The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of the Public
Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives
publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE
OF
CLAN TARTANS AND FAMILY TARTANS OF SCOTLAND.

The abbreviated descriptions are intended only to give a general idea of Ground Colors, and the Colors of prominent lines of the Tartans.

The detailed descriptions are from the "Vestiarium Scoticum," a manuscript supposed to have been written late in the 15th or early in the 16th century, published in 1843 in a magnificent volume under the editorship of John Sobiesky Stuart, one of the last descendants of "The Young Chevalier."

The writer thus gives his reasons for compiling his book
"and for that sic fassovns be not of vse in vther cvntries nor foraine reaulmes, for thir cawsis I haue taken on hande to compil, accordand to my pvir habylitye, a trewe ensample off alle, or the maist parte, the pryncyppul tartanis of Scotlande. Sic as I maye discerne ym, baith for the trewe witting and pleasaunce of alle cvriovs straungers, and to ye ende yt gif paravaunture, quhilk God forbyd, that herefter ovr covntrye fassoune sall alle to fayl and haillilie cvm to nocht, . . . yt then alle men may knawe the aulde gyuse of theyr forberis; . . ."

Note on the Antiquity of Tartans.

THE antiquity of the Tartans is a subject which has given rise to much research amongst scholars, and some speculation amongst their critics.

Some scholars find evidence that chequered cloth was not peculiar to the Scottish Highlanders, but is really a survival of a trait common to all the great branches of the Celtic race. Logan quotes a Roman author to show that the bright patterns shown in the dress of the ancient Gauls had been noticed and admired by their conquerors. On the other hand, some critics go the length of saying, that while Tartans in themselves may be old, the distinctive patterns to which clan names are attached, are only an affair of the day-before-yesterday and cannot be traced further back than the early part of the present century.

This view is too absurd to require refutation.

While jewels, on account of their intrinsic value, and arms and armour, by reason of their associations with prominent members of noble families, have been handed down as heirlooms and so preserved for centuries, clothing has very seldom been considered worthy of preservation, so that it is only by some accident that articles of dress, having any claim to antiquity, have been preserved. When King Robert the Bruce, in the fight at Dalree, lost his plaid or mantle, and with it the jewelled brooch which fastened it; the brooch was at once considered a rich prize, and has been preserved through the many vicissitudes of five hundred and eighty years. It is now the famous "Brooch of Lorne," but no thought was given to preserve the plaid. It need not be a matter of surprise, therefore, to find that comparatively few specimens of ancient Tartans are in existence, yet there are sufficient to show the antiquity of Clan and Family Tartans.

Some of the Tartans worn by Prince Charlie are still preserved, likewise a plaid worn by one of his followers, Murray of Tullibardine, which for fineness of texture cannot be surpassed by the best productions of woollen manufacturers of the present day.

The "Jacobite" Tartan of this catalogue is from a specimen made not later than 1712, and was designed to be different from any known Tartan of that period, having a considerable proportion of orange.

The chief of the Clan Macpherson, Cluny of Cluny, has Tartans in his possession at least 200 years old. One of these is almost identical with the "Makanphersonis" described in the "Vestiarium."

The "Vestiarium Scoticum" is a description of seventy-five Tartans, divided into--Highland, Lowland, and Border Clans--recalling the almost forgotten fact that clans were not confined to the Highlands and Islands. The M.S. is supposed to have been written in the latter part of the 15th or the early years of the 16th century. The author, in an "Envoi," calls himself "Schyr Richard Urqvharde, Knycht." He seems to have been a gentleman and a soldier of fortune, well acquainted with

"Heravltrye and armovris
Cvrtlye gvys and tovrnai,
Hunter craft and forestrye."

He has had a remarkable facility in describing in words the characteristics of the different Tartans, borrowing for this purpose a few terms and phrases from the kindred subject of heraldry--"fields, lists," etc.

That his descriptions do not correspond with many of the Tartans of the present day should cause no surprise; it is more than 300 years since his book was written; Scotland has seen many changes in that time, the clan system has disappeared except in the case of but a few of the most powerful. The risings in favour of the old Stewart line in 1714 and 1745 did much to bring to a close that ancient form of society. The chiefs became poor—were outlawed if they were so fortunate as to escape the headman's axe. The wearing of the ancient dress was made a criminal offence. Is it surprising that the knowledge of some Tartans was quite lost, and that consequently some of those which were revived were not quite the same as formerly?

Indeed it does not require any special reasons to account for changes in such a long stretch of time. It is well known to all who take an interest in Tartans that there is a constant tendency to produce slight variations in the pattern, and great care is needed to keep this tendency down. The Tartans now worn by the Highland regiments shew this in a very marked manner; take any of these regiments, and it will be found that the officers' plaids are very different in the shades of colour from their kilts, while those of the rank and file are still further removed from the shades of the plaid, yet these are all the same Tartan.

WAR CRIES,

OR RALLYING WORDS OF SOME OF THE CLANS.

(From Robertson's Historical Proofs)

And quoted in the Historical Geography of the Clans of Scotland, 1873.

Buchanan's, "Clare Innis," an island in Loch Lomond.

Campbell's, "Cruachan," a well-known mountain in Argyshire.

Farquharson's, "Carn na Cuimhne," the Cairn of Remembrance in Strathdee.

Fraser's, anciently, "Mor-faigh," or "Get More," later, Castle Downie.

Forbes', "Lonach," a mountain in Strathdon.

Grant's, "Craig Ealachaidh," or "Craig Eagalach," the "Rock of Alarm." Strathspey, a portion of the Grants, called Clan Chirin, have "Craig Rabhach," the Rock of Warning, and add Standsure.

MacDonald's, "Fraoch eilean," the Heathy Island.

MacDonald's, "Creig an Fithereach," the Raven's Rock.

MacFarlane's, "Loch Sloidh," or "Loch Sluagh," the Loch of the people, or host.

MacGregor's, "Ard-Coille," the High Wood.

MacIntosh, "Loch May," or "Loch na Maoidh," the Loch of Threatening—a lake near the seat of the Chieftain.

MacKenzie, "Tulach Ard," a mountain near Castle Donnan, the stronghold of the Clan, anciently.

MacPherson's, "Creig dubh Clan Chattan," the Black Craig of Clan Chattan.

Roll of the Bannlordis and Bailies of Lands in the Hielandis and Isles, 1587.

Stewart—Prince Charlie

Modification of Royal Stewart, with smaller Red ground, and Darker Blue.

"In earlier specimens of this tartan the Blue lines were made lighter in tone, and rather wider, and was worn by the Prince in Edinburgh, in 1745. It was adopted as a military tartan, and is still used by the bands of more than one regiment. This circumstance seems to have led to a further variation—the check has been much increased and consequently the red ground much more reduced, while the blue has been deepened in tone."

Stewart—Prince Charlie.

"This Tartan is copied from a riding cloak worn by Prince Charlie, and left with other articles in the castle of one of his followers whose descendant now owns it—Sir James Murray Threipland of Fingask. The cloak has a velvet collar, and is bound with a red silk ribbon, which has faded at the sleeves into a light purple, but it is difficult to say what was the original color of the collar, while the colors of the tartan are as fresh as if made yesterday. The colors and design are the same as in the tartan last mentioned, with the exception that the blue, which is light, has been placed in the centre instead of on the outside of the check."
