CANNA, see SMALL ISLES.CARRICK, see LOCHGOILHEAD.*CLACHAIG, see DUNOON.

CLACHAN is a village in the parish of Kilmallon and poor combination of Lochgilthead, lying on the road from Tarbert
 to Campbeltown, 11 miles south-west of the former and 27 north-east of the latter,
 the road following the western shore of Cantyre through most of its course. The parish church is in this village. A little
 east of Clachan is Balinakill, the residence of John McKinnon esq. who is the proprietor of the larger part of the village; the other portion is in the estate of Ronachan,
 and belongs to Peter McKinnon esq. of Ronachan, whose residence is 2 miles southwest of the village. In the vicinity, on a hill called Danksieig, to the north-west, is a vitrified fort on a large scale, and another contiguous stone fort in ruins; and among
 the hills to the east are several fresh water
 lochs, well stocked with trout.

COLL, a parish in Mull poor combination,
 is an island lying about 2 miles north of Tiree and 10 west of Ardnamurchan Point;
 it is 13 miles from north to south by a
 breadth of 2 to 4 miles; its coast is indented
 by several small bays (the largest, known as Loch Breachlacha, runs about a mile into
 the land), but there is only one tolerable
 harbour, called Arinagour. On the island are the ruins of a castle. A fair is held here in May and October, on the Tuesday
 before those in Mull. The area comprises 18,321 acres; valuation, 1897-98, £3,389; the population in 1891 was 522, and in 1881, 643.

COLONSAY and ORONSAY are islands lying to the west of Jura and south
 of the mouth of the Firth of Lorn, 11 miles south of the Ross of Mull, and together form
 a united parish about 12 miles in length.
 Oronsay, the most southern, being only 2
 miles in extent; the division between the two islands is a narrow strait, dry at low water. It was here that St. Columba and St. Oran landed on their arrival from Ireland in 563, and on Colonsay they first founded their college, moving later on to Iona. An abbey was founded here at a subsequent date, but no remains of it can now
 be traced, but on Oronsay there are extensive remains of a priory, founded in the 14th century, consisting of a church, 60
 by 18 feet and a large cloister, besides a fine sculptured cross. Colonsay is the property of Duncan McNeill esq. The area of the united parish is 11,076 acres; rate-
 able value, £2,227; the population in 1891
 was 381, of whom 358 were in Colonsay; in 1881 it was 397.

CRAIGNISH is a parish in the upper portion of the Sound of Jura, a considerable part of it forming a peninsula on the west side of Loch Craignish, its southerly point, Point Craignish, lying 4 miles west of the north point of Jura; it is bounded north by Kilmiver, and east by Kilmartin, the south and west lying open to the sea; its extent is about 10 miles from north to south and 4 broad. The Loch of Craignish contains a chain of small islands running along the centre of the loch. Frederick Charles Trench-Gascoigne esq. V.D., J.P. of Craignish Castle, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 9,813 acres; rateable value, £3,087; in 1891 the population was 394, and in 1881, 451.

DUNOON, a seaside town and police burgh, and KILMUN together form a parish in the poor combination of Greenock, but in the south-easterly district of Argyllshire: the burgh, which is situated on the Firth of Clyde, 3 miles south of Holy Loch, 4 from Greenock railway station, on the opposite side of the Clyde, 27 south-east of Inveraray, 30 west of Glasgow and 8 west of Greenock, is the head of a small debt court district, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine commissioners.

The town is built on the shores of two small bays (east and west), and extending for 2 miles in both directions are ranges of houses for the families who resort thither in the summer season for sea-bathing. Inter-mixed with the lodging houses are many villas occupied by the merchants and professional men of Glasgow. There are also several good hotels. The combined parish extends 15 miles from north to south, by 8 in breadth, and is bounded north by Strachur, north-east by Lochgoilhead, east and south by the Firth and west by Inverchaolain: there is an Established church, two Free churches, two Episcopal churches (Holy Trinity and Christ Church), and churches for United Presbyterians, Catholics and Baptists. The graves of Bishops Boyd and M'Lean are to be seen in the burial ground of the Established church, covered with massive freestone slabs, having upon them armorial bearings and inscriptions, which are, however, nearly obliterated. The Burgh Hall, Argyll street, built in 1873, is a handsome building of stone, containing a fine assembly room. A sheriff and small debts court is held here every week. The West of Scotland Convalescent Sea-side Home, originated and promoted by the late Miss Beatrice Clugston, of Glasgow, was opened on the 14th of August, 1869, for the purpose of affording sea-air and bathing to invalids, and is a building of stone in the Romanesque style, available for over 250 inmates. There is also a Cottage Hospital. A little to the west of the pier at Dunoon is a mound about 80 feet in height, with the ruins of a castle on its summit. This castle was formerly regarded as one of the most formidable strongholds on the coast of Argyllshire; originally a royal residence, the hereditary keepership was bestowed by Robert Bruce on Sir Colin Campbell, of Loch Awe, through whom it came into the possession of the Dukes of Argyll. Queen Mary visited her sister, Lady Jane Stuart, at Dunoon Castle about 1563. The modern Castle of Dunoon was built in 1832, and has been purchased by the burgh commissioners for the benefit of the town. It contains a reading room, and the grounds are tastefully laid out as a recreation ground for the inhabitants. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in January and February for horses. Two newspapers are published here, viz.: "The Dunoon Herald and Cowal Advertiser," on Friday, and "The Dunoon Observer and Argyllshire Standard," on Saturday.

Holy Loch, in this parish, is fully 3 miles long; the entrance is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, extending a mile and a half in width; at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig, the latter river flowing from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, 7 miles long and 1 broad, whose steep, rugged shores, rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast on a fine day to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the valley to Strachur or Loch Fyne is remarkable for wild scenery.

Kilmun is a village in the parish, situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 7 miles north from Dunoon, and 8 west from Greenock; it contains an old collegiate church founded in 1442 by Sir Duncan Campbell, of Loch Awe, and is the burying place of the Campbell family; six of the Dukes of Argyll lie here, and some ruined monuments are still in existence; the tower of the church is old. There is also a Free church in the village. About a quarter of a mile westward of the village is the Kilmun Seaside Home for Convalescent Poor, a handsome stone building. The population of Kilmun in 1891 was 347, and in 1881, 331.

Hunter's Quay is a village in this parish, and forms part of the burgh of Dunoon, from which it is distant 2 miles north-east, on the Firth of Clyde, and close to the mouth of the Holy Loch. Emmanuel Episcopal church is in this village.

Kirn is a village and quoad sacra parish in this parish, and is also part of the burgh of Dunoon, from which it is distant 1½ miles, on the Firth of Clyde. There is a church of the Establishment, a United Presbyterian church and a Board school.

Ardentianry is a village and quoad sacra parish in this parish, situated 4 miles from Blairmore and 7 from Greenock, on the west shore of Loch Long. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 219.

Innellan is also in this parish. See under separate head.

Glenlean (or Clachaig) is a hamlet in this parish, situated 6 miles north-west, and 3 north-west from Sandbank. The surrounding country is mountainous, and in the vicinity are the Clyde Mills Co.'s gunpowder works. There is a Board school in the hamlet.

Toward is a hamlet in this parish, situated 6 miles south-west, and 2 south-west from Innellan. Here is a church of the Establishment and a Board school. Castle Toward is a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay esq. and now the residence of Major John Finlay. The grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle, at one time the seat of the family of Lamont, of Ardsimont. Lieut.-Col Philip A. P. Bouverie Campbell-Wyndham; Henry Johnston Younger esq. of Kilmun; H. R. Swinton Hunter esq. and J. McArthur Moir esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 44,577 acres; rateable value, of burghal £57,178, of landward £36,736; the population in 1891 was 8,633, including 5,283 in the burgh, and in 1881, 8,002, including 4,692 in the burgh.

GLENORCHY and INSHAIL form a united parish in the Lorne poor combination, lying to the north of Loch Awe, bounded on the west by Ardchattan, on the north by Lismore and Appin, and on the east by Perthshire; it extends 25 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth. The village and station of Dalmally, on the Tyndrum and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, are in the south of the parish, and the West Highland railway runs close to the east boundary of the parish, with stations at Tyndrum and Bridge of Orchy, the latter being in the parish. The parish church is just outside Dalmally on the road to Oban; the original foundation was of great antiquity and there are many old tombstones in the kirkyard. The southern portion of the parish includes the head of Loch Awe, which extends 26 miles in length from one to half a mile broad, its most attractive scenery being between here and Port Sonachan; the hills on each side are thickly clothed with timber and several small islands diversify its surface. On a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilchurn Castle, supposed to have been built about 1440 by Sir Colin Campbell, the first knight of Glenorchy. The Dalmally Hotel is within five minutes' walk from the station. Fairs for cattle are held at Glenorchy on the third Wednesday in March and fourth Tuesday in November. Population of the parish in 1891, 252.

Cladich is a hamlet on Loch Awe, 10 miles north of Inveraray, and in this parish; a road to the left leads to Port Sonachan ferry, 3 miles distant crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened 10 miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban. Here is a Board school, an Established church, mission, and a Post office. Population in 1891, 166.

Dalmally is a scattered village in the parish, 16 miles north-east of Inveraray, and 24½ miles by rail from Oban; it is beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in view of the vale of Glenorchy. The Marquess of Breadalbane is the principal landowner. The area comprises 146,688 acres; rateable value, £18,276; the population in 1891 was 1,641, and in 1881, 1,105.

INVERARAY is a royal and parliamentary burgh and the county town of Argyllshire, a parish and head of a small debt court district, situated on the western shore of Loch Fyne, at the south-west angle of a small bay, into which flow the rivers Aray and Shira; from this place is a ferry to St. Catherne's. Inveraray is about 15 miles south from Dalnally station on the Tyndrum and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, and about the same distance east from Arrochar station on the West Highland railway, 102 west by north of Edinburgh, 60 north-west of Glasgow, 32 south-east of Oban, via Port Sonaich Ferry, and 42 via Dalmlair, and 76 north-north-east of Campbelltown. The parish extends 15 miles from north-east to south-west and is bounded north by Glenorchy, west by Kilchrenna, south by Kilmichael and east by Loch Fyne. Inveraray was erected into a burgh of charter, granted by Charles I. in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk and a treasurer. This burgh, with Campbelltown and Oban in this county, and Ayr and Irvine in Ayrshire, forms the Ayr district of burghs in returning one member to Parliament. The Court House and Gaol, a substantial building of stone, stands on the shore. A sheriff's court is held here every Friday from 15th January to 15th March, from 3rd or 4th April to 31st July, and from 1st October to 15th December, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in March, May, August and last Tuesday in October; a burgh court is held occasionally.

At the extremity of the bay stands Inveraray Castle, the seat of the Duke of Argyll; it is approached by a fine avenue of limes, and has extensive and well-wooded policies; the building is three-storied, of grey stone, in the later baronial style, somewhat formal in outline, being a square with rounded angles, which rise as towers one storey above the roof; the centre is occupied by a large square hall with a gallery around, giving access to the upper rooms; the hall is lighted by a square lantern tower, rising rather above the angle towers, and its walls are lined with about 150 stand of arms, being the muskets used by the Clac Campbell regiment of Culloden; the principal rooms open from the hall and are hung with some good tapestry and pictures; there are also two beautiful pedestals of a rare kind of red granite, or porphyry, obtained near the Ross of Mull. Upon the lawn is a brass gun that belonged to the admiral's ship "Florida," one of the "Invincible" Armada, blown up in Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put in through stress of weather. The gun, which was taken from the bay and is about ten feet in length, is named the "Guona-Cam," or "gleid gun." Two other Armada guns have also been recently added.

On the town esplanade may be seen a sculptured stone cross, brought from Iona, supposed to date from 1400; it is eight feet high and bears the following inscription:—"Hee est crux nobilium virorum, videlicet, Duncani, Meic Gyllichomhan, Patricii filii ejus, et Maelmore, filii Patricii, qui hanc cruce[m] ferri faciobat." (This cross is in memory of noble men, viz., Duncan M'Comyo, Patrick, his son, and Ludovic, the son of Patrick; who caused this cross to be erected.) In a garden near the church is a small obelisk, which marks the place of execution, in the year 1688, of some persons of the name of Campbell, for preaching against the errors of the Romish Church. A splendid view can be had of the surrounding scenery from the top of "Duniquaich," which in olden times was a beacon or watch tower, and is mentioned in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Legend of Montrose." Loch Fyne terminates about 9 miles from the town, and from the fineness of its scenery and the fame of its herrings is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the loch in a single season, until within the last twenty or thirty years, frequently amounted to £30,000; for some years it hardly yielded any, but recently the fish have been coming up in large shoals. The loch is 50 miles long, and is about 10 broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding 3 above Otter Ferry. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well built quay. In the town are two branch banks, one of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the other of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and two good hotels and posting houses, the principal hotel being the "Argyll," which is beautifully situated near the chief entrance to Inveraray Castle;

Mr. B. B. Bantock is the proprietor. A stone building, used as a coffee and reading room, at the neck of the quay, was erected at a cost of upwards of £1,000, in memory of Elizabeth, late Duchess of Argyll, who died in 1878. The Established church, in the main street, is a stone building with a spire, and service is conducted here both in Gaelic and English; the United Presbyterian church, erected in 1836, on land given by D. Paterson esq. is now closed; a Free church, built in 1844, at the south end of the town, has been re-erected at the cost of £1,700; the Episcopalian church of All Saints is a small building of stone, erected in 1886, at a cost of about £1,600, the site being given by the Duke of Argyll. Fairs for cattle are held at Inveraray on the last Friday in May and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July.

Glennaray is a small civil and ecclesiastical parish, and lies in the north of the parish. Population in 1891, 630, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 425.

Furnace is a village about 8 miles south from Inveraray, on the western bank of Loch Fyne; here are extensive granite quarries, leased and wrought by Messrs. Paill Brothers. Population in 1891, 172.

About a mile and a half north-east of Inveraray is Glen-Shira, in length about 6 miles, the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful, presenting gently-sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood. The Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 46,892 acres; rateable value of town £2,469, of landward £5,921; the population of the parish in 1891 was 836, including 816 in the royal burgh and 20 in shipping, but the parliamentary burgh only contained 723, and the town of Inveraray 743; in 1881 the parish population was 946, including 870 in the town. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1891 was 117.

INVERCHAOLAIN is a parish lying north of the Kyles of Bute and intersected by Loch Striven, in the poor combination of Greenock and small debt court district of Dunoon, and bounded north-east and east by Dunoon parish, north-west and west by Kilmodon and south by the Kyles of Bute; it is 14 miles in extent from north to south by 8 in breadth. The surrounding country is mountainous. The area comprises 29,312 acres; rateable value, £4,052; the population in 1891 was 359, and in 1881, 407.

Colintraive is a hamlet in this parish on the Kyles of Bute, at the entrance to Loch Riddon, 5 miles east by north from Tigh-na-Braich; it has a Free church and a Board school.

Post & Telegraph Office, Colintraive; Miss Margaret McLean, sub-postmistress (Letters should have S.O. Argyllshire added). Delivery, 11.20 a.m.; dispatch, 2.40 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Tigh-na-brnach is the nearest money order office

IONA, a small island, 3 miles long by 1 broad, off the southern point of the mountain range which extends from the Moray Firth on the north-east and Ullapool on the west, in a triangular form to Ben More, in Mull, lies west of the promontory of Ross, across a sound about a mile in width; it is 9 miles sou.-b.-west of Staffa in the parish of Kilfinichen and Kilvickeen, and is known also as Icolmkill or Icolumb-Kill, but was anciently called Hy, or I, and is remarkable as being the seat of the first Celtic University in Scotland, founded by St. Columba on the occasion of his mission from Ireland in 563, and it now possesses the remains of a later cathedral, and the reputed graves of the kings, and is much visited by tourists.

Port-nath-Curraich, "The Bay of the Boat," on the south-west side, derives both its name and importance from a tradition of its having been the landing place of the curraich, the hide boat of St. Columba.

Iona belonged to the sea of the isles, i.e. the Hebrides or Southern isles (Sudreyar), so-called to distinguish them from the northern isles of Orkney and Shetland (Nodreyar); the sea is said to have been founded in 1098 by Magnus III. King of Norway, to whom these islands had been ceded by the usurper Donald Bane, brother of King Malcolm II. of Scotland: about 1113 the diocese of the Isle of Man was united to this sea, thenceforward called "Sodor and Man," and although the two dioceses were again separated about 1380, the style of the joint see is still maintained by the Bishop of Man; the see of the isles of which Iona became, in 1507, the chief seat, after having been abolished about 1680, was revived in 1733 in connection with that of Caithness, and is now held with Argyll. The island was at a very early period venerated as a place of sanctity and learning, and had already been Christianised for over a century, when St. Columba landed here, 12 May, A.D. 563. The monastic settlement established by him on this spot for the training of itinerant missionaries continued to maintain an independent ecclesiastical status until 716, when the monks, with their abbot, Adamnan, agreed to accept the usages of Rome: from 794 the island was ravaged again and again by the Norse invaders, and many of the monks mercilessly slain; in 818 the monastery was rebuilt by Abbot Diarmid and the shrine containing the relics of St. Columba placed within the church, and towards the close of the 12th century it was again rebuilt by Abbot Reginald, who was also bishop of the Isles, and refounded the abbey as a house of the Cluniac order, and it thus became connected with the Cluniac abbey of Paisley. Simon of Orkney, bishop of the Isles 1229-43, was also abbot of Iona, and at the close of the 15th century the abbey was formally annexed to the see. In pursuance of an Act passed in 1563, the monastery was suppressed and vacated; the cathedral church, being dissolved, was allowed to fall into decay, and since then no remains of either woodwork or fittings: as at present existing it consists of a long choir, with clerestory, a south aisle of three bays, and a sacristy on the north side, transepts, an aisleless nave, and a central tower of two stages, 75 feet high, with plain corbelled parapet; the nave and choir are each 62 feet in length and 22 feet wide, measured internally; the internal width, through the transepts, is 69 feet, and the total length, externally, 160 feet, the axis of the church and adjacent buildings being directly south-east and north-west: the monastery adjoins on the north, and the cloisters, immediately abutting on the nave, are 72 feet from north to south, by 66 from east to west, and have alleys 11 feet wide: the east side is formed in part by the north transept of the church, the chapter-house with its vestibule, and two other chambers; on the north side was the refectory, with the stairs thereto, but the west side seems to have been enclosed by a wall only; other portions of the domestic buildings extended northwards, and detached from these, and lying east and west was a rectangular structure, 60 by 37 feet, the purpose of which is only conjectural. The church has been rebuilt at various periods of red granite with dressings of grey sandstone, and from the method of its construction it is difficult to fix exactly the date of different portions, but there is no doubt that the earliest parts of the existing fabric are to be found in the transepts, including the tower piers, and the north walls of the nave and choir; these are Late Transitional of the latter part of the 12th or the beginning of the 13th century, the remainder, including the sacristy and the tower, which in plan is almost an oblong, was rebuilt during the late Decorated period, 1315-60, and still later the south aisle of the choir, the pent roof of which is singularly carried on a species of flying buttresses rising from the floor, and supporting masses of masonry reaching up to the line of the clerestory; this aisle retains sedilia and a piscina, and the site of an altar and the caps of the piers are carved with various scriptural subjects; a fine bold doorway, with trefoiled head, leads into the sacristy, and built into the wall above, at a height of 6½ feet from the floor, are two pointed transitional arches, enriched with dog-tooth carving, and resting in the centre on a circular pier with foliated cap: the choir has also sedilia and piscina, but the high altar of marble, entire in the 17th century, has wholly disappeared. In the centre of the floor, below the first step from the east, is a great slab once containing a brass to a knight of the Molested family; north of this is the effigy in stone of Abbot Lachlan MacKinnon, d. 1500, and on the south that of Abbot Kenneth Mackenzie, d. 1489, besides which there are other tomb slabs, both in the choir and north transept, and some of these are adorned with Celtic ornament: the splayed east windows of the north transept are recessed under arches, and between these is another arch, with traces of an altar; three sides of the tower are lighted by square openings filled with varied tracery, and the fourth or north side by a two-light pointed window; the east and other windows contain Decorated tracery of graceful flowing character; but 1603 the nave and south aisle were walled off, and the remainder of the church fitted for Divine service, and it continued to be so used until the beginning of the 18th century. Of the monastic buildings, the oldest portion is the chapter house, which is Transitional, and coeval with the earliest part of the church; it is entered through two circular arches resting on a central pillar, the ornamental work being very similar to that of the two walled-up arches in the choir; within the chapter-house, on either side, are four arched recesses, with sedilia, and it has a small east window; the refectory is Early English, and the rest of the buildings, so far as can be ascertained, belong to the Decorated period; north-east of the chapter-house, and standing obliquely to it, is a small detached chantry chapel of the 15th century, 38 by 21 feet, with three windows and a doorway on the north side; in the cemetery, and 100 yards south-west of the cathedral, stands the roofless chapel of St. Oran, a structure of red granite, 60 by 22 feet, and now the most ancient fabric remaining on the island: it has a western doorway and small loop windows, and has lately been repaired. In this cemetery have been buried, it is affirmed, 48 kings of Scotland, 8 kings of the Sudreyar or Southern Isles, some Norse-Irish monarchs, and one king of France, besides several of the priors of Iona, and a number of members of the clan MacLean: there are still nine rows of carved and incised slabs and tombstones, the most important of which are now enclosed within iron railings: it is also said that the island had at one time as many as 160 crosses, of which 60 were taken up and cast into the sea by Archibald, 4th Earl of Argyll, on his embracing the doctrines of the Reformation, and but four now remain, viz.: St. John's, Maclean's, St. Martin's and John McFingon's; the only complete one is that of St. Martin of Tours, standing within the enclosure by the west end of the church, where are the graves of St. Columba and his servant Diarmid; it is 15 feet high, on a base of three steps, and is elaborately carved with interlaced work and bosses; Maclean's cross is 11 feet in height, and richly sculptured, and McFingon's bears the name of one of the abbots of Iona, d. 1439, and the galley device of the Norse kings of Man. The island is the property of the Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T. who, about 1880, cleared the site of the cathedral and adjacent buildings, and effected various repairs and replacements at considerable cost: the carved fragments then found were carefully collected, and are now in the chapter-house. The population in 1891 was 247, and in 1881, 243.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Iona; Angus M'Phail, postmaster. Letters arrive through Oban. Deliveries, 11.45 a.m. & 2 p.m.; dispatch, 2 p.m.

ISLAY is a large, irregularly shaped island about 25 miles from north to south, by 18 broad; it is the most southerly of the Hebrides, and is divided into 3 parishes, Kìlchoman, Kìllarrow and Kìlmeny with Kìldalton; it is divided from the south-west of Jura by the Sound of Islay; two salt lochs, Loch Andall on the south and Loch Ghruinnard on the north, run some distance into the island, almost cutting off its westerly portion; its chief villages and ports are Bowmore and Bridgend, on Loch Andall; Port Ellen on a bay to the south; Port Askaig on the south; Portnahaven on the south-west point of the entrance to Loch Andall and Port Charlotte, halfway up the west shore of this loch, and there is a steamer pier at Bruichladdich in the same loch. There are two fresh water lochs, Loch Guirn and Loch Finlaggan, with islands in them, having remains of the fortified houses of the Macdonald chieftains. Finlaggan was the principal stronghold, and here the chiefs were installed with great ceremony on a stone still preserved on the islet. The mountains to the east of the island rise to an altitude of 1,500 feet, and are the resort of eagles, falcons and other birds; and great numbers of seals are to be found along the coast. The shore is very rugged, but in some parts has fine flat beaches and sandy bays, and the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and the island contains several beautiful lakes, well-stocked with trout; there are also two rivers, the Sorn and the Laggan; the former empties itself into Loch Andall, and the latter into Laggan Bay. The Laggan water is not surpassed in the West Highlands as a salmon stream. In boisterous weather many vessels come into Loch Andall for shelter. Before Islay became the seat of government of the Lords of the Isles, it appears to have been under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, as there are many duns and castles, evidently of Danish origin, besides many places which have Danish names. The land is tolerably cultivated, but it is still susceptible of great improvement. Upwards of 3,000 head of black cattle, and several hundred horses of the Clydesdale breed, are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in this island, and a company was formed, called the Islay Mining Company, for extracting some of these minerals. There is a regular daily communication by steamer from Port-Ellen, and on Tuesday and Friday from Port-Askaig, with Glasgow and West Tarbert on the main land. There are many ruinous remains of ancient castles, churches, &c. scattered over the island; but, perhaps, the most remarkable natural curiosity is Sior-Mhao-Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about 4 miles from Port Ellen and 9 from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush by two channels in the rock, covered with natural arches, and dash up through an aperture in the dome-shaped roof. Near Loch Ghruinnard is the site of a great battle fought in 1398 between the Macdonalds and Macleans, and at Benbigger the Macdonalds were almost destroyed by a combination of the Macleans and MacLeods, Camerons and McNeils, by instructions of James VI.

Portnahaven is a quoad sacra parish formed out of Kìlchoman; population in 1891, 869.

Oa is a quoad sacra parish, formed out of Kìldalton, and in 1891 had a population of 210, and Kìlmeny, a similar parish, formed out of Kìllarrow, population in 1891, 805.

Bowmore is the principal place on the island. It was founded in 1768, and is situated on the east side of Loch Andall, 3 miles south of Islay House, 11 south-south-west from Port-Askaig, and the same from Port-Ellen and Port-Charlotte. The village, which consists of two principal streets and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a good quay. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The parish church is a circular edifice, with a peculiarly formed spire; there is also a Free church and a Baptist chapel. The Public Hall is a large building, with sittings for over 500 persons, and the Public Library contains about 1,800 volumes, and also includes an assembly room. There is an excellent public school, with a house for the master, and a branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland. A sheriff's court is held here four times a year. The distillery here is worked by the Bowmore Distillery Co. The Bowmore and the Seaview hotels are the principal inns.

At Bridgend, 3 miles north of Bowmore, and 8 south of Port-Askaig, is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A court is held monthly for the recovery of small debts, and sessions for the trial of petty offences. A short distance to the west stands Islay House, surrounded with fine gardens and well planted grounds; it is situated at the head of Loch Andall, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country.

About 4 miles from Bridgend, on the road to Port-Askaig, is the village of Ballygrant, where there is a lead mine, which when working gives employment to a number of hands. The lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

Bruichladdich is a small village in the parish of Kìlchoman, 8 miles from Bowmore, on the road to Port-Charlotte. Here is a large distillery, a temperance hotel, and post office; at the quay, vessels of considerable burden can unload in fine weather.

Port-Askaig is a small creek or harbour on the north-east side of the island, opposite Peoline, in Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad. The port is 11 miles north-east of Bowmore, and has a quay where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water. Here lobsters are found in abundance.

Port-Charlotte is a small village in the parish of Kìlchoman, on the west side of Loch Andall, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles south-west of Port-Askaig, and contains a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school erected by Charles Morrison esq. Population in 1881, 502.

Portnahaven is a small village and seaport, 24 miles south-west of Port-Askaig, and 16 south-west of Bridgend. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a quay formed by the rocks on the shore; and near the port is a lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here also are Parliamentary and Free churches and a public school. A considerable business is done in the season, the shores on this part of the island abounding with fish. Population in 1881, 361.

Port-Ellen is a seaport and village in the parish of Kìldalton, on the east side of the island, 11 miles south-east of Bowmore and 22 south of Port-Askaig. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide. The quay, formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour, was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1832, also in 1891, and considerably extended in 1891. John Ramsay esq. J.P. of Kìldalton, became proprietor of that parish (which includes the quoad sacra parish of Oa) in 1863. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established here. The village is substantially built, and contains two inns. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing. There are some good golf links here. Population in 1891, 903, and in 1881, 989.

About 4 miles east from Port Ellen are the villages of Lagavulin and Ardbeg. At the latter place is one of the largest distilleries in the island; and there is a commodious harbour, with a quay, at which vessels of 12 feet draught of water can lie and discharge at ebb tide.

The fairs held in the island of Islay are as follows:—For cattle, Bridgend, last Wednesday in April, last Tuesday in June, July, August and September. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; November, for horses; Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after, for cattle, Tuesday before. At Bridgend, for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Bridgend, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May. At Port-Ellen for horses and cattle, in November, day before that at Bowmore. The area of the parish of Kìllarrow and Kìlmeny comprises 65,929 acres; rateable value, £15,478; the population in 1891 was 2,660, and in 1881, 2,756. The area of the parish of Kìlchoman comprises 37,274 acres; rateable value, £11,562; the population in 1891 was 2,697, and in 1881, 2,547. The area of the parish of Kìldalton comprises 47,152 acres; rateable value, £11,803; the population in 1891 was 2,027, and in 1881, 2,271.

JURA is an island about 30 miles long, lying off the west coast of the mainland, from which it is separated by the Sound of Jura, and north-east of the Sound of Islay, which separates it from the island of that name; is a civil and ecclesiastical parish, is the head of a poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Bowmore. The island has a chain of mountains running down its centre, the most prominent of which are "the Three Paps," mountains rising to an elevation of 2,615 feet above the sea-level and forming part of the same ridge, but having two valleys separating them; the southernmost is called "Beioa a' Chaolais" (the Mountain of the Sound), the next and highest, "Beinn an Oir" (the Mountain of Gold), and the third "Benshiaota" (the Consecrated Mountain). There are actually five of these conical peaks, but only three of them are distinguished as "the Paps." Corrabheinn (the steep peak) is the most precipitous, but is lowest of the cluster. The other hills range from 1,200 to 1,500 feet, and afford a shelter to the east side of the island, where nearly all the cultivation is carried on and where most of the inhabitants reside, the west side being wild and desolate, except where Loch Tarbert penetrates far into the interior. There is a good road along the whole length of the eastern side, from the north point to Feolin on the Sound of Islay, where there is a ferry to that island. There are several large caves, and at the northern extremity is the whirlpool of Coryvicka, formed by the Atlantic tide running into a small inlet. The parish includes the islands of Balnaha, Garvelloch, Luaga, Pludda, Scarba and Skeruvie. Jura belongs partly to James Campbell esq. whose residence is at Ardlin, a fine mansion on the south shore of the island, and to Walter MacFarlane esq. of Ardussa. It is the most rugged of the Hebrides, being composed chiefly of huge rocks piled one on another in the utmost disorder. The west side of the island is wild, intersected by numerous torrents, which come rushing down from the mountains. There are some good fresh water lochs, the largest, Knockbreag, being 1 mile long.

Miltown, frequently called Craighouse, the principal village in Jura, is 8 miles from Port-Askaig ferry. It has a good quay, and the harbour, which is large and being formed by several small islands, has obtained the appellation of Small Isles Harbour; a wharf extends about 400 feet in length, and steamers can now come alongside at any state of the tide. About half a mile north of the village is the church of the parish of Jura and a Board school. The village contains a distillery.

Garvelloch, or Holy Island, contains an extensive old fort, called Duacunnel, once a stronghold belonging to the Lords of the Isles. On the Nun's Island are considerable remains of a nunnery, said to have been founded by St. Columba.

Lagg is a small village on the east coast. The red deer abounds in the uplands of this island. The area comprises 93,799 acres; rateable value, £5,301. The population in 1891 was 724, including 68 persons on Balnaha and 37 on the other small islands, and in 1881, 946.

Post Office, Lagg; Alexander Lindsay, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Craighouse S.O. on Tuesday, Thursday & Saturday and are dispatched thereto on Monday, Wednesday & Friday. There is also a mail by steamer "Islay" every Friday, and a dispatch on her return same day. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Craighouse, 9 miles distant.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office & Savings Bank, Craighouse; John M'Kechnie, sub-postmaster (Letters should have S.O. Argyllshire added). Letters arrive via Greenock at 9.40 a.m. & are dispatched at 9 a.m.

KILBRANDON and KILCHAT-TAN form a joint parish, in Lorne poor combination, consisting mostly of islands, the principal of which are Seil, Easdale, Luing, Inis Capel, Shuna and Toray. It is divided from Mull on the west by the Firth of Lorne, and from Jura on the south by the Gulf of Corybreckan, in which is situated the whirlpool; its mainland portion is bounded north by the parish of Kilninyer. The trade is mostly connected with the slate quarries at Easdale and Luing. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle over a century ago. Lead mines have been worked in the islands of Luing and Seil; and there are several caves in Kibrirde well worth visiting. Ardmaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, on the mainland, about 2 miles east of Easdale, stands on a fine and pleasant bay; the grounds are well wooded and contain several pretty cascades.

Easdale is a village in this parish, partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seil, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; it is 16 miles south-west-by-south of Oban, 30 north-north-west of Lochgilphead, 40 west of Inveraray and 142 west of Edinborough. It is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, which are said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of the Marquess of Breadalbana, and are wrought by the Easdale Slate Quarries Company Limited, who altogether employ about 250 men, and produce about 15,000 tons of slate annually, of a superior quality, which is exported to all parts of Scotland and the north of England. Several of the quarries are above 250 feet below the sea, and are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welsh rock; and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed on this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steam boats pass almost daily to and from the north. A pier was erected in 1873, at which the steamers call regularly. Portmary slate quarries, opened nearly a century ago, have been leased by Mr. A. M'Coll. The slates here are of first-class quality and command a ready and extensive sale. There is good quay accommodation. Cuan slate quarries, adjoining the above, are also leased by the same gentleman. These slates are of a blue colour, and at the quay erected at Cuan vessels are loaded in any state of weather or tide. Houses have been built at Portmary for the workmen employed there. Population of Easdale island in 1891 was 317, and in 1881, 460.

At Toberonochy (in Luing) slate quarries were opened about 1883 by the lessees, Messrs. J. and A. M'Lean. There is good quay accommodation, and vessels can be loaded at almost any state of the tide. The Marquess of Breadalbana K.G., P.C. is the principal landowner. In 1891 the village had a population of 209.

Beunahua, a small island to the north of Scarba, contains several quarries of excellent blue slate, at present wrought by Messrs. J. and A. M'Lean. The number of men generally employed is about 30. The chief landowner is Mrs. Morrison, of Glasgow. Population in 1891, 68.

Shuna is a small island lying off the coast of Nether Lorn, in Kilbrandon parish, situated 14 miles south-west of Oban. Fladda, Luing and Toray are also small islands in the above parish. The Marquess of Breadalbana, W. H. R. B. Sivewright esq. and Mrs. Morrison are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,385 acres; rateable value, £5,074; the population in 1891 was 1,677, and in 1881, 1,767.

KILBRIDE, see KILFINAN.

KILCALMONELL is a parish lying on the shore of West Tarbert Loch, bounded on the north and north-east by South Knapdale, east by Saddell, south by Killean, and west by the Sound of Jura. From West Tarbert, at the head of the loch, two roads start, following the shores of the loch, the northern winding through a fine well-wooded country, leading to Ardpatrik and Kilberly, and the southern to Campbeltown. About the sixth mile on this road is Dunmore, the residence of Allan Gilmore esq. hid by its plantations from the road, but from its site there is a pleasing view of the loch and the opposite shore. Four miles further on is the domain of Ardpatrik, the residence of Captain James Carter Campbell R.N., D.L., J.P. At the foot of this is a ferry, to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardpatrik a road branches to the west; and at a distance of 4 miles Carse is passed; 5 miles further is Drimdrissaig, the property of F. W. O. Campbell esq. the efforts of whose predecessor (the late Lachlan M'Neill esq.) proved so successful in improving the breeds of cattle, sheep &c. in this part of the country. West Tarbert Loch is about 9 miles in length, but very shallow at the upper end, and the Islay steamer pier is a few miles down. A road, running by the edge of the loch, past the landing stage of the Islay steamer, has been found a great convenience by passengers going to or returning from Islay. The Royal Mail coach passes daily, both going to East Tarbert and returning to Campbeltown. Near the sixth milestone is the village of Whitehouse, containing a board school; and about half a mile above the village is Stonefield, the fine mansion and extensive domain of Colin G. P. Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. The parish church is in the village of Clachan, which see. Colin G. P. Campbell esq. of Stonefield; John McKinnon esq. of Loup and Bahinskil; Peter McKinnon esq. of Ronachan, and John R. M. Macdonald esq. of Largie, are the principal landowners. The area is 29,150 acres; rateable value, £10,335; the population in 1891 was 1,901.

KILCHRENAN and DALAVICH

form a united parish, lying along both shores of the centre portion of Loch Awe, the village of Kilchrenan in the north of the parish being 13 miles north-west of Inveraray, and the hamlet of Dalavich about 3 miles west of Kilchrenan. The parish, which is in the porchouse combination of Lorn, extends 14 miles from north to south by 7 in breadth, and is bounded north by Glenorchy, east by Inveraray, south by Kilmartin and Glassary, and west by Ardchattan, Kilmiver and Kilmore. There is no railway station in the parish, but the stations at Taynult, Loch Awe and Dalmailly, all on the Oban and Killin Junction section of the Caledonian railway, are not far from its northern boundary, and steamers ply between Port Sonachan and Loch Awe station. Port Sonachan is the principal ferry on Loch Awe, and 7 miles distant are the falls of Blarghour, to which a coach runs daily in summer. The Episcopal church, 1½ miles east of Port Sonachan, is a building of stone, erected in 1891 by James Thorpe esq. of Ardbrecknish. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. and Lord Malcolm of Poltalloch C.B. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 45,980 acres; rateable value, £4,514; the population in 1891 was 415, and in 1881, 504.

KILDALTON PARISH, see ISLAY.

KILFINAN is a parish on the west side of the Kyles of Bute, in the poor combination of Lochgilphead and small debt court district of Dumbon; it extends 12 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth, and is bounded north by Strachur and Kilmolan, east by the Kyles and south and west by Loch Fyne; and contains the villages of Tigh-na-Bruaich (which see) and Kames and the hamlets of Ardlamont, Kilbride, Millhouse and Otter Ferry. The Kirktown of Kilfinan is on the east shore of Loch Fyne, 5 miles north-west of Tigh-na-Bruaich and 20 south from Inveraray. The country is mountainous, but without any very lofty hills.

Ardlamont hamlet is 14 miles south-east from the kirktown and 7½ south-east from Tigh-na-Bruaich. There is a board school here.

Kames is a village in this parish, 1 mile south from Tigh-na-Bruaich and 2 miles north from Millhouse. The Kames Gun powder Co. have works here, and there is an Established Mission hall and a Free Presbyterian church.

Kilbride is a hamlet, 4½ miles south from Tigh-na-Bruaich and 1½ south from Millhouse. There is an Established church here.

Millhouse is a village in this parish, 14 miles south-east therefrom, 3 south from Tigh-na-Bruaich and 1 north from Kames. There is a Free church and a board school. The Kames Gunpowder Co. have works here.

Otter Ferry is a village in this parish, 12½ miles north-west of Tigh-na-Bruaich, on Loch Fyne. There is a board school in the village.

The area comprises 32,301 acres; rateable value, £15,811; the population in 1891 was 2,074, and in 1881, 2,153; of these numbers in 1891, 615 persons were in Tigh-na-Bruaich and 434 in Kames.

KILKENZIE, see KILLEAN and KILKENZIE.

KILLARROW and KILMENY PARISH, see ISLAY.

KILLEAN and KILKENZIE form a joint parish on the west side of Cantyre, its Kirktown, on the coast, being 17 miles north-west of Campbelltown. The parish extends 16 miles from north to south by 5 wide, and is bounded north by Kilmacdonnell and east by Saddell. Killean village is about 2 miles south of Tayinloan. Near the road stands the parish church, a small stone building, erected in 1787, and about a quarter of a mile further, on an eminence, is a Free church with a tower, erected in 1846, and close by is a board school. Seals are very often seen lying on the rocks near the coast.

Ballaclantuaie is a village in this parish, on the coast, about 10 miles north-west of Campbelltown; it contains a small church, erected in 1825, and a board school. The road between this village and Campbelltown has been much improved, and another road several miles in length has been cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

Glenbarr is a village nearly 4 miles south of Killean, situate on the banks of the Barr water, which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout; nearly a mile from the shore, in a rich and well cultivated glen, is Glenbarr Abbey, the property of Major McAlister, a fine structure, built in the Gothic style, and from which an extensive view of the sea and north-east coast of Ireland may be obtained.

Kilkenzie is a hamlet in the extreme south of the parish, 5 miles from Campbelltown.

Tayinloan is a small village in this parish, about 19 miles north from Campbelltown, and about a mile in a northern direction is Largie Castle, the residence of John Ronald Moreton-Macdonald esq. J.P.

The Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C.; Alexander Fleming esq. of Kilmahoy; Major Matthew Charles B. McAlister, of Glenbarry Abbey; Col. Smollett Montgomerie Eddington, of Glenegreggan house, Kintyre; James McAlister Hall esq. of Tangy; John Ronald Moreton-MacDonald, of Largie; Captain Hector Macneil, of Ugadale, and the trustees of Robert Colvill esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 42,109 acres; rateable value, £13,167; the population in 1881 was 1,293, and in 1881, 1,368.

Post Office, Muasdale; Miss Janet McCallum, sub-postmistress. (Letters should have S.O. Argyllshire added.) Letters arrive from all parts at 3.40 p.m. & are dispatched thereto at 8 a.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Glenbarry is the nearest money order office.

KILMALIE is a parish, formerly partly in Argyllshire, but in 1831 this portion was transferred, and the whole of Kilmalie is now in Inverness-shire.

KILMARTIN is a parish to the north of Loch Crinan, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Lochgilphead, its kirktown; is 8 miles north-west from Lochgilphead and 32 south-west from Inveraray, through Lochghead; the parish extends 11 miles from north to south by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the east by Kilmichael Glassary, north by Kilchrean and west by Craighuish. In the south of the parish, on a promontory projecting into Loch Crinan, is Duntroon Castle, which occupied the site of an old fortress and is the property of Lord Malcolm of Potalloch, who possesses extensive demesnes in this part of the county; the castle was destroyed by fire June 7th, 1899. Potalloch House, the residence of Lord Malcolm of Potalloch C.B., D.L., J.P. was erected in 1840, and close to the village are the beautiful ruins of Carnazarie Castle, formerly the residence of the Bishops of Argyll. At Barbreck is the mansion and demesne of James A. Campbell esq. J.P. Fairs are held at Kilmartin on the first Thursday in March, for seeds and hiring, and the last Thursday in November, for horses and hiring servants. A prize show in connection with the Potalloch Farming Society is held here for cattle, sheep and horses, in September.

Ford is a hamlet about the centre of the parish. The islands of Macaskan and Rigbi are also included in this parish.

Lord Malcolm of Potalloch C.B., D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 25,102 acres; rateable value, £5,557; the population in 1891 was 695, and in 1881, 811.

KILMELFORT, see KILNINVER AND KILMELFORT.

KILMICHAEL GLASSARY is a parish extending from the lower half of Loch Fyne to Loch Awe, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Lochgilphead, which town is included in the parish. The village of Kilmichael Glassary, about 5 miles north of Lochgilphead, at one time a burgh of some size, is now merely the kirk town of the parish, containing the church and manse of Glassary. A Board school, a market stance, and a good inn are at Bridgend, on the river Add, half a mile west of Kilmichael. Between Kilmichael and Kilmartin there are numerous druidical remains. Two large and well frequented fairs are held here annually, at which from seven to eight thousand head of black cattle are generally exposed for sale—namely, on the last Wednesday in May, which is also for horses and sheep, and the last Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October—at both of which fairs the hiring of servants takes place.

Craræ, a village in the parish, 9½ miles south-west of Inveraray and 4 south-west of Furnace; here are some large granite quarries.

Cumlodden is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed out of the parishes of Kilmichael Glassary and Glenaray. The population in 1891 was 688.

Lochgair is a hamlet in this parish on a bay of same name, on the west side of Loch Fyne, and situated 7 miles north-east of Lochgilphead; there is a Mission Established church here. Lord Malcolm of Poltalloch C.B. is the principal landowner. The parish comprises 60,229 acres; rateable value, including Lochgilphead, £18,000; the population in 1891 was 3,836, including 1,320 in the town of Lochgilphead, and in 1881, 4,343, including 1,489 in the town.

LISMORE and APPIN constitute a united parish, formed of the island of Lismore and the district of Appin on the mainland and east shore of Loch Linnhe. The island lies in the mouth of Loch Linnhe, and is about 11 miles long by 2 broad; its name in Gaelic signifies "the great garden," and it is still very fertile though abounding in small hills. The parish, besides the island and the mainland district, includes the smaller islands of Musdale, Sheep and Shuna. At the Clachan of Lismore, about 3 miles from the northern point of the island, is the church of St. Moulac, constituted the cathedral church of the see of Argyll on its formation, c. 1200: it consists simply of the choir of an apparently never-completed structure, and forms an aisleless oblong, in the Decorated Flamboyant style, 80 feet in length by 30 wide, and internally 52 feet in height; in 1749 it was new roofed, and retains sedilla with round-headed arches and on the north side an acutely pointed doorway leading to the sacristy, and in 1898 it was entirely renovated. The palace or castle of the bishops stood about 4 miles south by west from the cathedral, and there are some remains of the buildings. There are also remains of two Danish or Scandinavian forts called Oeefin and Tirtuir. There is a small village at Port Ramsay, and at a southern point on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel stands a lighthouse, almost in a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light is catoptric and flashes from the summit of a high rounded pillar of stone masonry. A pier has been erected at Achnacroish, at which the mail steamer calls twice daily. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from the island. The principal industries are farming and fishing. There are three fresh-water lakes, in which there is a good supply of trout &c. The Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., the trustees of the late Rev. James Fell, the trustees of the late A. A. Campbell esq. of Lochnell, the trustees of the late Donald Campbell and Duncan M'Coll esq. of Port Charren, are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish is 114,918 acres; rateable value, £17,532. The population in 1891 was 3,242, of whom 561 were on the island of Lismore, and 2,654 in Appin, the remaining 27 being on the three small islands. In 1881 the total population was 3,433. The ecclesiastical parish of Lismore had a population of 681 in 1891.

LOCH AWE is a small village at the head of the loch of the same name, with a station on the Tyndrum and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, and is within the civil parish of Glenorchy and Inishall; it has a pier from which steamers start for the lower end of the loch, and which is connected with the railway; it is about 22 miles east from Oban. The loch, which is 24 miles long, and one of the most beautiful as well as one of the finest fishing lochs in Scotland, is surrounded on the north by huge mountains, of which the highest is Ben Cruachan. Its banks are well wooded, and numerous islands are dotted here and there; on Iniskail, one of these, there formerly existed a convent of Cistercian nuns. The loch abounds with trout. The most convenient hotels for the angler are the Loch Awe and Dalmally hotels, at which he will find excellent accommodation. There is an Established Mission church, called St. Conan's Kirk, built in 1832, by Walter J. D. Campbell esq. of Blythward.

LOCHGAR, see KILMICHAEL GLASSARY.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a village and police burgh in the parish of Kilmichael Glassary, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district, and also a quoad sacra parish taken from the parishes of Glassary and South Knapdale; it is 2 miles north of Ardrishaig, and 24 south-west of Inveraray by road, and takes its name from its position at the head of Loch Gilp, which is a small inlet from Loch Fyne, 12 miles north of Tarbert; it is 3½ miles long by 1 mile broad at the widest part, and has Ardrishaig with the entrance to the Crinan canal on the west side of its mouth, and at its head the burgh of Lochgilphead. The burgh consists of several well-paved streets, and is supplied with water from a reservoir belonging to the commissioners: the streets are lighted with gas supplied by a company. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 25 and 26 Victoria, cap. 101, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates appointed under the act. Meetings of the Argyll Police and Lunacy Boards are held at stated periods, also monthly meetings of the Mid-Argyll district committee of the County Council, and of the local justices, and a sheriff's small debt court is held every alternate month. The head quarters of the constabulary are here. The burgh possesses a commodious court house and gaol. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing. In front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a site provided for the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and a line of telegraph also connects it with Campbeltown, Inveraray, Oban, the Islands of Mull and Ilay &c. and Glasgow. On the Kilmory side is a quay for the small craft engaged in the herring fishery and coal vessels. The Parliamentary church, erected at the head of Argyll street in 1327-8, and rebuilt in 1885, at a cost of £2,500, is of native stone, with freestone facings, in the early Gothic style. There is a Baptist chapel in the same street, a Reformed Presbyterian church, now Martyr's Free church, in Union street, a Free church in Lochell street, and on the north side of the town the Episcopal church, called Christ Church, and erected in 1852. The latter is a building in the Decorated Gothic style, and consists of a nave and chancel and a stained east window. There is a residence at Bishopton, north-west of the village, for the Bishop of Argyll and the Isles; this is at present occupied by Rev. F. E. Ramsay, M.A. rector of Christ Church, the bishop preferring to reside at Ballachulish. There is a Board school here. The site commands an extensive view of Loch Fyne to Arran, and the varied and beautiful scenery around. The Argyll and Bute District Asylum, which has been considerably enlarged, is available for 490 persons. An Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected in 1893, and near which a combination poorhouse has also been erected. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Auchindarroch, the residence of Alexander Campbell esq. J.P. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory, the seat of Sir Arthur John Campbell-Orde bart. J.P. sur rounded with well-wooded grounds, forming a conspicuous feature from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March for horses, on the Wednesday fortnight after Kilmichael May market, on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for black cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses. Lord Malcolm of Potalloch C.B. is the principal landowner. The rateable value of the burgh is £14,643 (gross), land ward, £13,128; the population in 1891 was 1,320, and in 1881, 1,489; the population in 1891 of the ecclesiastical parish was 2,252.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Union street, Lochgilphead: Miss Mary Miller, postmistress. Deliveries, 10.15 a.m. & 2 p.m.; dis patches, 12.15 noon & 5.55 p.m.; an extra dispatch at 10 p.m. during the summer months; telegraph office open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

LOCHGOILHEAD and KILMORICH form a joint parish, lying west of Loch Long, and east of the upper part of Loch Fyne, in poor combination of Greenock, and small debt court district of Inveraray; it extends 16 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth, and is bounded south by Dunoon parish, east by Dumbartonshire and west by Strachur, and contains the villages of Lochgilhead, Kilmorich, Cairndow and Carrick. Lochgilhead village is situated at the head of Loch Gail, 14 miles north of Dunoon, and 11 south by east of Inveraray. The country on both sides of the loch is mountainous, the hills rising to about 2,500 feet. Loch Gail is about 6 miles long. Cairndow is a small village at the head of Loch Fyne, 10 miles north-east of Inveraray and 9 miles north of Lochgilhead; and Carrick is a village about 6 miles south of Lochgilhead, on the west shore of Loch Gail. On a rock on the shore and near the village are the ruins of Carrick Castle, a strong square tower, erected in the 14th century. It seems at one time to have been surrounded by the sea, and connected by means of a drawbridge with the mainland. A little south of Cairndow are the remains of the Castle of Ardinglas and the modern mansion of same name, the residence of George F. W. Callander esq.

MORVERN is a parish lying north-east of the Sound of Mull, its kirktown being on the north shore of the sound, 5 miles south-east from Tebrernory and 25 north-west from Oban; it is in the poor combination of Mull; it gives the name to one of the sub-divisions of the county, but has no important town or village in itself; the village of Loch Aline, nearly opposite to Aros, is the principal place. The parish is bounded on the south and south-west by the Sound of Mull, south-east by Loch Linne, north-east by Lismore and Applu, and north and north-west by Loch Saunt, and extends 20 miles from east to west by 12 in depth; the country is mountainous. Ben Meadhain rising 2,423 feet above sea level, and is principally occupied in grazing farms. Near Loch Alina are the ruins of Ardtornish Castle, and near Morvern kirk-town the remains of Killundine Castle. Killundine is the residence of Sir John Henry Morris K.C.S.I. The area of the parish, which includes the islands of Carna, Frielhouse and Orosay, is 90,737; rateable value, £6,752; the population in 1891 was 820, and in 1881, 828.

MUCKAIRN, see ARCHATTAN AND MUCKAIRN.

MULL is a large island lying south of Morvern, from which it is separated by the Sound of Mull, and contains the town of Tobermory and the villages of Bunnassan and Salen (which see, under respective headings); it comprises the greater part of the parishes of Kilfinichen and Kilvickieon, and Kilninan and Kilmore, and the whole of Torosay; in extent it is about 27 miles from south-east to north-west, and 20 broad at its widest part; the poor combination takes its name from the island, and the small debt court district is that of Tobermory, the chief town; the two northern parishes are mountainous, the principal hills being Ben More, 3,185 feet above sea level and Dun-da-oo, 2,605, both in Torosay parish; its western coast is much indented by bays and lochs, two of which, Loch Scridain and Loch-Na-Keal, run 7 or 8 miles into the island, and on the south-east, Loch Spailie, which is almost land locked, is about the same length. There are many fresh water lochs, of which the largest, Loch Frisa, 3 miles long, contains salmon and sea trout and out of it flows the river Aros. Loch Buie, a salt water inlet on the south of the island, is now a fishing station; there are several small rivers. The island contains many remains of ancient castles &c. among which are those of Duart, once the stronghold of the chief of the MacLeans, occupying the brink of a high cliff which shoots out from the coast of Mull into the sound, opposite Oban, and Aros Castle, the stronghold of the Lords of the Isles, and now the property of D. Cameron MacLachlan esq. of Aros Castle. There are also a number of smaller forts round the coast, probably erected as a protection against the Norwegians. On the western side, close to the Ross of Mull, is still worked a quarry of red granite, or porphyry.

The parish of Kilfinichen and Kilvickieon occupies the south-western portion of the island on each side of Loch Scridain, and includes the islands of Earrat, Inniskenneth and Iona; it contains the village of Bunnassan. The area comprises 59,942 acres; rateable value, £5,886; the population in 1891 was 1,735, of whom 1,439 were on Mull; and in 1881 was 1,982, 1,680 being on Mull.

The parish of Kilninan and Kilmore forms the northern section of the island, north of Loch-Na-Keal, which nearly cuts it off from the other parts of the island, the distance between the head of the loch and the Bay of Aros being only about 4 miles; it includes the islands of Calve, Gometra, Little Colonsay and Ulva, and contains the town of Tobermory. The area comprises 74,266 acres; rateable value, £11,741; the population in 1891 was 2,344, including 2,255 on Mull, and in 1881, 2,540, with 2,447 on Mull.

The parish of Torosay is the largest in the island, and occupies the south-eastern portion to the south of Loch-Na-Keal; the castle of Duart is in this parish, as is also Loch Buie, the village of Sàten, and the mountains of Ben More and Dun-da-oo. Duart Castle, which belonged to the chiefs of the MacLeans, is 4½ miles from the old ferry house of Auchnacraig, and stands on a promontory, which forms the eastern side of Duart bay, nearly opposite to the southern point of Lismora island; the shell of the buildings is complete, and forms a parallelogram, 100 feet by 65 feet, the oldest portion being a solid square tower with walls 12 to 14 feet thick, with round headed splayed windows; the other buildings date from 1663, with subsequent additions. The area is 90,594 acres; rateable value, £7,620; the population in 1891 was 997, all on Mull, and in 1881, 1,102.

Sàten (which see) is a village in Kilninan and Torosay parishes, on the south-east angle of the Bay of Aros.

Aros is a hamlet in the south of Kilninan parish, east of which, on the north point of the bay, are the remains of the strong Castle of Aros, a former fortress of the Lords of the Isles; it is simply a parallelogram of 75 by 90 feet, and there are some traces of an outer wall; it is now the property of D. Cameron MacLachlan esq. of Aros Castle.

Fairs in Mull: at Salen, a large horse fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday, and for cattle and sheep on the Tuesday before the second Wednesday in May, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October; at Oraigaire, Morvern and the Islands of Coll and Tiree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salen.

OBAN is a modern town, police burgh and seaport, in the parish of Kilmore and Kilbride, 136 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 117 north-west from Fort William, 32 south-south-west from Fort William, and 80 west-north-west from Inveraray and 80 west-east from Tobermory. The town, which is divided by a small river into two sections, is situated at the head of a fine bay, protected by the Island of Kerrera, and having an entrance at each end. This bay is from 12 to 20 fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a good number of merchantmen. There are three quays, which have been enlarged and improved, so as to afford ample room to the various vessels frequenting the port. In 1894, 28 fishing boats, aggregate tonnage 32 tons, and employing 52 hands, were registered at this port. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whiskey, wool and sheep dip. It is also a great centre for the steamer traffic for the Caledonian canal, West Argyllshire and the Western Isles, and is the terminus of the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, National Bank of Scotland Limited, North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland in the town. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, six councillors and a town clerk, and Oban, with the burghs of Ayr, Campbeltown, Inveraray and Irvine forms the Ayr district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. The Municipal buildings, in Albany street, erected in 1897, at a total cost of £6,600, are of freestone and contain the offices of the burgh officials. A sheriff's court is held every Friday, a justice of peace court when required, and a police and burgh court every Monday and when required. The Sheriff Court House and Police Station were completed in 1889, in the Classic style, from the designs of the late Mr. D. Macintosh, of Oban. The Court House, the main entrance to which is in Albany street, contains the offices of the county procurator fiscal, the sheriff clerk depute, &c. The front is entirely finished with a polished freestone, and the rear of grey granite with freestone dressings. Further along Albany street are the Police buildings, consisting of the police station and the usual offices, the material employed being granite and freestone. On the east side of the town stands the church of the quoad sacra parishes of Oban: the present building was erected in 1893, on the site of the old church, at a cost of £3,200, and affords 650 sittings. In Tweeddale street is a Congregational chapel, rebuilt in 1880, capable of accommodating 500. The Free High church stands on a hill to the east of the town, and has a Mission hall in connection in Stevenson street. St. Columba's Established church, in George street, erected in 1875, is an elegant structure with a spire 120 feet high. The United Presbyterian church, in the neighbourhood of St. John's, was erected in 1866. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist was erected in 1864, at a cost of about £1,700, and consecrated in Sept. 1864 by the Bishop of London, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, with stained windows, and sittings for 200 persons. The bishop of the diocese and trustees are the patrons. On the Corran Esplanade stands the Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral and the residence of the Right Rev. George John Smith, Roman Catholic Bishop of Argyll and the Isles. Argyll Square Free church was erected in 1893, at a cost of £4,700, and has suitable halls. To the south of the town a combination poorhouse was opened in 1862, for the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn; including the yards it occupies about three acres. The Burgh Board school, for secondary education, built in 1895-6, in Scroba road, at a cost of £4,000, has special class rooms for cookery and art teaching. Three newspapers are published here weekly—the "Oban Times," the "Oban Telegraph" and the "Oban Express," and a visitors' list appears during the season. There is a fine sandy beach at Ganavan, about a mile to the north of the town, which can be approached by boat. Fairs and markets, for cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Tuesday before the fourth Thursday in March, September and November; and for hiring, April and October. The ownership of the town is divided into two, the trustees of the late Robert Macfie esq. D.L., J.P. of Airds (d. 1899) owning the south portion; that on the north belongs to the MacDougalls, of Duocollie. The rateable value of the town is £41,754; the population in 1891 was 4,946, and in 1881, 4,046.

KILMORE AND KILBRIDE form a parish on the coast of the Firth of Lorne and south of the mouth of Loch Etive, the kirktown of which is 5 miles south from Oban; the parish includes the parliamentary burgh of Oban and the island of Kerrera; it is in the Lorn poor combination and small debt court district of Oban, and extends about 10 miles from east to west by 6 north to south; its boundaries are the parishes of Ardrachattan on the north, Kilchreonan on the east and Kilminver on the south.

Dunstaffnage, Duocollie and Gyles Castles are in the parish. The first-named stands on a promontory, at the southern point of the entrance to Loch Etive; it is believed to have been the residence of the Kings of Scotland until they removed, about 850, to Scoon, when Kenneth II. took with him the "Stone of Destiny," or coronation seat, now in Westminster Abbey; the circumference of the castle is about 400 feet; Dunstaffnage Castle is the seat of Alexander James Henry Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. Duocollie Castle stands on a rock on the coast, half a mile north of Oban, and has a fine keep still in a tolerable state of repair. Gyles Castle stands on the south-east point of the island of Kerrera, and was a stronghold of the MacDougalls, of Lorn. King Alexander II. is said to have died on this island, about 1249, when on an expedition against the western isles, and Haec, the Norwegian, made the island a rendezvous for his galleys. A quarry of excellent freestone was some years since opened, about 4 miles south, on the shore of Loch Feochan, and in the vicinity of Loch Awe are the well-known Ben Crnachan granite quarries. The area of the parish comprises 29,500 acres; rateable value, exclusive of Oban, £9,897; the population in 1891 was 5,729, of whom 4,946 were in the burgh of Oban, and in 1881, 5,142, of whom 4,046 were in Oban.

Connel Ferry is a rising village, about 6 miles north of Oban, on the shore of Loch Etive, and has a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway. A line of railway is now (1899) in course of construction from here to Ballachulish. The Established church of St. Oran, erected here, is an edifice of Ben Crnachan granite, from designs by the late Mr. David Macintosh, architect, of Oban; the Free church was erected and opened in August, 1893, at a cost of about £800. Here is also a public library and reading and recreation rooms.

SADDELL and SKIPNESS constitute a parish in Cantyre, on the west side of Kibbreannan Sound, in the small debt court district of Campbeltown, from which port its kirktown is distant 12 miles north by sea and 14 by road; the parish extends 22 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the west by the parishes of Kilmacdonnell and Killean. At Saddell village are the remains of an abbey, founded in the 12th century by Reginald, son of Sommerled Theme, of Argyll. At the mouth of Glen Saddell, near the sea, is a strong castle, a massive rectangular structure, and at Skipness, at the north end of the parish, stands another castle, built on a promontory and apparently of great strength, its outer wall being 7 feet thick and 33 in height; there are also remains of Cultes at Airds and Torrisdale. The parish church is at Carradale, a village on the coast, a little north of Glen Saddell, where a pier has been erected at which steamers from Glasgow and Campbeltown call regularly. The burial place of the Macdonalds is in the abbey of Saddell, and the castle was one of their strongholds. Col. John N. M'Leod, of Kintarbert; Austin Mackenzie esq. of Glen Carradale; Major Matthew Charles B. McAlister, of Glenbarry Abbey; Robert Chellas Graham esq. of Skipness, and Colin G. P. Campbell esq. D.L. of Stonefield, Tarbert, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 46,872 acres; rateable value, £7,512; the population in 1891 was 1,166, being 701 in the ecclesiastical parish of Saddell and 395 in Skipness; in 1881 it was 1,163.

Skipness is a quoad sacra parish and village, on the coast opposite to Loch Ransa, 10 miles south-east of Tarbert, with an old castle, once a residence of the Macdonalds; it is still entire and measures 450 feet in length, with walls 30 feet high and 7 thick. There is a Board school in the village and an Established church.

THE SMALL ISLES.

The Islands of Canna, Muck, Rnm, Sandy and Bigg together form a parish; of these, the latter was the only one originally in Inverness-shire, hnd by Boundary Order No. 91, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," the other four were transferred from this county to Inverness-shire, where full particulars relating to them all will be found.

SOUTHEND is a parish, occupying the southern portion of Cantyre, and including the island of Sanda, which lies about 3 miles off its south-east point; the village is on the coast opposite Sanda and is 10 miles south from Campbeltown; the country is hilly, and the inhabitants are employed in agriculture and fishing. About half a mile south of the village stands a rock "led

"Dunaverty," interesting to the historian and the antiquary as having been the scene of many sanguinary events, especially the massacre here in 1649 of 300 of the McDonalds by General Leslie. Few traces of the castle now remain, but a mile and a half west stands the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the highlanders were interred and on the south side the lowlanders, but that distinction no longer exists. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village the United Presbyterian church. On the island of Sanda is a lighthouse, and also one on the Mull of Kintyre. The Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C.; Col. Forbes Mackay, of Carskey; Douglas J. K. McDonald esq. of Sanda, and Ninian B. Stewart esq. of Keil, are the principal landowners. The links of the Dunaverty Golf Club are near the Argyll hotel, and have a course of 18 holes. The area comprises 30,801 acres; rateable value, £11,041; the population in 1891 was 844, of whom 36 were in Sanda, and in 1891, 955. The island of Sanda is the property of D. J. R. McDonald esq.

STAFFA is a small island about a mile and a half in circumference, lying midway between the islands of Iona and Ulva in the bay formed by the western side of Mull, and is remarkable for its caves, which attract a large number of visitors, for whose accommodation a regular steamship service from Oban is maintained during the summer months; the island is about 8 miles from the coast of Mull and about 60 from Oban, and presents an uneven table-land, resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are numerous, but those existing on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty nor for magnitude; and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for causing loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them, resembling the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest are, first the Scallop, or Clamshell cave; second, the Buachaille, or Herdsman rock; third, the Causeway and the Face, or Colonnade; fourth, Fingal's or the Great Cave; fifth, the Boat cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave. At the Scallop, or Clamshell cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breadth at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille (the Herdsman) is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low water. The Causeway here, presenting an extensive surface, is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the Great Face of Staffa can be seen in perfection, as the general surface is undulating and uneven; great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave, is easy of access and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat cave is accessible only from the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban; the visitors are generally landed at Fingal's cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

STRACHUR and STRATILACHLAN form a joint parish, extending for 18 miles down the eastern shore of Loch Fyne from St. Catherine's ferry to Otter ferry, bounded on the east by Kilmadine, Inverchaolain and Lochgoilhead parishes and south by Kilfinan; it is in the poor combination of Greenock and the small debt court district of Inveraray. The village of Strachur is about 8 miles south of Inveraray, and the village of Strathlachlan about 4 miles further south; the district generally is mountainous.

St. Catherine's is a village, with a ferry on Loch Fyne, at the northern extremity of the parish, 9 miles north-west from Lochgoilhead and 4½ north-east from Strachur village. Kilkatrine, the residence of the Marquess of Lorne K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G. is close to this village, and the remains of Castle Lachlan are about 5 miles south-west of Strachur village. The principal landowners in Strachur are Roger H. Plowden, John B. MacBrayne and Robert W. Robertson, and John MacLachlan of MacLachlan esq. is the principal landowner in Strathlachlan. The area comprises 38,277 acres; rateable value, £6,016; the population in 1891 was 748, and in 1881, 932.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Strachur; William Montgomery, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Inveraray. Delivery, 12.30 p.m. also during summer months at 4.30 p.m.; dispatch, 9.30 a.m. & during summer months at 2 p.m.

Post & Telegraph Office, Strathlachlan; Peter McGregor, sub-postmaster. Delivery, 3.30 p.m.; dispatch, 7 a.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Nearest money order office, Furnace (by ferry)

STRONE (also known as Blairmore and Strone) is a watering place and village on Strone point, at the mouth of the Holy Loch, 2 miles east from Kilmua, in the joint parish of Dunoon and Kilmua, and the small debt court district of Dunoon. It has no regular trade, but depends chiefly upon its summer visitors. The Argyll Hotel, beautifully situated at the entrance to the Holy Loch, has been enlarged, thoroughly renovated, re-furnished and lighted by electricity, and is now replete with every modern convenience and comfort. The population of the ecclesiastical parish was in 1891, 573, of whom 25 were in Strone portion and 248 in Blairmore portion, the latter being the northern part of the village.

TARBERT (or East Tarbert) is a village and fishing station on the west shore of and at the mouth of Loch Fyne, at the head of a good, well-sheltered harbour, and lying partly in the parish of South Knapdale and partly in that of Kilmalmonell and Kilmory, 38 miles north-east of Campbeltown and 39 south-west of Inveraray; the distance from the head of its harbour to West Tarbert loch head being only a little over a mile; the isthmus was protected by three forts, and Magnus, King of Norway (1033) is reported to have transported one of his galleys across in order to claim Cahtyre as an island. The village of East Tarbert forms a semicircle around the harbour, which is only small, and the entrance to it narrow, with several sunken rocks, so that it is difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are sent to the Glasgow markets. In a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, formerly a place of great strength; it was built by King Robert Bruce and inhabited by him in 1325; immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is the Established church; there is also a Free church and a Board school. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July, which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses. The population in 1891 was 1,775, and in 1881, 1,629.

West Tarbert, one mile distant, at which there also is a good quay, is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardrpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. Two roads follow respectively the east and west sides of the loch.

TIREE, an island lying to the west of Mull and 3 miles south of Coll, is a parish in the poor combination of Mull and is divided ecclesiastically into two parishes, that of Tiree and the quoad sacra parish of Hylepol (or Helipel); it is about 14 miles in extent from north to south and varies in breadth from 1 to 5 miles; it is 30 miles south-west from Tobermory. There is a small harbour, available only for small craft, at Scarinish Bay, on the north-east and another with a quay at Hynish in the south. There are many small lochs in the island, but they contain only eels. It abounds in marble, of which it is said the rocks on its shore are entirely composed; but from some unexplained cause the quarries cannot be worked. In the churchyard at Soroby is a beautiful monumental cross to an abbess, inscribed "Sorrow Anna Abbatissa de Y." Fairs are held in May, on the Wednesday before that of Mull, in August on the Monday, and in October on the Wednesday before those in Mull. On the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about 16 miles south-west of Tiree, a lighthouse has been built of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull; the light is dioptric. The area comprises 18,942 acres; rateable value, £4,500; the population in 1891 was 2,452 (of whom 1,067 were in Tiree ecclesiastical parish and 1,385 in Helipel), and 2,730 in 1881; these figures include three persons at Skerryvore. TOBERMORY, the capital of Mull, is a seaport, village and police burgh, in the parish of Kilfinian and Kilmore, and a quoad sacra parish, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district; it lies on the north side of a small bay opposite to and distant 3 miles from Drimmin, in the western angle of Morven. The town was founded about 1788, together with Ullapool, by the British Fishery Society, as a station for fishing boats, but subsequently became the property of Alexander Allan esq. of Drimfin. It is governed by a provost and two bailies; the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court once a month; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections for all voters residing in the islands of Mull, Cull, Jona, Tiree, Ulva, and in Morven. The town derives its name from a celebrated well or spring, called "St. Mary's Well." The Spanish admiral's ship "Florida," one of the "Armada," when at anchor here in 1588, was destroyed by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's Government. Part of the wood of this vessel was presented to His Majesty George IV. on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large brass gun that belonged to the same vessel, found many years since in Tobermory bay. On the west side of the town are the remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and of a fortification. The harbour is one of the safest among the western isles, being protected from the Sound of Mull by an island called Culve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaving ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour, though few but small craft can effect this at the south-east point, even at high water. About two miles from Tobermory, in the Sound of Mull, a lighthouse called the "Runagall" was erected in 1857. Tobermory possesses two quays; the first was erected in 1835 by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, but subsequently a new quay and pier was constructed by F. W. Caldwell esq. proprietor of this part of the town (known as Mishinish), at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and opened in 1864. It has a greater depth of water, and is more capacious, with offices, stores, waiting rooms, and a cattle pen. The town has increased considerably in this direction of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels. As the only town in Mull and the large circumjacent district, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat of a considerable domestic trade. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here, and occupies a handsome building of stone, in the main street, completed in 1865. There is also a branch of the North of Scotland Bank Limited occupying a fine building. The town is built on a series of terraces overlooking the harbour and on a commanding site; above the town are the County buildings, a substantial erection of stone, embracing the sheriff's court and procurator fiscal's offices &c. The union poorhouse, erected for the poor of the six surrounding parishes, distant rather better than a mile from Tobermory, will hold 130, and cost £7,700. Aros Hall, the gift of Alexander Allan esq. of Drimfin, includes a reading room, well supplied with newspapers, periodicals &c. billiard room, circulating library, and a large hall, capable of seating between 300 and 400 persons; the institution is open daily for the use of the inhabitants, and visitors are also admitted on payment of a small fee. There are three hotels, the principal being the Western Isles Hotel, erected in 1882-3, on a bold and elevated position above the principal pier. First-class accommodation may also be had at the Mull and Mishinish hotels, and there is a Temperance hotel. The places of worship include an Established church, a Free church and a Baptist chapel. The Free church, situate in the centre of the village, was built at a cost of about £3,500, the late Mrs. Bryce Allan and her son, Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, being the principal contributors. The Established church was rebuilt 1806-7, on the site of the old church, at a cost of upwards of £2,500 and opened in October, 1837, by Dr. Norman McLeod, of Inverness. The public schools adjoin the Established church; there is also a female Industrial school. A regatta is held here once a year. From a hill in the neighbourhood a view of the islands of Tiree, Coll, Eigg, Muck, Skye, and various others of smaller importance is obtained. Close to the town is Mary's Loch, a beautiful expanse of water, situated between two finely-wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. The population of the town in 1891 was 1,154, and in 1881, 1,200; the ecclesiastical parish contained in 1891, 1,265 persons. The rateable value of the burgh is £3,714.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcels Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Tobermory (Roadway sub-Office. Letters should have B.S.O. ULVA is an island and quoad sacra parish, in the parish of Kiloinian and Kilmore,
Isle of Mull, forming the south side of Loch Tuadh, and divided at the eastern end from the Isle of Mull by a narrow strait; it measures 7 miles from east to west, by 2½
in breadth. It is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Isles. There are a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60
feet long, 58 feet broad, and 30 feet in average height, having an arched entrance
in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent
from a rock 66 feet in height directly into the sea. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark esq. J.P. who resides
there. The population of the island in 1891
was 46, and in 1881, 53, and the population
of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 164.

AYRSHIRE.

AYRSHIRE is a maritime county, stretching along the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, from Wemyss Bay, opposite to Melian in Argyllshire, by the eastern entrance to the Kyle of Bute, in an irregular curve trending eastward as far as Ayr town, from which it turns to the south-west, ending at the south at Loch Ryan, which separates it from Wigtownshire, the distance measured direct from north to south being about 55 miles (but taking the line of coast 84), its breadth varying from 5 miles at each extremity to 26 at the widest part of the crescent, just below Troon; it is bounded on the north and north-east by Renfrewshire, east by Lanarkshire and Dumfriesshire, south-east by Kirkcudbrightshire, south by Wigtownshire and west by the Firth of Clyde; the county area comprises 730,947 acres, and it is divided into the 3 districts of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine; and Kyle division is between the rivers Doon and Irvine. In point of size Ayrshire ranks as the seventh and in population as the sixth of the counties in Scotland. The population in 1891 being 110,987 males and 115,296 females, or a total of 226,283, against 217,519 in 1881; the number of inhabited houses being 45,252 in 1891, and 41,733 in 1881.

Early History.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, sometimes known as the Strathclyde Britons, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were in the course of time overrun by and amalgamated with the Scots-Irish from Kintyre, where they had founded the Dalriadic monarchy, at what is now known as Campbeltown. About 750 these again were partly conquered by a number of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle, and from this followed the close connection in Ecclesiastical government between this portion of Scotland and the see of York. From this time up to 1097 it formed part of the Celtic Kingdom of Scotia, under the monarchs who held their court, first at Dunstaffnage and subsequently at Scone. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced from England. Barons now sprang up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. In 1263, Haco, King of Norway, fought a battle near Larga with Alexander III. King of Scotland, by whom he was defeated and compelled to retire to Norway. During the wars of Bruce and Edward, Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Balliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Bruce landed in Ayrshire from Arran to claim the kingdom. Some of the various exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, occurred in this county, and scarcely any division in Scotland remained so long under the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn had their respective quarrels of long standing, causing occasionally sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiwicks of certain districts. The county was frequently distracted by feuds of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commentator, of Crossragueth, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassilis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered inclined them to the institution of the Covenant, and the consequence was that, during the heats of the 17th century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the Privy Council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military executive; in July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III. Many remains of Danish forts and earthenworks as well as of numerous castles are scattered over the county; along the rocky portion of the coast occur the castles of Greenan, Dunure, Colzean and Turnberry, and there are several abbeyes. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochrans, Earls of Dundonald. The castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick, and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

Soil, Surface &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunninghame, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high, and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly, wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out on its eastern boundary from the adjacent counties by high ridgy land. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours, and in the rocks are some remarkable caves, worthy of the inspection of the curious. Though moist, the climate is healthy, the rainfall in this being much above that of the central and eastern counties, heavy rain not being infrequent and occasionally of long duration. For fully two-thirds of the year the wind blows from the west and south-west, thus causing the climate to be more temperate and mild than counties on the east coast. The principal eminences are—Hareshaw Hill, 1,527; Cairn table, 1,650; Misty Law, 1,663; Hill of Stake, 1,711; Knockdoan, 1,950; Black Craig, 2,298; Shalloch on Minnoch, 2,520; and Kirrieroch Hill, 2,562 feet.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—It was not until about the middle of the 18th century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement at this period of Margaret Countess of Loudoun in Lorn Castle may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement, as by her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry, and the system of dairy farms then inaugurated has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland; the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market; under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been generally introduced, and with great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. According to the Agricultural Returns for Great Britain for 1898, the chief crops are oats, 44,851 acres; wheat, 1,992; barley, 1,401; turnips, 7,061; potatoes, 7,297; mangolds, 468; beans, 662; hay of all kinds, 47,833 and green crops, 16,050; land under grass, 255,057 acres; permanent pasture, 150,913; total area of land and water, 730,947 acres; mountain and heathland, 324,918 acres; woods, 23,666 acres; plantations (planted 1881 to 1895), 2,059 acres; orchards, 103 acres. The live stock in 1898 comprised 7,277 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 2,052 unbroken horses; 51,324 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; 50,393 of other cattle; ewes kept for breeding, 164,775; other sheep, 250,511; sows kept for breeding, 439; other pigs, 12,059. The breed of cattle has been much improved, the Ayrshire shorthorns being much prized, both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, coats, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county dye works have been established, also woollen factories, iron foundries, tanneries, large steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Catrine, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Kilmorie are several works for the production of fishing nets; Mauchline is noted as the place where fancy wood-work articles are made; at Stevenston are iron works and a dynamite manufactory; at Old Cumnock is an extensive pottery and a woollen manufactory; at Irvine, chemical manufactories and iron forges; and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works.

Fishing is also carried on at all the large seaports, herring, cod, ling &c. being caught, and in the lochs and streams there is an abundance of trout, and in the larger rivers are to be found salmon. The number of fishing boats registered at the 4 ports of Ayr, Ardrossan, Irvine and Troon in 1898 was 317, with an aggregate tonnage of 925 tons, and employing 482 hands; the number of vessels registered as owned at the ports was 103, equal 29,088 tons and new vessels built in 1898 were 16, equal 2,609 tons.

The trade in minerals is an important one, especially that in coal, the figures as shown by the return for 1897 (which includes Dumfriesshire) being, coal produced, 3,585,427 tons; valued at £866,478; fire-clay produced, 53,705 tons; value £8,355; iron ore, 405,318 tons; value £151,994; oil shale, 1,432 tons; limestone, 16,240; sandstone, 159,422. There were 6 ironworks in the county, with 31 furnaces at work in the year, the average number of furnaces actually in blast during that time being 24 6-12ths, producing 369,836 tons of pig iron; there is also 1 copper smelting works.

Rivers, Lakes, Springs and Railways.—In the ridge of hills which intersects the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Eak, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr and others flow to the east and south; while the Stinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr and the Lugar traverse the county and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine and some smaller rivers water the northern parts of Ayrshire. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water.

though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, which is six miles long and about three-quarters in breadth, from whence the river Doon flows. The county is well served by railways, the Glasgow and South Western, which enters the county in the north-east, near Beith, runs from there to Dalry, whence a branch goes to the coast at Ardrossan and on to Largs, the main line continuing from Dalry to Kilmarnock, Mauchline and New Cumnock, leaving the county at about 3 miles east from the latter place for Dumfries &c., while from Mauchline a line passes through Tarbolton to Ayr, meeting there another branch from Kilwinning (the junction south of Dalry) which runs by Irvine and Troon to Ayr, and from Old Cumnock a branch runs east to Muirkirk, and another west forking north to Auchincruive, on the Mauchline and Ayr branch and south-west to Dalrymple, where it joins a line which runs from Ayr to Maybole and Girvan, leaving the county three miles north of Glenwhilly station, on its way to Stranraer from Dalrymple, via Hollybush; another branch runs to Dalmellington, a branch also runs from Irvine to Kilmarnock and thence via Galeton to Newmilns, and the Caledonian railway has a line from Glasgow, entering the county at Lugton, where it branches north-west to Beith and south-west via Dunlop to Kilmarnock.

Ecclesiastical and Civil Divisions, Population &c.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow, and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions of Carrick, Cunningham and Kyle; it now contains 69 ecclesiastical parishes, comprised in the two presbyteries of Ayr and Irvine, within the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The valuation of the county for 1897-98 was £1,489,052. The civil divisions consist of 44 parishes, in which are 2 royal burghs (Ayr and Irvine) and 14 police burghs. The contributory burghs are Ayr and Irvine; two members also represent the shire at large. The parliamentary constituency of the Northern division was in 1898, 13,270, that of the Southern division being 15,567.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT FOR THE COUNTY.

ALLOWAY is a small village, 3 miles south of Ayr station on the South Western railway, and a quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Ayr and Maybole, but remarkable only for its connection with the poet Burns and his writings. The Burns monument consists of a circular rustic base (in which is a room containing relics), encircled by nine fluted Corinthian pillars supporting an entablature, above which rises a bronze tripod; on the opposite side of the road stand the remains of an old Alloway kirk, the scene of Tam O'Shanter's frolic; it is a roofless oblong structure believed to have been built early in the 16th century, and the bell hanging in its bellcot bears the date of 1657. At the entrance to the village is a thatched cottage, shown as the birthplace of the poet, 25 Jan. 1759. Near the monument is the old brig, and west of the kirk is the well where stood the thorn tree on which "Mungo's mither hanged herself." Close to the kirk is Cambusdoon (formerly Craigwellie), the seat of Mrs. Baird, and a little further west is the old castle of Newark, the residence of John Stirling Alston esq.; Doonholm is the seat of James Kennedy esq.; Auchendrane is the residence of James Coats esq. and Old Auchendrane of the Misses Catcart. The population of the parish in 1891 was 965.

ARDROSSAN is a seaport town, police burgh and parish on the west side of the county at the mouth of the Firth of Clyde, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, and has also made some progress as a watering place. Originally only a small hamlet round the castle, it was at the beginning of this century planned as a port of outlet for Glasgow, and a fine dock built, and the importation of ores, limestones &c. and the export of coals &c. has in consequence greatly increased. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by $\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, and is bounded north by West Kilbride and Dalry, east by Kilwinning, and south by Stevenston, and besides the town of Ardrossan, the parish includes a large portion of the town of Salcoats; it is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The town is situated on a promontory to the south of the port, 30 miles south-west from Glasgow and 8 north-west of Irvine, and being laid out on a regular plan and the houses built chiefly of stone, has a fine appearance. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. There are Established and Free churches, the Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1875 and consecrated in 1883, a United Presbyterian church and other religious institutions.

The Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches here and there is a large hotel. A weekly newspaper, the "Ardrossan and Salcoats Herald," is published in the town. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of Hugh, 12th Earl of Eglinton, who died in 1819, and by him and his successors a sum of nearly £400,000 has been spent upon it. The dock occupies an area of seventeen acres, and is one of the best in Scotland, having a depth of water on the sill of 18 feet at low water, and 27 at high water, as well as being fitted with all the latest appliances for both loading and discharging vessels, and railway trains are run on to the quays. The island of Horse shelters the harbour from the north-west. In 1898, 63 vessels aggregating 25,129 tons were registered in the port, as well as 84 fishing boats with a tonnage of 265; fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters A. D. The number of sailing and steam vessels with cargoes and in ballast that entered the port in 1898 was—British, 3,347, of 659,783 tons; foreign, 93, of 74,537 tons. The number cleared was—British, 3,302, of 664,862 tons, and foreign, 91, of 72,293 tons. In the coasting trade, 3,186 vessels of 475,316 tons entered, and 3,162 cleared, 518,699 tons. There is a yard for shipbuilding at the harbour, engineering works, a large iron foundry, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. There is also upon an adjoining eminence a monument to the late Alexander McFadzean esq. M.D. who, during the later years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with this place. An agricultural society has been established. The area of the parish comprises 7,341 acres: rateable value, burgh £42,412, parish £77,047 9s. (including a portion of Salcoats). The population in 1891 was 9,897, of whom 5,294 were in Ardrossan town and 4,228 in Salcoats, and in 1881 the population of the parish was 7,777, of whom 4,036 were in Ardrossan town and 3,329 in Salcoats.

AUCHINLECK is a parish and village. on the eastern side of the county, 15 miles from east to west by 5 in breadth, bounded north by Muirkirk and Sorn, south by Ochiltree and Old Cumnock, and east by Lanarkshire; it is in the Kyle poor combination. Coal and ironstone are produced here, but the soil is for the most part rather unproductive. The village is somewhat above a mile north from Old Cumnock and about 3 from Sorn and Catrine, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. A Public Hall was erected in 1887 in celebration of Her Majesty's jubilee. About 3½ miles west from the village the ruins of Auchinleck Castle stand in an angle formed by the Dippleburn and Lugar, and in the neighbourhood is the "Place of Auchinleck," a mansion erected in the last century by Lord Auchinleck, senator of the College of Justice and father of the eminent and amiable James Boswell esq. the friend and biographer of Johnson; the house is still the property of the Boswell family. A fair for the sale of lambs is held annually on the last Tuesday in August. The Marquess of Bute K.T. trustees of the late Sir James Boswell, Sir Claud Alexander bart. Charles Howatson and Messrs. William Baird and Co. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 24,129 acres; rateable value, £32,609. The population in 1891 was 6,103, of whom 99 were in the town of Cumnock and 1,489 in the village of Auchinleck; the population in 1881 was 6,681.

AYR.

AYR is a seaport and royal burgh, the capital of the county, a parish and head of a sheriff court district and of the poor combination of Kyle, and of a petty sessions court, on the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, occupying both sides of the mouth of the river Ayr. The South Western Railway has a station here, with lines of rail from Glasgow, Ardrossan, Troon, &c. in the north, and from Dalmeilington and Carlisle and Girvan and Stranraer in the south; and one running east to Muirkirk, &c.; and the Caledonian railway work a line to Muirkirk and the north and south, 77 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 33 south-south-west of Glasgow, 34 south-south-west of Paisley, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 11 south of Irvine. The parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded south by Maybole, east by Dalrymple and Coylton, and north by St. Quivox.
 In the 12th century, when the town was founded by William the Lion, traces of a Roman station were still extant. Wallace appears to have relieved it from an English garrison, and Cromwell fortified it, being for the purpose the old church and giving the inhabitants a grant of money with which they built what is now known as the old kirk, on the site of a Dominican priory. The river is crossed by two bridges, celebrated by Burns as "the two briggs of Ayr;" the old bridge built in the 13th century, and the new one in 1788, and rebuilt in 1878.

 The municipal burgh of Ayr is formed by the districts of Newton and Wallace-town, in conjunction with Ayr proper, and the civil government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and eleven councillors. For parliamentary purposes Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbelltown, Inveraray and Oban, in Argyllshire, the group returning one member to Parliament. The municipal burgh of Ayr was, up to 1895, within the parishes of Ayr, Newton-on-Ayr and St. Quivox, but by a Local Government Order, dated 15th May, 1895; these three parishes were united under the one parish of Ayr.
 The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by the construction of an extensive stone pier, affording a greater depth of water and security for vessels. A dock, eight acres in extent, with a quay space of 2,000 feet, constructed at a cost of £150,000, has a depth of water at low tide of 15 feet. In 1807 the south side of the harbour was entirely rebuilt, at a cost of £23,000, and the Glasgow and South Western Railway Co. are about to build a new bridge to the south side of the harbour, and thus afford greater facilities for the iron ore and limestone traffic. The income of the Harbour Trust for 1897 was £31,900. An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland. Mines of this article, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The other principal exports consist of iron, coal-ter, lampblack, and water of Ayr stone. The imports comprise iron ore, limestone, hides, tallow, barley, yarn, linen, timber, deals and hemp. The number of British vessels that entered the port with cargoes and in ballast in 1898 was 2,420 of 372,434 tons, and foreign 47, 26,799 tons. The number cleared was—British 2,468, tonnage 37,050, and foreign 43, 23,932 tons. The number of sailing and steam vessels registered as belonging to the port, Dec. 31, 1898, was 22 of 2,919 tons, and fishing boats 183 of 523 tons, employing 560 men and boys. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters A. R.

A weekly market is held on Tuesdays for grain, cattle and dairy produce. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the Friday before the second Wednesday in January; the third Tuesday in April, for hiring; the last Friday in April, for cattle; the Thursday before the second Monday and third Thursday in July; third Tuesday in October, for hiring; and on the second Friday in October.

The town is lighted with electric light, installed in 1895 at a cost of about £20,000, and is supplied with water from Loch Finlas and the Milton springs, both supplies being of excellent character and abundant in quantity. The Town's buildings, New Bridge street, erected in 1828, at a cost of £10,000, include a tower, with spire 219 feet in height; the spacious hall, capable of containing about 1,500 persons, was destroyed by fire in 1897 and has not yet been rebuilt, but the buildings still afford offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain and Corporation water works; here also the burgh records are kept and the burgh courts held. The "Wallace Tower," in High street, built in 1830, on the site of an ancient tower, has on its front a statue of Wallace, by Thom. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of Newmarket street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having on the west side the court house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. Two statues in bronze have been placed within the square, one to Archibald William, 13th Earl of Eglinton, lord lieutenant of the county, and for some years Viceroy of Ireland, who died 4 October, 1861, and the other to Brigadier-General J. G. Neill C.B. born in the square, and killed at Lucknow, 25th September, 1857. A gao, captured at Sebastopol, stands in the enclosure round the County buildings. Her Majesty's gaol is at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay.

Ayr Academy, founded by subscription in 1798, is conducted by a rector, with five masters and twelve assistants. The present building was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and the management is now under the Burgh School Board, the school ranking as a high class school under the Education Act. Ayr library has been transferred to the Public Free Library, in Main street, Newton, erected in 1893, at a cost of upwards of £10,000, by A. Carnegie esq.; it contains 12,000 volumes in the leading and 6,000 volumes in the reference library. Three newspapers are published in Ayr, namely, the "Ayr Observer," on Tuesday and Friday; the "Ayrshire Post," on Friday; and the "Advertiser," on Thursday. Races are held annually in September. The Earl of Eglinton's pack of foxhounds hunts the county four times a week; the kennels are at Kilwinning, and there are curling and bowling clubs. The charitable institutions are numerous and liberally conducted; the poor are assisted from funds arising from lands and donations, and a dispensary gives medical and surgical aid to the sick. The Ayr County Hospital, formerly in Mill street, was removed in 1883 to new buildings in the Holmston road, erected in that year, at a cost of about £20,000, and containing 100 beds; in 1898 there were 889 in and 613 out patients. There is also an Industrial school in St. Leonard's road, erected in 1875, for 100 boys and 60 girls, and a Merchants' Society, established in 1655, with a fund formed in 1821 for decayed members, their widows and orphans. There are three churches of the Establishment in the town, two in Newton, one in Wallacetown and one in St. Quivox, and places of worship for the Free church, the United and Reformed Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Wesleyan Methodists, Moravians, Original Seceders, Evangelical Unionists and Roman Catholics. The parish church of St. John, which replaced the old church taken by Cromwell for his fort, was founded in 1550, on the site of the Dominican priory. The pulpit was transferred to it from the old church of St. John; within the church are several mural tablets, including one to General Neill, who fell at the siege of Lucknow; also the old colours of the 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, and a brass tablet of the officers and men who fell in South Africa. Robert Burns, the poet, was born about 2 miles to the south, in the parish of Alloway (which see), and Andrew Michael Ramsay, historian and biographer, commonly called the "Chevalier Ramsay," was also born here,

9 June, 1866. At a short distance on the southern shore is Greenac Castle, a rectangular structure, on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned Ailsa Craig, rising nearly 1,100 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. (vice-lieutenant), of Auchincruve, J. Bell esq. of Enterkine, W. A. Orr Paterson esq. of Gadgirth, J. A. Campbell esq. of Craigue, George Coats esq. of Belleisle, James Coats esq. of Auchendrae, and William Hamilton Dunlop esq. of Doonside, are the principal landowners.

The area of the old parish of Ayr comprised 6,939 acres; of Newton, 585 and that of St. Quivox, 4,876, making a total for the new parish of 12,400 acres; the rateable value being £184,888 for Ayr parish as newly constituted; the population in 1891 was—Ayr, 11,149; Newton, 8,564 and St. Quivox, 7,713, or a total for the new parish of 27,426; the population of the burgh was 25,213 in 1891, and 21,384 in 1881, and the rateable value 1899, £154,292.

Newton, formerly a parish, but now amalgamated with Ayr, is divided from that place by the river, and here the principal manufactures of the town are carried on. There are two chemical works, a carpet factory, lace works, two shoe factories and several other manufacturing establishments. The railway communicates on this side with the harbour and dock, and the mineral products of the upper portion of the county are mostly shipped here.

St. Quivox, a populous parish, amalgamated with the parish of Ayr by a Local Government Order, dated May, 1895, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton of Ayr and Monkton. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations.

Wallacetown is a thickly-populated district adjoining Newton. The church of the Establishment, erected here in 1836, at an expense of nearly £1,500, has sittings for upwards of 800 persons. The Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone.

Whitlets is a small village in St. Quivox ward, parish of Ayr, and distant therefrom about 1½ miles east.

BALLANTRAE is a parish and village and seaport at the extreme south-west corner of the county on the north of Loch Ryan; the village being 8 miles south-west from Pinwherry station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 34 south-west from Ayr and 24 north-east of Port Patrick, in the poor combination of Wigtown and small debt court district of Ayr; the parish extends 9 miles from north to south by 7 in breadth and is bounded north and east by Colmonell, south by Wigtownshire and west by the Firth of Clyde. The nearest railway station is Pinwherry on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 8 miles distant. The village lies at the mouth of the river Stinchar, and is a resort for summer visitors; it is principally supported by its herring and salmon fishery, the latter belonging to the Earl of Stair. The chief local proprietor is Joseph Charlesworth esq. of Glenapp, whose mansion may be seen from the village; the other principal landowners are Mrs. Oliver, of Laggan, and the Earl of Stair K.T. Here are the ruins of Ard-Stinchar Castle, formerly belonging to the Kennedy family. In the churchyard is the burial place of the Hamilton family of Bargeny and Ardstinchar; Barons Bargeny (a title which became extinct in 1736), and there is a monument to Gilbert Baron Bargeny, slain in an encounter with Lord Cassilis at Maybole in 1601. The parish area comprises 33,561 acres; rateable value, £10,786; the population in 1891 was 1,268, including 524 in the village, and in 1881, 1,442, with 426 in the village.

Glenapp, or Butters Church, is a quad sacra parish formed out of Ballantrae parish; population in 1891 was 144.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Ballantrae; James Wason, sub-postmaster (Sub-Office). Letters should have S.O. Ayrshire added to them). Delivery, 9.50 a.m.; dispatch, 3.45 p.m.

BARR is a parish and village, 8 miles east-south of Girvan and 7 miles north-east of Pinmore station on the South Western railway; the parish, which extends 9 miles from north to south by 6 to 7 in breadth, is intersected by the river Stinchar; it is in the poor combination of Maybole and small debt court district of Ayr. About a mile from the village are the ruins of old Kirk Dominae; the parish is principally sheep pasture. The hiring fair of servants is held on the first Thursday after the 28th of May. The Marquess of Ailsa, the Rt. Hon. Sir James Fergusson G.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., P.C. M.P. and Capt. Hugh Hamilton, of Pinmore, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 54,876 acres; rateable value, £11,256; the population in 1891 was 549, and in 1881, 600.

BARRHILL, see COLMONELL.

BEITH is a town and parish, in the north of the county, on the borders of Renfrewshire, and originally partly in the latter but transferred entirely to Ayrshire by the Local Government Act, 1889; the town lies 11 miles north-west from Kilmarnock, 10 north of Irvine and 22 north of Ayr, and has stations on the Glasgow and South Western main line, and the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway; the parish extends 7 miles from north to south, by about 4 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; it is bounded north by Renfrewshire, west by Kilbirnie, south by Dalry and east by Dunlop. The town stands on an eminence commanding an extensive view of the country around, and of the Loch of Kilmarnock; it contains many excellent houses, is lighted with gas and well supplied with good water, and is a place of some considerable trade, being noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here, both for the home and export trade. The tanning, currying and preparation of leather is also carried on, as well as rope making, cabinet making and upholstery, and the production of fishing and other nets. The manufacture of silk goods, formerly extensive, has almost been entirely superseded by that of cotton and woolen, in the weaving of which many of the inhabitants are now employed by the manufacturers of Paisley and Glasgow. Silk printing is carried on at Roebank. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal and iron and abundance of limestone. Lime burning is followed to a limited extent. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Town House, built by subscription in 1817, contains a reading room; the lower part consists of shops, the rents of which are applied to purposes of public benefit. The constabulary station, with court house adjoining, is a stone building, opened in 1884, and erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Sheriff's Small Debt Court is held on the first Thursday in February, May, August and November, and that for the justices of the peace on the first Monday in each month. The church of the Establishment, erected in 1807, stands on the most elevated part of the town, 343 feet above the level of the sea; it has a tower, and has since been enlarged by the addition of a new wing, resecated, and thoroughly renovated at a cost of nearly £3,000; and in 1899 a hall, with 600 sittings, was erected at a cost of over £1,800. The other places of worship are a Free church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and two for United Presbyterian congregations; the one in Mitchell street, belonging to the latter denomination, was rebuilt in 1892 in the Gothic style, at a cost of about £2,000. Spier's school, built and endowed from funds amounting to over £60,000 left by the late Mrs. Spier, of Marshall and Cuff, is a school for higher education, established under a scheme of the Scotch Education Endowments Commissioners: the buildings comprise a tower, hall, board room, numerous class rooms, and a large school house, occupied by the head master and specially adapted for the reception of boarders. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Fridays in January and February, and the first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), on the 30th of August, and the first Friday after the 12th of November (old style). The whole of the parish is enclosed, and is almost all arable. The tenants of this and the neighbouring parish of Dunlop were formerly noted for their manufacture of cheese, known by the name of "Dunlop cheese," which was held in as high estimation in Scotland as the cheese of Cheshire or Gloucestershire is in England. At Giffen, a short distance from the town, are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hesselhead; and at the top of Cuff hill, a considerable eminence, is a druidical remain, known by the name of "Rockingstone." Two large stone coffins were discovered here many years ago. Trearne is the seat of William Ralston Patrick esq. J.P. and Grange Hill, of John Fullerton Patrick esq. J.P.; Woodside is the property of Mrs. Neil Kennedy Cochran-Patrick, and Morishill is the seat of John Sheddin Dobie esq. J.P. The area comprises 11,222 acres; assessable value, £31,173; the population in 1891 was 7,087, including 4,795 in the town, and 6,514 in 1881, with 4,037 in the town.

CATRINE is a thriving manufacturing town in the parish of Sorn, 72 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 32 south of Glasgow, 14 north-east of Ayr, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 5 north from Old Cumnock, situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north bank of the river Ayr. The nearest railway station is Manclise, on the Glasgow and South Western railway. This place has risen to a considerable town; in 1778 its site contained only a blacksmith's shop and a meal mill. The cause of this rapid increase was the erection of cotton works by the late Claud Alexander esq. of Ballochmyle, and the business is now carried on by Messrs. James Finlay and Co. The machinery of the mills is driven by two large water wheels, erected by the late Sir William Fairbairn, of Manchester, in 1823; these are each 12 feet wide and 50 feet in diameter, both work on the same shaft and have a power of 500 horses. These extensive works employ a large number of hands. The Town Hall, opened in 1882, was erected at a cost of £1,000 left by the late John Wilson, who also bequeathed £1,000, the interest of which, about £40, is given to the poor at Christmas; the hall is under the control of six trustees. The A. M. Brown Institute, erected in 1898 in commemoration of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee at a cost of upwards of £3,000, was the gift to the town of A. M. Brown esq. and contains reading and billiard rooms, a gymnasium and a library. The public library, of about 6,000 volumes, has now been removed to the institute. On the south side of the river Ayr are schools in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £2,000.

COLMONELL is a parish and village on the west coast of the county, in the poor combination of Wigtown and small debt court district of Ayr, the village lying 5 miles north-east from Ballantrae on the Stinchar river; the parish extends 19 miles in length; by 7 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Girvan, north-east by Barr and south by Ballantrae; about 3 miles from the village is Pinwherry station on the Ayr and Stranraer section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. A little south of the village are the ruins of Craignell Castle, occupied at one time by Robert Bruce; there are also remains of castles at Pinwherry, Knockdolian and Kirkhill, and on the coast at Carleton. The Public Hall, erected in 1890 at a cost of £754, includes a library and a billiard room; the tower, containing a clock, was added in 1897-8 by public subscription. The best place from which to visit Ailsa Craig is Lendalfoot, in the north of this parish. The Hon. Hugh Frederick Hisslop Elliot, of Corwar; Major the Hon. North De Coigny Dalrymple-Hamilton, of Bargany; William Weir esq. of Kildonnan; Capt. Hugh Hamilton, of Pinmore; William McConnell esq. of Knockdolian, and Mrs. Barton Farquhar-Gray, of Kirkhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 47,490 acres; rateable value, £23,202; the population in 1891 was 1,900, and in 1881, 2,191.

BARRHILL, a village 8 miles east of Colmonell, has a station on the South Western railway, and here quarterly cattle markets are held.

CROXBERRY, see LUGAR.

CROOKEDHOLM, see KILMARNOCK.

CROSSHOUSE, see KILMAURS.

CUMNOCK is a town in the centre of the county, east of Ayr, and with Holmhead was in 1866 erected into a police burgh, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners; it is also a considerable market town, 60 miles south-west of Edinburgh, 16 east of Ayr, and south-south-east of Kilmarnock, on the road between Dumfries on the south-east and Glasgow on the north, and is 43 miles north-west from the former and 40 south from the latter. The Glasgow and South Western line has a station half a mile east, and the Ayr and Douglas line a station a quarter of a mile south of the town. The parish of Old Cumnock, which is in the poor combination of Kyle and the head of a small debt court district, extends 9 miles from east to west by 3 from north to south, and is bounded north by Soru, east by Auchinleck, south by New Cumnock and west by Ochiltree. Cumnock consists of a square, at one time the cemetery, and several main streets, and is situated in a deep sheltered hollow, at the confluence of the Glaisnock and Lugar waters. The manufacture of various kinds of woollen fabrics, and wool spinning and dyeing have been introduced. Two engineering firms are engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements. Three banks have branches here, viz. the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The Town Hall, opened in 1885, is an edifice in the Classic style, from plans prepared by Mr. R. S. Ingram, of Kilmarnock, and was erected at a cost of nearly £3,000, towards which the Marquess of Bute contributed £500 and the site. There is also a Public Library, established in 1792 by a company of shareholders. Baird's Institute, erected in 1891, at an expenditure of close upon £3,000, was the gift of the late John Baird esq. of this town, who left funds both for its construction and endowment; it contains a museum, billiard, reading and recreation rooms. The Marchioness of Bute has built and furnished a hospital here at an expense of over £2,000. The sum of £20 annually, left for free education by the late Charles Duncan, merchant, of London, a native of this parish, has now, by the Commissioners of Endowments, been mostly applied to higher education in the public school. Two newspapers, the "Cumnock News" and "Cumnock Express," are published here on Friday. There is a church of the Establishment, a Free church, entirely rebuilt at the cost of Miss Crichton, of Hillside, Cumnock, and now seating 520 persons, a United Presbyterian church, Independent and Baptist chapels, and a Roman Catholic church, the cost of which was defrayed by the Marquess of Bute. A cemetery was formed a few years ago a little to the south of the town, at a cost of about £1,000. The market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the fourth Thursday after Candlemas, the Thursday after the 6th of March, the Wednesday after the 6th of June, and the 27th of October. The castle of Terringzean, now in ruins, is in the neighbourhood, also Dumfries House, a seat of the Marquess of Bute, who likewise holds the title of Baron Crichton of Cumnock. The old churchyard at Barhill, near the town, was at one period the place of execution, and contains the remains of three persons who were shot on the spot in 1635 by a party of Highlanders, for their adherence to the Covenant; here also Alexander Peden, commonly called "the Prophet," was buried at the gallows foot. In 1891 a fine monument of Aberdeen granite, 21 feet high, and of Gothic design, was erected to his memory, at an expense of £300. The Marquess of Bute K.T.; Captain R. Mitchell Campbell, of Glaisnock; Major R. Bannatine-Allason, of Logan, and the trustees of the late P. C. D. Boswell esq. of Garrallan, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 14,232 acres; rateable value, £28,041; the population in 1891 was 4,712, including 3,005 in the police burgh, and in 1881, 4,361, with 3,251 in the town.

CUMNOCK (NEW) is a parish and village in the east centre of the county, and in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr; the parish extends 9 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth. It was separated from Cumnock and formed into a parish about the year 1652, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, about 43 miles south of Glasgow, 21 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, the same distance west by south of Ayr, 10 north by east of Dalmeilington and 5 south-east of Cumnock. The parish, which lies on the eastern boundary of that of Cumnock (or Old Cumnock), is in general hilly, and affords excellent pasture for sheep; but there are many spots of rich arable land. The river Nith takes its rise in the south-west end of the parish, and runs through the centre of the whole; and there are several small lakes, the sources of the Afton. Various mines of coal are worked in this neighbourhood, the property of William Hyslop esq. Lady Cathcart &c. and limestone abounds in different parts of the district. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. The Town Hall was erected in 1888, at a cost of nearly £1,000, from plans by Mr. Allan Stevenson, of Ayr, and is of stone; the building contains a lecture hall seating about 400 people, besides offices. The Established church was erected in 1833, and affords sittings for 1,000 persons. Mansfield House, the seat of Lady Jane Stuart-Menteth, is in this parish. The Marquess of Bute K.T. Jane, Lady Stuart-Menteth, and the Lanemark Coal Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 48,096 acres; rateable value, £34,746; the population in 1891 was 4,419, and in 1881 3,781. Post, Money Order, Telegraph, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Bank; William Murray, sub-postmaster. (Letters should have "New Cumnock R.S.O. Ayrshire" added to them.) Dispatches, 12.20 & 7.55 a.m. Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; John Gibson, postmaster (Railway Sub-Office. DAILY is a parish in the southern portion of the county and a village, 93 miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Maybole and Ayr), 47 south by west of Glasgow, 46 north-north-east of Portpatrick, by the new road (which is longer by 3 miles than along the coast), 15 south by east of Ayr, 7 south from Maybole and 6 north-north-east from Girvan. There is a railway station at Daily on the South Western line. The parish, which extends about 3 miles from north to south by from 2 to 6 broad, is bounded west by the parish of Kirkoswald, south by Girvan and Barr, east by Barr and scraiton and north by Kirkmichael; it is in the small debt court district of Ayr and poor combination of Maybole. The uplands are bleak and pastoral, but the more level parts are well cultivated, enclosed and planted. Coal and limestone abound in several parts of the parish. The celebrated Ailsa Craig is in this parish. The old parish church is in ruins; the existing church was built in 1766. There is a Free church and chapels for Plymouth Brethren and Evangelists and four Board schools. Bargany House, the seat of Major the Hon. Barron De Coigny Dalrymple-Hamilton; Kilkerran, of the Rt. Hon. Sir James Fergusson bart. G.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., P.C., M.P.; Penkill Castle, the residence of Miss Courtney Boyd; Dalquharan Castle, of John Campbell Kennedy esq. and Killochan Castle, of Sir Arthur Kekewich, are in this parish. Major the Hon. North De Coigny Dalrymple-Hamilton, the Rt. Hon. Sir James Fergusson bart. P.C., M.P. and John Campbell Kennedy esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,962 acres; rateable value, £16,740; the population in 1891 was 1,830, and in 1881, 2,226, the village containing 566 in 1891 and 696 in 1881.

DALJARROCK, see COLMONELL.

DALMELLINGTON is a parish and village, the latter being a burgh of barony, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western and the North British railways, 72 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 south of Glasgow, 42 north-west of Dumfries, 24 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, 15 south-east of Ayr, 14 east of Maybole, 12 south of Old Cumnock and 7 east of Straiton, situated on the north bank of the water of Doon, and near to the base of an eminence, from the summit of which a fine view is obtained. The parish is in the peer county of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr, and extends 9 miles from north-west to south-east by 3 to 5 in breadth, and is bounded on the south-west by Straiton, north by Dairymla and Ochiltree and west by New Cumnock; about 3 miles south of the village is Loch Doon, celebrated for its fine trout and a great resort for anglers; beats are furnished by the proprietors of the hotels at this place—the Black Bull and the Eglington. The loch is a beautiful sheet of water, with a hard rocky shore, extending 8 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and abounding with trout of fine flavour. In 1826 a fishing party discovered at the bottom of the loch what appeared to be boats, and, having obtained the necessary assistance, they succeeded in raising three canoes, the largest measuring 24 feet in length by 4 in breadth, hewn out of a solid log of oak. Two were much decayed, but the third was so little impaired as to allow of its being floated on the surface, with a person in it, for a considerable time; two are now preserved at the head of Ness Glen, by Alexander F. McAdam esq. of Craigengillan, for the inspection of visitors, and the third is in the Kelvin Grove Museum at Glasgow. On an island in the lake are the remains of Ballech Castle, in which, in June, 1306, after the battle of Methven, Sir Christopher Seton, brother-in-law to Robert Bruce, took refuge, but the castle being stormed he was captured and executed at Dumfries. In Dalmellington is a public library and a reading room, furnished with standard works, periodicals and newspapers; a sum has been left in trust for the support of the institute, and for the education of a certain number of children. About 3 miles north-west of Dalmellington, on the road to Ayr, are the extensive Dalmellington iron works and collieries, with six blast furnaces. This company built the villages of Craig Mark, Waterside, Lethan Hill, Burnfoot Hill and Benwhat. The village of WATERSIDE has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is lighted by gas. The total population is upwards of 3,500. Alexander F. McAdam esq. of Craigengillan; Colonel the Hon. Augustus Murray Cathcart, of Kirkby Malzeard, Yerks; the Duke of Portland P.C., G.G.V.O. and the trustees of H. Buchanan esq. of Downstoun, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,783 acres; rateable value, £20,000; the population of the parish was 5,034 in 1891, and 6,383 in 1881, and of the village, 1,395 in 1891 and 1,437 in 1881; and in Waterside, 1,222 in 1891 and 1,473 in 1881.

DALRY.

DALRY is a parish and village-town in the Cunninghame district and poor combination and in the small debt court of Beith, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 69 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 25 (22 by rail) south-west of Glasgow, 16 south-south-west of Paisley, 5 south-west of Beith, 4 north of Kilwinning and 7 north of Saltcoats, pleasantly situated on a rising ground, surrounded by the rivers Caaf, Rye and Garneck; it consists of twelve streets, three of which diverge from a small central square; many of the houses are well built. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and supplied with water by a system of gravitation, the supply affording 130,000 gallons per day. There are three reservoirs in this parish, that at Camphill and Rostenburn supplies Paisley; that at Munnoch is for Irvine and district; and the one at Auld Muir for the town of Dalry; the total cost of carrying out the scheme amounted to £10,500. The sanitary arrangements are under the control of the County Council. Dalry bestows the title of baron upon the Boyle family, Earls of Glasgow. The local industries comprise worsted spinning, which is extensively carried on by Messrs. Biggar and Co. Limited, blanket and tweed manufacturing by Messrs. Kyle, Aitken and Gardiner, and the manufacture of hosiery; lime, coal and ironstone abound in the neighbourhood, and there are extensive iron ore and coal mines belonging to Messrs. Baird and Co. Limited and to the Glengarnock Iron and Steel Co. Limited; wholesale cabinet making and brick making are rising industries. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited and the British Linen Company's Bank. The Public Hall, in Aitken street, belongs to a limited company; there is also a Good Templars' Hall, and in Garnock street are the Victoria Assembly Rooms and the local library; there are also reading and recreation rooms belonging to the Dalry Co-operative Society Limited. In the centre of the town is a handsome granite fountain, presented by the late Thomas Biggart esq. of Bailland Hill. The Established church, rebuilt and considerably enlarged at a cost of nearly £6,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire, and was designed by Mr. David Thomson, architect, of Glasgow; four of the windows are filled with Munich stained glass in memory of General Neill, who fell at the relief of Lucknow (Sep. 25-6, 1857). There are other churches, including Free, United Presbyterian, Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches, and a Mission Hall, opened in 1889, at a cost of about £4,000, defrayed by the late Rev. Robert Stevenson D.D. of this town. The cemetery, at Kirkland, is now (1899) being extended by the addition of four acres. A public park of about 20 acres, presented to the town by Mr. John Blair W.S. Edinburgh, a native of Dalry, was laid out in 1892, at considerable expense, and includes skating and curling ponds; it is managed by a body of trustees. The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the annual fair on the last day in July. The F Company, 1st Vol. Batt. Royal Scots Fusiliers, has its head quarters here. Blair House, 2 miles from Dalry, is an ancient mansion, a portion of which retains the date of 1203, but the original and still existing tower is said to date from 1130; the fabric is in good preservation, and its walls are of extraordinary thickness; one of the passages, a modern alteration, passing through a wall 14 feet thick; the mansion is at present occupied by Col. F. G. Blair D.L., J.P. Visitors are permitted to inspect the beautifully laid out grounds and the fine museum of British and Foreign curiosities contained in the house. In the parish is a natural cave, about 103 feet in length and from 5 to 12 feet in height; the roof is encrusted with petrifications, and over the entrance projects a vast rock, 30 feet by 27. The interior is arched, and expands near the middle into a spacious chamber, 35 feet long by 12 broad and 13 feet in height. In the reign of Charles II. this cavern afforded a refuge to the Covenanters of the parish, and it is also supposed to have given refuge to Wallace and his co-patriot Sir Bryce Blair, who was executed at Ayr by the English for the part he took with Wallace in the war of independence; adjoining is a farm known as "Wallace Field." To the west of the town is a beautiful natural cascade, which has a singular appearance during the continuance of frost. At Camphill and Routieburn in Dalry parish the Scottish army is said to have encamped previous to the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263, in which Alexander III. defeated the Norwegians under Haco. Acreage of parish, 19,284; population in 1881, 10,215, and in 1891, 8,164, of the latter number 3,667 were returned as belonging to the town; rateable value, £46,240.

DALRYMPLE is a small parish and village, 4 miles south-east of Ayr, with a station on the South Western railway; the parish is in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr, extends about 8 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by Kirkmichael, west by Maybole, north by Ayr and east by Coyton. In the eastern portion of the parish are several coal and ironstone pits, which are wrought by the Dalmeillington Iron Company Limited. Near the Roman road, which intersects the parish, a vessel of Roman bronze was found in a moss; and in 1834, near the same spot, an ancient vase was met with; both these relics are in the possession of the Rev. John Wallace, minister of Dalrymple. In the parish are three small British forts. The area comprises 7,833 acres; rateable value, £16,397; the population in 1891 was 1,338, and in 1881, 1,362.

DARNCONNER, see LUGAR.

DARVEL is a police burgh and manufacturing town, in the southern portion of the parish of Londoun, poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, on the river Irvine, 10 miles east-by-south from Kilmarnock and 18 north-east from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway from Kilmarnock. The burgh consists of one principal street, from which a few small ones diverge. The manufacture of lace, lace and tapestry curtains and muslin is extensively carried on, and affords employment to a number of hands. The cemetery here was laid out at the cost of the Marchioness of Hastings. The Working Men's Institute was erected by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, in July, 1870, at a cost of £2,200; it contains a library and reading room, also a room for amusement. The places of worship are the Established church, an edifice in the Gothic style, erected at a cost of about £3,000, a Free church, and one belonging to the United Presbyterians, Original Seceders and Evangelical Union. There is also a free school, endowed by the late Alexander Mair, for the education of the children of this village, and now under the direction of the school board. The rateable value of the burgh is £7,347; population in 1881 was 1,701, and in 1891, 2,024.

DREGHORN is a small parish lying to the east of Irvine, from which place its kirk-town is distant 2½ miles; the parish, which is in the Cunninghame poor combination and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, extends between 6 and 7 miles in an irregular curve from north-east to west by a breadth of about 2 miles, and is bounded north by Stewarton, east by Fenwick, south by Kilmarnock and west by Irvine. There are stations at Dreghorn and Springside on the branch line of the Glasgow and South Western railway from Busbie Junction to Ardrossan; the same railway has a station at Cunningham head, and the Caledonian branch from Kilmarnock to Dunlop skirts the eastern portion of the parish, the nearest station being Kilmarnock, about 5 miles distant. There are extensive coal mines and fire clay and brick works in the neighbourhood. Water is supplied by the County Council mains from North Craig reservoir at Kilmarnock, having been laid down in 1838 for this purpose.

SPRINGSIDE is a small village in this parish. The Springhill Institute, erected in the village in 1894 by the Misses Maryann, Margaret and Helens Finnie and Mrs. Jean Buntine, daughters of the late Archibald Finnie esq. of Springhill, Kilmarnock, is a structure of red brick and contains reading, billiard and recreation rooms and a library of over 600 volumes. The Earl of Eglington and Winton and the Misses Mure-Macredie, of Perceiton, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,626 acres; rsteable value, £23,466; the population in 1891 was 4,057, and in 1881, 3,949.

DUNDONALD is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde and contains part of the royal burgh of Irvine and the town of Troon; the kirktown is about 4 miles northeast of Troon and 4 south-east from Irvine, the nearest railway station being at Drybridge on the Troon and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway; the parish extends for 3 miles along the shore and is from 1 to 4 in breadth; it is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Irvine. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, and a large Board school was built in 1895, at a cost of £3,000. There is a Convalescent Home in the village, built by Mrs. Vernon, of Auchana House, and maintained by voluntary subscriptions. Dundonald Castle, the property of the Earl of Dundonald C.B., M.V.O. stands on a hill about 3 miles from the sea and is now a ruin; it was erected in the 12th century, and long occupied by the Lord High Stewards of Scotland; and here Robert II. the first Stewart Sovereign, died 19 April, 1390. Auchana Castle, now a ruin, is the property of Samuel H. Montgomerie esq. D.L. and Lady Sophia C. Montgomerie, of Southannan House, Fairlie; Auchana House, the residence of the Hon. Greville R. Vernon D.L., J.P. and Fullarton House, of Matthew Arthur esq. are in this parish. The Duke of Portland P.C., G.C.B.; the Earl of Glasgow G.C.M.G.; Col. J. A. Smith-Cuninghame, of Fairlie House, Kilmarnock; J. S. Deans Campbell esq. of Corraith; William Finnie esq. and Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie, of Fairlie, near Largs, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,365 acres; rateable value of landward part, £24,225; the population in 1891 was 9,545, and in 1881, 8,105; the town of Troon and Irvine contained 8,545 in 1891 and 6,392 in 1881, out of the above population.

DUNLOP is a parish, partly in this county and partly in the county of Benfrew, and village, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; 8 miles north of Kilmarnock and the same distance east of Dalry, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway; the portion of the parish in this county extends 3 miles from north to south and the same in breadth, and is bounded west by Beth, south by Stewarton and east by Fenwick. The Established church was erected in 1835. In the churchyard is a small mortuary chapel, now known as the "Picture House," erected by James (Hamilton) 1st Viscount Clandeboye, in 1641, over the grave of his father, the Rev. Hans Hamilton, for 45 years minister of the parish and d. 30 May, 1608; it contains a monument in marble. A schoolhouse was also built by the same nobleman, in the wall of which is a stone formerly bearing the date 1641, and an inscription stating that it was erected and endowed by him "in love of his parish, in King James the Sixth his Raigne," but now obliterated; the building,

although in excellent preservation, has long ceased to be occupied as an educational establishment. The village likewise possesses a Free church and a Board school. A Public hall, including reading and recreation rooms, has been erected by public subscription; it is a neat stone building and cost about £200. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. Dunlop has long been noted for the excellent quality of its cheese, which bears a high character throughout Scotland. Several firms are also engaged in ham curing. About the close of the 17th century, one Barbara Gilmour is said to have commenced the practice of making cheese from the entire milk, nothing but skimmed milk having been used in the process in this district previous to that period; at present all the cheese similarly made in the western counties receive the appellation of "Dunlop," a large quantity being made here annually. There is also a considerable trade in meal carried on by the inhabitants of the village and surrounding territory. An Agricultural Society has been established here and holds an annual show of cattle &c. in May. Dunlop House, in this parish, is one of the finest mansions in the county; it is the residence of Major J. F. Dalrymple-Hay D.L., J.P. Near the village, and resting on a small knoll, is a stone of large dimensions, called the "O'Great Stone," and supposed to have been employed in some ancient rites of worship. Two fairs for the sale of dairy stock are held, one about the middle of May, the other on the 12th of November; both are generally well attended. Mrs. Dalrymple-Hay, of Dunlop House, and William Mure esq. of Caldwell House, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,078 acres; assessable value, £14,563 6s. 1d.; the population in 1891 was 1,346, including 404 in the village, and in 1881, 1,316, with 357 in the village. The area in Renfrewshire comprises 1,101 acres, with a population of 64 in 1891, and 47 in 1881. Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; James G. Wyllie, postmaster. Letters arrive through Kilmarnock. FENWICK (anciently Finnick) is a parish and village, in Cunninghame poor combination and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is about 4 miles north-by-east from Kilmarnock, its nearest railway station, on the banks of the Macharnock stream and on the road to Glasgow. This parish was originally a part of Kilmarnock, from which it was disjoined in 1641, and was called New Kilmarnock or New Kirk of Kilmarnock; but the village of Finnick, now known as Laigh Finnick or Rose Finnick, to distinguish it from the new village which sprang up beside the Kirk, and was called the Kirktown, eventually gave its name to the whole parish. At a former period, the district was chiefly moorland, but the greater portion of the parish is now under cultivation. John Howie, who chronicled the sufferings of the martyrs and confessors of the Covenant, was tenant of the moorland farm of Lochgoon, in this parish, and his descendants still continue to occupy it. Many memorials of the Covenanters are preserved in the farmhouse, including an Bible and sword of Captain Paton and the flag of the Finnick Covenanters used at Bothwell Bridge. Cattle fairs are held on the first Wednesday in May and the first Tuesday in November. The Earl of Loudoun, of Willesley hall, Ashby-de-la-Zouch; Lieut.-Colonel William Reginald Howison Cranford, of Cranfordland, and James Brown Paton esq. of Hairshaw lodge, Kilmarnock, are the principal landowners. Area, 18,104 acres; rateable value, £16,348; population of the parish in 1881, 1,162, and in 1891, 1007.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Fenwick; Jas. Currie, sub-postmaster. GALSTON is a town and parish, with a railway station on the Glasgow and South Western branch, from Hurford to New-
milns; in the eastern portion of the county,
and includes parts of 3 towns, Darvel, Gal-ston and Newmilno (the first and last will be found under their respective headings);
the town is a police burgh lying on the river
Irvine in the parishes of Galston and Loudoun, 15 miles north-east from Ayr, 22
south from Glasgow and 5 south-east from Kilmarnock; the parish, which extends 8 miles from east to west by 3½ in depth, is in the poor combination of Cunninghame
and small debt court district of Kilmarnock
and is bounded on the north by Loudoun, west by Riccarton and south by Sern. The town is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and commissioners. There is a corn mill, and one for paper mill boards, the latter erected
early in the 15th century; other industries
are weaving and lace making and raising
coal, of which a large quantity is obtained
from the estates of the Duke of Portland,
who is superior of the parish. Blair's school,
opened in 1841, under the will of the late Charles Blair esq. of Galston, who bequeathed
certain heritable property, to accumulate
until the income amounted to £200 per annum, has under the Endowment Act now
become incorporated with the public schools.
Brown's Institute was erected in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, given by Miss Brown,
of Lanfine, and consists of a spacious reading
room, well supplied with the daily newspapers and periodicals; a library, containing about 3,400 volumes, and recreation rooms.
There is an Established church and an Evangelical Union chapel; the United Presbyterian church is an edifice in the Gothic

style, erected at a cost of about £1,100.
The Roman Catholic church of St. Sophia, opened in December, 1886, and erected by the Marquess of Bute at a cost of £10,000,
is a structure in the Romanesque style,
from designs by Dr. R. Rowland Anderson,
of Edinburgh, architect. The Free church,
a building of red sandstone, in the Gothic style, from the designs of Mr. J. D. Wilson, architect, of Glasgow, was erected in 1888 at a cost of about £2,500. The surface of the parish is diversified with hills, but the land is generally arable, and there is a considerable quantity of wood. The district is watered by some small tributaries of the Irvine and the river Avon, which rises in the upper part of the parish. About a mile from the town is Loudoun Castle, a large
structure in the modern Castellated style,
the seat of the Hon. T. C. Campbell-Clifton-Hastings; near this is the old castle of Cessnock and Barr. Cessnock Castle is the residence of J. Harling Turner esq. J.P.
The annual fairs are held on the third Thursday in April, the first Thursday in June, and the last Wednesday in November.
The Duke of Portland P.C., G.C.V.O. and
the trustees of the late Miss Brown, of Lanfine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,243 acres; rateable value
of landward, £19,276; burghal, £8,819;
the population in 1891 was 6,370, including 4,688 in the three towns and 3,849 in the part of Galston town, and in 1881 was 5,961, with 3,651 in Galston; the entire population of the town of Galston was 4,296 in 1891, and 4,085 in 1881.

GIRVAN.

GIRVAN is a parish, town and burgh of barony, in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination, small debt court district of Ayr and in the parliamentary division of South Ayrshire, 90 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 56 south-west of Glasgow, 35 north-north-west of Portpatrick, 31 north-north-east of Stranraer, 21 south by west of Ayr, 13 north by east of Ballantrae, 12 south-south-west of Maybole and 6 south-west of Dailly, with a station on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, extended to Portpatrick in 1878: the town stands on the left bank of the Garvan or Girvan, near to its influx with the Firth of Clyde; at a point exactly opposite is the rocky islet called Ailsa Craig, which is 11 miles distant, and rises out of the firth to the height of 1,075 feet; it is 2½ miles in circumference, and the top, which is conical, is covered with a luxuriant crop of heath, grass, ferns and other plants, supporting great numbers of goats and rabbits, and on the precipitous sides of the rock inconceivable numbers of solan geese, puffins and gannets flutter about, and produce an incessant deafening noise. On a long terrace, or shoulder of the craig, at the elevation of 200 feet from the base, stands a deserted square tower, or castellated house, still very perfect as a ruin. Higher up are two beautiful springs of water, one of which irrigates a marshy tract covered with various plants, and amongst others the hydrocotyle vulgaris, which here grows to an extraordinary size. The rock (locally in the parish of Dailly) belongs to the Marquis of Ailsa. The harbour of Girvan, which underwent considerable improvements in 1869-70, and still further and more extensive in 1881-83, at the expense of the Harbour Commissioners, is now considered safe and convenient for shipping. Large quantities of grain of various kinds are annually exported hence, chiefly to Liverpool and Glasgow. The trade in coal and lime is important, but the principal trade of the place is now that connected with the herring fishery, which occurs twice a year, beginning in December and May. The government of the town is vested in two bailies and 12 councillors, three of the latter being chosen annually on the retirement or otherwise of the like number on the 12th of October. A justice of the peace court is held every month. Major the Hon. North De Coigny Dalrymple-Hamilton, of Bargany, is the superior of the burgh. There are two churches of the Establishment, United Presbyterian, Free church, Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopalian church of St. John is a structure in the Gothic style, and was erected at a cost of £1,100. The M'Kechnie Institute, at the corner of Dalrymple street and Ailsa street, erected in 1857-8 at a cost of about £3,000, was the gift of the late Mr. Thomas M'Kechnie, in memory of his deceased brother, R. M'Kechnie, and is a building of red sandstone, and consists of library, reading rooms for both sexes, and smoking and committee rooms. The same donor left also the interest of £1,000, of which £12 is given to the precentor of the church for the instruction of 10 of the children in sacred music, the balance being divided among such poor householders as are not receiving parochial relief. The McClymont trust, amounting to £250 per annum, left in 1879 by Archibald McClymont esq. is in part given to the deserving poor and in part to the Royal Infirmary, Glasgow, the town of Girvan thus acquiring the right to send three patients annually to that institution; a portion of the fund is also assigned for educational purposes and for the support of the Girvan Town Mission. A market, chiefly for grain, is held on Monday; and the fairs are on the first Monday in April and October, for stock, hiring servants, and general business. Acreage of the parish, 14,580; rateable value, landward £16,826, burghal £15,679; population of the parish was in 1891, 4,906, including 4,081 in the town, and in 1881, 5,480, with 4,505 in the town.

IRVINE.

IRVINE is an ancient royal burgh, seeport, parish, the head of a presbytery, and of Cunningham district and poor combination, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, 67 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-south-west of Glasgow, 11 north of Ayr, 11 south of Beith and 7 west of Kilmarnock. The town is agreeably situated on rising ground on the north bank of the river Irvine, about a mile from its junction with the Garnock water and the sea, and is united by a fine stone bridge of four arches to the suburb of Fullarton on the south side of the river, but in the parish of Dundonald, which adjoins the Firth of Clyde, and includes the harbour and quay. In 1881 an Act of Parliament was obtained for extending the boundaries of the burgh, and for other purposes. By this Act, Fullarton, sometimes called the Halfway, was amalgamated with the burgh, so that the whole town is now under the jurisdiction of the municipality. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and eleven councillors. A baillie court is held every lawful day, as business may require; and one for the recovery of small debts and for the trial of criminal cases before the justices is also held every Monday. The Dean of Guild Court is held on the first Tuesday of each month. Under the provisions of the Reform Act of 1832, Irvine, together with Ayr and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban in Argyllshire forms the Ayr district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. Irvine burgh is one of great antiquity; the place is mentioned in an account of a dispute at an early period between Sir Ralph de Eglinton and the town of Irvine, and in the 12th century a charter was given to it. During the time of Alexander II. (1214-49) another charter was obtained, and this was confirmed by Robert the Bruce (1306-29). A monastery of Carmelite friars was founded here about 1300. A scheme for supplying the town with water was completed in Aug. 1878, by the authorities of the burgh of Irvine and the parish of Dundonald, at a cost of upwards of £30,000. Arrangements have since been made extending the supply to the towns of Kilwinning, Stevenston and Saltcoats, which by the Irvine Burgh Act, 1881, were included in the water supply district. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the first Tuesday in May and on the third Monday in August; with this last commences the Marymas fair, which extends over the week and ends on Saturday with the races, which are conducted by the Irvine Carters' Society, an ancient body, the magistrates acting as stewards. Irvine was a customs port before 1760; its limits were defined and legal quays appointed in 1851, and in 1892 it was reinstated by Treasury warrant as a port of the United Kingdom. In the year 1898 there were registered at this port 31 fishing boats, equal 194 tons, employing 86 men and boys; also 13 other vessels, equal 633 tons register, and there were built 8 vessels, equal 2,900 tons register; in 1898, 13 vessels were built, equal to 3,700 tons register. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port with cargoes and in ballast in 1898 was—British 1,113, of 96,742 tons; cleared 1,102, of 96,001 tonnage. In the coasting trade 1,104 vessels entered, of 94,963 tonnage, and 1,071 cleared, 89,985 tons.

The harbour has been much improved at very considerable expense, and the trade has greatly increased, especially in the export of coal and limestone. There are branches of the Royal, Clydesdale, British Linen, and Union Banks. Here are the grain stores of J. F. Longmuir and Co., a ship-building yard, two steam saw mills, three iron forges, and two large engineering and iron yards. Important chemical and chrome works have also been erected near the beach, which give employment to nearly 1,000 men. The principal inns are the Eglinton Arms and the King's Arms, in High street. The Municipal buildings form an elegant structure, surmounted by a turret with spire and containing clock; the interior comprises council chambers and a court house &c. The parish church is a building of large dimensions, with a spire and clock, and stands on rising ground in the centre of a churchyard; there is also the quoad sacra church of Fullarton, two Free churches, two United Presbyterian churches, one for Roman Catholics, and a Baptist chapel. The Irvine Royal Academy, at the north end of the town, erected in 1814, at an expense of £2,250, has since been established by a royal charter, and under the management of the School Board since 1872; it is endowed with a sum of £1,000, left by John Ferguson esq. of Cairnbrock, the interest of which is given annually in bursaries, and there are besides numerous prizes; attached to the school is an extensive playground. There are also Board and Roman Catholic schools; a Literary and Social Institute, with reading and recreation rooms, and a large hall for public meetings and entertainments. The Templars' Hall here was the first of its kind in Scotland; there is also an Orange Protestant Hall. The statue of Robert Burns, who was born near Ayr, 25 January, 1759, but for some years worked at Irvine as a flax dresser, is a colossal figure of bronze, modelled by Mr. Pitteadriagh Macgillivray A.R.S.A. and presented to the town of Irvine by Mr. John Spiers; the pedestal is ornamented with bronze panels displaying scenes from the poet's works. James Montgomery, a minor poet, some time editor of the "Sheffield Iris," and author of "The World before the Flood," the well-known hymn on "Prayer," and many other sacred poems, was born here, 4th Nov. 1771, in a little house, still standing in the street leading to the railway station, which has been purchased by some members of the Irvine Burns club with the view of preserving it. A tablet has been placed on the building, marking it as the birthplace of Montgomery. He visited his native town in 1841, and died at Sheffield, 30 April, 1854, and was buried in the general cemetery, where there is a monument with a statue in bronze, erected in 1861, at a cost of £1,000. John Gait, author of the "Annals of the Parish," &c. was born at Irvine, 2nd May, 1779; the house then occupied by his father's family was taken down in 1858 and the office of the Union Bank erected on its site; a tablet in the Bank office commemorates this circumstance. The screw propeller, the principle of which was shown by Robert Hooke F.R.S. in 1651, and later by Du Ques, Bernoulli and others, was developed here in 1824 or 1825 by Messrs. W. McCrick, Maxwell Dick, and James Steadman, and successfully applied in 1836 by Fras. Pettit Smith & Capt. John Ericsson. The sect called Buchanites had its origin in Irvine, having been started here in 1779 by one Mrs. Elizabeth Buchan, who pretended to be the woman mentioned in Rev. ch. xii.; she died in 1791. From 1618 to 1640 Irvine was the scene of the labours of David Dickson, afterwards principal of Glasgow University. On the 31st December, 1666, Blackwood and McCool, two Covenanters, were hanged at Irvine. The Marymas races are held on the Saturday following the third Monday of August, and the Eglinton Hunt meeting (over Bogside co-ree) generally in the beginning of April. The Town Moor and the Links at Bogside, and at Gailes, which are also adjacent to the town, form excellent sites for military encampments, the 4th Battalion Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (Renfrew Militia) having for many years chosen the Town Moor for the annual training, extending over three months in summer. Detachments of the Royal Artillery from time to time also encamp on the moor. At Bogside, on the Eglinton Estate and adjoining the moor, the Lanarkshire and the West of Scotland Artillery Volunteers have camps of instruction during the summer. There is a splendid land range here with a battery of eight pieces, called Fort Eglinton. The camping ground at Gailes, which is on the Duke of Portland's estate, lies along the beach between Irvine and Troon. The Glasgow and Ayrshire Volunteers occupy this ground throughout the summer months. There are golf links near the town; the Eglinton links at Bogside and two others at Gailes belonging to Glasgow clubs. A commodious club house is now (1899) in course of erection at Bogside, at a cost of £4,000. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, stands within two miles of the burgh, and is famous in connection with the grand tournament held here 29 Aug. 1339, and the following week; admission to the grounds and gardens (on Saturdays only) is obtainable by ticket. The area of the parish is 3,930 acres. Rateable value, £33,492; population of the town in 1881, 8,517, and in 1891, 9,037. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 1,501.

KILBIRNIE.

KILBIRNIE, or Kilburney, is a populous town and parish, in Cunningham district and poor combination, and in the small debts court district of Beith; 64 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 20 south-south-west of Glasgow, the like distance north of Ayr, and 3 west from Beith, $\frac{1}{4}$ north-east from Glengarnock and Kilbirnie station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and with stations at Bridgend (Kilbirnie), the terminus of a short line from Giffen) and Glengarnock on the Caledonian system. The town is situated on the banks of the Garnock, in the heart of a fine country, and within a mile of the loch of Kilbirnie, which extends two miles in length by half a mile in breadth. The principal manufactories are the flax spinning, linen thread, and fishing-net works of Messrs. W. and J. Knox Limited; Glengarnock Iron and Steel works, about a mile and a quarter south-east, employing about 2,000 persons; Messrs. Paton, Brown and Co. manufacturers of fannel shirtings, skirtings &c. and the rope works of Messrs. Robertson and Biddeb, and J. Watt and Co. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited. The parish church is a plain edifice, but contains some fine examples of elaborate carving in wood. The gallery in the Crawford aisle, a perfect mass of beautiful carved work, is supposed to have been executed by the orders of John (Lindsay-Crawford), 1st Viscount Garnock (d. 1709), the quartered escutcheon of whose arms, impaled with those of his wife Margaret (only daughter of John, first Earl of Bute), appear along its front; this gallery, for some time in a state of decay, has been restored by Mr. James Knox, of Kilbirnie Castle. In the churchyard is the stately tomb of Captain Thomas Crawford, of Jordanhill, whose capture of Dumbarton Castle, in 1571, is one of the most daring feats recorded in history. There are also two Free Churches, and United Presbyterian and Roman Catholic Churches. The Cemetery, covering two acres, was laid out at a cost of £900. The old castle of Glengarnock, one of the most ancient and stately ruins in Ayrshire, is supposed to have been the residence of the family of De Morville, which flourished in great splendour during the reigns of Alexander I., David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion. They held the high office of constable of Scotland, and were lords of Galloway and Cunningham. There likewise exist the extensive ruins of the old house of Kilbirnie, long the residence of the ancient family of Crawford, of Kilbirnie; the Kilbirnie estates are now chiefly held by the

Knox family. The parish of Kilbirnie comprises 10,335 acres; rateable value, £27,296, and had in 1881 a population of 5,243 persons, and in 1891, 5,468; of this number the village contains 4,000, having had in 1891, 3,528, and in 1881, 3,405.

WEST KILBRIDE.

WEST KILBRIDE is a parish and village
 in Cunninghame district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; 73 miles west-
 south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-west
 from Glasgow, 24 south-south-west from Paisley, the like distance north-west from Ayr, 22 south from Greenock, 13
 north-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-west

from Irvine, 7½ south from Largs, 7 southwest from Dalry, 5 north from Saltcoats,
 4½ south from Fairlie, and 4 north-west from Ardrossan; the village is surrounded on all sides by rising grounds, which on the west
 protect it from the keen sea breeze, and on the opposite aspect from easterly winds.
 The village is lighted with gas by a company. The scenery around is bold and romantic. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving. There are branches here

 of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited
 and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, a Public Library and Reading Room and two Convalescent Homes, and there are Bowling
 and Curling Clubs. There is an Established church and Roman Catholic, Free and United Presbyterian churches and a general

Cemetery. Near the village are the ruins of Law Castle and Porten Cross, and off the sea line of the parish one of the largest vessels of the Spanish Armada still remains sunk in ten fathoms of water. An attempt was made about a century ago to examine the internal condition of this ship, and the operation so far succeeded that a piece of ordnance was raised from her hull. The principal landowners are Hugh Ronald George Cranford esq. of Auchencames; Lady Sophia Constance Montgomery, of South Annan House, Fairlie; Lieut.-Col. Gould Hunter-Weston F.S.A. of Hunterston, and the trustees of the late Henry C. Hyndman esq. of Springside. Area, 10,119 acres; rateable value, £27,846; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,302, including 1,617 in the village, and in 1881 was 2,088, with 1,363 in the village.

Seamill, a small village on the sea shore, about 1½ miles from West Kilbride, is a delightful summer resort and has a good hydropathic establishment, known as the Seamill Sanatorium, Mr. James Newbigging being manager.

KILMARNOCK.

KILMARNOCK is a large and important manufacturing town and a parish, in Cunninghamham district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 6½ miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Glasgow), 21 south-west from Glasgow, 12 north-by-east from Ayr, and between 6 and 7 east-by-north from Irvine. The town is situated on level ground near the confluence of the Kilmarnock water with the Irvine. The streets are regularly laid out, and the houses, for the most part, are built of stone. This town, together with Dumbarton, Port Glasgow, Renfrew and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member to Parliament. The civil government of the town is vested in a corporation, consisting of a provost, six bailies and eighteen councillors. The magistrates preside in the criminal court by turns, and the justices sit monthly. For years, Kilmarnock seems to have been distinguished only for the manufacture of Scotch bonnets and military caps. Subsequently the staple manufacture was that of carpets, and in this branch the town yet stands pre-eminent. An extensive trade is also carried on in the manufacture of shoes for exportation, tweeds, winceys and cotton goods; there are skin works and tanneries and woollen and worsted spinning is also carried on, but the iron trade may now be said to be the staple trade of the town, and there are many large machine making and iron founding establishments, including the Caledonia works of Messrs. Andrew Barclay, Sons and Co. Limited; the Glenfield Company Limited; the Townholm, Messrs. Grant, Ritchie and Co. and others. The production of fire clay goods and sanitary ware is also extensively carried on here, the works of Messrs. J. and M. Craig Limited giving employment to a large number of hands. The Townholm Forge, of which Messrs. M. Reid and Co. are the proprietors, is famous for the size and excellence of its forgings. Kennedy's Patent Water Meter Company Limited have also a large factory, and here also are the engineering works of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Surrounding the town are extensive coal fields, from which the various works in the town are supplied, and quantities of coal are also dispatched by railway. There are branches here of several banks, together with a local savings bank. The Town House, built in 1805, contains a court room for the magistracy, and public offices. The Court House, in St. Marnock street, erected in 1852, is an elegant structure, attached to which are the sheriff's chambers, and the offices of the procurator fiscal and those of the sheriff's clerk and other officers. Police buildings of stone with a handsome frontage were erected in Sturrock street in 1899, at a cost of about £3,000, and contain a spacious court room and two flats of cells. The Corn Exchange buildings, erected by a joint-stock company, include a large hall. The premises of the Kilmarnock Equitable Co-operative Society, at the junction of John Finnie and John Dickie streets, were erected at a cost of £6,000. The "Public Libraries" Act, 1855" (18 and 19 Vict. c. 70) has been adopted here, and new buildings of stone to contain a public library and museum are now (June, 1899) being erected at Elmbank, in the London road, in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect; the estimated cost is £14,000, and will be wholly defrayed by James Dick esq. of Glasgow; over the pediment of the portico is a figure of Britannia, and in tympanum the arms of the burgh of Kilmarnock, with supporters. The building will be in one and two storeys, and will contain 14 apartments in all; to this building all the books of the Kilmarnock Library, founded in 1797, will be transferred, and the funds of this library, including a bequest from the late Mr. Crawford, bookseller, of fully £100 annually, for the purchase of books, will be re-assigned to the new institution. The Philosophical Society was formed in 1828, for the promotion of general and specially scientific knowledge. The Observatory, which occupies a fine site and is 70 feet in height, was erected in 1818 by the late Mr. Thomas Morton, at a cost of £1,000, and is well equipped. There is a good Philharmonic Society. The Liberal Club is in Portland street; the Conservative Club, in Sturrock street, is a fine stone building in the Italian style, from the designs of Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect, and was erected at a cost of about £1,400; it contains a spacious hall seating 400 people, and billiard, reading and recreation rooms, and was considerably enlarged in 1892 at a cost of £500. The Ossington Coffee House, built by Lady Ossington, a former proprietor of the Barony of Kilmarnock, who also bequeathed the sum of £3,000 for the endowment of the institution, contains a room liberally supplied with newspapers, magazines and other periodicals. There are four Masonic lodges, a society of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, one of the Free Foresters, one of the Free Gardeners, and others. The Fever Hospital and Dispensary, which occupies an elevated site, is a building of stone, and was opened in 1868, at a cost of £4,146.

The Buchanan Charity, left in 1875, on the death of the last survivor of the Misses Buchanan, of Bellfield, consists, according to a settlement made by the three sisters, of the mansion and estate of Bellfield, bequeathed by them for the benefit of the town of Kilmarnock and the village of Riccarton, close to which the estate, consisting of 240 acres, is situated. The following digest of the trust deed fully explains its nature. The trust, called the Buchanan Bequest, provides £5 yearly to the Certified Industrial Schools; £3 to Kilmarnock Infirmary; £10 to the parish minister of Riccarton, to be expended on flannel for deserving poor; £130 yearly as salary to a missionary for Riccarton parish, and the balance of the yearly rents from lands and minerals to accumulate. Part of the mansion is fitted up to contain a reference library, now of about 1,500 volumes, for the public of Kilmarnock and Riccarton, and the gardens and policies are open for recreation; the rest of the mansion is designed to be fitted up as an asylum for aged and infirm people, who are also clothed and fed. In accordance with the terms of the bequest the estate and funds are now administered by the provost and magistrates of Kilmarnock, the Established Church clergymen of the town and the minister of Riccarton. The mansion and grounds are open to the public every week day, and part of Sunday.

The Shaw Memorial, at the market cross, was erected in 1848 to the late Sir James Shaw bart. Lord Mayor of London, 1805-6, and a native of Mosshed, in this neighbourhood, where he was born in 1764, and died 22 Oct. 1843. The memorial consists of a marble statue by Fillans, eight feet in height, in civic robes, and is mounted on a pedestal of the same altitude.

The civil parish of Kilmarnock consists ecclesiastically of four parishes—the Low, the High, formed in 1731, St. Marnock's, and St. Andrew's, each containing an Established church. Part of the original, or Low, church, is of great antiquity. St. Marnock's church, erected at a cost of £5,000, is a large and handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a tower, and affords sittings for 1,700 persons. The Free church has six places of worship in the town, and one in the village of Crookedholm, in the parish; there are also four United Presbyterian churches in the town, one of which, in King street, has a tower with spire. There are also chapels for the Original Seceders, the Evangelical Union, the Scottish Episcopalians, the Roman Catholics, and other denominations. The old parish churchyard and that of St. Andrew's are now closed, but a public cemetery, covering seven acres of ground, was opened in 1875, and enlarged in 1892. There are two School Boards, the Burgh School Board and the Landward School Board. The Kilmarnock Academy, for boys and girls, erected in 1897-8 by the School Board, at a cost of fully £18,000, was designed by Mr. H. S. Ingram, architect; the buildings include chemical and physical laboratories, a gymnasium, a workshop for manual instruction and a swimming bath. It will hold nearly 1,000 pupils: Dr. Hugh Dickie B.A., LL.D. is the rector. There are also Elementary Board Schools. The former Free school has been converted by the Board into a Grammar school, and the Female Industrial school and the Science and Art school, in Woodstock street, are also under the control of the School Board. Kay's Endowed schools, in Wellington street and Bentinck street, founded by Alexander Kay, a native of Kilmarnock, who left the sum of £6,000 for their building and endowment, have been transferred to the School Board, under a scheme of the Endowed School Commissioners, and the interest of the proceeds is applied to educational purposes.

The Kay Park owes its existence to the late Mr. Alexander Kay, of Glasgow, and a native of Kilmarnock, who died in Jan. 1866, and by his will left £10,000 to purchase grounds for a public park and to maintain the same, and in 1878, the present site, consisting of nearly forty acres, was purchased from the Duke of Portland at a cost of £9,000. It includes the Clerk's Holm, and stretches from Braehead House to the Townhead drive, and from the river on the west to Grassyards road on the east. A sum of about £3,600 was spent in laying out the park and forming drives and walks. In the centre of the Clerk's Holm is an ornamental fountain, erected at a cost of £280; by a gift of the late Mrs. James Crooke a band-stand has also been erected, and a hand plays here on Saturday afternoons. The park was publicly handed over to the burgh council, 9 Aug. 1879, and there is a limited fund for its maintenance. In 1882 the council purchased Strawberry Bank, an adjoining property, consisting of eight acres, for £1,800, and this has been incorporated with the Kay Park; portions of both are reserved for feuing purposes, and there is a small ornamental lake. In this section of the park stands a monument, erected in honour of the early parliamentary reformers. The Burns Memorial, which stands in the park, was originated at the public anniversary of the poet, held Jan. 26th, 1877, and consists of a museum and library, within which is placed a statue of Burns; the building, erected in 1878-9, is in the Scottish baronial style, from designs by Mr. B. S. Ingram, architect, Kilmarnock, and has a height of 80 feet. The statue, of Sicilian marble, was executed by Mr. W. G. Stevenson, Edinburgh, and cost £800. The entire cost of the building and statue was about £2,700. The collection of Burns' holograph MSS. preserved here is the most complete in existence and includes the MSS. of many of his best known poems, besides many of his letters to correspondents in Kilmarnock and the neighbourhood. The Mackie Library, also kept here, contains almost every published edition of the poet's works and comprises upwards of 800 volumes.

Dean Castle, formerly the property of the Boyds, Earls of Kilmarnock, but now ruinous, stands in a dene or hollow, less than a mile north from the town; it was burnt down in 1755. Kilmarnock House, another edifice once belonging to and the last residence of that noble family, is in St. Marnock street. From this house William Boyd, 4th and last earl, proceeded in 1745 to join the standard of the Pretender, but he was taken prisoner at Culodden, and executed on Tower Hill, 18 Aug. 1746. His eldest son James, Lord Boyd, subsequently succeeded in 1758 to the earldom of Errol, and his descendant William George, 17th Earl of Errol K.T., G.C.H. was in 1831 (17 June) created a peer of the United Kingdom under the title of Baron Kilmarnock. The building is now occupied as an industrial school. About 3 miles from the town, on the Carmel, is Rowallan Castle, a fortress of considerable antiquity, though greatly decayed. It was the seat of the barons of Rowallan, and is famous as the birthplace of Elizabeth More, or Mure, the first wife of Robert the Second of Scotland. It was also the residence of Sir William Mure, author of a metrical translation of the Psalms of David, and other poetical works. The estate now belongs to the Earl of Loudoun, of Willesley Hall, Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Leicestershire. Among the residences may be named The Mount, Caprington Castle, Annanhill House and Craufurdlund Castle.

The markets, which are held on Tuesday and Friday, are abundantly supplied with every necessary article of domestic consumption. Fairs are held the second Tuesday in May, last Thursday in July (commonly called the "gooseberry fair"), and the last Thursday in October, for horses. The cheese show and fair, held at the end of October, is affirmed to be the largest in the kingdom, and is attended by dealers from all parts of the country; 15,000 tons of cheese have been exhibited here at one show. The October show is purely an agricultural one. About the middle of April a large show of cattle has been held for years. It ranks next to the great Ayr show. The Duke of Portland P.O., G.C.V.O.; the Dowager Lady Howard de Walden, of 35 Portland place, London W.; the trustees of the late John White, of Grougar, and the Earl of Loudoun are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish comprises 9,444 acres; rateable value, £144,095, exclusive of railways (of which £121,527 applies to the burgh and £22,568 to the landward portion); the population of the entire parish was 27,968 in 1891, and 25,864 in 1881. As showing the progress of the town, it may be mentioned that in 1801 the population of the parish was only 8,079; the population of the four ecclesiastical parishes into which the old parish is divided was in 1891 respectively, High Kirk, 3,114; Kilmarnock (Old), 12,423; St. Andrew, 8,161, and St. Markock, 3,587. The parliamentary and police burgh had in 1891 a population of 28,447. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 4,854.

Crookedholm is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmarnock. Hurlford is the nearest railway station, half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

KILMAURS is a town and burgh of
 barony and parish in Cunningham district
 and poor combination and in the small debt
 court district of Kilmarnock, with a station
 on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway. The town is two miles north-west from Kilmarnock, and stands on the right bank of a rivulet called Kilmaurs or Carmel water. It was erected into a burgh of barony by James V. at the instance of Cuthbert, 3rd Earl of Glencairn, and his son, Lord Kilmaurs. The government of the town, which consists principally of a single street, is vested in two bailies (chosen annually by the portioners). It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company. The most prominent trade now is the manufacture of boots and shoes, and the factory of Messrs. Kellie and Co. gives employment to a number of hands. Coal is also raised in the parish.

 The Town House, a small edifice with a tower and clock, stands in the middle of the street. The Public Hall, erected at a cost of about £1,000, is used for meetings and entertainments. There is a local Farmers' Society. The Established church has been thoroughly restored, and a new chancel and tower erected at a cost of about £2,000, defrayed by the heritors and members of the congregation. In the churchyard is a fine memorial tomb to William (Cunayghame), Baron Kilmaurs, 9th

 Earl of Glencairn, and chancellor of Scotland, who died in 1664. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches,

and a Board school. The market, which was for a long period held on Thursday, has fallen into disuse; but fairs are still maintained on the 11th of June, and on the third Wednesday in that month, and the 11th of November. Near the church is an ancient building, the origin and purpose of which are unknown. The Dowager Lady Howard de Walden, of 35 Portland place, London W., and Lady Sophia C. Montgomerie, of Southannan House, Fairlie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,900 acres; rateable value, £28,536; the population in 1891 was 4,453, and in 1881, 3,704, the town having 1,713 in 1891, and 1,203 in 1881.

Crosshouse is a small village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Kilmarnock and Dregghorn, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The collieries and fire-clay works in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of the inhabitants. There are Established and Roman Catholic churches here, also Board and Roman Catholic schools. Population in 1891, 2,772.

Gatehead is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmarnock, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock and 4 south from Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. Population returned with the parish.

KILWINNING is a market town, police burgh and parish, in Cunninghame parohouse combination and Irvine small debt court district. The town is situated on rising ground about 2 miles from the sea, and is 24 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, 3 north-west of Irvine, 4 north-east of Sauchie, the same distance south of Dalry, 10 west-north-west of Kilmarnock and 5 east from Ardrossan, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways; the branch of the Lanarkshire and Ayrshire railway, from Barnhill to Ardrossan, was completed in the summer of 1888, the station being close to that on the Glasgow and South Western line. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and is governed by a provost and two junior magistrates, having been constituted a police burgh in Nov. 1889. The trade consists partly in the weaving and manufacture of gauzes, muslins, shawls for the Glasgow and Paisley markets; and in the neighbourhood are large iron, coal, and fire-clay works. Several engineering works, an iron foundry, and a worsted spinning mill are also carried on. The agricultural produce of the parish is considerable, and coals are obtained in abundance. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Kilwinning (Joint) Hospital, in Fergushill road, completed and opened in 1897, is available for 15 patients; Miss Mary B. Mitchell, matron. The Established church, a mean edifice, has, however, an elegant tower of four stages, in the Early English style, erected at a cost of £2,000, with embattled parapet and pinnacles, and contains a clock with dials. There is also a Free church, and chapels belonging to the Evangelical Union, Original Seceders, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. The Board school, built at a cost of £3,700, will hold about 800 children. The picturesque ruins of the ancient abbey, founded by Hugh de Morville, in 1140, adjoin the church, but consist of little more than the gable of the tower transept, a lofty fragment in the lancet style, and an arch once leading into the nave. The public park, in Dalry road, was formed with a sum of £7,000, bequeathed by the late John M Gavin esq. formerly of Kilwinning.

Kilwinning is famous as being the first place in Scotland where freemasonry was established, and it is traditionally said to have been introduced by the foreign architect who was employed in erecting the abbey. Until the period of the Reformation the ancient masonic lodge here held its meetings in the chapter house of the monastery, but in 1770 a lodge was built in a plain Gothic style, and continued to be used until 1833, when it was removed for the purpose of making a new entrance to the churchyard. The new lodge, erected and opened in the same year, stands in the main street, a short distance west of the old site, and is a good building of red Manclina stone, the design being a free treatment of Scottish Renaissance style, by Mr. J. B. Wilson, architect, Glasgow. The main entrance door is semi-circular, with pilasters at each side, and a banistraded balcony above. The upper floor is lighted by a wide bay window in five divisions, and above it is a typical Scotch gable, with the usual corbie steps, and across it runs a carved frieze bearing the words "Mother Lodge." The large upper room, 24 feet by 20 feet, is used for meetings of the lodge, and there are several small rooms and an entrance hall. The ceiling is ornamented with wreaths of thistles, with various masonic emblems interlaced. It is also remarkable from being the seat of a company of archers ascertained to have existed so early as the year 1488; and a society of that kind is still in existence. Fairs are held on the first Monday in February and the first Monday in November; and a cattle show in connection with the Farmers' Society is held annually. Eglington Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglington and Winton, lord lieutenant of the county, is famous in connection with the tournament held here Aug. 29, 1839, and the following week. Here are the kennels of the Eglington foxhounds, of which Lord Eglington is master; Ayr, Kilmarnock, Ardrossan and Irvine are convenient places for hunting visitors. The Earl of Eglington and Winton, and Lady Sophia Constance Montgomery, of Southannan House, Fairlie, Ayrshire, are the principal landowners. In 1881 the parish contained a population of 7,037, and in 1891, 7,067, of which 3,835 belonged to the town; area of the parish, 10,989 acres; rateable value, of landward £36,124, burghal £11,848.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office & Savings Bank, 178 Main street (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. KIRKMICHAEL is a small village and parish in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination. The village is 3½ miles east from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 76 south-west from Edinburgh, 22 south from Kilmarnock, 10 south of Ayr, the same distance east of Dalmeilington, 8 north-east of Dailly and 4 west by north from Straiton, pleasantly situated in a valley, on the road from Newton Stewart to Glasgow, 36 miles from the former and 44 from the latter. The general surface of this parish is hilly, towards the south and east mountainous and rocky; but the whole is more or less cultivated. The Girvan stream runs through the parish; the Doon forms its boundary for several miles, and the Dyroock water flows through the village. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Michael; the present structure was built in 1737 on the old site. In the churchyard is the tomb of Gilbert M'Adam, who was shot in 1685 by the laird of Culzean and Ballochmyle, for his adherence to the Covenanters. The Board school was built in 1875, at a cost of £1,100, and will hold 100 children. Area of the parish, 15,930 acres; rateable value, £14,420. Population in 1881, 1,989, and in 1891, 1,870; of the village, 310.

Cross-hill is a village on the left bank of the Girvan, in the parish, and about 2 miles south of Kirkmichael, and is a quoad sacra parish in itself for church and school purposes. There are Established and Free churches here, and also a Board school. Population in 1891, 1,178, and in 1881, 740.

KIRKOSWALD is a parish in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination. The village is 13 miles south-south-west from Ayr and 4½ south-east from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and on the road from Portpatrick to Glasgow, 90 miles from the former and 48 by the new road from the latter. The sea coast here presents a sandy beach with a rich sward extending to the sea mark; and there are two lakes, from which many small streams wind through the district towards the sea. Culzean Castle, the seat of the Marquess of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor, is a fine and ancient mansion placed on a rock overhanging the sea; and on the land side are gardens and a noble park of great extent. Not far from the castle is a fort mounted with 13 guns and a mortar battery, both kept in efficient order. At Crossraguel, in a low valley between Kirkoswald and Maybole, are the remains of the abbey of St. Mary, founded in 1244, by Duncan, first Earl of Carrick, and at one period inhabited by Cluniac monks from Paisley. At the Reformation it became the property of the Earl of Cassillis, but now belongs to the Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson bart. G.C.S.I., K.O.M.G., P.C., M.P. of Kilkerran. A lighthouse stands on the site of Turnberry Castle, once the residence and property of Robert the Bruce, and not more than a mile from it lies the farm of Shanter, once the residence of Douglas Graham, the hero of Burn's poem, "Tam o' Shanter." Area of the parish comprises 14,861 acres; gross rateable value, £15,810; the population in 1891 was 1,652, and in 1881, 1,781.

LARGS is a town, police burgh and watering place on the east shore of the Firth of Clyde, opposite the north end of Great Cumbrae Island, and a parish at the extreme north-west of the county, 70 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 14 south from Greenock and 20 north from Irvine, and has a station on the South Western railway. The town is governed by a provost and commissioners. The parish extends 8 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded north and east by Renfrewshire, south by Kilbirnie parish and west by the Firth; it is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. In 1263 Haec, King of Norway, was defeated by the Scottish army under Alexander III. on the plain on which the town stands. The town is the summer resort of large numbers of visitors, and possesses some good hotels, boarding houses and shops, and has branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Company's Bank. Considerable business is carried on in the fishery. The annual fair, commencing on the first Tuesday in June after the 12th (St. Columbus's day), lasts two days. At Mackerton place the inhabitants of the town have erected a granite fountain to the late John Campbell, surgeon, for 61 years a resident of the town.

The parish church is an edifice of red stone, with a spire and clock. There are also Free and Roman Catholic churches, United Presbyterian church, the gift of John Clark esq. J.P. and erected at a cost of £30,000, and the Episcopal church, of St. Columba, built in 1877. An aisle in the old parish church, built by Sir Robert Montgomery in 1636, is the burial place of the Montgomeries, of Skelmortie, and has underneath a vault in which lie the body of Sir Robert, enclosed in a leaden coffin bearing a Latin inscription. The old buildings of the Brisbane Academy, purchased by J. Stevenson esq. of Hallie, have been converted into an institute, with reading and recreation rooms and a library, which also include the Mechanics' Library, increased by gifts of books from Mr. Stevenson. Knock Castle, the seat of F. Glen McAndrew esq. occupies a fine position overlooking the Firth, and is a conspicuous landmark; in the grounds are the ruins of the old castle. Brisbane House is the seat of Charles Thomas Brisbane esq. J.P.; Netherhall, of Lord Kelvin G.C.V.O., F.R.S.; Halkhill, of Col. John Scott C.B., V.D., F.R.S.E.; and Hailie, of James Stevenson esq. F.R.S.E., F.R.G.S., and there are numerous other fine marine residences. The area of the parish comprises 21,850 acres; rateable value, landward, £28,653; burghal, £24,894; the population in 1891 was 5,320, of whom 3,187 were in the burgh, and in 1881 it was 5,149, with 3,079 in the burgh.

LOUDOUN is a parish in the north-eastern portion of the county, in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. It contains on its southern border the towns and police burghs of Newmilns and Darvel and part of the town of Galston (which see). Its kirktown lies 4½ miles south-east of Kilmarnock and 15 north-east from Ayr. The parish extends 10 miles from east to west by 3 in breadth, and is bounded east by Lanarkshire, north by Renfrewshire and the parish of Fenwick, west by Kilmarnock and south by Galston. There is a railway station at Newmilns, on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway. About 2 miles west of Newmilns and 1 east of Loudoun Kirktown is Loudoun Castle, the seat of the Hon. Gilbert T. C. Campbell-Clifton-Hastings, a large structure in the Baronial style, standing in the midst of an extensive and well-wooded park. The chancel of the old parish kirk of Loudoun, originally built about 1015, the only part now remaining, stands near the castle, and is used as the burying place of the family of Hastings, and here rest the remains of Lady Flora Hastings, to whose memory, and that of her mother, a granite obelisk was erected in 1888, by a near relative, Miss Henry, of Cheltenham. In the parish is also Pate's Mill, celebrated in the song "The Lass of Pate's Mill. The trustees of the late Lord Donington (d. 1895) and the trustees of the late Miss Brown, of Lanfine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,486 acres; rateable value, £31,554; the population in 1891 was 6,379, including 5,336 in the three towns, and in 1881 was 5,239, with 4,243 in the towns. The post offices are at Newmilns and Darvel, and the places of worship, Established and Free church, are in the same towns.

LUGAR,

WITH CRONBERRY AND DARNCONNER.

LUGAR is a village in the parish of Auchinleck, 2½ miles north-east of Cumnock, with a station on the Ayr and Muirkirk section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. There are large iron-works adjoining the village, containing five blast furnaces, belonging to Messrs. Wm. Baird & Co. Limited, and in connection with them is a co-operative store. The Lugar Institute is a building of stone, the gift of William Weir esq. erected in 1892, and comprises billiard, card and reception rooms, a large hall for public meetings, swimming and private baths; the cost was about £5,000. The trustees of the late Lady Jane Boswell are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 1,288. Cronberry is a village in Auchinleck parish, 2 miles north-east of Lugar, with a station on the Ayr and Muirkirk section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The population in 1891 was 632.

Darnconner is a village, 3 miles north-west of Lugar, in Auchinleck parish. The population in 1891 was 1,198.

MAUCHLINE is a considerable town and parish in Kyle poor combination, 2½ miles west from Catrine, with a station about half a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South Western railway: the town is pleasantly situated and surrounded on all sides by a delightful country, and is lighted with gas by a company. The trade consists chiefly in the manufacture of fancy boxes &c. in sycamore wood, faced with various tartan patters, for which this town has long been noted, and largely made by Messrs. W. and A. Smith. Messrs. Andrew Kay and Co. whose works are at the Hangh, have a wide reputation for the manufacture of curling stones. The red freestone quarries of Ballochmyle and Barskimming, worked respectively by Messrs. Marcus Bain, and Baird and Stevenson, provide employment for a great many of the inhabitants. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Public Library and a Temperance Hall. The Established church, erected in place of the old kirk, the scene of the "Holy Fair," is an elegant structure in the Gothic style with a square tower, and there are also Free and United Presbyterian churches. In connection with the Established church an elegant and spacious church hall was erected about 1899. In the churchyard are the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld, Nasse Tinnock, Mary Morrison and several other persons who figure in the satires of Burns. The new cemetery is near the railway station. Fairs are nominally held on the first Thursday after the 4th February, the first Wednesday after the 18th May, the fourth Wednesday in June, the first Wednesday in August, the 26th of September, the 4th of November and the fourth Wednesday in December. Mauchline Castle is an ancient structure of considerable antiquarian interest. Burns resided several years at Mossgeil, a small farm about half a mile to the north of Mauchline, on the left side of the road from thence to Kilmarnock; the steading may still be seen, environed by a few trees, as well as the fields in traversing which, it is said, he composed some of his best poems. His chief resort when he visited Mauchline was the public house of John Dow, a thatched house of two flats, nearly opposite the churchyard gate, now entirely rebuilt and occupied as houses and shops. The cottage of "Poozie Nancy," or Mrs. Gibson, the scene of the "Jolly Beggars," stands immediately opposite the churchyard gate. The principal landowners are Sir Claud Alexander bart. of Ballochmyle; the Duke of Portland P.C., G.C.V.O.; John Meikle esq. of Barskimming; the trustees of the late Lady Jane Boswell, and William K. Hamilton-Campbell esq. The area comprises 8,907 acres; rateable value, £19,116; the population in 1891 was 2,339, including 1,464 in the town, and in 1881 2,504, with 1,616 in the town.

MAYBOLE is a parish, police burgh and the head of a poor combination, in the district of Carrick, with a station on the Ayr and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 25 miles north from Ballantrae, 22 south-by-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-by-east from Girvan and 9 south from Ayr. The town, which is beautifully situated near the coast of the Firth of Clyde, consists chiefly of narrow streets, and has few public buildings of any importance. It is lighted with gas by a limited company, and is governed by police commissioners. The principal industry is the manufacture of boots and shoes, and there are also agricultural implement works. The town house, erected in 1887 by public subscription, is a handsome structure, and supersedes the old building, once belonging to the Kennedys of Blairquhan. There are Conservative and Liberal clubs, a bowling club and a coffee and reading room. The Carrick Farmers' Society holds its meetings here. The ancient collegiate church has been for some time in ruins, but the burial ground is still used. The parish church is in Cassillis road; there is also a quoad sacra church at Maybole West, besides Free and United Presbyterian, the Episcopal church of St. Oswald, built in 1883, and Wesleyan Methodist and Roman Catholic chapels. There are two Board schools and a Roman Catholic school. The mansion house or castle of the Kennedy family, Earls of Cassillis, is the finest surviving specimen of the various mansions formerly existing in Maybole. It is a stately, well-built structure, standing in the centre of the town, and is now occupied by Thomas Smith esq. factor to the Marquis of Ailesa, who is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Marquis of Ailesa, The Right Hon. Sir James Ferguson bart. G.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., P.C., M.P. and William Baird esq. In the vicinity are the celebrated ruins known as "Crossraguel." The area of the parish is 21,993 acres; rateable value, of landward, £29,471, burghal, £15,168; the population in 1891 was 7,599, including 5,470 in the town, and in 1881 was 6,628, with 4,474 in the town.

Cunroy, or Minishant, is a small village in the parish of Maybole, 3½ miles from that town, and on the road to Ayr, from which it is 5½ miles distant. In this village is a manufactory for woollen goods. The church was erected by the late Sir Peter Coats, in memory of his wife, who died 21st April, 1877, and there is a board school. The population of Minishant in 1891 was 146.

Dunure, or Fisherton, is a small village in the parish of Maybole, 6½ miles from the town, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. Dunure House, the property of Francis T. R. Kennedy esq. is at present occupied by George White esq. Near the village are the ruins of Dunure Castle, the ancient seat of the Kennedys, who have now removed their residence to Culzean. The population of the quoad sacra parish of Fisherton in 1891 was 698, that of the village of Dunure being 217.

MONKTON and PRESTWICK
 form a parish in the district of Kyle, which also includes New Prestwick, a suburb of Ayr.

Prestwick, or Prestevicke, a small village
 about two miles from Ayr, with a station
 on the Glasgow and South Western railway, was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh
 of barony at an early date; and its charter,
 renewed by James VI. in 1600, granted to
 it a weekly market and an annual fair, but the market has fallen into disuse. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists, and there is a council house in which the bailies and free-
 men meet quarterly to regulate the affairs of the burgh. At Prestwick there are fine golf links, where the ancient game has been played for many years. The Prestwick Golf Club has a large and handsome
 club house, and there is also the St.
 Nicholas Club, both having a large number of members. The St. Cuthbert's Links were opened May 6th, 1899. Population in 1891 was 1,479, and in 1881, 1,064.

Monkton is a village on the sea coast, and on the road to Glasgow, 4 miles north from Ayr, and also has a station about one mile distant on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The population in 1891 was 387,
 and in 1881, 354. Area of the parish comprises 3,769 acres; rateable value, £23,483.
 The population in 1891 was 2,803, and in 1881, 2,121.

MUIRKIRK is a parish and town in Kyle district and poor combination, and in Old Cumnock small debts court district, with a station near the town, and another at Glenbuck, on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways; the town is 50 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south from Glasgow, 26 east-by-north from Ayr, 24 south-east from Kilmarnock, and 16 north-west from Sanquhar, near the right bank of the Water of Ayr, and at the junction of the roads leading from Glasgow to Dumfries, and from Edinburgh to Ayr.

The town is lighted with gas by a company. Considerable portion of the land here is profitably employed in grazing and pasture, and coal, iron and limestone are abundant. Messrs. William Baird and Co. Limited have eleven blast and several puddling furnaces and rolling mills constantly in operation, for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron, besides extensive works for the manufacture of chemicals. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The Baird Institute, opened in Nov. 1887, was the gift to the town of J. G. A. Baird esq. M.P. and is a building in the Domestic Gothic style, consisting of reading and recreation rooms, and a library &c. The total cost was over £2,000. There is also a Temperance Hall. Fairs are held for hiring on the first Tuesday after the 18th February, and the first Thursday after the 18th December, and for pleasure &c. on the second Friday in June. The principal landowners are Charles Howatson esq. J.P., C.C. of Glenbuck; the Earl of Home; John G. A. Baird esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Muirkirk; Col. the Hon. Augustus M. Cathcart, of Kirby Malzeard, Yorks; the trustees of the late Comm. Carleton Tufnell R.N. of Dollars, and Sir Windham Robert C. Anstruther bart. of Carmichael House, Thankerton. Area 30,229 acres; rateable value, £24,556, and railways, £5,423; the population in 1891 was 5,165, including 3,329 in the town, and in 1881, 5,123, with 3,470 in the town.

Glenbuck is a small mining village in the parish of Muirkirk, about 3 miles north-east from that place, with a station on the Caledonian railway, about one mile from the village. The works of the Cairnstable Gas Coal Co. Limited give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. Population 1,199.

NEWMILNS is a manufacturing town, situated on the river Irvine, in the parishes of Loudoun and Galston, 2 miles east of Galston, 24 south of Glasgow and 18 north-east of Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is a burgh of barony and police burgh, and is in the poor combination of Cunningbame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. It was first created a burgh of barony in 1490 by King James IV. and this charter was confirmed by Sir Matthew Campbell, of Loudoun, in 1668. The bailies are competent to hold courts, from which there is no appeal, except to the court of sessions, and in other respects their jurisdiction is as ample as that of most royal burghs. There is a police commission for the better regulation and improvement of the town, consisting of seven members; the chief magistrate is the chief commissioner. The manufacture of muslins and lace is carried on here extensively, a large number of hands being employed in this branch. A Board school was erected in 1834-5 at a cost of about £7,000; there is also one endowed by the late Lady Flora Hastings, and built at a cost of over £6,000, now under control of the board. The Town Hall is a substantial building of stone, situate in Main street. The Working Men's Institute was erected by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, and is similar to those at Galston and Darvel. In the centre of the town are the remains of an old castle, said to have been erected as early as that of Edinburgh, but nothing is known of its ancient possessors. The population in 1891 was 3,704, and in 1881 2,860. The rateable value of the burgh is £11,170.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Main street (Railway Sub-Office). Letters should have R.S.O. NEWTON, see AYR.

OCHILTREE is a parish and a small but pleasant village, in Kyle district and poor combination, with a station, about $\frac{1}{2}$ miles distant, on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 64 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 north-west from Dumfries, 37 south from Glasgow, 28 north-by-east from Girvan, 22 north-west from Sanquhar, 16 south from Kilmarnock, the like distance north-east from Maybole, $1\frac{1}{2}$ east from Ayre and 4 west from Old Cumnock; the village stands on the south side of the Lugar water, and on the high road from Ayre to Dumfries and Edinburgh. The country around is delightfully picturesque, and the parish is well watered. The great Scottish reformer, John Knox, married his second wife at this village; she was the daughter of Lord Ochiltree, who at that period resided at Ochiltree House. Ochiltree formerly gave the title of baron to a branch of the family of Stewart. The Marquess of Bute K.T., Captain John York, William Campbell esq. Thomas P. Wilson esq. of Polquhairs, Captain Gordon and John Morton esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,328 acres; rateable value, £22,181; the population in 1831 was 2,062, including 499 in the village, and in 1881, 1,493, with 523 in the village.

Post, Money Order, Telegraph, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office; Miss Jane Weir, sub-postmistress. Letters arrive through Old Cumnock. Deliveries, 8.15 a.m. & 6.55 p.m.; dispatches, 2.15 & 7.20 p.m.

PATNA, a small village in the parishes of Straiton, Dalmellington, Dairymple and Kirkmichael, with a station about half a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is also a quoad sacra parish in itself for church and registration purposes. The village stands on the banks of the Doon, which abounds with trout. Coal and ironstone are plentifully obtained in this neighbourhood, and the working of these minerals furnishes employment to many of the villagers. There are Established and United Presbyterian churches. The Duke of Portland P.C., G.C.V.O. is the chief landed proprietor. The population of the parish in 1831 was 908, and in 1881, 603.

PRESTWICK, see MONKTON.

RICCARTON is a parish and village, in the district of Kyle and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, on the left or south bank of the Irvine river, and the village stands on an eminence on the road to Ayr, a mile to the south of Kilmarnock, with which it is connected by a long street and bridge over the river. The parish includes the village of Hurlford. There is a public hall and an institute. The Established church here was erected in 1823, and has a fine and lofty steeple. Riccarton was once the residence of Sir Richard Wallace, uncle of the Scottish patriot Sir William Wallace, who frequently retired here after his marauding expeditions. A considerable quantity of coal is raised in this parish. The principal landed proprietors are the Dowager Lady Howard de Walden, of 35 Portland place, London W; William Cathcart Smith-Cunninghame esq. D.L., J.P. of Fairlie House, Kilmarnock; the Duke of Portland P.C., G.C.V.O., and Mrs. Tuffnell. Area comprises 7,550 acres; rateable value of landward, £26,761, and of Kilmarnock portion, £4,492; the population in 1891 was 7,365, including 3,637 in Hurlford and 2,307 in Kilmarnock; in 1881 the figures were 7,112, 3,728 and 1,940 respectively.

Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Riccarton; Lewis Shadden, sub-postmaster. Letters are received through Kilmarnock. Deliveries, 7.15 & 11 a.m. & 1.5 & 7.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.20, 10 & 11.20 a.m. & 1.30, 4, 7 & 9 p.m. The telegraph office is at the railway station

SALTCOATS.

SALTCOATS is a seaport town and police burgh, partly in the parish of Ardrossan, and partly in that of Stevenston, with stations on the Glasgow and South-Western and Caledonian railways, and is less than a mile each from Ardrossan and Stevenston, 73 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 29 south-south-west from Glasgow, 19 north from Ayr, and 14 west by north from Kilmarnock. The town was made a burgh on 25th May, 1835, by the adoption of the General Police Act for Scotland, and is much resorted to in the summer by visitors from all quarters, on account of its facilities for sea bathing. The harbour here was constructed at the beginning of the 18th century, for the shipment of coal, brought down by canal from the extensive fields in the immediate neighbourhood. The shipping and shipbuilding trade of the port has, since 1852, been for the most part transferred to the harbour and docks at Ardrossan. The making of salt cracked at one time a very large trade. The manufacture of salt, however, ceased in 1890. Saltcoats is, nevertheless, still a flourishing town. Its close proximity to Ardrossan, on the one side, with its extensive harbours, docks and public works, and to Stevenston with its foundries on the other, and the collieries in the neighbourhood of the town, has improved the trade of the town, which has been thoroughly drained by the two Parochial boards (Ardrossan and Stevenston), and is lighted with gas and supplied with excellent water by a system of gravitation. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland have branches here. The Town House, in Countess street, was built in 1892, in place of the former structure, erected in 1825. A justice of the peace court is regularly held here on the first Friday in every month. The Albert Hall and Good Templars' Hall are in Green street, and in Canal street is a Volunteer Drill Hall. The Mission Coast Home consists of three blocks of buildings, for the free reception and treatment of about sixty inmates, each remaining for a short period; the home is maintained by voluntary subscriptions. There are also two Homes for Destitute Children. Population of the town in 1891 was 5,806; now (1899) about 6,600. The rateable value of the burgh is now (1899) £31,820.

SEAMILL. see WEST KILBRIDE.

SKELMORLIE is a large village in the parish of Largs, on the coast, 2 miles south of Wemyss Bay, and a quoad sacra parish formed out of the parishes of Larga in Ayrshire and Inverkip in Renfrewshire, and is a summer resort for visitors. The nearest railway station is at Wemyss Bay, on the Paisley and Wemyss Bay branch of the Caledonian line. The parish is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The village is lighted by gas supplied from works in the place. The Wemyss Bay Hydropathic Establishment stands on a cliff close to the village. The Established church was rebuilt in 1894-5, when a new chancel and north aisle were erected, and the building now consists of chancel, nave north aisle and a tower 100 feet in height. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton is the principal landowner. The population of the village in 1891 was 951, and in 1881, 757, and that of the Ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,380, of whom 1,079 were in Ayrshire and 301 in Renfrewshire.
 Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Skelmorlie (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. Ayrshire added); Robert Raphael, postmaster. Deliveries, 6 & 9.30 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 7.45 & 11.20 a.m. & 3.10, 5.10 & 6.55 p.m.; Sunday, 2.30 p.m.

SORN is a parish in the north-east of the county, in the poor combination of Kyle and small debt court district of Ayr; it contains the town of Catrine (which see), and is bounded on the east by Muirkirk, on the south by Auchincloch, on the west by Mauchline, and on the north by Galston and Strathaven; its form is nearly square, measuring about six and a half miles each way. Sorn once formed part of the extensive parish of Mauchline, the parish church standing about 4 miles distant from that village. The land, originally moorland, has been improved and well enclosed, and there are fine plantations near the river Ayr, which runs through the parish from east to west. Sorn abounds with coal, limestone and ironstone. Dugald Stewart F.R.S. the late celebrated professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, was born in the neighbourhood of Catrine, 22 Nov. 1753. Sorn Constitutional Conservative Club was erected in 1892 by James Somervell esq. J.P. and contains a hall for entertainments and a small library. Sorn Castle,

STAIR is a parish and village, in the district of Kyle, and on the south or right bank of the river Ayr. It was severed from Ochiltree and constituted an independent parish in 1673. The village, about 2 miles south from Tarbolton station on the Glasgow and South Western railway and 6 miles east from Ayr, is romantically situated, and contains a parish church, some good mansions and numerous other dwellings. Stair gives the title of earl and viscount to the Dalrymple family. The surrounding country abounds with coal. Barskimming, the residence of Sir William Frederic Miller bart. is in this parish. The area comprises 5,376 acres; rateable value, £11,309; population in 1891, 1,137, and in 1891, 928.

STEVENSTON is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde, south-east of Ardrossan, its town being 1 mile east of Saltcoats station on the Caledonian railway, the greater part of which town is in this parish, extending 5 miles from north to south by 1 to 3 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is bounded north by Ardrossan, east by Irvine and Kilwinning, south and west by the firth. It derives its name from Stephen or Steve, the son of Richard, who obtained a grant of lands from Richard Morville, a constable of Scotland; the latter, a very celebrated man, died in 1189. Under this grant, Stephen settled here, and gave his patronymic designation to the place. The parish abounds in valuable seams of coal. The extensive ironworks of Ardeer were erected here by Messrs. Merry and Cunningham in 1852. There are also large works here for the manufacture of dynamite, Nobel's Explosives Co. Limited, and three large foundries. The Bank of Scotland has a sub-branch here. The Established church is a large modern building prominently situated. The old church formerly belonged to the Abbey of Kilwinning. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches. In the centre of the town is a Board school, enlarged in 1897 for 880 children. The area of the parish comprises 3,771 acres; rateable value of landward, £27,953; the population in 1891 was 6,209, which included 1,667 in the town of Saltcoats and 4,263 in the town of Stevenston, and is now (1899) about 7,005, with 1,703 in Saltcoats and 5,302 in Stevenston.

STEWARTON.

STEWARTON is a town and parish in the district of Cunninghame, and in Cunninghame poor combination, 16 miles south-west from Glasgow, 8 north from Irvine, 5½ north from Kilmarnock and 3 north-north-west from Fenwick, and is situated in a pleasant part of the county, on the banks of Annock water, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint railway. The parish, which is about 10 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, and has long been famous for its dairy produce. Stewarton, for centuries an inconsiderable and obscure village, is now a police burgh; it is lighted with gas by a company, and is governed by a senior and two junior bailies and six commissioners of police. The chief industries are carding and spinning for the carpet and bonnet trades, the manufacture of Scotch bonnets, military forage caps, hosiery and the manufacture of spindles and flyers, and bee-hives for aparies. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. District courts for the recovery of small debts are held on the first Thursday in each month, and such business as falls under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace for the parishes of Stewarton, Dunlop and Fenwick, is transacted at the same time. The Cunninghame Institution has an extensive library and reading room, besides a recreation room, all amply furnished and liberally supported by the lord of the manor. There is also attached a large and a lesser hall, several committee rooms &c. An hospital, erected and presented to the burgh by John James Kerr esq. of Robertland, was opened in 1895. The cost of the building was about £1,080. There are Established and Free churches, one each for United Presbyterians and Independents. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the last Thursday in October, for cattle, this being the largest fair for Ayrshire dairy stock in Scotland; summer fair, Monday before first Tuesday in May, for cattle, and horse fair on the Wednesday before Skeirs Thursday, and first Wednesday in May. The principal landowners are John William Herbert Cunningham esq. of Lainshaw; John James Kerr esq. of Robertland; David Provan esq. J.P. of Wardhead House, and Lieut.-Col. Charles Somerville M'Alester, of Kennox. The parish comprises 13,626 acres; rateable value, landward £21,033, burghal £7,367; the population in 1891 was 3,804, including 2,687 in the town, and in 1881 was 4,309, with 3,130 in the town.

STRAITON is a large parish and village, in Carrick district, 80 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 48 south-by-west from Glasgow, 30 north from Newton-Stewart, 26 south from Kilmarnock, 14 south-east from Ayr, 14 north-east from Girvan, 7 south-east from Maybole, 7 north-east from Dailly and 6 south-west from Dalmellington; the village is finely situated on the banks of the Girvan, and on the road leading from Glasgow to Newton-Stewart. The nearest railway station is Kilkerran, 6 miles distant, on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western line. The parish, which extends about 20 miles in length by 8 in breadth, consists for the most part of pasture land, the surface, especially in the south-east, being wild and rocky, interspersed with a number of small lakes; there is, however, considerable natural wood and some extensive plantations, and besides the Girvan and lakes, the parish is watered by the river Doon. About half a mile south of the village are the remains of an oblong entrenchment, presumed to be of Roman origin; various ancient relics have been found on the spot, including two carved vases or urns, containing ashes. Milton Lodge, the property of and occupied by Commander Edward Hunter-Blair R.N. is about a quarter of a mile from the village. Blairquhan Castle, the property of the Rev. Sir David Hunter-Blair bart. M.A. and now the residence of Samson Fox esq. is a mansion in the Tudor style, and about one mile from the village, on the road to Girvan. Genoch Lodge, three miles and a half from the village and the property of the Marquess of Ailsa, is at present tenanted by Major Sturrock as a shooting and fishing residence. The Marquess of Ailsa, A. F. M. Adam esq. the Right Hon. Sir James Ferguson bart. G.C.S.I., P.C., M.P. and the Rev. Sir David Hunter-Blair bart. are the proprietors of the land. Rateable value, £13,011; area, 49,801 acres; the population in 1891, was 1,060, and in 1881, 1,241.

Post & Telegraph Office, Straiton; Mrs. Jane Roy, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Maybole. Delivery, 11 a.m.; dispatch, 3.40 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order office is at Kirk-michael

TROON.

TROON is a town and seaport in the parish of Dundonald, 75 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-west from Glasgow, 7 south from Irvine, 9 south-west from Kilmarnock and about 8 north from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The bay is extensive, and the port also has the advantage of a secure harbour, into which vessels of great burthen can confidently enter with the wind from almost any point. There are two superior dry docks for repairing vessels, large storehouses, a ship-building yard, and a rope and soil manufactory. During 1898, five vessels, equal to 357 tons register, were registered as belonging to the port, besides 19 fishing boats, equal to 43 tons and employing 17 hands. In the general coasting trade 933 vessels entered in 1898 of 122,897 tons; cleared, 769 of 79,691 tons. In the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 517 entered, tonnage, 72,973; cleared, 666, 82,592 tonnage. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port in 1898 was—British 1,559, of 246,732 tons, and foreign 14, of 5,418 tons. The number cleared was—British 1,558, of 248,170 tonnage, and foreign 16, of 6,297 tonnage. A line of railway from the extremity of the harbour to Kilmarnock conveys immense quantities of coal, thence shipped to Ireland, France &c. This place also affords good boating and sea bathing and has become one of the most popular and healthy watering places on the west coast, so that in summer the population is nearly doubled. The town is increasing rapidly and many fine residences are being erected. The town is lighted with gas from works now belonging to the Town Commissioners, and new waterworks have been provided at a cost of £20,000. The British Linen Co.'s Bank and the Union Bank of Scotland have branches here. On Templehill is a fine building, containing reading and billiard rooms and a spacious hall, in which entertainments are given. The Unionist Club and the Post Office both occupy one building, erected in 1894. The Established church was erected in 1896, and there are Free and United Presbyterian churches and a Roman Catholic chapel. Near the town are extensive golf links, with a club house; there is also a ladies' golf course and club house. A local newspaper is published here, the "Troon Herald," on Fridays. The population of the town was in 1891, 3,315, and in 1881, 2,383; it is now (1899) about 5,000. The rateable value of the burgh is £24,145.

Barassie is a sea bathing village, on the Firth of Clyde, a mile and a half north of Troon, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway.

Loans is a village, 2 miles north-east of Troon.

BANFFSHIRE.

THIS county, which is of no great extent, is bounded on the north by the North Sea, on the south and on the east by Aberdeenshire, and on the west by the shires of Elgin and Inverness. Its form is elongated, being 50 miles in extent from north to south, with a border of very irregular outline, but varying much in width, being 15 miles wide at the southern extremity between Benavon and Cairngorm, narrowing to 6 south of Ealassaid hill, and after extending again to 18 between Drummin and Cabrach it narrows to 8 a little south of Keith, northwards of which it extends to 35 miles, which is the length of its sea coast line.

The river Deveron for a considerable distance forms the north-eastern boundary between this county and that of Aberdeen and enters the sea at Banff; and the Spey, its western, where it marches with Elgin. This district was at one time a component part of the province of Moray, which altogether forms one of the finest tracts of ground in the northern part of Scotland. On the eastern side of the Deveron, in the district of Buchan, the parish of Gamrie and some other spots of land belong to Banffshire, which both in point of size and in population ranks as the fifteenth county in Scotland, containing 405,432 acres; and having a population in 1891 of 30,748 males and 33,442 females, or a total of 64,190, against 62,736 in 1881; the number of inhabited houses being 12,707.

Soil, Surface and Climate, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil, with few exceptions, is deep loam or tenacious clay. The face of the country is agreeably diversified by an intermixture of valleys and ranges of hills, with many beautiful fertile braes, productive of the finest crops, or serviceable for the excellence of their pasture. The Strath of Glen-Avon proceeds from the forest of Glen-Avon, in a north-westerly direction, and Strath Devon to the east. Between these is Glen-Livet, from whence to the north diverges Glen Fiddich, with Glen Isla further north. The principal mountains in the county are:—Noath, 1,830; Buck, or Cabrach, 2,377; Knockhill, 2,500; Corryhabbie, 2,558; Ben Rinnus, 2,747; and Cairngorm, 4,244 feet above the level of the sea. The chief crops in 1898 were: oats, 45,714 acres; barley, 11,725; turnips, 22,093; potatoes, 1,969 and hay, 10,173; the total corn crops being 58,596 acres and green crops 25,482; while land under grass was 64,520 acres; permanent pasture 67,118 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 38,461 acres; woods and plantations, 30,955 acres. The live stock comprised in 1898:—Horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 6,684; unbroken horses, 2,229; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 13,108; other cattle, 32,405; ewes kept for breeding, 25,992; other sheep, 41,482; sows kept for breeding, 331; other pigs, 2,382. Great attention is paid to the cultivation of turnips for feeding purposes, the rearing of cattle forming for the most part the chief object of the farmer. The Aberdeenshire polled cattle and the pure short-horned are the breeds most esteemed. In many parts of the county fine flocks of sheep are to be met with, both of the Cheviot and the black-faced varieties. The fisheries are also of importance, more than a dozen towns and villages being connected, to a greater or less extent, with this industry. There were in 1898, 1,203 boats, with an aggregate tonnage of 22,051, registered at the port of Banff, and employing 3,500 men and boys regularly and 500 occasionally; and besides 39 sailing vessels = 3,656 tons. Cod, Ling, haddock, whiting, halibut, skate and flounder frequent the Firth and turbot and mackerel are occasionally caught, whilst in the season the herring yields a rich harvest to the fishermen. The curing of fish is of consequence, many persons being engaged in this branch of trade in several of the towns, in which are also extensive distilleries, Glenlivet whisky having become a famous brand. Limestone can be found beneath the surface of nearly the whole county, and at Portsoy is a fine vein of serpentine stone, called "Portsoy marble," as well as a species of granite which, when polished, exhibits the resemblance of Hebrew characters. Freestone, ironstone, marl and slate are also found in various parts. The chief articles of export are grain, fish and whisky; the salmon of the Spey and Deveron together also form an article of great consideration. The principal imports are coal, iron, timber and manures. The climate of Banffshire is precarious. In the hilly districts, all the evils of cold and rain are often felt; and as frost and snow frequently set in without any interval of good weather, the harvests are not only endangered, but at times are not finished until the end of October. The low ground of the shire, from Duffhouse to Forglan and Kinairdy (a tract of about twelve miles along the Deveron), and from Banff to Gordon Castle, including the districts of Boyne and Enzie, must be excepted, being nearly equal to the climate of Moray, and greatly surpassing most parts of the country in the fertility of the soil, the improvement of its agriculture, and the richness of its productions.

Rivers, Railways &c.—The rivers, besides the Spey, which, rising in Inverness and debouching in Elgin, only forms the western boundary of this county, are the Deveron, reaching the sea at Banff and the smaller rivers of Livet, Isla, Avon, Tervie, Rinnie, Fiddish, water of Crombie and water of Caiplauch. The Spey and Deveron furnish quantities of salmon. The principal sheet of water is Loch Avon in the extreme south of the county. The railways belong to the Great North of Scotland system, and commencing from the east run as follows: the branch from Inveramsay through Turrieff ends at Macduff; the main line from Aberdeen through Huntly, after sending a branch from Graunge Junction north-east to Banff, reaches Keith and there branches southward to Dufftown and Aberlour and goes on through Mulben to Elgin, while a coast line from this latter town to Tillynaugh Junction below Banff feeds the various ports, such as Portsoy, Cullen &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Banffshire contains twenty-two entire civil parishes, and is partly in the synod of Aberdeen and partly in that of Moray in Ross; it contains two royal burghs—Banff and Cullen; these are also contributory burghs, or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in parliament. The county returns one member. The parliamentary constituency in 1898 numbered 7,899. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £257,966.

ABERCHIRDER AND MARNOCH.

ABERCHIRDER is a village in the parish of Marnoch, with a station, named Glenbarry, on the Great North of Scotland railway, 6½ miles distant, but the nearest station is Cornhill, 5½ north-west on the same line; the village is 9 miles south-west of the river Deveron; it is in Buchan poor combination and Banff small debt court. Aberchirder was constituted a police burgh on 27th of Nov. 1883, by adoption of the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, but the affairs of the burgh are now administered under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. The parish church of Marnoch, built upwards of 100 years ago, and renovated in 1874, is a plain stone building with a belfry on the west gable and has sittings for 700 persons. A Mission Hall of the Established Church was erected in Aberchirder in 1838 and will seat 500 persons. The Episcopal church of St. Marnan, built in 1824, consists of nave, with vestry and organ chamber added in 1875; there are sittings for 150 persons. A Cottage Hospital was erected in 1892 to the memory of Miss Elizabeth Ogilvie Rose-Innes, of Netherdale Cottage, for whose bequest of £5,000 the inhabitants are much indebted. The chief landowners are the Duke of Fife K.T., P.O.; the trustees of the late John Forbes esq.; T. G. Rose-Innes, of Kinellan, Midlothian; W. T. Reid, of Ardmearie, and trustees of Chalmers Hospital. Messrs. Alexander and Francis George, of Banff and Macduff, are the proprietors of the burgh of Aberchirder. Cattle markets are held on second Tuesday in January, first and third Tuesday in March (old style), Monday before 28th May (feeling), first Monday in June, first Tuesday in August, the day before Huntly in September, the Monday before 28th Nov. (feeling) and the first Monday in December. The parish of Marnoch embraces an area of 14,954 statute acres; rateable value, landward, £10,607; burghal (Aberchirder), £1,893; population of the parish in 1881, 3,230, and in 1891, 3,006, the burgh of Aberchirder containing 1,222 of that number.

Post, Telegraph, Money Order, Telegraph Money Order, Express Delivery & Parcel Post Office, Savings Bank & Annuity & Insurance Office, Aberchirder; Mrs. Barbara Geddes, postmistress. (Letters should have S.O. Banffshire added). Deliveries, 9.30 a.m. & 1.30 p.m.; dispatches, 4.40 a.m. & 12.20 p.m.

ABERLOUR is a parish and village, founded in 1812, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village, formerly called Charlestown, created a burgh or barony in 1814 and police burgh in 1894, is about 6 miles south-west of Dufftown, where the river Lour joins the Spey; the town formerly consisted only of one long street and a large square, but other streets are now (1899) in course of formation. The Established church is a Norman structure with a tower and clock. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret of Scotland, a structure in the Early English style, was erected in 1880, at a cost of £11,000, the work having been commenced by the late Miss Macpherson Grant; the chancel screen was exhibited at the Paris Exhibition of 1862; the organ, a powerful instrument, was erected in memory of Miss Macpherson Grant; the altar is of Caen stone and green Irish marble and elevated on nine steps; the tabernacle, of wrought brass, and a massive silver sanctuary lamp were the gift of the Duke of Newcastle to commemorate his visit here in 1837; there are seven stained windows and the church affords 250 sittings; there is also a Free church. The Fleming Hall, in Queen's road, was built and opened in 1889, from a bequest by the late James Fleming esq. The Fleming Cottage Hospital was erected in 1899, at a cost of £4,000, from a similar bequest. The Orphanage here, established in 1875, is supported by voluntary contributions; this institution is for the reception of orphans and fatherless children in Scotland and elsewhere; girls are also received and trained for service, and they are looked after while earning their living, and a home made for them when out of situation or ill; there are now (1899) upwards of 300 inmates. A drinking fountain was erected in The Square in 1897, and presented to the town by Provost William McGowan, to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria. There are two branch banks in the village. The distilling of whisky is carried on extensively, the Dalhousie distillery having made large additions to their premises. Ben Rinnes, 2,755 feet above the level of the sea, is in this parish. A short distance from the village stands Aberlour House, formerly the property of Miss Macpherson Grant, but now belonging to John Ritchie Findlay esq.; it is quadrangular in form, with columns of the Grecian Doric order, and affords splendid views of the surrounding country. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in May and November (feeling). Acreage of the parish, 14,781; rateable value, £10,813; population in 1881, 1,912; in 1891, 2,072, of which the village of Aberlour contained 1011.

Craigellachie is a pleasant village, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, in the parish of and situated 2 miles north-east from Aberlour. The Spey is here crossed by an iron bridge of a single span of 150 feet, erected in 1815 from designs by Thos. Telford F.R.S. at a cost of £8,000. From the bridge a fine view of the river is obtained. The Craigellachie distillery was erected in 1890. This beautiful district is frequented by a large number of visitors during the summer season, and a commodious hotel ("The Craigellachie") was erected in 1892. The Craigellachie Auction Co. Limited hold a sale for cattle &c. at their mart every Wednesday.

ALVAH is a parish, 2½ miles south-southwest of Banff station, on the river Deveron,
 which is here crossed by a private bridge,
 erected in 1772 by the Earl of Fife, and is in the small debt court district of Banff. The parish is 6 miles long and 3 wide, for the most part fertile; the Hill of Alvah being a conspicuous landmark on this coast. The trustees of Sir George William Abercromby
 bart. (a minor), of Forglen House, Turriff, Aberdeenshire; Lieut.-Col. Frederick de
 Lemare Morison D.L., J.P. of Mounblairy, Turriff, Aberdeenshire; and the Duke of Fife K.T., D.L. are the principal landowners. Acreage of parish (including the detached portion of King Edward), 11,488;

rateable value, £10,153; population in 1891,

BANFF.

BANFF is a royal burgh, the capital of the county and head of a parish, 155 miles north-by-east of Lndinburg, 80 east of Inverness, 46 north-by-west of Aberdeen, 35 east of Elgin, 25 east-by-north of Fochabera, 13 east of Cullen and 8 east-by-south of Portsoy, on the coast of the North Sea, pleasantly situated on the side of a hill overlooking the west bank of the Deveron and its confluence with the sea. The river Deveron, which abounds with salmon, is here crossed by a substantially-constructed bridge of seven arches, which gives access to the seaport of Macduff and to the adjoining county of Aberdeen, via Turriff. A branch railway of the Great North of Scotland line, from the west by Keith and Strathisla, terminates in Banff, and one from the south by way of Turriff, terminating at Macduff, has a station at the end of Banff bridge. This town was part of the ancient thanedom of Boin, whence the name seems to be derived, for in some old charters it is written Boinneff and Baineffe. Tradition says it was founded by Malcolm Canmore in 1163, and it was erected into a royal burgh in 1372 by Robert II. who endowed it with the same privileges and placed it on the same footing as Aberdeen; it comprises several well-built streets. The modern town house is surmounted by an elegant spire. A drinking fountain was presented in memory of Walter Biggar esq. and Mrs. Ann Duff, his wife. The Museum and Free Library was formed under the "Public Libraries Act, 1855" (18 and 19 Vict. c. 70), and is located in the Town Hall buildings; the library comprises 3,000 volumes, and both departments are controlled by a committee consisting of members of the town council and ratepayers; there is also a Law Library. The Town and County Club was opened in September, 1881.

The inner harbour of Banff is secure, but has not a great depth of water; the outer basin, which is defended by a pier and breakwater, has a greater depth, and affords very good shelter. A Morton's patent slip apparatus is here fitted up. The port, which extends from Penan to Garmouth, stands sixth in the list of Scotch ports as regards tonnage of sailing ships. Shipping.—The number of vessels (all sailing ships) registered at this port Dec. 31, 1898, was 39, with a tonnage of 3,689. In 1898 the entries inwards were 449 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 43,772, consisting of 353 with cargoes and 68 in ballast coastwise; total, 421; equal, 39,013 tons; and 26 with cargoes and 18 in ballast from foreign ports; total 44; equal, 7,004 tons. The vessels cleared were 450, aggregate tonnage 43,240, and consisting of 193 with cargoes and 204 in ballast coastwise; total, 397; equal, 36,682 tons; and 26 with cargoes and 18 in ballast to foreign ports; total, 44; equal, 7,004 tons.

In the general coasting trade 421 vessels entered of 39,013 tons, and 397 cleared of 36,682 tons.

The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," at Banff, Dec. 31, 1898, was 1,023, of 22,051 tons, employing 6,972 men and boys. The chief trade is of an export nature, and comprises salmon, herring and other fish. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters B. F. The town is governed by a provost, three bailies and five councillors. The town council are also commissioners under the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892." Banff forms part of the Elgin parliamentary district of burghs, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member to parliament. A small debt court is held each Tuesday during the session.

The Established church here is a neat modern building with a tower and spire. There is also the Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1834; a Free church, and others for United Presbyterians, Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists. Banff Academy, now the Burgh school, has a separate infants' department, called the Ramsay school. There is also a boarding establishment for young ladies. Chalmers' Hospital was founded in 1861, in terms of a bequest by the late Alexander Chalmers, of Clunie, long a merchant in this town, and is for the support, maintenance, cure and relief of destitute, sick and diseased persons of both sexes, born, domiciled and resident in any town or parish in the county of Banff; the inhabitants whereof shall make collections at their respective parish churches in aid of the funds of the hospital. It is adapted for 50 patients, with the requisite buildings for officials and attendants. A permanent revenue for the support of the hospital is derived from the rental of the lands of Clunie and Knockorth. A Cholera and Small Pox Hospital has also been erected on a beautiful site on the Bracheads to the west of the town. The weekly corn and provision markets are held on Friday; Brandon fair on the last Fridays in May and November. There are five branch banks, a distillery, brewery, saw mill and an iron foundry. Ship and boat building, rope and sail making and tanning are also carried on. The "Fife Arms," is the principal hotel. A newspaper, the "Banffshire Journal," is published in the town on Tuesdays. From the bridge a fine view is obtained of Duff House, the seat of the Duke of Fife K.T., D.L.; this elegant mansion is partly in the Corinthian and partly in the Composite style, and the front is elaborately decorated with sculpture; the interior contains an extensive collection of paintings by foreign and British artists. Troup House is the residence of Francis Alexander Garden esq. D.L., J.P. A castle of considerable strength and magnitude formerly stood here, and vestiges remain of part of the ancient wall, the moat, and traces of the entrenchments, but a modern mansion now occupies part of the site. Edward I. visited Banff Castle on Sunday, the 22nd of July, 1296, after Balm, King of Scotland, had surrendered to Edward, at Montrose, on the 7th July. After he had defeated Wallace at the battle of Falkirk, Edward marched north and visited Banff Castle a second time, 4th Sept. 1298, and the public records show that it was the last stronghold possessed by the English north of the Grampians. The Castle thereafter became a constabulary, the residence of the king's representative or constable, who exercised judicial authority in the county. Dr. James Sharp, the celebrated Archbishop of St. Andrews, was born in Banff Castle in May, 1613. Acreage of the parish, 6,217; rateable value, £19,260; i.e., burghal, £12,991 Os. 7d.; landward, £6,269 17s. 11d.; in 1891 the burgh of Banff had a population of 3,871 and the parish 4,763.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 1,109.

BOTRIPHONIE is a parish, in the presbytery of Strathgogie, with a station at Drummuir on the Great North of Scotland railway; there is also a station at Anchin-dachy on the same railway, at the east end of the parish, about 3 miles from Keith. The parish extends across the county, from Aberdeenshire on the east to Elginshire on the west, having an average breadth of about 3 miles. The soil for the most part is arable, and, generally speaking, fertile. The river Isla rises in Loch Park. Drummuir Castle is the seat of Thomas Duff Gordon-Duff esq. D.L., J.P. who is the principal landowner. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, erected in 1820 to seat 400 persons, and a Free church. A good trade in lime is carried on by Mr. Thomas Robertson, of the Drummuir Lime Works. The area is 9,459 acres; rateable value, £5,337. Population in 1881, 696, and in 1891, 729.

Post Office; Alexander Sutherland, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Keith. Deliveries, 8.40 a.m. & 11.40 a.m.; dispatches, 1 & 6.30 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Keith, 5 miles distant

BOYNDIE, see WHITEHILLS.

BUCKIE, originally established as a fishing village a little more than a century ago, has now grown to the largest, and, in many respects, the most important town in the county of Banff, and has been constituted a police burgh. The Great North of Scotland and Highland Railway Companies have each stations here. It is in the parish of Rathven, 20 miles west from Banff, 6 west from Cullen and 7 east from Forchabers. In the beginning of 1888 the General Police Act was adopted, and Easter Buckie, or Buckie proper, and Buckpool are both included in the police burgh of Buckie. The town is divided by the burn, Buckie proper, of which the trustees of the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, are the superiors, lying on the east, and Buckpool, of which Sir Robert G. Gordon bart. of Letterfourie, is superior, on the west of the said burn. The tenure under which property is held is mainly feu right. The town is possessed of two harbours, that at Buckpool, constructed about 1862, at a cost of £18,000; and the Cluny harbour, begun in 1874 and completed at the sole expense of the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, at an expense of about £70,000; D. Cunningham esq. C.E. Dundee, was the engineer. As might be expected from the origin of the town, and also its natural capabilities, fishing is the principal trade. The Buckie fishing district comprises the neighbouring stations on the coast; for boats on register see Banff. A number of curing stations and other stores have been erected by the Cluny Trustees. Steam service is carried on from Leith and Aberdeen to Buckie. In 1893 Sir Robert G. Gordon gave up his right, under certain conditions, to a body of 13 Harbour Commissioners, and in that year a Provisional Order was passed by the Board of Trade, and confirmed by Act of Parliament, by which it is provided that the harbour shall be very considerably extended and improved. An inside jetty was a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A small debt court is held here. The Fish Mart, a large building immediately facing the Cluny harbour, was erected in 1899 at a cost of about £2,000, and contains a large auction room and numerous offices. The Roman Catholic church is an edifice with two spires, the Established church has a tower, the Free and Episcopalian chapels both have spires, and there is also a United Presbyterian church. The Masonic and Literary Institute, in Cluny place, opened in 1891, was erected at a cost of about £2,000; it contains a council room, reading room, library, museum, and billiard room &c. There are two good hotels in the town. The North of Scotland Bank Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank Limited have branches here. Besides the fish curing trade there are other industries, including net and rope factories and steam saw mills, and at Inchgower is a large distillery, of which Messrs. Alexander Wilson and Co. are the proprietors. In June, 1893, a public park was presented to the town by Lady Gordon Cathcart. Cairnfield House, the seat of Mrs. Gordon, and Letterfourie, the seat of Sir Robert G. Gordon bart. D.L., J.P. are in the vicinity, the latter being the principal landowner. A newspaper, "The Banffshire Advertiser," is published on Thursdays. Rateable value, £13,118; population in 1891, 5,680.

CABRACH is a parish, part of which was formerly in the county of Aberdeen, but it is now wholly included in that of Banff, and extends in length 8 miles by about 5 in breadth and is about 10 miles south-east from Dufftown station on the Great North of Scotland railway and 12 south-west from Kinethmont station on the Inverurie and Huntly branch of the same railway; it is distant from Aberdeen 45 miles west-north-west and from Huntly 18 south-west. The Buck of Cabrach, a hill 2,368 feet in height, is in this parish. The historic hamlet of Aldivalloch is situated in this parish. In the parish is an Established church seating about 300 persons, with registers dating from 1731. The United Presbyterian church was erected about 1839 and has sittings for 200 persons; a tablet was erected in 1876 in memory of James Stewart, of Lesmurdie and Newmill, The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. P.C.; W. J. Grant esq. of Beldorney, and Lieut.-Col. Young Leslie are the principal landowners. The Deveron and the Fiddich water this parish. The mountains abound with game. Acreage, 34,163; rateable value, £3,449; population in 1881, 682, and in 1891, 646.

Post Office, Upper Cabrach; Mrs. Mary Law, sub-postmistress. Letters arrive from Gartly R.S.O. (Letters should have "Gartly R.S.O. Aberdeenshire" added.) Delivery, 1.40 p.m.; dispatch, 7 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Lumsden, 8 miles distant

CULLEN is a royal burgh, a maritime town and the capital of the parish of its name, 191 miles north-north-east of Edinburgh, 22 east of Elgin, 13 north-east of Fochabers, 14 west of Banff and 6 west of Portsoy. The harbour was erected in 1819, at a cost of £4,000, and has lately undergone extensive improvements. The burgh is situated on a commanding eminence overlooking the Moray Frith. Formerly it consisted of two distinct towns, the Sea Town and the Old Town, but between 1820-30 the latter was wholly removed from its site adjacent to Cullen House to its present position, the church alone remaining. It has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and on the west the line is carried over the town by a series of arches which terminate in a viaduct of eight arches between 70 and 80 feet high, spanning the mouth of Cullen burn, which separates the parishes of Cullen and Rathven. This burgh, together with Banff, Elgin, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead, form the Elgin district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament.

A justice of the peace small debt court is held on the first Tuesday in every month. The acting magistrates are the provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The Established church is a pre-Reformation building of much interest, with a history dating back upwards of six centuries: it contains numerous ancient monuments and inscriptions in an excellent state of preservation:

on the north side is an ambury, with an inscription from the Vulgate. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, the former built in 1844 and the latter in 1882. In 1876 a Board school was erected at a cost of £2,500. There is a public news-room and library in the town, and two good hotels. A fair is held on the third Friday in May. The curing and exportation of fish is carried on and there is a brewery. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited.

The Dowager Countess of Seafeld, of Castle Grant, Morayshire, is the principal landowner. Cullen House, the property of the Dowager Countess of Seafeld, is open to the public on Tuesdays and Fridays; it is an ancient and irregular edifice, but the interior is furnished in the modern style, and adorned with paintings by eminent masters: Cullen stream passes under the south walls, and on the opposite side are the park and pleasure grounds, which are connected with the house by an elegant arch of 84 feet span. Not far distant once stood the castle in which Elizabeth (de Burgh), queen of Robert Bruce, died, 26 Oct. 1327. An eminence, called Castle Hill, at the western extremity of the town, is the site of an ancient fortification, which must formerly have been a place of great strength; an almost perpendicular rock renders it inaccessible from the north, and it is surrounded in every other direction by a deep ditch. Carvings in stone of the national and other arms, with two small bronze cannon of Queen Mary's time, still remain on the Castle Hill. In the centre of the town stands a cross bearing figures of the Virgin and Child; the shaft dates from the 17th century; the main part of the erection is of recent date. The ruins of Findlater Castle, a building of great antiquity, are situated about 2 miles east of Cullen. The area of the parish of Cullen is 881 acres; rateable value, landward £1,406, burghal £4,488; the population in 1881 was 2,236, and in 1891, 2,319, of which the town contained 2,100. The number of voters on the parliamentary register in 1898 was 233.

DUFFTOWN AND MORTLACH.

DUFFTOWN, a village, founded in 1817, was created a police burgh under the "General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act" in 1863. The burgh is in the parish of Mordlach and is 118 miles north of Edinburgh, 52 north-west of Aberdeen, 30 south-west of Banff, 14 north-east of Inveravon, 10 south-west of Keith and 8 south-east of Aberlour, situated a short way to the north of the old decayed hamlet of Mortlach, near the junction of the Dullan and the Fiddoch waters. It has a station on the Elgin and Keith branch line of the Great North of Scotland railway, via Rothes and Craigellachie Junction. This place has been much improved by its patrons, the Duke of Fife and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the former having in 1881 carried out a thorough system of drainage at a cost of about £700. The town comprises a central open square from which streets diverge each side. In the centre of the square stands a large tower of considerable height, with turrets at the corners and surmounted by a heltry containing one bell and a clock with four dials, which, in commemoration of Her Majesty's Jubilee, were converted into illuminated dials at a cost of about £70: it was formerly used as a gaol but is now (1899) used as the burgh chambers and court house, and includes a dwelling place for the burgh officer. During the summer months the burgh is much frequented by visitors, on account of its healthy situation and the beautiful scenery in and around its vicinity. There are two hotels, viz. the Fife Arms and the Commercial, the former is an establishment of long standing. An extensive trade in lime is carried on by Mr. James Kemp, Parkmore Lime Works, and there are seven distilleries. There are two branch banks, viz. the Town and County Bank Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. A commodious Masonic Hall was built in 1887, which is also used for meetings &c. A sheriff court for small debt cases is held four times a year, in January, April, July and October, as fixed by the sheriff. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, which is of very ancient date, restored in 1877 at a cost of £1,500; in 1888 a fine organ was erected at a cost of £700: the building has three fine lancet windows in the east end, and contains several interesting monuments, one being erected in 1420 in memory of a chamberlain of Balvenie Castle, another to a John Gordon, of Brodland, who died in 1433 at Buchromb, also one at the end of the 17th century, interesting as being the monument of an ancestor of the present Duke of Fife: it is asserted that this church was the cathedral of the first Bishopric of Scotland, and that the three bishops of this see were buried here, the bishopric being afterwards transferred to Aberdeen. The Free church was enlarged and remodelled in 1891, when a tower and spire were added, and a stained window has been presented by Lord Mount Stephen. The Episcopal church, erected in 1880 by Canon Jupp, of Aberlour, in memory of his mother, is an edifice in the Gothic style and will seat 135 persons; the circular east window is stained. There is also a Roman Catholic church. The Stephen Cottage Hospital was founded in 1889, at a cost of £2,500, by Lord Mount Stephen, of Grand Metis, Canada, and Brocket Hall, Hatfield, Herts, who was born at Dufftown in 1829; it is beautifully equipped and contains 10 beds and one cot; the endowment fund is £5,500, and it is open to the inhabitants of Mortlach and Glenrinnies. The Mortlach Parish Hall, opened in 1894, at a cost of £1,600, is vested in the kirk session of the parish church, and comprises a public reading room and library: the hall itself will hold 700 people. Mortlach is famous as the scene of the signal victory gained over the Danes by Malcolm II. in 1010, which was fought a few hundred yards south-west of Balvenie Castle. The district also possesses the ruins of Auchindunn Castle and Balvenie Castle. The Dufftown Auction Co. Limited hold a sale for cattle &c. at their mart every Thursday, and feeing markets are held the third Wednesday in May, the second Wednesday in July and the third Wednesday in November. The area of Mortlach parish is 34,184 acres; rateable value, landward, £10,582; burghal (Dufftown), £5,002; population of the parish in 1881, 2,934, and in 1891, 2,754, of which Dufftown contained 1,469.

GLENRINNES is a quoad sacra parish, formed in 1855; it is about 5 miles in length by 2½ in breadth, and comprises part of Morthoch and part of Aberlour, and is also a registration district. Dufftown, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and about 6 miles north-east, is the nearest railway station, and Aberlour, on the Boat of Garten branch of the same railway, is about 6½ miles north-west. Ben Rinnes, a hill 2,765 feet in height, is partly in this parish and partly in the parishes of Aberlour and Inveravon. The Established church, erected in 1812, and rebuilt in 1883 at a cost of £1,400, stands in about the centre of the parish, 5½ miles from Dufftown, and will seat 220 persons. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., P.C. and James Eadie esq. are the principal landowners. Rateable value, £1,648; population in 1881, 401, and in 1891, 374.

INVERKETHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, about 10 miles south of Banff, lies on the right or south bank of the Deveron, along which it extends about 6 miles, and measures from 1 to 4 miles in breadth. Marneck bounds
 it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south and Rothiemay
 on the west. The district is chiefly hilly.
 It is in Banff small debt court. Turriff and Huntly, on the Inveramsay and Macduff
 and the Keith and Inveramsay branches of the Great North of Scotland railway, are the nearest railway stations, both being 9 miles distant. The parish church, built in 1881
 on the old site, is a plain edifice of stone
 with a belfry on the east side, and was erected from designs by Messrs. Reid, architects, Elgin; there are sittings for 450 persons. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Forbes esq. of Haddo, and Thomas G. Rose-Innes esq. of Kinellan, Midlothian. Acreage, 7,641; rate-
 able value, £5,419; population in 1881, 909,
 and in 1891, 826.

KEITH is a market and post town and parish, the latter chiefly in the county of Banff, but extending into that of Elgin. The town is 170 miles north of Edinburgh, 22 south-west of Banff, 17 east-south-east of Elgin, 50 north-east of Aberdeen, 60 east of Inverness, 8 south-east of Fochabers, 17 south-south-west of Portsoy and 12 south of Cullen, situate on the banks of the Isla, in the centre of an amputeatre of hills. The Great North of Scotland railway makes a centre of this town, coming from Aberdeen via Huntly and continuing on by Craigelachie Junction to Elgin and Lossiemouth in the north-west and Boat of Garten in the south, with a branch running north-east from Keith to Portsoy (where it connects with the coast line) and Banff; while the Highland railway runs via Mulhen to Elgin, Forbes and Nairn (with branches to Fochabers and Burghead), and has also a line from Keith to Portessie. Keith is divided into three distinct towns, namely, Old Keith, New Keith and Fife Keith; the latter, erected by the Earl of Fife, is separated from Old and New Keith by the Isla. The old town has declined considerably since the establishment of the new. New Keith was begun about the year 1750 by the Earl of Findlater, upon a barren tract of land, fenced off in tenements of 15 yards by 60. It is formed on a regular plan of three parallel streets and a square; in the principal street there are many good shops and hotels. There are no authentic documents to record the origin of Old Keith, but it has certainly existed for over six centuries, and was at one time the county town. The Court of Registry possessed an extensive jurisdiction, including four pleas of the Crown. The last criminal hanged was Gilbert Dallachy, condemned for theft, about 1690. On the banks of the Isla, a little below the town, are the ruins of a castle, which belonged to the Opliant family. The Suit-Boll-Croft, on the banks of the Isla, near Keith, was the gathering-place of the Clan Gordon; Suttrall House, Fife Keith, now marks the gathering-place. Keith was the birth-place in 1710 of James Ferguson F.R.S. the astronomer. On the Caird's Hill are Druidical remains, and near these several tumuli, which have been opened and found to contain various sepulchral relics. A sheriff court for small debt and debt recovery cases, and for procs in ordinary actions and other business, is held every alternate month in the Insitute Hall. The Established church, opened in 1819, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,800. The Episcopalians, Free Church, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. The Turner Memorial Cottage Hospital is a building of stone, erected in 1880 at the cost of £1,200, and endowed with £3,000 from the residue of the late James Turner M.D. of this town; it contains 18 beds and in 1893 an extension for five additional beds was provided by the late G. Kynoch esq. of Isla Bank. In Reidhaven square stands a drinking fountain of polished granite, erected in 1885 to the memory of James Taylor esq. M.D. of this place, by his fellow townemen. The Institute, erected in 1886, having been destroyed by fire, was rebuilt in 1889; various societies have their offices and hold meetings here. The Public Reading Room and Library is supplied with the principal daily papers and leading periodicals, and has a chess room attached. The Police Station, in Turner street, was erected in 1893 and has attached dwellings for officers. Markets are held on the first and third Saturday in each month, except June and September, when they are held on the third Wednesday, and feeing markets in March, May, July (harvest) and November. The horse market in September is one of the largest in the north. The market stance is at the south end of the town, and is of considerable extent. The extensive manufactory belonging to Messrs. G. and G. Kynoch, for the production of Scotch tweeds, gives employment to a considerable number of hands. In addition there are large flour and meal mills, mature manufactories, two extensive distilleries, an agricultural implement manufactory and a brewery in the old town. Branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited are maintained in the town, the latter having also a branch in Fife Keith. Auchinokart House, the seat of William F. D. Steuart esq. is situated in the parish. The Duke of Fife K.T. the Countess of Seafield and William F. D. Steuart esq. are owners of the manor and the principal landowners. The "Banffshire Herald" is published here. The parish, which embraces an area of 18,195 statute acres, rateable value £26,322, contained in 1881 a population of 6,396, and in 1891, 6,628, of which the town contained 4,622.

Newmill is a village in the parish of Keith, 1½ miles from that town, and with the neighbouring district was erected into a quoad sacra parish in 1867. A church and manse in connection with the Establishment were built in 1870; and there is also a Free Church Mission Hall. Population in 1881, 651, and in 1891, 1,421.

KIRKMICHAEL,

AND THE VILLAGE OF TOMINTOUL.

KIRKMICHAEL is a large parish, occupying the south-western extremity of the county from beyond the mountain of Cairngorm to near the confluence of the Livet with the Avon, a distance of 26 miles by a breadth of from 3 to 6 miles, and is 12 miles from Abernethy station, on the North British railway. The Duke of Richmond K.G., P.C. and Col. John Gordon Smith J.P. of Delnabb, are heritors and the principal landowners. Tomintoul is the highest village in Scotland, being 1,160 feet above the level of the sea; it is 15½ miles from Ballindalloch station on the Great North of Scotland railway by coach, 15 from Grantown on Spey and 20 from Balmoral. The parish church is in this village and there is also another Established church and Free and Roman Catholic churches. There are two excellent hotels in the village, the Richmond Arms and the Gordon Arms; both have been rebuilt and afford good accommodation for tourists and visitors. The Town and County Bank Limited have a branch here. The area of the parish is 75,750 acres; rateable value, £4,498; the population of the parish of Kirkmichael was, by the return for 1881, 1,073, and in 1891, 1,043; of this number Tomintoul contained 695.

 Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Tomintoul; William Meldrum, postmaster. Letters from all parts arrive (by mail coach from Ballindalloch R.S.O. carrying passengers) at 2.55 p.m. and are dispatched at 5.45 a.m.
 Sub-Post Office, Bridge of Avon; Mrs. Margaret Grant, postmistress. Letters received through Ballindalloch R.S.O. Delivery, 3.55 p.m.; despatch, 5.20 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Tomintoul, 2 miles distant

MACDUFF,

CROVIE, AND THE PARISH OF GAMRIE.

MACDUFF is a seaport town in the parish of Gamrie, about a mile east from the town of Banff, on the opposite side of the Deveron river, and on the declivity of a hill descending towards the shore of the North Sea, and has a station on the Turriff and Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway; in the small debt court district of Banff. The town, which forms a portion of the parliamentary burgh of Banff, is governed by a provost, bailies and six councillors, and has risen, since the early part of the 18th century, from being little more than the hutage of a few fishermen to a place of respectable size and trade. It is built on the property of the Duke of Fife K.T. whose seat is in the neighbourhood, and is indebted for its chief improvements and prosperity to James, 2nd Earl of Fife, through whose influence it was created a burgh of barony by George III. in 1783, when its name was altered from Donn to Macduff, and from that period has continued to increase in extent and consequence. The church occupies a conspicuous position on an eminence, and the Duke of Fife has ornamented its precincts with a highly effective cross. The Murray institution is a school for poor children of both sexes, founded in 1849 by a Mr. Murray, of London, a canvas manufacturer and a native of Macduff: this school has been transferred to the School board by virtue of a scheme under the provision of the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Act, which also provides for the administration of the funds, now amounting to about £6,000. The Town Hall was built at a cost of £2,100. Macduff harbour is now considered one of the best on the Moray Frith, having been much improved by the Duke of Fife; as a station for the herring fishery, it is exceedingly valuable, large quantities of that fish being shipped from this port: several vessels trade with the Baltic, the number of fishing boats (which are registered under Banff) is very considerable, and there are various fish curing establishments. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Lim. have branches here. The greater portion of the grain produced for twenty miles east of Macduff is exported hence, as are salmon, cod and herring, and the country inland is supplied with coal, bone manure and lime, a manure factory being established here. Population of Macduff in 1881, 3,541, and in 1891, 4,164.

The parish of Gamrie extends along the coast, which is precipitous and indented with caverns, about 9 miles, by an average breadth of about 2½. The land is partly under tillage and partly in pasture. Acreage, 17,293; rateable value, £22,124; population of the whole parish in 1891, 7,003.

Crovie is a small fishing village in the parish of Gamrie, situated one mile east of Gardenstown. Macduff is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant. Population in 1891, 298.

PORTSOY AND FORDYCE.

PORTSOY is a seaport in the parish of Fordyce, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 173 miles north of Edinburgh, 62 east-by-north of Inverness, 18 east-north-east of Pochobera and 8 west-by-north of Banff, and situated on a tongue of land projecting into the North Sea at the head of one of those little bays by which this part of the coast is in many places indented. It was erected into a burgh of barony about the 16th century by the Baron of Boyns, whose descendants embracing the fortunes of the Pretender in 1715 forfeited their lands to the Crown, and these were subsequently granted to the Earl of Find-

later and Seafeld, and are still in the possession of that family. The town is small and irregularly built, but, as a port, is in a thriving condition. The point of land on which it stands forms a safe harbour, sufficiently deep for vessels of upwards of 100 tons burthen. The town adopted the General Police and Improvements Act on October 8th, 1859, the number of commissioners being nine, and is in the Banff small debt court district.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, erected in 1816, at a cost of £2,000, and restored in 1851; a Free church, built in 1844, at an expense of £1,800, and rebuilt in 1871; an Episcopal church, constructed in 1840, at an expenditure of £2,480; a United Presbyterian church, built in 1866, at a cost of £630; and a church for Roman Catholics, erected in 1828. Board schools were built in 1877, costing £2,848, and in 1887 an additional sum of £497 was expended on them. There is a Christian Institute in the town, in connection with which is a library of about 1,600 volumes, available to the members free and to the community at a low charge. The port, besides the proceeds of the herring fishery, which has been greatly extended of late years, has a considerable trade in the exportation of grain and the importation of coal. Fish curing and distilling are prominent industries. The stone raised from the quarries of this district and called "Portsoy marble" is a beautiful mixture of red, green and white, and is wrought into tea cups, vases and small ornaments; chimney-pieces are also made from it. Some singular specimens of schist and a species of asbestos of a greenish hue are met with in this neighbourhood; but the most remarkable mineral production is a granite of a buff or flesh colour, which is not found elsewhere except in Arabia. This district also abounds with excellent limestone. The Dowager Countess of Seafeld, of Castle Grant, Morayshire, is the principal landowner. The extensive ruins of the old castles of Boyne and Pindlar, lying to the east and west of Portsoy, possess great attractions for the antiquary and pleasure seeker. A weekly newspaper, "The Banffshire Reporter," is published here every Wednesday; rateable value, burghal (Portsoy), £5,299; population in 1891, 2,061 in Portsoy.

Station, Tillynaught Junction, William Pearsythe, station manager

PORTDYCE is a parish of great antiquity, about 8 miles west of Banff, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway; the parish is in the small debt court district of Banff. There are Established and Free churches, the first named built in 1806 and the latter in 1843. Large Board schools were erected in 1881-82, at an expense of £1,839, at which there are a number of bursaries, administered by the governors of the County of Banff Bursary Fund and tenable by boys for five years, with four years in addition at Aberdeen University. At what was formerly the old parochial school the late Sir James Clark bart. physician in ordinary to Her Majesty, and the late John Forbes esq. physician extraordinary to H.R.H. the Prince Consort, received the early part of their education. A large castellated building, standing on the east side of The Square, and bearing the date of 1592, originally belonged to the Durn family, but is now the property of the Grant family, Earls of Seafeld. Acreage of the parish, 17,198; rateable value, landward, £16,446; population in 1881, 4,289, and in 1891, 4,268, of which Portsoy contained 2,061.

Sandend is a small fishing village in this parish, situated about 3 miles west of Portsoy. The nearest station is at Glassaugh, about a mile distant from the village of Fordyce and the same from Sandend, on the Great North of Scotland railway.

Post Office, Fordyce; William Thomson, postmaster. Letters received through Portsoy R.S.O. which is also the nearest money order office. Glassaugh Station is the nearest telegraph office. Delivery, 8.25 a.m.; dispatches, 8.20 a.m. & 12.35 p.m.

RATHVEN, a parish, extends about 10 miles along the coast of the Moray Frith by
from 3 to 5 in breadth, with a station
on the Keith and Portessie branch of the Highland railway. The greater portion of the land is hilly, but the more level parts
near the sea are arable and fertile, being greatly enriched by sea manure, and in some parts there are thriving plantations: it is within Buckie small debt court district.
Throughout the district the supply of limestone, sandstone and slate is abundant,
and there are numerous cañons. Acreage, 23,166; rateable value, £38,967; the population of the entire parish of Rathven in 1881 was 11,140, and in 1891, 12,925.

WHITEHILLS AND BOYNDIE.

WHITEHILLS is a village in the parish of Boyndie, 2½ miles west-north-west of Banff,
chiefly inhabited by fishermen, and is reached
by rail to Ladybridge or by omnibus from Banff. A harbour is now (1899) in course of construction here, at an estimated cost
of £10,000, for the Banff fishing boats.

Boyndie parish is 2½ miles south-west from Banff, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and is 5 miles long by 2 wide, in the small debt cont district of Banff. The Banffshire Lunatic Asylum at Ladybridge,
opened in May, 1865, and the interesting
ruins of Boyne Castle are also in this parish.
Ladybridge is a station on the Tillynaught
and Banff branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, distant 1½ miles from Whitehills. Acreage of Boyndie parish,
6,945; rateable value, £8,672; population in 1891, of the parish, 2,113, of Whitehills,
1,097.

The Duke of Fife K.T., the Dowager
Countess of Seafield, of Castle Grant, Morayshire, and the Banff Lunacy Board
are the heritors.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED,

WITH SPITAL, TWEEDMOUTH AND SCREMERSTON.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED (so denominated to distinguish it from North Berwick, in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England) is a county of itself (so constituted by 6 and 7 Wm. IV. c. 103), a municipal borough and seaport, union and market town, and head of a county court district, 334 miles north-by-west from London, 64 north-by-west from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 49 north from Morpeth; from the city of Edinburgh it is distant 58 miles south-east (by rail), and from Glasgow 103 east-by-south; it is in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of the county of Northumberland for parliamentary purposes, in the Northumberland and Islandshire petty sessional division, rural deanery of Northam, archdeaconry of Lindisfarne and diocese of Newcastle. It is a town of considerable importance, of Saxon or Teutonic origin. The etymology of its name is as doubtful as the period of its establishment is obscure. Maitland, the historian of Edinburgh, entered into a dissertation to prove that the title was transferred by the Saxon founders from a town of note of the same name in their own country—in the like manner as European emigrants designate cities and towns on the continent of America; others, and among them Camden, allege that the word Berwick is deduced from "Barwica," signifying "a village belonging to a manor;" while Leland concludes it to be a shortened form of "Aberwic," from the Cymric aber, the mouth of a river, and the Scandinavian wick, a creek or station for ships. Berwick was fortified and defended by a garrison at a very remote period of British history; it became the chief town of the district, and was the centre, on various occasions, of many important transactions. The town stands on a gentle declivity on the north side of the river Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that stream empties itself into Berwick bay, and is said to have been of importance as a barrier town in the 8th and 9th centuries. Prior to the year 1551 Berwick was alternately in the hands of the English and Scotch, but in pursuance of a treaty effected in that year between Edw. VI. and Mary, Queen of Scots, it was erected into a free burgh or distinct liberty, in some measure independent of either kingdom, having a small district attached to it, called "Berwick bounds," stretching about three miles north, and the like distance up the Tweed, and it is described as a large and populous town so early as the reign of David I. of Scotland (1124-53). It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some ages, and was subsequently held by the Danes. Malcolm II. of Scotland having defeated Eadulf Cudel, Earl of Northumbria, in the year 1018, became possessed of all the Lothians down to the Tweed, after which time Berwick remained in Scotch hands till the reign of Henry II. when it was delivered up to the English as security for the fulfilment of a treaty made in Dec. 1174, between William I. of Scotland, who, having joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland, and as a security he was forced to deliver up the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal forts of Scotland. In 1291, 3 Aug. commissioners from both kingdoms, 104 in number, assembled at Berwick to determine the respective claims of Robert Bruce and John Balliol to the Scottish crown, when, after numerous conferences, on the 14th Nov. the king appointed John Balliol successor to the crown.

After the battle of Halidon Hill (1333) the town surrendered to the English, though considered a part of Scotland, and because of its peculiar position has been since repeatedly mentioned in Acts of Parliament affecting England and Wales.

Berwick was but little affected by the conflicts of the Houses of York and Lancaster; on the accession of James VI. of Scotland to the English crown, he made his state entry into England from this town, the importance of which, as a border town, thenceforward declined. Before the Civil war, an agreement, known as "The Pacification of Berwick," was concluded here 17 June, 1639, between Charles I. and 5 Scottish commissioners, for the disbandment of their respective forces, and during the progress of the contest, the town maintained for the most part a neutral attitude. In the risings of 1716 and 1745, the populace sided with the English. Her present Majesty the Queen visited the town on the opening of the railway viaduct, 29 Aug. 1850.

The town is surrounded by regular fortifications, the old line of which extended 2 miles 282 yards; the present walls, built chiefly in 1560, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, are only about one mile and a third in length, and at the present time the ramparts, which are in the custody of the Corporation, form an excellent promenade entirely round the town. The ancient castle, of which only the western curtain with its two towers remains, occupied a considerable eminence to the north-east of the town, and must have been of great strength. The modern town, well and regularly built, is united to Tweedmouth by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of fifteen spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge is 1,164 feet, and its width is 17 feet. It was commenced in 1610, in the reign of James I. and finished in 1634, in the reign of Charles I. at a total cost of about £15,000, and is now lighted with gas. About a quarter of a mile higher up the river is the railway viaduct, known as the "Royal Border Bridge," designed by the late Mr. Robert Stephenson and Mr. T. E. Harrison, civil engineers, and opened by Her Majesty and the late Prince Albert on the 29th August, 1850, the total cost being £184,143. This magnificent structure spans the broad valley of the Tweed, and completes an important link in the chain of railway communication between London and Edinburgh by the north-east coast. It forms the northern extremity of the North-Eastern Railway; and in magnitude of construction and grandeur of design is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable architectural achievements of modern times. The foundation stone of this noble structure was laid on the 15th May, 1847, without any public ceremony. The viaduct consists of 28 circular arches, each 61 feet 6 inches span, springing from lofty piers 8 feet 6 inches broad at the narrowest point. One half of the arches span the river—here a broad and beautiful stream—and the remainder are built on the neighbouring land south of the Tweed. The total length of the bridge is 2,152 feet, and its greatest height from the bed of the river 138 feet 6 inches, including the parapets; its breadth between the parapets is 26 feet, allowing a double line of rails to be laid, and the greatest depth of water at high tide is 23 feet. The viaduct is built entirely of stone, with the exception of the inner part of the arches, which is brick laid in cement. The large embankment at the south end of the bridge, five-eighths of a mile in length, and in some places 60 feet high, completes the junction of Tweedmouth with Berwick, and at each of these places there are passenger and goods stations. The pier, begun in 1810 and finished in 1821 at a cost of £61,536, is 960 yards in length, and forms a fine breakwater, with a lighthouse at the extreme end; the pier, combined with Pier road, which extends westward, affords a fine and salubrious promenade.

By an order, gazetted May 30, 1848, the port of Berwick-upon-Tweed was re-limited, and appointed to extend on and after June 1st in that year, from St. Abb's Head, the limit of the port of Leith, and to continue along the coasts of the counties of Berwick and Northumberland to the south side of Alnwater, being the northern limit of the port of Shields; also to include Farne and three smaller islands; and the limits seaward to extend three miles from low water mark out to sea. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters B.K.

The exportation of coal from the mines in the neighbourhood forms an important feature in the commerce of the port, while that of grain, manure, and salmon caught in the Tweed (the latter sent to the London markets), is nearly equally profitable. The principal fishing stations are from the mouth of the river to Northam, a distance of seven miles. The season commences on the 15th February, and terminates on the 14th September. The port has the privilege of the "Warehousing Act, 1825" (6 Geo. IV.), and is now a bonded port for the reception of wines and colonial produce.

Berwick appears to have possessed a municipality with a guild from an early period, and James I. in his 2nd year (1604-5) granted to the borough a new charter, extending the privileges of the Corporation, and augmenting the number of its officers, besides giving to it the power of life and death. Under the provisions of the "Municipal Corporations Act, 1835," the government is vested in a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, with a recorder and the usual assistant officers, under the style of the "Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of the Borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed;" the same Act divided the borough into three wards and provided it with a commission of the peace; there is also a sheriff. The peculiar power of life and death was abolished by the "Limitation of Jurisdiction of Quarter Sessions Act, 1842." Sessions are held quarterly, presided over by the Recorder, W. T. Greenhow esq.; the corporation, as lords of the manor, hold courts leet and baron twice in the year, and Berwick is included in the first circuit of county court towns under the acts for the recovery of debts. The limits of the borough are defined by the Boundary Act to comprise the parish of Berwick and the respective townships of Tweedmouth and Spital. The borough was first represented in the English Parliament in the reign of Henry VIII., and from that time (1629) it continued to send two members, until the passing of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," when it was included in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of Northumberland, which extends from Felton on the south to Berwick on the north, taking in the whole of the coast from the Coquet to the Tweed, being bounded by the limits of the county on the west. It contains the petty-sessional divisions of Bamburg, Coquetdale North, Glendale, Northamshire and Islandshire, Coquetdale East (except the parishes of Gloster Hill, Morwick, Acklington, Acklington Park, Amble, Hauxley, Warkworth and Tongstone), and the municipal borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed.

This place gave the title of duke (March 19, 1637) to James Fitz-James, natural son of King James II.

Up to the year 1310 Berwick was ecclesiastically in the archdeaconry of Lothian and diocese of St. Andrews, but was transferred by Edward II. to Durham, and so continued until 1882, when it became part of the new diocese of Newcastle-on-Tyne, formed by Order in Council, 17 May, 1882, under the "Bishoprics Act, 1878" (41 and 42 Vict. c. 68).

The parish church of the Holy Trinity, begun in 1648 and finished in 1652, is an edifice of stone, in a Pseudo-Italian style, and forms a parallelogram, 90 feet by 64 feet, divided by arcades of five arches into a nave, with aisles of equal length, and on the north side a smaller aisle and large vestry west of it, and a chancel, 23 feet in length: there being no tower the 4 bells are placed in the bell-tower of the Town Hall: a chancel was erected in 1893 at a cost of about £300: in 1855 the church was repaired and enlarged by the addition of a chancel and the interior re-arranged, at a cost of £3,000, and in 1867 was further improved at a cost of more than £4,000: there are 1,500 sittings. Since the public cemetery in the North road was opened it is only in rare cases that interments take place in the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1572. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £500, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1897 by the Rev. Henry Bernard Hodgson M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, and rural dean of Norham; there is also a lectureship belonging to the church, in the gift of the Mercers' Company of London. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the rectors. The rectorial tithes amount to £2,300 yearly.

St. Mary's church, Castlegate, is a neat stone edifice, erected in 1858, at the expense of the late Captain George Gordon, who presented £3,000 towards its completion, and is built of polished ashlar stone, in the Lancet style, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts, north vestry and a small tower at the south-west angle of the nave, with an octagonal gabled heltry, surmounted by a spire and containing one bell: the lower stage of the tower forms a porch: there are 472 sittings. The register dates from 1859. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £320, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, and held since 1879 by the Rev. James King B.D. of the University of Durham.

The Catholic Church of our Blessed Lady and St. Cuthbert, in Ravensdowne street, is a building of stone, erected in 1829, and has 300 sittings. The other places of worship comprise one of the Church of Scotland; three for the Presbyterian Church of England, that in Wallace green being a very fine building, erected at a cost of nearly £10,000, with 991 sittings; a United Presbyterian church, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist and Baptist chapels, a Presbyterian Mission hall and Salvation Army barracks.

The Cemetery, on the Edinburgh road, about 1 mile from the town, comprises about 9 acres, well laid out and planted with evergreens and trees: there are two mortuary chapels, in the Gothic style, and an entrance lodge. The ancient hier removed from the old church is deposited here, and bears the date 1620. The cemetery is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members.

The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the east end of High street, was erected in 1754-61, and is a building of stone in the Classic style, approached by an ascent of fifteen steps: above the portico rises a tower, adorned with columns of the Tuscan, Doric and Ionic orders, and surmounted by a spire, the whole reaching a height of 150 feet, and containing an excellent peal of 8 bells, 4 of which are the parish church bells, placed here owing to there being no tower attached to the church; they are rung before the commencement of each service and the early and curfew bells are still rung daily except on Sundays, at 5 a.m. and 8 p.m.; there is also a clock with 4 dials lighted by gas. The municipal affairs of the borough are transacted here, and the magistrates sit daily for the hearing of petty police cases: the hall in which public meetings are held, and where the recorder holds quarter sessions four times a year, will hold 700 persons. There is also a council chamber, police office and cells to contain 14 prisoners; the ground floor is appropriated to the sale of poultry, eggs and butter.

The Corn Exchange, in Sandgate, is a large and commodious building, erected by a limited liability company, and was opened in June, 1858. Besides being well suited for the purpose for which it was built, it is also available for meetings and entertainments, and is licensed for stage plays. It is well lighted and heated, and will hold 1,500 persons.

The Queen's Rooms, in Hide hill, erected by Mr. J. D. Parves, in 1880, are also used for meetings, entertainments &c. The large hall (with gallery) will hold 1,000 persons.

The Literary Institute, Art School and Museum, in High street, is a very substantial building, erected in 1881, at a cost of £2,000. It contains reading rooms, museum of natural history of the district, and a school of art.

The Masonic Hall, situate on the Parade, and erected in 1873, is a handsome building of stone, and in Coxen's lane is the Good Templars' Hall, built in 1874, and seating 600.

There are Subscription Reading Rooms, with a billiard room in Palace green; numerous clubs and political associations, and an Athletic Society.

The Dispensary and Infirmary, on the Low Greens, was first instituted in 1814; the present building was erected in 1874, and is supported by voluntary contributions; it is available for 16 in-patients, and in 1898 there were 65 in and 270 out patients.

The Local Charities for pensions and distribution amount to about £150 yearly.

At Berwick is the depot of the 25th Regimental District (King's Own Scottish Borderers), comprising 1st and 2nd battalions (2500 feet), with the Scottish Borderers Militia as the 3rd battalion, which is stationed at Dumfries.

Berwick is also the head quarters of the Northumberland Artillery Militia, and at Ravensdowne are the head quarters of the 1st Berwick-on-Tweed Artillery Volunteers.

The Barracks, on the Parade, near the walls on the east side of the town, were erected in the year 1719, and form a handsome pile of buildings arranged so as to form a quadrangle, 217 by 121 feet; the principal or north front, includes the officers' quarters, mess-room and guard-room; and the remaining portions afford room for 240 men. In 1893 additional buildings were erected on the King's Bastion for ten married soldiers with families. New buildings are now (1899) in course of erection for the storage of arms, army clothing and equipment for 1,000 men.

The Artillery Drill Hall, in Ravensdowne, built in 1891, is an edifice of stone, with a tower of two storeys; the hall is 82 feet long by 53 wide, and 16 feet high, and there are mess and other rooms attached.

The Coastguard Station, entered from and on rising ground above the Pier road, to the south-east of the town, was erected in 1879, and has a life-saving apparatus (the property of the Board of Trade) and two boats, one being a life whaler; there is a staff of one officer and six men.

The educational establishments of Berwick are the Grammar School, which has recently (1899) been enlarged for the convenience of teaching chemistry and physics; the Corporation Academy (for the children of freemen solely, the salaries of the rector and teacher and all other expenses being paid by the Corporation), and National, British and Roman Catholic schools; besides these there are a few conducted privately.

The banks here are the British Linen Co. Bank, in Sandgate; Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, North Eastern Banking Co. Limited and Messrs. Barclay and Co. Limited, all in Hide hill; National Bank of Scotland Limited, Bridge end; and the Berwick and Tweedmouth Savings Bank, Sandgate.

There are three good hotels—the King's Arms, in Hide hill, the Red Lion, in High street, and the Station hotel, at the North-Eastern station, Tweedmouth, all of which are complete and comfortable establishments.

The MacLagan Memorial, in High street, is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1893 to Philip W. MacLagan esq. M.D.; there is also an elegant drinking fountain in Castlegate, presented June 20, 1897, in commemoration of the sixtieth anniversary of the Queen's accession, by Captain Francis Martin Norman R.N., J.P.

Berwick can scarcely be said to possess any staple trade except the salmon fisheries. There are two breweries and a seed crushing works; also sail, rope and sack making and fish curing are likewise carried on.

The Corn Market, at the foot of Hide hill, near to Sandgate, is a spacious building of stone, in the Gothic style, opened in June, 1858, and is licensed for stage plays; the market, held on Saturday, is well attended.

There is an auction mart in the Magdalen fields and near the station, the property of a limited company, Messrs. John Embleton and Son are the present lessees and hold sales every alternate Monday.

The fish market, which is in general abundantly supplied, is held in the centre of the High street, facing the Town Hall. Salmon, cod, whiting, haddocks, lobsters and crabs are the principal fish caught near here.

The cattle market, in Castlegate, was opened in October, 1886, and markets are held every Saturday; there is also an annual fair for cattle and horses on the last Friday in May.

The March hirings for farm servants are held on the first Saturday in March.

Six newspapers are published here.

The rateable value is £43,500. The population of the municipal borough in 1881, 13,945, and in 1891, 13,347, shewing a decrease in ten years of 648.

TWEEDMOUTH is a populous parish and township, now forming part of the borough of Berwick. It is situated at the south end of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile from Berwick, and consists of several streets irregularly built, but the general appearance of the place has been much improved of late years. The North Eastern stations for both goods and passengers are at the eastern end of the town. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the salmon fishery; and the other branches of trade, exports and imports, are of the like nature with those of Berwick. There are works for the manufacture of agricultural implements and engineering and boiler works, large timber and saw mills and boat building yards. The Corporation of Berwick, who are lords of the manor of Tweedmouth, and Robert W. Ramsey esq. are the principal landowners. The dock, opened 4th October, 1876, admits vessels up to 500 tons burthen, and has an area of 34 acres, and a depth of 21 feet; the cost of construction was about £35,000. There is railway communication from Tweedmouth station to the dock by a branch of the North Eastern railway. The parish church of St. Bartholomew, rebuilt in 1783 and enlarged in 1866, is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, with vestry, nave, north transept and a western tower with one bell: there are 350 sittings. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £360, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, and held since 1886 by the Rev. Alfred John Blagden M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and surrogate. There is also an English Presbyterian church, and one connected with the Church of Scotland. Population included with that of Berwick. The rateable value, including Spittal, is £21,100. The cemetery, covering 3½ acres, was formed in 1858; it has two mortuary chapels, and is managed by a Burial Board of nine members.

Ord, a widely scattered locality here, was in 1891 constituted a separate parish for civil purposes, and comprises the village of East Ord and the hamlets of Middle and West Ord. There is a British school at East Ord. Ord House is the residence of Lord Francis Granville Gedolphin Osborne J.P.

SPITTAL, which derives its name from an ancient hospital once existing here, is a township, parish and populous village, about three-quarters of a mile from Berwick, and is situated at the mouth of the river. The curing of herrings is largely carried on, and there is also a spade and shovel manufactory, and extensive manure works. The gas works for the borough of Berwick are in this parish, and belong to a limited company; the water-works are also situated here. Many good houses have been built for the accommodation of visitors who resort hither for sea-bathing. There is also a valuable mineral spa, the waters of which contain iron, lime, magnesia and sulphate of soda. During 1894 a substantial sea-wall of concrete, about half a mile in length, was constructed. A steamboat and several ferry boats ply frequently between Berwick and Spittal during the summer season. The church of St. John the Evangelist, consecrated in 1871, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, comprising chancel, nave and south aisle, and seats 350 persons. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £275, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1873 by the Rev. Evan Ratter M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford. There is also a Presbyterian Church of England, a United Presbyterian church, a meeting house for Christian Brethren, and a Mission hall and British and National schools. The Public Hall was erected by the Good Templars in 1885, and will seat 500 persons.

SCREMERSTON is a scattered village, in the civil parish of Ancroft, and was formed into an ecclesiastical parish 14 Sep. 1844, in the county of Northumberland, 3½ miles south-south-east from Berwick, its post town. Here are the extensive collieries, lime and brick works of the Scremerston Coal Co. Limited. The church of St. Peter, erected in 1842-3, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and has a tower with spire, containing one bell. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £311, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1835 by the Rev. John Lightfoot L.Th. of Durham University. There is also a Primitive Methodist chapel and a National school. The Lords of the Admiralty are lords of the manor and the principal landowners.

Occupies the south-east angle of Scotland, lying along the river Tweed, which on the south divides it from Roxburghshire, and on the south-east from Northumberland; in shape it is somewhat of a pentagon, the other three sides being its east coast, which runs due north from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed to Eyemouth, where it turns to the west for a few miles, afterwards continuing its course north to St. Abb's Head, from which point it runs north-west to Cockburnspath, where it joins Haddingtonshire, which county bounds its fourth or north side, the fifth, the west, being bounded by Edinburghshire and Selkirkshire. The coast has no prominent harbours or sea lochs or any large bays; the county measures 34 miles from east to west and 23 from north to south, and comprises 293,946 acres, or 475 square miles. In 1891 it had a population of 15,444 males and 16,962 females; total, 32,406, against 35,392 in 1881, and had in 1891, 6,837 inhabited houses, against 7,103 in 1881. In point of size Berwick ranks as the nineteenth Scottish county, and in population as the twenty-fourth.

Early History.—At the period of the Roman invasion Berwickshire was inhabited by tribes of British called "Otdadini;" and it was subsequently overrun by bands of Saxons, who engrafted their language and manners on those of the original inhabitants. The conquests by these foreigners extended a considerable way along the shores to the east and west; and in the course of time they gave the land of which they thus possessed themselves the title of Lothian, which it still retains in the western division. The entire area of Berwickshire was comprised in this Saxon territory, which was distinguished by the name of "Saxonia," superseding its previous designation "Bernicio." Until the year 1020 this district of country was included within the kingdom of Northumberland; in that year it was ceded to King Malcolm II. by Cospatrick, Earl of Northumberland, who settled in Scotland and was created Earl of Dunbar. About the beginning of the eleventh century, many Norman and Anglo-Saxon families settled in Berwickshire, as well as other parts of Scotland. It is recorded as a fact that at Berwick-on-Tweed originated those laws which were framed and applied in Scotland for the regulation of burghs and their guild associations. Lying on the main route from England, Berwickshire suffered in the succeeding centuries in all the wars between the two hostile nations, and was occasionally involved in jurisdictional disputes with its ecclesiastical neighbour, the Palatine Bishop of Durham, and Berwick and the bridges across the Tweed were in general the main objects of contention. From the variety of successes and disasters which Berwickshire underwent for so many centuries, and from its successive occupation by different mixed nations, the people of this part of North Britain have not that distinct Scottish character so directly recognised in places more distant from the frontier. By their language and personal appearance, especially the former, the inhabitants of Berwick and its neighbourhood are easily particularised, and, in common with the Northumbrians, they speak with that remarkable "bnrr" which is found nowhere else in the kingdom. The "Men of Merse" distinguished themselves at Flodden and other bloody fields, under the command of Lord Home; and there is a tradition that a party, led to the Holy Land by some of their feudal chiefs, obtained on its ensanguined plains the highest honours for their unconquerable intrepidity. When Charles I. paid his first visit to Scotland, in the year 1633, Lord Home met him at Berwick with a train of 600 Merse gentlemen "gallantly arrayed" on horseback.

Surface, Soil &c.—Berwickshire is divided into three districts, namely Merse, Lammermoor (or Lammermuir), and Lauderdale. The Merse, so called from the word "march," or boundary, is the largest and most valuable district, occasionally giving name to the whole county, and embracing that tract of low land between the Lammermoor hills on the north and the river Tweed on the south, having Lauderdale for its western boundary. It is the most compact and extensive piece of level ground in Scotland, comprising 130,000 statute acres; in appearance it resembles a wide-spread portion of some of the English fertile counties, and is well enclosed and furnished with trees and plantations. Lammermoor, which consists of nearly 90,000 statute acres, is a highly pastoral district, with generally a wild, brown aspect, and runs on the northern border of the Merse, so as to divide the vales of Edinburgh and Haddington shires from the valley of the Tweed. The district of Lauderdale, which has received this title from the Leader water, along whose bank it ranges, is a mixture of hill and dale, the land in the valleys being essentially arable; this portion of the county contains about 67,000 statute acres.

The mountains, which lie mostly in the north-west of the county, none of them reach 2,000 feet above sea level, the highest being Crib Law, 1,670 feet; Blythe Edge, 1,521; Collie Law, 1,286; Kiddel Law, 1,270 and Dun Law, 1,292.

Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—Within the last century very great exertions have been made to improve the agricultural character of the county, and in this respect it differs nothing from the neighbouring territory of East Lothian. The chief crops in 1898, according to the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," were—oats, 33,441 acres; barley or bere, 19,632; wheat, 3,214; beans, 1,087; the total corn crops being 957,459 acres; turnips and swedes, 27,294 acres; potatoes, 2,413; vetches or tares, 773; cabbage &c. 496; the total green crops being 31,179 acres; hay, 10,870 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (not for hay), 49,670 acres; permanent pasture, 40,942 acres. Total area of land and water, 293,946 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing 70,236 acres; woods and plantations (1895), 3,806 acres. The live stock in 1898 was—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 4,465; unbroken horses, 1,009; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 3,072; other cattle, 15,019; ewes kept for breeding, 113,217; other sheep, 208,370; sows kept for breeding, 635; other pigs, 2,997. The exports of Berwickshire consist of corn, sheep and eggs; and these, indeed, may be considered as the extent of its commerce. The only minerals raised in 1897 from quarries were basalt, 3,514 tons, and sandstone, 4,310 tons. The county is strictly pastoral and agricultural. Manufactures as yet have made little or no progress within its borders; what is connected with this system of industry finds its chief seat at the town of Berwick, on the borders. Paper is made at Chirnside Bridge, and the manufacture of woollens is carried on at Earlston and Cumberidge. The herring fishery, which is pursued at Eyemouth and other ports, is a profitable industry, as is also the curing of this fish.

Rivers & Railways.—The rivers mostly flow from north-west to south; the Leader, Eden, Langton and the Black and White Adder all flow into the Tweed, while the Eye debouches into the North Sea at Eyemouth. The Tweed is a large river, but it is not capable of navigation; it is, however, of great value from its salmon fisheries, which are under a strict system of water police. The Eden, which runs southwards from Lammermoor, has a remarkable fall, near the house of Newton Don, of about forty feet, exhibiting a fine appearance when there is a flood. It is a peculiarity of the Blackadder that no salmon can live in it; if any happen to enter they are said to die in a few days, though they are caught plentifully in the Whitadder, which also abounds with trout &c. The North British railway has the control of the lines in the county, entering it from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed, and passing north to Burnmouth (from which place is a line to Eyemouth), where it turns westward and north-west to Reston, whence there is a branch line running south-west through Edrom, Langton and Greenlaw to Earlston, and thence to St. Boswells; the main line continuing on through Cockburnspath to Dunbar and Edinburgh; the southern and south-eastern portion of the county is supplied by the North Eastern railway, on the English side of the border, running via Norham, Coldstream and Kelso.

Divisions and Representation.—Berwickshire comprehends (exclusive of Berwick town) thirty-two parishes and thirty-four ecclesiastical parishes, forming the Presbyteries of Duns, Chirnside and Earlston, in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and contains one royal burgh, Lauder, which until under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to parliament, but was then merged in the county, which is represented by one member in parliament. The parliamentary constituency for 1898 was 5,525. The valuation of the county for 1897-8 was £312,586.

ABBEY SAINT BATHANS is a parish, situated in the midst of the Lammermoor hills, 7 miles north-north-west from Duns, and 5 from Grant's House, the nearest railway station, on the east coast route of the North British railway, in the Duns small debt court district. The soil is light and dry, and on the banks of the Whitadder, fertile and well cultivated; but the hilly district is barren and covered with heath. There is an Established church here. In this parish are the remains of an ancient abbey of Bernardines, founded in 1170, and dedicated to St. Bathan. Edwina, or Wodina, about a mile below St. Bathans, on the Whitadder, consists of three concentric circles of stone, seven and ten feet distant from each other, the diameter of the innermost circle being about 20 feet. George Gillon Turabull esq. W.S., J.P. is lord of the manor, and owns most of the land. The parish has an area of 4,797 acres; rateable value, £2,262; the population in 1891 was 163, and in 1881, 250.

Post Office, Robert Mack, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Grantshouse R.S.O. Berwickshire. Delivery, 11 a.m.; dispatch, 1.30 p.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Grantshouse station, 5 miles distant. The nearest money order office is at Grantshouse, 5 miles distant.

AYTON is a parish and village, 2½ miles south-west from Eyemouth, and 8 north-west from Berwick; the village occupies a delightful situation on the left bank of the Eye, and has a station about a quarter of a mile distant, on the main line of the North British railway. It is lighted with gas from works the property of a company. A justice of the peace court is held here monthly, and a sheriff's court for the recovery of small debts four times a year. The Established church was erected in 1864-5, at a cost of about £7,000, near to the old fabric, then in a dilapidated state, and is an edifice in the English Gothic style of the 14th century, with a lofty tower, and affords nearly 800 sittings. There is also a United Presbyterian church and an Episcopalian Mission, annexed to Eyemouth. In the parish are various remains of ancient enforcements, and ruins and fragments of armour have been occasionally brought to the surface by the plough. Ayton Castle, to the east of the village, held a distinguished place during the Border wars, but was demolished by Thomas, Earl of Surrey, in 1497; it is now the residence of Henry Liddell-Grainger esq. Balabraes is the residence of Lady Simpson. The principal landowners are Henry Liddell-Grainger esq.; Lord Tweedmouth, of Edington; Earl Brownlow P.C. and John Allan esq. The parish has an area of 6,693 acres; rateable value, £15,185; the population was in 1891, 1,827, and in 1881, 2,039; the village had 653 in 1891, and 771 in 1881.

BUNKLE (anciently "Bonkyll") and PRESTON form a parish in the Duns small debt court district, about 4 miles north-north-east from Duns station, and the same from Reston station, both on the North British railway. During the 13th and 14th centuries the lands in the parish of Rockhill were held by a family of the same name, and by marriage descended to Sir John Steward. The soil on the high lands towards the Lammermoor hills was at one time thin, dry and poor, but by the application of lime and marl it has been much improved. The rest of the parish, particularly on the banks of the Whitadder, is a fertile loam, and well cultivated. The Earl of Home V.D. who is lord of the manor; Col. David Milne-Home R.E.G. of Wedderburn Castle and Caldera House, Duns, and Edwin Robert John Sandys-Unmadsdale esq. J.P. of Blaneere, are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 9,189 acres; rateable value, £9,150; population in 1891, 672, and in 1881, 728.

BURNMOUTH (or Ross and Burn-mouth) is a small fishing village in the parish of Ayton, with a station on the North British railway, and about 2½ miles from Ayton and 6 from Berwick, and is situated on a harbour at the foot of an almost perpendicular ledge of rock. The heights in the vicinity afford very beautiful
and varied scenery, extending to the Eildons
on the south, Lammermoor on the west, and Bamborough on the east; here is a coastguard station. A number of boats are employed here for herring fishing, and others of a larger class are employed for white fishing in the winter season. There is a United Presbyterian church.

Ross is a conjoint village with Burn-
mouth, but in the parish of Mordington.
The population of Ross and Burnmouth was returned 324 in 1891, and 371 in 1881.

CHANNELKIRK is a parish, situated
among the Lammermoor hills, 5½ miles from Fountainhall station on the North British railway, in the small debt court district of Lauder and Kelso poor law combination.
The parish is traversed by several rivulets,
which unitedly form the river Leader, or Lauder, but the hills are mostly covered
with heath, and are very bleak and unproductive.

Ugston, now called Oxtou, about 4 miles
north-north-west from Lauder, on the south of the Edinburgh road and in the upper part of the vale of the Leader, is now the only village in the parish of Channelkirk,
the village of that name, about 2 miles west
of Oxtou, being now represented only by the church and the manse belonging to it.
Area of the parish, about 14,151 acres;
rateable value, £5,929; population in 1891,
545, and in 1881, 607.

CHIRNSIDE is a parish in the small
debt court district of Ayton, and in Kelso
poor combination, lying to the east of the Merse and on the north side of the Whit-adder, and extending 4 miles in length by about 3 in breadth. The village, situated on an eminence affording extensive views, is 50 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 13½
north-north-east from Greenlaw, 9 northwest from Berwick and 6 north-east from Duns and has a station 1 mile distant on the North British Railway; it consists of two streets, the buildings of which are for the most part detached and straggling, and extend nearly a mile in length, but in the upper part of the village are several good
stone houses; an excellent supply of water
is brought from about a mile distant. There is a reading room and library and a children's mission hall. Besides a church of the Establishment there are United Presbyterian
and Free churches. The estate of Nine-wells, the family seat of the Humea, is in this neighbourhood, and David Hume, the celebrated historian, though born in Edinburgh, 26 April, 1711, was from his infancy
brought up in this parish; the manor is at present occupied by Charles Forbes esq.
In this locality are some remains of ancient encampments. Alexander Harold Mitchell-Innes esq. J.P., who is lord of the manor,
and Lord Tweedmouth are the principal landowners. Area, 5,553 acres; the rateable value is £11,290; the population in 1891 was 1,459, including 854 in the village,
and in 1881 was 1,516, with 939 in the village.

Chirnside Bridge is a hamlet about 1 mile west, and here the Whitadder stream is crossed by a good bridge and also by a stone
viaduct carrying the railway. On the banks of the river a species of gypsum is found,
and in other parts of the district marl is obtained abundantly. Chirnside railway station is situated in this hamlet.

COCKBURNSPATH is a parish and village on the sea coast, in the Dunbar small debt court district and East Lothian poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, and is 35½ miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north from Greenlaw, 14 north from Duns, 8 south-east from Dunbar and 21 north-west from Berwick, on the road between Berwick and Dunbar. The shore is precipitous, presenting a line of cliffs about one hundred feet above the level of the sea; behind the cliffs the ground rises gently towards the hills, having many deep glens, or ravines, whose sides are sometimes sloping and covered with verdure; but the general appearance is rocky, with overhanging woods; one of these ravines is crossed by the Peaths, or Peasa bridge, erected in 1786, from the design of Mr. Henderson: it is 123 feet in height from the bottom of the Pease burn, which flows beneath, 300 feet in length and 15 feet wide. The Public Hall, erected in 1883-4, will seat 200 persons. The ruins of the church of Auld Cambus, formerly united with this parish, are still standing. In the village are Established and Free churches and there is a United Presbyterian church at Stockbridge, about a mile south. Nearly a quarter of a mile west of the bridge are the remains of an ancient castle and many traces of camps are visible on the rising grounds. Fisher's Cove is a small fishing village about a mile north and consisting of some fifteen or twenty houses, and on the way down to the small boat harbour is a curious tunnelled passage, with branching caves extending a considerable way into the rock. Sir Basil Francis Hall bart. D.L. of Dunglass, and Thomas Broadwood esq. J.P. of Crawhill, Innerwick, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 12,652 acres; rateable value, £10,799; population of the parish in 1891, 1,112, and in 1881, 1,130.

COLDINGHAM is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Eyemouth and in Kelso poor combination; the parish is 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, lying on the coast of Berwickshire, and is bounded on the north and east by the German Ocean and is much resorted to for sea bathing. The village, a burgh of barony, is 45 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 21 north-north-east of Greenlaw, 17 south-east of Dunbar, 13 north-north-east of Duns, 11 north-north-west of Berwick, 4 north-north-west from Ayton and about 3 miles from Reston station on the North British railway; it stands on a small eminence in the centre of a fine valley, a short distance from the sea and near to St. Abb's Head, where a lighthouse was erected in 1862, and subsequently a building for fog signalling, and consists of two of three small streets, meeting at a cross. The hall formerly used by the volunteers is now left for public meetings and entertainments. The Established church incorporates part of the fabric of the priory church; it was altered and restored in 1857 and affords 300 sittings; there is also a United Presbyterian church. St. Abb's is a village in this parish and has a Free church. Coldingham Loch, about a mile west from St. Abb's and 250 feet above the sea level, is triangular in form and upwards of a mile in circumference and covers about 20 acres. On the top of Earnshengh, 440 yards north of the loch, are the ruins of two oblong British camps, called the Tunlaw, or Towalaw. Fast Castle, in this neighbourhood, is supposed to be the place described as Wolf's Craig, in Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." On the south side of the town stand the ruins of the once magnificent priory of Coldingham, rebuilt by King Edgar, who personally assisted at its consecration. All that now remains of it is the east gable and north side of the church, forming part of the modern parish kirk, and a few straggling fragments, including a small Saxon arch, part of the palace said to have been erected here by the royal founder of the priory. A nunnery was settled here in the 7th century, of which St. Ebba, the daughter and sister of kings, became abbess in 670. The principal landowners are John Allan, of Peelwalls, Ayton; the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour P.C., M.P. of Whittinghame; Robert Fitzroy Bell, of Templehall; the trustees of the late Walter Carter, of West Reston Maios; Miss Coulson, of Houndwood; Mrs. Turnbull Cookson, of Houndwood; Mrs. Isabella Cameron Bell, of Abbey Park; Sir Basil Francis Hall bart. D.L. of Duinglass; Col. David Milne-Home R.H.G. of Wedderburn and Caldera; the Earl of Home and the North British Railway Co. The area of the parish comprises 24,021 acres; rateable value, £30,263; the population was, in 1891, 2,946, and in 1881, 3,173, that of the village being 492 in 1891, and 572 in 1881.

COLDSTREAM.

COLDSTREAM, anciently called Lennel, is a police burgh and parish on the north bank of the Tweed and in Kelso poor combination; the town is $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Cornhill station on the Kelso branch of the North Eastern railway, 47 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 14 south-south-west from Berwick, 10 south-east from Greenlaw, the like distance south from Duns, and 9 north-east from Kelso. The streets are in general spacious and well paved and contain many good houses, and the town is lighted with gas and supplied with water under a scheme carried out by the Commissioners of the burgh. The Tweed is crossed about 220 yards east of the town by a bridge of freestone, erected in 1766, at a cost of about £7,000, from the plans of Mr. John Smeaton, the famous engineer, and the designer, in 1753, of the former Eddystone lighthouse. It consists of seven arches, including two for abutments, and is 305 feet long and 25 feet wide. In 1830 it underwent a thorough repair at a cost of about £2,000. From this bridge a very delightful view is afforded, both up and down the river. The town is governed by the commissioners of police for the burgh. The justice of peace courts are held as occasion requires, and sheriff small debt courts four times a year. The Town Hall is in the High street; there is also a Library; a Working Men's Club and a Mechanics' Institution, erected in High street, in 1863, at a cost of £1,200, and containing a large lecture room, library, reading rooms &c. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and of the British Linen Co.'s Bank. There are Established and Free churches, two United Presbyterian churches, the Episcopal church of St. Mary and All Souls and a Catholic Apostolic church. In the Market place stands a fountain, erected by the late Sir John Marjoribank bart. in connection with the waterworks, and near the church is an obelisk, erected by the inhabitants as a memorial to the donor of the water supply, who died 18 Nov. 1884. At the east end of the town is a memorial, erected by the friends of the late Charles Marjoribanks esq. sometime M.P. for Berwickshire, to record the successful result of the contested election for the county in 1832. The Tweed bridge occupies the site of an ancient ford, by which Edward I. entered Scotland with his forces in 1236; it was generally used during the Border wars both by the English and Scottish forces, and last by a Scottish army in 1640, when the Scots crossed the border by this means, Aug. 20, in their advance against Charles I. This neighbourhood is the scene of most of the incidents in Sir Walter Scott's "Marmion," and here was raised in 1660, by Gen. Monk, the famous regiment still known as the "Coldstream Guards," and now forming the 2nd regiment of Foot Guards. During the winter season Coldstream is much resorted to by the nobility and gentry for foxhunting; the Duke of Buccleuch and the Berwickshire and East Lothian packs meet regularly in the neighbourhood. Lees is the residence of Charlotte, Lady Marjoribank, and to the north-west is The Hirsell, the seat of the Earl of Home D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are the Earl of Home; the Earl of Haddington; Miss Milne Holm, of Milne Graden; George John Marjoribanks esq. and Charlotte Lady Marjoribanks. The area of the parish comprises 8,320 acres; rateable value, burghal £6,122, landward £11,712; the population in 1891 being 2,388, including 1,535 in the burgh, and 2,561 in 1881, with 1,616 in the burgh.

CRANSHAWS is a small parish, lying amongst the Lammermoor hills, 10 miles from Duns (the nearest) station on the North British railway, about 30 east by south from Edinburgh, 15 south-east from Haddington, in the small debt court district of Duns; the kirktown lies in the northern portion of the parish, 3 miles north-west of Duns. The old castle of Cranshaws, still entire, is an ancient edifice of great strength. There are also remains of many encampments. Andrew Smith esq. of Whitechester, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 3,708 acres; rateable value is £2,149; the population in 1891 was 85, and in 1881, 106. Post Office; John Grays, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Duns. Delivery (to callers), 3 p.m.; dispatch, 11.40 a.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not

DUNS, or DUNSE.

DUNS (or Dunse) is a parish and burgh of barony, in Kelso poor combination, with a station about half a mile east on the North British railway, and is 45 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 15 west from Berwick, 11 south-west from Ayton, and 8 north-north-east from Greenlaw. The present town is built on a fine plain, under the southern slope of Duns Law, upon which hill the old town, destroyed by fire, formerly stood; the plain of Duns, 25 miles long, is encompassed on three sides by the Lammermoor ridge, and the river Whitadder, which produces the finest trout, flows past it. Duns Law, at the back of the town, risers to the height of about 500 feet, and the scenery from its summit is strikingly beautiful.

Duns is a place of great antiquity; but from its situation near the border, it was frequently subject to irruptions by the English, and on one of these occasions the town records were burnt, and its early history lost. The present town is generally well built, and is lighted with gas, and supplied with water by local companies. The town is governed by a chief magistrate and commissioners under the General Police and Improvement Act, 1862, and the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892; the property vested in the feuars is managed by a committee of nine members, and a sheriff, small debt and debts recovery court is held eight times in the year, viz. the last Friday in January, February, March, May, June and November, the second Friday in July and the first Friday in October, at which debt claims of limited amount are adjudicated; the ordinary sheriff court is also held every Friday, except during the vacations, which are regulated by the Sheriff Court Act. The trade is chiefly in flour and grain. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Company's Bank. The Town Hall, standing in the centre of the market place, was originally founded by the Earl of Moray, but the present hall, a building in the Gothic style, was erected in 1816 by the feuars, assisted by subscriptions. The County buildings, in Newtown street, contain the police station, and were considerably enlarged in 1895; here the courts are held. There is a Subscription Library and a Working Men's Institute. The 2nd Vol. Batt. K. O. S. B. have their head-quarters here, and a fine drill hall was erected in Langtongate in 1894, at a cost of £2,500, and a detachment of the A Squadron Lothians and Berwickshire Yeomanry Cavalry is also stationed here. The parish church, burnt down in February, 1879, was rebuilt on a larger scale by the heritors of the parish, at a cost of upwards of £4,000, and re-opened in December, 1880. There is also a Free church, two belonging to the United Presbyterians, and Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches. There are two hotels, viz. the White Swan and the Black Bull. The weekly market on Tuesday and the fairs for sheep, cattle &c. are now nearly if not quite obsolete. A sale by auction is held every alternate Monday for cattle by Messrs. R. G. and W. B. Swan, and is well attended. A fair for hiring servants is held the first Tuesday in March, and single hirings are held on the first Tuesday in May and November. The fine public park was formed in 1895; the land was presented to the town by Andrew Smith esq. of Whitechester, and the expense of laying it out has been wholly defrayed by Sir James Percy Miller bart. of Manderstone. Duns Castle, a fine modern mansion in the Castellated style, stands about half a mile north-west of the town. The ancient edifice was erected about 1320 by Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, the nephew and co-patriot of Bruce, but is now the seat of Robert Hay esq.; it was restored and considerably enlarged in 1820 by its then proprietor, Colonel Hay, and contains some fine paintings, including many saved from the Seton gallery, and in particular the well-known family group representing George, 5th Baron Seton, the attached friend of Queen Mary, surrounded by his family, as also several portraits of the Stuarts, presented by the exiled Royal family to an ancestor of Mr. Hay. The learned and celebrated metaphysician and theologian, Joannes Duns Scotus, was born here about 1265, and died at Cologne 8th Nov. 1308. The Rev. Thomas Boston, author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold State" and other works, was born here. 7th March. 1678: a. 20th May, 1732; Abraham Robertson LL.D. professor of astronomy at Oxford, and Thomas McCrie D.D. Edin. were likewise born here. Robert M. Hay esq. of Duns Castle, who is lord of the manor; Colonel David Milne Home D.L. J.P. of Wedderburn and Caldera; Sir James Percy Miller bart. D.L. J.P. of Manderstone, and Hon. Mrs. Robert Baillie Hamilton, of Langton, are the chief landowners. EARLSTON (anciently "Ercildoun") is a parish and village, with a station on the North British railway, 31 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 11 west-by-north from Kelso, 18 south-west from Duns, 15 north from Jedburgh, 10 south-west from Greenlaw, 8½ north-east from Galashiels and 7 south from Lauder; in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court of Lauder. The village is seated in a rich valley encompassed by hills of a moderate height, interspersed with thriving plantations; the Leader river flows on the west of the parish, and the Eden on the east. The manufacture of woollens and ginghams is carried on here, and the latter have a high reputation for excellence of quality. At the west end of the village, on the bank of the Leader, are the ruins of an old tower, once the residence of Sir Thomas Learmouth, commonly called "the Rhymer," who flourished in the 13th century. A stone in the wall of the church bears the following inscription in ancient characters, "Auld Rhymer's race lies in this place." Cowdenknowes, the residence of Colonel Charles Hope J.P. is an ancient building, standing on the side of a hill. Mellerstein is the seat of the Earl of Haddington and Lord Binning (his son), and Carolside, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Reay G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E. There are two fairs—on the 29th of June and the third Thursday in October, for cattle and horses, and a cattle and sheep market and also a corn market every alternate Monday. Redpath is a village in this parish. The area comprises 9,988 acres; rateable value, £11,616; the population in 1891 was 1,784, including 1,060 in the village, and in 1881, 1,787, with 1,010 in the village.

ECCLES is a parish and village, 6 miles from Kelso station (the nearest) on the North Eastern railway, nearly 6 miles north-west from Coldstream, in Kelso poor combination; the parish is nearly 8 miles in length by 6 in breadth, lying to the west of Coldstream, and bordering the river Tweed. The surface of the country is in general level; the soil is rich and the grounds are well enclosed. Antonshill is the residence of James Hunter esq. J.P. and Stairrigg House, the residence of General John Cockburn-Hood C.B., D.L., J.P. There was once a nunnery here of considerable size. "Deadriggs," on Cross-hall Farm, in this district, was formerly the scene of a battle, and a stone which rises nine feet above the surface of the ground is said to mark the grave of one of the Percys, who fell in the contest. The area comprises 12,418 acres; rateable value, £18,492; the population was in 1891, 1,446, and in 1881, 1,546.

Birgham, formerly called Brigham, from a bridge once existing here, is a small village in this parish, 2½ miles south-east of Eccles village.

Leitholm is a considerable village in this parish, 5½ miles north-west from Coldstream. In the village is a United Presbyterian church, and a Board school.

EYEMOUTH is an ancient seaport and burgh of barony and a parish, with a terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and is 50 miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north-east from Greenlaw, 21 south-east from Dunbar, 20 north from Coldstream and 8 north-north-west from Berwick, on the estuary of the Eye. It was known as a port as early as the reign of Alexander II. (1214-49). Shipping can work into and out of the bay at all times of the tide, or lie at anchor in the haven secure from all winds except the north and north-east, or when the sea-gage cannot be effected up the Frith of Forth. The herring fishery is a source of profitable employment to the greater part of the inhabitants, there being 96 boats employed during the season. The annual produce of the fishing amounts to about £40,000. The trustees of the harbour obtained the sum of £25,000 from the Public Works Loan Commissioners for improvements of the harbour, completed in 1887, and a further sum of £10,000 has been advanced by the Fishery Board of Scotland for the improvement of the entrance. The port was added to the Berwick-on-Tweed Customs port in August, 1847. The St. Abb's Lodge of Master Masons and the Land o' Cakes Royal Arch Chapter hold their meetings here in a lodge room established in 1757; it was in this room that Burns, the poet, was made a Royal Arch Mason. Pairs are held on the first Thursdays of June and October. The headquarters of the 1st Berwickshire Volunteer Artillery, which consists only of one company, are in this town. On a small promontory on the coast here are the remains of a regular fortification, supposed to have been constructed by a French officer entrusted with the command of the troops of the Queen Regent. The principal landowners are Col. David Milne-Home, late R.H.G. of Wedderburn and Calder; Magnus Sanderson and Mrs. Margaret Mickle, of Hallydown. The area comprises 1,004 acres; rateable value, £8,707; the population in 1891 was 2,670, including 2,576 in the town, and in 1881, 2,955 with 2,825 in the town.

GORDON is a parish and village, in Kello poor combination and in the small debt court district of Duna, 5 miles south-west from Greenlaw, on the road from Edinburgh to Kello, and about a quarter of a mile from Gordon station on the North British railway. The river Eden intersects the parish, which extends 7 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth. Huntly and Hundywood, the names of two farms in the parish, each claim the honour of giving the title of Marquess and Earl to the Gordon family, until 1836 Duke of Gordon. Greenknowe Tower, a venerable structure (now the property of the representatives of the late James Dalrymple esq.), was frequently used in ancient times by the inhabitants as a place of refuge from incursions of the English. There is a small library containing about 300 volumes, supported by subscription. Arthur Newton Forbes-Gordon esq. of Williamston, Insch, Aberdeenshire, who is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Haddington A.D.O. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,713 acres; rateable value, £9,347; the population in 1891 was 843, and in 1881, 832.

GRANT'S HOUSE, see HOUNDWOOD.

GREENLAW is a burgh of barony, parish and town, in Kello poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, and is 37 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 20 west from Berwick, 12 east from Lauder, 7½ south-west from Duna and 10 north-west from Coldstream. It is situated in a valley, on the north bank of the Blackadder, which is here crossed by two bridges; the town consists of one long street, with a large square or green. Old Greenlaw was 1 mile to the south, but of this place no traces now remain. Greenlaw was constituted the head burgh of the county by a royal charter, granted in 1596, and confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1696. A sheriff court and one for the recovery of small debts are held monthly; the justices' court sits at Duns. The County buildings, standing in the Market square, were erected in 1831, and presented to the shire by the late Sir W. H. Campbell. The parish of Greenlaw lies in the centre of the Merse, extending 7 or 8 miles in length, from north to south, and on an average about 2 miles in breadth. The surface of the land is for the most part level, rising occasionally into slight detached eminences. Sheep walks, moor, and soil adapted to turnips are the main characteristics of the land. Sir John Home-Purves-Hume-Campbell bart. of Marchmont, who is lord of the manor; Frank B. Marjoribanks esq. of Rowchester; James Nisbet, of Lambden, and Mrs. Bromfield, of Old Greenlaw, are the principal landowners. Area, about 12,149 acres; rateable value, £9,491; the population in 1891 was 1,110, including 669 in the burgh, and 1,245 in 1881, with 744 in the burgh.

HOUNDWOOD is a quoad sacra parish and district forming the southern portion of the large civil parish of Coldingham, and contains the villages of Reston, Auchencrow and Grant's House; it is bounded on the north by the Berwick and Dunbar section of the North British railway and has stations at Reston and Grant's House.

Reston is a village pleasantly situated on the banks of the Eye, in the parish of Coldingham, 3 miles south from Coldingham village and about 9 north-east from Duns, with a station on the North British railway and junction of the line to St. Boswells. Live stock sales are held every alternate Monday. Population in 1881, 321.

Auchencrow is a village lying between Reston and Chirnside and about 2½ miles from each place. The nearest railway station is Reston Junction, 2½ miles distant, on the North British railway.

Grant's House is a village or hamlet in the parish and on the road to Edinburgh, with a station on the North British railway, and is 7 miles from Coldingham, 8 from Aytou and 5 from Cockburnspath. The place derives its name from a person named Grant, the contractor for making the high road to Edinburgh, who erected a cottage for himself, now called Grant's House Inn. There is a Free Church here, opened in March, 1888.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish was 1,360 in 1891.

HUME is a small village, 3 miles south from Greenlaw, and is a portion of a parish which with Stichel (Roxburghshire) forms a joint civil and ecclesiastical parish, in the small debt court district of Greenlaw. The nearest railway station is Greenlaw, on the North British railway, 3 miles distant. The remains of Hume Castle, a noted fortress during the Border wars, stand on a bold eminence commanding extensive and picturesque views over the greater portion of the Merse and Roxburghshire. The soil is very rich and fertile and in a high state of cultivation. There is a burial ground in the village, but no place of worship, the church being at Stichel; little more than grass-grown mounds mark the site of a church which was in ruins in 1637. Sr John Home-Purves-Hume-Campbell hart, of Marclmont, is lord of the manor and also owns most of the land. The area of the parish comprises 6,898 acres (4,099 in this county and 2,799 in Roxburghshire); rateable value, £4,220; the population of the entire parish was 680 in 1891, including 368 in this county, and 749 in 1881, with 407 in this county.

Post Office, Hume; Isaac Leitch, postmaster. Letters arrive through Kello. Delivery, 12.25 noon; dispatch, 3 p.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Stichel; the nearest money order office is at Greenlaw R.S.O

HUTTON is a parish and village, in the district of Merse, and in Kello poor combination and small debt court district, to the west of Berwick bounds, from which the parish is divided by the river Whiteadder; the village is situate about 7 miles west from Berwick, the nearest station, which is on the North British railway. The Tweed, which bounds the parish on the south, is here crossed by an elegant suspension bridge known as "The Union Bridge," and the only one between Coldstream and Berwick. The Rev. P. Redpath, the erudite translator of Boethius, and author of a "Border History," was at one time minister of this parish. James Macbrae esq. J.P. is lord of the manor, and Col. David Milne Home R.H.G. of Wedderburn and Calder; Lord Tweedmouth P.C. and William C. Lundie esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,516 acres; the rateable value is £8,067; the population in 1891 was 815, and in 1881, 962.

Paxton is a small village in this parish, 5 miles from Berwick; it contains a reading room and library of about 900 volumes.

Post Office, Hutton; Benjamin Whittle, postmaster. Letters received through Berwick. Delivery, 8.30 a.m.; dispatch, 1.25 p.m. week days only. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Paxton, 2 miles distant.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Paxton; Miss Barbara Dickson, postmistress. Letters received through Berwick. Delivery, 7.35 a.m.; dispatch, 2.5 p.m. week days only
