of which 661 were returned for the village.

KIRKINNER is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district, and extends 3 miles along Wigtown Bay, the Bladnoch water dividing it on the north from Wigtown parish; Mochrum lies on its western boundary and Sorbie on the south. The kirk town is about 3 miles south from Wigtown, on the road to Garlieston, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery; Kirkinner station, on the Wigtown and Whithorn branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway, is 3½ miles south from Wigtown and about 9 south from Newton Stewart. The Killantrae burn flows through the centre of the parish. The ruins of Longcastle church, a parish now incorporated with that of Kirkinner, stand at the southern extremity of the parish. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoon, formerly a residence of the Dunbars. Barnbarroch, a stately mansion, and the seat of Captain John Vans-Agnew, stands in a park about one mile long by about three-quarters of a mile wide, through which the Bladnoch water flows. Acreage of the parish, 15,251; rateable value, £13,871; population in 1881, 1,597, and in 1891, 1,455.

KIRKMAIDEN is a parish occupying a great portion of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtownshire, projecting into the Irish Sea, with Luce Bay on the east, and tapering to a point, inclining eastward. This parish, which is in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, comprehends the most southerly district of Scotland, and is about 12 miles in length and from 1½ to 3 miles in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and has a very large number of dairy farms. The coast is generally bold, and indented by coves. On both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. There is a tolerable harbour at Drummore, in Luce Bay, on the east coast, where the coast guard has a station, under the command of a chief boatsman. Salmon and cod fishing is carried on at Drummore. The church, a plain edifice, is near the centre of the parish, not far from Drummers Bay, and 6 miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 south-west from Wigtown, 36 south-west from Newton Stewart, 20 south-east from Stranraer, and 16 south-east from Portpatrick station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. On the estate of Andrew Kenneth M'Douall esq. of Logan, is a fish pond, bawn out of the solid rock, and having communication with the sea by means of an ingeniously contrived iron grating. The parish of Kirkmaiden has an area of 13,730 acres; rateable value, £13,066; the population in 1881 was 2,403, and in 1891, 2,192.

Drummore is a village about one mile east from Kirkmaiden. The population in 1891 was 529.

Post, T. & M. O., T. M. O., Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, S. B. & Annuity & Insurance Office, Drummore; Miss Jane M'Millan, sub-postmistress. Letters through Stranraer. Delivery, 10.15 a.m.; dispatch, 4.50 p.m.

LESWALT is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, in the northern part of the county; it lies between the Irish Channel on the west and Loch Ryan on the east, and is bounded on the south by Portpatrick parish, and on the north by Kirkcolm. The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale, while the sea coast presents bold and rocky features. The kirk is about 3 miles north from Stranraer station on the Forthpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and about 25 west from Wigtown. Lochnaw Castle, which stands in a small park, is the residence of Sir Andrew Noel Agnew bart. D.L., J.P. Acreage, 12,523; rateable value, landward, £8,315; burghal (part of Stranraer), £8,257; population in 1881, 2,635, and in 1891, 2,320, of which 1,215 are included in Stranraer burgh.

LOCHANS, see PORTPATRICK.

NEW LUCE is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district; until 1646 it formed part of the parish of Old Luce, and is now about 10 miles in length by from 5 to 6 in breadth; the greater proportion of the high ground in the parish is covered by rocks or heath; the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. The parish is bonded on the west by the main water of Luce, which divides it from the parish of Inch, south by Old Luce, east by the Turf water, which separates it from Kirkcowan, and north by Ayrshire. The village is on the Luce at the point where the Cross water falls into the river, and has a station on the Girvan section of the Glasgow and South Western and North British railways; it is about 15 miles north-west from Wigtown and about 13 north-east from Stranraer. The Standing Stones of Lagganarr have been taken in charge by the Government Commission for the preservation of ancient monuments. The Earl of Stair K.T., L.L. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 28,877 acres; rateable value, £9,765; the population in 1881 was 706, and in 1891, 588.

At Glenwhilly, about 5 miles north from New Luce, is a station on the Girvan section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Sub-Post Office; Alex. M'Colloch, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Glenline R.S.O. Delivery, 9.45 a.m.; dispatch, 11 a.m. & 7.5 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. OLD LUCE is a parish, in Wigtowshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, about 12 miles long by a width varying from 3½ to 7½, and is bounded on the north by Inch and New Luce, northeast by Drumpail Burn, which separates it from Kirkcowan, east by Mochrum and south by Luce Bay. Oldluce is a village and burgh of barony on the banks of the river Luce, and on the road from Newton Stewart to Stranraer, at the head of Luce Bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels; it is 19 miles east from Portpatrick, 18 west from Wigtown, 16 south-west from Newton Stewart and 10 east-by-south from Stranraer. The Port-Patrick and Wigtownshire joint line runs through the town, and is joined by the Girvan Line at Dunragit station, which is in the parish. The principal hotel is the "King's Arms." About a mile to the north of the church, and further up the vale from which the village takes its name, are ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190, for monks of the Cistercian order; the ruins at present cover about an acre and a half, but the only part now remaining entire is the Chapter house, a small apartment on the east side of the cloisters, with a central shaft, about 14 feet high, from which spring eight arches supporting the roof: tradition reports that Michael Scott, the wizard, was once abbot here: many curiosities, together with several skeletons in an upright position, have been found on the site: in the collections of the Ayrshire and Galloway Archaeological Association, vol. v. a full description is given of the abbey, with plans.
 Dunragit House, in this parish, is the seat of John Charles Cunningham esq. D.L., J.P. The Earl of Stair K.T., D.L. John Charles Cunningham esq. D.L., J.P. Sir Mark J. McTargart Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. of Ardwell, Stranraer, and James M'Douall esq. D.L., J.P. of Logan, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 31,596; rateable value, £18,528;

 population in 1881, 2,447, and in 1891, 2,617; of the village of Oldluce, 922.
 St. Helena Island, with 4 inhabitants in 1891, is included in this parish.

MOCHURUM is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district, about 10 miles in length and extending inland to a distance of between 4 and 5 miles, it is bounded on the west by Old Luce, north by Kirkcowan, east by Kirkinner, and south-west by Luce Bay. The kirk is $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Wbauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and about 8 south-west from Wigtown. Mochrum Loch, about 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles long by half a mile wide, and Castle Loch, 1 mile in length by half a mile in breadth, and four smaller lochs are in the parish. Malzie water, a tributary of the Bladenoch, is formed from the first-named lochs. The Castle, or "Old Place" of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient and picturesque building in an inland part of the parish: it was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquess of Bute, who has made alterations at considerable expense. In this parish is Monreith, the handsome residence and demesne of the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Eustace Maxwell bart, M.P., D.L., J.P. proprietor of the place: the mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the Bay of Luce, the shore of Galloway, the Isle of Man and the coast of Cumberland. Near it is an old castle surrounded by lofty trees, and contiguous are the remains of the old parish church, now occupied as a place of sepulture by the family of Maxwell, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate. Acreage of the parish, 24,071; rateable value, £13,370; population in 1881, 2,315, and in 1891, 2,166, of which 679 are in Port William village, of which full particulars are given under a separate heading.

Post Office, Mochrum; George Donnan, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Port William R.S.O. Delivery, 10 a.m.; dispatch, 4.30 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Port William is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant

NEWTON STEWART.

NEWTON STEWART is a thriving town a burgh of barony and police burgh, principally in the parish of Penningham, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnigaff, county of Kirkcubright. It is on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick, and on the right bank of the river Cree, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, connecting the two divisions of the town: and has a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is also the junction for the line to Carlisle and Whitburn; the town is 121 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 82 south from Glasgow, 52 west from Dumfries, 28 east from Stranraer and 8 north from Wigtown, and owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which they gave the name of Newton Stewart. About the year 1778, the estate fell into the hands of William Douglas esq. of Carlingwark, who founded the town of Castle-Douglas, when it was created a burgh of barony under the title of Newton Douglas, but it subsequently resumed its original name. The town is principally composed of one large street, in the centre of which is the Town House, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. At the upper extremity of that part of the town in Minnigaff parish, there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to the famous John Graham, and son of the famous Dundee, and one of this district prior to the Revolution, administered justice. Works were completed in 1882 for providing water by gravitation, the source of supply being the Coldstream burn, about 4 miles distant; about half way between the intake at the burn and the town, a tank and filter have been constructed, the former having a capacity of 100,000 gallons; the cost of the works was upwards of £4,000. Drainage works are now (1899) in course of construction, at an estimated cost of £8,000. The Established church is an elegant modern structure, and there are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Douglas Academy, founded by Samuel Douglas esq. of Jamaica, and the Ewart Institute, founded by James and John Ewart, merchants of this district, are richly endowed educational establishments, incorporated under the title of the Newton Stewart Educational Trust. The Industrial Home here, was founded by a few benevolent ladies, for the support of about fifty destitute and orphan girls. M'Millan Hall, in the centre of the town, is a structure in the Italian style, erected, in 1885, at a cost of £5,000, which sum was left for that purpose by the family from which the hall derives its name, and who formerly carried on business in Newton Stewart. The Mechanics' Institute has a news-room supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals, and a library containing about 1,000 volumes. The staple commodity here at present is wool, which is furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly supplied to the Yorkshire markets. The weekly market is held on Friday; cattle markets are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual hiring fairs are held on the second Friday in April and October and the horse fairs in February, June and November. The British Linen Company's Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, have each a branch here. The principal hotels are the "Galloway Arms" and the "Crown." A newspaper called the "Galloway Gazette" is published here every Saturday. A monument in the Gothic style was erected here in 1875, at a cost of £1,000, to Randolph, 9th Earl of Galloway, who died at Galloway House, near Carlisle, 2 Jan. 1873. The population of the burgh in 1881 was 3,070, and in 1891, 2,332, and of the town 2,738; rateable value of burgh, £9,617.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Newton Stewart; James Hunter, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 5.15 & 8.5 p.m.; dispatches, 4.30, 6 & 10.30 a.m. & 4 & 8.30 p.m.

PENNINGHAM (or Penninghame) is a parish in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district: it extends along the right bank of the river Cree for about 15 miles, with a breadth of from 3 to 5 miles, and is bounded by Wigtown on the south and the river Bladenoch on the west, which separates it from Kirkcowan. The north of the town district is marshy and unencultivated, and chiefly adapted to pasture. Loch Ochiltree is in this parish. About 3 miles to the north of Newton Stewart are the remains of Castle Stewart, formerly belonging to a branch of the Stewart family, Earls of Galloway, but now the property of Mrs. Heron-Maxwell-Blair. Merton Hall is the residence of Mrs. Wason; Corsbie House, of Major Basil Lloyd Anstruther, and Mochrum Park, of Sir Uthred James Hay Dunbar bart. D.L. Acreage, 33,448; rateable value, landward, £14,827; burghal (Newton Stewart), £9,617; population in 1881, 3,940, and in 1891, 3,593, of which 2,332 are in Newton Stewart burgh, which is principally in this parish, a small portion being in the parish of Mionigaff, in the county of Kirkcubright.

PORT LOGAN, see KIRKMAIDEN.

PORTPATRICK is a seaport town, burgh of barony, and a parish, on the Irish Sea and on the west coast of the county, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district. The parish is about 5 miles in length from south-west to north-east, and 3 from north-west to south-east, and is bounded by the parish of Leswalt on the north-west, Inch on the north-east, Stoneykirk on the south-east, and the Irish Sea on the south-west. Here is the terminus of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, by which this place has communication, via Girvan, with the north and west of Scotland, and via Castle Douglas and Dumfries, with the south of Scotland and England. At Colin, about 3 miles north-east from Portpatrick, is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire line. The port is 133 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 89 south-south-west from Glasgow, between 34 and 35 west from Wigtown, the same distance west-by-south from Newton Stewart, rather more than 7 south-west from Stranraer, 117 from Dublin, 36 from Belfast and 21 from Donaghadee (19 nautical), on the coast of the North Channel. The town is small, but its situation is delightful, having a fine southern aspect, backed by a ridge of small hills, and it is consequently a great resort for visitors during the summer months. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of the Lords Montgomery, who resided at the old castle of Dunskey, the remains of which stand on the brink of a precipice overhanging the sea. The late Sir James Hunter-Blair subsequently became possessed of the castle, and to him the town and harbour are indebted for many improvements. The quay, on which stands a lighthouse, is now almost in ruins. Many years ago extensive and important improvements were made in the harbour, under the auspices of the Government and under the direction of Sir John Rennie, the engineer, for the accommodation of Her Majesty's packets, and a new basin of about 200 feet square was then constructed, and connected with the harbour by means of a channel containing ten feet of water at low tides. The mail communication between this place and Ireland, ceased in the year 1849, and since that date the business of this locality has largely diminished. The town is a lifeboat and rocket apparatus station. The parish church is a neat edifice with an embattled tower: the Free church, erected in 1888, is a handsome building in the Gothic style. Acreage of the parish, 9,094; rateable value, £6,940; population in 1881, 1,285, and in 1891, 1,219; of the town, 520.

PORT WILLIAM is a seaside village, on the shore of Luce Bay, in the parish of Mochnrum, 6 miles south-west from Whauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway, 24 south-east from Stranraer, and 15 south-south-east from Glenluce. The harbour, though not of great extent, is commodious and safe, and from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported to Glasgow.
Liverpool and other ports on the west coast.
The houses in general are very well built, and afford excellent accommodation for families and tourists during the bathing season. The principal hotel is the "Monreith Arms." Population in 1881, 755, and in 1891, 679.

THE SCARES are a group of small islands, containing in all 4 acres, but are not attached to any civil parish; they lie at the entrance of Luce Bay, about midway between the Mull of Galloway, the southern point of Kirkmaiden parish and Burrow Head, at the southern extremity of Whithorn parish

SHEUCHAN. see STRANRAER.

SORBIE is a parish, on the south side of the mouth of Wigtown Bay, and contains the village of Sorbie and the seaport village of Garieston (which latter see); the first-named is 3 miles inland to the west of Gar-lieston and 6 south from Wigtown, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtown-shire poor combination, lies for about 9 miles along the coast, which is indented by the bays of Garieston and Rigg, and possesses two hold headlands, Eggerness to the north and Cruggleton Head to the south of these bays; the boundaries are Kirkiner parish on the north, Glaserton and Whithorn on the west, and the latter on the south-west.
The ancient Tower of Sorbie, now a ruin, is about 1 mile north-west of Garieston and 2 east of the village; it was a stronghold or peel of the Sorby family, and subsequently passed to the Hannays. Between the headlands of Eggerness and Cruggleton is the Park and House of Galloway, erected in 1740, a seat of the Earl of Galloway; and on the headlands themselves are the remains of two ancient castles, one of which, Cruggleton Castle, is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1093, and shortly afterwards fell into the possession of the Kerlies, or McKerlies, who retained possession until the Reformation. Previously, they owned Carleton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Cathacarts obtained in 1824. Cruggleton Castle is celebrated for one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the great Scottish patriot, who, after it had been taken by treachery, recaptured it for his friend William Kerlie. Eggerness was also built by the Danes, but no particular account has been handed down. The Established church at Millisle, about 1 mile from Garieston, and 2 from Sorbie, and opened in 1877, is a fine cruciform edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire rising to a height of over 60 feet, and was erected at a cost of about £2,500. The area of the parish comprises 9,611 acres; rateable value, £14,649; the population in 1891 was 1,563, including 632 in Garieston and 179 in Sorbie village; in 1881 the total population was 1,636.

STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk) is a parish in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, extending about 7 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clackebant and Toskerton, it lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, and has an east and south-east coast line on Luce Bay of about 6 miles, and of about 7 miles on the Irish Channel, on its western side, and is bounded on the north by Portpatrick, the Pentanton burn separating it from Inch and Old Luce. The kirk is 6 miles south-east from Stranraer, and about the same distance east from Portpatrick, both of which have stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. The surface is generally hilly and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. Balgreggan, the property of Elphinstone Vans

Agnew Maitland esq. stands in a park about 1 mile square: on the estate is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and used as a beacon in time of war; there is likewise another of a similar kind on the estate of the late Sir John M'Taggart. Ardwell Castle is the seat of Sir Mark John McTaggart Stewart bart. M.P., V.D., M.A. D.L., J.P. The parish contains 19,481 acres: rateable value, £18,075; population in 1881, 2,766, and in 1891, 2,703.

STRANRAER.

STRANRAER (or Stranrawer) is an ancient town, a royal and police burgh and the seat of a presbytery and parish, in Wigtonshire poor combination. The police burgh comprises, in addition to the parish, parts of the parishes of Inch and Leshall. The town is seated at the head of Loch Ryan, a sea loch which extends for 8 miles from its mouth, and is about 2½ miles wide at its broadest part; the burgh has two stations, one in the town and the other at the harbour, both on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire railway. The Glasgow and South Western and the North British railways have both running powers into Stranraer. The burgh is 81 miles south-west from Glasgow, nearly 10 north-west from Glenelg, rather more than 8 north-east from Portpatrick, and 30 west from Wigton, and, as a royal burgh, is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and fourteen councillors. A justice of the peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, and a burgh court on the first Tuesday in each month. The sheriff of the county holds a court on Thursdays, and a small debt court is held fortnightly on Thursdays, during session. The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, as the motto on the burgh arms (Tutissima Statio) implies, and the harbour is now large and commodious, and has east and west piers and a breastwork affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels; the east pier is used for the large cross-channel traffic now passing by the Stranraer route between Great Britain and Ireland, and is connected with the railway by a branch line, conveying cattle, goods and passengers direct from the steamers; there is 18 feet of water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1,100 tons burthen can discharge there. The number of British vessels that entered the port in 1898 from foreign countries and British possessions was 828, of 183,297 tons; cleared, 818, of 182,059 tons. The number in the general coasting trade was entered, 376, of 26,470 tons; cleared, 377, of 26,385 tons; in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 450 entered, 156,613 tonnage; cleared, 444, of 155,674 tonnage. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow ships to ride at anchor with perfect safety. It was at Cairnyran, on this loch, that the Prince of Wales first landed on Scottish soil. The bay at one time afforded a splendid supply of oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to Sir William Wallace, of Loch Ryan, but the beds have latterly become impoverished, and the fishery unprofitable. Several kinds of white fish, however, are caught, and herrings are occasionally obtained here equal in quality to the best caught on any other part of the Scottish coast. In 1898, the number of fishing boats registered under the Part. IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port was 155, with a tonnage of 247, which give employment to 333 men and boys, fishing boats and their implements to be known by the letters S.R.; in the same year, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," 8 vessels of 1,197 tons were registered as belonging to the port. The sea bathing is excellent, and the loch is beautifully situated for villas. There is a coastguard station here and a custom house. The Established Church, in Church street, is a handsome structure in the Pointed style, with a lofty front surmounted with pinnacles; the interior is surrounded with galleries. The second church connected with the Establishment is at the western extremity of the town, on a lofty eminence, and with its tower is a conspicuous landmark from the loch. The cemetery, beautifully situated above the town, presenting a fine view of the loch, is tastefully laid out, and contains some monuments. A Reformatory, now under Government control, was opened in 1855; wood turning, bookbinding, and the manufacture of netting, twine and bee appliances are carried on in the institution, besides the making of clothing and shoes for the inmates. The County Buildings, in Lewis street, opened in 1874, contain a court house, town hall, and offices for the procurator fiscal, sheriff clerk and police. The old Town Hall, in George street, is now used as an armoury and drill hall for the volunteers. Stranraer has a brewery and mills, through which large quantities of grain pass every year: it is particularly noticeable for the extensive nurseries on all sides of the town, which afford employment to many persons. The district is agricultural, grain, cheese and all kinds of farm produce and cattle being conveyed to Glasgow regularly by railway and twice a week by steamer. The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs:—for horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June and the Monday before the second Thursday in October; for cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing in April and ending in November; other fairs for general business are also held in May and August. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Company's Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches in the town. The principal inns are the "King's Arms," McKie's hotel, the "George," the "Albion" and the "Royal." In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained; it is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI. and is called the "Tower, fortalice and manor place of Chapel," and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan: the Tower, or Castle, as it is now termed, was used by Graham of Claverhouse as his head quarters in the district during the Covenanting period: in the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth, his wife, then Lady Auchterlloor. The lands of Auchterlloor are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair K.T. The area of the civil parish and royal burgh is 55 acres; rateable value, £15,360; valuation of police burgh, £24,125; the population in 1881 was 3,528, and in 1891, 3,158; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was: Stranraer, 3,158; part of Loch, 1,820, and part of Leshall, 1,215; total, 6,193.

Sheuchan is an ecclesiastical parish taken from those of Leshall and Portpatrick; it comprises part of the burgh of Stranraer. The population in 1891 was 1,420. WHAUPHILL, see KIRKINNER.

WHITHORN (or Whithern), is a parish, royal burgh and a village, in the southeast of the county, 11 miles south from Wigtown, 18 by rail from Newton Stewart and 26 from Stranraer, with a terminal station on the Whithorn branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, is bounded on the north by the parish of Sorbie, north-west and southwest by Glasserton, and on the south and east by the Irish Channel. In A.D. 80, when the Romans first arrived, this district was peopled by the Novantes, and the town was one of some importance; it was mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leu-cophobia; the Saxons called it Hwitoern, and from the latter the appellation Whit-horn is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in 397, and attached a monastery to it; this church the Venerable Bede mentioned as being the first built of stone in Scotland during the 8th century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Osa, and it formed the episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the 12th century; after the period of the Reformation, however, it is seldom mentioned in public transactions, and seems to have sunk into obscurity. The town consists chiefly of one street running from north to south with several others diverging from it. From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear: it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors.
 The Town Hall, opened in 1885, is a plain but substantially-built structure, erected at a cost of £1,100, and will hold about 500 persons. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The inhabitants support a subscription library and a Bible Society. The parish church is a spacious building, erected partly on the ruins of the priory founded by St. Ninian, of which there now only remains a fine 12th century chancel, roofless, but containing some good Early English work, and a perfect western doorway. The sea has long been united to that of Glasgow, and now forms part of the revived sea designated Glasgow and Galloway: in the building bearings of Scotland, the bishops of Galloway, and the Coultarts of Coultart.

 There is also a Free church, United and Reformed Presbyterian churches, and a Roman Catholic church. Castlewigg Castle is 3 miles north-west of the village.

The Isle of Whithorn is a village on the east coast, about 3 miles south-east from the railway station at Whithorn, of which it is the port, and near Burrow Head. The village contains a Free church and near the village stand the remains of an old church. Population in 1881, 352, and in 1891, 316.

The area comprises 11,891 acres; rate-able value, landward, £13,281; burghal, £3,882; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,574, including 1,403 in the burgh, and 316 in Isle of Whithorn, and in 1881, the figures were 2,929 total population, 1,653 in the burgh and 352 in Isle of Whithorn.

WIGTOWN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, parish and the capital of the county, and is in Wigtownshire poor combination. The parish extends 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by the Bladenoch river, north-west and north-east by Newton Stewart and east by Wigtown Bay. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway has a branch from Stranraer. The town is pleasantly seated on a height near the north side of the Bladenoch Water, 2 miles from its junction with the Cree, or Bay of Wigtown, and is 105 miles south-west-west from Edinburgh, 58 south-west from Dumfries, 28 east-by-south from Stranraer, and 8 south from Newton Stewart. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence during the Middle Ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of Saxons; the name is derived from the Seand, "wick" or "vii," a dwelling, with the adjunct "ton" or "town." The castle of Wigtown subsequently became a royal residence, but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous till the reign of David II. when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. In the year 1581, Wigtown was specified as one of the king's free burghs; as a royal burgh it is governed by a provost, two bailies and fifteen councillors. The principal street is a parallelogram of which the internal space is enclosed by a wall and iron railings, and the centre laid out in walks and a bowling green, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants: at the end is a modern cross of granite, sculptured in an elegant manner; at the other extremity are the County Buildings, having a tower of considerable height, and containing the court room, the sheriff's small debt court and the ordinary courts, which latter are held every Tuesday in time of session; the justice of peace court is held the first Friday in every month. Wigtown harbour is safe, and has a depth of water for vessels of 300 tons: it is the seat of a customs port, its limits being defined by the "Customs Act, 1846," to include the creeks of Wigtownshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. The number of British vessels that entered the port in 1898 was 246 of 14,551 tons; cleared, 257 of 15,034 tons. In the general coasting trade, 233 entered, with a tonnage of 13,922, and 251 cleared of 14,820 tons. In 1898 the number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port was 78, with a tonnage of 124, employing 102 men and boys; fishing boats and their implements to be known by the letters W. N. Under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," 18 vessels of 709 tons were registered as belonging to the port in 1898. A monthly cattle market, on the fourth Friday of each month during the season, has been established, and there is an annual cattle show in July, which is numerously attended. In the town are branches of the British Linen Company's Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. A monument has been erected here to Margaret Wilson and Margaret McLachlan, the martyrs who perished in the Bladenoch Water, in the year 1685; it stands on the top of Windyhill, and was erected by public subscription at a cost of £200. At the western extremity of the parish are 19 large granite stones, placed in a circular ring, and supposed to have belonged to a Druidical place of worship or sacrifice, but traditionally said to mark the tomb of King Galdus. The parish of Wigtown contains 7,805 acres; rateable value, landward, £6,222, burghal, £5,464; in 1881 the population was 2,135, and in 1891, 1,911, the town numbering 1,445.
